   A. Included in these scholarship programs is the DREAM Scholarship for Oregon Foster Youth. Youth/young adult must complete a separate application to apply for the OSAC scholarship programs. However, a youth/young adult can apply for multiple scholarships with this one application. The OSAC scholarship application is due by March 1 of each year. The application is available at app.oregonstudentaid.gov.

   B. The Oregon Promise has a separate application and may require additional documents. Additional information is available at: oregonstudentaid.gov/oregon-promise.aspx.

II. There are national scholarship funds for eligible foster youth. Caseworkers can direct the youth/young adult to review the following websites:

   A. Casey Family Scholars
   B. National Foster Parent Association Scholarship, and
   C. Free Application for Federal Student Aid.
The ILP desk maintains an up-to-date list of scholarship resources specifically for foster youth. Contact the ILP desk to determine if additional scholarships are available.

Oregon Foster Youth Tuition and Fee Waiver

I. The following youth/young adult are eligible for the Oregon tuition and fee waiver:
   A. Youth 16 or older and in substitute care through ODHS or one of the federally recognized tribes in Oregon.
   B. A youth/young adult:
      1. Who was in substitute care for at least 180 days after age 14, and
      2. Who exited the care and custody of ODHS, or one of the federally recognized tribes, at age 16 or older
   C. The youth/young adult must submit a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) to apply for Oregon's tuition and fee waiver, and
   D. The student must be receiving funds before age 25. If the student is receiving funds at age 25, those funds can continue until the student accesses the equivalent of four years of undergraduate education.

ODHS is responsible for notifying participating schools of potentially eligible tuition and fee waiver students. ODHS partners with OSAC to notify the schools if the student has identified that school on their FAFSA.

Each school will notify the student of their tuition and fee waiver eligibility and amount, if any. Before determining a need for the waiver, schools can use:
   A. A student’s Pell Grant,
   B. Oregon Opportunity Grant, and
   C. Other school aid.

Other Funding Resources to Help a Youth/Young Adult Achieve a Successful Transition to Independent Living

I. ILP discretionary funds were created to allow local offices a funding source to purchase items or services that will help a youth/young adult meet the goals of their CTP. The ILP Discretionary Funds are to be used for items, services or extra-curricular activities a youth or young adult needs to gain life skills and achieve goals for a successful transition to adulthood. A youth or young adult does not need to be enrolled in contracted ILP services in order to access ILP Discretionary Funds. A youth or young adult must be age 14 – 23 and eligible for ILP services to access the funds.

II. Use the Youth Transition Funds Request form (CF 0078) to access the funds (check the Discretionary box). When completing the form, provide the following information:
   A. The requested amount(s) in the appropriate category(s),
   B. An explanation of how the funds will help the youth/young adult in meeting the youth/young adult’s transition plan goals,
   C. To whom the payment is made payable, and
D. Where the payment is to be mailed. No payments are mailed directly to the youth/young adult if in ODHS custody. Payments may be mailed to the caseworker for distribution to the youth/young adult.

III. The caseworker must sign the form, and the youth/young adult and ILP provider must initial the form.

A. Submit the completed form to the ILP.Central@state.or.us.

B. Some districts have additional review requirements before sending the request to the ILP desk. The supervisor will advise if additional steps are required.

IV. The ILP funds request is reviewed and approved by the ODHS statewide ILP coordinator.

A. The ILP desk will process the payment and notify the branch when the check is requested.

B. Payment normally takes up to 10 business days to process.

Where To Access Funding

A. There are two different processes for accessing funding:

1. Open Child Welfare Case: If a youth or young adult is currently working with ILP or has a Child Welfare caseworker, the youth/young adult would work with their ILP Provider or ODHS caseworker to submit a Youth Transition Funding Request (form CF78)

2. No Open Child Welfare Case: Eligible youth/young adults, ages 14 through 26, who are not currently in foster care or not enrolled for ILP services, should be advised to contact FosterClub for an on-line funding application at www.fosterclub.com/ORhelp.

3. The on-line form has been updated to obtain information on the youth/young adult (name, email, current status in substitute care and ILP), a section to advise what the funds will be used for and their current mailing address, as the check will be mailed directly to the youth/young adult due to the fact there is no caseworker or ILP staff. The youth/young adult may also choose to have a supportive adult help them or have the adult complete the form for them.

B. As a reminder, the ILP Discretionary Funds have a variety of purposes:

1. During a declared emergency (i.e. wildfires, COVID), help provide for basic needs,
2. Assist youth/young adult to meet goals of transition (i.e. special work clothing, equipment).
3. Driver’s Education/permit/license, school supplies, housing start-up kits, and
4. Allow youth/young adult to engage in extra-curricular activities which could include cultural activities such as powwows, quincinera celebrations or cultural festivities. Consider items, services or resources that would assist a youth/young adult with their goals, purpose and transition plan.

If you have questions or need clarification on whether or not a request meets the criteria, please contact the ILP.Central@dhsora.state.or.us email box and a Youth Transitions team member can assist you.

Requirements At Independence

I. At least 60 days before the anticipated dismissal of wardship of a youth/young adult reaching independence, the caseworker must inform the youth/young adult of the upcoming court hearing either by face-to-face contact, phone or written correspondence. This information to the youth/young adult must include:

A. The date, time, and location of the hearing;
B. Their right to attend the hearing, and the importance of attending; and
C. Their right to request assistance for transportation to and from the hearing.

II. When the court dismisses custody of the youth/young adult reaching independence, the caseworker must provide the youth/young adult with a Transitions Tool Kit (Appendix 5.18). These are the essential documents, written records and official forms a youth/young adult transitioning out of care needs to have for their medical history, employment purposes and to continue their post-secondary education (the majority of these should already be in the case file). The Transition Tool Kit must include:

A. Family history/tribal nation affiliation unless the information would endanger themselves or another child;
B. Placement history;
C. Location and status of siblings, and contact information the youth/young adult can use should they want to obtain additional information about their case or family history in the future;
D. Health and immunization records, including whether they have been informed of or identify a health care representative and completed an Oregon Advanced Directive;
E. The OHP Application for the Former Foster Care Youth Medical Program should have previously been completed with the youth/young adult, but if there are questions or additional assistance is required, contact the OHP Customer Service at:
   1. 1-800-699-9075 (TTY 711), or
F. Educational summary and records;
G. The youth/young adult’s birth certificate (the original should be given to the youth/young adult and a certified copy put in the case file as most situations requiring a birth certificate or Social Security card require the original).
   Official proof of the youth/young adult’s citizenship or Permanent Resident or Special Immigrant Juvenile Status (SIJS) card in a form acceptable to an employer who is required to verify immigration status. Obtaining an SIJS card can take several months, if not years, so it is important the caseworker plan ahead to ensure the youth receives the documentation before age 18. If applicable, contact the International Case Consultant about the criteria for Special Juvenile Immigrant Status (SJIS);
H. The youth/young adult’s Social Security card;
I. A driver’s license or other form of state identification (a copy of the license or other form of state identification should remain in the case file). Additional forms of identification could include an Oregon identification card or passport;
J. Where applicable, tribal membership or enrollment information of the youth/young adult, and/or the youth’s parents.
K. If applicable, a copy of a death certificate of the youth/young adult’s parent(s);
L. Written verification (ODHS 2922) of placement in substitute care between the ages of 14 to 18 through ODHS or one of the federally recognized tribal nations; and

M. A copy of the youth/young adult’s credit report (see page 1 for information about obtaining a youth/young adult’s credit report).

III. If the caseworker is unable to provide the documentation and information described above before the court order relieving legal custody of the youth/young adult, the caseworker must:

A. Prepare the Transition Tool Kit materials and either deliver them to the youth, or

B. If the youth’s whereabouts are unknown, the caseworker must retain the records in the case file and the Child Welfare electronic information system for any future request for these records that may be made by the youth.

IV. Options to provide or maintain these documents for the youth/young adult:

A. Put documents in an FYI Binder. There are file pockets for critical documents such as the birth certificate, Social Security card, etc.

B. Purchase a lock box with branch discretionary or youth transition funds for the youth to store the documents.

C. Scan the information into the Child Welfare electronic information system.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Train and support the caseworker regarding local office practice for distributing a youth/young adult’s Transition Tool Kit and other confidential information.

II. If necessary, provide the caseworker a copy of the “Requirements at Independence Checklist” Youth Transition Tool Kit Check List (see Appendix 5.18) to ensure all documents are given to the youth.

Outcomes Tracking

I. The federal Chafee Foster Care Independence Program legislation (Public Law 106-169) requires each state to track and report services and outcomes for foster youth and young adults for the National Youth in Transition Database (NYTD). ODHS started to track and report NYTD services in October 2010. Following is a brief overview of the methods used to track services and outcomes:

A. Detailed services are entered in the Child Welfare electronic information system and reported every six months for each youth who receives an independent living service (regardless of age or foster care status). Methods to obtain the service detail should include the following:

1. Monthly Services and Progress Report submitted by the ILP Provider;

2. Caseworker and branch service entry in the Child Welfare electronic information system; and

3. Monthly Services and Progress Report submitted by a resource parent or other supportive adult (mentor, CASA, etc.).

B. Caseworkers will conduct a survey with every 17-year-old in substitute care.

1. The caseworker will assist the youth to sign up for a FosterClub, Inc. membership at FosterClub.
A FosterClub membership provides foster youth with information and resources. The caseworkers can discuss the option to provide permission for ODHS to access the FosterClub online profile information and survey activities. This will help ODHS contact the youth for the initial and follow-up surveys.

2. Youth must complete a survey within 45 days after the youth’s 17th birthday (referred to as the baseline population). Click here for outreach materials.

3. Caseworkers will help the youth complete an electronic survey. Paper surveys can be provided. However, the caseworker is responsible to enter the youth’s survey responses on FosterClub’s electronic survey instrument or to send the completed survey to OregonRep@fosterclub.com.

4. If a youth declines to participate in the survey process, the caseworker must document that information on the youth’s survey where indicated. The caseworker must leave all other details blank and notify the statewide ILP coordinator.

C. The statewide ILP coordinator will work with the research unit and the FosterClub DOR to identify youth for the baseline. Also, to follow-up with the sample population (youth who will be surveyed at age 19 and 21).

D. If a youth/young adult in the follow-up sample still accesses Child Welfare services at age 19, the caseworker will assist the youth to complete a follow-up survey.

1. If the youth has not signed up for a FosterClub membership the caseworker will:
   ■ Encourage the youth to do so, and
   ■ Discuss the option to provide permission for ODHS to access the youth’s online profile information and survey activities.

2. Caseworkers will help the youth/young adult complete an electronic survey within the six-month report period. Based on which period the youth/young adult’s birthday falls, the period is either:
   ■ October through March, or
   ■ April through September.

   Paper surveys can be provided. However, the caseworker will be responsible for entering the youth’s survey responses on FosterClub’s electronic survey instrument or sending the completed survey to: OregonRep@fosterclub.com.

3. The FosterClub DOR and ILP desk will work with youth/young adult in the follow-up sample who no longer receive services. Surveys are required for every youth/young adult in the follow-up sample.

   E. FosterClub DOR and ODHS (the ILP desk) will manage the survey of young adults in the follow-up sample at age 21 using the same steps as mentioned above.

II. Assistance staying in contact with the follow-up population is encouraged. The FosterClub DOR will attempt to contact a youth/young adult who has a current FosterClub membership at least once a month (through informational electronic notices posted at FosterClub).

III. Youth/young adult should be made aware of the potential incentives to complete the NYTD baseline and follow-up surveys. Contact the FosterClub DOR at 503-717-1552 for details.

IV. Caseworkers should, as part of the Transition Tool Kit, give the youth/young adult their case number and additional survey information needed to identify the youth/young adult.

Note: Maintaining a positive relationship with the teen will be the most helpful tool for engaging youth/young adults in the NYTD survey process. ODHS has contracted with FosterClub for a Dedicated Outreach Representative (DOR). The DOR will also attempt to build a rapport with the youth/young adult. The DOR will coordinate the efforts to obtain the required NYTD surveys. You can contact the FosterClub DOR at OregonRep@fosterclub.com, or call FosterClub at 503-717-1552.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. As a part of the 90-day case plan review, ensure caseworkers are aware of:

   A. The youth’s 17th and 19th birthdays, and
   B. The requirement to survey youth timely, as noted above.

II. Ensure caseworkers have been properly trained in collaborating with the ILP Desk to document independent living-related service opening and closures.

III. Ensure caseworkers receive the Teen Policy Requirements List (Appendix 5.23) to help them complete required tasks within the mandated timelines.

IV. Provide caseworkers with the Youth Transitions Best Practices Guide (Appendix 5.24).

Exceptions to Policy

Procedure

Several of the Youth Transitions services and supports allow for exceptions to policy. Exceptions should be time-limited and include a plan for how the youth will regain compliance. Use the Policy Exception Request Form – Chapter 413, Division 30 (CF 0088) when a situation requires an exception to policy. Following are the types of exceptions allowed through the CF 0088:

I. Housing programs:

   A. Youth may require an exception due to:

      1. A recent lack of productive activity (if less than 36 hours);
      2. A need to increase savings above 20 percent of wages;
      3. Education difficulties; or
      4. Lack of paid employment (required for Chafee Housing).

         - If a youth requires an exception for these reasons, complete sections A, B, E, F and G of the CF 0088.
         - If the youth/young adult requests an increase in the monthly subsidy amount after month 12, also submit the Resources Researched form (Appendix 5.20).

   B. Section G of the CF 0088 must be signed by the following people:

      1. Youth/young adult,
2. ODHS or tribal caseworker,
3. ILP provider, and
4. ODHS program manager or tribal manager or designee

II. Foster Care after age 18 (extended foster care):
   A. Youth/young adult who have turned 18 and remain in foster care may need an exception to policy if they are not meeting the productive requirements outlined in OAR 413-030-0220. This exception process only applies to youth in ODHS custody. If a youth requires an exception for this reason, complete sections A, B, E, and F of the CF 0088.
   B. Section G of the CF 0088) must be signed by the following people:
      1. Youth/young adult,
      2. ODHS caseworker,
      3. ILP provider, and
      4. ODHS program manager or designee

III. Education and Training Voucher (ETV):
   A. A youth/young adult may require an exception due to a missed application deadline. If a youth/young adult requires an exception for this reason, complete sections A, C, E, and F of the CF 0088.
   B. Chafee ETV exceptions are only allowed once. A youth/young adult must learn and understand the importance of remaining in compliance with the rules for applying (annually).
   C. Section G of the CF 0088 must be signed by the following people:
      1. Youth/young adult,
      2. ODHS or tribal caseworker,
      3. ILP provider, and
      4. ODHS program manager or tribal manager or designee.

IV. ILP Provider Service Area Exception:
   A. This type of exception is to be requested when a youth/young adult:
      1. Built a strong bond or relationship with an existing ILP provider, and
      2. Is moved to a neighboring/different county, but
      3. Wishes to continue receiving ILP services from their existing ILP provider while transitioning to services with their local ILP Provider (should be short-term).

   If a youth/young adult requires an exception for this reason, complete sections A, D, E, and F of the CF 0088.
   B. The following people must sign section G of the CF 0088:
      1. Youth/young adult,
      2. ODHS or tribal caseworker, and
      3. ILP provider.
V. Processing the Policy Exception Request Form – Chapter 413, Division 30 (CF 0088)

A. Once all required field signatures are obtained, submit the form to the Youth Transitions team at Central Office using the following email: ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us

B. The Foster Care and Youth Transitions manager or designee must review and approve the CE88. Once approved, the signed copy will be scanned and emailed to the caseworker and program manager or designee who signed the CE88.

C. The caseworker will scan the CE88 and file the document in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

D. If the Policy Exception Request is for a youth to remain in foster care after age 18, and the youth is not meeting the requirements:
   1. The Child Well-Being manager or designee is to submit all approved exceptions to the Title IV-E specialist in the Federal Policy and Resource Unit.

E. The Title IV-E specialist will ensure proper fiscal accounting of the youth’s foster care payments.

Note: To speed up the approval process, make sure the CE88, section E. Reason for exception provides a detailed explanation of why the exception is necessary. Include what the youth/young adult tried to do to avoid falling out of compliance. Also ensure section F. Plan for compliance details all activities or steps the youth/young adult will take in effort to regain compliance with the requirements. This allows those who review and approve the request to make an informed decision quickly. If sections E and F do not have enough details, this may delay the approval process.

Note: Section F of the CE88 must explain the youth/young adult’s plan to participate in the ILP provider’s regularly scheduled classes and activities. This includes the youth/young adult’s plan for transportation to:

- The provider’s facility,
- Other meeting areas, and
- ILP activities.
- ILP providers are not required to travel outside of their service area.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Train the caseworker on local office practice to request an exception to policy.

II. Review, approve or deny all ILP Exception to Policy Requests before submitting them to ILP desk. Ensure the request is appropriate and the end date sufficient to allow the youth/young adult to regain compliance.

III. Ensure your workers assisting youth who are approaching age 18 by discussing options for remaining in foster care per OAR 413-030-0220.

IV. Ensure your workers are informing youth and young adults in foster care of requirements to access:
   A. The IL Subsidy Program,
   B. Chafee Housing Program,
   C. ETG funding,
D. Other transition services and supports.

Section 30: Behavior Intervention in a Home Certified by Child Welfare Behavior intervention in a home certified by Child Welfare

At times, children in substitute care present challenging behaviors that require specific monitoring and may require specific training and support services for a child’s substitute caregiver. When a substitute caregiver is willing and able to work with the child and the Department to manage a child’s challenging behaviors and use strategies and interventions to improve behavior, the caseworker can develop a behavior intervention plan with the certified family.

Monitoring a child’s behavior during routine contact

Procedure

I. During monthly contacts, review a child’s challenging behavior and the interventions used by each relative caregiver or foster parent in the ongoing care of the child.

II. Assess the relative caregiver or foster parent’s implementation of any recommended, documented behavior interventions in the child’s mental health assessment, physical diagnosis and the case plan.

III. Instruct the relative caregiver or foster parent to document the actions and interventions used to manage a child’s challenging behaviors on the behavior log.

IV. Monitor the interventions used in managing the challenging behaviors of the child while in substitute care during the required 30-day contact with the child.

V. Always review the appropriateness of the placement and determine that the placement maintains conditions for the safety and well-being of the child.

VI. Review behavior logs as they are received, but no less than every 30 days.

VII. Assess the relative caregiver or foster parent’s willingness and ability to:
   A. Implement the behavior interventions,
   B. Manage the child’s challenging behavior, and
   C. Maintain conditions in the home that provide safety and well-being for the child.

VIII. Assess whether additional support is needed to maintain conditions in the home that provide safety and well-being and manage a child’s challenging behavior.

IX. When it is determined additional support is needed, consult with the certified family’s certifier or certification supervisor to identify available support resources or training that may be helpful to the family.

X. When it appears the family is using available training or support resources, convene a meeting to develop a Behavior Intervention Plan.

XI. Document the contacts with the relative caregiver or foster parent in the Child Welfare electronic information system case notes.
Developing a Behavior Intervention Plan

I. A Behavior Intervention Plan is required to support the relative caregiver or foster parent’s ability to continue to manage the child’s challenging behaviors. It is the caseworker’s responsibility to initiate the development of a Behavior Intervention Plan when the caseworker determines a documented, structured plan for behavior intervention is needed, or when the relative caregiver or foster parent requests assistance in managing a child’s challenging behaviors.

II. Within 60 days of determining a need for or receiving a relative caregiver or foster parent request for a structured plan for behavior intervention, the caseworker must:

A. Advise the relative caregiver or foster parent to continue to implement the recommended actions and interventions to manage the child’s challenging behaviors.

B. Gather information from the relative caregiver or foster parent, the child, the certifier, and, if appropriate, the parents or legal guardians of the child, the child’s attorney, CASA, mental health providers, school personnel, and other service providers working with the child regarding the child’s challenging behaviors that:
   1. Are difficult for the relative caregiver or foster parent to manage, or
   2. Present a threat to self or others.

C. Schedule a meeting with the relative caregiver or foster parent, the child, the certifier, and, if appropriate, the parents or legal guardians of the child, the child’s attorney, CASA, mental health providers, school personnel, and other service providers working with the child to develop a Behavior Intervention Plan. The foster care coordinator also can be used via phone conference to assist in the development of a Behavior Intervention Plan.

D. Develop a Behavior Intervention Plan at the meeting. The plan is documented on CF 0994. The Behavior Intervention Plan documents:
   1. The challenging behaviors of the child that require additional support.
   2. The specific strategies and actions the relative caregiver or foster parent will use to prevent, intervene and follow-up when the child’s challenging behaviors present difficulties or are a threat to self or others. These strategies or actions may include:
      ■ Proactive use of space, routine and structure of the environment;
      ■ Positive reinforcement, de-escalation techniques and therapeutic activities; and
      ■ When necessary, physical restraint. Planned use of physical restraint may be used only as an emergency measure in response to imminent danger to self or others, and when no alternate actions are sufficient to intervene in a child’s challenging behavior.
   3. The actions and assistance the Department will provide to support the relative caregiver or foster parent.
   4. The relative caregiver or foster parent’s documentation responsibilities including ongoing documentation of the child’s behaviors on a behavior log.
   5. A plan for regular communication between those monitoring the child’s challenging behavior (e.g., the relative caregiver or foster parent, the caseworker and others) regarding the effect of implementing the behavior intervention strategies to manage the child's challenging behavior.

6. A timeline for review of the Behavior Intervention Plan, which is at least every 90 days.

E. Ensure your supervisor approves the Behavior Intervention Plan.

F. Give the Behavior Intervention Plan to the certified family, and file a copy in the child's case file. Contact the family's certifier and give the certifier a copy of the Behavior Intervention Plan, and document a summary of the Behavior Intervention Plan in the Child Welfare electronic information system provider's page notes tab.

When a Behavior Intervention Plan includes planned used of physical restraint

Note: Child welfare has approved a Behavior and Crisis Management Training curriculum for substitute caregivers certified by child welfare. Refer to Chapter 8 for more information on working with a certifier to arrange Behavior and Crisis Management Training.

I. Physical restraint as defined in Oregon Administrative Rule means the act of restricting a child or young adult's voluntary movement as an emergency measure in order to manage and protect the child or young adult or others from injury when no alternate actions are sufficient to manage the child or young adult's behavior. "Physical restraint" as defined in these rules does not include temporarily holding a child or young adult to assist him or her or ensure his or her safety, such as preventing a child from running onto a busy street.

II. Always assess whether the child's placement in a relative or foster parent's home is the most appropriate, least restrictive home able to meet the child's needs before developing and implementing a Behavior Intervention Plan that includes physical restraint.

A. It may be that the child's identified needs requires another, more structured substitute care setting than this relative or foster parent can provide.

B. It may be that the relative or foster parent needs additional information regarding child development or parenting strategies.

C. It may be that the child is responding poorly to removal from the parent, or other circumstances may be causing a particular behavior to occur.

III. When it is determined that a Behavior Intervention Plan that includes a planned use of physical restraint is appropriate for the child and for the relative caregiver or foster parent, ensure that the plan:

A. Focuses on the intervention strategies designed to modify a child's behavior in order to minimize the need to use planned physical restraint; and

B. Uses planned physical restraint only as an emergency measure in response to a child's imminent danger to self or others, and when no alternate actions are sufficient to intervene in a child's challenging behavior.

IV. Before a Behavior Intervention Plan that includes use of planned physical restraint is implemented, the caseworker must confirm the following:

A. The relative caregiver or foster parent must have completed training requirements described in OAR
B. The relative caregiver or foster parent is willing to orally report the circumstances of the physical restraint to the caseworker or the caseworker’s supervisor within one working day; and

C. The relative caregiver or foster parent is willing and able to document the circumstances of any physical restraint in writing in a Physical Restraint Intervention Incident Report (CF 0984) as soon as is reasonably possible after a physical restraint is used to manage a child’s behavior, and submit the written documentation to the caseworker or caseworker’s supervisor within 48 hours.

V. A Behavior Intervention Plan that includes the planned use of physical restraint must have the approval of the child welfare program manager.

Monitoring a Behavior Intervention Plan

Once a Behavior Intervention Plan is implemented, whether or not the plan includes the use of physical restraint, it is important for the caseworker to monitor the plan and review with the relative caregiver or foster parent whether the strategies identified in the plan are effective in managing a child’s behavior, and whether or not changes in the child’s behavior are occurring (when behavior change is the goal of the plan).

Procedure

I. When a Behavior Intervention Plan is in place, review the plan with the child and with the certified family at each 30-day contact.

II. A more formal review of the Behavior Intervention Plan must occur within 90 days, and must include those individuals who participated in the development of the plan. This review must:

   A. Assess the effectiveness of the interventions used by the relative caregiver and foster parent and determine whether:

      1. To end the Behavior Intervention Plan if strategies have successfully reduced or eliminated the challenging behavior; or

      2. To revise the Behavior Intervention Plan when additional strategies are needed to manage challenging behavior. Any revised Behavior Intervention Plan that includes the use of planned physical restraint must be approved by the child welfare program manager.

III. Whenever a Behavior Intervention Plan ends, document the conclusion of the plan, notify all the participants in the development of the Behavior Intervention Plan, notify the certified family’s certifier that the plan has ended, and document the conclusion of the Behavior Intervention Plan in the Child Welfare electronic information system provider’s page notes tab and in the case notes of the case file.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Consult with the caseworker to develop behavior intervention strategies for a child with challenging behaviors.

II. Attend the meeting to develop the Behavior Intervention Plan.

III. Review any Behavior Intervention Plan that includes planned use of physical restraint. Approve the plan only after all other alternative strategies have been determined to be unsuccessful.
IV. Submit an approved Behavior Intervention Plan to the Child Welfare program manager for review and approval, when the plan includes the use of physical restraint.

V. Monitor the effect of the Behavior Intervention Plan actions.

VI. Ensure that appropriate documentation and communication regarding the Behavior Intervention Plan is completed.

Section 31: Working With Injured, Critically Ill or Terminally Ill Children, and Families Who Have Experienced the Death of a Child
Working with Injured, Critically Ill or Terminally Ill Children, and Families Who Have Experienced the Death of a Child

There may be occasions when Child Welfare is working with a child who has been critically injured or has a critical or terminal illness, or is working with a family who has experienced the death of a child. In any of these circumstances, thoughtful, sensitive and thorough casework practice is critical. The caseworker should be in frequent contact and consult with their supervisor for case review and support.

Procedure

Critically or Terminally Ill Children

With any serious illness, thoughtful, thorough and sensitive caregiving and placement decisions must be made. When the child is critically ill or has a terminal illness, the caseworker must:

I. Engage with the family and care providers.
   • Convene a family meeting. Convene a family-focused meeting including the child (whenever appropriate), the child's legal parents, medical providers, resource parent(s) (and certifier if appropriate), CASA, Tribal representative, attorneys involved in the case, and the supervisor. At that meeting:
     • Consider having parents, attorneys or the CASA participate in medical appointments.
     • Develop agreements and procedures for sharing medical reports and other critical information, care plans, discharge planning and procedures.
     • Expand child, parent, sibling, and relative contact whenever possible.
     • Develop an ongoing support system for family members and individuals involved in caring for the child.
     • Discuss resources and services available to support all parties:
       ■ Palliative care - Palliative care is specialized medical care for people living with a serious illness. This type of care is focused on providing relief from the symptoms and stress of the illness. The goal is to improve quality of life for both the patient and the family. Palliative care is based on the needs of the patient, not on the patient's prognosis. Click here for a directory of palliative care programs in Oregon
       ■ Hospice care - Hospice care provides care to the patient and the entire family unit. The goal of hospice care is to eliminate or greatly reduce pain and symptoms associated with the illness. Hospice also provides supplies and equipment (such as a hospital bed or oxygen), seeking to improve the quality of life of the patient while also supporting the family helping to care for the patient. Hospice also offers bereavement counseling to family members for at least a year following a death. Click here for a directory of hospice care programs in Oregon.

- Bereavement services - Bereavement services are emotional, psychosocial, and spiritual support services provided to the family before and after the death of the patient to assist the family in coping with issues related to grief, loss, and adjustment. Click here for bereavement programs in Oregon.

- Tribal services and resources - Consider tribal customs and whether there are services or resources available for the family through their Tribe. Consult with the family and Tribal Representative.

- Discuss the decision for a Do Not Resuscitate (DNR) order. This decision must be made by the child’s legal parents and physician, in consultation with the Department’s staff, the child’s CASA, attorneys involved in the case, and substitute caregivers whenever appropriate. Provide notification to the juvenile court when such a decision has been made.

- Document the information gathered in items 1-6, clearly identify who is responsible for action items, and provide a copy to the meeting participants.

- Continue to work with the team as needed to address activities during the dying process and after death. Continue to evaluate if services are appropriate. Track any pending planning decisions and follow up as necessary

- Be aware of the grieving process. Consider that all those involved with the child will experience grief differently and at different times.

- Work with medical social work staff, a family therapist, grief counselor, and/or hospice services to plan for the activities at the time of death including: who to call and/or notify; funeral and burial or cremation arrangements (see Death of a Child, Section V below); personal belongings; removal of medical equipment; and obtaining medical records. (See Section III below).

II. Review the placement needs of the child.

- Consider placement options during this critical period of care. The placement decision may require legal assistance through the juvenile court. Placement options for consideration include with the legal parents/guardians, siblings, relative caregiver, other certified caregiver, a child caring agency or facility, or hospitalization.

- Assess the needs of the child while in placement.

  - Assess the capacity of the prospective substitute caregiver’s ability to meet the required level of care and any medical interventions necessary to ensure the safety of the child.

  - See Chapter 5, Section 5: Personal Care Services to determine whether a referral for a Personal Care Assessment should be made due to the additional care and/or assistance the child may need. If a Personal Care Services Plan is developed, review it carefully and ensure the child’s needs are being met during face-to-face contacts.

  - If the child is placed in a nursing home, the Department is not responsible for ensuring nursing procedures have been delegated to nursing home staff.

III. Plan in advance for the death of a critically or terminally ill child.
• Inform the caregivers, in advance, what to expect and do when the child dies.

• Instruct the caregivers to:

  • Contact the funeral, burial, or cremation provider, or other individual identified at the family meeting to notify them of the child’s death.

  • Contact the Child Welfare staff member identified in the family meeting (i.e. the child’s caseworker, supervisor, or program manager) during business hours, otherwise contact the hotline at 1-855-503-SAFE (7233) to notify them of the child’s death.

  • Not move the child’s body, not bathe the child’s body, or otherwise change the environment (the child’s clothes or the location of the body) where the child died.

• Inform the resource parent(s) that emergency personnel may arrive at the substitute caregiver’s home. This may include the local fire department, EMTs, law enforcement and/or medical examiner. As emergency response records can be open to the public or posted in newspapers, the resource parent(s) will want to do the following to ensure the safety, privacy, and confidentiality of all those living in their home by asking for:

  • The police report to be marked confidential, and
  • The medical examiner’s report to be marked confidential and to not include the resource parent’s name and address in the report.

• Inform the caregivers that emergency personnel will:

  • View and examine the body of the child at the location where the child died;

  • Ask questions of the caregivers that may include requesting information on the child’s medical condition and history, recent events that may have occurred, the child’s eating and sleeping habits, routines and past behaviors, and names of all persons living in the home; and

  • Direct the removal of the child’s body to the local morgue where an autopsy may be performed.

• Have contact, preferably face-to-face, with the caregiver as soon as is reasonably possible to provide support, answer questions and link the family to grief counseling. Include the caregiver’s certifier whenever possible, if applicable.

Death of a Child

The death of a child is a traumatic event that impacts everyone involved in their life, even those involved peripherally. The following procedures are meant as a guide to assist staff through this difficult time.

1. If notified of the unexpected death of a child:

   • Determine whether law enforcement has been notified. If not, call 911.

   • If law enforcement has not yet arrived, instruct the caregivers to not move the child’s body, not bathe the child’s body, or otherwise change the environment (the child’s clothes, location, or position of the body) where the child died.

   • Determine whether a report has been made to the hotline. If not, contact the hotline at 1-855-503-SAFE (7233) to notify them of the child’s death.
II. If notified of the death of a critically or terminally ill child, follow the plan created in the Critically or Terminally Ill Children procedure, Section III, above.

III. When a CPS assessment is assigned due to a child fatality, the Child Fatality Protocol must be followed.

IV. Actions taken at the time of a child’s death:

- The Child Welfare program manager will consult and coordinate with the caseworker and the supervisor regarding the notification of the legal parents or guardians, the child’s siblings, relatives and others including the CASA, attorneys, and Juvenile Court.
- Prepare a sensitive issue report (DHS 150) and send it to the CW Sensitive Issue Report Distribution email, as directed on the form.
- Implement the pre-arranged plans for grief counseling and support.

V. Funeral and burial arrangements:

- Authority over a child in the care or custody of the Department is subordinate to the legal parents’ or guardians’ authority at the time of a child’s death. The parents have the right to determine the funeral and burial arrangements. The caseworker should be especially sensitive to the cultural beliefs, traditions, and practices of the family at this time, and ensure the wishes of the family are honored and supported, even when the Department has custody.
- The child’s legal family should assume responsibility for the funeral and burial expenses. When the family is unable to assume these costs, and the child is the alleged victim in a CPS assessment, or in the temporary or legal custody of the Department, the agency may cover some of the costs of the funeral and burial. When the Department covers these costs, the child’s family will be included in the decision-making process to the extent possible and include the considerations outlined in part A. The decision making process may also consider input from the resource family.
- When making arrangements, consider the safety of the surviving siblings and parents and plan for it accordingly. For example:
  - Are there individuals whose behavior needs particular consideration?
  - Are there family members or friends who could provide safety during the service/ceremony/tradition?
  - Is it possible to have separate services/ceremonies/traditions?
- Consider involving the surviving siblings or parents’ therapists in planning for their experience at the service/ceremony/tradition.
- The Department covers funeral and burial costs not to exceed $4,000. The district manager or their designee may approve an exception up to a total of $4,500. Make a one time payment in OR-Kids use category: Foster Care Non-Placement Services with Service Type: Funeral Services. See OAR 413-090-0400.

VI. Caring for yourself and others

- Encourage the parents and resource families to find and participate in a support system of family members, relatives, friends, their faith community, or crisis counselors. Encourage the parents to invite their supports to any meetings that may occur. Understand the grief and trauma experienced by participants and allow the family to drive the meeting. There may be occasion when a smaller meeting is taken into consideration and then communication with the others following.

- Involve the certifier when considering the resource family and supports they may need.
- The local hospital, hospice program, or mental health provider may be able to provide the caseworker with information regarding locally available grief counselors. Other resources include:
  - Doug Center,
  - National Alliance for Grieving Children, and
  - Healgrief.
- There are resources available to Child Welfare staff:
  - Staff may choose to use the Employee Assistance Program,
  - The ODHS OWL Trauma Aware Staff Wellness site has many resources available to staff to build resiliency.
  - Additionally, Child Welfare offers a CW Staff Support connection which focuses on crisis intervention and provides peer support for people experiencing symptoms from stress. This is a short-term intervention to alleviate the reactions from traumatic stress and distressing experiences. You can access this resource by emailing the following: CW.StaffSupport@dhssoha.state.or.us.

Leadership’s Role

- Provide guidance and support to the caseworker for case management, approvals and notifications.
- Provide guidance and support to the staff directly or indirectly involved in the child’s case, including SSAs, Certifiers, Supervisors, previous caseworkers, facilitators, support staff, etc.
- Encourage the use of the resources noted above, as appropriate.
- Recognize the impact of the direct trauma and vicarious trauma experienced and seek out appropriate care and resources as necessary.

Section 32: Legal Relationships to a Child
Legal relationships to a child

Whenever a child is in the legal custody of ODHS, the family also is involved with the court system.

Procedure

I. Parents

A. When legal custody of a child is granted to the ODHS by the court, the parents have legal rights as parties to the case. These legal rights include, but are not limited to:

1. The right to notice of the proceeding and copies of:
   - Petitions,
   - Answers,
   - Motions, and
   - Other documents.

2. The right to appear with counsel. Also, to have counsel appointed as provided by law;

3. The right to call witnesses, cross-examine witnesses and participate in hearings;

4. The right of appeal; and

5. The right to request a hearing.

B. When ODHS is granted legal custody of a child, the parent’s rights to parent the child are limited.

1. It is good practice to encourage parents to continue to be involved with the child. Do this within what is reasonable. Consider the best interest, safety and well-being of the child. If you have questions about the appropriate level of parental involvement with the child, consult with your supervisor.

C. Most children return to a parent. Therefore, it is logical to continue to have the parent play a role in the child’s life. If the parent continues their involvement, it maintains the parent and child relationship. It also maintains the family attachment.

   Involvement could include involvement in decisions about:

   1. Religious preferences,
   2. Church attendance or involvement, and
   3. Activities such as:
      - Including the parents in medical and mental health care appointments and treatment decisions,
      - Educational decisions and school-related functions, or
      - Routine decisions such as consultation with the parent before the caregiver takes the child for a haircut.

D. When safety is a concern or when return home no longer is the permanency plan, parental involvement in such decisions may lessen or no longer exist.
II. Relatives

A. Non-intervener relatives have limited rights when a child is in the legal custody of ODHS.

B. When a legal grandparent of a child requests information about a court hearing in writing and provides a mailing address:

1. You must give the legal grandparent notice of a hearing concerning the child, and the court must give the legal grandparent an opportunity to be heard. (A legal grandparent is not a party to the juvenile court proceeding solely because of notice and an opportunity to be heard.) This is governed by ORS 419B.875(6).

C. Do not consider the substitute care placement of a child with a relative as a right of a relative. Only do this if the relative established legal rights to the child in a court of competent jurisdiction.

1. However, you are responsible, under law, to protect a child’s right to live with his or her immediate or extended family. The exception is when there is indication that family members will not adequately provide for the child’s welfare.

2. When determining either the temporary or permanent placement of a child, consider placement with relatives in preference to persons the child does not know. Do this if there is reason to believe the child’s relatives will be able to provide:
   - Appropriate care,
   - Stability, and
   - Security for the child.

D. Arrange for visits or contact by phone, letter, email or other ways to communicate. Relatives have a right to communicate and visit with a child in the legal custody of ODHS. Visits and contacts are within reasonable guidelines set by the child's case plan and the direction of the court.

III. Attorneys

A. Have ongoing contact with attorneys that represent different parties to a dependency case. Children and youth, parents and interveners all may have attorney representation. Others, such as grandparents or other relatives who do not have intervener status, also may have legal representation. However, they are not legal parties to the case, nor do they have the rights of legal parties.

B. Attorneys may:

1. Attend family meetings,
2. Review the case plan,
3. Review the case file of the client they are representing, and
4. Meet individually with the client.

Inform the attorney of any significant changes in the case. For example:

1. Placement moves, or
2. Non-routine medical care to the child.

C. Inform the attorneys of the child and the parents when a child is prescribed or administered a psychotropic medication. Requirements for notification are in 413-070-0400 to 0490, Psychotropic Medication Management.
IV. Intervener

A. An intervenor petitions the juvenile court requesting legal party status to the case. The intervention status is governed by ORS 419B.116.

B. The court may assign legal party status to the individual based on several judicial findings such as:
   1. The person’s relationship to the child and the person’s involvement in the child’s life;
   2. The reason intervention is sought;
   3. How the person’s intervention is in the best interests of the child or ward;
   4. Why existing parties cannot adequately present the case and what specific relief is being sought; and
   5. How long the relationship to the child has been in place (six months for foster parents).

C. If you receive a notice for a motion to become intervener, consult with your supervisor about the implications of this motion for the child and the case plan.
   1. Get assistance from the local Assistant Attorney General after you receive approval from your supervisor.

D. An order granting intervention is solely for juvenile dependency proceedings. The order does not confer standing or rights of intervention in any other action. There is no intervention allowed in Termination of Parental Rights proceedings (ORS 419B.500).

E. Persons who request intervener status for a child are most often:
   1. A relative to the child,
   2. A person who has had a parent-child relationship, or
   3. A foster parent.

The legal status of intervener remains until the court determines otherwise. This status may continue for a foster parent even after:
   1. The child no longer lives with the foster parent, or
   2. The foster parent ceases to be a foster parent.

F. Treat an intervener as a full legal party who must receive:
   1. Notices of court hearings, and
   2. Copies of court reports.

The person may request visitation and be involved in family meetings and case planning decisions.

Tip

Identification of the roles and responsibilities for CASA volunteers and caseworkers is found in the Memorandum of Understanding between:

- ODHS, and
- Oregon Commission on Children and Families (OCCF), which operates the CASA programs in local communities.
V. Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASAs)

A Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) is a volunteer who has full legal party status in the case in which the court appoints the volunteer (ORS 419A.170). Not all juvenile court cases will have a CASA appointed by the juvenile court.

A. The responsibilities of the CASA volunteer include:
   1. Investigate all relevant information about the case;
   2. Advocate for the best interests of the child. Also, to ensure all relevant facts are brought before the court;
   3. Facilitate and negotiate to ensure the court, ODHS and the child’s attorney, if any, fulfill their obligations to the child in a timely fashion; and
   4. Monitor all court orders to ensure compliance. Also, to bring to the court’s attention any change in circumstances that may require a modification of the court’s order.

B. You have specific responsibilities outlined in the Memorandum of Understanding with the state CASA organization. These responsibilities include:
   1. Assess the safety of the child;
   2. Access and use court services;
   3. Develop and implement plan for:
      - Safety,
      - Well-being, and
      - Permanency;
   4. Provide and obtain services; and
   5. Recommend court appointment of a CASA, when appropriate.

C. CASA volunteers can expect that you will provide casework services throughout the life of the case that include:
   1. Contact with the child regularly, according to policy;
   2. Receive and assess allegations of child abuse;
   3. Develop ongoing safety plans including:
      - Maintaining children safely with their families,
      - Placement of children in substitute care, and
      - Accessing court services;
   4. Engage families in Oregon Family Decision-Making Meetings to identify:
      - Children’s needs,
      - Family strengths, and
      - Appropriate services when a child is in substitute care;
   5. Develop, record and implement the Child Welfare case plan and concurrent permanency plan;
6. Obtain and provide appropriate services for the child or family to meet the child’s needs for:
   - Safety,
   - Permanency, and
   - Well-being;

7. Develop a visit and contact plan appropriate to the safety and attachment needs of the child;

8. Assess and monitor educational, health, mental health and dental needs;

9. Monitor substitute care placements;

10. Attend and participate in other agency meetings involving the child as appropriate; and

11. Make written reports and recommendations to the court.

D. Make every attempt to meet with the CASA volunteer as soon as possible when one is appointed. At that meeting, the CASA volunteer and you should:

1. Agree on a communication plan. This includes:
   - Email, phone or fax preferences,
   - Long or short messages,
   - Expectations (this includes length of turnaround time for communications), and
   - Exchange of usual and emergency contact information.

2. Review the:
   - Case,
   - History,
   - Child Welfare case plan,
   - Permanency plan, and
   - Concurrent permanency plan.

3. Discuss the role of the CASA volunteer. Clarify expectations about ways they might facilitate achieving safety and permanency for the child.

4. Help ensure that notification is made regarding:
   - All ODHS staff and family meetings relevant to the child including case plan reviews,
   - Sibling planning conferences:
     - (1) Current caretaker committee meetings, and
     - (2) Adoption committee meetings.

E. Document the appointment of a CASA volunteer in the case file.

F. Ensure frequent updates and return email, phone and fax within 48 hours.

G. Share court reports at an in-person meeting, if possible, before court presentations so there are no surprises.

H. Effective work of a CASA volunteer often depends on speedy access to complete information. According to ORS 419A.170, the appointed CASA volunteer must have access to information from the child’s file. The full record, except for the reporter’s identity, may be accessed by:

1. Parental release of information,
2. Court order, or
3. Through the process of discovery.

- The advice of the Attorney General’s Office guides ODHS policy. It states that Oregon statutes do not permit you to give CASA volunteers record information that identifies persons who have reported child abuse and neglect (Department of Justice File No. 412-100-GH0151-01).
- Both ODHS employees and CASA employees or volunteers carry statutory responsibility to maintain the confidentiality of records.

I. The local office and CASA programs negotiate agreements to:

1. Provide initial access to the child’s file to the CASA volunteer at the Child Welfare office within 24 hours if possible. However, not more than three working days from the request.
2. While keeping the burden to Child Welfare staff minimal, copy the portions of the file the CASA volunteer deems necessary. Exclude information that relates to the identity of the reporter and other parts of the file that may not be opened.
3. Ensure the CASA volunteer, after they read or copy case files, returns the Child Welfare file material in the same order as received.
4. Provide copies at no charge to CASA volunteers or programs.
5. Negotiate a definition of timely notification that meets the local office and CASA program needs.

J. Communicate cancellations and rescheduling immediately to the CASA volunteer or CASA program.
K. Understand the parameters of the local agreement. Consult with your supervisor if the parameters of the local agreement are unclear.
L. The CASA volunteer needs reasonable access to the child in the home or placement. This includes adoptive placement.
M. The CASA volunteer needs to have private conversations with the child.
N. Actively facilitate and support positive working relationships between:

1. Biological parents,
2. Foster parents,
3. Adoptive parents, and
4. The CASA volunteer.

Tip
Whenever you are in doubt about the role, relationship or responsibilities of the caseworker in a legal relationship: Consult your supervisor, or Request authority to consult the local Assistant Attorney General.

The supervisor’s role

I. Ensure the caseworker has a thorough understanding of the legal relationships to the child on an open case plan.

II. Ensure the caseworker promotes and supports the services and working relationships with a CASA volunteer.

III. Review and grant approval for consultation with the Assistant Attorney General when appropriate.

Section 33: Obtaining a driver’s permit and a driver’s license for youth in care under age 18
Obtaining a driver’s permit and a driver’s license for youth in care under age 18

Obtaining a driver’s permit and license is a privilege. For teens in substitute care, it is part of their personal growth, accepting and taking responsibility for actions leading to independence. Completing an approved driver’s education course is necessary to develop the safe driving skills needed to obtain a driver’s license. Access to education, employment, health care, and other community-based activities for older youth in care working toward independence is dependent on access to transportation. There may also be times a youth wants to obtain a driver’s license prior to exiting foster care with no intent to actually drive a vehicle.

The Oregon Legislature has supported youth in care obtaining a driver’s license through legislation in 2009 in which ODOT will provide reimbursement for the costs of driver’s education courses (traffic safety education) to a number of youth in care (ORS 336.807). The ILP Desk can assist with reimbursement of those costs.

Planning for and obtaining a driver’s permit and a driver’s license, by the nature of the activity, requires common understanding on a number of details related to the process of obtaining a driver’s license. The steps for accomplishing this process are outlined in these procedures.

Tip

These readiness criteria were developed in consultation with the Oregon Foster Youth Connection (OFYC).

Procedure

Assessment

There are several issues on which the youth and other adults involved in the youth’s life must come to agreement in order to successfully achieve the goal of a driver’s license and a safe driver.

I. Readiness

The caseworker, in conjunction with other adults involved with the youth, must agree that the youth is ready to pursue obtaining a driver’s license. Part of assessing a youth’s readiness includes answering these questions:

A. Is the youth at least 15 years of age (minimum age to obtain an instruction permit)?

B. Is the youth enrolled and attending school, maintaining at least a “C” average, or is he or she actively working with a tutor or receiving academic assistance to improve his or her school performance? Has the youth’s school attendance been regular without incidents of suspension, non-attendance or expulsion during the last six months?

C. Is the youth healthy and able to answer "yes" to the medical questions on the application? Are there any documented medical or mental health recommendations that the youth not drive due to physical, mental or emotional conditions that would significantly impair the youth’s functioning and judgment when operating a motor vehicle?

D. Is the youth free from any evidence of drug or alcohol use by the youth during the last year?

E. Does the youth display age-appropriate behavior generally, questioning and testing within normal limits, most often using good judgment, and avoiding unsafe, violent, or criminal behavior (within the past year)?

F. Does the youth have placement stability; has he or she been in the current placement at least six months or more and has no history of running away or other placement disruptions?

II. Required documentation

A. The DMV will need several documents prior to obtaining a learner’s permit. See the ODOT web page for further information here.

B. Ensure the youth has each of these documents available prior to applying in person at the DMV office:
   1. Verification of school enrollment, completion, or exemption (which will also verify residency).
   2. Completed application signed by the parent or legal guardian (for all youth in Department custody, this is the district manager or designee. In most instances, this will be the program manager.).
   3. Proof of legal presence in the U.S.
   4. Proof of full legal name. See the ODOT list of acceptable documents for proof. In most instances, this will be the youth’s birth certificate.
   5. Proof of Social Security number.
   6. A completed application.

Tip

Remember, the Department is not responsible for the insurance premiums of the caregiver and, likewise, is not responsible for payment of the youth’s insurance premium.

Tip

Some insurance companies are willing to write a “Named Operator” or “Named Non-Owner” insurance policy for the youth. Though this option is not offered through every insurance company, such policies may be written when a youth does not own a car but wants insurance coverage while driving another person’s vehicle as a secondary insurance coverage. A named non-owner policy meets Oregon’s minimum liability-only insurance requirement. This means the person would be covered if he/she injured someone or damaged someone else’s property. It is important to check with the insurance carrier or agent prior to making insurance decisions.

III. Insurance Coverage

A. Ensure there is required insurance coverage prior to the youth driving a vehicle. The caregiver should check with the company that insures the vehicle the youth will be driving. Some insurers increase premiums when a young driver gets a permit. Others do not charge higher rates until a license is issued. In either case, the increased premium will apply – once the permit or license is obtained – as long as the young driver is a member of the household. It doesn’t matter whether he or she regularly operates a vehicle. Private passenger auto policies generally include foster children in the definition of “Who is an Insured” under the policy.

B. Understand that once a foster child obtains a license (or in some cases a permit), most insurance companies will increase the premium because foster children are considered members of the household. In other words, caregivers/parent(s) do not have a choice about whether to “add” the youth to their policy; he or she will be added by the insurance company, and the caregiver/parent will be charged accordingly. Even if coverage exists for the foster child under a separate policy, the policy for the caregiver/parent’s household would also apply. If the youth’s parent, legal guardian, or other responsible adult is willing and able to provide adequate insurance coverage, or the youth is able to provide payment for his or her own policy, the insurance carrier for the foster family can still charge for the youth. There are only certain circumstances that allow for exclusion. Most insurers will not be willing to write a policy with exclusion and will elect not to write the auto insurance if the circumstances would allow an exclusion.

IV. Driver’s Education and Practice Hours

A. Once the youth has obtained an instruction permit, the youth will need to enroll in a driver education course approved by ODOT. Check the DMV webpage for DMV-approved driver education programs.

B. The youth must drive with supervision and log the practice hours. When the youth chooses not to attend a driver education class, the additional required hours of supervised driving must be logged.

C. The youth will need to have access to a vehicle for his or her practice hours.

D. There are certain restrictions on driving with a permit. All youth are expected to comply with DMV requirements. Check the DMV website frequently for the most current information. Also share with the youth the DMV information in Appendix 5.28, Road to Getting Your License or here.

E. The caseworker, youth, and others involved with the youth must come to agreement on who will supervise (and document) these practice hours.

F. The caseworker must confirm that the individual supervising the practice hours is over 21 years of age and has a valid class C or higher driver license.

V. Planning for the Unexpected

A. The caseworker, youth, substitute caregiver and others need to plan for the unexpected, such as changes in placement, insurance coverage, school status, legal status of the child, and so forth.

B. It is a caseworker’s responsibility to ensure everyone understands the steps to obtaining a driver’s license and is aware of the steps that need to be taken and the people responsible to achieve each step of the process.

Agreements

However the caseworker proceeds with the process of assisting the youth in obtaining a driver’s license, there will be several people involved in the process. It’s likely that several people will need to come to an agreement for the youth to obtain a driver’s license.

I. Provide the youth with the guidance he or she needs to prepare for and make his or her case for obtaining a driver’s license. Help the youth actively participate in the transition planning in preparation for obtaining the driver’s permit. If the Transition Plan needs to be updated, make sure the youth is involved, and the written update has been completed prior to further planning.
II. It makes good sense, but it’s not required, to have a meeting with everyone who will be or could be a participant in the process so that all people who are contributing support, time, money, or other investment into the process understands their specific role and responsibility. A meeting also provides the opportunity to put agreements in writing and ensure there is a common understanding of each step of the process.

III. Consider who should be invited to the meeting or must have an understanding of the steps to be taken in this process. Consider who, in addition to the youth, will be involved or should be informed in the process, such as:

   A. The substitute caregiver,
   B. The parents or legal guardians,
   C. The CASA,
   D. The child’s attorney,
   E. Other significant adults in the youth’s life, or
   F. Other persons who might assist with time, resources, or financing.

IV. Prepare for the meeting by understanding the process, having information available, and ensuring the youth is informed of the process. Review the DMV/ODOT web pages for understanding of any requirements that might apply for the specific youth.

V. Invite persons to the meeting after having prepared them for the discussion. Have some indications of who is able and willing to offer time, resources, or financing for this process.

VI. During the meeting (a template for the meeting is provided in Appendix 5.29):

   A. Review the youth’s readiness for this process. If there are additional steps the youth must take to demonstrate readiness, clearly outline those steps and ensure the youth fully understands what is being asked/required of him or her.
   B. Review options and come to an agreement on who is taking on the responsibility for insurance coverage.
   C. Review and come to an agreement on who will provide the youth with transportation to the local DMV office and who will supervise practice hours once the youth receives the driver’s permit.
   D. Review and come to an agreement on who can and who cannot be in the car during practice hours and ensure these people meet with DMV requirements. Ensure that any person supervising practice hours has a current, valid driver license. Obtain a copy of the driver’s license.
   E. Review and come to an agreement how driver’s education classes will be paid for and how the youth will be transported to and from the classes.

   Note: ODHS has funding to assist a youth with the cost of a driver’s education class. The youth must be eligible for ILP services and must have or obtain his or her driver’s permit prior to enrolling for driver’s education. To access the funds, the ODHS caseworker will need to complete form CF78 (Youth Transition Funds request). Whenever possible, youth are to use an ODOT-approved school for their driver’s education class. For additional assistance, contact the ILP/Youth Transition Support Staff at 503-945-5722. Also see Appendix 5.30, Driver’s Education Course Payment Form.
   F. Review and come to agreement on what vehicle(s) will be used by the youth and that there is adequate insurance coverage.
G. Review all the required documentation needed to obtain a valid driver’s permit and come to an agreement on who will obtain any needed documents.

H. Review and come to an agreement on circumstances under which driving privileges will be suspended or limited due to the youth’s behavior or actions.

I. What vehicle(s) will be used for practice hours and for the required road test?

J. Review and come to an agreement on any contingency plans. What if, for example:
   1. Insurance coverage needs to change?
   2. The youth’s behavior changes?
   3. School achievement drops or behaviors change?
   4. A change in placement is forthcoming?
   5. The agreed upon plan for obtaining and logging practice hours needs to change?
   6. Other unexpected circumstances arise?

K. Come to an agreement on when and how the caseworker and others will be notified of any changes.

VII. After the meeting, ensure all the agreements have been put in writing. This documentation provides the caseworker with the information needed to support approval from the district manager or Child Welfare program manager.

Note: The district manager or designee (Child Welfare program manager) must provide consent for the youth to obtain a driver’s permit and driver’s license under OAR 413-020-0140(4)(e).

VIII. Review the agreement with the supervisor, and obtain the management approval required.

IX. When the youth has successfully completed the driver education course, submit driver education course payment receipts to the ILP Desk. The receipt is needed for documentation of the course payment (previously requested) or to issue reimbursement to the youth or their foster parent. You must also submit the Driver’s Education Course Payments sheet providing the necessary details regarding the youth’s completion of the course.

X. When agreement has not been reached on any of the necessary steps or resources, or the youth is not ready to pursue getting a driver’s license at this time, outline the steps that will be necessary to move forward. Come to an agreement on when decisions will be reviewed and reconsidered. Let participants know of the complaint procedure if agreement has not been reached. See OAR 413-010-0420.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Ensure the caseworker has a working knowledge of current DMV/ODOT regulations.

II. Review with the caseworker the youth’s readiness for driver education and a driver permit. Explore any known obstacles, and develop strategies to overcome them.

III. Support the ongoing independence of the youth, and develop strategies to gain support from others involved with the youth.
IV. Review and approve the comprehensive transition plan.

V. Support the caseworker in getting the approval of the district manager or child welfare program manager.

Section 34: Reasonable and prudent parent standard
Reasonable and prudent parent standard

Substitute caregivers and child care institutions must provide children in the care and custody of the Department opportunities for participation in extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities, and apply the reasonable and prudent parent standard (RPP standard) when making decisions regarding a child or young adult’s participation in such activities.

Participation in extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities is a normal part of childhood and adolescent experience. It improves well-being and outcomes by helping children and youth develop emotional and social skills and build a positive sense of identity.

The RPP standard and related requirements applies to all children and young adults in substitute care including placements in family foster care, with relative caregivers and with selected adoptive families; placements in therapeutic foster care, residential treatment programs and shelter care programs; and placements made based on ODHS custody, temporary custody, or through a voluntary custody agreement or a voluntary placement.

ODHS Child Welfare must:

I. Ensure substitute caregivers and child care institutions meet related standards and comply with related requirements, as described in OAR certification standards.

II. Ensure children and young adults, including children who are likely to remain in foster care until 18 years of age, have regular, ongoing opportunities to engage in age-appropriate or developmentally appropriate activities.

III. Report to the court on steps the department is taking to ensure (a) substitute caregivers apply the RPP standard, and (b) children in foster care have ongoing opportunities to engage in age-appropriate and developmentally appropriate responsibilities.

Definitions

Reasonable and prudent parent standard:

I. The standard a substitute caregiver shall use when determining whether to allow a child or young adult in substitute care to participate in extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities.

II. The RPP standard is characterized by careful and sensible parental decisions that maintain the health, safety and best interests of a child or young adult while encouraging emotional and developmental growth.

III. When applying the RPP standard, the substitute caregiver must consider: the age, maturity and developmental level of the child or young adult; the nature and inherent risks of harm; and the best interests of the child or young adult, based on information known by the caregiver.

Age-appropriate or developmentally appropriate activities:

I. Activities or items generally accepted as suitable for children or young adults of the same chronological age or level of maturity or are developmentally appropriate for a child or young adult, based on the cognitive, emotional, physical and behavioral capacities typical for an age or age group; and

II. In the case of a specific child or young adult, activities or items suitable for the child or young adult based on the developmental stages attained by the child or young adult based on the cognitive, emotional, physical and behavioral capacities of the child or young adult.

III. Age-appropriate or developmentally appropriate activities include extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities.

Procedures

Department responsibilities related to the RPP standard cut across several areas:

I. Engaging in monthly contacts;

II. Developing, monitoring and reviewing the case plan;

III. Preparing for and attending court hearings;

IV. Assessing applicants for foster care, relative care and adoption; and

V. Monitoring compliance with certification standards. Specific tasks for each of these areas are covered below.

Monthly contacts

Caseworker

For children and young adults in substitute care, when conducting monthly contacts, the caseworker should:

I. Talk with children and young adults in substitute care about their interests in extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities that may be available, discussing the potential benefits that may come from participation.

II. Talk with parents or guardians of children and young adults in substitute care about potential activities available to gain their perspectives.

III. Discuss available opportunities. Discuss with the substitute caregiver available opportunities the child or young adult may have to participate in age- and developmentally appropriate activities, including any extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities.

IV. Communicate the parent or guardian's perspective. Share parent or guardian input/perspective with the caregiver and discuss child or young adult’s interests.

V. Ensure caregiver understands RPP standard. Ensure the substitute caregiver is familiar with the concept of RPP standard. Discuss decisions substitute caregivers are able to make without additional permission from the Department and those that require Department permission before approving an activity. Answer any questions they may have.

Substitute caregiver authority to make related decisions
The Department delegates a variety of responsibilities to the physical custodian of children in the care or custody of the Department. Making decisions about the child or young adult’s participation in age-appropriate and developmentally appropriate activities, including extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities, is among the responsibilities delegated to the substitute caregiver.

The substitute caregiver must apply the RPP standard when making such decisions, and must consider the age, maturity and developmental level of the child or young adult; the nature and inherent risks of harm; and the best interest of the child or young adult based on information known by the caregiver. When making such decisions using the RPP standard, the substitute caregiver’s liability is addressed in the Tort and Foster Parent Liability Policy.

Some items that may be helpful when sharing information with the substitute caregiver are: Guidance on RPP Standard, Guardian and Legal Consents and Exercise and Delegation of Legal Authority (OAR 413-020-0100 to 0170), and the Tort and Foster Parent Liability Policy.

VI. Gather information and document caregiver use of the standard. Gather information on how the substitute caregiver is applying the RPP standard to decisions about involving the child and young adult in activities. This information is needed to ensure the substitute caregiver is applying the RPP standard when making decisions about involvement of children in age- and developmentally appropriate activities.

VII. Discuss cost of activities. Discuss who will be responsible for payment of any fee or charge to participate in an extracurricular activity.

VIII. Discuss barriers to participation. Discuss any other barriers that may exist (e.g., transportation challenges or potential limitations based on the supervision and support needs of the child or young adult).

IX. Explore resolutions to barriers. Discuss and explore potential resolution of barriers to participation in age- and developmentally appropriate activities.

Potential barriers and ideas for resolution:

Financial constraints:

A. Are there local organizations such as rotaries, business partners or spiritual communities that may offer financial support or equipment needed for the activity?

B. Are there relatives or other support people who may be able to assist?

C. Are there scholarships available?

D. Are there reduced or waived fees for youth who are in substitute care?

E. Are there opportunities to participate in similar activities that are not as costly?

F. Could the foster care payment assist with some of the costs? Foster care base rate payment is designed for foster parents or relative caregivers to provide for the cost of such things as clothing, transportation and personal incidentals, which could be part of the costs to participate in activities.

G. Could System of Care funds be requested to assist with costs to participate in the activity?

H. Might Independent Living Program discretionary funds be an appropriate funding resource? These funds are available for youth aged 14 and older, when a transition plan is in place, and when the activity is tied to preparing a youth for transition to adulthood. (Submit form CF 0078 Youth Transition Funds Request.)

Supervision and support needs:

I. Are there people who can be present to provide additional oversight and support, if needed, so the youth may participate in the opportunities that increase skills?

J. Does the youth have a disability for which accommodations can be made to allow for successful participation?

K. Are there services available through any other entities who may also be working with the youth, including mental health (e.g., skill builder), disability programs (e.g., personal support worker), and juvenile department? When a supervision plan is in place for a child with enhanced supervision needs, consider if additional strategies and supports may now be available to increase opportunities for age- or developmentally appropriate activities. Update the supervision plan accordingly.

Transportation challenges:

A. Are there ways to partner with others (relatives, friends, support people, community connections, outreach to caregivers of other youth involved in the activity), to assist in transportation, if the hours, frequency or distance make participation in an activity difficult?

B. Are there similar activities available, closer to the location of the substitute care setting?

C. Are there ways to combine trips to make transportation less cumbersome (e.g., schedule a parent, sibling or relative visit on the same day as the activity, allowing for fewer trips or more transportation assistance options)

* Remember that you’re not alone. There are numerous people on the child’s team who may be able to assist and come up with creative solutions (e.g., CASA, therapist, mentor, teacher, relatives, etc.)!

Communicate with the certifier any concerns about substitute caregiver’s ability to apply the RPP standard or to involve the child or young adult in age- or developmentally appropriate activities.

Problem solve. Plan, along with the certifier, how these concerns may best be addressed.

Document in OR-KIDS case notes the information from above conversations with children and young adults, parents and guardians, and substitute caregivers.

Developing, reviewing, and monitoring the case plan

Caseworker

For children and young adults in substitute care, when developing, monitoring and reviewing the case plan, the caseworker should:

I. Assist with identification of interest and opportunities. Work with the child or young adult to identify interests and opportunities to participate in age- or developmentally appropriate activities, which include extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities.
II. Understand parents or guardians' perspective. Talk with parents or guardians of children and young adults in substitute care to gain their perspectives about age- or developmentally appropriate activities available to their child or young adult.

III. Communicate parents or guardians' perspective. Share the parents’ input about age- and developmentally appropriate activities with the substitute caregiver.

IV. Discuss with the substitute caregiver opportunities available to the child or young adult and any potential barriers, inquiring about how they are applying the RPP standard.

V. Resolve barriers to participation by youth. Assist the child or young adult and the substitute caregiver when they encounter barriers that prevent participation to increase opportunities for the child or young adult to participate in extracurricular activities.

VI. Ensure caregiver understands RPP standard. Talk with the substitute caregiver about the RPP standard. Ensure the substitute caregiver is familiar with the concept and understands the decisions they’re authorized to make, as part of the RPP standard, without further approvals being required from the department.

VII. Provide assistance and support (substitute caregiver, child or young adult, and parent/guardian) when the desires of those giving input do not match with decisions the substitute caregiver is inclined to make when applying the RPP standard.

At times, an extracurricular activity the child or young adult or the substitute caregiver may wish for the child or young adult to participate in is not feasible. That could be for a variety of reasons (e.g., cost of the activity, safety and supervision, time commitment, child or young adult’s availability that may be affected by parental visits, activities that the child is not developmentally, physically or cognitively prepared to participate in, etc.). It is OK to say no to some activities based on RPP standards. It is OK for children to learn to handle disappointment in a healthy manner. It is not OK, however, to say no without a reasonable response and the child and substitute caregiver having an understanding of the reasoning.

VIII. Document opportunities youth has to participate in appropriate activities. When monitoring the case plan, note opportunities the child or young adult has had to participate in age- and developmentally appropriate activities, and the substitute caregiver’s use of the RPP standard, when making decisions about participation in these activities.
Summer camp and religious services may be activities in which the child or young adult wishes to participate — and that is great! But, for the purposes of House Bill 2890, summer camp and religious services alone do not satisfy the requirement that the Department ensures the substitute caregiver provides an opportunity for the child or young adult to participate in at least one ongoing extracurricular activity based on availability and the interests of the child or young adult.

IX. Identify opportunities for youth to grow through participation. During the (minimum) 90-day case plan reviews, work with the child or young adult and others involved in the case plan review to identify opportunities for growth and development through participation in age- and developmentally appropriate activities.

X. Modify the case plan as needed. Modify the case plan when changes occur (new interests, opportunities or activities) and as needed to address any identified barriers to participation in enrichment activities.

XI. Ensure opportunity to participate in at least one activity. Ensure substitute caregiver provides the opportunity for the child or young adult to participate in at least one ongoing extracurricular activity.

XII. Document a summary of above information in the OR-Kids case plan:

A. Open Permanency Plan, Placement Tab, narrate in the "Reasonable and Prudent Parenting Standard" box. Note: use of "copy" function when updating the case plan will keep the historical narration in this section present and allow for updates over time to be visible within the document.

B. Example of narration: Discussed possible activities with child, parents and foster parents. Child was most interested in soccer and has joined a local team. Practices and games will take place from September to November.

Updates to the court

Caseworker

I. Document. For permanency hearings, the caseworker should document (Section 17 of the court report) the following information:

A. The age- and developmentally appropriate activities in which the child or young adult is engaged; and

B. Information regarding ODHS efforts to ensure the substitute care provider is following the RPP standard.

Certification and adoption compliance

Certifier/Adoption worker

I. Provide information about the rules. When working with an applicant for foster care, relative care or adoption, the certifier/adoption worker should share information regarding the RPP standard.

II. Determine applicant has ability to apply RPP standard. When assessing an application, the certifier/adoption worker should determine if applicants possess the ability to apply the RPP standard when deciding whether to allow the child or young adult in substitute care to participate in extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities.

III. Inquire about RPP and youth participation in activities. When monitoring substitute caregivers’ and adoptive families’ continued compliance with certification standards, the certifier/adoption worker should inquire about the regular, ongoing opportunities the child or young adult placed in the home has to engage in age-appropriate or developmentally appropriate activities, including extracurricular, enrichment, cultural and social activities.

IV. Communicate concerns to caseworker. Communicate with the caseworker about any concerns regarding the substitute caregivers’ or adoptive applicant’s use of the RPP standard or to involve the child or young adult in age- or developmentally appropriate activities.

V. Problem solve. Plan, along with the caseworker, how any concerns may best be addressed.

Rights of Children and Youth in Foster Care

Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights

The Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights was established in Oregon Laws 2013, Chapter 515 and recognized each foster child has certain essential rights. This section outlines the Department’s responsibilities to inform youth of those rights.

The Department has an Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights “suite of materials” that are age and developmentally appropriate. To see the full list of materials and to read an overview of the items, refer to the Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights Suite of Materials document. The materials are intended to assist caseworkers, foster parents and youth to increase communication and clarify expectations and comply with state and federal law. For more information, refer to rights of children in OAR 413-010-0170 to 413-010-0185.

Procedure

I. Provide and review documentation of foster children and youth rights. The caseworker will provide children and youth with documentation of their rights within 60 days of the date of any placement or placement change. Children and youth are to receive a poster, either ODHS 9014 or ODHS 9020, and a verbal explanation of their rights that is age and developmentally appropriate. The caseworker should allow time to help the child or youth understand their rights.

A. The caseworker will also ensure the child or youth retains a copy of their rights. If the document has been lost, the caseworker will provide the child or youth with another copy of the document.

B. The caseworker will review the Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights with the child or youth annually.

C. The caseworker must provide youth age 14 years and older with the Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights signature page, ODHS 9016 and obtain a signature from the youth acknowledging the caseworker reviewed their rights with them per federal law. The youth gets a signed copy, and the caseworker must add a copy to the youth’s hard and electronic case file.

II. Provide current contact information. The caseworker will provide the child or youth with the Important Contact Information Sheet, ODHS 9015, within 60 days of the date of any placement or placement change. The Important Information Sheet includes contact information for the:

A. Caseworker
B. Caseworker’s supervisor
C. Foster home certifier
D. Foster home certifier’s supervisor
E. Branch manager
F. Tribal affiliation (if applicable)
G. Attorney(s)
H. CASA (if applicable)
I. Independent Living provider (if applicable)
J. Local Citizen Review Board coordinator
K. Foster Care Ombudsman
L. Foster youth advocates and supporters (e.g., Oregon Foster Youth Connection, FosterClub)
M. Any other supportive adults and advocates in the child or youth’s life

III. Provide contact for complaints, concerns or violations of rights. The caseworker will also provide the child or youth with a document containing the contact information of the specific individuals whom the foster child or youth may contact regarding complaints, concerns or violations of rights. The caseworker is to keep this list updated and current. This information is printed on the existing Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights documents.

IV. Provide transition to adulthood materials to youth 14 or older. When a foster youth is age 14 or older, and within 60 days of any placement or placement change, the caseworker is to provide the youth with a packet of information and materials that help youth understand how to obtain certain items necessary to assist with their preparation for adulthood. The “How Do I…” brochure, ODHS 9018, contains information to help the youth understand how to:

A. Establish a bank account in the foster child or youth’s name.
B. Acquire a driver’s license as allowed under state law.
C. Remain in foster care after reaching 18 years of age.
D. Access the Tuition and Fee Waiver for foster youth.
E. Obtain a copy of his or her credit report.
F. Obtain medical, dental, vision, mental health services or other treatment, including services and treatments available without parental consent under state law.
G. Participate in crafting his or her comprehensive transition plan.

Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights

The Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights (OR Laws 2017, ch 36, §§ 1-5) was signed into law in May 2017, and the related rules, OARs 413-010-0180 to 413-010-0185, became effective January 1, 2018. This legislation gives children and youth in foster care specific rights designed to protect and strengthen their bond with siblings. This section outlines the Department’s responsibilities regarding informing youth of those rights.

The Department has developed a two-sided poster, the Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights poster (CF 0262), designed to inform youth of these rights. To ensure that children and youth are receiving age and developmentally appropriate materials, one side is more comprehensive, while the other side is more basic. Children and youth are to receive the poster and a verbal explanation of these rights within 60 days of entering substitute care. A Tips and Ideas sheet was also created for caseworkers, caregivers, attorneys, advocates, and community members, CF 0263. Training for caseworkers and foster parents became available in spring 2018 and includes a computer-based training.

Procedure

I. Informing children and youth of their rights.

A. The caseworker will provide the child or youth with documentation of their rights in the form of the Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights poster, CF 0262 and a verbal explanation of their rights, in an age and developmentally appropriate manner, within 60 days of the date of entering substitute care and any placement change.

B. The Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights poster, CF 0262, must be accessible to children and youth in substitute care at all foster homes and child caring agencies.

C. The caseworker will review the child’s or youth’s rights under the Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights on each occasion the child or youth’s case plan is considered.

D. The caseworker will inform the child or youth of their rights under the Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights at least annually.

E. Children and youth can contact the Foster Care Ombudsman regarding complaints, concerns or violations of their rights. The Foster Care Ombudsman’s contact information is included on the Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights poster, CF 0262. For more information about the Foster Care Ombudsman, see section C.

II. Siblings have the right to be placed together while in substitute care whenever safe and appropriate.

A. If siblings are not able to be placed together when they first enter substitute care, the caseworker must continue to work toward joint placement, as opportunities and circumstances change frequently.

1. Under ORS 419B.192 (2), the Department will make diligent efforts to place siblings together and will report to the court the efforts made by the Department to carry out the placement, unless the court finds that the placement of the siblings together is not in the best interests of the child or the ward or the child’s or ward’s sibling.

B. While siblings are not placed together, additional efforts will be made to help maintain the sibling bond, including frequent opportunities to visit in natural settings. Those efforts could include keeping them in homes within proximity of each other, enrolling them in the same schools or extracurricular activities and asking caregivers to take turns hosting sleep overs, park visits, etc.

1. The Tips and Ideas sheet, CF 0263, captures other ideas and suggestions caseworkers can use while working to strengthen and preserve sibling connections.

III. Siblings have the right to have a Sibling Visit and Contact Plan that has been developed with their active engagement and participation and is complied with as part of any substitute care placement.

A. The caseworker is to complete the Sibling Visit and Contact Plan, on pages 3 and 4 of CF 0831, within 30 days of the date the siblings enter substitute care.

B. The caseworker must review the Sibling Visit and Contact Plan every 90 days and update it at least annually. The Sibling Visit and Contact Plan must be current and complied with at all times and will need to be updated if changes occur.

C. The Sibling Visit and Contact Plan must align with any existing court orders as ORS 419B.337 (3) states, “The court may make an order regarding visitation by the ward’s parents or siblings. The Department of Human Services is responsible for developing and implementing a visitation plan consistent with the court’s order.”

D. If visits or contact are not allowed between siblings, it is the caseworker’s responsibility to talk with the child or youth and explain the reason(s) for the restrictions and what barriers must be overcome so that visits or contact can begin or resume. This information must also be captured in the Sibling Visit and Contact Plan.

E. Caseworkers must be mindful of the following additional rights when developing the Sibling Visit and Contact Plan. Children and youth in foster care who are siblings have rights including, but not limited to, the right to:

1. Visit and maintain contact with siblings who are placed in substitute care and those who are not;
2. Have more private or less restrictive contact with siblings as compared to communication with others who are not siblings; and
3. Be provided with transportation to visits and maintain contact with siblings.

F. The Sibling Visit and Contact Plan rules are captured in OAR 413-070-0860.

G. The Sibling Visit and Contact Plan Procedure Manual is here (http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/caf/safety_model/procedure_manual/index.html).

Tip

Do you know about this opportunity for sibling connection? Camp to Belong Oregon (Kindred Matters) is a program that reunites brothers and sisters living in separate homes for events of fun and sibling connection. Camp to Belong Oregon (Kindred Matters) provides week-long summer camp programs and day events around the state.

IV. Children and youth have the right to be immediately notified of certain changes and life events of their siblings in the Department’s legal custody.

A. Caseworkers will notify the child or youth of the placement and placement changes of their siblings.

B. Caseworkers will notify the child or youth of any catastrophic events or emergencies that effect their siblings.

C. Caseworkers are to make these notifications in an age, developmentally and emotionally sensitive manner based on what is safe and appropriate for each child or youth.

V. Children and youth have the right to have continued contact encouraged in any adoptive or guardianship placement, whenever safe and appropriate.

A. Caseworkers are to inform children and youth of the impact the guardianship or adoption will have on their sibling connections, including what visit and contact options will remain available once the guardianship or adoption is finalized.

B. Children and youth have the right to advocate for sibling visits and contact even as it relates to guardianships and adoptions through their attorneys.

VI. Children and youth in the legal custody of the Department may have other rights not specified here and as appropriate to the child’s or youth’s age and developmental stage.

Department funding is available for adoption and guardianship mediation regarding visits and contact with siblings, parents and other relatives. Caseworkers can access these funds by submitting a Cooperative Adoption Mediation Referral form (CW 0437) to the Child Permanency Unit within Central Office.
Foster Care Ombudsman

The Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights identifies specific individuals a foster child may contact regarding concerns, complaints or potential violations of his or her rights. To this end, the Governor’s Advocacy Office has established the Foster Care Ombudsman.

The Foster Care Ombudsman responds to complaints, concerns or violation of rights initiated by children in foster care or by a second party on behalf of children in foster care.

The Ombudsman and staff are authorized to:

I. Communicate with any foster child in his or her placement or elsewhere.

II. Investigate and research issues or grievances to determine whether Child Welfare program staff is in compliance with ODHS policies and procedures.

III. Track and identify systemic trends or training needs; recommend modifications to policy and procedures when findings determine an existing policy has an unintended or adverse impact on clients.

IV. Communicate on behalf of foster children who perceive inequities or inconsistencies within the ODHS systems.

V. Provide appropriate, timely and quality services to customers; assist with information and access to ODHS programs and services.

VI. Provide guidance on navigating within the Child Welfare programs, including client rights and due processes.

VII. To objectively review and investigate complaints and concerns as appropriate, including informing the subject office or unit of the intent to review a case, which may include the subject unit’s operations, policies and practices.

VIII. To make appropriate referrals to the applicable source for remedy or due process including notification to the subject office or unit of the referral, unless advance notice will unduly hinder the review.

IX. To inform complainants and concerned parties of actions the Ombudsman will take in response to their complaint or concern, including whether the complaint will be reviewed by the Ombudsman or notify them if the matter is being referred to another entity for response.

X. The Ombudsman must adhere to Oregon statutes, administrative rules and ODHS policies without exception.

While ODHS does not have the right to compel parents and guardians of those not in substitute care to allow sibling visits and contact, every effort should be made to preserve the child or youth’s right to maintain visit and contact with siblings. Caseworkers should emphasize the importance of sibling attachments and encourage a continued relationship between siblings to enhance or maintain their bond.

It is not a permissible disciplinary measure to withhold opportunities for children and youth in care to have visits or contact with their siblings. ODHS caseworkers should have a conversation with the foster parent(s) or caregiver(s) when the child or youth enters substitute care regarding appropriate discipline. Certifiers may be able to assist.

Section 36: Sex trafficking services
Sex trafficking services

If a determination is made that a child or young adult is a victim of sex trafficking or at risk of being a victim, the caseworker must identify and refer to appropriate services.

Information needed

Procedure

To determine what services to refer either a child/young adult victim of sex trafficking or one at risk of being a victim, it is helpful to gather the following information:

I. Age — Depending on whether he or she is a child or young adult, different services may be indicated. If applicable, it may be helpful to know the age of entry into “the life” (family members having ties to sex trafficking);

II. Gender — It is important to know how the child/young adult identifies on the gender spectrum;

III. Identified sex trafficking victim or at risk;

IV. Form of trafficking/victimization—sex, stripping, pornography;

V. Family ties to “the life” (family members having ties to sex trafficking);

VI. Criminal history of child/young adult and his or her family;

VII. Gang affiliation (including association, membership and family ties to gangs);

VIII. Immediacy/urgency of risk;

IX. Previous services received and which were effective;

X. Substance abuse;

XI. Mental health;

XII. Cognitive functioning;

XIII. Education, including what school he or she is enrolled in;

XIV. Medical history (including sexually transmitted diseases and pregnancies);

XV. Language; and

XVI. Cultural identity.

Identification and determination of services

The services to refer a child/young adult will differ community to community.

I. Screenings, evaluations and other support to determine services
A. Sex trafficking/commercially sexually exploited children multidisciplinary team (CSEC MDT)

Consider assembling a sex trafficking multidisciplinary team. While sex trafficking/CSEC MDTs are being developed in every county in Oregon, one does not yet exist in every county. When a sex trafficking/CSEC MDT would be beneficial and there is not one already existing, include individuals who have experience working with sex trafficking dynamics. If the expertise is not readily available in the county, reach out to another local office or district child safety consultant for assistance in locating expertise outside of the county.

These individuals/entities may include:

1. Law enforcement,
2. Juvenile probation,
3. Advocacy center,
4. Nonprofit for case management beyond ODHS provided services,
5. Shelter/treatment,
6. District attorney office if court involved, or

Tip

Some CANS screeners have access to and are certified in the sex trafficking CANS screening tool.

Tip

Ideally the CANS screening and the mental health assessment are completed at the same time and by the same mental health provider.

B. CANS screening

A CANS screening is a process of gathering information on a child/young adult’s needs and strengths and is used for multiple purposes including identifying service needs. CANS screenings are completed by mental health providers on children/young adults in substitute care. A referral for an initial CANS screening must be made within 20 days of placement, and the screening must be completed within 60 days of placement. Annual CANS screenings are required for children/young adults in placement with a level of care of 1, 2 or 3.

When a child/young adult is identified as a sex trafficking victim or at risk to be a victim, and a CANS screening was completed on him or her, the caseworker should review or re-review the CANS screening. Look to see if there are current behaviors not addressed (rated as a 2 or a 3). If behaviors are not addressed, consider making a referral for a CANS rescreening. If a behavior you are concerned about is addressed, what is the service or intervention in place to address this behavior, and is it adequate?

If a CANS screening has not yet been referred or has been referred and not yet been completed, and the child/young adult is identified as a sex trafficking victim or at risk of being a victim, the caseworker should share this information with the mental health provider who will be completing the CANS screening.

C. Mental health assessment
All children/young adults in substitute care must be referred for a mental health assessment within 60 days of placement.

When a child/young adult is identified as a sex trafficking victim or at risk to be a victim, and a mental health assessment was completed on him or her, the caseworker should review or re-review the mental health assessment. During the review, see if there are current symptoms or problems that are not addressed. If behaviors are not addressed, consider requesting an updated assessment. If the current concerns are addressed, what are the recommended services, are they being accessed and, if so, are the services adequate?

If a mental health assessment has not yet been referred or has been referred and not yet been completed, and the child/young adult is identified as a sex trafficking victim or at risk of being a victim, the caseworker should share this information with the mental health provider.

D. Child abuse assessment centers

If a child/young adult who is identified as a victim of sex trafficking or at risk of being a victim has been evaluated at a child abuse assessment center, review or re-review the completed evaluation. Look at recommendations, and if relevant to current circumstances, were they implemented and, if so, adequate? If he or she is a sex trafficking victim and this information was not known at the time of assessment center evaluation, consider contacting the assessment center to determine whether another assessment is indicated.

II. Needs

Also consider the needs of the child/young adult to assist in determining the service that will meet the need. Children/young adults who have been victims of sex trafficking have many needs similar to those of children/young adults who come to the Department’s attention because of other types of abuse or neglect. Victims of sex trafficking need health care, mental health services, a safe place to live and help with education. These are discussed below, along with some of the aspects that distinguish sex trafficking victims’ needs from those of other children/young adults receiving Department services.

Some needs, as outlined by the Child Welfare Information Gateway, may include:

A. Physical health. Children/young adults who are victims of sex trafficking often have experienced physical, emotional or sexual abuse, and neglect (including medical neglect). Associated with this abuse, they may suffer from broken bones and other untreated internal and external injuries; sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV; and malnutrition. They may be addicted to drugs or alcohol, either as the result of being forced to use substances by their trafficker or as a coping mechanism. Their overall health may show the consequences of long periods of poor or no medical or dental care. Caseworkers can help by ensuring victims have access to medical evaluations and treatment to address both immediate and long-term concerns. Connecting with a sympathetic health care provider experienced with sex trafficking dynamics may provide reassurance to victims who may be reluctant to seek care.

B. Mental health and trauma. It is hard to overstate the complex mental health needs of a child/young adult victim of sex trafficking. The traumatic experiences may have included regular beatings, rapes and other acts of violence. Severe abuse experiences like these may cause alterations in brain development, as the child/young adult learns to operate from a “survival” mode. In addition, he or she may not have experienced a secure and trusting relationship with a parent or other caretaker, which makes it difficult to build other relationships. In extreme abuse or neglect cases, such as being sexually trafficked, a child/young adult may experience post-traumatic stress syndrome.

Clawson and Grace (2007) studied young girls who had been trafficked, and they identified a number of mental health symptoms associated with trafficking, including extreme anxiety, an inability to trust, self-destructive behaviors, profound shame or guilt, and despair and hopelessness. This may result in a need for long-term, intensive mental/behavioral health services that can help with moving forward into a new healthier life. Evaluation/screening by qualified mental health providers who have experience with children/young adults who have been sexually trafficked can be the first step to getting help. Research has also suggested the benefits of cognitive behavioral therapy for children who have been trafficked. Screening can help determine the type of therapy that might be most useful, and caseworkers can facilitate access to treatment providers.

C. Housing. Sex trafficking victims who come into the care of the Department almost always have an immediate need for a safe place to live. Their background may make them a poor fit for traditional foster care, and many foster families may feel unprepared to parent a child/young adult who has been sexually trafficked.

The caseworker should discuss with the child/young adult where they want to live or what type of placement they're is willing to accept.

D. Education. While some children/young adults may feel comfortable in a traditional school, others may prefer more nontraditional education options. Caseworkers can help by collecting records, exploring education options and facilitating enrollment.

E. Legal services. There are circumstances that might require the child/young adult who has been sexually trafficked to hire or otherwise secure legal help. They may need a lawyer if charged with prostitution or other crimes. They may also need legal counsel to seek protection from their pimps or traffickers or to establish their legal identity. Some children/young adults involved with the justice system may require an attorney for victim advocacy, while others who are not citizens may require an immigration attorney.

F. Other needs. Victims of sex trafficking will often need help with basic life skills (e.g., opening a bank account, keeping medical records), as well as training for a job and basic job skills. For many, having a mentor or someone who is willing and available to provide guidance over the long term is essential for a life away from sex trafficking.

III. Service types

The specific services for a child/young adult who is a sex trafficking victim or at risk of being a victim will vary depending on the specific child/young adult. When determining what services to refer a young adult to, it is important to remember services are limited to those that are voluntary and should be independence-focused. A locked facility is not an option for a young adult.

Some of the services may include the following:

A. Mental health services:
1. Sex trafficking victims require trauma-informed care that recognizes the impact of traumatic experiences (specifically violence and abuse) on an individual’s life, behavior and self-perception.

2. Mental health assessment should be completed by the child/young adult’s existing provider whenever possible.

3. Mental health treatment that includes individual counseling.

B. Medical care is important that children/young adults who are identified victims of sex trafficking or are suspected victims are referred for medical exams and assessments. If they refuse, make continued efforts to engage them to schedule for a later date. Care includes:

1. Routine physical;
2. Assessment for signs of physical abuse;
3. Assessment for signs of neglect;
4. Checking for tattoos or branding;
5. Assessment for signs of any abuse;
6. STD testing; and

C. Substance use screening:

1. Gather information about substance use history;
2. Assess for signs of substance abuse;
3. Test for recent substance use; and

D. Substance abuse treatment.

E. Life skills training.

F. Job placement.

G. Education.

H. Legal services.

I. Housing placement to find safe and suitable housing or a plan for safe and suitable housing is important for every child/young adult. Housing options for a child/young adult in substitute care may include:

1. Foster home, group home, shelter (confidential shelter or not);
2. SAGE Youth Residential Program is a program designed specifically for children who have been commercially sexually exploited. For girls ages 11 to 15, the program provides a safe, nurturing living environment, behavioral health treatment, school, health care and other support services. SAGE stands for support, achieve, grow and empower. The SAGE program can serve up to 12 female or female-identified transgender youth from Oregon. They stay for 11 to 14 months in a newly renovated residence in the Portland area. Referrals can be made by a parent or guardian, the Portland Police Bureau, or the Oregon Department of Human Services.
3. A particular relative with whom the child/young adult is comfortable. The requirements for relative placement must be met to place them with that relative.
4. A former caregiver or another adult with whom the child/young adult has formed a relationship. and expresses a desire to be placed. Again, all certification requirements must be met to place them with that adult.

5. Independent living program (ILP) services, while not a placement, have housing programs associated with those services. If the child/young adult is considering ILP services as a possibility, determine if they are eligible and appropriate for these services.

6. Reunification with the child/young adult’s parent or parents. If they express a desire to live with their parent, the caseworker should determine if the factors that prevented a reunification in the past are still a factor and, if not, follow the Department requirements for pursuing the possibility of reunification.

J. Vocational training.

K. Independent Living Program (ILP) services help children/young adults who are, or were, in foster care to become self-sufficient adults. It gives an opportunity to learn valuable skills to make a successful transition from state and tribal custody to living on their own in the community. A child/young adult may be eligible for services through ILP to help build skills to live independently or get funds for continuing education and assistance with housing.

L. Advocate or mentor.

Tip

Many services/service providers for domestic violence and sexual assault will also have services appropriate for sex trafficking victims. Do not hesitate to contact a service provider and inquire.

IV. Care planning/coordination/management

When a child/young adult has complex service needs, consider coordination of services or the overall management of care. Two potential options include:

A. Intensive care managers — Through the local coordinated care organization (CCO), there is assistance available with care management by an intensive care manager (ICM). The role of the ICM is system navigation and coordination across behavioral, physical and dental health to ensure integrated care and access to services. This person can remove barriers to services, identify providers, facilitate collaboration of multiple providers and offer other assistance depending on the situation. Especially when the Department will not remain involved, it is important to inform parents of this resource. A caseworker or parent using an ICM should inform the ICM of the role the Department has in the life of the child/young adult and also if the child/young adult is a victim of sex trafficking, a suspected victim or at risk of being a victim.

B. Wraparound is an intensive, holistic method of engaging with individuals with complex needs (most typically children, young adults and their families) so these individuals can live in their homes and communities. Wraparound is an intensive, individualized care planning and management process. Wraparound is not a treatment per se. The wraparound process aims to achieve positive outcomes by providing a structured, creative and individualized team planning process that, compared to traditional treatment planning, is more effective and more relevant to the child and family.

Tip

A child/young adult in the SAGE Program is automatically eligible for wraparound.
Chapter 5

The child care reimbursement is intended to provide additional financial support to resource parents and relative resource parents who require child care for a child placed in their home by Child Welfare due to employment or education program.

Caseworkers and certifiers should discuss child care needs and options with the resource parent/relative resource parent. The child care reimbursement option should be discussed, including the requirements, limitations, and amount of the reimbursement. The reimbursement will likely not cover the total cost of most child care.

Oregon Administrative Rule:

Pursuant to 413-090-0010(5), a child care reimbursement may be authorized to a certified resource parent or relative resource parent on behalf of children:

- Placed in a certified resource or relative resource parent home;
- Up to the age of 12, unless developmentally or behaviorally required for children or young adults over 12 and approved by a supervisor; and
- For the cost of child care up to a maximum of $375 per month, per child.

The child care is needed due to the resource parent or relative resource parent’s employment or education program. In limited circumstances, a supervisor may authorize child care for reasons other than employment or education program. This may occur for reasons such as requirements of being a caregiver for an elderly or disabled relative or one certified parent working with the other certified parent ill or disabled and unable to parent.

- The child care service must be approved by Child Welfare. Types of approved child care providers include:
  - Licensed child care facilities, including in-home providers;
  - Before and after school programs;
  - City parks and recreation programs;
  - Government programs; and
  - Programs and in-home providers that are exempt from a license requirement.

- Explanation of child care license requirement is described in Chapter 2, Section 1.

The requirement for approval of an in-home child care provider, exempt from licensure by the Office of Child Care, is governed by OAR 413-200-0281 and covered in Chapter 8 of the Child Welfare Procedural Manual.

Procedure:

The caseworker or certifier works with the resource parent/relative resource parent to complete the Child Welfare

Authorizations are child specific and must be completed for each child in the resource parent/relative resource parent’s home. If a resource parent/relative resource parent receives an ERDC benefit from Self-Sufficiency programs, the Child Welfare reimbursement will not exceed child care costs paid directly by the resource parent/relative resource parent (i.e., copay).

After the approval of the child care service, the resource parent/relative resource parent submits the Child Welfare Child Care Invoice for Resource Parent and Relative Resource Parent (CW 501F) to Child Welfare.

Local Office Responsibilities:

ODHS must review requests for child care services to ensure:

- Confirmation that the level of supervision is appropriate to meet the child’s needs.
- Confirmation that the child care provider is appropriate for the child. For licensed child care programs, check current status on the Office of Child Care’s website.

Local Office Payment Processes:

- Authorizations should be processed and approved through local office protocols.
  - Service Category: Child Care for Foster Parents
  - Service Type: Child Care for Foster Parent Reimbursement 0-5
  - Child Care for Foster Parent Reimbursement 6-12
  - Child Care for Foster Parent Reimbursement 13-20

The resource parent or relative resource parent must indicate on the Child Welfare Child Care Invoice (CW 501F) the amount of child care expenses that exceed any ERDC payment (if applicable).

Child Welfare will reimburse the resource parent or relative resource parent the amount submitted on the CW 501F Child Welfare Child Care Invoice up to a maximum of $375/month per child.

Reimbursement to a resource parent or relative resource parent may not exceed $375 per month, per child in care.

Alternative Care

Reimbursement for alternative care provided outside of the Child Care OAR and Child Care Procedure is intended to provide additional financial support to resource parents and relative resource parents who due to a state of emergency in their community require support regarding the supervision of the foster children placed in their home.

Oregon Administrative Rule:

(6) Alternative Care

As authorized by the Child Welfare Director, a Child Welfare Supervisor may approve the use of an alternative care provider, and the certified family may be reimbursed for payments made to the approved alternative care provider for the care provided. The alternative care provider may include, but not be limited to respite provider, a child care provider, or a babysitter as defined in 413-200-0260 A supervisor may approve alternative care providers that do not fit within the above definitions if the alternative care is needed to meet the safety, permanency or well-being needs of the child or young adult.

Some examples are (but are not limited to):

- If a resource parents/relative resource parents has necessary errands (grocery store, etc.) and pays an individual to care for the children, as it may be difficult during an emergency situation to bring the children to the store.

- If a resource parents/relative resource parents needs to help supervise/facilitate a virtual meeting with a child’s therapist/parent/caseworker and needs help with other children in the home and pays an individual to care for the children

- If a resource parents/relative resource parents is working from home, utilized child care previously to the requirement to work from home and pays and needs additional supervision of a child even though the foster home is in the home.

- If a resource parents/relative resource parents is assisting with distance learning requirements and utilizes an individual to help supervise children

Procedure:

Complete the funding authorization form for “Child Care”, the CW 0162 and note in the description this is a funding request for Alternative Care Funding. The caseworker or certifier works with the resource parents/relative resource parents to complete the Child Welfare Resource Parent or Relative Resource Parent Child Care Authorization form (CW 0162).

After the approval of the alternative care service, the resource parents/relative resource parents submits the Child Welfare Child Care Invoice for Resource Parents and Relative Resource Parents (CW 501F) to Child Welfare.

Local Office Responsibilities:

Discuss the plan for care of the child or young adult with the resource parents or relative resource parents. If the plan meets the safety, permanency, and well-being needs of the child or young adult, move forward with the approval process.

Local Office Payment Processes:

Authorizations should be processed and approved through local office protocols.

Service Category: Child Care for Resource Parents

Service Type: Alternative Care-Covid-19

Child Welfare will reimburse the resource parent or relative resource parent the amount submitted on the CW 501F Child Welfare Child Care Invoice up to a maximum of $375/month per child. Reimbursement to a resource parent or relative resource parent may not exceed $375 per month, per child.
Chapter 5

Section 38: Overview: Services to Families
Overview: Services to families

Oregon’s child welfare system focuses on improving family capacity to be self-sustaining. At the same time, creating a safe and permanent living environment each child. A case plan includes work with the family to identify specific services to meet their needs. Consider all the information gathered during both the child safety and protective capacity assessments to develop a plan that is:

I. Focused,
II. Systematic, and
III. Time-limited.

A plan should meet the needs of the child for:

I. Safety,
II. Permanency, and
III. Well-being.

A plan should be developed in partnership with:

I. Family,
II. Other key persons,
III. Service providers,
IV. Agencies, and
V. Systems involved with the family.

Case management services to each family is a complex task but has many benefits:

I. Thoughtful case management is critical to address the safety and well-being of a child.

II. Case management helps Child Welfare and families work collaboratively to develop activities and services to a child and their parents that:
   A. Strengthen,
   B. Preserve, and
   C. Reunify.

III. Case management improves communication among:
   A. Caseworker,
   B. Substitute caregiver,
   C. Families,
   D. Supervisor,
   E. Service providers, and
   F. Courts.

Delivery of services to children and families is critical in achieving positive outcomes for Oregon’s children and families. Successful intervention in the lives of abused and neglected children requires concurrent involvement of many different systems:
   I. The child and family,
   II. Child welfare,
   III. Service providers,
   IV. Courts,
   V. Education,
   VI. Medical and mental health professionals,
   VII. Attorneys,
   VIII. Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASAs), and
   IX. Other local agencies that serve children and families.
   X. Service providers support children and families through:
      A. Medical and mental health services,
      B. Safety and reunification services,
      C. Housing services,
      D. Drug and alcohol treatment services, and
      E. Other services.

   XI. Federal law, state statute and administrative rule provide the framework for providing and monitoring specific services for a family.

   XII. Services are provided with sensitivity to a family’s culture and ethnicity.
       You are responsible for coordinating referrals to services responsive to the unique cultural composition and needs of each child and family.
       Well-planned and coordinated service delivery increases the likelihood of achieving positive outcomes.

These procedures are written for each child and family served by Child Welfare staff. Each procedure describes the unique service options available and special actions required for specific services regarding:

   I. Strengthening, Preserving, Reunifying Families (SPRF),
   II. In-Home Safety and Reunification Services (ISRS), and
   III. Flexible Funds.
Chapter 5

Section 38a: Strengthening, Preserving and Reunifying Families (SPRF)
Strengthening, Preserving and Reunifying Families (SPRF)

Overview

The Strengthening, Preserving and Reunifying Families (SPRF) program was created by the Oregon legislature. The goal is to reduce trauma to children removed from their families because of abuse or neglect and to resolve those issues by:

I. Offering family-focused services starting at the assessment phase, and
II. Extending into aftercare services when children return home.

Services provided will be:

I. Culturally-competent
II. Evidence-based or evidence-informed
III. Client-centered, and
IV. Family-focused.

Services will be both:

I. Intervention programs in the home and community
   A. To support and maintain in-home placement, and
II. Services in the home, community and with the foster parent, child and biological parents.
   A. To support early reunification programs.

The goals of SPRF are to safely and equitably reduce the number of children in the foster care system by:

I. Reducing the length of stay in foster care
II. Maintaining child safely at home with their parents or caregivers
III. Reducing the re-referral and re-entry rates of families into the child welfare system, and
IV. Increasing timeliness to permanency.
Procedure

I. The SPRF outcomes appendix in OAR 413-053 provides information about all of the SPRF service types. The SPRF service types vary by county and district. Therefore, not all SPRF services types are available statewide.

II. For information about eligibility criteria, see OAR 413-053.

Service referral process

I. Refer to your local branch protocol to identify:
   A. SPRF services available
   B. Appropriateness of referral, and
   C. Referral process to include:
      1. A supervisor approval, and
      2. A ODHS form 3010 (Release of Information) signed by a parent prior to service authorization.

Service closure

I. If:
   A. There has been an SPRF referral
   B. A family is receiving services, and
   C. The CPS assessment closes, and
   D. A ODHS case is not opened, or
   E. A ODHS case closes

   Then, refer to your local branch protocol for service closure. The following must take place:
   1. Notify the SPRF service provider within the same business day.
   2. Close the SPRF service immediately or upon receipt of the closing report.
   3. Select an outcome of achieved, partially achieved or not achieved. (This outcome is given to the you from the SPRF service provider through a written report.) The designated person in your local office must obtain verification of the outcome from you. This person must select the service closure reason in OR-Kids.

   Note: When there is a dispute about whether an outcome has been achieved by the SPRF service provider:
   - There needs to be a discussion between you or your supervisor and the SPRF service provider.
   - If there is still a disagreement, ODHS makes the final determination.

II. Refer to your local branch protocol for opening an admin only case. When a CPS assessment has been completed, if:
   A. A family has been identified as having a safe child, and
B. The family has moderate to high needs, a family is eligible to receive the following:

1. Family Strengths and Needs Assessment (FSNA), or
2. Any SPRF services that were recommended by the FSNA.

Flexible funds

I. See OAR 413-053

II. See Flexible Funds procedure

III. Refer to your local branch protocol for processing flexible funds invoices from the contractor.

Supervisor role

I. Provide consultation for aptness of referral for SPRF.

II. Review service referral for accuracy and approve.

Forms and references

I. OR-Kids Referral form CF 6710

II. Release of Information (ROI) form MSC 3010

Section 39: Flexible funds
Flexible funds

Guidelines have been established for spending what is generally referred to as flexible funds or “flex” funds. These funds are intended to provide goods and services that support:

I. Child safety
II. Attachment
III. Permanency, and
IV. Well-being.

Flex funds include:

I. System of Care (SOC) flex funds
II. Foster Care Prevention (FCP) Funds
III. Strengthening, Preserving and Reunifying Families (SPRF) flex funds
IV. In-Home Safety and Reunification Services (ISRS) flex funds, and
V. Foster and Relative Caregiver Support Funds.

Procedure for SOC and FCP

I. A person with budget authority must authorize SOC and FCP flexible funds disbursements. Disbursements must meet all minimum criteria:

   A. The child is:
      1. Receiving child welfare services through temporary or legal custody of ODHS, or
      2. Open for services through a CPS assessment, or
      3. Receiving voluntary services through a notarized Voluntary Placement Agreement (CF 0499) or a Voluntary Services Application (CF 304A) signed by the legal parent

   B. Consistent with the case plan to meet the child’s needs for:
      1. Safety
      2. Permanency
      3. Attachment, and
      4. Well-being

   C. Consistent with inclusivity and equitable service delivery

   D. Other appropriate resources have been exhausted. There are no other internal or community resources available to meet the need.

   E. No funds will be paid, nor will there be an exception in funds criteria that involves a payment for:
      1. A sanction
2. An assessment, or
3. Costs imposed by a court that result from the conviction of a:
   - Crime
   - Infraction, or
   - Violation.

F. Funds cannot be purposely paid or sought after in order to shift costs to pay for what is not allowed. For example, paying a rent payment to free client funds to pay traffic fines. Further, no funds may be paid in order to avoid other policies or administrative rules.

G. Payments may not supplant or replace other appropriate funding streams. For example, medical services eligible for payment under the Oregon Health Plan, and

H. All ODHS staff or service providers shall not use any personal rewards cards or similar cards to purchase goods or services at any time.

II. Additional criteria for use of SO\text{C} flexible funds:

A. Expenditures must address the needs of the child as identified in the Case plan. Case plans are to be developed collaboratively with the:
   1. The older child or youth
   2. Parents
   3. Child’s provider, and
   4. Community partners who work with the family.

III. Additional criteria for use of FCP flexible funds:

A. The payment will:
   1. Prevent imminent placement in care, or
   2. Allow the child to return home within 60 days, or
   3. Will allow the child to be placed in the home of a legal guardian or relative.

B. Within a 12-month period, total payment(s) may not exceed the equivalent of two months’ basic foster care rate per child. Exceptions to this amount may be approved by the:
   1. District manager
   2. Program manager, or
   3. Designee with budget authority.

C. Funds are limited to purchase of non-recurring goods or services.

IV. Exceptions:

A. Exceptions for SOC and FCP flex funds may be authorized, within budget limits, by the:
   1. District manager
   2. Program manager, or
3. Designee with budget authority.

Exceptions may not be granted if they are not related to legislative intended use or are prohibited expenditures.

For example, making payments to non-IV-E relative care providers to pay the difference between the relative caretaker grant and foster care payment.

Section 40: In-home Safety and Reunification Services (ISRS)
In-home Safety and Reunification Services (ISRS)

Overview

In-home Safety and Reunification Services (ISRS) provide:

I. Immediate safety of a child at risk of maltreatment by managing safety threats within the family, or

II. Help to a child to return home by providing safety and change services in the home when the child has been placed in protective custody or substitute care.

Safety services

These services control a safety threat through:

I. In-home observation

II. Supervision, and

III. Specific intervention.

These services can be used initially to:

I. Resolve the immediate child safety crisis, and

II. To maintain family stability.

These services are intended to:

I. Provide immediate child protection

II. Reduce time children spend in substitute care, and

III. Reduce the re-abuse or neglect of children.

Change services

These services are intended to use interventions with demonstrated effectiveness to:

I. Improve child safety, and

II. Help parents to improve diminished protective capacities that lead to their child being unsafe.

These services help parents:

I. Build additional problem-solving skills to eventually become self-sufficient. This includes problem solving to access community resources and supports, and

II. Identify strategies for predictable problems relating to:

A. Child’s behavior
B. Child safety
C. Depression
D. Mood stabilization, and
E. Other adult relationships.

The following chart outlines the purpose and differences for both safety and change services.

Procedure

Determine when a family is eligible to receive ISRS.

An ISRS referral can be initiated during:

I. A CPS assessment, or
II. An ongoing case when the child is placed in:
   A. The home with a parent, or
   B. Substitute care, if there is a plan to reunify with a parent.
III. A family is eligible to receive ISRS when:
   A. At least one safety threat has been identified and is being managed with:
      1. A protective action
      2. Initial safety plan, or
      3. Ongoing safety plan, and
   B. At least one parent is actively participating in:
1. A protective action, or
2. An in-home safety plan:
   - The service may prevent a child from:
     1. Being placed in substitute care, and
     2. Maintain a child in the home with a parent, or
   - The plan is to return a child home to a parent.

IV. A family is not eligible to receive ISRS when:
   A. A child has died or experienced life-threatening harm because of child abuse or neglect
   B. A child has been found to have been sexually abused. In addition, the perpetrator of the sexual abuse remains in the home without successfully completing appropriate treatment
   C. A family member in the home is actively influencing or threatening a child to recant a report of abuse, or
   D. A family member has:
      1. Past behaviors, conditions or circumstances that may compromise the safety of an in-home service provider, or
      2. A history of committing violent acts toward persons outside the family, or
      3. Demonstrates a current propensity to commit violent acts toward persons outside the family.
   E. The safety analysis concludes the child is safe.
   F. The case is open for Family Support Services (FSS).

Determine when to refer a family to ISRS.

These services are expected to be:
   I. Delivered in the family’s home, and
   II. Provided when family members are at home and most likely to impact child safety.

This may include:
   I. Early morning
   II. Meal times, and
   III. Bed times.

The range of services will be flexible to meet the needs of the family.

Refer to ISRS for stabilization when the purpose is to:
   I. Prevent the child from entering substitute care
   II. Address the immediate safety of a child at risk of maltreatment, and
   III. Maintain the child safely in the home with a parent by helping the parent to remove barriers so they can manage safety threats in the home.

The following are examples of safety services:

I. Supervision and monitoring child safety by direct observation
II. Stress reduction
III. Basic parenting assistance
IV. Respite care
V. Social or emotional support
VI. Safe housing assistance
VII. Food, clothing or basic needs
VIII. Assistance to access emergency medical, mental health and addiction services
IX. Stabilization of home environment. Meet the child’s needs for stability and safety from potential abusers and dangerous home conditions
X. Monitoring and supporting family managed safety, and XI. Other.

Refer to ISRS for reunification when the purpose is to:

I. Return the child home to a parent, and
II. To motivate and engage parents to improve and maintain parental protective capacities related to the identified safety threats in the home.

Tip

_The examples of safety services and change services may be used for both stabilization and reunification service referrals._

The following are examples of change services:

I. Crisis intervention to address disclosure, CPS or ODHS involvement, and concerns when a significant family member leaves the home
II. Motivational interviewing
III. Collaborative problem solving
IV. Parent-child attachment coaching
V. Reduction of core child welfare issues. Examples are:
   A. Substance abuse
   B. Domestic violence, and

Service referral process

I. Refer to your local branch protocol to identify ISRS available, appropriateness of referral and referral process to include:

A. Supervisor approval, and

B. ODHS form MSC 3010 (Release of Information) signed by a parent prior to service authorization.

Service closure

I. If:

A. There has been an ISRS referral
B. A family is receiving services, and
C. The CPS assessment closes, and
D. A ODHS case is not opened, or
E. ODHS case closes

Then, refer to your local branch protocol for service closure.

The following must take place:

I. Notify the ISRS service provider within the same business day.

II. Close the ISRS service immediately or upon receipt of the closing report.

III. Select an outcome of achieved, partially achieved or not achieved. (This outcome is given to the you from the ISRS service provider through a written report.) The designated person in your local office must obtain verification of the outcome from you. This person must select the service closure reason in OR-Kids.

Note: When there is a dispute about whether an outcome has been achieved by the ISRS contracted service provider:

I. There needs to be a discussion between you or your supervisor and the ISRS contracted service provider.

II. If there is still a disagreement, ODHS makes the final determination.

Flexible funds

I. See Flexible Funds Procedure.
II. Refer to your local branch protocol for processing flexible funds invoices from the contractor.

Section 41: Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity and Expression (SOGIE)
Supporting and Providing Services for Children and Young Adults with Diverse Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity and Expression.

Every person has a sexual orientation, gender identity and expression (SOGIE) and they may be congruent or completely different. It is important to support all children and young adults in the healthy development of these dimensions of themselves. Some children and young adults with diverse SOGIE may identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender, and some may be questioning their sexual orientation or gender identity (LGBTQ). Other youth may not identify with these terms and may use other words to describe themselves including but not limited to non-binary, genderqueer, gender fluid, gender expansive, agender, gender diverse, two-spirit, queer, asexual, pansexual, etc. For this reason, there are various permutations of acronyms utilized in conversation and written materials to reflect diversity of SOGIE. The acronyms SOGIE or LGBTQ+ will be used throughout this section of procedure. The language a person uses to describe oneself and their unique identity may change over time or might be terms that are shared with some people and not shared with others. As people come to understand more about diversity within the realm of SOGIE, the language and terminology to reflect people’s identities is also evolving. To create a sense of safety and to signal that you honor and celebrate diversity, it is important to become familiar with respectful language, keep current with rapid changes in terminology in the arena of SOGIE, and listen to and use the words people use to describe themselves (name, pronouns, and language regarding how they identify).

Child Welfare employees must treat all children and young adults with respect and dignity. They should work to create and foster an affirming, supportive, and understanding environment in which all youth realize their maximum potential, regardless of their SOGIE, while upholding and promoting the Oregon Foster Child’s Bill of Rights including but not limited to:

- Clean and appropriate clothes that fit me and correspond to a gender identity of my choice
- Free access to soap, shampoo, toothpaste and other hygiene needs that are necessary for my gender, age, individual health and ethnic needs
- To be treated with respect
- To be included in discussions and make decisions about my own body and my physical or mental health
- To receive respect, be nurtured, and attend activities in accordance with my background, religious heritage, race, and culture within reasonable guidelines. To be allowed to dress and groom myself according to my culture, identity and within good hygiene standards for my health
- To determine and express my gender and sexual identity for myself

Certified families must learn and use caregiving practices which help children and young adults build positive personal relationships and self-esteem and must respect the SOGIE of children, youth and young adults in foster care [OAR 413-200-0308 (3) (a) and (f)]. They may not make derogatory remarks about a child or young adult’s SOGIE [OAR 413-200-0358 (e)(B)].

Meeting the Needs of the Child, Youth or Young adult
When working with LGBTQ+ children, youth and young adults, offer developmentally appropriate approaches which:

- Affirm the sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression (SOGIE.)
- Consider identity development and exploration
- Identify and work to reduce sources of distress for LGBTQ+ children, youth and young adult
- Engage parents, guardians, and caregivers, while also working with the child, youth or young adult to respect their privacy and confidentiality, getting their permission for sharing information about their SOGIE
- Consider school and community partnerships
- Use LGBTQ+ inclusive language
- Consider the needs of the child, youth or young adult and involve the young person to the extent possible, to assist in determining the service(s) and support(s) that will meet the need(s).
- Let a child talk without interrupting them or punishing them, and let them explain what their experiences are like
- Let the child, youth or young adult lead the way
- Allow them to dress in the style of clothing they feel comfortable wearing, and which is congruent with their gender identity or preferred manner of gender expression

Family support, acceptance and advocacy are critical to LGBTQ+ health and wellbeing. Many LGBTQ+ youth encounter negative experiences including bias, discrimination, harassment, bullying behaviors, rejection, and physical, emotional, and sexual violence. Without this family support and acceptance, LGBTQ+ youth are at higher risk than their non-LGBTQ+ peers for experiencing residential instability (running away, homelessness, having to leave their family home or experience more moves in foster care), substance use and abuse, and mental health issues including depression, anxiety, suicidal thoughts and attempts, and self-harm (Wilson, Cooper, Kastansi, & Nezhad, 2015).

Care and wellness of the youth with diverse SOGIE may include allowing youth to express their gender identity through their apparel and personal care items, counseling, psychotherapy, and medical visits. For some youth, medical care may include medication to suppress puberty or to assist with masculinizing or feminizing the body, such as use of androgen blockers and cross-sex hormones. For young adults, medical care may also include gender reassignment surgeries. It is helpful for the caseworker to gather the following information.

Procedure

A. Information needed when seeking LGBTQ+ specific medical and mental health services:

- Age- Depending upon the age of the youth and whether the youth is pre-pubertal, pubertal, or post-pubertal stage of development, different care and services are indicated;
- Gender – It is important to realize how the youth identifies on the gender spectrum;
- Name- Identify any preferred name and any pronouns the youth would like to use;
- Goal- Identify the youth’s goal, if able to verbalize. For example, questioning, social transition, body modifications, surgery;
- Trauma History- Include physical, sexual, and emotional abuse, neglect, harassment or bullying, community violence, and supportive factors or resiliency factors;
- Mental Health- Identify mental health issues such as anxiety, depression, PTSD, isolation;
• Behavioral Health- Identify risky behaviors such as self-injury, self-mutilation, risky sexual encounters, risk for suicide;

• Cognitive functioning;

• Education- Include the name of the school the child or young adult is enrolled in and the grade level;

• Medical history- Including sexually transmitted infections and pregnancies;

• Language;

• Substance abuse or misuse;

• Previous services received which were effective;

• Legal Issues- Identify any legal issues the youth is currently facing include any discrimination, name changes or needed legal services;

Note: Using the name the youth requests us to use can be done without a formal process. However, if the youth requests a legal change of name outside of an adoption process, or a legal change of sex designation, please follow the required process found in Chapter 9, Section 7: Other legal matters, E. “Approval process for legal change of a minor’s name outside of the adoption process or change of a minor’s sex designation.”

• Family- Identify whether family is supportive, rejecting, confused, or ambivalent. Family as defined by youth and include foster parents or relative caregivers, biological parents, and other family members (as appropriate) and significant others with whom the youth identifies;

• Support- Identify if the youth has supports, role models or others who play a supportive role in their life.

• Therapy – If the youth has a current therapist, it is important to continue as change in providers once rapport is established enhances dysphoria.

• Other dimensions of identity (intersectionality): spirituality, religion, racial, ethnic, national origin, class, physical disability, cultural, etc.

B. Identification and Determination of Services

Services will depend upon age of the youth, identified goal, and youth preferences.

I. Mental Health Support

A. All children/youth in substitute care must be seen for a mental health assessment within 60 days of placement.

B. Any children/youth who are questioning their sexual orientation or identify themselves as transgender, gender nonconforming or otherwise are gender expansive should be referred for mental health services for support and counseling. For transgender children or youth, a licensed QMHP may consider a potential diagnosis of gender dysphoria. The therapist or QMHP should have prior experience with trans issues and follow World Professional Association for Transgender Care (WPATH) Standards of Care.

C. Continued mental health treatment for mental health issues, traumatic events, substance abuse.

D. Identify community resources available to share with the youth and their families (see attachment A for resources throughout Oregon.)

C. Personal Supplies Necessary For Well-being

Personal care items and supplies necessary for the health and well-being of an LGBTQ+ youth are not considered medical supplies. For children and young adults in the care and custody of the Department, the substitute caregiver or relative caregiver and caseworker should work together to determine the best way to obtain these items. If the purchase of these items causes a financial strain for the foster parent, branch funds should be used if they are not available through community resources. This includes and is not limited to:

- Stand to pee devices
- Breast shapers
- Breast binders
- Straps and harnesses
- Prosthetic devices i.e. Packie

D. Transgender Affirming Medical Interventions

The Oregon Health Plan (OHP) provides healthcare coverage for treatment of gender dysphoria. The OHP guidelines include safeguards before medical interventions are recommended. The principle challenge in determining best practice for children, youth and young adults lies in the fact that development is different for everyone. Medical interventions are determined by the goals of the youth or young adult, the age, and medical necessity.

I. Guidelines overview and consent

The OHP provides guidelines to prepare access to transition related care in accordance with the World Professional Association of Transgender Health (WPATH) Standards of Care.

Youth or young adults who are in foster care and have coverage through the OHP will work closely with their primary care provider to identify what gender transition health care is medically appropriate.

II. Approval for Transgender Medical Services

OHP prior approval will only be provided if the primary care provider and patient can demonstrate medical necessity. Only a medical professional and/or therapist are able to “recommend” any services to meet standards.

See OHP Prioritized List

Youth 15 and older, when developmentally appropriate, can consent for their own healthcare

A. Fully Reversible Interventions

These medical interventions (including use of gonadotropin-releasing hormone agonists, called nRH analogues) are often referred to as puberty or hormone blockers. The purpose is to pause puberty so that the development of secondary sex characteristics is delayed. Later, if a decision is made to stop using these medicines, the pause on puberty ends and secondary sex characteristic development of the child or young adult’s biological sex would resume.

Approvals for fully reversible interventions will be at the Program Manager level, in consultation with Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or designee, and will adhere to OHA guidelines.

B. Partially Reversible Interventions

The use of masculinizing or feminizing hormone therapy starts development of secondary sex characteristics of the affirmed gender (the gender with which the person identifies rather than their sex assigned at birth). These medical interventions are for people who wish to match their physical secondary sex characteristics to their gender identity. These medical interventions are only partially reversible in that some of the secondary sex characteristics which develop through use of cross-sex hormones would either require surgery to be reversed (e.g. development of breast tissue) or cannot be reversed (e.g. voice which deepened after use of testosterone). Cross-sex hormone therapy is included for treatment of adolescents with gender dysphoria who meet appropriate eligibility requirements.

- To qualify for reversible cross-sex hormone therapy under OHP, the adolescent must have the required:
  - Persistent, well documented gender dysphoria
  - The capacity to make a fully informed decision and to give consent for treatment
  - Significant medical or mental health concerns reasonably well controlled
  - A thorough psychosocial assessment by a qualified mental health professional with experience working with patient who have a diagnosis of gender dysphoria

Approvals for partially reversible interventions will be at the Program Manager level, in consultation with Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or designee, and will adhere to OHA guidelines.

C. Non-reversible gender affirmation surgery

These are surgeries used to modify one's body to be more congruent with one's gender identity. Also referred to as gender confirming surgery (GCS) (“Glossary of LGBT Terms for Health Care Teams”, 2016). Child Welfare staff will be supportive of a youth whose goal is gender confirming surgery once they have reached adulthood.

For any non-reversible gender confirming surgery procedure, the young adult must be reasonably physically fit and reach the legal age of majority (18 years of age). The age threshold should be a minimum criterion and not an indication in and of itself for active intervention. Certain criteria must also be met including:

- Have persistent, well documented gender dysphoria
- For genital surgeries, have completed 12 months of continuous hormone therapy as appropriate to the youth’s gender goals unless hormones are not medically necessary, or hormones cause negative reactions due to illnesses that are sensitive to those hormones.
- Have completed 12 months of living in a gender role that aligns with their gender identity unless a medical and a mental health professional both determine that this requirement is not safe for the patient
- Have the capacity to make a fully informed decision and to give consent for treatment under Oregon law
- Have any significant medical or mental health concerns reasonably well controlled
- For breast/chest surgeries, have one referral/evaluation from a mental health professional provided in accordance of the WPATH Standard of Care.
- For genital surgeries, have two referrals/evaluation from mental health professionals provided in accordance with version 7 of the WPATH Standard of Care. Evaluations are required from two independent licensed mental health care providers.
The referral/evaluations will contain:

- The young person’s general identifying characteristics;
- Results of the client’s psychosocial assessment;
- The duration of the mental health professional’s relationship with the young person, including the type of evaluation and therapy or counseling to date;
- An explanation that the criteria for surgery have been met, the clinical rationale for supporting the young person’s request for surgery in question.
- A statement about the fact that signed informed consent has been obtained;
- A statement that the mental health professional is available for coordination of care and welcomes a phone call to establish this.

Approvals for surgical interventions will be by the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or designee, in consultation with the Child Welfare Director, or designee and will adhere to OHA guidelines.

III. Finding a Surgeon

Each Coordinated Care Organization (CCO) is to arrange appropriate coverage for surgeries for transgender patients who meet the above criteria.

Generally, non-reversible surgery of vaginoplasty or phalloplasty are not considered until age 18; of which youth would or could be out of foster care.

E. How the Caseworker Can Assist the Youth, Family, and Caregivers

Remind the foster family, relative caregiver, and family members that:

I. Self-disclosure and Support, acceptance and affirmation of the youth in their SOGIE has been linked to the child, youth and young adults’ improved well-being. Specifically, youth who are supported and accepted for who they are have increased resilience, less anxiety, less depression, less suicidal and self-harm tendencies, and decreased victimization. Supportive families and school environments are protective factors that can make the difference between thriving and tragedy.

II. To be supportive and to promote well-being of children, youth and young adults caregivers should: “Talk with your child or young adult or foster child or young adult about their LGBT identity; Express affection when your child or young adult tells you or when you learn that your child or young adult is gay or transgender; Support your child or young adult’s LGBT identity even though you may feel uncomfortable; Advocate for your child or young adult when he or she is mistreated because of their LGBT identity; Require that other family members respect your LGBT child or young adult; Bring your child or young adult to LGBT organizations or events; Talk with clergy and help your faith community to support LGBT people; Connect your child or young adult with an LGBT adult role model to show them options for the future; Welcome your child or young adult’s LGBT friends & partners to your home; Support your child or young adult’s gender expression; Believe your child or young adult can have a happy future as an LGBT adult. (Caitlin Ryan, PhD, Family Acceptance Project)

III. In addition, caregivers should be watchful of behaviors that might indicate their child or young adult is a victim of bullying or violence; Provide helpful resources; Seek supportive healthcare; Advocate services which are nondiscriminatory, and which promote wellness and safety.
IV. Adhere to Foster Children Bill of Rights.

V. Respect the youth’s privacy. Allow them to decide with whom and when they’d like to share their sexual orientation or gender identity.

VI. Advocate for your youth when they feel they are being mistreated.

F. Supporting LGBTQ+ Youth With Biological Family Rejection

If the biological family is not supportive of the child, youth, or young adult’s diverse SOGIE:

I. Consider finding affirming resources outside of the family as appropriate while at the same time helping parents and the child, youth or young adult negotiate difficulties within the family.

II. Look for opportunities to interact with positive role models, guest speakers, or adults within the school system, for example. Remind the child, youth or young adult of positive, successful LGBTQ+ persons who have made significant contributions to society.

III. Offer resources to the child or young adult and family members for watching, reading, and studying. Materials from Family Acceptance Project, for example, can be very helpful for parents, caregivers, and other family members (see resource section).

IV. Give the child, youth or young adult unconditional love and support. Giving mixed messages- for example, that they are loved but their SOGIE or expression of their SOGIE is not supported can be rejecting and cause harm. Rejecting behaviors from parents or other caregivers can be devastating to the child, youth or young adult.

V. The family may need time to adjust to the new family roles and expectations. Conflict may arise in the family as a sibling, one parent or extended family member may take longer to process causing conflict in the family.

VI. Family counseling is often sought to assist the family with the new information. Seeking the assistance from service providers who have knowledge and experience serving people with diverse SOGIE and who are LGBTQ+ friendly is important. For assistance determining some of the providers in the area, consider utilizing: 211 info (http://211info.org), Q-Center LGBTQ+ Resources (https://www.pdxqcenter.org/findresources), and the ODHS PRIDE Employee Resource Group (PrideERG.PointsAndLeadership@ODHSoha.state.or.us)

Glossary of Terms

Please see Human Rights Campaign for updated glossary: https://www.hrc.org/resources/glossary-of-terms

Androgyny: A term used to describe gender expressions that have both masculine and feminine characteristics, but are not strictly either.

Cisgender: This term is pronounced /sis-gender/. An adjective to describe a person whose gender identity is aligned with the gender identity they were assigned at birth on the basis of their perceived biological sex.

Femininity: Qualities that are thought of as being womanly, that are typically ascribed to women, and that are considered to be socially appropriate for a woman's behavior. Not all people who exhibit feminine qualities are women, not all women exhibit exclusively feminine qualities.

Gender (Gender Identity): This is the label someone may choose to describe themselves, such as: man, woman, non-binary. It represents a person’s deep-seated, internal sense of who they are as a gendered being. This describes how someone identifies, regardless of their sex assigned at birth.

Gender Binary: The idea that there are only two genders: man and woman, rather than a continuum or spectrum of gender identities and expressions. The gender binary is often considered to be limiting and an inaccurate way to describe gender diversity.

Gender Expression: A person’s outward gender presentation in relationship to their culture, usually comprised of personal style, clothing, hairstyle, makeup, jewelry, vocal inflection and body language, etc. Gender expression is typically categorized as masculine, feminine and androgynous.

Gender Roles: The set of expectations that are ascribed to a certain gender in any given culture, relating to how to people of that gender "should" (among other things) behave, talk, dress, etc.

Genderfluid: A person whose gender identity or expression shifts between masculine and feminine.

Gender Marker: The marker (male or female) that appears on a person’s identity documents (e.g., birth certificate, driver’s license, passport, travel or work visas, green cards, etc.). The gender marker on a transgender person’s identity documents will be their sex assigned at birth until they undergo a legal and logistical process to change it, where possible.

Gender Non-Conforming: A person whose gender expression is perceived as being outside of cultural norms expected for that gender.

Genderqueer: A person whose gender identity is neither male nor female, is between or beyond genders.

Intersex: An umbrella term that describes a person born with sex characteristics (e.g. genetic, genital, sexual/reproductive or hormonal configurations) that do not fit typical binary notions of female or male biological sex. The term describes a wide range of natural variations in human bodies. Intersex is frequently confused with transgender, but the two are completely distinct and generally unconnected. A more familiar term, h*rm*phrodite, is considered outdated and offensive.

LGBTQ: An acronym commonly used to refer to Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer and/or Questioning individuals and communities.

Masculinity: Qualities that are thought of as being manly, that are typically ascribed to men, and that are considered to be socially appropriate for a man’s behavior. Not all people who exhibit masculine qualities are men, not all men exhibit exclusively masculine qualities.

Non-binary: Terms used by some people who experience their gender identity and/or gender expression as falling outside the categories of man and woman. They may define their gender as falling somewhere in between man and woman, or they may define it as wholly different from these terms.

Sex Assigned at Birth: The determination of a person’s sex based on the visual appearance of the genitals at birth. The sex someone is labeled at birth.

Sexual Orientation: A person’s feelings of attraction (emotional, psychological, physical, and/or sexual) towards other people. People who do not experience sexual attraction may identify as asexual.

Straight: A heterosexual person. A person attracted to someone of a gender different from their own.

Transgender: An adjective that describes a person whose gender identity is not the same as the gender identity they were assigned at birth on the basis of their perceived biological sex.

Transgender men and transgender boys: A man or a boy who was assigned female at birth. Also sometimes referred to as trans men.

Transgender women and transgender girls: A woman or a girl who was assigned male at birth. Also sometimes referred to as trans women.

Two-spirit: A term used by some Native and Indigenous people to North America to indicate that they embody both a masculine and a feminine spirit, or to describe people in their communities who fulfill a traditional third-gender.

Section 42: Breast Milk for Infants in Foster Care
Breast Milk For Infants in Foster Care

Health organizations worldwide recommend breast milk for babies. The benefits of breast milk include healthy digestion, optimal brain growth, normal weight gain, and protection against some diseases. The benefits to the mother are important also and include protection against breast, ovarian, and endometrial cancers, reduces the risk of heart diseases, protects against osteoporosis and bone fractures, and the psychological benefit of being able to provide quality milk to their infant. When a mother is requesting to provide breast milk for her infant, caseworkers are encouraged to authorize this whenever possible.

Coffee Creek Correctional Facility (CCCF) and other institutions are working with local milk banks to assist with incarcerated mothers being able to provide breast milk for their infants which should be supported and encouraged, whenever possible. The caseworker should do what is necessary to facilitate and support the use of the incarcerated mother’s breastmilk. Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant is available for consultation.

Foster Parents are not to supply personal breast milk to any foster child. Breast milk not supplied by the biological mother must come from the Northwest Mothers Milk Bank. For more information regarding Northwest Mothers Milk Bank and to request services, please visit https://www.donatemilk.org/. The caseworker should work with the branch Medical Assistance Specialist (MAS) and the Milk Bank to ensure supplies, bags and pumps are available. The MAS can confirm information with the local CCO to confirm what is available related to insurance.

Supplementing With Biological Mother’s Breast Milk Procedure:

- Request that an initial drug screen be completed. If the drug screening is negative and the caseworker does not have any concerns with the quality of the breast milk, it may be provided to the infant.
- Periodic drug screening should be completed at the discretion of the caseworker.
- The caseworker should work with the local milk bank to ensure safe storage, labeling and delivery of expressed breast milk.
- The caseworker should work with the branch MAS to ensure supplies, bags and pumps are available. The MAS can confirm information with the local CCO to confirm what is available related to insurance.
- Follow the CDC guidelines for proper storage and preparation of breast milk. For more information, please visit https://www.cdc.gov/breastfeeding/recommendations/handling_breastmilk.htm.

For more information regarding breast milk, the CDC has helpful and up-to-date information. Biological parents or the foster parents can be referred to https://www.cdc.gov/breastfeeding/index.htm.

The Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant is available to consult.

Section 43: Initial Required Health Assessments and Screenings
Initial Required Health Assessments and Screenings

Once a child or young adult is in the legal custody of ODHS, the caseworker has the responsibility to ensure that appropriate medical, dental and mental health services are provided for the child.

Each child placed in substitute care must receive the following:

- An intake nursing assessment by a ODHS contracted nurse, shortly after entering care;
- A comprehensive health assessment by the child’s primary healthcare provider, within 30 calendar days of entering care;
- A dental assessment for children age 1 and older, within 30 calendar days of entering care;
- A Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths (CANS) screening, within 60 calendar days of entering care;
- A mental-health assessment for children age 3 and older, within 60 calendar days of entering care; and
- An Early Intervention Screening for children ages 0-2, within 60 calendar days of entering care. (See CPS Early Intervention Referral form CF323.)

The caseworker of a child who is placed in substitute care must ensure that the child receives:

- All required assessments and screenings as described in section (1) of this rule; and
- All treatment and services that are recommended in the required assessments and screenings that are covered by either Oregon Health Plan (OHP) or the child’s private health insurance.

Ongoing and Preventative Healthcare

Each child or young adult’s healthcare must include:

- Regular preventive care appropriate to the child or young adult’s age and condition, including:
  - Immunizations (Refer to Appendix 5.11, Child and Adolescent Immunization Schedule, for guidance on childhood immunizations.);
  - Well-child visits according to the recommendation schedule of the American Academy of Pediatrics;
  - Preventative dental care;
  - Yearly CANS rescreening;
  - Yearly Mental Health reassessments for children and young adults receiving mental health services;
  - Timely treatment of non-emergency injuries and illnesses;
  - Ongoing care for serious or chronic conditions; and
  - Emergency treatment whenever necessary.

Chapter 5

Section 44: Managing The Use of Medications
The caseworker is responsible for receiving and reviewing the medication log of the child or young adult in substitute care monthly (OAR 413-070-0430 (4)(c)).

Any prescribed medication or over the counter medication routinely provided to the child or young adult that is administered by the foster parent must be documented using the CF 1083 Individual Medication Log(s). Multiple medications may be logged on one CF 1083 Individual Medication Log; however, a new log must be provided for each month the child is receiving the medication.

The caseworker must review, sign and ensure Individual Medication Logs are uploaded into OR-Kids File Cabinet in the child or young adult’s file as they are received.

Caseworkers should encourage substitute caregivers to help educate young adults on their medication regimen, medication log documentation and prescription refill process if they are developmentally able and willing to learn.

For any young adult 15 or older, the caseworker can authorize them to self-administer medications if they are determined capable and developmentally appropriate. Medication education is important for these young adults and the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant, is available to consult as needed. The medication administration will need to be documented on the CF 1038 Individual Medication Log and reviewed monthly by the caseworker.

For young adults, 18 or older, that are living independently in or out of a foster home and self-administer, medication logs are not needed. However, the caseworker should review medication usage during face to face contact.

If needed, consult with the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant.
Chapter 5

Section 45: Obtain Medicaid Coverage
Obtain Medicaid Coverage

Procedure:

Ensure that each child or young adult in substitute care has health care coverage.

When the placement is entered and approved in OR-Kids, a medical eligibility hyperlink is created. The Federal Revenue Specialist (FRS) completes the medical eligibility determination using that hyperlink. Once medical eligibility has been opened, MMIS will auto assign the child/young adult into the CCOA (physical, dental and mental health) in the child/young adult’s county, unless the child/young adult is exempted from enrollment.

Contact the branch Medical Assistance Specialist (MAS) for assistance in having a medical card issued at the time the child or young adult is placed in substitute care.

When a child or young adult enters substitute care with private health insurance coverage, the caseworker must complete and submit the online form found at www.reporttpl.org. A child placed by the department with a Voluntary Placement Agreement may continue to receive medical insurance coverage through the parents’ medical insurance. Refer to Chapter 7 Family Support Services for details on managing a Family Support Services Case plan involving a Voluntary Placement Agreement.

When a child or young adult requires medical care prior to receiving the wallet sized standard ODHS Medical Care Identification (Medical ID), the Temporary medical Care Identification, DMAP 1086 (OAR 410-120-1140) may be printed by the MAS. Circumstances where it is appropriate to issue a Temporary ID:

- The child or young adult’s medical eligibility and placement information has not been entered into the system (this circumstance may occur when they are initially placed);
- The child or young adult has moved to a new substitute care placement and the Medical ID was not provided by the previous caregiver; or
- The Medical ID has been lost.

When a child or young adult is in the department’s legal custody but in the parents‘ home, monitor the child or young adult’s health care needs. However, unless the child or young adult’s health care was part of the identified safety threat or unattended health care needs impact child or young adult’s safety, other procedural requirements for monitoring a child or young adult’s health care services do not apply.
Chapter 5

Section 46: Pregnant and Parenting Children and Young Adults in Substitute Care
Pregnant Children and Young Adults

If a child or young adult is pregnant, the caseworker must request a Personal Care Assessment to be completed by emailing a referral to Personal.Care@ODHSoha.state.or.us. The caseworker will also document the pregnancy on the characteristics tab of the person management page in OR-Kids.

A ODHS Field Nurse will be referred to complete a personal care assessment and identify any needs of the child or young adult.

Pregnant children or young adults should be referred to a local community nurse home visiting program or local Health Department to be connected with resources and services.

Health and Wellness Services is available for consultation and additional education, as needed.

Children and Young Adults Who are Parenting

Once a child or young adult has given birth, the caseworker will request a Personal Care Assessment to be completed by emailing a referral to Personal.Care@ODHSoha.state.or.us. A referral to a local community health nurse home visiting program should also be completed by the caseworker so the child or young adult will be connected with services within their community.

The caseworker, who has been trained in safe sleep practices, should evaluate for safe sleep environment during every face to face encounter. This includes ensuring the infant has their own separate bed, placing the infant on their back to sleep and not using soft bedding. See Safe Sleep procedure for additional information.

Health and Wellness Services are available for consultation and additional education, as needed.

Section 47: Alternative and Naturopathic Treatments & Medical Cannabis
Alternative and Naturopathic Treatments

Use of any alternative and naturopathic treatments must be reviewed by the Program Manager and in consultation with the Health and Wellness Program Manager or Nurse Consultant and primary care provider. Health and Wellness Program manager or Nurse Consultant may require additional approval by the Child Welfare Director or their designee.

Medical Cannabis

Use of cannabis-based treatments for a child or young adult is only considered on a case by case basis. The caseworker should consult with the primary care provider and the Health and Well Program Manager or Nurse Consultant who will then obtain the approval from the ODHS Child Welfare Director or Child Welfare Deputy Director.
Chapter 5

Section 48: Child Welfare Field Nurses Intake Nursing Assessment
Child Welfare Field Nurses Intake Nursing Assessment

Children and young adults receive a comprehensive intake nursing assessment shortly after coming into foster care. These assessments include:

- A comprehensive physical assessment;
- An assessment of any immediate medical needs;
- A nutrition assessment;
- A safety assessment;
- Coordination of services with the PCP if one is already identified;
- Medication management;
- Sexual health education for young adult;
- Child specific health related teaching and training for resource families;
- Referrals to providers and services; and
- Follow up visits as needed to ensure medical needs are being met.

The purpose of this assessment is to assess the child for any immediate health or medical issues, to make any needed referrals and to assist with coordinating services as needed.

During this assessment the nurse will promote nutrition and a healthy lifestyle for children in foster care based on their identified needs. If it is determined by the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse that a child requires a Personal Care Assessment during the Intake Nursing Assessment, the Personal Care Assessment will be done at that time.

The caseworker will also receive a copy of the completed assessment with any nursing recommendations made or nursing intervention completed. A copy of the Intake Nursing Assessment will also be placed in the child or young adult's file cabinet in OR-Kids.

A timely Nursing Assessment is dependent upon the following actions:

- It is imperative that the placement be entered and approved timely.
- Complete accurate placement information in OR-Kids.

Intake Nursing Assessments for Children in Interstate Compact Placements of Children (ICPC)

Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurses will conduct an Intake Nursing Assessment for ICPC children who come into Oregon. The assessment is the same as the Intake Nursing assessment listed above.

ICPC Intake Nursing Assessment Referral Process

- The caseworker will receive notification that the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse has received a referral for a child placed in the state of Oregon under ICPC. A copy of the home study will be included with the referral.

- The Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse will communicate any concerns, recommendations and referrals made to the caseworker, and the caseworker will receive a copy of the written assessment. A copy of the assessment will also be saved in the file cabinet in OR-Kids.
- All program questions can be directed to the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Designee

In Home/Trial Reunification Nursing Assessments

Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurses will conduct nursing assessments for children and families on in-home/trial reunification cases. This will include:

- All children who enter trial reunification;
- All children under 3 years old on an in-home case; and
- Children and families with health issues, at the request of the caseworker.

The purpose of the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse in-home visits with families on in-home plans, is to assist the family in a successful trial reunification or successfully maintaining family unity. This will be accomplished by:

- Providing trauma informed care;
- Assisting families in accessing and engaging community-based services;
- Increasing family engagement with their medical home;
- Providing health education to promote physical, emotional, and mental health;
- Promoting ACEs literacy;
- Assisting in coordination of care across agencies and providers;
- Providing physical and developmental screenings as needed; and
- Assessing home health and safety.

Each family will receive a comprehensive nursing assessment, referrals to community resources and services, and a wellness toolkit. In most cases this will be a one-time visit to the home.

The Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse is required to communicate with the caseworker prior to making an appointment with the family. It is important that the caseworker connect with the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse and ensure that the family is aware that a nurse will be calling to schedule an appointment.

The caseworker and office manager will receive a request for parent or caregiver’s address verification from Central Office. The caseworker or office manager must respond within 72 hours or three business days to ensure a timely assessment.

If the parent(s) and child(ren) are placed in a treatment facility together it is the responsibility of the caseworker to still notify Central Office of this placement and whether or not a nurse would be able to conduct the assessment on the premises where the parent(s) and child(ren) are residing. If an assessment cannot be completed at this location, the case worker will need to inform Central Office of the situation and then follow up once the parent(s) and child(ren) are in a residence where the assessment can be conducted.

The caseworker will receive notification that the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse has received a referral. The notification will include contact information for the assigned Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse. The referral will include:

- Most current CANS Results for each child, if available
- Most current, applicable Ongoing Safety Plan, if available

Once the primary caseworker receives the referral notice packet they must make contact with the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse.

NOTE: Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurses will not schedule an appointment with the Parent(s)/Caregiver(s) until contact has occurred between the caseworker and the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse.

Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse will schedule an appointment with the Parent(s)/Caregiver(s) to conduct the In-Home Nursing Assessment. During this time each family will receive a comprehensive nursing assessment, referrals to community resources and services, and a wellness toolkit. In most cases this will be a one-time visit to the home. Caseworkers can request a copy of the current wellness toolkit as needed.

The Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse will communicate any concerns, recommendations and referrals made to the caseworker, and the caseworker will receive a copy of the written assessment. A copy of the assessment will also be saved in the file cabinet in OR-Kids.

NOTE: The Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurses are not to be used as safety service providers.

Requesting an In-Home Nursing Assessment

Caseworkers can request an assessment for children and families with health issues who are placed on an in-home case plan.

When the caseworker determines that a child or family with health issues may benefit from an In-Home Nursing Assessment conducted by a Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse

The caseworker sends email to personal.care@dhsoha.state.or.us with the following information:

- Case number
- Child(ren)’s name(s)
- Parent(s)/caregiver(s) name(s)
- Current address
- Current phone number or message number
- Reason for the request to be seen
• Any information on how to best contact the parent(s)/caregiver(s)

The caseworker is responsible for notifying the family that a Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse will be contacting them to schedule an In-Home Nursing Assessment. A referral notice packet will be sent to the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse and CC’d to the current listed primary worker. The referral notice packet includes:

• Most current CANS Results for each child, if available

• Most current applicable Ongoing Safety Plan, if available

• Contact information for the assigned Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse

Once the primary caseworker receives the referral notice they must contact the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse.

NOTE: Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurses will not schedule an appointment with the Parent(s)/Caregiver(s) until contact has occurred between the caseworker and the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse.

Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse will schedule an appointment with the Parent(s)/Caregiver(s) to conduct the In-Home Nursing Assessment. During this time each family will receive a comprehensive nursing assessment, referrals to community resources and services, and a wellness toolkit. In most cases this will be a one-time visit to the home.

NOTE: If a Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse feels that it is necessary to have the caseworker present during the In-Home Nursing Assessment a request for the Caseworker to accompany the Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse will be made.

The Child Welfare Contracted Field Nurse will communicate any concerns, recommendations and referrals made to the caseworker, and the caseworker will receive a copy of the written assessment. A copy of the assessment will also be saved in the file cabinet in OR-KIDS.

All program questions can be directed to the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Designee
Chapter 5

Section 49: Unaccompanied Minors
Unaccompanied Minors

Overview

An unaccompanied minor (UAM) is a child or young adult who entered the United States as a child without legal immigration status and unaccompanied by a parent or legal guardian. Working with these children and young adults requires specific actions be taken by the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline (ORCAH), child protective services (CPS), the International Case Consultant (ICC), and permanency to ensure all legal parties are informed and multiple court processes (dependency and immigration) are well-coordinated. It takes a team within and outside of Child Welfare to ensure that the safety, well-being and permanency needs of these vulnerable children and young adults are met and they have the support to achieve their goals.

Most unaccompanied minors come to the attention of Child Welfare when a private petitioner contacts ORCAH and files a petition requesting that ODHS take custody of the child prior to age 18 years based on a history of abuse and to meet their basic needs. Unaccompanied minors may also come to the attention of Child Welfare due to community reports of abuse when they are living with relatives or other families with sponsor care agreements through the US Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR).

The majority of unaccompanied minors in Oregon are located and/or served in Multnomah County (District 2) and become involved with Child Welfare once they are no longer eligible to remain in their ORR-funded placement after age 18. Community advocacy organizations, such as Youth, Rights & Justice (YRJ), may file a petition requesting that custody of these unaccompanied minors be granted to ODHS to meet their needs, prevent detention as a young adult and enable them to receive immigration relief.

A juvenile court finding that the child is “abandoned, abused or neglected by one or both parents” and that it is not in their best interest to return to their country of origin is required for Special Immigrant Juvenile Status (SIJS) eligibility, which allows the child or young adult to apply for immigration relief to remain legally in the US.

Historically, unaccompanied minors have originated from Mexico and Central American countries, like Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Nicaragua. Some unaccompanied minors have also come from other countries such as Turkey or countries in Africa. These children may have experienced significant trauma that caused them to flee their country of origin, including witnessing and/or being subjected to:

- Child abuse, violence and sexual assault;
- Extreme poverty, warfare and/or gang affiliation;
- Human trafficking (sex, forced labor, domestic servitude);
- Targeted violence or abuse based on their sexual orientation or gender identity; or
- Coercion into participating in violent criminal acts.

It is important to gain an understanding of the circumstances of each child or young adult who enters the US as an unaccompanied minor. Many of them come to the US to seek a better life and, because many have had to survive on their own, they are accustomed to functioning independently with little adult supervision. These children and young adults have layers of trauma that originate from their experiences in their home country as well as during their often-dangerous journey to the US and that is further heightened through ongoing separation from their family of origin.
Unaccompanied minors are frequently apprehended at the US/Mexico border by Customs and Border Protection (CBP), a federal enforcement agency within the US Department of Homeland Security (DHS). After being held by CBP in holding cells, CBP transfers the custody of these children to ORR and ORR places them in federally funded, state licensed programs, known as “shelters,” across the US. While in care, these children are provided with information about their rights and learn about the options of immigration relief. If ORR is unable to place them with a relative or sponsor family, they apply for placement at a Long-term Group Home (LTGH), like Morrison Child and Family Services in Portland, which provides housing, education, medical and mental health treatment, recreation, and independent living skills.

Screening and CPS Assessment

Since petitions on behalf of unaccompanied minors contain allegations of abuse, calls by private petitioners to ORCAH are screened as potential CPS and not FSS (Family Support Services) assignments. Additionally, because juvenile court involvement is necessary to qualify for SIJS, opening an FSS case would not be appropriate.

Procedure

When ORCAH receives a call concerning an unaccompanied minor, the screener takes the following steps:

- Completes the screening activities described in OAR 413-015-0200 to 0230 (Screening Rules).
- If a private petitioner has already filed or plans to file a petition, documents the date when the petition was or will be filed.
- If the report contains information about past abuse in a country outside the US, cross reports to the law enforcement agency in the country where the alleged abuse occurred, unless the country where the alleged abuse occurred is unknown.

In addition to completing the assessment activities described in OAR 413-015-0400 to 0485 (CPS Assessment Rules), the assigned CPS worker takes the following steps:

- Notifies the International Case Consultant (ICC) to schedule the UAM Committee by emailing the ICC and copying the Assistant Attorney General (AAG) assigned to the local office and, if applicable, the permanency (teen) supervisor.
- Sends the Request for Information form (DHS 3058) to the petitioner.
- Obtains and review discovery provided by the petitioner.
- Requests Releases of Information from unaccompanied minor and attorney, and if applicable, for:
  - Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR)
  - Immigration Counseling Services (ICS)
  - Previous placements such as the Morrison Center, shelter programs and/or detention facilities before coming to Oregon.
- Staffs with supervisor and UAM Committee to determine if ODHS can serve the youth.
  - If there are concerns about ODHS ability to provide suitable services and care, schedules an AAG staffing per the local office process and copies the ICC.
• Attends all court hearings including before Temporary Custody is granted to ODHS.

The ICC is an integral resource for unaccompanied minors and will staff the case with the casework team, offer resources and take the following steps:

• Confirm the CPS worker has/or will send the Request for Information to the petitioner
• Gather information from the worker needed for the UAM Committee Referral
• Fill out the UAM Committee Referral form and send to the UAM Committee members
• Schedule the UAM Committee

If legal custody of the child or young adult is granted to ODHS, the CPS worker:

• Staffs with the assigned AAG to ensure both the immigration and dependency court proceedings are legally coordinated; and
• If placement is needed, determines the appropriate level of care and initiates a placement request.

The caseworker, the certifier and/or Residential Resource Consultant (RCC) should work together to ensure the minor is placed with a resource family or, if placed in residential care, has access to a provider who is able to speak the minor’s primary language and is knowledgeable about the minor’s cultural background and needs.

UAM Specific Questions to Ask

When assessing the needs that are specific to an unaccompanied minor, the CPS worker should ask the minor, the petitioner, sponsor and other knowledgeable individuals the following questions:

• When did the minor enter the US and how many places have they lived in since then? (create a timeline)
• Why did the minor travel to the US?
• How did they get here, who brought them and what was that like? Do they owe anyone money for bringing them here? What was the plan for them when they arrived in the US?
• Is the minor in immigration court/deportation proceedings? When is their next court date? Does the minor have check-ins with ICE? When is their next check-in?
• Does the minor have an immigration attorney?
• Has an SIJS, asylum or other type of visa application been filed with US Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS)?
• Has the minor had an immigration medical exam? If so, who has the results? Has the minor had their biometrics appointment with USCIS yet?
• What is the address of record for the minor with USCIS and ICE?
• Has ORR explored all possible relative resources? What have the results of those been? Does the minor stay in contact with any relatives? Is the minor comfortable with Child Welfare contacting relatives? If no, why not? How does the minor contact their relatives? What support do they need to contact their relatives?
• What is the minor’s level of proficiency in English?  What language or languages does the minor speak, including any indigenous languages?

• If the minor is in high school, are they on track to graduate with either standard or modified diploma?  At what level are they functioning academically? At what level are their reading and writing skills in their native language?  What is their highest grade completed prior to coming to the US?  Does the minor have a plan and motivation to graduate from high school?

• What is the minor’s understanding of the foster care system?  What are their expectations? Have a conversation with the minor about what a typical resource family is like.  Don’t use jargon.  Explain in basic language.  Most minors have no concept of a child welfare system.  They may have heard misinformation about ODHS.

Court Proceedings

Unless there is abuse occurring in the home of the sponsor, ODHS should not accept custody of an unaccompanied minor for the sole reason of certifying the sponsor as a resource parent. The ORR agreement with the sponsor includes an expectation that the sponsor file for custody of the minor, so ODHS involvement, if a sponsor is available, would not be necessary for SIJS eligibility. The assigned AAG should be present at all UAM hearings to contest orders that grant ODHS custody when it is not appropriate.

Assessment Disposition and Safety Determination

When determining the assessment disposition, the CPS worker follows the requirements in CPS assessment rule. The fact that the child or young adult made a dangerous journey and entered the US as an unaccompanied minor should not alone be a rationale for a founded disposition. It is possible for a minor to be assessed as “unsafe” and open a case with an unfounded or unable to determine disposition. Typically, CPS workers will select Safety Threat #1 (the family situation results in no adult in the home routinely performing parenting duties and responsibilities that assure a child’s safety) as unaccompanied minors lack a responsible caregiver when they age out of residential programs like the Morrison Center. Additional safety threats, however, may be considered and selected if appropriate.

Special Engagement Considerations

It may take time to show an unaccompanied minor that you are a safe and trustworthy adult. They may not initially feel comfortable to share sensitive and personal information about their past with caseworkers or other government officials. The caseworker should consider including a person the minor trusts during the CPS assessment and other interactions with the minor, such as face-to-face contacts.

Many minors have misconceptions about what it means to be a dependent child in foster care. These children or young adults have learned to become independent and have even worked for a living in the past. In the US, they are not allowed to work legally and are expected to attend school full-time. The caseworker should acknowledge the minor’s perspective and identify their independence as a strength when working with them.

Because the minor’s survival might have been dependent on engaging in criminal activity in their country of origin, they may also be inclined to engage in similar behaviors in the US due to an inability to work legally and/or as a continuation of their survival strategy. It can sometimes be difficult for them to break these old patterns. Caseworkers need to be empathetic and also able to communicate to the minor the importance of following laws, so that they can continue to maintain residency in the US and achieve immigration relief. Despite these issues, unaccompanied minors are much like many teens or young adults in the foster care and the general population.

Permanency Planning

A sense of belonging and connection is an essential need of any child or young adult and ODHS should work diligently to maintain the unaccompanied minor’s connection to both their family and country of origin. This includes helping the minor forge new and lasting connections in the US. Despite the challenges of achieving legal permanency, it should be the priority of the caseworker and the child’s team to help the minor establish life-long relational permanency with at least one responsible and supportive adult in the US. Achieving relational permanency should be viewed as central to and not separate from youth transition planning and activities that enable the minor to meet their independent living goals.

To qualify an unaccompanied minor for SIJS eligibility, the court is required to make a finding that reunification with a parent is not viable and it is not in the best interest of the child to return to their country of origin. For this reason, APPLA is generally selected as the primary permanency plan; however, in rare situations, an unaccompanied minor may return to their parent and country of origin.

Because these children often turn 18 shortly after ODHS custody is established, concurrent plans of adoption or guardianship are not legally achievable through the Child Welfare system. A probate guardianship, however, is possible for a young adult up to age 21 who is SIJS eligible. This type of guardianship would be pursued independently but in coordination with ODHS and would not include a guardianship assistance subsidy.

Although reunification may not be possible, it is still important the caseworker maintain regular, ongoing engagement/contact with the minor’s parents. It is also important to assess the level of involvement the minor wants to have with their parents and extended family members. In some cases, it may not be safe for them for ODHS to contact their extended family members. If it is safe, the caseworker needs to articulate the importance of ongoing involvement with their family, even if the minor is reluctant to maintain contact. Efforts should be made to communicate with and to provide ODHS written documents to the parents in their primary language, which may include an indigenous language. The caseworker should also be aware of any literacy issues the parents may have and provide the parents with material in an alternate format if needed.

Case Transfer to Permanency

In addition to following the guidance in the Child Welfare Procedure Manual of Chapter 4, section 3, and confirming the completion of items in the case transfer checklist, the following UAM specific information should be verified at case transfer:

- Contact information for the minor’s dependency and immigration attorneys
- Next immigration court date and ICE check-in date, if applicable.
- Birth certificate, passport or Oregon issued ID, if available, uploaded into OR-Kids.
- ORR documents uploaded into OR-Kids
- Referral for the resource parent to attend the KEEP Affinity Groups for support
Resources are available for the minor to contact their family of origin

ODHS documents provided to the minor in their primary language

Once the unaccompanied minor is 18 years-old, the permanency worker has the option of replacing the ongoing safety plan with a young adult safety plan, which is developed in collaboration with the young adult. All other aspects of the Oregon practice model continue to apply, including confirming safe environments at each monthly face-to-face contact meeting with the young adult and their resource family.

Search for and Engagement of Relatives

As required for all children in substitute care, a Diligent Relative Search is initiated no later than 30 days after the minor enters care. Identified relatives should be immediately engaged and, if a relative expresses interest in being a placement resource, then the caseworker must make diligent efforts to assess and place with a relative. This includes requesting an ICPC home study for relatives who live in another state in the U.S., unless the receiving state is unwilling to accept ICPC home study requests for young adults. Although the minor may never be placed with a relative, especially if the minor’s relatives live in another country, it is critical that the permanency workers identify and engage relatives who can provide meaningful support and connection for the minor during and after their stay in care.

Supporting the Process of Achieving Immigration Relief

Caseworkers should be aware that at the outset of Child Welfare involvement unaccompanied minors are generally interacting with several governmental and non-governmental agencies at the same time. These agencies have different roles and often do not coordinate or communicate with one another.

In addition to juvenile court involvement, minors may have regularly scheduled immigration court hearings through the US Department of Justice, Executive Office of Immigration Review (EOIR). The immigration court determines whether or not the minor is deported and typically does not grant immigration relief.

When the minor turns 18, Immigration Customs Enforcement (ICE) usually schedules regular “check-ins” once every 3 months or so to monitor the whereabouts of the minor and to ensure they are attending all court dates and not involved in any criminal and/or gang activity. ICE is not under the direct control of the immigration court and can sometimes take its own course of action. It is critical that the minor attend all ICE appointments as well as court hearings to reduce the risk of deportation for non-compliance.

Unaccompanied minors commonly qualify for two types of immigration relief: Asylum or SIJS. For requirements regarding minors who are claiming asylum and meet the definition of a refugee child, please see OAR 413-070-0300 to 0380 (Placement of Refugee Children Rules).

Because of juvenile court involvement, most minors in the Child Welfare system pursue immigration relief through SIJS. The USCIS (U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services) is the governmental agency that is responsible for processing immigration relief applications. Just because a minor qualifies and applies for SIJS does not mean they are automatically eligible to apply for Legal Permanent Residency (LPR or a green card). USCIS only allows a certain number of children with approved SIJS to apply for LPR status at a time. Once USCIS receives and approves their SIJS application, the minor is assigned a “Priority Date” and must wait in line for an indefinite period of time before applying for LPR status. After the minor’s application for LPR status has been received, they are eligible to apply for a renewable 2-year work permit.
Most unaccompanied minors in Oregon receive services from an ICS immigration attorney. Immigration Counseling Service (ICS) is an independent non-profit immigration law firm in Portland that provides immigration legal services free of charge to unaccompanied minors and other community members. Other non-governmental agencies that service unaccompanied minors in Oregon are Catholic Charities and Youth Rights & Justice.

The caseworker should work with the minor and their immigration attorney to ensure the following:

- The application for LPR status is submitted to USCIS at the earliest possible date
- All the required documents are identified in advance and attached to the application for LPR status
- The minor attends all ICE appointments and immigration court hearings
- A notice of address change is made to USCIS and ICE anytime the minor moves or relocates to a new residence. This notice of address change can be given to the immigration attorney who can make the notifications on the minor’s behalf.

To reduce the risk of deportation, the caseworker should remind the minor the consequences of:

- Violating any laws including minor ones
- Fraudulently claiming US citizenship
- Working without employment authorization

Minors should also be encouraged to carry their immigration attorney’s contact information at all times.

Youth Transition Services

Unaccompanied minors qualify for many of the youth transition services that are available to all children and young adults in care. Unless attending school full-time, it can be a challenge for these minors to qualify for independent living subsidized housing due to the inability to work legally when awaiting a permit. Hours spent on other types of activities, however, may be combined to meet eligibility requirements. These include attending school part-time, volunteering, interning, job training or engaging in other productive activities, such as therapy. Unaccompanied minors are eligible to apply for the following Independent Living Program (ILP) services:

- IL Housing Subsidy Program
- ILP Skill Building
- ILP Discretionary Funds
- Placement in a Transitional Living Program (contracted residential program)

These young adults may also be eligible to receive financial assistance for college through the Oregon Student Aid Application (ORSAA), financial aid for Oregon residents who have undocumented status, and may also qualify for Oregon’s Foster Youth Tuition and Fee Waiver.

The federally funded resources these youth are not eligible to receive are:

- Chafee Housing Program Funds
• Chafee Education and Training Vouchers (ETV)

• Federal financial aid for college through FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid)

Although minors leaving foster care without LPR do not qualify for Medicaid, they may be eligible for OHP coverage and should apply at ONE.Oregon.gov. Minors are also eligible to apply for and receive an Oregon Driver’s License regardless of their immigration status. For further information regarding youth transition services, please see OAR 413-030-0400 to 0460 (Youth Transitions Rule).

Chapter 5

Appendix 5.1: Ice breakers
Ice Breakers

There are many visitation practices that have positive outcomes, one of which is the use of ice breakers. This is the practice of the foster parent and the birth parent meeting shortly after the child is placed. The meeting is facilitated—by caseworker or meeting facilitator—for the purpose of sharing information. The birth parents have an opportunity to tell the foster parent what they feel the foster parent needs to know about their child, which will make the placement smoother for their child. The foster parent tells the birthparents some information about the home and answers questions that the parents may have. This meeting can be the beginning of building rapport. This is not always the case, and in some instances, for safety reasons, an ice breaker meeting is not held, but families can share written information regarding the child.

When there is contact between birth parents and foster parents, the caseworker should expect:

I. Information sharing regarding the child;
II. Fewer complaints regarding substitute care; and
III. Increased communication and collaboration between the birth parents and the foster parent.
IV. Be proactive about establishing healthy boundaries to birth parents and foster parent contact.

In studies of planned contact between birth parents and foster parents, results have shown that:

I. Children
   A. Return home sooner.
   B. Have more stable placements.
   C. Experience better emotional development.
   D. Are more successful in school.

I. Birth parents
   A. Feel more at ease about their child’s safety, well-being and placement.
   B. Share more information about their child.

I. Foster parents
   A. Ask for specific information about the child from the birth parents.
   B. Ask questions that will help them understand the child’s needs including cultural traditions.
   C. Talk about why they became foster parents and some basic rules of their home.

IV. Agreements for Authorization of Service

The special rate agreement is valid only and so long as there is a current Family Foster Home/Shelter Care Contract (CF0996), and all conditions and provisions of that contract apply. The foster parents agree to provide the increased care, supervision, and services authorized by this agreement, in addition to the regular nurturing and supportive foster family care provided named child(ren) at the current approved rate under the Family Foster Home/Shelter Care Contract. The Service Delivery Area (SDA) Child Welfare Office will notify the foster parent(s) at the time of rate agreement that documentation may be required for special Maintenance Direct Cost noted in Section II, Part A and B.

The parties agree that this Agreement is the complete and exclusive statement of the Agreement between the parties, and supersedes all prior written or oral communications, representations, and agreements relating to the subject matter of this Agreement.

THIS FORM IS AVAILABLE IN ALTERNATIVE FORMAT UPON REQUEST
V. Termination

This contract may be terminated at any time by mutual consent to both parties. Either party may terminate the contract immediately if circumstances make continuation of the contract impracticable, or by either party at any time upon 30 days’ notice in writing. If the foster parents fail to provide care and services in accordance with this contract, Department of Human Services reserves the right to terminate the contract and stop payment immediately. Termination of the Contractor certificate or termination of the Family Foster Home/Shelter Care Contract (CF0996) for any reason shall terminate this agreement.

This agreement will be in effect when duly signed by the Caseworker, Casework Supervisor, Certified Foster Parent, Special Rate Committee Chair, and the Service Delivery Area Manager or Designee as required by policy.

This schedule indicates the recommended ages for routine administration of currently licensed childhood vaccines, as of December 1, 2004, for children through age 18 years. Any dose not given at the recommended age should be given at any subsequent visit when indicated and feasible.

Indicates age group for whom a dose is recommended.

Indicates age group that warrant special effort to administer those vaccines not previously given. Additional doses may be licensed and recommended during the year.

Licensed combination vaccines may be used wherever any component of the combination is indicated and the vaccine’s other components are not contraindicated. Providers should consult the manufacturers’ package inserts for detailed recommendations. Clinically significant adverse events that follow immunization should be reported to the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS). Guidance about how to obtain and complete a VAERS form can be found on the Internet: www.vaers.org or by calling 800-822-7967.

The Childhood and Adolescent Immunization Schedule is approved by:
- Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices www.cdc.gov/hiv/acip
- American Academy of Pediatrics www.aap.org
- American Academy of Family Physicians www.aafp.org

This schedule indicates the recommended ages for routine administration of currently licensed vaccines, as of December 1, 2008, for children aged 0 through 6 years. Any dose not administered at the recommended age should be administered at a subsequent visit, when indicated and feasible. Licensed combination vaccines may be used whenever any component of the combination is indicated and other components are not contraindicated and if approved by the Food and Drug Administration for that dose of the vaccine. Providers should consult the relevant Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices statement for detailed recommendations, including high-risk conditions: http://www.cdc.gov/vaccines/pubs/acip-list.htm. Clinically significant adverse events that follow immunization should be reported to the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS). Guidance about how to obtain and complete a VAERS form is available at http://www.vaers.hhs.gov or by telephone, 800-822-7967.

1. Hepatitis B vaccine (HepB). (Minimum age: birth)
   - Administer monovalent HepB to all newborns before hospital discharge.
   - If mother is hepatitis B surface antigen (HBsAg)-positive, administer HepB and 0.5 mL of hepatitis B immune globulin (HBIG) within 12 hours of birth.
   - If mother’s HBsAg status is unknown, administer HepB within 12 hours of birth. Determine mother’s HBsAg status as soon as possible and, if HBsAg-positive, administer HBIG (no later than 1 week).

2. Rotavirus vaccine (RV). (Minimum age: 6 weeks)
   - Administer the first dose at age 6 through 14 weeks (maximum age: 14 weeks 6 days). Vaccination should not be initiated for infants aged 15 weeks or older (i.e., 15 weeks 0 days or older).
   - Administer the first dose in the series by age 8 months 0 days.
   - If Rotarix™ is administered at ages 2 and 4 months, a dose at 6 months is not indicated.

3. Diphtheria and tetanus toxoids and acellular pertussis vaccine (DTaP). (Minimum age: 6 weeks)
   - The fourth dose may be administered as early as age 12 months, provided at least 6 months have elapsed since the third dose.
   - Administer the final dose in the series at age 4 through 6 years.

4. Haemophilus influenzae type b conjugate vaccine (Hib). (Minimum age: 6 weeks)
   - If PRP-OMP (PedvaxHIB® or Comvax® [HepB-Hib]) is administered at ages 2 and 4 months, a dose at age 6 months is not indicated.
   - Tricontaval® (DTaP/Hib) should not be used for doses at ages 2, 4, or 6 months but can be used as the final dose in children aged 12 months or older.

5. Pneumococcal vaccine. (Minimum age: 6 weeks for pneumococcal conjugate vaccine (PCV); 2 years for pneumococcal polysaccharide vaccine [PPSV])
   - PCV is recommended for all children aged younger than 5 years.
   - Administer 1 dose of PCV to all healthy children aged 24 through 59 months who are not completely vaccinated for their age.
   - Administer PPSV to children aged 2 years or older with certain underlying medical conditions (see MMWR 2000;49[No. RR-9]), including a cochlear implant.

6. Influenza vaccine. (Minimum age: 6 months for trivalent inactivated influenza vaccine [TIV]; 2 years for live, attenuated influenza vaccine [LAIV])
   - Administer annually to children aged 6 months through 18 years.
   - For healthy nonpregnant persons (i.e., those who do not have underlying medical conditions that predispose them to influenza complications) aged 2 through 49 years, either LAIV or TIV may be used.
   - Children receiving TIV should receive 0.25 mL if aged 6 through 35 months or 0.5 mL if aged 3 years or older.
   - Administer 2 doses (separated by at least 4 weeks) to children aged younger than 9 years who are receiving influenza vaccine for the first time or who were vaccinated for the first time during the previous influenza season but only received 1 dose.

7. Measles, mumps, and rubella vaccine (MMR). (Minimum age: 12 months)
   - Administer the second dose at age 4 through 6 years. However, the second dose may be administered before age 4, provided at least 28 days have elapsed since the first dose.

8. Varicella vaccine. (Minimum age: 12 months)
   - Administer the second dose at age 4 through 6 years. However, the second dose may be administered before age 4, provided at least 3 months have elapsed since the first dose.
   - For children aged 12 months through 12 years the minimum interval between doses is 3 months. However, if the second dose was administered at least 28 days after the first dose, it can be accepted as valid.

9. Hepatitis A vaccine (HepA). (Minimum age: 12 months)
   - Administer to all children aged 1 year (i.e., aged 12 through 23 months).
   - Administer 2 doses at least 6 months apart.
   - Children not fully vaccinated by age 2 years can be vaccinated at subsequent visits.
   - HepA also is recommended for children older than 1 year who live in areas where vaccination programs target older children or who are at increased risk of infection. See MMWR 2006;55(No. RR-7).

10. Meningococcal vaccine. (Minimum age: 2 years for meningococcal conjugate vaccine [MCV] and for meningococcal polysaccharide vaccine [MPSV])
    - Administer MCV to children aged 2 through 10 years with terminal complement component deficiency, anatomic or functional asplenia, and certain other high-risk groups. See MMWR 2005;54(No. RR-7).
    - Persons who received MPSV 3 or more years previously and who remain at increased risk for meningococcal disease should be revaccinated with MCV.

The Recommended Immunization Schedules for Persons Aged 0 Through 18 Years are approved by the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (www.cdc.gov/vaccines/recs/acip), the American Academy of Pediatrics (http://www.aap.org), and the American Academy of Family Physicians (http://www.aafp.org).

1. Tetanus and diphtheria toxoids and acellular pertussis vaccine (Tdap). (Minimum age: 10 years for BOOSTRIX® and 11 years for ADACEL®)
   - Administer at age 11 or 12 years for those who have completed the recommended childhood DTP/DTaP vaccination series and have not received a tetanus and diphtheria toxoid (Td) booster dose.
   - Persons aged 13 through 18 years who have not received Tdap should receive a dose.
   - A 5-year interval from the last Td dose is encouraged when Tdap is used as a booster dose; however, a shorter interval may be used if pertussis immunity is needed.

2. Human papillomavirus vaccine (HPV). (Minimum age: 9 years)
   - Administer the first dose to females at age 11 or 12 years.
   - Administer the second dose 2 months after the first dose and the third dose 6 months after the first dose (at least 24 weeks after the first dose).
   - Administer the series to females at age 13 through 18 years if not previously vaccinated.

3. Meningococcal conjugate vaccine (MCV).
   - Administer at age 11 or 12 years, or at age 13 through 18 years if not previously vaccinated.
   - Administer to previously unvaccinated college freshmen living in a dormitory.
   - MCV is recommended for children aged 2 through 10 years with terminal complement component deficiency, anatomic or functional asplenia, and certain other groups at high risk. See MMWR 2005;54(No. RR-7).
   - Persons who received MPSV 5 or more years previously and remain at increased risk for meningococcal disease should be revaccinated with MCV.

4. Influenza vaccine.
   - Administer annually to children aged 6 months through 18 years.
   - For healthy nonpregnant persons (i.e., those who do not have underlying medical conditions that predispose them to influenza complications) aged 2 to 49 years, either LAIV or TIV may be used.
   - Administer 2 doses (separated by at least 4 weeks) to children aged younger than 9 years who are receiving influenza vaccine for the first time or who were vaccinated for the first time during the previous influenza season but only received 1 dose.

5. Pneumococcal polysaccharide vaccine (PPSV).
   - Administer to children with certain underlying medical conditions (see MMWR 1997;46[No. RR-8]), including a cochlear implant. A single revaccination should be administered to children with functional or anatomic asplenia or other immunocompromising condition after 5 years.

6. Hepatitis A vaccine (HepA).
   - Administer 2 doses at least 6 months apart.
   - HepA is recommended for children older than 1 year who live in areas where vaccination programs target older children or who are at increased risk of infection. See MMWR 2006;55(No. RR-7).

7. Hepatitis B vaccine (HepB).
   - Administer the 3-dose series to those not previously vaccinated.
   - A 2-dose series (separated by at least 4 months) of adult formulation Recombivax HB® is licensed for children aged 11 through 15 years.

8. Inactivated poliovirus vaccine (IPV).
   - For children who received an all-IPV or all-oral poliovirus (OPV) series, a fourth dose is not necessary if the third dose was administered at age 4 years or older.
   - If both OPV and IPV were administered as part of a series, a total of 4 doses should be administered, regardless of the child’s current age.

9. Measles, mumps, and rubella vaccine (MMR).
   - If not previously vaccinated, administer 2 doses or the second dose for those who have received only 1 dose, with at least 28 days between doses.

10. Varicella vaccine.
    - For persons aged 7 through 18 years without evidence of immunity (see MMWR 2007;56[No. RR-4]), administer 2 doses if not previously vaccinated or the second dose if they have received only 1 dose.
    - For persons aged 7 through 12 years, the minimum interval between doses is 3 months. However, if the second dose was administered at least 28 days after the first dose, it can be accepted as valid.
    - For persons aged 13 years and older, the minimum interval between doses is 28 days.

Appendix 5.13: Housing Options Guide
Housing Options Guide

Introduction

This document has been created by the Independent Living Program State Advisory Committee (SAC). The SAC has dedicated this guide to the many youth who have transitioned out of care and those that have yet to transition out of the system. The SAC saw a need to have better informed youth, caseworkers, and supportive adults regarding the housing options available (or those needed) for youth once they left the foster care system. This Housing Options Guide attempts to inform youth, adults and the community of the types of housing needed to support a successful transition to adulthood. While every community may not have every housing option available, every community should strive to offer multiple housing options for youth leaving care. Housing options must take into consideration the needs of the young person – skill level, past opportunities to practice daily living skills, knowledge of adult life and decisions, and the youth’s ability to function as an adult.

Some youth will need to have the opportunities to adjust to adulthood in supported increments. Other youth are ready and prepared to handle adult living with minimal supports.

This guide is intended to help youth and adults understand the demands placed on a young person based on the type of housing option selected. It is the ILP State Advisory Committee’s hope that you as caseworkers or supportive adults will help youth determine the housing option best suited for them. Help youth understand that for many, adulthood and independence is successfully embarked upon in increments – slowly and intentionally.
Role of the DHS or Indian Child Welfare Caseworker

The DHS or Indian Child Welfare (ICW) Caseworker has ultimate planning authority for a child or young person in state or tribal care and custody. It is the role of the DHS or ICW worker to ensure a youth is informed of their options, involved in decisions that affect their lives and aware of how to obtain the skills necessary to accomplish their transition goals. Where a youth transitions after leaving the foster care system can have a lasting effect on the young person. A supported, prepared and well planned transition will position a young person for success in their transition to adult life. Statistics have proven that a hasty, unplanned, unprepared transition will result in a path of unproductive, ineffective moves and attempts at adult living.

Whether a young person is planning to participate in the on-going ILP housing services, access a one-time housing payment, or transition out of care without financial support from the Department, the DHS or ICW worker should take the following steps to ensure a youth has been prepared for the transition to adulthood:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Housing</th>
<th>Education</th>
<th>Employment</th>
<th>Health</th>
<th>Community Connections &amp; Supportive Relationships</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Development of Comprehensive Transitional Plan (CTP) at least 6-months prior to Housing setting, and as early as age 14. Include preparation of Permanency Pact Agreement(s). Facilitate a FDM or YDM as necessary. Attend planning meetings and screenings (must be face to face). Planning must include decisions about legal relationship and work with attorney and Court to determine most appropriate plan. Review Housing Options Guide with youth.</td>
<td>Caseworker will participate in educational planning with the youth. Encourage &amp; Support youth in application processes for higher education. Assist in accessing scholarship, ETV, prior testing, reference, etc.</td>
<td>Assist young person to update medical care: recent physical, dental, vision, medication schedule. Assist youth to learn to make medical appointments and be able to get a prescription filled as necessary. Assist young person in application for SSI. Assist youth to access the Former Foster Care Youth Medical program for OHP coverage to age 26 (must leave Foster Care at age 18 or older).</td>
<td>Help map out young person’s community, identify support persons, emergency contacts, etc. Assist youth to complete or update the Youth Assessment Summary (CE69) form. Utilize the Permanency Pact Agreement to outline ongoing connections and support. Help youth think about what assistance he/she may need and who may be able to assist them. Determine if youth will need to have mail forwarded or if caregiver will allow youth to use their address for on-going mail needs.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Role of Courts

Courts/CRB

When a youth is preparing to leave their current substitute care setting to establish their own residence, the court will need to review the youth’s abilities to determine if the youth is safely and successfully able and willing to maintain his or herself in the type of housing selected. The court must determine whether leaving a traditional substitute care setting will result in homelessness. To assist the court in making these decisions, the caseworker must provide a clear explanation of the youth’s chosen housing setting, and a copy of the youth’s comprehensive transition plan (CF 0069A). The court should assist the young person in transition by determining the most appropriate legal custody or lack of legal relationship that will support, not enable or restrict, a young person’s ability to grow and make a successful transition to adulthood.

Attorney

The attorney should be invited to participate in, review and support a youth’s comprehensive transition plan (CTP). The attorney should assist their client by determining the most appropriate legal custody or lack of legal relationship that will support, not enable or restrict a young person’s ability to grow and make a successful transition to adulthood.

Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA)

A CASA is in a unique position to inform both youth and adults. If the CASA has been able to forge a trusting relationship with a young person, the CASA should talk to the youth to determine what the youth’s intentions are once they leave the foster care system. The CASA should be invited to participate in, review and support a youth’s comprehensive transition plan (CTP). A CASA can check in with the youth periodically to determine if the youth is receiving the training and skill building necessary to successfully transition to the housing option of choice.
Role of Caregiver and Supportive Adults

Caregiver/staff

The youth’s foster home is the ideal place to learn life skills and prepare for adult responsibilities. The teaching of life skills should begin the day a child or teen enters care. It is never too early to begin teaching skills necessary to succeed as an adult (decision making, goal setting, valuing education/life-long learning, money management, self-care, etc.). When a youth is planning to leave their substitute care provider to participate in one of the ILP housing programs and establish their own housing, the caregiver(s) and other supportive adults (mentors, family members, coaches, service providers) should assist youth with the following:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Housing</th>
<th>Education</th>
<th>Employment</th>
<th>Health</th>
<th>Community Connections &amp; Supportive Relationships</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Teach young person daily living skills such as the components of a safe living environment, cooking, cleaning, personal hygiene, minor home repairs, yard maintenance, etc. Discuss the pros/cons of roommates. Help youth plan and provide assistance in physically moving to new setting.</td>
<td>Assist youth with schoolwork and high school completion. Discuss options for post-secondary education or training - college tours. Help youth set goals for continued education or training.</td>
<td>Assist youth with career search and aptitude tests. Provide youth with opportunities to gain skills to improve employability. Allow youth to work if appropriate. Assist youth to obtain a driver’s permit and license while still in your care.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Former Caregiver/staff

Once a youth leaves, the caregiver may wish to maintain connections with the youth. This is encouraged and can be the beginning of a wonderful transition in the relationship. However, often youth are uncertain of the relationship boundaries. You should consider completing the Permanency Pact with a young person as they prepare to leave your care. This will help a youth to understand the opportunities for them to return or call when they need assistance or guidance from an experienced adult. You can find more information about a Permanency Pact at: http://www.fosterclub.com/files/PermPact_0.pdf. The Permanency Pact provides you with 45 options for supporting a young person. Some of the suggestions are included below, as well as other opportunities for support once a youth has moved into their own residence:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Housing</th>
<th>Education</th>
<th>Employment</th>
<th>Health</th>
<th>Community Connections &amp; Supportive Relationships</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>May provide young person a place to do laundry, occasional meal, place to celebrate holidays, etc. (see Permanency Pact Agreement)</td>
<td>May continue to provide youth with homework assistance or tutoring.</td>
<td>May provide connections to employers, reference, or emergency contact for employment (see the Permanency Pact Agreement)</td>
<td>Check-in with youth regarding his/her medical needs, physical health, and medication schedule.</td>
<td>Continue communication/support. Assist youth to utilize the Permanency Pact Agreement to outline ongoing connections and support.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May continue to teach daily living skills such as cooking, cleaning, resolving issues with roommates, decision making, etc.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>If needed, help youth to obtain medical and mental health services.</td>
<td>Forward young person’s mail if necessary.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

If you are not able to continue to support the youth after they leave your care, it is important that you assist them (while still in your care) to determine who else may be a supportive adult as they make their transition to adulthood. This is not always an easy task. However, it is a task that can be the difference between a successful transition to adulthood or a life long struggle to succeed.
Role of the ILP Provider

When a youth is receiving contracted ILP life skills training, the ILP Provider should be well aware of the transition plan goals. The ILP Provider should assist the youth to obtain the skills and documents necessary to transition to adulthood successfully. As soon as you are aware that a youth is planning to leave their substitute care provider to access one of the ILP housing programs, the ILP Provider should assist youth with gaining and practicing the following skills:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Housing</th>
<th>Education</th>
<th>Employment</th>
<th>Health</th>
<th>Community Connections &amp; Supportive Relationships</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Teach young person daily living skills (cooking, personal care, household management, money management, etc.). Discuss the pros/cons of roommates. Ensure youth understands landlord/tenant rights and responsibilities. Help youth calculate costs of, and set a plan for, moving to new setting. Determine if the supportive adults listed on the CTP are willing to complete a PPA with the youth. Assist youth with community resources (post office, library, bank, emergency food boxes, DHS Self Sufficiency Program, Social Security Office, Employment Department, etc.). Assist youth to consider community clubs or events to meet new people and expand their support networks.</td>

Dormitory Housing: An important objective is to provide not just a place to sleep, but also opportunities for personal safety, personal growth and transitional support toward a less structured living environment. Dormitory Housing provides a trained Residence Life staff to support this objective by creating engaging activities and programs for the residence of the housing program.

Editorial note: A non-educational setting will require a public or private entity to provide the housing facility, and accompany program structure which includes a Resident Life staff for day-to-day support and oversight.

Appendix 5.15: ILP & Transition Services Availability
ILP & TRANSITION SERVICES AVAILABILITY

I, ______________________ (youth’s name), have been offered independent living services through the Independent Living Program (ILP) by my Department of Human Services (ODHS) Caseworker or Tribal Caseworker, ______________________ (ODHS/tribal caseworker).

I have reviewed the following ILP and other Transition services available with my ODHS worker or ODHS/Tribal worker. I also understand that I can decline services now and still have the option to request Independent Living Services or Transition Services in the future, if I meet the following eligibility requirements:

Independent Living Program Services:

I. I am eligible for ILP services while in foster care (including life skills training, Discretionary Funds and Educational & Training Voucher),

II. I may request Voluntary ILP services after I am discharged from care if I have been in the care of ODHS, or one of Oregon’s nine federally recognized Tribes, for at least six months at time of discharge and was dismissed from care at age 16 or older. I must access services prior to the age of 21.

III. I can only be eligible for ILP Chafee Housing if I am discharged from care and custody on or after my 18th birthday. I understand that there are additional requirements involved should I choose to participate in the Housing program.

IV. I have also been made aware of the availability of the Chafee Education and Training Grant – financial assistance for postsecondary education and training, up to $5,000 per academic year (based on need) until I access ETG for 5 years or turn age 23, whichever comes first. Eligibility is the same as items 1) or 2) above (I must be enrolled/attending an eligible post-secondary school or training program and making satisfactory academic progress by age 21). I can apply and receive funds without an active ODHS case. I must apply annually, at: http://www.oregonstudentaid.gov/chafeeetv.aspx

V. I may request that my ODHS caseworker allow me to attend a driver’s education course at the expense of ODHS while in care, or as a former foster youth if I am enrolled with an Oregon ILP Provider and actively engaged in services.

Other Transition Services:

I. I am eligible for the Independent Living Housing Subsidy Program at age 16, or older, if I am in the care and custody of ODHS. I understand I must be enrolled for ILP skill building services, and there are additional requirements that must be met to be deemed appropriate for the Subsidy Program. I also understand that I will no longer be eligible for the Subsidy Program if I am terminated from ODHS care and custody.

II. I can only be eligible for the Former Foster Care Youth Medical (FFCYM) Program if I am discharged from care and custody on or after my 18th birthday. I understand I must work with my ODHS caseworker to complete the appropriate application before I leave care. The FFCYM Program will provide OHP coverage until my 26th birthday.
birthday. The application can be completed any time before my 26th birthday.

III. I may qualify for the Oregon Tuition and Fee Waiver if I have been in the custody of ODHS, or one of Oregon’s nine federally recognized Tribes, for at least six months (180 days) at the time of discharge, and left my final foster care placement at age 16 or older. I must enroll for college and file my FAFSA prior to the age of 25.

IV. I understand ODHS is required to obtain a copy of my credit report for me if age 14 or older (at age 18 I must sign a release to have ODHS obtain a copy of my credit report for me, or obtain my own copy). I also understand that by declining ILP services at this time, there are additional skills training and information related to money management, protecting my identity and maintaining good credit that I may not receive.

In addition to the above, I have been informed that if I meet the eligibility requirement for number 2 (page 1), I will remain eligible for ILP skill building services until my 21st birthday and Chafee Education and Training Voucher/Grant until age 26. To access services after my case has been closed, I will need to return to a local ODHS office and request voluntary ILP services.

By signing below, I am confirming that I understand the services and benefits available and I have chosen not to participate in Independent Living Program services at this time. I may be re-referred for ILP services at a future date.

Appendix 5.16: New Technology: Recommendations & Guidelines
New Technology: Recommendations & Guidelines

Overview

In today’s world, it is important that children & young adults entering the workforce be technologically literate. Unfortunately, children in the child welfare system often have less computer access and use due to residential instability, educational discontinuity, and other environmental obstacles*. It is critical that young people in foster care are not left even farther behind their peers due to a digital divide.

Foster parents of adolescents must often weigh risks versus rewards when making decisions about the activities of youth in their care. In the same way, caregivers must ultimately use their best judgment when deciding whether to provide access to new technologies and in supervising the online activities of young people in their care. Recognizing these challenges, we have opted to issue a series of guidelines rather than make policy recommendations. For the purposes of these guidelines, we’ve addressed the use of technology by adolescent-aged young people (the Center for Disease Control defines adolescence from age 10 to 24).

Restricting access to the internet and other technology on the basis of age is extremely hard to get right and, where the internet is concerned, has tended towards a ‘blanket 18 and under’ and ‘18 and above’ approach. However, there are clear differences in maturity and development between a 12-year-old and a 17-year-old. Two sixteen year olds, in fact, may have very different levels of maturity. Issuing recommendations on age alone would be unreasonable. Therefore, age recommendations have not been addressed in these guidelines and judgment of the maturity level and dependability is left to those who know the young person, their caregiver and caseworker.

Roles

A balance between benefits and safety are best kept in check by a team of people concerned with the youth’s best interest.

Foster Parent and Caregiver role

Foster parents and caregivers should develop, at minimum, an understanding of the benefits and challenges of the technology most used by young people, including social networks, email, and texting. As the primary caregiver of the child/youth, foster parents are responsible for educating the youth on internet safety. Caseworkers, certifiers, and other involved adults also hold these responsibilities and ought to ensure that foster parents have the skill necessary to accomplish this task. Rules for a particular youth should not be based on the actions of another youth or group or media story; it’s important to view youth as individuals and not bar them from technology based on the inappropriate actions of others.

Child Welfare Worker role

It is necessary that case workers learn to use technology and social networking sites to connect with young people they work with, so they can better understand issues of appropriateness and safety. Caseworkers need to discuss internet safety with youth on a regular basis and assess the youth’s ability to use technology in a responsible manner. Caseworkers should also check in with foster parents and refer them to training on internet safety if needed.

*Source: Kerman, Ben. (2000) Foster Care Program Needs Assessment: Results Of The Foster Parent And Foster Youth Interview, Casey Family Services, New Haven, CT
Certifier’s role
The certifier’s role includes discussing each child’s use of the internet and Social Networking Sites (SNS) with the Foster Parent. Certifiers will assess training needs regarding internet safety and refer to appropriate training resources.

Young peoples’ role
Young people must be responsible for their own actions, online and otherwise if youth are provided access to technology.

Guidelines

Internet Access
Control over allowed websites and filters can be utilized to protect youth. Young people in foster care should be allowed (with appropriate supervision) access to the internet and taught to use it responsibly.

Supervision
The level of supervision for using the internet is determined based on a youth’s age, maturity, and trustworthiness. Supervision of a youth’s internet use may fall to many, including teachers, but primary responsibility rests with foster parents.

Rules
Foster parents and caregivers should discuss the internet rules for their home with each young person. Below are links to well-known and authoritative guides with advice for safety on the internet:

http://safetynet.aap.org
http://www.wiredsafety.org

ODHS has developed an Internet Usage Agreement for Foster Parents and Youth which is available through the ILP Desk.

Self protection
Responsible youth development includes equipping youth to interact with technology in a safe way. Young people should be taught to protect their personal information, passwords, and privacy.

Joining online social networks
The minimum age to sign up for a Facebook account (and many other Social Networking Sites “SNS”) is 13. Youth are strongly advised to set privacy settings to private or semi-private, to protect against interaction with strangers. Caregivers and youth workers may wish to make a condition of use of a “SNS” to have the youth “friend” them, allowing access to view photos, messages, videos, and other activities. Be aware that some social networking sites have more stringent default privacy settings, such as Facebook and FosterClub.

Email
Young people age 13 and older should be allowed to have an email address. If there is ever a concern about safety, appropriate supervision needs to be implemented. Email should be treated under the same rules as postal mail. Only in instances where there is reasonable cause to suspect misuse or inappropriate activity should a youth’s email be checked by a responsible adult. Email sent to and received from a caseworker, ILP provider, attorney, CASA, or therapist is private and should only be read by the foster child/youth.

Sibling communication

The loss experienced by children who must be separated from family members is compounded by the loss of contact with siblings. Separated siblings need to maintain connections with each other.

Communication using the various tools the internet has to offer can help siblings stay connected. Sibling communication via the internet is immediate and beneficial, but should not be considered a substitute for actual time spent together. Sibling connections are important, and should not be limited unless there is a court order or other extenuating circumstance.

Birth family contact

In addition to regularly planned visitation, communication with the biological and extended family could be facilitated through “Virtual visitation,” or visits by video chat, IM, or other technology-assisted contact. This would be a supplement to in-person visitation, not a replacement and virtual visitations must follow the same guidelines in the youth’s visitation plan.

Family finding

When the case plan allows and a youth is interested in using the internet for “family-finding” they should be partnered with a supportive adult to guide them in their efforts, receive training, and be held accountable to follow rules around safety and confidentiality.

Posting of photos and video

Young people ought to be allowed to post photos and video including images of themselves, except in situations where doing so would expose the young person to harm from a previous abuser (i.e., the child is in hiding) or the young person has demonstrated poor judgment. Caregivers should be allowed to post photos of their family, including foster youth, so long as there is no indication that the youth pictured are in foster care (no last names-initials used) and the youth’s consent is given.

Cellphones

Cellphones are a primary “instrument of communication,” and it is in the best interest of young people to learn and practice managing the finances of phone ownership prior to aging out of foster care. If a foster youth comes in to a home with a cellphone, contact the caseworker for any instructions. Caregivers should not be required or made to feel compelled to co-sign or financially support the cost of a cellphone.

If there is some court restriction on whom a child/youth can have contact with, then this needs to be monitored. If the cellphone use is interfering with the child’s ability to function in school or in the home, some plan related to the specific behavior, designed to improve functioning, needs to be developed and implemented. A collaborative problem solving approach is suggested.
If the child is struggling with current behavioral or mental health issues that are exacerbated by the quantity or quality of cellphone use, we would recommend incorporating possible solutions into any plan developed regarding cellphone use.

In developing any cellphone use plan, consider including the child, child’s parent, foster parent, and the caseworker as part of the development team. In addition, consider utilizing input from a mental health worker or other significant person (to the child).

Beyond safety or issues related to functioning, we do not feel the child/youth’s use of the cellphone should be restricted.

Tip

A “Suggested Use Agreement” template was developed along with these guidelines. The template is designed to assist foster parents and youth to mutually determine a safe plan for allowing the teen access to technology. The Suggested Use Agreement is available through the ODHS ILP Desk (503-945-5684).

Planning ahead, being prepared, and being willing to ask for help when needed are the keys to being a successful adult and managing adult responsibilities.

Appendix 5.18: Requirements at Independence: “Transition Tool Kit” Checklist
Requirements at Independence: “Transition Tool Kit” Checklist

When the Court relieves the Department of custody of the youth /young adult, the caseworker must provide the youth or young adult with a “Transition Tool Kit.” These are the essential documents, written records, and official forms that youth transitioning out of care need to have regarding their medical history, for employment purposes, or to continue their post-secondary education. It is important to sit down with the youth to go through the information and to be open to answering questions of significance to them. Most of these important documents should already be in the case file. If they are not, then the caseworker should start to gather these at least 60 days prior to the court hearing (some will take longer to obtain, so the caseworker should plan accordingly).

This includes:

- Information about family/placement history/tribal nation affiliation unless the information would endanger themselves or another child.

- Location & status of siblings & contact information the child/young adult can use should he/she want to obtain this information in the future unless the information would endanger themselves or another child.

- Health and immunization records, including whether they have been informed of their right to identify a Health Care Representative and complete an Oregon Advanced Directive. The OHP application for the Former Foster Care Youth Medical Referral Form should have previously been completed with the youth, but if there are questions or additional assistance is required, contact the OHP Customer Service at: 1-800-699-9075 or www.ohp.oregon.gov for more details.

- Educational summary and records.

An original or certified copy of each of the following:

- Birth Certificate

- Official proof of citizenship or residency status in a form acceptable to an employer-required to verify immigration status (JIJS card).

- Tribal Nation Enrollment/Membership Card (if applicable)

- Social Security Card ).

- Driver’s License or other form of state photo ID.

- Death certificate of a parent (if applicable)

- Written verification of placement in substitute care through the Department or one of the recognized tribal nations between the ages of 14 to 18. This information will assist a youth should they decide to move out-of-state and attempt to access Chafee ILP or ETG services.

- Copy of the youth’s credit report.

- Provide youth with a copy of the Services Availability Letter (DE 2922).

- While in out-of-home care, there is no minimum time requirement for life skills services.
- The only service that can be accessed with no current involvement with DHS or the Tribes, is the Chafee ETG. Youth may apply directly at: www.osac.state.or.us/chafeeETV.html
- For a former foster youth to be eligible for ILP services the youth must be dismissed at age 16 or older and have at least 180 days of substitute care placement after age 14.
- All ILP Services end at age 21. ETG may continue to age 23 under certain circumstances, can only apply through OSAC at www.osac.state.or.us/chafeeETV.html
- Both ILP Housing Programs require that a teen is or was in the care and CUSTODY of DHS child welfare (Subsidy/Chafee) or one of the federally recognized Tribes (Chafee).
- For a teen to access services as a former foster teen, the teen must go to his/her local DHS CW office and open Voluntary services (CF304A form), available until age 21.
- The life skills training can be opened as a non-paid service if CW/ICW is providing the teen with transition planning and other independent living preparation services directly.

* Only DHs Child Welfare (CW) teens are eligible for the IL Subsidy Program. Therefore, a teen in Tribal care and custody would not be eligible for Subsidy. However, eligibility for all other ILP services is the same for DHS CW teens and ICW teens.

 A teen may not be able to access both Chafee Housing and ETG at the same time. Will depend on whether Room & Board is included in school’s cost of attendance.

 A youth must have an open case in order to access the Chafee ETV Voucher funds via DHS. If the case has been closed, the only option is to submit an ETG application through OSAC.

Note: A teen in CW/ICW care and custody that is or was on runaway status can have those days count towards the 180 days of out-of-home care. Days in care cease to count once the teen is returned home – regardless of wardship status (time on a trial reunification does NOT count).

Appendix 5.24: Youth Transitions Best Practices Guide
Youth Transitions “Best Practice” Considerations

If not before, from age 16 years - emancipation, need to discuss with youth:

I. Emphasize and assist with school continuity and completion (Stress attaining a high school diploma over GED, help youth continue to attend original school, advocate for appropriate IEP/504 plan). Advise about Diploma options

II. Ensure diploma type, meets post-secondary goals

III. Identify and start preparing teen for college requisite tests (PSAT, SAT, ACT)

IV. Assist youth with financial aid (ETV, FAFSA, Tuition and Fee Waiver), scholarships, and post-secondary applications

V. If teen not on college track, have them talk with school guidance counselor regarding technical and job focused courses and/or certification programs

VI. Develop education and training skills necessary to achieve employment goals (HS/GED, Job Corps, college, apprenticeship, job shadows, internships, etc.)

VII. Develop job search skills. (Consider referral to your local Employment Department, Workforce Innovations and Opportunities Act Agency or Vocational Rehabilitation Office for youth with significant impediments to employment. Discuss where to look for employment, skills needed, etc)

VIII. Assist youth to create a resume, application completion skills. Conduct practice interviews

IX. Develop skills for maintaining and advancing in job (Employer/employee relationships, continued education, assertiveness training, etc.)

X. Identify basic life skills the youth is interested in learning (cooking, money management, nutrition, etc.) and determine who can assist the youth in gaining these skills (foster parent, school, relative, mentor)

XII. Provide information on domestic violence http://www.loveisrespect.org/

XIII. Assist youth to gain interpersonal/social skills and determine how the youth will gain skills in these areas (school sports/events, church activities, youth leadership group/clubs)

XIV. Driver’s license – discuss the considerations and responsibilities that go along with having a driver’s license. Refer to Chapter 4, section 33 in the PM http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/caf/safety_model/procedure_manual/ch04/ch4-section33.pdf

XV. Driver’s Education Courses- funding available through ILP-ODHS Central Office
XVI. Insurance options – ensure youth understands the purpose, option and cost of auto insurance

XVII. Costs of maintenance – ensure youth knows about costs incurred and how to provide minor maintenance to bicycle or vehicle

XVIII. Facilitate knowledge of and access to community resources including transportation options. (Provide contacts to and information about resources in area where youth plans to live)

XIX. Prepare youth for re-engaging with biological family

XX. Help teen identify people who can help support them after they transition out of care. The Permanency Pact can be a resource to assist https://www.fosterclub.com/_transition/article/permanency-pact

XXI. Ensure youth is aware of the 211 information app and resource Website: 211info.org/ Phone: DIAL 211 toll free | TEXT your zip code to 898211 | EMAIL help@211info.org

Appendix 5.28: Road to Getting Your License
The Road To Getting Your License

If you’re under 18 and getting your license for the first time, here’s what you need to do.

1. The First Leg of the Trip
GET YOUR OREGON INSTRUCTION PERMIT. You have to have your permit for at least six months before you can get a license. (To get your permit — if you haven’t already — you need to be at least 15 years old and pass a written test.)

2. Practice, Practice, Practice
Seriously. You have to be able to show that you’ve had at least 50 HOURS of supervised driving practice.

3. And Practice Some More
DO ONE OF THE FOLLOWING:
- Complete a driver education course that’s approved by the Oregon Department of Transportation.
- OR
  - Complete an additional 50 HOURS of driving practice with a supervising driver.

Both you and a parent or guardian will need to certify your hours of supervised driving and/or your driver education course completion.

- Your supervising driver needs to be someone who’s at least 21 years old and who’s had a valid license for at least three years. (Not like Mom or Dad. Believe it or not, it’s pretty likely that they actually know more about driving than you think. Besides, it’s a chance to do that whole bonding thing. Hannn... — you may need to borrow money someday.)

4. The Big Test
PASS THE DRIVING TEST AND GET YOUR PROVISIONAL LICENSE. (This is where all that practice starts to pay off.)

5. Entering the Restricted Zone
YOU’RE OFF AND ROLLING. But there are still some restrictions after you get your provisional license. These are designed to keep you safe and alive during that crucial first year of licensed driving.

6. Covering New Territory — the First Six Months After You Get Your License
For the first six months, you can’t drive with a passenger under the age of 20 who isn’t a member of your immediate family.

Why? You still need time to get used to driving solo, without a lot of distractions. It’s hard to focus on the road if your friends are arguing, trying to change the radio station or stop and get nachos. For right now, concentrate on getting into safe driving habits.

7. Getting Comfortable — the Second Six Months After You Get Your License
For the second six months, you can’t drive with more than three passengers who are under the age of 25 who are not members of your immediate family.

8. The Home Stretch
For the first year, you can’t drive between midnight and 5:00 a.m. unless you are:
- a) driving between home and work.
- b) driving between home and a school event for which there is no other transportation available.
- c) driving for employment purposes.
- d) accompanied by a licensed driver who is at least 21 years old.

The reason for this is simple. As a young driver, your greatest risk of being involved in a death or injury crash is at night.

All of the restrictions listed are only for the first year or until you turn 18, whichever comes first. Then you’re off driving in the real world. But remember to play it smart. There are a lot of cars out there. So drive safely — for life.
More Tips On Steering Clear of Trouble

- DRIVE SOBER. It saves lives. And if you get caught in possession of alcohol or drugs, don’t expect to see your license again until you’re 21.

- RIDE WITH SOBER DRIVERS. 48 percent of people who die in car crashes are passengers. Don’t be one of them. If the driver has been drinking or doing drugs, find another way to get where you’re going.

- ALWAYS WEAR YOUR SAFETY BELT — IT’S THE LAW IN OREGON. And failing to wear your safety belt while you have a provisional license could cause your license to be suspended. Not pretty.

- GET TO KNOW YOUR CAR. There’s a reason it has a sun visor, door locks and parking brakes — to make driving easier and safer for you. Also, make sure your car is in good working order.

- FOCUS ON DRIVING, not on eating, putting on make-up, messing with the stereo or talking on the phone.

- BE A DEFENSIVE DRIVER AND STAY ALERT. Tailgating is a lame reason to get in a crash. Keep at least four seconds of following distance between your car and the vehicle in front of you.

- SLOW DOWN. Speeding isn’t impressive, just stupid. Stay within the speed limit. It’s there for a reason.

- DON’T LOAD UP YOUR CAR WITH TOO MANY FRIENDS. It’s distracting, especially while you’re still getting the hang of driving. Remember, you’re responsible for the lives of your passengers as well as your own.

- DON’T GET MAD AT THE OTHER DRIVERS. Nobody wins with road rage.

- CHECK YOUR REAR VIEW MIRROR before and after you brake, every time.

- FOLLOW TRAFFIC RULES and pay attention to what’s going on around you.

- NEVER LET FRIENDS DRIVE YOUR CAR. If they crash, you could lose money, car privileges and a friendship.

- REMAIN AWAKE, even as a passenger to help keep the driver alert.

Did You Know?

- When you are driving, you have approximately 1,000 skills constantly demanded of you.

  - The safest place for your hands on the steering wheel is in the clock positions of 9:00 and 3:00 — or 8:00 and 4:00.

- With air bags in newer cars, you shouldn’t drive with your arms across the steering wheel.

- 17 habits go into making a right turn.

- ABS brakes should not be pumped. Instead, use constant pressure.

- The top three contributing causes of crashes involving young drivers are driving under the influence of intoxicants, speeding and failure to maintain lane position.

- Windows rolled down halfway may become guillotines in a crash.

- An emergency safety kit should have, at a minimum, jumper cables, flares, reflectors, a first aid kit and a flashlight. You never know when you might need them.

- Practice is the best way to turn safe driving skills into habits.
Frequently Asked Questions

Q. How do I know if a driver education course is approved by the Oregon Department of Transportation?
A. The department has a list of approved courses offered through public schools and private companies. You can also check with the course provider to see if their program is ODOT-approved, or check www.oregon.gov/ODOT/DMV.

Q. I had a permit from another state for three months. Do I only need one for three months in Oregon?
A. No, you need a permit from Oregon for six months or you need a permit from another state for six months.

Q. How do I certify my hours of supervised driving practice?
A. You will need to keep a driving log to track your hours.

Q. Can my parent take my license away?
A. Yes, if you are under age 18, the parent who signed your original driver license application can send a written request for cancellation to the DMV. The DMV then verifies the information and if it meets the criteria, cancels your driver license and sends letters out to the parties involved.

Q. I am 15 years old. My dad had his driver license revoked and there are no other relatives who can supervise my driving. What can I do?
A. Try asking a school counselor, a church pastor or a friend’s mom or dad to help. The supervising driver must be licensed.

Q. I am 16 and an emancipated minor. Do all these requirements apply to me?
A. Yes, with one exception. You must certify your 50 or 100 hours of supervised driving experience, but this doesn’t need to also be certified by a parent or guardian.

Q. I am 16 years old and have a driver license from another state. Do I still have to meet all the preliminary requirements (e.g., Oregon instruction permit, hours of practice, driver’s education) to get an Oregon driver license?
A. No. A valid driver license from another state can be turned in to receive an Oregon provisional driver license. You will still need to follow all the rules of an Oregon provisional license for the first year or until you turn 18.

Q. What happens if I’m caught driving outside the curfew restrictions and/or the passenger restrictions?
A. Law enforcement can cite you. If this happens, you could have your license suspended and be required to complete a driver improvement program before you get it back. Further violations can mean losing your license altogether until you’re 18.

Q. Does the law mean that I can’t drive after midnight, or can I be on my way home?
A. For the first year after receiving your license or until you turn 18, you can’t be driving after midnight unless you’re driving between home and work, driving home after a school event for which no other transportation is available, driving for employment purposes or driving accompanied by a licensed driver who’s at least 25 years old.

Appendix 5.29: Obtaining a Driver's Permit and a Driver's License for Youth in Care (Under Age 18) Meeting Template
Obtaining a Driver’s Permit and a Driver’s License for Youth In Care (Under age 18)

Youth/Young Adult’s Name:               Date of Meeting:

Substitute Caregiver’s Name:                             Case Name:

Persons Attending:             Case Number:

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss and develop a plan for youth in substitute care to obtain their driver’s permit and a driver’s license. For teens in care, it is part of their personal growth, accepting and taking responsibility for actions leading to independence. Access to education, employment, health care, and other community-based activities for older youth in care working toward independence is dependent upon access to transportation. Note: there may also be times that a youth wants to obtain a driver’s license prior to exiting foster care with no intent to actually drive a vehicle.

- Readiness
  The caseworker in conjunction with the other adults involved in the youth’s life must agree that the youth is ready to pursue obtaining a driver’s permit and then a driver’s license.

Accessing Funds

Please follow your District’s protocol to obtain permission for a teen in foster care to obtain a driver’s permit, take the driver’s education course and become a licensed driver (see OAR 413-020-0100 to 0170), Guardian and Legal Custodian Consents. Once a youth is approved to obtain their driver’s permit and license, the youth should be informed of the importance of driver’s education.

ODHS worker completes the CF78, Youth Transition Funds Request form. Check the box for Driver’s Education Fees. The ODHS worker is to ensure the youth has read and understands the Agreement Statement. The CF78 must be signed by the ODHS worker, initialed by the youth and ILP Provider, if enrolled for contracted ILP services. Send completed CF78 to the ILP Desk in Salem.

Youth eligibility criteria:

I. In ODHS substitute care, or a former foster youth enrolled in ILP services.

II. Between the ages of 15 to 20 (preference is to complete course prior to turning age 18, but not mandatory)

III. Must have driver’s permit prior to beginning course

IV. Prefer youth completes course successfully with an approved school (see link for approved provider list http://www.oregon.gov/ODOT/TS/de.shtml)

V. Cannot obtain driver’s license prior to completing course

VI. Youth must have plan for obtaining auto insurance coverage. Note that a youth with a Permit is automatically covered under the car and adult they are with driving (even if not actually added to a policy at the time).

These are separate funds, set aside specifically for this purpose. These costs will NOT affect a District’s ILP Discretionary Fund allocation. Contact ILP Support Staff with any questions at 503-945-5722 or email: ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us.

Appendix 5.31: Children Visiting Incarcerated Parents

Children Visiting Incarcerated Parents
(adapted from materials in Colorado Procedure Manual)

Just like other parents in the child welfare system, parents who are incarcerated continue to have the right to be involved in their children’s lives, whatever the crime the parent has committed and as long as parental rights have not been terminated. Children maintain their right to have a relationship with their parent, despite the parent’s incarceration. These families have special challenges and issues that can be addressed so both parents and children can continue relationships that will be of value to both of them.

When working with a parent who is incarcerated it is important to remember that improving relationships with children and feeling more competent in the parenting role can support a parent’s desire to create a safe and stable home and thus to work on problems that necessitated the incarceration.

Maintaining Communication between Parents Who Are Incarcerated and Children

Communication between parents who are incarcerated and their children is both challenging and important to the well-being of the child and the parent. Maintaining communication will likely require extra work, patience, and creativity in cases involving parents who are incarcerated, but the benefits are worth the efforts.

In-Person Visitation

One way of maintaining communication is through visitation. It is perhaps the most important mechanism for maintaining a positive parent/child relationship. Visits can dispel fears, support attachment, support dealing with reality, and can even provide the opportunity for improving relationships. Face-to-face visits are especially important for children under the age of eight due to their developmental level.

Visitation issues should be addressed in the case plan and service agreement, including information about why the decision to visit or not was made and why the parent would have a non-contact visit. Make an extra effort regarding detailed information about the visitation, especially how barriers to visitation will be addressed. A parent’s ability to maintain contact with the child through letters, phone calls, or visits, could be seen as a measure of compliance with the service agreement. The visitation arrangements should be shared with the incarcerated parent’s prison.

When deciding whether to encourage visitation between a parent who is incarcerated and a child, consider the following:

- Safety concerns. Be cognizant and aware of safety issues both for the person who is escorting the child and for the child.
- Parent’s commitment to the service agreement before the incarceration occurred. If the parent was not complying with the service agreement, visitation may not be indicated despite the importance of visitation to the child’s well-being. That said, a parent’s motivation may change when he or she is incarcerated and visitation may be the motivator.

- Child’s desire or lack of to see the parent. Recognize that the child may express an unwillingness to see the parent, but this may just be part of his or her way of dealing with the situation and the child may really want to see the parent.

- Prior relationship between the child and the incarcerated parent.

- Physical contact versus no physical contact with parent. Depending on the situation physical contact may be preferred, while at other times no physical contact may be more appropriate.

- The nature and history of the alleged abuse and neglect by the parent. For example, if a child has been physically or sexually abused by the parent, perhaps visitation is not indicated. Note, in cases of severe physical or sexual abuse, visitation may not be indicated whether the parent is incarcerated or not.

- Do an individualized assessment of the visitation needs of this child in this family.

Clearly there are obstacles that work against visitation, despite its importance. These include the following:

- Distance – Incarceration of a parent usually means considerable distance from the child, since prisons are located throughout Oregon. Visits may require one or more days for travel, reducing the frequency of visits.

- Hours and scheduling – The hours during which visits are allowed may pose problems. In addition, scheduling procedures may be cumbersome. Even when visits are carefully arranged, there may have been some disruption or security concern at the prison that results in the cancellation of all visits that day. When siblings are living with different caregivers, coordinating transportation can also be difficult. And on occasion, the court may allow visits with one child but not another.

- Accommodations – Even approaching a prison may be intimidating if security mechanisms, such as wire fencing and guard towers, are visible. The atmosphere inside is often inhospitable to children. Visits might be confined to areas that lack privacy, or contact may be allowed only through glass or wire mesh barriers. In any case, a prison setting is rarely conducive to the expression of real emotions, either positive or negative, or the discussion of important personal issues.

- Procedures and requirements – Prisons will have procedures and requirements, often connected with security that may be uncomfortable or even humiliating. A prolonged process of clearing may precede visits that last less than one-half hour. Some security precautions may be in place to prevent contraband from coming into the prison through visitation. If the caseworker has concerns about the impact certain security procedures might have on children, contact the person in charge of visiting at the prison to discuss those concerns. Be aware that prisons have strict dress codes, even for children, and also have rules around what people can take into the prison with them.

- Appearance and behavior of parent – Sometimes the appearance and behavior of the parent may seem strange and frightening to the child, particularly during the first visit. The parent may be in prison garb or other clothing the child does not recognize. At higher security prisons, the parent may also be handcuffed or shackled. The caseworker should find out ahead of time if the parent must remain in handcuffs or shackles during the visit and prepare the child accordingly. The parent may look different due to hairstyle, makeup or may exhibit different behavior. The different appearance and behavior introduce a strangeness into the situation that may create distance in the parent/child relationship.

- Jails – Jails pose their own pros and cons related to visitation. While they are generally closer to home than prisons, they may be less child-friendly. Visits will vary from county to county so call the jail in the county to learn about the visiting conditions. Even if a jail has no-contact visitation, alternative visitation may be arranged, especially when children are visiting, by contacting the jail personnel.

Practical Tips for Visits

Visitation can be successful, especially when all the issues surrounding it are addressed. A caseworker can help make visitation between children and their parents who are incarcerated more productive with the following actions:

- Prepare the caregivers for working with a child effectively before and after a visit. While the visit is important for supporting the parent-child relationship, it also may be frightening to the child. Similar to other children, they may have ongoing reactions to the visit, not just immediately following the visit. The child welfare caseworker needs to help the caregiver know how to prepare the child for the visit, giving the child some idea of what to expect about the security procedures and a description of the facility and assuring the child that it is all right to talk about his or her reactions. Then the caregiver needs to know how to understand the child’s post-visit behavior, help the child express the thoughts and emotions behind the behavior, and help the child talk about all the positive aspects of the visit.

- Educate the caregivers regarding the importance and dynamics of visitation. Though they may want to protect the child from the parent and from the prison environment—citing the child’s behavior and mood before, during, and after visits as reason for discontinuing visits—caregivers need to understand as with other placements that the importance to the child of supporting the parent/child relationship overrides those concerns.

- Facilitate visits. Figure out how to arrange visits. Know the visiting procedures and restrictions of the institution and prepare the child and caregiver for what it will be like to visit the prison. If possible, the caseworker should conduct a pre-visit tour to understand what will happen and better respond to the child’s questions. Supervised visitation resources may be available from the county or community. The distance many families will have to travel to visit the parent who is incarcerated may be great and the availability or cost of transportation an issue. Provide and/or help them find in their communities assistance with transportation to the prison. Possibilities may include programs within the faith community or other community supports such as, relatives, family friends, or neighbors. Options may be identified at a Family Decision Meeting.

- Make visits comfortable. Trips for visitations are often long and there may be long waits to see the parent, so bring food and activities to help keep the child busy. Food, however, may not be allowed past the waiting area and there may not be storage lockers to store items that are not allowed in the visiting area, so be sure to be familiar with allowable items. Ask teachers for homework in advance, bring along games so children can be occupied while waiting. Many visiting areas have vending machines so bring change to purchase this food.
· Obtain the security procedures in advance. Go over them with the child so they know what to expect. Obtain lists of contraband and ensure that no one visiting is carrying any. Many facilities have specific and enforced dress codes, even for children. Know what it is in advance and follow it.

· Obtain the visiting schedule and learn how to set up a visit. Caseworkers should be familiar with the visiting schedule for the specific prison they will be visiting because they can vary from facility to facility. Caseworkers also will need to understand how to go about setting up a visit. Caseworkers will also need to know the process by which people get approved to visit.

· Help the parent use visits productively. Talk with the parent before the visit to help him or her focus on the purpose of the visit and how they can best meet the needs of the child while also meeting his or her own needs.

· Prepare the child for the visit. If you are taking the child to the institution, coach and counsel the child before and after the visit about what to expect, what he or she would like to see happen during the visit and possible scenarios for what may happen. As important as visitation is, it’s not easy.

· Reconvene to assess visitation. The caseworker and the child should reconvene at a later date to assess how visitation is going and determine whether different decisions or adjustments need to be made.

Practical Tips for Caregivers

· Prepare caregivers for problems the child may experience. While the caseworker does not want to create negative expectations about the child, the reality is that the child will have thoughts, feelings, and reactions to the parent’s crime and incarceration, and these will be expressed behaviorally. The caregiver needs to know how children may react at certain ages, how to help the child themselves, and when to seek additional help.

· Help caregivers understand the possible need for further treatment for the child. Explain as necessary any special needs the child may have for treatment. In addition, it may be helpful at some point for them to be involved with the child in treatment so they can better provide the positive family environment the child needs. This is especially relevant if the child is staying with a relative caregiver.

· Help caregivers locate and access treatment for the child. Help them learn about any community programs and services geared specifically toward helping children with parents who are incarcerated. If no specialized services are available, help service providers understand the child’s special needs and circumstances so they may treat the child more effectively.

· Provide information to caregivers. They need to know about the special needs of children with parents who are incarcerated, the importance of maintaining parent/child contact despite the obstacles, and how to negotiate the prison/parole and child welfare systems.
Other Forms of Communication

While face-to-face visitation is the primary and preferred means for maintaining contact and positive relationships between parents who are incarcerated and their children, the difficulties associated with visitation may make it important to supplement visits with other forms of communication, such as telephone calls and letters. There may be obstacles associated with these methods as well. Potential communication methods, obstacles, and strategies for addressing them follow.

- Telephone – Prisoners do not have free and unfettered access to telephones. In order to use a telephone at the facility, prisoners must have money in their prison account to pay for the phone call or they have to call collect.

- Letters – Mail can be a good option, depending upon both the parent’s and child’s literacy levels. Outgoing letters, however, may have been stamped that they are from a correctional facility, and the child or caregiver may find this offensive. All incoming and outgoing letters can be opened by the Department of Corrections and read. If caseworkers are sending in materials that the prisoner is entitled to confidentially, the outside of the letter must be clearly marked “confidential.” Even letters marked confidential can be opened but not read (in the presence of the prisoner) to check for contraband.

  Ideas for facilitating letter-writing include:
  - Give the parent a self-addressed stamped envelope addressed to the child welfare caseworker assigned to the case to write to the child
  - If caseworkers would like to supervise written communication, letters should be sent to the children in care of the caseworker.
  - Younger children usually do not write letters without a supportive adult so it may be a good idea for the caregiver or child welfare caseworker to help the child write a letter to his or her parent who is incarcerated during a home visit.

- Tape recordings – A parent may tape record messages or readings from a child’s favorite books. Check with the facility regarding permission to create tape messages.

- Pictures – The caregivers might send pictures of the child enjoying everyday activities.

- School Report Cards – The caregivers might also send school report cards and updates on the child’s activities so the parent can stay tuned to the child’s current activities.

Appendix 5.32: Questions to Guide Planning and Evaluating Visits Questions to Guide Planning and Evaluating Visits

The questions below can help caseworkers as they plan and evaluate visits. Answers to these questions will help determine how frequently visits should occur, when and where they should be held, who should be involved in them, whether supervision is necessary, and whether changes in the visiting plan are needed.

The questions below are organized around children, parents, and caregivers. They should be adapted as needed to reflect the particular case situation, for example, placement with a relative or the need for visits with persons other than parents.

Children

- Child’s significant relationships:
  - Who does the child define as family?
  - What relationships are important to maintain or build through visiting, including both those that existed before placement and those that might be created as a result of diligent search?

- Child’s chronological and developmental age:
  - How frequently does the child need to have contact with parents and siblings in order to sustain relationships?
  - How able is the child to care for self?
  - How vulnerable is the child to potentially harmful situations?
  - How able is the child to structure his or her own activities?

- Child’s requests:
  - For a older child, what is the child asking for in terms of visits, and what does this mean?

- Child’s reaction to visits:
  - What reactions—positive and negative—does the child have to visits, and what is the meaning of these reactions?
  - If the reaction appears to be negative, is it a normal response to separation or does it suggest problems in the visiting situation or the parent-child relationship?

- Child’s developmental tasks:
  - How can visit activities enhance the child’s developmental progress?

- Child’s therapeutic needs:
  - If applicable, how can visits help achieve therapeutic goals?

- Child’s schedule:
How can visits encourage parents to be involved in the child’s daily routines and in special events?
How can visits ease separation reactions by beginning and ending at natural transition points such as before or after school?

Parents
• Parents’ behaviors and abilities related to reason for placement:
  How can visits promote and support the changes necessary for the child to be safe in the parents’ home?
  How can visits enable assessment of the child’s safety in the home?

• Parents’ compliance with visiting plans:
  To what extent have parents complied with visiting plans to date?
  If parents have failed to comply with the plan, what is the meaning of this failure?
  Are there barriers to visiting that must be eliminated?

• Parents’ requests:
  What do the parents want in terms of visits, and what does this mean?

• Parents’ past endangering behaviors:
  Is there a history of attempted abduction; threatened or attempted harm to the child or other family members; leaving the child unsupervised or in harmful situations; or other endangering behaviors, such as use of illegal drugs in the child’s presence?

• Parents’ reactions to visits:
  What reactions—positive and negative—do the parents have to visits, and what is the meaning of these reactions?
  Are the parents able to refrain from expressing their reactions inappropriately or in a manner hurtful to their child?

• Parents’ schedules:
  How can parents’ schedules be reasonably accommodated?
  How important is visiting in relation to other expectations imposed by the agency and how can multiple expectations be addressed?

• Family Relationships and Interactions
  How do family members interact during visits? Are the interactions healthy for the child?
  What arrangements can minimize stress or conflict among family members during visits?
  What arrangements will encourage parents to interact with their children rather than with other people during visits?
  How can visit arrangements tap into and build upon the family’s social support network?
Substitute Caregivers

- Supporting substitute caregiver involvement in visiting:
  Have substitute caregivers received training and information on IceBreakers during the recruitment and screening process, and what do substitute caregivers expect regarding their role in visiting? Appendix 4.1 describes Ice Breakers. What help has been provided to substitute caregivers involved in visiting such as reimbursement for transportation costs?

- Substitute caregivers’ willingness and ability to assist with visiting:
  Are the substitute caregivers willing and able to allow visits in their home; to supervise visits in their home or elsewhere and, as requested, to document what occurs; and to teach a parent how to care for the child?
  Are the substitute caregivers willing and able to provide transportation?
  If unwilling or unable to assist with visiting, will the substitute caregivers support other agency efforts? If so, in what ways?

- Substitute caregivers capacity to support visiting:
  What are the substitute caregivers’ attitudes toward the child’s parents?
  Do the substitute caregivers value the child/parent relationship?
  Can the substitute caregivers appropriately limit their relationships with the child’s parents?
  Can the substitute caregivers objectively record visit interactions?
  Will the substitute caregivers intervene in a visit as necessary?
  Will the substitute caregivers maintain confidentiality?
  What are the substitute caregivers’ resources in terms of physical and emotional energy and time?
  Can the substitute caregivers be flexible and tolerate stress?
  Can the substitute caregivers recognize their need for assistance, and are they comfortable in asking for help?

- Substitute caregivers’ schedule:
  How can visit arrangements minimize disruption of the substitute caregivers’ schedule?

- Impact of visiting on other children in the substitute caregiver’s home:
  How distressing are one child’s visits to other children in the home?
  Does the substitute caregivers’ support of one child’s visits result in neglect of other children in the home?

Appendix 5.39 STAT CANS
STAT CANS

Who
Children and young adults referred to a Qualified Residential Treatment Program may require a STAT CANS.

What
An expedited CANS conducted by a direct contracted CANS Screener through Central Office. The STAT CANS is administered virtually.

How
The CANS referral form, 0802, is completed by caseworker (or designee) and sent to the RRC to facilitate the request. Current and accurate information is critical.

When
When children or young adults do not have a CANS approved within the previous six months at the time of QRTP referral, a STAT CANS is required for the referral to proceed.

Why
A current CANS is now a critical component of assessments (QRTP Assessment) to help determine the most appropriate level of care for a child or young adult.

The child or young adult’s current foster parent/provider should be notified of the STAT CANS referral immediately so the screening can be prioritized.
Chapter 6
Adoption, Guardianship and Other Permanency Plans

Section 1: Adoption Planning
Adoption Planning

Overview

The Department of Human Services is authorized to accept permanent custody of a child for the purpose of planning for adoption. Permanent custody can be conveyed to the department by:

I. A permanent commitment order from a juvenile court following termination of parental rights;
II. A voluntary release and surrender agreement signed by the child’s parent; or
III. An order of guardianship from a probate court when both parents are deceased and no relative or significant person in the child’s life has stepped forward to establish guardianship.

If the decision is made to pursue adoption for a child in the department’s custody, caseworkers must make reasonable efforts to legally free and place the child for adoption in a timely fashion. At the same time, caseworkers continue to have all the same responsibilities they did when the plan was reunification, such as assuring safety during visitation, monitoring safety in substitute care, providing updates to the court and Citizen Review Board, having contact with parents, offering them services and monitoring progress.

Chapter 6 begins at the point the department decides to move to the concurrent permanent plan of adoption or guardianship via an assisted guardianship and concludes when an adoption is finalized or legal guardianship is established.

Critical decision points in chapter 6

I. Decision to pursue adoption: When reunification efforts are unsuccessful, but no later than six months from the date the child enters care, the caseworker and supervisor review the concurrent permanency plan to determine if adoption remains the appropriate alternative plan for the child. Refer to section 2 of this chapter for more information about deciding whether adoption is the most appropriate plan.

When adoption is the appropriate plan for a child, and the parent will not consider voluntary relinquishment, a referral is made to the Legal Assistance Program for consideration of a petition to terminate parental rights.

II. Legal assistance program staffing: Prior to requesting the court change the plan to adoption when termination of parental rights is needed to free a child for adoption, the case must be staffed and approved by the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist in Central Office. Consult with a supervisor regarding the branch process to refer for such a staffing and refer to section 2 of this chapter for more information about preparing for a legal assistance program staffing. If, after reviewing the case with the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist, the decision is to file a petition to terminate the parents’ rights, the parents and their legal counsel are notified that the department will be asking the court for a permanency hearing to consider a change of plan to adoption, and seeking permission to pursue the termination of the parents’ rights. The parents’ attorneys will subsequently notify the department what type of communication they authorize us to have directly with their clients from that time forward.

III. Adoption planning: When the primary plan for a child shifts to adoption, the department immediately begins adoption planning. This occurs concurrently with the legal efforts to free the child for adoption. Reasonable efforts must be made to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan. The case plan must reflect that the department has taken steps to find an adoptive family for the child, to place the child with an adoptive family, and to finalize the adoption.

IV. Termination of parental rights hearing: The termination hearing is the pivotal point in the department’s long-term permanency planning for the child. The department, through legal counsel, presents the department’s case for termination of parental rights. If the trial court grants the termination of parental rights petition, the department can move forward with the adoption plan.

V. Voluntary relinquishment: When ODHS has determined that adoption is an appropriate permanent plan for the child, and after approval has been given by the Central Office’s legal assistance specialist and by the parent’s attorney, parents may relinquish their rights for the purpose of achieving an adoption.

VI. Probate guardianship: When the court has wardship of a child and the department has custody of a child for whom no parent with legal standing is living, the department can pursue probate guardianship as a means of placing the child for adoption. In some instances, when adoption is determined to not be in the best interests of a child, the department may support a guardianship petition filed by relatives or another significant person in the child’s life. Legal guardianship, in this instance, transfers legal responsibility for the child from the department to the child’s guardian.

VII. Selection of an adoptive home: When a child is determined to be appropriate for a legal risk adoptive placement or a child is legally free for adoption, the caseworker refers the child and potential adoptive homes to the appropriate adoption committee for review. The adoption committee selects the family that can best meet the needs of the child. If the committee does not select an adoptive family, the committee makes a recommendation on how to proceed.
VIII. Adoptive home supervision: Once an adoptive family is selected and the child is placed, the department provides supervision of the placement until finalization of the adoption and dismissal of the department’s custody. Supervision includes support for the adoptive family in providing optimal care for the child during the transition and adjustment process, assistance in achieving timely legalization of the adoption, as well as monitoring and reconfirming the safety of the placement until the time that the department is relieved of responsibility through dismissal of the dependency case in court.

IX. Post adoption services: After an adoption is finalized, adoptive families remain eligible for post legal adoption services until such time as the child reaches age 18 or emancipation, whichever comes first. Refer to OAR Chapter 413 division 30, Family Support Services, for more information about how to proceed when a family whose adoption is finalized requests assistance from the department.

B. Receiving a Case

The transfer of a case from one caseworker to another is a stressful time for everyone involved. This is particularly true when the case being transferred is moving toward termination of parental rights and adoption. If a case is transferred during this period of time, special attention needs to be paid to communicating the case history, the safety threats, the case plan, and the needs of the child and their substitute caregiver.

When an adoptive family has been identified, an adoption worker sometimes assumes complete responsibility for the case, and sometimes shares responsibility with the child’s caseworker. The transfer of case responsibility to the adoption worker can have significant ramifications for the success of the adoptive placement and the child’s future long-term stability. The child’s caseworker and the adoption worker need to coordinate their efforts to create a planful transition from one caseworker to the other.

Case management and case supervision responsibilities

Case management and case supervision are terms used in this procedure to distinguish casework responsibilities for children in substitute care or adoptive placements. Often, during adoptive placements, casework activities are shared by more than one caseworker.

Procedure

When case responsibilities are shared it is important that each caseworker understands which of the department’s responsibilities are assigned to each worker. The casework responsibilities include:

1. Case management responsibilities:

   A. Review and update the IIS system when needed.

   B. Maintain required contacts with the child, substitute caregiver, safety service providers, and parents (if required). Refer to chapter 4, section 9.

   C. Review of the ongoing safety plan every 30 days and closure of the ongoing safety plan when appropriate. Refer to chapter 4, section 4, Confirm the Ongoing Safety Plan, and chapter 4, section 13 for Revising an Ongoing Safety Plan.

   D. Review of the case plan a minimum of every 90 days. Refer to chapter 4, section 10, Case Plan Review.

   E. Review of any current action agreement (chapter 4, section 8) or letter of expectation (chapter 4, section 7).

F. Complete and disseminate the six month narrative recording.

G. Represent the department at the Citizen Review Board.

H. Represent the department in judicial proceedings.

I. Communicate any changes in the overall management of the case to the caseworker providing supervision of the child’s out-of-home placement.

II. Case supervision responsibilities:

A. Have contact with the substitute caregiver (this includes caregivers who plan to adopt, but before the adoption finalizes) every 30 days and face-to-face contact with the substitute caregiver in their home every 60 days.

B. Have face-to-face contact with the child every 30 days. Refer to specific procedures in chapter 4, section 9, F, Contact with the Child Placed in Substitute Care.

C. Document in the CW electronic data system the date and content of each contact with the substitute caregiver.

D. Assure the child’s safety in the substitute caregiver’s home. Document in the CW electronic data system observations about the child’s safety in the substitute caregiver’s home.

E. Make referrals for services to assist the child or the substitute caregiver.

F. Update the health and education information on the CF 310E and CF 310H.

G. Make visitation arrangements if necessary. Update the Visit and Contact Plan if necessary.

H. Complete the adoption assistance process, when appropriate.

I. Communicate progress with the placement to the caseworker providing case management services.

J. Finalize the adoption.

III. Make a clear determination of which case responsibility each worker will assume responsibility for and document the decision.

Case responsibilities when a case is transferred prior to the child becoming legally freed for adoption

If a case is transferred after a legal assistance staffing and before a termination of parental rights hearing or the parent signs a release and surrender document, both the child’s caseworker and the receiving caseworker share responsibility for a smooth transition of case information and relationships. The procedures below indicate the ideal process.

Procedure

Responsibilities of the child’s caseworker

I. Arrange a time, prior to a meeting with the child and their substitute caregiver, to staff the case with the receiving caseworker. The child’s caseworker discusses the following case information with the receiving caseworker:
A. The details of the current case plan.

B. The safety threats that required out-of-home care for the child, the ongoing safety plan, the lack of progress on the expected outcomes of the case plan, and the parent’s inability to enhance protective capacity.

C. The participants in the case plan. Discuss each participant’s role in the case plan, the work that has been done with them, and the work that is currently in progress.

D. The information that was shared at the legal assistance staffing.

E. The case file. If information in the case file is incomplete, decide which caseworker will be responsible for completing the required work.

F. The information about the child’s substitute caregiver and their ability to provide a safe environment for the child and the child’s adjustment to the placement.

G. The content of the visitation and contact plan. The receiving caseworker assures that the plan continues uninterrupted. Discuss how the visitation plan aligns with the ongoing safety plan and how the child’s safety is managed during visitation. Determine when responsibility for the visitation plan will transfer to the receiving caseworker.

H. The status of the adoptive placement, including:
   1. Whether there are interested relatives.
   2. The status of the diligent relative search.
   3. Whether the current caretaker is interested in adoption.
   4. Designation of the adoptive placement.

I. The child’s safety in the current placement.
   1. If the child is currently in a safe environment, the child’s caseworker reviews how the conditions of a safe environment have been confirmed.
   2. If the child is currently safe in their placement, but the conditions of a safe environment are not fully met, the child’s caseworker and the foster home certifier review any current placement support plan with the receiving caseworker. If the child’s caseworker has a role in the support plan, both caseworkers, in consultation with the foster home certifier, decide when responsibility will shift to the receiving caseworker.

II. Schedule a visit to introduce the receiving caseworker to the child and the substitute caregiver. The child’s caseworker:
   A. Explains to the caregiver and the child why the case is being transferred to the receiving caseworker.
   B. Reviews the case plan with the caregiver and the receiving caseworker to be sure everyone has the same information.
   C. Reviews the child’s safety in the placement with the substitute caregiver and the receiving caseworker. If the caregiver has a current placement support plan, and the child’s caseworker has a responsibility in this plan, identify when these responsibilities will transfer to the receiving caseworker.
D. Spends time with the child to introduce the child to the receiving caseworker.
E. Determines whether more than one visit with the child and their substitute caregiver and the receiving caseworker is necessary for a smooth transition.

III. Schedule a meeting with the child’s parents and the receiving caseworker. If the case plan is adoption and approval for filing a termination of parental rights petition has been given, discuss this visit with the legal assistance attorney and obtain the parent’s attorney’s permission prior to scheduling a visit. At the visit, complete the following activities:
   A. Introduce the receiving caseworker and explain the reason for the case transfer.
   B. Review the existing case plan with the parents and the receiving caseworker.
      1. Answer any questions either party may have about the plan.
      2. Refer the parents to their attorneys for questions involving legal advice or legal implications of decisions the parent is making.
   C. Review the safety threats that required out-of-home care for the child, the ongoing safety plan, the lack of progress on the expected outcomes of the case plan, and the parent’s level of protective capacity.
   D. Review the visitation and contact plan with the parents and the receiving caseworker. When approval has been given to file a petition to terminate a parent’s rights, staff with the legal assistance attorney any proposed changes in visitation that are being considered.

Responsibilities of the adoption (receiving) caseworker

I. Complete the following activities within five days of receipt of the case from the child’s caseworker:
   A. Review the child welfare case history, case documentation and the actions and decisions made at the legal assistance staffing. Refer to chapter 4, section 3, parts B and C, and section 9 which address issues including: meeting the child, reviewing the visit and contact plan, answering the child’s questions, making observations regarding the child’s and caregiver’s adjustment, child well-being and safety in the substitute placement, providing contact information to the child and caregiver, meeting with the substitute caregiver, and confirming the child’s safety.
   B. Contact all the participants in the safety plan to verify their continued commitment to the plan and to determine whether the ongoing safety plan is sufficient to manage the child’s safety. Modify the safety plan if circumstances have changed.
   C. Contact the foster home certifier if the substitute caregiver has a placement support plan, to confirm the transfer of the case and reaffirm any responsibilities they might have in the placement support plan.
   D. Have face-to-face contact with the child within five working days of receiving the case.
   E. Document in CW electronic data system your efforts to familiarize yourself with the case plan and document the review of the child’s ongoing safety plan.

II. Notify Central Office Adoption Services Unit of the case transfer and to consult on case planning if needed, whenever Central Office Adoption Services Unit has an open adoption file.
General considerations when a case is transferred during the adoption process

Procedure

Responsibilities of the child’s caseworker

I. Complete a CF 333f, Transfer Narrative unless a case plan has been written or updated within the last 30 days.

II. Upon receiving notice from the Adoption Services Unit that a child is legally freed for adoption, and prior to the adoptive family receiving a CW electronic data system case number, open a plan for the child under the birth family’s case number.

III. As soon as the adoptive family is assigned a case number, move the child’s plan to the adoptive family’s case number. A memo with instructions is provided from Central Office Adoption Services Unit when this occurs.

IV. When the child is transitioned to a home for the purpose of adoption, take primary responsibility for planning and implementing a transition from one home to the other. Refer to section 9 in this chapter of the procedure manual for more information about transitioning the child to an adoptive placement.

V. Determine the important people in the child’s life who need to know the child is moving to an adoptive placement and notify them of the move. The child’s attorney, CASA and tribe, if involved, must be notified.

VI. To avoid a gap in service, the child’s caseworker assumes responsibility for every aspect of case management and supervision of the placement until such time as the case is transferred to another caseworker or the adoption plan is finalized.

Responsibilities of the adoption (receiving) caseworker

The child’s court wardship does not transfer when a child moves to a home in another county for the purpose of adoption. When an adoption worker assumes case management responsibilities, responsibility for the administrative reviews can transfer to the receiving worker when the following procedure is followed. However, communication with the court of original jurisdiction is not transferred to the receiving worker, but instead stays with the caseworker in the county of the child’s jurisdiction.

Procedure

VII. If the child is moving to another county because of placement into a home for the purpose of adoption, the caseworker in the county of the child’s jurisdiction notifies the CRB in the new county of the child’s new location and requests a CRB date. Once given, the caseworker in the county of jurisdiction can cancel the CRB in the original county. When this occurs, the adoption caseworker will be notified of the CRB date and will update the 333 narrative and be present for the review.

Case responsibility when a child is legally free for adoption and placed in an officially designated adoptive home

Procedure

Responsibilities of the child’s caseworker
I. Upon written notification from the Adoption Services Unit that a child is legally free for adoption, open an XADP plan for the child.

II. When the child’s caseworker supervises the adoptive placement, open an XSUP plan under the child’s plan.

Responsibilities of the adoption (receiving) caseworker

III. When an adoption worker supervises the placement, open an XSUP service under the child’s plan.

IV. When the case is completely transferred to an adoption worker, they assume responsibility for all aspects of case management and case supervision. In some instances, when a child is legally freed and placed in an officially designated adoptive home, it may be in the best interests of the child for the child’s caseworker to supervise the adoptive placement. The supervisor for the child’s caseworker must review and approve this decision.

Case responsibility when a child is legally free and the plan is to be placed through or by a licensed private adoption agency

Procedure

Responsibilities of the child’s caseworker

I. Prior to scheduling an adoption committee, determine if a personal services contract is in place for the private adoption agency by contacting the Technical Assistance Unit contract coordinator in Central Office. Refer to chapter 6, section 9 for additional information about personal services contract requests and ICPC, if the child is placed out of state.

II. Continue case management and case supervision responsibilities when a child is legally freed and placed in an adoptive home developed by a licensed private adoption agency. The case record and wardship stay with the branch until the adoption is finalized.

III. Upon written notification from the Adoption Services Unit that a child is legally free for adoption, open a XADP plan for the child.

   A. If the child is placed with a private agency adoptive home enter a XSUP service.
   B. If the private agency adoptive home is out-of-state, enter a TRCK service.

IV. Work with the private agency adoption worker, the adoptive family and the substitute caregiver to facilitate the child’s move to the private agency’s adoptive home. Work with others who may be involved with the child to facilitate a smooth transition for the child, such as the child’s therapist, treatment provider or school staff.

V. Retain responsibility for the safety of a child in the department’s custody.

   A. When a child is placed with an adoptive home licensed by the State of Oregon or certified for foster care by the private adoption agency, continue to have face-to-face contact with the child and contact with the adoptive family every 30 days, and face-to-face contact with the adoptive family and child in their home a minimum of once every 60 days. Ideally these supervisory contacts are made in concert with the private agency adoption worker.
B. If the child is placed in a private agency adoptive home in another county in Oregon, request courtesy supervision by the department in the county where the child is residing. The assigned caseworker in the county of jurisdiction remains responsible for the child’s safety until a caseworker in the receiving county is assigned.

C. These visits, and the caseworker’s observations about the child’s safety in the adoptive home, are documented in the CW electronic data system. Also refer to chapter 4, 9 F regarding contact with the child in out-of-home care.

VI. Once the child is placed in the private agency adoptive home, the private agency adoption worker sends the child’s caseworker quarterly progress reports and a final progress report recommending that the adoption be finalized.

Case responsibility when a child is legally freed and placed with another state child welfare agency

Procedure

Responsibilities of the child’s caseworker

I. Prior to placement, complete an Oregon Interstate Compact for the Placement of Children (ICPC) referral packet requesting approval of a placement in another state. Refer to the ICPC section of chapter IV and section 9 C in chapter V for procedures on interstate placements.

II. Prior to moving a child to an out-of-state adoptive placement:

   A. Notify the court of the plan to place the child in an out-of-state placement.

   B. Take steps to ensure the appropriate contracts are in place and the medical coverage is in place. See chapter 6, section 9.

   C. Develop a transition plan involving the significant people in the child’s life. Refer to section 9 A of this chapter for more information on transitioning a child.

   D. Make travel arrangements for the child once you have received an authorization number from Oregon’s ICPC coordinator. Refer to the ICPC section of chapter 5 and section 8 C of chapter 6 for more information on out-of-state placements and travel arrangements.

III. When the child is placed in an out-of-state adoptive home, complete three copies of the CF100B and mail these to the Oregon ICPC office. Upon receipt of the CF100B, the receiving state’s adoption worker begins supervision of the adoptive placement.

   A. The adoption worker in the receiving state sends, through their ICPC coordinator, quarterly progress reports and a final progress report when the adoption is ready to be finalized.

   B. The caseworker in Oregon will need to communicate with the out-of-state worker to indicate when the case is ready for finalization. Refer to section 13 for more information on finalizing the adoption and final reports.

IV. Continue case management responsibilities when a child is placed with an adoptive family in another state. The case record and wardship stay with the branch until the adoption is finalized.
V. Upon written notification from the Adoption Services Unit that a child placed for adoption in another state is legally free for adoption, open an XADP plan for the child and a TRCK service under the child’s plan. The child remains under their birth family’s case number until the adoptive family is issued a case number. When the adoptive family receives a case number, the adoption plan is moved to the adoptive family’s case number.

Case responsibility when a child is legally freed and adopted by their current caretaker

Procedure

Responsibilities of the child’s caseworker

I. When the current substitute caregiver adopts a child in their care, continue the case management and case supervision until the adoption is finalized.

II. Upon written notification from the Adoption Services Unit that a child is legally free for adoption, open an XADP plan in the child’s name, with an XSUP service.

Case responsibility when the plan is to place a child in a legal risk adoptive placement

Procedure

Responsibilities of the child’s caseworker

I. If a child may potentially move to another home and the child is not yet fully free for adoption, obtain approval from the legal assistance specialist and legal assistance attorney for a legal risk placement before scheduling an adoption committee.

II. If the potential adoptive placement is out of state, contact ICPC to check whether that state will accept a legal risk adoptive placement. If the state does not, additional steps will need to be taken. ICPC and the Technical Assistance Unit contract coordinator in Central Office can assist with these situations.

III. Prior to placing a child in a legal risk adoptive placement, discuss the risks of a legal risk placement with the prospective adoptive family.

IV. Notify the Adoption Services Unit of the legal risk placement and request an ARMS 3010, “Legal Risk Placement Agreement.”
   A. Have the prospective adoptive parents sign the ARMS 3010, acknowledging they understand the uncertainty of a legal risk placement.
   B. Send the signed ARMS 3010 to the Adoption Services Unit for the adoption program manager’s signature.

V. When a child is placed in a legal risk adoptive home, continue case management and case supervision responsibilities and continue to work with the legal assistance program staff to free the child for adoption.
VI. Supervision of a legal risk adoptive placement, including responsibility for confirming a safe environment, depends on where the child is placed.

A. The child’s caseworker is responsible for placement supervision when:

1. A child is moved to an officially selected adoptive home, the child’s caseworker and their supervisor decide it is in the best interests of the child for the child’s caseworker to continue to supervise the placement.

2. The child remains with their current caregiver.

3. The child is placed in a private agency adoptive home in Oregon, in conjunction with the private agency adoption.

B. If the child moves to an officially selected adoptive home, the adoption worker for the adoptive family provides placement supervision.

C. If the child is placed in an adoptive home in another state, the adoption worker for the receiving state provides placement supervision.

VII. Upon placement in a legal risk adoptive home open an XADP plan in the child’s name. The child remains under their birth family’s case number until the adoptive family receives case number. The XSUP service is opened by the caseworker supervising the placement.

The supervisor’s role

I. When case responsibilities transfer, ensure that the involved caseworkers make a concerted effort to facilitate a smooth transition for the child, parents, substitute caregiver, and the family who intends to adopt the child. Monitor that the activities and timelines required for case transfers are adhered to.

II. Provide direction when there are concerns about whether the ongoing safety plan is adequate and when certification standards are not being met.

III. If a safety threat exists, determine what needs to be done to protect the child at this time, including implementing a protective action when needed. Ensure an intake screener is immediately notified if the safety issue constitutes a safety threat that had not previously been identified. Ensure documentation is adequate.

IV. Upon case transfer, ensure that information from the legal assistance staffings has accurately been shared with the receiving caseworker.

V. If at the time of case transfer the case file is incomplete, provide direction as to which worker is responsible for completing the required work and monitor that needed items are completed.

VI. If there are concerns about the substitute caregiver’s ability to provide a safe environment or concerns about their ability to assist the child to transition or adjust to a placement, provide assistance and direction to the caseworker.

VII. If a placement support plan is in place in the child’s substitute caregiver’s home, ensure that the involved caseworkers and certifiers have met to discuss the issues and that there is clarity for the caseworker as to his/her role in monitoring the child’s safety and the issues of concern.
VIII. Make decisions about which responsibilities will fall to each of the involved caseworkers when there are options as to who is assigned which tasks.

C. Determination of Legal Parties

The initial steps to identify all persons with a legally recognized right to a child in out-of-home care should be completed within 30 days of the child’s initial removal. Directions for establishing legal paternity can be found in chapter 9 and in chapter 3, section 16, Identifying Legal Parents.

By the time a case is under consideration for referral to the Legal Assistance Program, this work should have been completed and documented in the case file. Prior to making a referral for a legal assistance staffing, the caseworker reviews the case record to confirm that this work was completed and all of the parties with a legally recognized right to the child have been identified. If there is any question about the legal status of a party to the case, this issue... must be resolved before a case can proceed to a termination of parental rights hearing or before accepting voluntary relinquishment of parental rights.

Procedure

I. Review the case record.

   A. When preparing a referral for a legal assistance staffing, confirm all persons who have a legally recognized parental or guardianship relationship to a child have been identified.

   B. Verify that the following information has been obtained and is in the case file:

      1. A copy of the child’s birth certificate.
      2. A statement from the child’s mother and father (if whereabouts are known) as to the child’s paternity and a history of the mother’s marriages and divorces.
      3. A CF 418, Father(s) Questionnaire, completed by the mother.
      4. If the child’s parents are unavailable, documentation provided by the child’s relatives and interview notes from contacts with the child’s relatives documenting information related to the child’s paternity and history of the mother’s marriages and divorces.
      5. Attempts to locate absent parents with legal standing and results of those searches. Appendix 5.01, Fathers at a Glance and Search and Notice Requirements, provides more detail regarding those who have legal standing and require searches if absent.
      6. Letters have been sent to any known or possible addresses for putative fathers when necessary. Appendix 5.01 provides more detail about who needs to receive a notification letter. Refer to Appendix 5.02, Letter to Putative Father (referred to as Randolph Jones letter).
      7. If a parent is deceased, there is a copy of the death certificate in the “Essential Information Packet” of the case file.

   C. The local office has checked the Division of Child Support (DCS) of the department of Justice screens to determine if they have information about the child’s paternity or the State Recovery Central Unit in DCS has been contacted for up-to-date information.

   D. If legal guardianship has been established on the child, a copy of the order establishing guardianship is in the “Other Legal” section of the case file.

II. If, after reviewing the available information in the case record, you cannot determine who has a legally recognized right to the child, seek consultation.

   A. Options for consultation include:

      1. The Central Office specialists, consultants and coordinators such as legal assistance specialists, protective services consultants/coordinators, family based services consultants, and foster care coordinators.
      2. Attorney General’s Office, General Counsel of the Human Services Section, or Family Law attorneys may be utilized.

   B. Consultation is especially critical when:

      1. There is uncertainty as to the putative father’s rights.
2. Paternity is disputed.
3. There appears to be some combination of presumed legal and putative fathers.
   – OR –
4. The child was born in a state other than Oregon.

III. Discuss the issue of legal party status at the legal assistance staffing.
The supervisor’s role

I. Confirm the caseworker has identified and has supporting documentation in the case record for all persons with a legally recognized relationship with the child prior to the legal assistance staffing.

II. If the caseworker cannot confirm, or is unable to identify all persons with a legally recognized relationship to the child, assist the caseworker to identify what additional steps they will need to take prior to a legal assistance staffing.

D. Consulting with Parents Considering Adoption

When birth parents are considering releasing a child for adoption, or when the department has determined that adoption is an appropriate permanent plan for the child, the parents need services as an essential part of permanency planning.

Services for birth parents considering adoption

Procedure

I. Assist birth parents to fully explore the range of options available to them in developing a permanent plan for their child by doing the following:

   A. Assist birth parents to evaluate the supports they would need if they were to raise their child.
   B. Make referrals for appropriate services.
   C. Discuss the options within adoption and the consequences of each option including:
      1. Voluntary relinquishment as compared to contested termination of parental rights and stipulating to termination of parental rights.
      2. Impact of involuntary termination of parental rights, including grounds for future aggravated circumstances findings.
      3. Refer parents to their attorneys for further exploration of these issues and legal advice.
   D. Assist birth parents to explore the various levels of openness that are possible in adoption, and the extent to which they may desire openness, with the understanding that the degree of openness in adoption will be that which is in the best interest of the child and to which the adoptive parents can agree.
      1. Do not make promises about any level of openness that may be available.
      2. Relinquishments cannot be conditional, including conditions upon the type of openness that may be offered.
      3. Refer to section 8 of this chapter for more information about mediation in adoption.
   E. Talk to birth parents about grief and loss inherent in adoption.
   F. Advise the parents of the legal impact and permanence of releasing their child.
   G. Assist birth parents who are in disagreement regarding the appropriate plan to come to agreement. Consider whether a referral to counseling and/or utilizing the parents’ attorneys could be appropriate.

II. Provide the above services to all fathers who have legally recognized parental relationships.

III. In the case of an Indian child:

   A. Determine the tribe’s position about adoption and the tribe’s support of voluntary relinquishment and placement preferences before the discussion with the parents so that viable options can adequately be discussed.
   B. Involve the tribe in the discussion with parents of an Indian child, whenever possible.
C. Provide the above services to a biological father who acknowledges paternity, even if he has not otherwise established paternity.

IV. Provide birth parents with referral to services that support them as individuals, in addition to providing assistance in planning for their child. These provisions of services are not contingent upon their decision to select adoption as the plan for their child.

V. Inform parents about the Voluntary Adoption Registry program. Refer to section 1 E of this chapter for more information.

To ensure informed decision making

Procedure

I. Inform the birth parent that the department cannot honor any request of the birth parent to place the child with a family of a preferred race, color or national origin unless this child is an Indian child, in which case the department follows the requirements of the Indian Child Welfare Act. Such placement requests are in conflict with the Multiethnic Placement Act.

II. When the birth parent of an Indian child wishes to relinquish their child for adoption, inform the parent that if no different order of preference has been established by the child’s tribe for adoptive placement, the department gives preference to placing the child with a member of the child’s extended family, other members of the Indian child’s tribe or other Indian families.

Disclosure of information

Procedure

I. Before the child’s placement, ODHS may provide birth parents with non-identifying background information about their child’s adoptive family, if such disclosure is in the best interest of the child.
   A. Consult with the supervisor to determine when this is appropriate and what type of information may be shared. Examples of situations that may be appropriate for such disclosure are when a birth parent is considering voluntary relinquishment or when referring for mediation regarding post adoption communication.
   B. Obtain the prospective adoptive family’s permission before sharing background information about the family, even if it is non-identifying.

II. Inform the birth parents that information related to their identity may be disclosed to the child at some point in the future.

III. Inform the birth parents of the Health Division Form 45-29, Contact Preference Form, and of the Voluntary Adoption Registry. A copy of the Public Health Division Form 45-29 can be accessed through the following web site address:
http://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/ph/chs/docs/contact.pdf

IV. If a parent wishes to relinquish, refer to chapter V, section 2 for more information on the procedure regarding relinquishment.
Adoption options when child has not been placed in the temporary or permanent care of the department and there are no safety threats to the child

Procedure

I. As long as there are no safety threats to the child, inform the birth parent they may want to consider a private adoption agency as an alternative to the department for the adoption of their child.

II. Take into consideration any special needs of their child and discuss with the parent which private adoption agencies may best be able to meet the needs of their child if the birth parent is interested in a private adoption agency. Consult with an adoption placement specialist and/or legal assistance specialist for more information.

III. Give the birth parent opportunity to consider all available resources before they decide which agency to use.

IV. If the birth parent decides to contact a licensed private adoption agency to arrange for an adoption of their child:
   A. Provide the birth parent with referral information to proceed with a private agency adoption.
   B. Make a follow-up contact with the birth parent to determine if they contacted a private adoption agency and provide any further support they might need.

V. If the birth parent would like to use the department for the adoption of their child, refer to “Freeing a Child for Adoption Through Voluntary Relinquishment” for more details.

Tip

DCS screens are not to be printed or kept in the case file. However, notations about individuals being pursued regarding paternity can be documented in the case file.

The supervisor’s role

I. Provide support and guidance to the caseworker working with a family that is considering adoption as a plan for their child.

II. Provide direction to a worker before any non-identifying information about a prospective adoptive resource is shared with a birth parent. Ensure that the prospective adoptive family has given permission for such disclosure of non-identifying information.

III. Ensure workers are clear about the role of the parent’s attorney in discussions about relinquishment of parental rights.

IV. Provide direction to the caseworker when one parent wishes to relinquish his/her rights but the other parent does not. Counseling and/or involvement of the attorneys may be helpful.

V. When birth parents of an Indian child want to consider adoption, review with the caseworker the requirements of the Indian Child Welfare Act to make certain the legal rights of the child and tribe are addressed.

VI. Make certain that the caseworker has discussed the provisions of the Multiethnic Placement Act of 1994 and the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 with the birth parents who wish to relinquish their parental rights.

E. Notifying Parents of Voluntary Adoption Registry

The Voluntary Adoption Registry is a program through which the Department of Human Services maintains a registry to assist adult adoptees, birth parents and other eligible persons to place their names on a mutual consent registry. This registry provides for the exchange of identifying name and address information and to request non-identifying genetic, social and health history information from an adoption record. The Voluntary Registry also performs certain functions with the state assisted search. When counseling parents about the process of adoption, taking a relinquishment, or at the time of termination of parental rights, the caseworker is required to advise parents of the Voluntary Adoption Registry and the Public Health Division 45-29, Contact Preference Form.

When ODHS plans adoption for a child

Procedure

I. Inform the birth parent about the Voluntary Adoption Registry and that adult adoptees may use the registry to attempt to locate their birth parents or seek information about their birth parents. Refer to Appendices 5.12, 5.13, and 5.14.

II. Inform the birth parent of the Public Health Division 45-29, Contact Preference Form. This form can be accessed through the following web site address: http://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/ph/chs/docs/contact.pdf. The Contact Preference Form, if one has been filed, will be given to an Oregon born adoptee if the adoptee requests a copy of their original birth certificate from Vital Records at age 21 or older.

III. Provide the parent with a copy of the Voluntary Adoption Registry/Assisted Search Program information letter (Appendix 5.13) and request the parent sign the Adoption Registry Notification Form (Appendix 5.14).

IV. If the parent refuses to sign the Adoption Registry Notification Form, record the date the parent was given a copy of the Voluntary Adoption Registry/Assisted Search Program information and your name as the person who provided that information. Place a copy of that documentation in the branch case file.

V. Once a Central Office Adoption Services Unit file has been opened, send the signed Adoption Registry Notification Form, or a Statement of Verification (Appendix 5.15) noting the date the parent was advised of the adoption registry, to the Adoption Services Unit. This will be required before the finalization of an adoption.

The supervisor’s role

I. Ensure the caseworker is aware of the statutory requirement that the parent is informed of the Voluntary Adoption Registry.

II. During the case review, determine if the required information regarding the Voluntary Adoption Registry has been given to parents.

F. Role of the Participants in the Legal Assistance Process

Each individual in the legal assistance process has a distinct role to play in the movement of a case from the branch decision to the alternative permanent plan, to the successful termination of parental legal rights or voluntary relinquishment of parental rights. How well each individual understands their role and performs the responsibilities assigned to their role significantly contributes to a timely and successful outcome for the child.

Role of the branch staff

Branch staff are responsible for the designation of a case plan. They determine which cases to refer, and at what point to refer a case for a legal assistance staffing. Once a case is accepted into the Legal Assistance Program, branch staff are the primary link between the day-to-day activities of the case and the legal assistance team.

Role of the legal assistance specialist

The primary responsibility of the legal assistance specialist is to ensure statewide consistency in adoption practice. They consult on all cases referred to the Legal Assistance Program. The legal assistance specialist is responsible for authorizing payment for legal assistance attorneys’ services and expenses related to the termination of parental rights process. They are the primary link between branch staff and the legal assistance attorneys. When voluntary relinquishment is the sole means by which the child will be freed for adoption, the legal assistance specialist will staff the case with the branch and will have relinquishment paperwork issued upon receipt of required materials.

Role of the legal assistance attorney

The legal assistance attorney, whether an assistant attorney general (or deputy district attorney in Multnomah County) is responsible for determining legal sufficiency in order to pursue termination of parental rights. For those cases accepted into the Legal Assistance Program, the legal assistance attorney files a petition and represents ODHS in termination of parental rights court proceedings.
Chapter 6

Section 2: Freeing a Child for Adoption
Freeing a Child for Adoption

A. Freeing a Child for Adoption through Termination of Parental Rights

When a caseworker and their supervisor determine that a child is appropriate for adoption, and the parent will not voluntarily relinquish their parental rights, the caseworker shall refer the child’s case to the Legal Assistance Program for consideration of petitioning the court to terminate parental rights. If the child’s case is approved to pursue freeing the child for adoption and the court concurs, the legal assistance specialist and the legal assistance attorney will work with the caseworker to prepare and litigate the case.

Decision on appropriateness of adoption as a permanency plan

Procedure

I. Before referring a child to the Legal Assistance Program:
   A. Staff the case with the supervisor to determine if adoption continues to be the most appropriate alternate permanent plan for the child.
      1. Consider the following to make this determination:
         ■ Is adoption in this child’s best interests?
         ■ Can the child be placed and maintained in an adoptive placement?
         ■ Does the child have one or more appropriate and available possible adoptive resources who are informed of the child’s needs and supports available through adoption assistance and wish to adopt the child? — or —
         ■ If no particular resource is identified, are there available adoptive resources within the general applicant pool of resources?
         ■ Is the child believed to be able to attach to another family or accept new parents through adoption? Is there a therapist or professional evaluator who has made this statement?
         ■ Does the child have relatives who are interested in adoption? If so, does the relative prefer another permanent plan such as guardianship? If so, would that plan be a more appropriate plan for this child?
         ■ If the child is 12 or older, has the child been involved in discussions about adoption and would the child consent to his or her own adoption? The child is legally required to consent to the adoption if 14 or older.
         ■ If a child is not in agreement with adoption: What is the child’s understanding of adoption and what has been done to work with the child about the hesitancy to be adopted? Would counseling or other services to further explore the idea of adoption be helpful?
         ■ If an ICWA case, have issues in #2 (below) been adequately addressed?
   B. In the case of an Indian child, verify that the department has communicated with the tribe, included the tribe in permanency planning on an ongoing basis, and that the documentation of such is in the child’s case record as is required through the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA). Be able to answer the following or verify the following have occurred:

1. Does the tribe agree with adoption as the plan for the child?
2. Does the tribe support termination of the parent’s rights if the parent is not voluntarily planning adoption?
3. Has the department discussed with the tribe available placement resources and has the department asked the tribe about any resources they may know of or have available to them?
4. What is the tribal placement preference?
5. Has the department asked the tribe to provide their position about the above in writing? And is this documentation in the file?

C. Document the determination about the appropriate permanency plan.

1. If adoption remains the most appropriate alternative permanent plan for the child, document that decision in the case file.
2. When the caseworker and supervisor believe adoption is no longer an appropriate permanent plan for the child, submit a recommendation in writing to the district manager or designee. The recommendation must include the compelling reasons why adoption is not an appropriate permanency plan.
3. Refer the case to a Permanency/Adoption Council Committee for a determination of the appropriateness of adoption when the district manager or designee disagrees with the caseworker/supervisor recommendation or wishes to seek consultation regarding the recommendation.
4. When unclear whether adoption is the appropriate permanent plan for a child, or when uncertain as to whether there would be adequate adoptive resources, contact the chairperson of the Local Office Permanency Adoption Committee to schedule a staffing. This staffing must occur within sixty days of meeting with the supervisor.
5. The committee representative records this decision, using the appropriate committee form, and gives a copy to the caseworker.
   - Keep a copy for the branch file and send a copy of the committee’s decision to the Adoption Services Unit to be included in the child’s Central Office file.

Extreme conduct and early referral to the legal assistance program

Certain substitute care cases present indicators at intake, or early in case planning, that return of the child to the birth parent(s) is highly unlikely, and an early referral to the Legal Assistance Program is warranted.

Procedure

I. Staff the case with the supervisor to decide whether to make a referral for an expedited legal assistance staffing. Cases appropriate for early consultation are those that come under the “extreme conduct” section of the Oregon termination of parental rights statute (ORS 419B.502), which includes but is not limited to:
   - Rape, sodomy or sex abuse of any child by the parent.
B. Intentional starvation or torture of any child by the parent.
C. Abuse or neglect by the parent of any child resulting in death or serious physical injury.
D. Conduct by the parent to aid or abet another person who, by abuse or neglect, caused the death of any child.
E. Conduct by the parent to attempt, solicit, or conspire to cause the death of any child.
F. Previous involuntary terminations of the parent’s rights to another child, if the conditions giving rise to the previous action have not been ameliorated. – OR –
G. Conduct by the parent that knowingly exposes any child of the parent to the storage or production of methamphetamine or its precursors.

II. Request a legal assistance staffing when the supervisor agrees that a case qualifies as “extreme conduct,” and that adoption is the appropriate permanent plan.

Initial referral to the legal assistance program for termination of parental rights

Procedure

I. In consultation with the supervisor, confirm that the case meets the following criteria before referring for a legal assistance staffing:
   A. Remedial services to all parents with legal standing have not resolved the safety and permanency issues for the child.
   B. Adoption is the most appropriate alternative permanent plan for the child.
   C. Assistance is needed in formulating a legal means to free the child for adoption.
   D. The child is in out-of-home placement (shelter, foster or relative care).
   E. The child is in ODHS temporary custody through a shelter/detention order or temporarily committed to ODHS as disposition to a jurisdictional order.
   F. The case should be staffed as soon as appropriate for consideration of filing a petition to terminate parental rights, but no later than the Adoption and Safe Families Act (ASFA) criteria of the child in foster care 15 of the last 22 months without a compelling reason not to file a petition to terminate parental rights.

II. Determine with the supervisor that adoption is the appropriate plan for the child and that termination of parental rights will be required to free the child for adoption.

III. Follow supervisor’s direction regarding branch process to schedule a legal assistance staffing.

The initial legal assistance staffing

Procedure

I. Bring the following to the initial legal assistance staffing:
   A. A completed CF 31, “Legal Assistance Staffing Form” (this form is not required in Multnomah County).
   B. The entire case file with filing up to date.
C. A copy of the ODHS case file to the staffing if the permanency hearing is already scheduled 30 days or less from the date of the staffing, so that the legal assistance attorney handling the subsequent permanency hearing is adequately prepared.

II. Prepare to discuss:
   A. Why adoption is the most appropriate plan for this child.
   B. Reason the child came into care.
   C. Status of legal parties to the child including:
      1. How we determined a person has legal standing and documents that support that determination.
      2. Whether the court has established jurisdiction as to specific individuals.
   E. Services offered to parents and outcomes.
   F. Location of parents and availability to legal process. If whereabouts are unknown, whether an absent parent search has been initiated.
   G. Status of identified adoptive resources for the child.
   H. Status of the diligent relative search.

III. Document in the case record the date of the staffing, but not the content of the staffing. Information from the staffing with the legal assistance attorney is protected client-attorney work product and may not be shared. Notes from the staffing are to be kept in a file separate from the case file and are not discoverable.

Outcomes from the legal assistance staffing

At the conclusion of the staffing, a decision will be made whether or not the department approves of filing a petition to terminate parental rights (TPR).

Procedure

I. If filing a termination of parental rights petition is approved:
   A. Follow the recommendations made by the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist, and adhere to specified timelines.
      1. The legal assistance specialist completes a CF 0355, “Approval for Legal Assistance Referral.” This form indicates, among other things, the date the legal assistance referral is due and tasks that the caseworker needs to accomplish.
      2. Multnomah County is represented by the district attorney’s office to represent the department in termination of parental rights cases. At these staffings, the caseworker receives verbal approval to seek termination of parental rights and is informed when the legal assistance referral is due. Notes from the staffing are provided to the supervisor.
   B. Follow the direction given by the legal assistance attorney about how the parents and their attorneys will be notified of the change in case plan.
C. Change the case plan from reunification to adoption only after the court has approved the change of plan. Schedule a permanency hearing to determine the plan. The permanency hearing should occur within 30 days from the staffing.

1. Follow the direction of the legal assistance attorney regarding who requests this hearing and how the request is made, based on local court practices.

2. If the court declines to schedule a permanency hearing upon request by the branch, the local branch staff should contact the legal assistance attorney to file a motion requesting a permanency hearing.

II. Request legal representation for the permanency hearing if it is anticipated the agency plan will be contested by any of the parties.

III. At the permanency hearing, recommend the plan be changed from reunification to adoption and request the court approve the change of plan.

A. Except in the below circumstances (aggravated circumstances), ODHS does not request to be relieved of making efforts to reunify the family. Continue to work with the parents until the day of the TPR trial, even if the court has changed the plan to adoption.

B. Consult with the legal assistance attorney if there are barriers to continuing to work with the parent.

C. See tip box below for information on specific permission that is needed from the parent’s attorney to have continued conversations with the parent after approval has been given to pursue termination of parental rights.

IV. Work with the assistant attorney general assigned in cases involving aggravated circumstances for advice about continued services for that parent and whether or not ODHS will request to be relieved of making continued efforts to reunify with that parent.

V. If the court approves the change of plan to adoption, the petition to terminate parental rights will be filed within 30 days after the court has determined that the permanency plan should be adoption, provided that the Adoption Services Unit and the legal assistance attorney have received all necessary materials. Refer to below heading entitled “After Submitting the 439 packets to the legal assistance specialist and Assigned Attorney,” for a list of necessary materials.

VI. Do not request the court change the plan to adoption prior to staffing the case and receiving approval to move to the alternate plan of termination of parental rights or relinquishment of parental rights.

VII. Notify the supervisor immediately and schedule a staffing with the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist if the court changes the plan to adoption when the case has not been staffed and approved for TPR by the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist.

VIII. If the court does not approve the change of plan to adoption as recommended by ODHS, immediately notify the supervisor, the legal assistance attorney and the legal assistance specialist so that further planning can be done. If ODHS believes the court’s decision is not in the best interest of the child, an appeal or other legal action may be considered. Immediately contact the legal assistance specialist in the Central Office Adoption Services Unit for direction.
IX. If pursuit of termination of parental rights is not approved by the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist, specific direction will be provided at the staffing, outlining what steps to take to continue planning in the case.

The supervisor’s role

I. Staff the case with the caseworker to re-determine that adoption is the appropriate concurrent plan. Detail about issues to consider is in above procedure.

II. Staff the case with the caseworker to determine if the case warrants “extreme conduct” designation and early referral for a legal assistance staffing.

III. Staff the case with the caseworker and, if the case is ready for a legal assistance staffing, give approval for scheduling the staffing.

IV. Review the caseworker’s preparation to make certain that everything is in order for a legal assistance staffing.

V. Attend the initial and all subsequent legal assistance staffings.

VI. Keep notes about recommendations made from the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist and monitor follow-up.

VII. During consultation on cases that are approved for termination of parental rights, ensure that the caseworker is keeping the legal assistance attorney updated about changes in the case, is providing updated discovery on an ongoing basis, and is notifying the attorney right away when legal issues arise and court hearings are set.

VIII. When cases are not approved for TPR, prior to authorizing a case be restaffed, ensure critical recommendations from the last staffing were followed.

Activities leading to a termination of parental rights trial

The caseworker is responsible for ongoing activities, specific time-limited activities, and for adoption placement activities once a case is approved for termination of parental rights. While sections four through ten of this chapter cover placing activities in detail, this section addresses the other activities that must occur. The caseworker is responsible for keeping the case on track and moving forward toward a termination of parental rights trial and the timely achievement of adoption. The case stands a better chance of progressing in a timely manner when the caseworkers have a good grasp of their role and responsibilities. Pending a termination of parental rights trial, the caseworker is the primary communication link between the events occurring with a case and the Legal Assistance Program.

Communication with the legal assistance team

The legal assistance team consists of the caseworker, the supervisor, the legal assistance specialist and the assistant attorney general assigned to the case.

Procedure

I. Attend all legal assistance staffings scheduled for the case, with the supervisor.

II. Complete recommendations or assignments resulting from a legal assistance staffing as quickly and efficiently as possible.

III. Keep the legal assistance specialist and the legal assistance attorney up-to-date on any significant case developments that take place between staffings.

IV. Send the legal assistance attorney a copy of any new case material (with the exception of IIS or payment forms) to ensure complete and up-to-date records in the file.

V. Only send the legal assistance specialist copies of new case material that are specifically requested by the legal assistance specialist.

Case management and monitoring child safety prior to a termination of parental rights trial

The caseworker continues with all case management activities that occurred when the plan was reunification. In addition, the caseworker makes reasonable efforts to identify an adoptive resource and place the child for adoption, while coordinating these efforts with the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist.

Procedure

I. Continue to have face-to-face contact with the parent every 30 days, unless the parent’s attorney does not allow such contact.

   A. During these contacts, continue to assess the parent’s progress, changes in parental protective capacity, and monitor conditions for return.

   B. Document these contacts in the CW electronic data system.

II. If the parent’s attorney does not allow such contact, notify the supervisor and legal assistance attorney.
A. Narrate in the CW electronic data system, at 30-day increments, that the face-to-face contact with the parent has not been done because the parent’s attorney has not authorized such contact.

B. If the parent’s attorney later authorizes contact, resume face-to-face contact with the parent and document contacts in the CW electronic data system.

III. Continue to evaluate the parent’s progress during the period between authorization to pursue termination of parental rights and a termination of parental rights court hearing. Though ODHS needs to continue to offer services, do not refer the parent for new services, or discontinue existing services, without first consulting with the legal assistance team and discussing the matter with the parent’s attorney.

IV. Continue the existing visitation plan. There should be no changes in the duration or frequency of visitation without first consulting with the legal assistance team.

V. Continue to monitor the ongoing safety plan and the child’s safety through regular contact with the child and caregiver as described in chapter 4 and as required by policy.

Absent parents and publishing notice of termination of parental rights proceedings

When pursuing a termination of parental rights petition, and the whereabouts of a parent are unknown, the branch must complete an absent parent search. This search may be completed by the caseworker or a designated staff person in the office.

Procedure

I. Initiate an absent parent search.

II. If the parent is located, notify the legal assistance attorney who will serve the parent with a notice of the termination of parental rights proceeding.

III. If the parent cannot be located, the person who completed the search prepares, signs and has notarized an affidavit detailing their efforts to locate the parent.

IV. Send this affidavit to the legal assistance attorney. The legal assistance attorney uses the absent parent search affidavit as an exhibit to a motion they submit to the court to allow a notice of termination of parental rights proceedings to be published.

Create a new file for privileged/confidential information

Procedure

I. Prepare a separate file for privileged/confidential information. Privileged and confidential information includes:
   A. Caseworker notes from all staffings with the legal assistance specialist and legal assistance attorney.
   B. The legal assistance referral.
   C. All subsequent notes, letters, etc., exchanged between the caseworker and the legal assistance attorney.
   D. All written communication between the caseworker and the legal assistance attorney, including hand written notes, faxes, letters and e-mails.

II. Privileged/confidential items are considered a “work product” between the legal assistance attorney and the department and are not subject to discovery.

III. Store this file in a location separate from where the case record is stored.

Within the first 30 days of receiving approval to pursue termination of parental rights

Procedure

I. Complete part B and Part C of the CF 0439, Legal Assistance Checklist, and submit this packet of material to the supervisor:

   A. Part B of the CF 0439 consists of:

      1. CF 0439, Legal Assistance Checklist.
      2. CF 0422, Adoption Planning Referral (In Multnomah County the yellow copy of the NCR form goes to the DDA. The rest of the state does not separate the NCR form).
      3. CF 0418, Father(s) Questionnaire.
      5. The child’s original birth certificate.
      6. Original CF 1270, Verification of ICWA Eligibility or memo explaining efforts to obtain this form from each biological parent with legal standing.
      7. Original ICWA correspondence or registered “Return Receipt Request” card signed by a tribal representative with a copy of the letter sent to the tribe.

   B. Part C of the CF 0439 consists of:

      1. CF 0423, Adoptive Placement Needs.
      2. CF 0424, Legal Assistance Referral.
      3. A copy of the child’s birth certificate.
      4. A copy of the case record.

II. Submit the material in the CF 0439 packet for supervisory review. The supervisor signs part B of the CF 0439 and sends the packet to the Adoption Services Unit. The supervisor also signs the CF 0424 and Part C of the CF 0439 and sends this packet of information is sent to the legal assistance attorney.

III. If unable to complete either part B or C of the CF 0439 referral packets by the dates due, notify the assigned attorney and assigned legal assistance specialist in writing of the reason for the delay and date the referral can be expected. If the 439 referral packet and legal assistance referral are provided more than 60 days after approval for TPR, a restaffing is required.

IV. Provide discovery to the legal assistance attorney at the same time the above materials are submitted, if the permanency hearing was scheduled more than 30 days from the date of the legal assistance staffing.
V. If significant changes in the case occur between approval for TPR and the submission of the legal assistance referral packet, notify the legal assistance specialist and the assigned attorney. Examples of such significant issues include: the potential adoptive resource may no longer adopt; the department acquires new information that suggests a parent has made significant positive changes that were not known at the time of approval; there are indications that adoption may no longer be the most appropriate plan for the child; there is a new child born to the parents; a father without legal standing acquires legal standing in the case.

After submitting the 439 packets to the legal assistance specialist and assigned attorney

Procedure

I. Within 30 days after submitting the CF 0439 packets to the legal assistance specialist and the referral packet to the legal assistance attorney, submit the following completed documents to Central Office, Adoption Services Unit:

   A. CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary.

   B. CF 0246, Genetic and Medical History of Child and Biological Family.

II. The legal assistance attorney will file the petition to terminate parental rights within 30 days after receipt of the referral packet authorization from the legal assistance specialist and the court has approved the change of plan to adoption.

Initial steps in adoption placement activities

Procedure

I. Once approved for pursuit of termination of parental rights or upon changing the plan to adoption when the parent is voluntarily relinquishing his/her rights, make reasonable efforts to recruit, select and place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan. Refer to section 3 through 10 of this chapter for more information regarding the adoption process.

II. Once the plan has changed to adoption, the child should not be moved to a home that is interested in becoming the adoptive placement until there has been an adoptive placement selection. See section 5 and 7 for the procedure for selecting an adoptive placement.

III. If a safety threat is identified, the caseworker must immediately consult with the caseworker’s supervisor to determine any immediate protective action required to assure the child’s safety AND contact a CPS screener and report the identified safety threat to the child. Document the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances observed and any immediate protective actions in the CW electronic data system.

IV. Unless indicated otherwise, it is in the best interests of siblings to be placed together. Refer to section 3 in this chapter for more information on sibling planning in adoption.

V. If the child is to be placed in an out-of-state adoptive placement, refer to section 9 C for more information on procedure.
VI. If the child is to be placed in an out-of-country placement, refer to chapter 9, section 7 and chapter V, section 5 B.

VII. If a relative caregiver or current caretaker is the apparent adoptive preference, follow the procedures outlined in sections 5 and 7 of this chapter.

VIII. When recruiting general applicant adoptive families for their child, refer to sections 5 through 7 for detailed procedures.

IX. Work toward timely placement of children into an adoptive placement when approval for termination of parental rights has been granted.

X. Determine if a goodbye visit with birth parents is appropriate. Refer to section 4 C for more information about goodbye visits.

XI. Document in the case plan all the steps taken to complete the adoptive process.

The supervisor's role

I. Provide ongoing support and guidance as the caseworker works with the parent and the Legal Assistance Program.

II. Periodically review the caseworker’s work to be certain that an adoption case is progressing in a timely manner toward finalization.

III. Advise the caseworker on the branch procedure for preparing a legal assistance referral.

IV. Review Part B of the 0439 packet for completeness, sign the 0439, and ensure it is sent to the Adoption Services Unit.

V. Review and sign the CF 0424, Legal Assistance Referral.

VI. Review Part C of the 0439 packet for completeness and ensure it is sent to the AAG or DDA at the same time Part B is sent to the Adoption Services Unit.

VII. Review and approve the CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary, when adequate detail is provided.

VIII. If a move from the current placement is necessary before selection of an adoptive placement can be made, provide guidance and support to the caseworker in making the decision to move the child.

IX. When in the children’s best interests, approve the worker’s request to schedule a sibling separation staffing at Permanency/Adoption Council Committee to seek approval to separate siblings who are on the adoption track.

As the date for the termination of parental rights trial approaches

The termination of parental rights hearing is the culmination of months of work and a pivotal point in the child’s life. The caseworker has numerous tasks to accomplish before, during, and after the termination of parental rights hearing. The caseworker continues to offer the parents services until the termination of parental rights hearing. At the same time, the caseworker works collaboratively with the legal assistance attorney to prepare for the termination of parental rights hearing. The caseworker also is an essential link between the child, the substitute caregiver, and the events that are quickly unfolding during a termination of parental rights hearing. All of the agency’s efforts are designed to result in a permanent and safe future for the child.

Work with the legal assistance attorney prior to a termination of parental rights court hearing

The documentation used to support a termination of parental rights petition begins when a child is placed in out-of-home care. The written record, beginning on the first day of the child’s placement, is part of the case file that is presented at a termination of parental rights court hearing. The caseworker’s efforts to clearly document all of the events in the case as they occur, both positive and negative, gives the legal assistance attorney the information they need to present a reasonable argument for termination of parental rights.

Procedure

I. Prior to the termination of parental rights hearing:
   A. Review the case record and become familiar with the important events in the case life. This is particularly important when the current caseworker is not the original caseworker and may not have first hand information about certain critical events.
   B. Talk to other department staff that have had a role in the case to get a complete picture of all the work that has been done on the case.

II. Prepare notes or a written outline of the key events in the case life to help organize thinking and keep events in proper order. Chronologies can be a helpful tool. These notes can be used as an aid during the testimony.

III. Discuss the testimony with the legal assistance attorney or other assigned legal staff. The legal assistance staff assist in preparation for both direct examination by the legal assistance attorney and cross-examination from the other attorneys.

IV. Review Appendix 5.03, How to be a Good Witness, and 5.04, Preparing for Court Testimony, prior to going on the witness stand. Clarify any questions about the testimony with the legal assistance attorney or other assigned legal staff in advance of the hearing.

V. Review the witness list with the legal assistance attorney or other assigned legal staff. The legal assistance attorney determines who will arrange witness interviews and when they will occur. Prepare an interview schedule if asked to do so by the legal assistance attorney. Be present when witnesses are interviewed when asked.

VI. Respond to requests for assistance from the legal assistance attorney to make certain all of the applicable evidence is available for the trial court presentation.
Work with the substitute caregiver and the child prior to the termination of parental rights court hearing

The termination of parental rights hearing is a pivotal point in the child’s life and can be a difficult time for the substitute caregiver. Children’s behavior may very well deteriorate and be a concern to the substitute caregiver. The caseworker should communicate regularly with the substitute caregiver and the child, if aware of the event, as the termination of parental rights court hearing approaches.

VII. Prior to the termination hearing:

A. Meet with the substitute caregivers to keep them fully informed on the progress toward a termination of parental rights hearing and adoption planning. Explain the process and let the caregiver know what to anticipate. Increase the frequency of visits with the substitute caregiver when necessary.

B. Help the caregiver understand what may be going on for the child. If additional resources are needed to support the placement, find and connect the resource to the substitute caregiver. Involve the certifier or adoption worker in this process.

C. Meet with the children to help process the events that are leading up to a termination of parental rights hearing. Attempt to answer their questions and listen to their concerns. Consider arranging additional supportive services for the children if needed.

D. If a child will be a witness at a termination of parental rights hearing, help prepare the child for the courtroom experience after consulting with the legal assistance attorney. If the child has a therapist, consider involving the therapist in this process.

Responsibilities during a termination of parental rights court hearing

Once the termination of parental rights hearing begins, the caseworker supports the legal assistance attorney as they present the case for termination.

Procedure

I. Sit at the prosecution table and assist the legal assistance attorney when requested. Be prepared to respond to questions or gather additional information as the hearing progresses.

II. Testify when required.

Responsibilities if a parent’s rights are terminated

If the trial court grants the termination of parental rights and no appeal has been filed within the legal time frame, move to finalize the permanency plan established for the child.

Procedure

I. Meet with the child’s substitute caregiver or legal risk adoptive parents and the child to share the decision and respond to questions about the future.

II. Share information with other significant persons in the child’s life. If the child is in counseling, inform the treatment provider so they will be prepared for the child’s reaction to this information.

Responsibilities if the termination of parental rights is denied

If the trial court denies a termination of parental rights, the department may elect to file an appeal. A decision to file an appeal can only be implemented with the approval of the Department of Human Services assistant director for CAF. If a decision is made not to appeal, the caseworker and supervisor meet to discuss options, including taking steps to reunify the child with a parent or implementing a permanent plan other than adoption.

Procedure

I. The legal assistance attorney notifies the caseworker and the legal assistance specialist upon verbal or written notice of a denial of a termination of parental rights petition.

II. The caseworker and their supervisor, the legal assistance attorney and the legal assistance specialist schedule a staffing to discuss the denial and whether to request an appellate staffing. This staffing should include the child welfare program manager.

III. If a decision is made to request an appellate staffing and the child welfare program manager agrees, the worker prepares a written request for signature of the child welfare program manager. This is submitted to the legal assistance specialist and the Adoption Service Unit’s assistant manager for legal services. The legal assistance attorney also sends a memo/letter outlining the main issues of the case and denial of the termination of parental rights in addition to the court’s written opinion and judgment when available.

IV. The assistant manager for legal services arranges a staffing that includes the worker, the supervisor, the child welfare program manager if available, and required Central Office staff to determine if an appeal is appropriate.

V. The assistant director – CAF makes the final decision on whether to file an appeal. The adoption program manager or designee notifies everyone of the final decision. The assigned appellate AAG files a notice of appeal upon receiving approval to proceed.

Appeal of a termination of parental rights order

I. When one of the parties files an appeal of a termination of parental rights judgment, the caseworker receives a “Case on Appeal-Status Update” memo from the Adoption Services Unit. Refer to Appendix 5.05 for a sample memo. This memo informs the caseworker of an appeal and the status of the appeal at each step along the way.

   A. Continue to provide case management and case supervision.

   B. Contact the legal assistance specialist if there are any questions about the appeal process.

   C. Share the information with the substitute caregivers or the legal risk adoptive family and answer their questions. Keep the substitute caregiver or the adoptive family up to date on the progress of the appeal. Consider supports that may be helpful to the substitute caregiver or adoptive family.

   D. Inform the adoption worker of the appeal. If an adoption worker is providing supervision for a legal risk adoptive placement, they are responsible for informing the adoptive family of the appeal and answering their questions.
The supervisor’s role

I. Prior to a termination of parental rights hearing, meet with the caseworker to confirm they are adequately prepared to represent the department’s case in court. Contact the legal assistance attorney when there are concerns.

II. If the trial court denies the termination of parental rights, promptly meet with the caseworker, the legal assistance specialist and the legal assistance attorney to determine if a request to file an appeal is advisable. If the department ultimately decides to appeal the decision, the notice of appeal must be filed within 30 days of the entered judgment. Several staffings need to occur and authorization by several ODHS management officials need to be given before notice of appeal can be filed.

III. If a decision is made to request an appeal of the denial of a termination of parental rights order, attend all subsequent staffings, until the assistant director – CAF makes a final decision on an appeal.

IV. If the trial court denies the termination of parental rights, and no appeal is filed, meet with the caseworker to develop and implement an appropriate alternative permanency plan for the child or plan steps to safely reunify the child with a parent.

Use of Central Office ‘Evaluation and Witness Cost Budget’

The Central Office Adoption Services Unit has funds available to: 1) Purchase various evaluations and assessments of parents in the Legal Assistance Program to aid in case planning or to provide evidentiary information for termination of parental rights litigation and 2) to provide payment for specified termination of parental rights trial/witness costs where not covered by a juvenile court. Where needed to further prepare for a termination of parental rights case, the caseworker, with the approval of the legal assistance specialist, can use these funds to access services not available through other funding sources.

Evaluations and assessments

Procedure

I. Confirm with the branch medical specialist whether the parent is covered by other insurance prior to requesting evaluation funds from the Adoption Services Unit. If the parent has other insurance, work with the parent and the parent’s insurance company to arrange payment for the service.

II. When the caseworker and Legal Assistance Program staff agree additional evaluations or assessments are needed to determine if a parent is capable of safely caring for their child, encumber the funds by sending an e-mail request to the Adoption Services Unit.

   A. The Adoption Services Unit responds with an e-mail form (see Appendix 5.06) requesting the following information:
      1. Caseworker’s name.
      2. Supervisor’s name.
      3. Branch number.
      4. Case name.
      5. Case number.
      6. Name of client to be evaluated with their person letter.
      7. Names of children in care with their person letters.
      8. Type of evaluation
      9. Name of doctor and address.

   B. Complete the form and return it to the Adoption Services Unit.

III. When Adoption Services Unit evaluation funds are used, the payment rate for the evaluation is determined by the Division of Medical Assistance Programs (DMAP) and cannot be negotiated.

IV. Confirm that the psychologist is licensed by the State Board of Psychological Examiners prior to arranging a psychological evaluation with a provider.

V. Schedule the evaluation after receipt of the memo from the Adoption Services Unit confirming the encumbrance of funds to pay for the evaluation.

VI. After the evaluation has been completed, and upon receipt of the bill, complete Form 294 P, “Administrative Expense Voucher – Permanency Planning,” have it signed by the supervisor and send the completed 294 P, with the original billing statement from the provider attached, to the Adoption Services Unit.

Trial costs and witness fees

There are two funding sources available for caseworkers to cover trial costs and witness fees. Prior to a case being accepted for termination of parental rights, the Office of Safety and Permanency for Children manages all dependency fact finding and other legal proceedings and trial and witness expenses. Once a case is accepted for termination of parental rights, the Legal Assistance Program manages trial and witness expenses. When the Legal Assistance Program handles payment, the witness will receive a subpoena from the legal assistance attorney along with a “Witness Fee and Mileage Statement” form.

Procedure

I. After a case is accepted for termination of parental rights, clarify with the legal assistance specialist and the legal assistance attorney which trial costs and witness fees can be paid by the Legal Assistance Program. Discuss this at the initial legal assistance staffing and any subsequent legal assistance staffings, where the issue of witness fees and trial costs come up.

II. Process witness payments for:

A. In-state lay witness costs for per diem, when qualified by the legal assistance attorney prior to their testimony.

B. Out-of-state lay witness costs for travel and for per diem. The caseworker is also responsible, in coordination with the Adoption Services Unit and the legal assistance attorney, for making travel arrangements for these witnesses. Contact the management assistant in the Adoption Services Unit for more information.

C. Out-of-state expert witness travel and costs for per diem. The caseworker is responsible for making travel arrangements.

III. When processing witness expenses, apply the following rules:

A. Automobile travel and per diem costs are reimbursed at the same rate as paid to state employees for travel.

B. Former ODHS employees who will be testifying as to their past work with a client must request their reimbursement by completing CF 0228, Travel Expense form. The district child welfare manager for the branch conducting the termination of parental rights trial and the former employee must sign the travel expense form.

C. All other witnesses submit their request for reimbursement of expenses in writing and should include the following:

1. Termination of parental rights client name, date(s) present for trial, and the ODHS branch responsible for the trial.

2. List the number of meals and nights of lodging. The written request must be signed by the witness and include an address where the reimbursement check is to be sent.

D. Lay witnesses (those not “qualified” by the legal assistance attorney as an “expert” prior to their testimony) cannot be paid or reimbursed for their time. They will need to apply to the court for payment of witness fees.

IV. Upon receipt of the “Witness Fee and Mileage Statement” from a witness, review for accuracy and note approval by initialing the statement. Approval indicates the person appeared for the trial and the dates billed for are consistent with the witness’ appearance in court.

V. Complete a CF 0228, “Travel Expense Form,” and forward both forms to the legal assistance attorney for approval. The legal assistance attorney sends the bill to the Adoption Services Unit for payment.

The supervisor’s role

I. Advise the caseworker on how to access this budget and make payments using these funds.

II. Sign the 294 P, Permanency Planning Expense Voucher, verifying an evaluation or assessment has been satisfactorily completed.

III. Sign the travel expense form for former employees who have served as a witness in a termination of parental rights trial.

B. Freeing a Child for Adoption through Voluntary Relinquishment

A voluntary relinquishment for the purpose of adoption can be accepted by ODHS or a private licensed adoption agency. The caseworker works with the parent to determine what is the best plan for the parent and their child. If there has been no previous approval for filing a petition to terminate the parent’s rights, the legal assistance attorney is not involved in this process. If, however, approval for TPR has been granted, the legal assistance attorney and legal assistance specialist are both involved in this process. Reasonable efforts to place the child for adoption in a timely manner must be consistently made once the branch has changed the plan to adoption.

Relinquishment for adoption when ODHS has custody

Procedure

I. Determine, in consultation with the supervisor, if adoption is the appropriate plan for the child when a birth parent, with a child in ODHS custody, wants to consider relinquishment of the child for adoption.

II. If a parent wishes to relinquish:
   A. Provide written notification to the parent’s attorney of their client’s stated interest and document in the CW electronic data system that notification was provided.
   B. Refer the parent to their attorney regarding legal advice they may want regarding their interest in relinquishing.
   C. Write a follow up letter to the parent, indicating that the parent wishes to relinquish their rights for the purpose of adoption. Request the parent contact you immediately if that is not accurate.

III. Review the implications of this decision with the birth parent and make certain this decision is voluntary.

IV. If the birth parent makes this decision prior to a legal assistance staffing, the decision to proceed is made by branch staff in consultation with the legal assistance specialist.
   A. Contact the legal assistance specialist to discuss relinquishment, including:
      1. Whether there are likely adoptive resources for the child.
      2. All parents with legal standing been addressed.
      3. Parents’ competency to understand relinquishment.
      4. ICWA status.

V. Consult with the legal assistance attorney and the legal assistance specialist before accepting a voluntary relinquishment when a decision has already been made to proceed with termination of parental rights.

VI. If questions about a parent’s ability to understand relinquishment and its implications arise, contact the legal assistance specialist (and legal assistance attorney if one is assigned) prior to taking relinquishments.

Request for release and surrender agreement and certificate of irrevocability and waiver documents

Procedure
I. Compile all of the documents in part A of the Legal Assistance Checklist, CF 0439, and forward the completed packet of information to the supervisor for review when all parties agree that relinquishment is appropriate.

II. Part A of the CF 0439 consists of:
   A. CF 0439 Legal Assistance Checklist.
   B. CF 0422 Adoption Planning Referral (do not separate the NCR form).
      1. Indicate if documents are needed in a language other than English.
      2. List name of guardian ad litem, if the parent has one.
      3. List any other names known for the parent.
   C. CF 0418 Father(s) Questionnaire.
   D. CF 0423 Adoptive Placement Needs.
   E. The child’s original birth certificate.
   F. Original CF 1270 Verification of ICWA Eligibility or memo explaining efforts to obtain this from each biological parent with legal standing.
   G. Original ICWA correspondence from the tribe or “Return Receipt Requested” signed by a tribal representative with a copy of the letter sent by the department.

III. After receiving e-mail verification of receipt of the Release and Surrender Agreement and Certificate of Irrevocability and Waiver from the Adoption Services Unit, save each document on the “K” drive on the computer and print two copies for future use. Refer to Appendices 5.07, 5.08, 5.09, 5.10 and 5.11 for sample documents.

IV. Immediately review each document for accuracy. If changes are necessary, notify the Adoption Services Unit of the corrections, and request revised documents.

V. Send the client’s attorney a copy of the Release and Surrender Agreement and Certificate of Waiver prior to obtaining a parent signature. Write “sample copy” on each of the documents sent to the parent’s attorney.

Parental signature on the release and surrender and certificate of waiver

Procedure

I. Carefully review the Release and Surrender Agreement and Certificate of Irrevocability and Waiver documents with the parent. If the parent has an attorney, request the attorney be present when a parent is signing.

II. Determine that the parent understands what irrevocability means, as written in the “Certificate of Irrevocability and Waiver” document.

III. Contact the legal assistance specialist before allowing the client to sign the documents when there is any question of the parent’s ability to comprehend the nature of the documents they are signing.

IV. Fill in the name of the state and county where the documents are signed and have the parent sign both documents in front of a notary public and at least one, and preferably two, witnesses, when comfortable the parent understands the documents they are about to sign. The caseworker can serve as one of the witnesses.
V. Ensure the parent signs the documents using the same name (or one of the names) listed in the body of the documents when witnesses are present. If changes in signature are necessary, the parent makes the corrections and initials the change.

VI. Make a photocopy of both the Release and Surrender Agreement and Certificate of Irrevocability and give the copies to the parent.

VII. If another office is assisting with obtaining the parent’s signature, be present by phone to answer questions and to ask that accuracy be double-checked while all people are still present.

When the Indian Child Welfare Act applies to the case

Procedure

I. Consult with the supervisor and legal assistance specialist to confirm that adoption is the appropriate plan for the child prior to accepting a relinquishment from the birth parent of an Indian child.

II. Inform the parent that ODHS is required to give preference to placing the child with a member of the child’s extended family, other members of the Indian child’s tribe or other Indian families. There are two exceptions to this rule.
   A. The child’s tribe can establish a different order of preference for adoptive placement.
   B. The court can also make a determination of good cause to change the placement preference.

III. Request a “Certificate of Judge” document from the Adoption Services Unit in addition to a Release and Surrender Agreement and Certificate of Waiver.

IV. Schedule a court hearing and have the parent sign the Release and Surrender Agreement and the Certificate of Waiver documents in court.

V. After the birth parent has signed both documents, the judge signs a “Certificate of Judge” verifying that the documents were explained to and understood by the parent.

VI. After the court hearing, make a photocopy of all three documents for the parent.

Once the parent signs a release and surrender and certificate of irrevocability and waiver

Procedure

I. Inform the birth parent of the Public Health Division Form 45-29, Contact Preference Form. A copy of the 45-29 is available at the following web site:
   http://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/ph/chs/docs/contact.pdf

II. Provide the parent a copy of the Voluntary Adoption Registry/ Assisted Search Program information, and request that the parent sign an Adoption Registry Notification Form. Refer to Appendices 5.12, 5.13, and 5.14.

III. If the parent refuses to sign the adoption registry notification form, prepare and sign a statement of verification (SOV), establishing the date the parent was given a copy of the Voluntary Adoption Registry/Assisted Search Program information. Refer to Appendix 5.15 for a sample SOV.

IV. Send the signed adoption registry notification form or statement of verification to the Adoption Services Unit.

V. Obtain as much medical information as possible from the parent when the CF 246, Genetic and Medical History of Child and Biological Family has not already been completed or if it is not thorough.

VI. Ask the parent if they have any additional information that will help complete the CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary.

VII. Request from the parent any pictures, records, letters, or other information that they want the child to have for the Life Story Book. Refer to section 4 of this chapter and Appendix 5.20 (Sample Goodbye Letter from Parent) for more information about this topic.

VIII. If not already discussed, consider the appropriateness of a goodbye visit between the child and parent. Refer to section 4 C of this chapter for more information about the goodbye visit.

Routing and storage of signed documents

Procedure

I. Send one original copy the Release and Surrender Agreement and Certificate of Irrevocability and Waiver to the Central Office Adoptions Services Unit immediately after they are signed.

II. Send an original copy of the Certificate of Judge to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit when the child is an Indian child.

III. Send one original copy to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit and file a court certified copy in the child’s case record when the Release and Surrender Agreement and Certificate of Irrevocability and Waiver are taken in court.

IV. File an original set of the signed documents in the legal section of the child’s case record.

V. Notify the legal assistance attorney, if one is assigned, that the relinquishment has occurred. Provide any requested verification to the attorney.

Submission of completed adoption paperwork

In order to achieve permanency for the child, specific paperwork must be submitted to Central Office Adoption Services Unit. The following documents are required for designation of the adoptive placement. There are tight timelines associated with their submission. Additional items that are required for designation of a legal risk or adoptive placement and for finalization of the adoption can be found in upcoming sections of this chapter. Refer to section 10 for designation and section 13 for finalization.

Procedure

I. Within 30 days from the date the relinquishment documents are signed, submit the completed CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary, to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit, keeping a copy for the branch file.

II. Within 30 days from the date the relinquishment documents are signed, submit the CF 246, Genetic and Medical History of Child and Biological Family, to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit, keeping a copy for the branch file.

Revocation of a release and surrender document

Procedure

I. Contact the legal assistance specialist when a birth parent makes a verbal or written request to withdraw their Release and Surrender Agreement within the timelines described in their Certificate of Irrevocability and Waiver.

II. Accept a verbal revocation of the Release and Surrender Agreement, and provide the parent an opportunity to revoke in writing.

III. Have the parent sign all three copies of Revocation of Consent form after receiving them from the Adoption Services Unit.

IV. Keep one copy of the Revocation of Consent for the parent’s case file and return the other two originals to the Adoption Services Unit after the Revocation of Consent has been signed.

V. Inform the client’s attorney, and others who have a need to know, that the parent has made the decision to revoke the Release and Surrender Agreement.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Review the part A of the Legal Assistance Checklist for completeness, sign the CF 0439, and ensure the packet is sent to the Adoption Services Unit. The CF 0439 packet constitutes a request for a Release and Surrender Agreement and Certificate of Irrevocability and Waiver documents.

II. Provide support and guidance for the caseworker, as they work with a parent considering adoption as a plan for their child.

III. Review with the caseworker the requirements of the Indian Child Welfare Act to make certain the legal rights of the child and the tribe are addressed when birth parents of an Indian child want to consider adoption.

IV. Review all of the information sent into the Adoption Services Unit and sign the CF 0439 indicating paperwork is complete.

V. Follow-up with the caseworker to make certain that the CF 0421 and CF 246 are sent to the Adoption Services Unit within 30 days of a parent signing a Release and Surrender Agreement.

VI. Follow-up with the caseworker to make certain that other documents needed for designating the adoptive placement are provided to Central Office Adoption Services Unit in a timely manner.

C. Freeing a Child for Adoption through Probate Guardianship for a Child with No Living Parents

When a child has no living parent or guardian, the Department of Human Services has the legal authority to establish probate guardianship for the purpose of consenting to adoption. When adoption is the approved plan for a child, and no relative has filed a petition to establish guardianship, the department can file a petition to seek probate guardianship. Only the Department of Justice is authorized to file probate guardianship petitions on behalf of the Department of Human Services.

Determination that probate guardianship, for the purpose of consenting to adoption, is the appropriate plan for a child

Procedure

I. Prior to staffing a case with the Legal Assistance Program for the purpose of establishing probate guardianship and adoption:
   A. Confirm that the child’s legally recognized parents have been identified and that supporting documentation used to make this determination is in the case file.
   B. Determine that all legally recognized parents are deceased and that a copy of the death certificate for each parent is in the case file.
   C. Determine that the CF 0447, “Relative Information,” and CF 448, “Permanency Commitment/Waiver,” are in the case record and that a diligent relative search was completed.
   D. Contact all the relatives identified in the diligent search, and other interested parties, to discuss their interest in adoption or guardianship of the child. If a relative is not interested in establishing guardianship, determine their position on the department pursuing probate guardianship for the purpose of consenting to adoption.
   E. Document in FACIS efforts to contact extended family and other interested parties.

Determination that adoption is the best plan for the child

Procedure

I. Prior to staffing a case with the Legal Assistance Program for the purpose of establishing probate guardianship and adoption, schedule a staffing with the supervisor to determine whether adoption is appropriate for the child. Refer to section 2 A of this chapter, Freeing a Child for Adoption Through Termination of Parental Rights, for information about determining the appropriateness of adoption as a permanent plan.

II. Schedule a legal assistance staffing once the supervisor and the legal assistance specialist agree that probate guardianship for the purpose of consenting to adoption should be considered.

What to bring to an initial legal assistance staffing for probate guardianship

Procedure
I. Bring the following items to the initial legal assistance staffing:
   A. A completed CF 31, “Legal Assistance Staffing Form.”
   B. The entire case file; with filing up to date.
   C. Specific items from the case file that will be reviewed at the legal assistance staffing:
      1. Original petition.
      2. Wardship orders.
      4. Father’s Questionnaire (if available).
      5. Death certificates for both parents.
      6. Evidence that a diligent search for relatives has been completed.
      7. ICWA completed on all parents (legal or with legal standing).
      8. Psychological evaluations on the child.
      9. Service/treatment reports for the child.

Initial staffing with legal assistance staff

Procedure

I. Be prepared to discuss:
   A. Information required on the Probate Guardianship Worksheet-Appendix 5.16.
   B. Whether adoption is the appropriate plan for this child and why.
   C. The reason the child came into care.
   D. The evidence of legally recognized status for both parents.
   E. Whether the Indian Child Welfare Act applies.
   F. The relatives identified through a diligent search and the relatives’ positions with respect to adoption.
   G. What adoptive resources, other than relatives, are identified for the child.

II. If appropriate, the child is accepted for legal assistance and a CF 0355 is completed. The caseworker changes the plan to “Achieve Adoption” in the IIS system.

III. If the case is not ready to pursue probate guardianship, the caseworker will be given specific direction and tasks to complete to move the child toward permanency.

Initial activities after receiving approval to pursue probate guardianship for the purpose of consenting to adoption

Procedure

I. Within the first 30 days of receiving approval to pursue probate guardianship:
   A. Prepare a probate guardianship referral packet to send to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit. Information to include in the referral packet:
Chapter 6 • Section 2: Freeing a Child for Adoption

1. Sections B and C (substitute in section C the Probate Guardianship Worksheet- Appendix 5.16-for the Legal Assistance Referral) of the CF 0439, Legal Assistance Checklist.

2. CF 0422 Adoption Planning Referral (NCR form, do not separate copies).

3. CF 0418 Father(s) questionnaire.

5. Original birth certificate.

6. Original CF 1270 Verification of ICWA eligibility or memo explaining efforts to obtain form on each legally recognized parent.

7. Original ICWA correspondence letter from the tribe or “Return Receipt Requested” card with copy of letter sent to tribe by the department.

8. Copy of the death certificate (mother and/or legally recognized father).

9. List of persons most closely related to child as defined by probate guardianship in ORS 125.060 and 125.065.

II. Prepare a packet of information for the legal assistance attorney.

   The legal assistance attorney’s packet includes:

   A. Probate Guardianship Worksheet. Refer to Appendix 5.16.

   B. CF 0423, Adoptive Placement Needs.

   C. The child’s birth certificate.

III. Send the probate guardianship referral packet and the legal assistance attorney’s packet to the supervisor for review.

IV. Submit paperwork to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit and the assigned assistant attorney general.

V. The legal assistance attorney begins court work to establish probate guardianship once they receive the “Probate Guardianship Worksheet” from the branch and the legal assistance specialist authorizes services.

VI. Within the first 60 days of receiving approval to pursue probate guardianship, submit to Central Office Adoption Services Unit the 0421, Adoption Child Summary and the 246, Genetic and Medical History of Child and Biological Family forms.

The supervisor’s role

I. Consult with the caseworker, prior to a referral to the legal assistance program, to determine the child’s suitability for adoption and appropriateness for probate guardianship.

II. Attend the initial and all subsequent legal assistance staffings.

III. Assist the caseworker to determine who will be responsible for completing the probate guardianship referral once the child has been accepted into the Legal Assistance Program.

IV. Review the probate guardianship referral packet for completeness and sign the CF 0439.
V. Review the material in the legal assistance attorney’s referral packet for completeness.

VI. Ensure that the probate guardianship referral packet is sent to the Adoption Services Unit and that the legal assistance attorney’s referral packet is sent to the department of Justice.

Section 3: Sibling adoption planning
Sibling adoption planning

This procedure describes case planning responsibility to maintain and support lifelong sibling relationships for a child in the legal custody of the department whose permanency plan is adoption. The first priorities for placement of a child in the legal custody of the department are placement with current caretakers and relatives, and placing siblings together. See OAR 413-110-0100 to 0150.

The term “sibling” is defined as one of two or more children or young adults related:

I. By blood or adoption through a common legal parent even if the legal relationship has been severed through termination or relinquishment;

II. Through the marriage of the children’s or young adults’ legal or biological parents; or

III. Through a legal or biological parent who is the registered domestic partner of the legal or biological parent of the children or young adults.

A child’s sibling’s adoptive family is, by definition, a relative family even if the sibling’s adoptive family does not otherwise meet the relative criteria. This type of relative is within the first order of preference for adoption.

When siblings are separated in foster care

Procedure

When siblings have been separated in foster care, the caseworker creates a plan to unite them in foster care or adoptive placement as soon as possible and when it is best to do so. The worker takes the following steps:

I. Staff with the supervisor to determine if it is in the children’s best interest to be united in their temporary and/or permanent families.

II. If appropriate for the child and case plan, allow a child to join a sibling placed in an adoptive home for foster care at the time of the child’s placement in foster care. Make sure the family understands the differences between a foster placement and an adoptive placement.

III. Ensure the children have the opportunity to initiate and continue contact if the children cannot be immediately placed together.
IV. Discuss with the foster parents that sibling separation is temporary when siblings are separated in care. Inform the foster parents that the department will work to reunite separated siblings when it is in the best interests of the children. The caseworker must document the visitation plan for separated siblings in the electronic case file.

V. Discuss with the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC) member that sibling separation is temporary when siblings are separated in care.

Enhancing sibling relationships

When adoption is the plan for a child or siblings, and they have one or more siblings for whom adoption is not the primary plan, the caseworker for each child will initiate and maintain sibling relationships when it is in the children’s best interest to do so. Siblings who are simultaneously on the adoption track and who do not have a selected adoptive family may also benefit from activities, including therapy, therapeutic supervised visits and coordination of foster parents, to enhance their relationships and prevent future separation in adoptive placement.

Consideration of adoptive families of siblings as resources

Procedure

I. When a caseworker is planning adoption for a child and learns the child has a sibling in a finalized adoptive family, the worker determines whether the sibling’s adoptive family is interested in being considered as a resource for the child. The worker must follow OAR 413-120-0700 to 0760, Identification and Consideration of Potential Adoptive Resources, to determine which families to consider. If there are multiple families interested in being considered, the worker follows the OAR to determine which prospective resource or families to refer for adoption home studies.

II. Refer to the procedure manual Chapter 6, Section 5, Subsection B, Relative families, for more information about how to proceed with a sibling’s adoptive family.

Placing siblings together and requesting permission to separate siblings for adoption

I. Children’s separation from siblings in foster care is considered temporary. It is generally in their best interests to be placed together in a family for adoption.

II. Sibling placement for children who are simultaneously available for adoption and for whom no adoption selection decision has been made are placed, except when the worker obtains permission to separate siblings through the Permanency Committee process. The caseworker must have compelling reasons to request permission to separate siblings who are simultaneously in need of an adoptive family.

Procedure

When the caseworker considers it is in the children’s best interests to separate siblings to live in different adoptive families, the worker must discuss this with the supervisor and:

I. Consider the relevant information for each child to determine whether it is in their best interest to be separated from his or her siblings. Information may include:

A. Significant family data including ethnic and cultural background;
B. Progress on the diligent relative search;
C. Attachment figures and nature of attachments;
D. Medical conditions;
E. Psychological and developmental evaluations;
F. Treatment needs;
G. Behavior;
H. Age;
I. Relationships of the siblings with each other;
J. Input from any person with significant information about each child. For example, therapist, attorney, tribal representative, CASA, representative of the RCWAC and substitute caregiver; and
K. The results of any previous recruitment efforts for general-applicant families interested in adopting the siblings together.

II. Note in OR-Kids the discussion of the caseworker and supervisor about sibling planning.

III. A Permanency Committee process and decision by the Child Welfare program manager (CWPM) or designee is required if the caseworker and supervisor concur that separation of one or more siblings for adoption is in the best interests of the children. Follow the local office protocol to request a Permanency Committee. The Permanency Committee process is discussed in greater length in “Chapter V, Section 5, Subsection D, Considering a general applicant adoptive family alone due to the child’s relationship with the potential resource.” This section highlights the issues relevant to sibling separation and does not address all steps caseworkers take to attend a Permanency Committee.

IV. If a sibling group is to be placed in an adoptive family together, but they are in different foster homes and one or more child’s nonrelative foster parent meets the criteria as a current caretaker, the current caretaker meets the criteria for the entire sibling group.

Decision-making bodies and sibling planning

I. The Permanency Committee consists of field management staff, permanency and adoption staff, and community partners. A committee hears the information and makes recommendations and the Child Welfare program manager or designee makes some permanency decisions, including sibling planning for adoption.

II. The Permanency Committee process considers the following for sibling decisions for each child under consideration:

A. The existence of each child’s significant emotional ties to each other;

B. The current and lifelong needs of each child for:
   1. Physical and emotional safety;
   2. Ability to develop and maintain current and lifelong connections with the child’s family;
3. Continuity and familiarity;
4. Appropriate educational, developmental, emotional and physical support;
5. Stability and permanency; and
6. Maintaining his or her identity, cultural, ethnic, religious and spiritual heritage.

Caseworker responsibilities to request a sibling planning consideration through a Permanency Committee

These steps may be somewhat different in each office based on different local and district office resources.

Procedure

I. Contact the local or district office staff member assigned to schedule Permanency Committees. Request a committee for a sibling planning decision related to adoptive placement. Include in the request the children’s names and dates of birth. Include background information about the case and briefly state the reasons for the request that the siblings be separated.

II. Provide copies of the pertinent information to the local or district office person assigned to distribute the materials to those who receive Permanency Committee information packets. Ask the local or district contact person when the material should be provided for distribution. Provide the following documentation for the Permanency Committee packets as applicable:
   A. Brief explanation of request;
   B. Psychological and therapy reports on the children being considered;
   C. Sibling interaction reports on the children;
   D. Attachment assessment reports on the child or siblings and the referral letter to the assessing professional;
   E. Pertinent medical and educational information about the children’s needs;
   F. Child Summary, if completed; and
   G. Other staffing reports or documents that have a bearing on the Permanency Committee process.

III. Invite the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and member of RCWAC to the meeting, as applicable. These individuals may:
   A. Present information about the children for whom they are responsible;
   B. Stay through the entire committee as members or observers at their own discretion, or
   C. Choose not to participate.

IV. Invite foster parents, relatives with relevant information and other appropriate community partners, such as therapists and teachers. Notify these guests of:
   A. The meeting date, time and place;
   B. Purpose and process of the meeting. They are invited to provide relevant information about the children and their special needs, enabling the committee members to make informed recommendations and the CWPM or designee to make an informed decision about separation of the siblings for adoption; and

C. Need to be excused after the child presentation portion of the meeting.

V. Invite previous caseworkers if they are able to provide relevant information on complex cases.

VI. Notify the facilitator who will be attending the committee meeting.

Caseworker responsibilities at the Permanency Committee when presenting a family for sibling planning

Procedure

I. Be prepared to provide a 15–30 minute presentation at the beginning of the committee meeting to summarize what is being requested of the committee, updates regarding the children, and the caseworker’s professional perspective.

II. Be knowledgeable about the case. Prepare to discuss the information described in the subsection above called “Placing siblings together and requesting permission to separate siblings for adoption.”

III. Notify involved parties of the committee decision.

Documentation of the Permanency Committee

The Permanency Committee form 270 is used for documentation when considering sibling planning. The form is filled out by the committee facilitator and the CWPM or designee. The facilitator will ensure the decision, along with who was on the committee and others in attendance, will be included in the information.

No appeal process with a Permanency Committee process sibling planning decision

I. When a Permanency Committee process is held for sibling planning and the CWPM or designee has reached a decision, there is no review process for reconsideration of the agency’s decision.

II. A person with a complaint about the outcome may follow the local Child Welfare field office chain of command, starting with the child’s caseworker’s supervisor, then CWPM, then district manager or designee. See Complaint Review, I-A.5.1 for more information about standards and procedures for reviewing and resolving complaints about Child Welfare at this link.

Cases when a Permanency Committee for sibling planning is not required

A caseworker is not required to request a Permanency Committee for sibling planning when:

I. The worker and supervisor think that it is not in the children’s best interests to be separated for adoption.

II. An adoptive placement decision has already been made for one or more siblings, and the agency is planning to have the remaining siblings adopted by the same family.

III. One or more siblings have a plan for adoption together in the same family and the remaining one or more siblings have a permanency plan other than adoption.
Recruitment and ongoing contact when siblings are separated

Procedure

When a Permanency Committee process results in a decision to place siblings in separate adoptive families and recruitment for general applicant families is needed, the caseworker must:

I. Recruit and search for adoptive families who can maintain authentic contact and sense of connection between the siblings, if contact is in their best interest.

II. When recruiting general applicant families for a child who has one or more siblings who may need an adoptive placement in the future, the child’s caseworker recruits families who will consider adoption of future siblings.

III. Make recruitment materials clearly state the need for ongoing sibling contact when in the children’s best interests. Talk with the adoption workers of interested families about the need for sibling contact and the families’ abilities to maintain contact.

IV. Request, as needed, suggestions from the Permanency Committee regarding sibling contact when siblings are separated for adoptive placement. Recommendations can include, but are not limited to, safety issues, types of contact and characteristics of families to be resources for the children.

V. Include sibling information in the child’s Life Story Book if the children are separated from siblings.

The supervisor’s role

I. Help the caseworkers understand the importance of sibling relationships. Encourage thoughtful case planning to promote siblings being united in foster care and adoption.

II. Direct the caseworker to obtain appropriate assessments if there is a history of concerning behavior not previously assessed when there are questions about the nature of the children’s relationships with each other.

III. Review the sibling plan if siblings are separated in substitute care.

IV. Direct the caseworker to the Permanency Committee for sibling planning when the supervisor and child’s caseworker agree that separation should be considered based on the children’s best interests.

V. Direct the caseworker to invite to the Permanency Committee meeting the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member according to the policy: I.E.3.6 Legal Permanency, Concurrent Planning, and Use of Permanency Committee at this link.

VI. Direct the caseworker to invite foster parents, therapist, mentor and other relevant community partners who can discuss the child’s special needs.

VII. Help the caseworker determine what relevant information should be provided to the Permanency Committee verbally and in writing.

VIII. As needed, attend the committee meeting, especially when cases are highly controversial, or when the caseworker is not experienced.
IX. Encourage the caseworker to include sibling information in the child’s Life Story Book if the child is separated from siblings.

Chapter 6

Section 4: Preparing Children for Adoption
Preparing Children for Adoption

A. Preparing Children for Adoption

The child’s caseworker cannot change a child’s past, but can impact the way a child views the past, the power the past has over the child, and the child’s ability to become a member of a new family. When adoption becomes the plan for a child, prepare the child for adoption and for the process of moving and joining an adoptive family. Children may not be able to move to the next level of understanding and acceptance without caring adults who acknowledge that their questions and feelings are normal and acceptable, including those for which adults may not have answers.

Basic tenets to preparing a child for adoption

I. Thoughtful and thorough adoption preparation is important to maximizing the potential for a successful and enduring adoptive placement. Consider the following principles when working with the child:

A. The child’s self esteem can be built during the preparation process.
B. Children should have an active part in planning for adoption, appropriate to the child’s age, developmental level and resources available.
C. The child can be given a sense of participation without giving them inappropriate control over the adoption process.
D. Encourage the child to express feelings, worries, and desires.
E. Validate and normalize the child’s experiences and feelings. It maybe helpful to provide words or pictures to encourage a child to express feelings for which they do not have a vocabulary.
F. “Telling” the child about adoption and a new family does not happen just once or twice. Check with the child to see what they are hearing. Consider using play techniques, books, drawings, and handouts.

II. Design the preparation activities with the child’s developmental ability to understand in mind. The child’s understanding of adoption changes as they grow and develop, and this understanding continues evolving throughout the child’s life.

When to start preparing a child for adoption

Procedure

I. Determine when the child is ready to begin preparation for transition to adoption. Considerations for the timing of adoption preparation include:

A. Age of the child.
B. Developmental level of the child.
C. Special needs of the child.
D. Current attachment figure’s ability to contribute to preparation.
E. Available adoptive resources for the child.
F. The status of the case plan and the determination that the child may soon be freed for adoption.
II. Take the time to build a relationship with the child prior to beginning adoption preparation work, especially if the child does not know you well.

Identification and preparation of the team that will help the child transition to an adoptive placement

Procedure

I. Identify individuals who will help prepare the child for transition into an adoptive placement. Team members may include: foster parents, relatives, counselors, school staff and others.

II. Convene a meeting of team members to coordinate each person’s work with the child or meet with team members individually to discuss their role in preparing a child for adoption.

Review evaluations prior to adoption

A child may have behaviors, feelings, academic or learning problems, safety issues, social difficulties, medical problems, or developmental delays that warrant new or updated information for adoption planning. These evaluations can be used to assess a child’s readiness for adoption preparation work and the types of activities suited to the child.

Procedure

I. Review all previous evaluations to determine if any new or up-dated information is needed.

II. Review the recommendations from previous evaluations to determine if any follow up actions are necessary.

Counseling referral to help a child prepare for adoption

Procedure

I. Determine if counseling, mental health therapy, or group preparation classes will be beneficial to the child, and make a referral if appropriate.

II. When selecting a therapist for the child, discuss with the therapist the child’s need for adoption preparation work and the therapist’s experience in providing adoption preparation work before sending a child into treatment. The Oregon Post Adoption Resource Center (ORPARC) is a good source of material for therapists working with children in various stages of adoption. ORPARC can be reached at http://www.orparc.org or 1-800-764-8367.

III. Stay involved with a therapist as they work with a child preparing for adoption. Participate in the development and implementation of a treatment plan for a child in therapy.

IV. Provide the therapist with up-to-date information on the child’s behavior in placement, and any changes that are taking place while the child is in treatment.

V. Keep the therapist informed of progress on, or any changes in, the adoption plan.

Foster parent’s role in preparing a child for adoption

Foster parents may need education and support if they have not had experience in successfully transitioning a child to an adoptive home. The caseworker continues to have face-to-face contact with the child and the foster parent at a minimum of every 30 days during the period when the child is preparing for adoption.

Procedure

I. Inform the foster parent of:

   A. The adoption selection process, including their role at adoption committee.
   B. The process for preparing the child for adoption.
   C. The counselor’s role in the process.
   D. How the transition to a new family will most likely occur.

II. Discuss with the foster parent their responsibilities in the preparation process. Encourage the foster parent to:

   A. Think of themselves as part of a team that is preparing the child for adoptive placement.
   B. Talk to the child about other foster children in the home who are in the process of adoption.
   C. Read to the child books related to families and adoption.
   D. Help the child identify and manage their feelings.
   E. Talk to the caseworker and therapist about the child’s progress in preparation.
   F. Provide material to the caseworker to keep the Child’s Life Story Book up to date.
   G. Remind the child they will always care about the child, that the child is worthwhile, capable and lovable, and that they want the child to be successful in their new family and learn to love them deeply.

III. Monitor the ongoing safety plan. If the caseworker cannot confirm safety and well-being of the child or young adult in the home of the relative caregiver or foster parent, the caseworker must assess child safety immediately and determine if there is a safety threat as described in OAR 413-015-0420(1)(f) (A)(i) and (ii) http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/policy/childwelfare/manual_1/i-ab4.pdf.

If a safety threat is identified, immediately:

   A. Consult with the caseworker’s supervisor to determine any immediate protective action required to assure the child’s safety or any action required to assure the safety of the child. – AND –
   B. Contact a CPS screener and report the identified safety threat to the child.
   C. Document the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances observed in the home and any immediate protective actions in the CW electronic data system.

IV. Inform the foster parent on the progress of the adoption plan and assess the foster parent’s ability to support the child as they prepare for adoption.

V. Staff the placement with the supervisor when there are concerns about the ability of the foster parent to support the adoptive plan. Determine if the foster family needs additional support services, or if the placement is appropriate for the child.

VI. Be aware of the foster parent’s grief from the anticipated loss of the child, and the effects of the anticipated loss of the child among the other children in the home. Also ask the foster family about how the other children are anticipating the departure of the child to a new family. Evaluate whether the foster parent could benefit from additional support from other foster parents, friends, and Child Welfare staff.

Preparation of the child for child specific public recruitment

Finding the best available adoptive home for a child may require more intensive types of public recruitment. This may include newspapers, television, adoption newsletters, fliers, the Heart Gallery, or internet recruitment. Preparation of the child is important if they are developmentally able to be aware of the recruitment and if they are participating in the recruitment, such as posing for photos for the Heart Gallery. For more information, refer to Appendix 5.17 about Preparing Children for Child Specific Public Recruitment.

Procedure

I. Determine what form of public recruitment is appropriate given the child’s needs and circumstances.

II. Determine whether adverse reactions may result from public recruitment and staff as needed with the supervisor.

III. The caseworker and supervisor discuss cases in which there may be areas where a highly visible form of recruitment may not be appropriate due to the potentially negative reactions of those who know the child. For instance, older children may not want to be shown in the local paper where their peers may see them and comment. For children who are legal risk status, some parents may react negatively to seeing local newspaper recruitment. Workers and supervisors can discuss necessary limits on public recruitment, if relevant.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Provide support and guidance for the caseworker as they prepare a child for adoption.

II. Review any safety concerns regarding a child’s out-of-home placement and determine an appropriate response that assures the child’s safety.

III. If the caseworker is concerned that a foster parent is not as supportive of an adoptive plan as needed, the supervisor assists the caseworker to evaluate the placement, and if appropriate develop a plan to work with the foster parent.

IV. Staff with the caseworker whether child specific public recruitment is needed and, if so, what form of public recruitment is appropriate.
B. Life Story Books for Children

The Life Story Book is a tool to help a child understand their history from birth to their adoption in a clear and detailed record. It contains a narrative, photos, memorabilia and other information. A Life Story Book accurately preserves the child’s history so that they can accurately understand their history, why they came into foster care, and why they cannot be with their birth parents.

The child’s caseworker gathers information for the Life Story Book and it is best practice to provide a Life Story Book to a child moving into adoption. If this is not possible, the caseworker should gather the materials for the Life Story Book and provide it to the adoptive family so they can do the last steps of assembly.

Procedure

Writing the Life Story Book narrative and important messages to convey to the child

The narrative is considered to be one of the most important aspects of the Life Story Book and it distinguishes the Life Story Book from being a traditional scrap book. Give the child accurate information in the Life Story Book narrative about the child. If you do not know certain aspects of the child’s history, it is fine to say so.

I. For more information on talking with children about feelings and to coach foster parents to talk with children about feelings, see the professional article, “Enhancing Emotional Vocabulary in Young Children” (by Gail E. Joseph, Ph.D. & Phillip S. Strain, Ph.D, Center on Evidence Based Practices for Early Learning University of Colorado at Denver) at http://csefel.vanderbilt.edu/modules/module2/handout6.pdf.

Items to include and gather for the Life Story Book

In addition to the narrative, a Life Story Book should contain documents that can relate to the child what their life was like prior to adoption. These other items could include:

I. A copy of the child’s birth certificate, hospital memorabilia, and hand and foot prints that may be available.

II. Letters from significant people in the child’s life.

III. Photographs.

IV. School reports, papers, or pictures.

V. Any other items the worker believes will help tell the child’s story.

Physical aspects of the Life Story Book

Create a “book” that is strong enough to stand the tests of time. Use acid free paper when possible to preserve photos over time.

Who can help the caseworker with the Life Story Book

I. Because this is intended to tell the child’s entire life story, consider including parents and birth family in the creation of the story and even the book when appropriate. When possible, include a genogram of the family.

II. Gather documents and photos from family, foster parents and prior caseworkers.

III. Include where the child has lived, the child’s artwork, information about schooling, special awards the child has received. When the child is old enough and it is important to do so, include the child in the story writing.
Using the Life Story Book to present the child to the prospective adoptive family

Create the Life Story Book prior to committee so it can be presented to the family that is chosen for the child. When that can’t be done, provide the selected adoptive family with a packet of Life Story Book materials including the narrative so they can assemble the Life Story Book for the child.

Sharing the Life Story Book with the child

The Life Story Book should be shared with the child when it is appropriate and could assist the child transitioning into adoption.

I. The child’s therapist and foster parent should be included in the plan to share the book with the child.

II. Consult with the supervisor for direction on how to introduce the child to their life story.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Consult with the caseworker to make sure that the worker is assembling the child’s Life Story Book material when the child moves onto the adoption track. The supervisor should remind the caseworker to have the Life Story Book ready for the adoption committee.

II. With the caseworker, consider the best way to introduce the Life Story Book to the child.

III. For training purposes, consider using unit meeting time to assemble the Life Story Books

C. Goodbye Visits with Birth Parents

Procedure

I. Assess the birth parents’ ability and the child’s needs before making a decision whether a goodbye visit will help the child transition into an adoptive placement. Before arriving at a decision, discuss the pros and cons of a parental visit with all the important people concerned with the child’s welfare, including the supervisor. If the decision is to not have a goodbye visit, document in the case record why this decision was made and who was consulted prior to making this decision.

II. Arrange a final visit between the birth parent and the child if this is determined to be in the child’s best interests.

III. Meet with the foster parent to explain the advantages of a goodbye visit, Answer their questions and encourage their support.

IV. Meet with the child prior to a goodbye visit to prepare for a final contact with the birth parent. Children approaching adoption have many questions about why their birth parents cannot care for them. In an age appropriate way, help the child frame their questions and approach their feelings about a visit.

V. Meet with the birth parents prior to a goodbye visit to help them prepare. Assist the parent to understand the value of a visit, and how their participation will increase the likelihood of a successful adoptive placement for their child. If the parent is incapable or unwilling to have a face-to-face visit with their child, encourage them to prepare a goodbye letter. See sample goodbye letter in the appendix.

VI. Meet with the child and the child’s foster parent after the goodbye visit to debrief the visit. Assess the child’s response to the visit and determine if further follow-up work is necessary to help the child process the experience.

VII. If the caseworker does not conduct the goodbye visit, the caseworker coordinates with the person who will conduct the visit to prepare the child, the child’s substitute caregiver, and the parent.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Review the caseworker’s plan for a goodbye visit between a child entering adoptive care and their birth parent.

II. Review and approve a decision not to have a goodbye visit when this decision is appropriate.

D. Significant Relationship Staffing

When there is no current caretaker wishing to adopt a child, and no relatives are available to be considered as adoptive resources, recruitment is required unless there are exceptional circumstances that mitigate against recruitment. When the child has a significant relationship with an individual who wishes to adopt the child, and the caseworker and supervisor believe it is in the child’s best interest for this family alone to be considered, a significant relationship staffing must be convened.

Procedure

I. Verify that there is no relative and no current caretaker who is interested in adopting the child. A significant relationship staffing will not be conducted if there is a relative or current caretaker to be considered.

II. Along with the supervisor, determine if it would be in the child’s best interests if this resource was considered alone and that there be no other recruitment.
III. Contact the legal assistance specialist (LAS) and adoption placement specialist (APS) in Central Office’s Adoption Services Unit, and request a significant relationship staffing.

   A. Provide the following information in the request for the staffing: name and date of birth of the child; name of the family with whom the child has a significant relationship; name and location of the certifier or adoption worker, if one is connected to the family; possible dates/times that the worker (and certifier/adoption worker, if applicable) are available for the staffing.

IV. Prepare for the staffing.

   A. Read the materials that are e-mailed to the worker and be ready to discuss the topics that are listed in the reading materials.

   1. Appendix 5.23 entitled, “Significant Relationship of a Child for Whom Adoption is the Plan with a Prospective Adoptive Resource and the Child’s Eligibility for AA,” and Appendix 5.24, the similarly titled, “Staffing Sheet,” are the materials that are e-mailed to the worker.

V. Participate in the staffing by phone.

VI. After the staffing notes are emailed from the LAS or APS, print the notes and save them in the separate file of confidential adoption materials.

VII. If no further recruitment is necessary, and the person with the significant relationship is subsequently selected as the adoptive resource at an adoption committee, attach a copy of the notes to the adoption assistance application materials when submitted.

VIII. If further recruitment is necessary, refer to Section 6 on Recruitment for Children.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Meet with the caseworker to determine whether it is in the child’s best interests to forego recruitment for adoptive families and instead consider a family with a significant relationship to a child.

II. If, after discussing the situation, the decision is that recruitment is most appropriate, support the worker in their discussion with the family who wishes to adopt the child.

Section 5A: Identifying and assessing families for adoptive placement: General information for the caseworker
Identifying and assessing families for adoptive placement: General information for the caseworker

The assessment of prospective adoptive parents is essential to identify important factors for the caseworker's consideration. The adoption home study should reflect the assessment of the family and is instrumental in helping the child's caseworker gain a good understanding of the adoptive family and their ability to parent a child with special needs. The child's safety, well-being, attachment and permanency are always the primary focus when considering prospective adoptive families. This is true for all types of families: relative, foster family, family known to the child or family the child does not know.

Urgency in identifying and placing the child with the adoptive family

The caseworker is required by state and federal laws to:

I. Make reasonable efforts to identify and place the child with an adoptive family in a timely manner that is appropriate to each child's permanency and concurrent plans.

II. Discuss recruitment strategies when the child is not fully free for adoption with the Child Permanency Program's legal assistance specialist (LAS). The LAS must:
   A. Determine when recruitment may begin;
   B. Determine whether recruitment may begin for a child with extraordinary needs before the department initiates the process to free the child for adoption; and
   C. Notify the caseworker to begin recruitment efforts.

Identification of a child's potential adoptive resources (other than American Indian or Alaska Native)

When identifying potential adoptive resources for a child, the child's caseworker:

I. After discussing with their supervisor on a case-by-case basis, may consult with a birth parent to identify one to three potential adoptive resources. As long as identifying information is not shared, some details may be shared about general applicant families being considered to have birth parent input. Given that the birth parents will likely know who a relative resource is, information about a relative's home study is to be kept confidential, and details are not shared with the birth parents.

The caseworker must consult with the supervisor and maintain the following order of preference when identifying potential adoptive resources for a child (note the exception discussed below):

I. Up to three potential adoptive resources following the order of preference in OAR 413-120-0730 to be considered for adoption placement selection who:
   A. Have the knowledge, skills, abilities and commitment to raise the child or siblings; and
   B. Have the capacity to meet the current and lifelong safety, permanency, attachment and well-being...
Chapter 6 • Section 5A: Identifying and assessing families for adoptive placement: General information for the caseworker

II. Prioritize prospective resources in this manner:

A. As long as there are no current caretakers wishing to be considered, relatives as defined as (a)-(c) in OAR 413-070-0000 (74) and who meet the criteria 1–3 in the bullet directly above.

B. As long as there are no current caretakers wishing to be considered, relatives as defined as (d) in OAR 413-120-0710 and who meet the criteria 1–3 in the bullet directly above.

C. Current caretakers and relatives as defined as (a)-(d) in OAR 413-070-0000 (74) and who meet the criteria 1–3 in the bullet directly above.

D. A general applicant.

Note that children for whom ICWA applies and refugee children have other criteria discussed later in this subchapter.

Any relative or current caretaker who has an approved adoption home study must be given consideration to be an adoptive resource. There must be a selection process that takes place to address the relative and/or current caretaker’s ability to meet the lifelong safety, attachment and well-being needs of the child or sibling group under consideration for adoption.

If multiple relatives are interested in adopting the child, see “Chapter 5, Section 5, Relative families: Considerations and procedure for adoption” for how to work with the extended family to prioritize relatives. If the relatives are not able to prioritize interested families, the child’s caseworker and supervisor identify relatives for consideration.

I. If there are multiple interested relative families, consult with the interested relatives to reach agreement on the most appropriate potential adoptive resource. This can be discussed at a family meeting. People to invite include: birth parents, all concerned identified relatives (even if they are not interested in being a resource), parents’ attorneys if the child is not legally free, the child’s attorney, the CASA, tribal representatives, Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC) member, mentors, school staff and others who may be interested in providing support and information. A neutral meeting facilitator may be a wise option, rather than the caseworker, since these can be emotionally-laden and information-filled meetings.

II. Discuss with the supervisor the relatives who have expressed an interest in adopting the child when agreement by the relatives cannot be reached. Relatives being considered may have different connections to the child, including maternal, paternal, sibling and other relative connections. The caseworker and supervisor discuss the child’s needs and the known characteristics of the relatives, and then identify one, two or three families for adoption home studies. The studies are conducted by the department, a qualified private adoption agency or another public adoption agency.

III. Share written information about the case history and the child’s needs with the agency writing a child-specific adoption home study to both ODHS and non-ODHS agencies. The caseworker may also verbally discuss the information with the adoption worker for clarification. Supply all adoption workers studying relatives with the same level of information about the child’s special needs. The adoption worker is to actively consider the information the caseworker provides about the child during their assessment of the family’s ability to meet the child’s current and possible long-term special needs.

IV. Discuss relevant details with the CWPM or designee when an adoption home study has been initiated for a relative and the potential adoptive resource is not approved or withdraws. The CWPM or designee decides whether the agency will initiate adoption home studies with additional relatives based on:

A. The best interest of the child; and
B. The impact on achieving permanency if an additional study or studies is pursued.

V. Request input about the knowledge, skills, abilities and commitment a potential adoptive family needs to be able to meet the current and lifelong needs of the child from professionals who have worked closely with the child, the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative, RCWAC representative and foster parent.

VI. Receive and review adoption home studies in a timely manner. If there are concerns about a relative:
A. Discuss with the supervisor.
B. Contact the adoption worker of the relative for clarification of any concerns as needed.
C. Work as a team member with the family’s certification/adoption worker to give the family cohesive, rather than contradictory messages.

Exceptions

When at least one current caretaker is being considered as an adoptive resource along with relative resources, an exception may be sought to consider more than three potential resources at adoption committee. This exception may be important when there are multiple current caretakers who express an interest in a sibling group in order to allow an opportunity for a relative or relatives to also be considered. The CWPM will consult with the Child Permanency Program manager when a caseworker and supervisor believe an exception is in the best interest of the child. The two managers will confer and make the decision together. On rare occasions, an exception may also be sought to go outside the order of preference for adoption consideration when it is determined a relative as defined by OAR 413-070-0000 (74) (d) should be considered at the same time as a relative as defined by OAR 413-070-0000 (74) (a) to (c). That exception will be determined by the Child Permanency Program manager at the request of the CWPM when a caseworker and supervisor believe an exception is in the best interest of the child. An example of when this may be appropriate is when a child or their family has a significant relationship with a relative in the (d) category and express a strong preference for that person or persons to be considered as the adoptive resource. There may be other reasons, and each request will be considered on a case-by-case basis.

Identification of a child’s potential adoptive resources for an American Indian/Alaska Native child or as part of a sibling group being considered together

Order of placement preference

When an American Indian/Alaska Native (Indian) child alone or with their sibling group is being considered for adoption, the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) must be followed. ICWA is a federal law and sets an order of placement preference that is different than the order of placement preference for non-Indian children. If an Indian child has non-Indian siblings that you are placing together for adoption, ICWA must be followed for the Indian child. Because the siblings are being considered together, the consideration and identification process applies to the entire sibling group.

When identifying potential adoptive resources for an Indian child, the following preference must be followed unless there is a specific action taken by the tribe called a tribal resolution or by the court of jurisdiction called a good cause. finding. These two actions are discussed in detail later on.

I. A member of the Indian child’s extended family. This includes both Indian and non-Indian members of the child’s family;
II. Other members of the Indian child’s Tribe;
III. Other Indian families.

All the other requirements for adoption of a child in the legal custody of the department must be met for Indian children. This includes the requirements for adoption applications, home studies and standards for adoption. All families wishing to be considered as a potential adoptive resource for an Indian child must meet certification standards and must have an approved adoption home study.

When you are getting ready to identify potential adoptive resources for your Indian child or sibling group, you must take into consideration recommendations from the Indian child’s tribe. If the tribe recommends a potential adoptive resource that fits within the ICWA order of placement preference, and they have an approved adoptive home study, you will consider that resource. The order of preference is sequential. You cannot move to a lower order of preference unless there are no potential adoptive resources that fit into a higher order of preference. You must consider all potential adoptive resources that fit within the same level of preference. Here are some examples:

I. The tribe recommends the grandmother of the child as the potential adoptive resource. Because grandmother fits into the first order of preference, you would proceed with consideration of grandmother along with other relatives, if any, who have expressed interest because all relatives have equal preference under ICWA. In this example, you must consider any relatives (up to three) that have an interest even though the tribe has made their specific recommendation. When you proceed to selection, it is important, however, to consider the tribe’s recommendation and reasons for it when weighing the best interest and needs of the child.

II. The tribe recommends a tribal foster family be considered as the potential adoptive resource, but there are extended family members who have an interest in being considered as the potential adoptive resource. You would not be able to consider the tribal foster family (second order of preference) until you have considered the extended family members (first order of preference) unless there was a tribal resolution or court order for good cause.

III. The tribe recommends a non-Indian foster family be considered as the potential adoptive resource, you have no extended family wishing to be considered, but you have approved adoptive home studies of Indian families who wish to be considered as the potential adoptive resource. You would not be able to consider the non-Indian foster family (outside the order of preference) until you have considered the Indian families (third order of preference unless there was a tribal resolution or court order for good cause.

Any time you have one or more potential adoptive resources that 1) are within the ICWA order of preference, 2) there are no potential adoptive resources in a higher order of preference, 3) one or more of the resources can meet the safety, well-being and permanency needs of the child, and 4) you have an approved adoption home study, you must select one of the resources.
Denying a potential adoptive resource that meets the ICWA order of preference

If you deny one or more potential adoptive resources that meet the order of placement preference under ICWA but you ultimately select a family that is in the same or higher order of placement preference than the potential adoptive resource(s) that you denied, then you may proceed with selection. You are still operating within the ICWA order of placement preference. In any other circumstance, a tribal resolution or court order for good cause must take place to proceed.

I. If you have one or more potential adoptive resources that meet the ICWA order of preference, but you do not believe any of them can meet the safety, well-being and permanency needs of the child, and you have identified a family that does not meet the ICWA order of placement preference, but can meet the child’s needs, a tribal resolution or court order for good cause must take place.

II. When one or more potential adoptive resources fall within more than one level of placement preference, and you believe the resource(s) in a higher level of placement preference cannot meet the current and lifelong safety, permanency, and well-being needs of the child, but the resource(s) in the lower level of placement preference can meet those needs, a tribal resolution or court order for good cause must take place.

Tribal resolutions

Tribal resolutions must come from the recognized tribal governing body often called the Tribal Council. It is not sufficient for requests to change the ICWA order of preference to come from a tribal caseworker, supervisor, social service manager or tribal attorney.

A tribal resolution may be sought under the following circumstances:

I. If the Tribe believes one or more potential adoptive resources meeting the ICWA placement preference cannot meet the current and lifelong safety, well-being and permanency needs of the child, but a potential adoptive resource that does not meet the ICWA placement preference does have that ability.

II. When one or more potential adoptive resources fall within more than one level of placement preference, the tribe believes the resource(s) in a higher level of placement preference cannot meet the current and lifelong safety, permanency and well-being needs of the child, but the resource(s) in the lower level of placement preference do have that capacity;

III. When a potential adoptive resource that meets a preferred placement preference comes forward late in the process (any time before finalization of an adoption) and the tribe believes it is in the best interest of the child to proceed without consideration of the late coming potential adoptive resource.

If the tribal governing body issues a resolution to consider a potential adoptive resource outside the order of preference, you must stop all other consideration and identification activity and consider their recommended resource. The recommended resource must have an approved adoption home study and once complete, there must be a selection process either through caseworker selection or adoption committee selection (described in Chapter 5, Section 7). If, through the selection process, you determined the potential adoptive resource has the capacity to meet the current and lifelong safety, permanency and well-being needs of the child, you select the resource. However, if you do not believe the potential adoptive resource has that capacity, you document the reasons why, using the appropriate selection form, and staff the case with the CWPM for consideration to seek a good cause order from the court of jurisdiction

Good cause orders

You should always ask the tribe if they wish to seek a tribal resolution before seeking a good cause order. Only the court of jurisdiction over an Indian child has the ability to make a judicial determination that good cause exists to deviate from the order of placement preference established by ICWA or by a tribal resolution. If a caseworker, after consultation with his or her supervisor, wishes to request a judicial determination for good cause, the CWPM submits a request to the Child Welfare director or designee. The Child Welfare director or designee makes the decision to pursue a good cause determination. When seeking a good cause determination to go outside the ICWA order of placement preference, you will always have a potential adoptive resource that you are seeking the ruling for.

You would never request a judicial determination until you have an identified prospective adoptive resource that does not fit into the order of ICWA placement preference. The judge will be making his or her decision based on whether it is in the best interest of the child to be placed with your identified resource and that good cause exists to go outside the ICWA order of placement preference.

If you deny one or more families that meet the order of placement preference but you ultimately select a family that is in the same or higher order of preference than the resource or resources that you denied, you do not have to seek a judicial determination for good cause. You are still operating within the ICWA order of preference.

Requesting a judicial determination for good cause may be requested under the following circumstances and when the tribe has not or will not seek a tribal resolution:

1. When one or more potential adoptive resources meeting the order of ICWA placement preference cannot meet the current and lifelong safety, well-being and permanency needs of the child, but a potential adoptive resource that does not meet the ICWA placement preference does have that ability.

2. When one or more potential adoptive resources fall within more than one level of placement preference, the department believes the resource(s) in a higher level of placement preference does not have the capacity to meet the current and lifelong safety, permanency and well-being needs of the child, but the resource(s) in the lower level of placement preference does have that capacity;

3. When a potential adoptive resource that meets a preferred placement preference comes forward late in the process (any time before finalization of an adoption) and the department and/or tribe believe it is in the best interest of the child to proceed without consideration of the late coming potential adoptive resource.

If the Child Welfare director or designee denies the request to seek a judicial determination for good cause or the judicial determination is sought and good cause is not granted to change the order of placement preference, then you must proceed with selecting the prospective adoptive resource that met the order of placement preference or the order established by tribal resolution. Your ability to deny the prospective adoptive resource that met the ICWA placement preference has been denied.

General recruitment for ICWA children

Only when it has been determined there are no prospective adoptive resources that meet the order of placement preference established by ICWA, can you then proceed to general recruitment for an Indian child or siblings being placed for adoption together.

If during the course of general recruitment, you receive an adoption study that meets one of the placement preferences established by ICWA (most often an Indian family not from the child’s tribe), and the family wants to be considered as a potential adoptive resource, you must end general recruitment because you now have a potential adoptive resource that meets the ICWA order of placement preference.

Tip

_The department is not the only party that can seek a judicial determination for good cause. Any party to the juvenile court case has the ability to make this request; including the tribe, parent, child’s attorney, CASA and any other intervening party. You should always ask the tribe if they wish to seek a tribal resolution before seeking a judicial determination for good cause._

Tip

_There are no circumstances in which you would go to the Adoption Selection Committee with a potential adoptive resource who meets the ICWA order of placement preference and a general applicant who does not meet the ICWA order of placement preference._

Caseworker activity when reviewing general applicant home studies

Procedure

I. Use an active, thoughtful and open mind when reading studies. Incorporate previously gathered input from the child’s team about characteristics of families likely to be successful parenting a child for decades to come.

II. Notice significant questions for the adoption worker when interested in taking a potential family to an adoption selection process. Make questions to the adoption worker specific, clear and nonjudgmental. Note any discrepancies in information. The worker should note what makes them think they need more information, what makes them curious about the family as a stable place for the child, significant discrepancies or gaps in information, and what relevant questions they would like to ask for further information.

III. Be positively aware of the special characteristics of ODHS home studies. ODHS workers use a family assessment process called SAFE, which stands for Structured Analysis Family Evaluation. SAFE is an evaluation process to help workers identify and address strengths and areas of concern related to caring for children. These workers have a uniform and structured methodology to interpret and assess the information gathered during the evaluation. The assessment includes consideration of 68 psychosocial factors related to family success in caregiving of children from the child welfare system.

Readers of ODHS adoption home studies may find more discussion about concerning issues, compared to other home studies. The family’s certification/adoptive worker is to thoroughly assess issues that could potentially impact the success of adoption. This may appear to focus more on “negative” issues. However, this is typically an indication the worker has thoroughly explored concerning issues that may be mitigated by multiple factors. Other non-SAFE home studies may not focus as much on issues of concern, so the reader may not have as clear an explanation about how issues may negatively impact family functioning with the addition of the adopted child. All adoption assessments should include multiple sources of information.

Protecting confidentiality of families’ home studies

The contents of an adoptive family’s home study are some of the most private and comprehensive in existence on one document for most individuals; information is a wide-ranging and highly personal record of a person’s life. The information has been gathered and assessed for the specific reason of consideration for adoption and the department must protect families and maintain the home study’s use for intended purposes. The caseworker should become familiar with the confidentiality rules that protect and limit the release and use of a family’s study.

There are four specific types of partners/parties who have special limited opportunities to obtain home studies for adoption selection purposes only. These are:

I. Child’s attorney;

II. Court appointed special advocate (CASA);

III. Tribal representative; and

IV. Member of the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC).

These four specific partners/parties must to receive the home studies of the families identified for an adoption selection process:

I. After the selection date has been scheduled;

II. From ODHS staff who send these specific partners/parties the home studies and supporting information as part of the adoption committee or caseworker selection information packets;

III. Within the timeframe by which these four specific partners/parties are notified and according to the specific selection process and

IV. When the agency has the applicant’s signed releases for adoption selection process.

This means that these partners/parties may not receive home studies for adoption selection outside of these conditions and timeframes identified for the applicable adoption selection process. For more information about releasing home studies for the purpose of adoption selection, see OAR 413-120-0000 to 0060.

ODHS staff do not release home studies of identified families to the child’s foster parent or therapist.

To be considered as a potential adoptive resource, each applicant who is the subject of an adoption home study must provide a signed, valid release of information to release the adoption home study to be considered in the adoption placement selection. When the department considers information in addition to the adoption home study concerning a potential adoptive resource during selection, the adoption worker must also obtain a release for that information.

The adoptive family’s written information from the adoption selection process packet must:

I. Be kept confidential by the recipients;

II. Be used only for the purpose of making the recommendation regarding the selection of a child’s adoptive
Consider compatibility of the child and prospective adoptive parent

Caseworker consideration of compatibility of the child and prospective adoptive parent is based on, but not limited to, the following factors:

I. Motivation to adopt a child with special needs (even if the child may not be displaying any current concerning behaviors or issues);
II. Ability to provide for the safety of the child, including protection from all persons and situations that brought the child into care;
III. Ability to acknowledge and meet the child’s individual needs;
IV. Access to community resources and ability to meet the child’s needs;
V. Knowledge of child development;
VI. Willingness to cooperate with any restrictions recommended by the agency on contact between the child and others;
VII. Ability to commit to the child on a permanent basis, even through extremely challenging times;
VIII. Household residents;
IX. Care giving standards;
X. Family history;
XI. Ability and willingness to assist the child to develop or maintain a lasting relationship with their siblings if in the same family;
XII. Understanding of financial support they might receive from ODHS and their need for adoption assistance;
XIII. Ability to keep the child safe without department support and monitoring;
XIV. Capacity to understand the importance of the birth family connections to the child. Understanding and honoring a child’s need for a sense of connection to their birth family, even if the child does not have direct contact with them;
XV. Ability to be optimistic;
XVI. History and approach to dealing with significant set-backs, crises and difficulties;

XVII. Ability to accept things as they are;

XVIII. Problem solving ability; and

XIX. Flexibility.

Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and considering mental illness in adoption

Discussion of mental health issues and compatibility can cause caseworker and certification/adoption worker anxiety. To dispel potential anxiety, there is a useful discussion of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) as it relates to foster and adoption assessment in the article “The Americans with Disabilities Act: What Adoption Agencies Need To Know” by Madelyn Freundlich (www.adoptioninstitute.org/policy/ada.html). Consult a supervisor for assistance if questioning how the ADA applies in a particular case.

Caseworker asks adoption worker questions after reading home study

Procedure:

I. Review questions for adoption worker that the caseworker developed during the reading of the home study. Make sure significant questions are specific, clear and nonjudgmental. Indicate any discrepancies in the information.

II. Request supervisor input if needed. Supervisors may also wish to read home studies and formulate questions, especially if the dynamics of placement issues are particularly sensitive or complex or the child has high special needs.

III. Consider verbal or written questions for the family’s adoption worker. Verbal questions are best if there are only a few and they are not very complex. For complex questions or more than a few questions, the caseworker may get the most thorough response by sending specific questions in writing.

IV. Send the questions to the adoption worker through the ICPC lines of communication if the family is out-of-state. ICPC involvement may increase the responsiveness of the out-of-state agency.

Out-of-country families

If the adoptive family is out-of-country, work with the Central Office Child Permanency Program’s international case consultant for help with making connections with the consulate and child welfare agency in the other country.

Child-specific home study requests should include:

I. Clear referral letter with relevant family information for the receiving agency;

II. Direct and specific questions about the family that may have come up for ODHS staff as the case progressed;
III. Thorough, clear child disclosure information so information about the child’s special needs can be included in the assessment of the prospective family and their support system and resources.

The supervisor’s role

I. Assist the worker with questions as they review adoption home studies and with the selection of one, two or three appropriate families to consider at an adoption selection process.

II. Make sure the worker understands the agency’s order of preference of consideration of adoptive resources for children. When applicable, for cases in which ICWA applies or when the child is a refugee child, make sure the worker understands the applicable order of preference. For additional information about these requirements, see Chapter 5, Section 5, and subsection D.

III. Discuss with the worker the need to be open to adoptive applicants of diverse backgrounds. Encourage the worker to provide welcoming messages about the agency’s willingness to work with qualified families from diverse backgrounds. Assist the worker with preparing to talk with community partners on the child’s team if they may have questions about working with prospective families from diverse backgrounds.

IV. Ensure the caseworker is in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act when considering prospective families.

V. Discuss the worker’s need to follow up with the adoption worker if they have significant questions about family after reading their home study.

VI. Ensure the caseworker has responded to all adoption workers as to whether their families have been identified for an adoption selection process.

Chapter 6

Section 5B: Relative families: Considerations and procedures for adoption
Relative families: Considerations and procedures for adoption

Priority: Placement of children with relatives and placement of siblings together

One of the department’s first order of preference for adoptive placement of a child is placement with relatives and placing siblings together.

Definitions of relatives, careful identification and prioritization of relatives

The agency’s definitions of relatives to a child have become more complex.

Understanding which category that a proposed relative falls under is important, may open doors for some people, and limit opportunities for others in certain circumstances. The definition of “relative” is in OAR 413-070-0000 (74) and may be found at this link.

When there are no current caretakers under consideration as an adoptive resource, relatives are divided into two levels for adoptive preference and consideration:

I. Relatives who fall under the categories of (a), (b) and (c) have the highest priority of placement preference for the purpose of adoption. These generally are relatives related through blood, marriage or adoption.

II. Relatives who fall under the category of (d) are a second level of priority after relatives (a), (b) and (c). These are relatives generally unrelated through blood, marriage or adoption, but whom the child or family have a pre-existing family-like relationship and identify them as relatives. Birth relatives of a child who has been adopted but returns to substitute care also fall into this category if they or the child identifies them as family.

When there is at least one current caretaker under consideration as an adoptive resource, relatives in all categories have equal preference as an adoptive resource. For example, it would be permissible to include a relative in the (a) category, a relative in the (d) category, and a current caretaker as a first order of preference and have all three considered at adoption committee.

Workers should carefully interpret the definition when considering prospective adoptive resources. Remember, the PARENT is the point of reference for determining whether a person is a relative in categories (a) and (c), but the CHILD is the point of reference for determining whether a person is a relative in category (b). Carefully look at the definitions when making a determination as to who qualifies as a relative.

In the category of (d), the child OR a family member of the child must have the emotionally significant relationship prior to the child coming into foster care.

Be clear about understanding every single connection when determining the relationship between the child and a prospective relative resource. For example, consider siblings of parents or grandparents and determine if they are... their birth, step or adoptive siblings. Clarify each level of connection and who the child’s specific parents, siblings and grandparents are when looking at who may be related to the child.

Consideration of relatives of American Indian/Alaska Native (Indian) children

Procedure

The caseworker is to:

I. Consult OAR Chapter 413, division 115, Application of the Indian Child Welfare Act

II. Consult OAR Chapter 413, division 120, Adoption

III. Where no different order of preference has been established by the child’s tribe for adoptive placement, the department will, in the absence of the court’s determination that good cause to the contrary exists, give preference to placing the child with:

   A. A member of the child’s extended family;
   B. Other members of the Indian child’s tribe; or
   C. Other Indian families.

IV. When the caseworker or family has concerns about a prospective resource that falls within ICWA priorities 1–3 listed above, consult with the Central Office ICWA Program and the Child Permanency Program consultants or managers.

For additional information on identification and consideration of adoptive resources for Indian children, please refer to Section 5 A of this procedure manual.

Consideration of relatives of refugee children

When considering relatives as placement resources for adoption of a refugee child, the case worker is to consult:

V. OAR 413-070-0300 to 0380, Placement of Refugee Children.

VI. OAR 413-120-0010 to 0060, Adoption Placement Selection.

Considering relatives who wish to adopt

Relatives and sibling placement resources are one of the preferred placement resources for children who are unable to be cared for by their parents. Children who are covered by the ICWA have other priorities the worker must also follow. Federal and state laws and administrative rules require the consideration of relatives as a potential permanent placement resource for a child. The caseworker is responsible for engaging relatives and considering the relative with the goal of placement when it ensures the safety, well-being, permanency and attachment of the child.

Procedure

I. Determine a relative’s ability to be a placement resource for the child as early as possible in the case planning process. The child’s caseworker discusses with the relatives the need for concurrent planning and relative’s wishes to be considered for adoption. If the worker has serious concerns about a family being able to have an approved home study, they should communicate this with the family.

II. Consult with the supervisor if the worker has concerns about a relative being able to be approved for adoption.

Initiating the assessment of a relative as an adoptive resource for a child or sibling group

When a relative has been identified as a prospective adoptive resource by the child’s extended family or the caseworker in consultation with the supervisor, provide the relative with the applicable information based on where they live. This procedure discusses the following living situations of relatives:

I. In Oregon;

II. In another state;

III. In a foreign country (non-U.S. military);

IV. On a military base in a foreign country as a U.S. military member; or

V. In a foreign country as a U.S. military member or working for the U.S. government, but not living on a military base.

Cases involving placement outside the U.S. are complex, so you must use the international case consultant in the Child Permanency Program if the child has a prospective relative resource living outside the United States.

Procedure

I. When a relative is living in Oregon, the caseworker will:
   A. Document in OR-Kids the date and description of the options discussed with the relative family.
   B. Send the relative family a letter with instructions on how to proceed with the adoption process if they wish to continue.
   C. Send a copy of the family’s letter to the adoption supervisor of the relative family’s local Child Welfare office. Provide the child summary, if available, and any relevant documents that indicate the child’s current and possible long-term special needs, such as a psychological evaluation, mental health evaluation, education reports or medical reports. Adoption home studies should be referred by the supervisor of the caseworker to the supervisor of the adoption worker. The caseworker should not directly make a request to an adoption worker to initiate or update an adoption home study.

II. When a relative is living in a state other than Oregon, the caseworker will:
   A. Consult with the supervisor to discuss strategies for talking with the relative resource. Determine the child’s legal status and IV-E eligibility before this discussion. Discuss how the child’s medical coverage will be met. Discuss any cultural or language issues or challenges regarding the relatives that may indicate the worker needs to reasonably assist the relative and remove communication barriers. A potential relative will need to be able to engage in the process to learn about the child’s needs and participate in a home study assessment. Awareness of cultural considerations can help the worker prepare for talking with the relative. Example: some cultures do not encourage people to assert themselves with authority figures (which a relative can perceive the state to be), so relatives may not be aware they may ask for visits or question the agency’s operations on a case. This can come across as unassertive or unmotivated while the relative is behaving respectfully and patiently from their cultural perspective.

B. Contact the identified out-of-state relatives to determine if they are able and willing to be a placement resource for the child or children. Discuss adoption placement options with the relative. Clarify that ODHS has a process to consider a relative family for the purpose of adoption and there may be other relatives or a foster family that may have come forward to be a resource for the child.

C. Document in ORKids case file the date of the conversation and a description of the options discussed with the relative family.

D. If the family does wish to be considered for placement, inform them a request will be made through ICPC for a home study, and confirm they are willing to complete the study process with the child welfare agency in their state, which will include interviews, home visit(s), criminal history checks and computer-based child welfare history checks.

E. Send the interested relative a letter requesting they do the following:
   1. Contact their own local public child welfare office and follow their local agency’s process to complete the adoption home study.
   2. Engage in training for pre-adoptive families. Most families have access to this training through their local child welfare agency. If they do not have access, the next section discusses options for families who do not have training available through the local child welfare office.
   3. Give the name of the selected adoption agency if the relative chooses to have a home study by a private adoption agency. Inform the relative that the private adoption agency doing the adoption home study must be licensed in the relative’s state of residence and have experience providing services to children with special needs. If the relative selects a private agency, the relative must provide a written verification from the private adoption agency that an adoption home study of the family is in progress. The letter from the relative must be received within 14 days of receipt of the letter from ODHS. The agency must be willing to sign a contract with ODHS to provide adoption supervision services and a recommendation to finalize after a minimum of six months of placement. The agency must agree to ODHS supervision fees and provide quarterly reports of the placement progress.
   4. Understand if the relative chooses a private agency, the relative is financially responsible for the costs related to the adoption home study. The private agency must provide a copy of the adoption home study to the caseworker. The home study must be completed within 90 days of the written notification of intent to adopt by the relative.

F. Follow the process outlined in the ICPC Handbook at https://apps.state.or.us/Forms/Served/de9053.pdf to request a home study.

G. Contact the ODHS ICPC Office with any questions.

H. If the relative resides in a state that does not complete an adoption home study before a child is placed with the family or the child being legally free for adoption, consult with the Central Office adoption placement specialist for cases with significant complexities or challenges.

I. The Child Permanency Program may approve a foster home study or a relative study to be used as an adoption home study for adoption placement selection to promote the child’s timeliness to adoption. The study must meet the following criteria:

1. The study must be written, amended or updated within the last 12 months.
2. The information must indicate the family demonstrates the knowledge, skills and ability to meet, without agency oversight, the child’s needs for:
   - Physical and emotional safety and well-being;
   - Developing and maintaining connections to the child’s family;
   - Continuity and familiarity;
   - Appropriate social, educational, developmental, emotional and physical support;
   - Integration into the family;
   - Stability and permanency; and
   - Maintaining their identity, cultural, religious and spiritual heritage.

J. An adoption home study must be completed before designation of the child’s placement for adoption.

K. Consult with the Central Office adoption placement specialist if there are additional barriers to obtaining a relative’s adoption home study from another state when there are barriers that are not related to the family’s ability to be approved.

III. 3. When a relative is living in a foreign country (non-U.S. military) the caseworker will:

A. Always contact the Central Office international case consultant and the adoption placement specialist in the Child Permanency Program for consultation when making a referral for an adoption home study of a family living outside the United States, including U.S. territories. (Placing with a relative in a U.S. territory has some overlap with the Hague Convention adoption process, but due to the need for case-by-case consultation with the international case consultant, the full process for a U.S. territory case will not be described here.) The international case Consultant will notify the Central Office Child Permanency Program’s contract coordinator that the case will need an agreement for adoption supervision services in another country after the family is selected.

B. Document in OR-Kids case files the discussions with the relative family about their interest and participation in the adoption selection process.

C. Contact the foreign country’s consulate for direction in obtaining a home study assessment. A child cannot move to the home of a relative outside of the U.S. for the purpose of adoption until the child is legally free.

D. When notified by the international case consultant, contact the Child Permanency Program office manager who is the contract coordinator for negotiation of a contract or agreement for adoption placement supervision services. Please note this is a time-consuming process, therefore, contact the office manager as early as possible when an out-of-country family’s agency has been identified. Provide requested information so the office manager can submit the agreement to the Department
Chapter 6 • Section 5B: Relative families: Considerations and procedures for adoption

E. Keep in mind this section discusses initiating an assessment of a relative family for the purpose of adoption. Please refer to the Intercountry Adoption Pursuant to the Hague Convention and Intercountry Adoption Act at this link for more information on international placement. Remember there must be a Central Office adoption committee process to select the family before the child may move to their new family in another country, as approval of an adoption home study is not necessarily a guarantee of family selection.

IV. When a relative is a U.S. citizen serving in the U.S. military while living on a base outside the United States, the caseworker will:

A. Contact the Central Office international case consultant and the adoption placement specialist in the Adoptions and Permanency Program for consultation when making a referral for an adoption home study of a family living outside the United States. Although these cases are considered domestic adoptions, there are some parallels to placing with relatives in a foreign country. The international case consultant will notify the Central Office Child Welfare contract coordinator that the case will need an agreement for adoption supervision services on a military base if the family is selected.

B. Consult with the supervisor to discuss strategies for talking with the relative resource. Determine the child’s legal status and IV-E eligibility before this and include eligibility status in discussion with supervisor. Discuss any cultural issues or challenges regarding the relatives that may indicate the worker needs to reasonably assist the relative and remove communication barriers. A potential relative will need to be able to engage in the process to learn about the child’s needs and to participate in a home study assessment.

C. Contact the identified relatives to determine if they are able and willing to be a placement resource for the child or children. Discuss adoption placement options with the relative. Clarify that ODHS has a process to consider a relative for the purpose of adoption and that other relatives may come forward to be a resource for the child.

D. Document in OR-Kids case notes the date of the conversations and description of the options discussed with the relative family.

E. If the family wishes to be considered for placement, inform them that they are responsible for obtaining a child-specific adoption home study.

F. Confirm with the family that they are willing to complete the adoption assessment process, which will include interviews, home visit(s) and background checks completed by the agency doing the adoption home study. A possible option is Adopt Abroad Inc, a licensed nonprofit adoption and home study agency: www.adopt-abroad.com/index.htm. The family should be well-informed of the costs of the home study and adoption.

The U.S. Department of Defense has an adoption reimbursement program for qualified military families. Reimbursements may cover medical expenses and other fees related to adopting a child. Families may learn more information about reimbursement through the National Military Family Association or by contacting the Personnel Support Unit.

ADOPT US KIDS has information for a family stationed overseas to talk with a military adoption specialist. Contact information is: 303-755-4756 ext. 203 or at Military-Global@adoptuskids.org.

G. Send the interested relative a letter requesting they do the following:
   1. Confirm in writing their interest in being an adoptive resource for the child. ODHS must receive the letter from the relative within 14 days of the relative’s receipt of the letter from ODHS.
   2. Select an agency to do the adoption home study.
   3. If Adopt Abroad Inc. or VIDA are not available, another option is to contact their base social services agency for assistance with locating an agency to do the adoption home study and adoptive placement supervision if selected. The selected agency must be willing to sign a contract with ODHS to provide adoption supervision services and a recommendation to finalize after a minimum of six months of placement. A private agency must agree to ODHS supervision fees and provide quarterly reports of the placement progress.
   4. Contact the adoption agency of their choice and follow the agency’s process to complete the adoption home study in a timely manner. Inform the relative that a private adoption agency doing the adoption home study must be licensed and have experience providing services to children with special needs. If the relative selects a private agency, the relative must provide a written verification from the licensed private adoption agency that an adoption home study of the family is in progress.
   5. Engage in training for pre-adoptive families. If the family does not have local access, the next section discusses options for families who do not have training available locally. The family’s adoption agency may have available training.
   6. Provide the caseworker with the name and location of the selected adoption agency. The relative must understand if they choose a private agency, the relative is financially responsible for the costs related to the adoption home study. The private agency must provide a copy of the adoption home study to the caseworker.
   7. Contact their military family advocacy program and their base command for permission to have the child move to the family’s home on the base for adoption if the family is selected to be the adoptive resource.

H. When the family’s adoption agency is identified, provide adequate disclosure to the adoption worker of the family about the child so they may integrate it into the adoption assessment.

I. Verify through the adoption worker before the child moves that the base command has given the relative permission to have the child move to the base if the family is selected.

V. When a relative family is U.S. military and is living in a foreign country, but does not live on a military base, or is a U.S. citizen working for the U.S. government, the caseworker will:
   A. Contact the Central Office international case consultant and the adoption placement specialist in the Adoptions and Permanency Program for consultation. These cases have unique characteristics that need individualized consultation for referral for an adoption home study and supervision services.
B. Document in ORKids case notes the date of the conversations and description of the options discussed with the relative family.

C. If the family wishes to be considered for placement, inform them that they are responsible for obtaining a child-specific adoption home study.

D. Confirm with the family that they are willing to complete the adoption assessment process, which will include interviews, home visit(s) and background checks completed by the agency doing the adoption home study. Resources for adoption home studies and services vary.

E. Send the interested relative a letter requesting they do the following:
   1. Confirm in writing their interest in being an adoptive resource for the child. ODHS must receive the letter from the relative within 14 days of the relative’s receipt of the letter from ODHS.
   2. Identify how they plan to obtain an adoption home study. If the two agencies discussed above, Adopt Abroad Inc. and VIDA, are not available, another option is to contact their base social services agency for assistance with locating an agency to do the adoption home study and adoptive placement supervision if selected. The agency must be willing to sign a contract with ODHS to provide adoption supervision services and a recommendation to finalize after a minimum of six months of placement. The private agency must agree to ODHS supervision fees and provide quarterly reports of the placement progress until finalization of the adoption.
   3. Contact the adoption agency of their choice and follow the agency’s process to complete the adoption home study in a timely manner. Inform the relative that a private adoption agency doing the adoption home study must be licensed and have experience providing services to children with special needs. If the relative selects a private agency, the relative must provide a written verification from the licensed private adoption agency that an adoption home study of the family is in process.
   4. Engage in training for pre-adoptive families. The family’s adoption agency may have training available. If the family does not have local access, the next section discusses options for families who do not have training available locally.
   5. Provide the caseworker with the name and location of the selected adoption agency. The relative must understand if they choose a private agency, the relative is financially responsible for the costs related to the adoption home study. The private agency must provide a copy of the adoption home study to the caseworker.

F. Provide adequate disclosure to the adoption worker of the family about the child so the worker may integrate discussion about the child into the assessment of the adoptive family as a long-term resource for the child.

G. Be aware the international case consultant will notify the Central Office Child Permanency Program office manager who is the contract coordinator that the case will need an agreement for adoption supervision services in another country if the family is selected.
Transitioning a child to the relative adoptive parent in a foreign country

Carefully planning the transition of a child is critical to the success of an adoptive parent. The relative may come to the U.S. to help transition the child; this is the best possible transition scenario. However, it is not always feasible or possible for the relative adoptive parent to come to the U.S. for the child. The caseworker transporting the child to the relative adoptive parent should assist in the transition. Refer to Chapter 5 on “Transitioning the child to the adoptive placement” for more information. Consult with the Central Office Child Permanency Program when anticipating any adoptive placements outside of the United States. Many aspects of the move must be coordinated.

Procedure when the ODHS adoption worker has concerns about the ability to approve a relative

If the ODHS adoption worker begins the adoption home study or update, and during the course of the assessment has concerns about the relative’s ability to be approved, the worker should follow these steps as applicable.

Procedure specific to the adoption worker

I. Consult with the supervisor and notify the child’s caseworker that there are significant concerns. The adoption worker and supervisor have discretion to consider the circumstances. For example, a relative applicant may be adopting another relative child and the applicant appears to be able to meet the needs of all children in the home if the children were placed in the relative family for adoption. The adoption worker may assess the family further as directed by the supervisor. The local office staff may choose to consult with the adoption placement specialist or the assistant program manager in the Central Office Child Permanency Program to discuss concerns. This can be one of the most challenging aspects of an adoption worker’s job and seems to be even more difficult when the applicants are relatives or foster parents.

II. Discuss concerns about the family with the certifier and their supervisor if the adoption worker is not the same person as the ODHS foster care certifier for a foster care certified family. Also notify the Central Office foster care coordinator in the Well-Being Program if concerns are serious. If the case may go toward foster certification denial or revocation, the field staff may discuss the need for the adoption worker or supervisor to contact the Assistant Attorney General.

III. If the home study assessment concerns involve clinical issues, the SAFE home study Psychosocial Evaluation, Consortium for Children/SAFE website has articles on specific topics of concern to help workers with mitigation. The Consortium for Children will also provide phone consultation to SAFE-trained foster and adoption workers about assessment of challenging issues. For more information see www.consortforkids.org/Home.aspx

IV. Remember the denial or revocation of a foster care certification are different processes than denial of an adoption application and refer to the appropriate policies as applicable.

V. The adoption worker may end the application process and deny an adoption application at any time or remove a completed adoption home study from consideration if family does not meet one or more of the standards in:
A. OAR 413-120-0225 (1) and (2), Conditions that Require Additional Approval or Termination of the Department’s Adoption Application Process or OAR 413-120-0246 or

B. Standards for an Adoptive Home and Release of an Adoption Home Study (1).

VI. Discuss the information with the CWPM if the adoption worker and supervisor believe the family should be denied approval to adopt. This way, the CWPM has had an opportunity to discuss the issues with staff and if there are any complaints, the CWPM has already been informed. When the applicant has a connection to the child and does not satisfactorily respond to ODHS requests for information, the worker should discuss establishing timelines with their supervisor. Sometimes workers are concerned about not being fair to a relative or foster family and they go too long in giving chances. The agency should be reasonable, look at cultural considerations and weigh the consequences of an extended period of trying to assess an applicant. Some families may need more assessment to be approved. For instance, obtaining mental health records may help mitigate concerns about an applicant. In other cases, families that clearly are not able to be approved should be addressed earlier rather than later. The child’s permanency is likely to be delayed unnecessarily if the agency does not end an adoption assessment in a timely way.

VII. Document concerns thoroughly if continuing the assessment is needed to mitigate concerns.

VIII. Discuss with the certifier the concerns about the family if the foster care certifier is a different person than the ODHS adoption worker. Some concerns may be violations of the certification standards.

IX. Determine who will inform the child’s worker, the supervisor and the child’s CWPM, if different than the adoption worker’s office. This is especially important if the case is controversial or if the child’s case worker and adoption worker are in different locations.

X. Write a letter to the family notifying them of the agency’s decision not to approve the adoption home study. Coordinate letter writing if the family is a certified foster family and the certifier must address a violation of certification standards. (The certifier should contact their Central Office foster care coordinator in the Well Being Program in this case.) The letter to the family addressing denial of adoption approval should be brief and to the point. The adoption worker may quote the applicable policy and refer to the relevant subsections in 413-120-0225, 413-120-0246 or 413-200-0301 to 413-200-0396. Brevity is generally optimal, rather than the lengthy and more detailed point-by-point letters used for foster care revocation, since denial of adoption does not lead to the possibility of a contested case hearing, unless denial is based on the criminal history as discussed below. If the applicant family has concerning issues in addition to the criminal history of the applicant or other adult in the home, be sure to list those concerns in the letter to the family as well so the applicant has a clear understanding of all the categories of issues that prevent them from being approved.

If the applicant is denied based on the criminal history of the applicant or another adult in the home, refer to ODHS policy Criminal Background Check Requirements for Relative Caregivers, Foster Parents, Adoptive Parents, and Other Persons in Household, OAR 413-120-0460 (12)-(14) for additional notification information that must be provided to the family. In these cases, the agency must inform the applicant about specific rights, unless the applicant voluntarily withdraws from the process. Contact the Child Permanency Program’s adoption placement specialist or the assistant manager if the are criminal history issues related to denial for further case-by-case assistance.
In addition, consult OAR 413-010-0500 to 413-010-0535, which describes the requirements and process for requesting a contested case hearing due to a denial or revocation of a Certificate of Approval or a denial of approval to adopt, based on the criminal history or false statement of criminal history, of an applicant or other person in the household.

XI. Meet with the applicants (together if a couple) to discuss the information that has led to the denial. A meeting with both the adoption worker and the supervisor is likely to be more smooth and supportive than the adoption worker meeting alone with the family. The message should be the agency staff have concerns about the placement and cannot approve the family for adoption. Avoid giving messages that could be interpreted as division among staff within the agency. Each staff member has their particular role to play in the process of considering relatives and appearing to be at odds within the agency can be harmful to the case moving toward permanency.

XII. Provide the relative applicant with the written notification of the termination of the process. Ideally, this is done at the meeting with the family, adoption worker and supervisor. If the local office is not able to set a meeting, mail the letter.

XIII. Document the denial or revocation of approval in the provider file in ORKids.

XIV. Stop the home study writing process for adoption. The adoption worker is not required to complete the home study if a family cannot be approved to adopt.

XV. In many cases, ODHS may advocate for the possibility of future contact between the child and the relative who is not approved or selected to be the child’s placement resource. The adoption worker and caseworker should coordinate about the specific information the agency will convey to the family and who will convey this information to the family. The caseworker may see the relative as able to benefit the child through visits, sending gifts, communicating electronically, providing information for the child’s Life Story book and positively engaging in other ways that are positive to the child. The relative with positive ongoing connections needs to be able to endorse and recognize the child’s place in their adoptive family. Be cautious to avoid appearing to make agreements that may not be kept, since the child’s adoptive family has an important part in determining post adoption contact.

Tip

Maintain an open mind about professional colleagues who conduct certification and adoption home assessments and provide child permanency casework. Recognize the nature of colleagues’ specialized knowledge, training and abilities so involved agency professionals may develop accurate and in-depth understanding of the larger picture and engage in a solid team approach. Having an open mind about each other’s point of view, sharing information with one another and respecting each other’s roles promotes gathering and understanding information to plan for the child’s best interest. There may be more challenges when workers are in different offices or counties.
When the child is not legally free for adoption and the relative’s state will not write an adoption home study for a relative resource

Procedure

Approximately half of the states do not recognize legal risk adoptive placements and will not do adoption home studies for Oregon’s legal risk children for whom adoption is the plan.

I. When the child is not legally free and the relative’s state will write a foster/kinship study, but not an adoption home study, and no other families are available to be a resource for adoption:

   A. Consult with the supervisor whether to place the child in the relative’s home for temporary foster care until an approved adoption home study is written after the child becomes legally free. Considerations about the move include ongoing visits with the birth parents, sibling contact, child’s attachment and progress in the foster home, results of the diligent relative search, other relatives being considered, services the child is receiving, court approval needed for placement out-of-state and appropriateness of the relative family to meet the child’s needs for safety, permanency and well-being. Maintaining a child in an unrelated foster family to obtain intervener status or 12 consecutive months in the home is not a reason to keep a child from a foster care placement with a relative.

   B. If the caseworker and supervisor determine the child should move to the out-of-state relative’s family for temporary foster care, obtain ICPC and court approval.

   C. Be clear with the relative family that this move is for the purpose of foster care and the agency has another process for adoption assessment and selection. Follow this discussion with a letter to the family outlining the main points, including an emphasis on the temporary aspect of the placement.

   D. If the child cannot move or it is not in the child’s best interests at this time, discuss with the supervisor possible methods of maintaining contact between the child and the prospective relative resource. This can be done in a number of ways, please see Chapter 5, Section 5, Subsection B Appendix “Strategies when working with relatives” for additional information.

II. When a relative resides in a state that does not complete an adoption home study before a child being placed with the applicant or before the child being legally free for adoption, consult with the supervisor and the Central Office Child Permanency Program’s adoption placement specialist or assistant manager. Program staff may approve use of a foster home study or a relative study as an adoption home study for adoption placement selection. This is only when the requirements of subsections (1)(a), (b), and (c) of the OAR 413-120-0246 Standards for an Adoptive Home and Release of an Adoption Home Study this rule are met.

In these cases, an approved adoption home study must be completed before designation of the child’s placement for adoption.

Referral to the appropriate adoption selection process when a relative is approved
Procedure

Refer the child to the appropriate adoption selection process after receiving the approved adoption home studies for a child’s relatives.

I. When considering only one relative family, refer the child to the caseworker selection process unless the Child Welfare program manager approves of referral to a local adoption committee.

II. When more than one relative family is under consideration for a child, refer the decision to a Central Office adoption committee.

III. When considering a current caregiver along with a relative family for a child, refer the decision to a Central Office adoption committee.

IV. When the Child Permanency Program manager granted an exception to the order of preference of adoptive resources, refer the decision to a Central Office adoption committee.

Out-of-state relative’s local child welfare office does not offer pre-adoption training to relative families

Oregon ODHS requires all parents who adopt children in the custody of ODHS participate in training to address adoption issues and children’s special needs due to abuse and neglect. Relatives who are studied in another state may or may not be required by their state of residence to go to pre-adoption training. See Chapter 5 Appendix “Out-of-state family’s pre-adoption training options” for information about how to proceed if there are questions about the family’s training to prepare them for special needs adoption.

Presenting an out-of-state relative at adoption committee

There are two types of adoption selection processes: caseworker selection after consultation with their supervisor and members of the child’s team and adoption committee. An adoption worker in Oregon does not need to be assigned to a family for a caseworker selection process. For an adoption committee, the child’s local office arranges for the assignment of an experienced and capable worker, other than the child’s caseworker, to present an out-of-state relative family. This may be a ODHS worker or a worker from the contracted Special Needs Adoption Coalition (SNAC) agency to present if the local office chooses. A ODHS worker must present if the relative family is non-English speaking and lives outside the United States. The worker assigned to present the out-of-state family should be knowledgeable about adoptions and permanency. If the family’s presenting adoption worker for the committee is a ODHS worker, they cannot present another ODHS studied family for the child. If the family’s presenting adoption worker is a contracted Special Needs Adoption Coalition (SNAC) agency worker, they may present more than one family at the committee. The family worker assigned will need adequate time to prepare. They will need to talk with the relatives and the adoption worker for the relatives. The worker presenting the out-of-state family may refer to the Procedure Manual’s Chapter 5, Section 5 Appendix, “Presenting an out-of-state family” for guidelines to prepare for committee.

Consideration given to relatives who come forward or are located later in the adoption process
If a relative comes forward later in adoption planning, the child’s caseworker and supervisor must consider the agency’s emphasis on relatives and placement with siblings together as one of the primary adoptive placement resource. The Child Welfare program manager (CWPM) or designee has discretion and is guided by whether it is in the best interests of the child to include a relative as a possible placement resource.

Understanding family dynamics of relatives who come forward later in case planning may help workers prepare and advocate for children when ODHS considers these relatives. These are examples of situations when relatives may come forward:

I. Relatives believe the birth parent will have the child returned shortly after the child’s move into foster care.

II. Relatives may become interested in adoption if the plan changes from foster care to adoption and they realize the child may be lost to the family.

III. Relatives understand the birth parent is not likely to be successful in parenting and the recognition of the finality of termination, relinquishment and adoption may prompt them to be interested in adopting.

IV. Relatives who do not want to be closely involved with the birth parents because of their criminal, drug-related or other difficult behaviors may see foster care as making them vulnerable to the wishes of the birth parents. Staff education about adoption may make mediated agreements for contact seem more feasible for the relative family.

V. Younger potential relatives may defer to older relatives or relatives may defer to those who are seen as “closer” to the child. If a relative the extended family puts forward withdraws or is not approved, the other relatives may come forward later to be a resource.

VI. Relatives may have changes in their circumstances that make them available to adopt.

VII. Birth parents have clearer understanding of the possibility of termination of their rights, and finally tell the agency about relatives they had not disclosed earlier in the case.

Procedure

The caseworker must:

I. Determine the place in the child’s adoption planning that applies when a relative comes forward or is located. Four junctions provide discretion at the child’s local office level as to whether ODHS may consider a relative further and each are discussed in detail in their own sections below.

When a relative comes forward during the scheduling of the caseworker adoption selection process

When a child’s relative now expresses interest in being considered as a potential adoptive resource and the worker is in the process of scheduling a caseworker selection process, the caseworker, supervisor and CWPM or designee are to consult OAR 413-120-0021 Adoption Placement Selection by Caseworker.

CWPM or designee must:

I. Determine if the caseworker has provided the notifications in section (5) of OAR 413-120-0021 at least 10 business days before the adoption selection:

A. Notify the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and member of Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee as applicable, at least 10 business days before the caseworker selection process

B. Ensure the individuals listed above are sent copies of the family and child information packets

C. Notify these individuals at least two days before the date of the caseworker adoption selection decision that they are able to send input.

II. If the above notifications have occurred, review the diligent efforts to identify a child’s relatives required under I-E.1.1, Search for and Engagement of Relatives, OAR 413-070-0060 to 413-070-0063.

III. Consider the impact of a delay in achieving permanency on the best interests of the child.

IV. Make a determination whether it is in the child’s best interest for an adoption home study to be conducted with a relative despite the delay in achieving permanency.

When a relative comes forward during scheduling of the adoption committee

The caseworker, supervisor and CWPM or designee should consult Invitation to and Notification of Adoption Committee OAR 413-120-0035 (2) and (8).

CWPM or designee must:

I. Determine if the department has provided the notifications to the caseworker for each child, adoption workers, committee facilitator, neutral committee members, CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and member of Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee in section (2) of Invitation to and Notification of Adoption Committee OAR 413-120-0035 at least 10 business days before the adoption committee as applicable:
   A. Date, time and location of committee;
   B. Child information, home studies and family information sent;
   C. Notification that information may not be re-released; and
   D. Request to thoroughly review all information provided before the committee when serving as a member

II. If the above notifications have occurred, review the diligent efforts to identify a child’s relatives required under OAR 413-070-0060 to 413-070-0063.

III. Consider the impact of a delay in achieving permanency on the best interests of the child.

IV. Make a determination whether it is in the child’s best interest for an adoption home study to be conducted with a relative despite the delay in achieving permanency.

When an adoption home study has been initiated and the potential adoptive resource is not approved or withdraws
The caseworker, supervisor and CWPM or designee should consult OAR 413-120-0760 Identification of a Child's Potential Adoptive Resources.

The CWPM or designee decides whether the department will initiate adoption home studies with additional relatives based upon:

I. The best interest of the child and

II. The impact on achieving the child's permanency when pursuing an additional home study or studies.

Legal and birth relative considerations when a finalized adoption results in the child needing foster care or adoptive placement

Unfortunately, there are cases when children and parents have a finalized adoption, and the family may choose to end their active parenting of the child or the child may go to substitute care and return to the legal adoptive parents may not be appropriate. When looking at temporary or permanent placement options, as well as other connections and supports for a child, the worker always needs to consider the best interests of the child. This applies when assessing placement or other connections with someone who fits the agency's definition of a relative and with someone who does not fit the relative definition, but may be important people in the child's life.

Procedure

The caseworker must:

I. Look for the child’s legal relatives to conduct a diligent search for relatives. In cases where the child was adopted by a nonrelative, the worker is not required to search for the relatives of a child’s birth parents because the relationship with the birth parents was legally severed when the adoption finalized.

The child’s worker is required to search for the relatives of a birth parent only when they are related to the adoptive parents. The relative search would only be the maternal or paternal side of the child’s birth family because the search is based on relatedness to the child’s relatives of the legal adoptive parents (not because they are related by blood).

Example: The child is adopted by the paternal grandparents. This makes the paternal grandparents the child’s legal adoptive parents and therefore, the paternal relatives are the legal relatives of the child. In this case, the child’s birth mother’s relatives are not legal relatives after the finalization of the child’s adoption.

While the caseworker’s office is not required to search for relatives who have blood relationships, but not legal relationships to the child, the caseworker has discretion to consider the child's birth family members if they come forward to be a resource. Based on the child’s best interests, the caseworker may also initiate a search for the child’s birth family in these cases, after being clear the child's legal relatives are not available to be a prospective adoptive resource.

II. Consider foster placement possibilities with a legal relative. If a worker is not able to place with someone who fits the agency’s definition of a relative, the worker can move to considering others who are not legal relatives. Relatives of a birth parent may be viable foster resources, especially if the birth parent’s relatives had a relationship with the child.
Note that members of the child’s extended birth family who come forward after the child was adopted by a nonrelative are general applicant resources unless they self-identify or are identified as a relative as described in 413-070-0000 (74) (d). If they meet this definition, they are given consideration before general applicants.

III. Recruit for adoptive families when appropriate. Typically, when there are no legal relatives or current caretakers to consider and when considering general applicants, the worker would need to recruit.

The supervisor’s role

I. Educate workers on the values of relative placements and support workers to skillfully address challenges that relative placements may bring. Help workers make child-focused decisions about placements with relatives.

II. If a relative is not able to be an early placement resource, assist the worker to assess the possibilities of other types of connections and contact between the child and relative and their siblings if they are not going to be raised in the same home.

III. Help the caseworker determine which relative family or families are most appropriate for consideration for adoption if there are multiple relative resources who come forward and the relative families cannot themselves conclude which relative family is the best resource for the child according to OAR 413-120-0760 Identification of a Child’s Potential Adoptive Resources.
IV. As the supervisor for the caseworker, refer the need for a home study to the relative’s local Child Welfare office if the family has selected ODHS for their adoption agency. Adoption home studies should be referred by the supervisor of the caseworker to the supervisor of the adoption worker. The caseworker should not directly request an adoption worker initiate an adoption home study of a relative. Adoption worker assignments should be through supervisor-to-supervisor communication.

V. Reinforce the caseworker’s thinking with an open-minded attitude about their colleagues who conduct certification and adoption home assessments. This will help caseworkers avoid coming to conclusions about colleagues that are erroneous and hinder a solid team approach. This is even more challenging when the workers are in different offices or counties.

VI. Consult with the adoption worker and their supervisor if the adoption worker begins the relative assessment and during the course of the assessment has concerns about the relative’s ability to be approved.

VII. Provide consultation to the caseworker on the type of home study to request from the relative’s state, if outside of Oregon, if adoption is the plan and the child is not legally free.

VIII. Ensure the caseworker has addressed disclosure of information about the child to the agency doing the adoption home study as described in procedure. A lack of a child summary is not a reason to delay the referral for the home study or to delay the initiation of a home study by the adoption worker.

IX. If adoption is the plan and the child is legally free and the prospective relative resource is out-of-state, provide consultation to the caseworker about requesting an adoption home study through ICPC. If the child is not IV-E eligible, the supervisor and caseworker should discuss this with the appropriate ICPC coordinator.

X. If the caseworker receives ICPC approval for the relative placement and the child is not legally free, provide consultation to the caseworker about whether to place the child in the home for temporary foster care.

XI. Direct the worker to consult with the Central Office Child Permanency Program staff when there is a relative outside the U.S. who is being considered for adoption. These are highly complex cases and Central Office and the Department of Justice are able to offer support throughout the planning.

Consult with the Central Office Child Permanency Program as needed for cases that are particularly complex.

Reinforce the caseworker’s thinking with an open mind about their colleagues who conduct home study assessments. Both agency professionals involved in the process (caseworker and certification/adoption worker) have important and specialized roles. The different perspectives and information each employee possesses can provide a more in-depth understanding of the child’s needs, the prospective resource family’s strengths and areas of concern. Having an

This is even more challenging when the workers are in different offices or counties.
Chapter 6

Section 5C: Foster Parent Considerations and Procedures for Adoption
Foster Parent Considerations and Procedures for Adoption

Many factors contribute to the successful upbringing of adopted children. Children need continuity in relationships for their physical, emotional and social growth and well-being. Connections can be provided by relative and nonrelative families. Psychological and emotional connections of the child to their foster parent or relative caregiver are of vital consideration in determining the best interests of the child. When a child or a sibling group becomes legally free or is becoming legally freed for adoption, their current foster parent (or parents) may be interested in becoming the child or sibling group’s adoptive resource. If the foster parent wishing to be considered for adoption meets current caretaker status, they are considered in the first order of preference along with any relatives who may also be interested in consideration. If a foster family does not meet current caretaker status, they may still be considered but only if there are no relatives or current caretakers under consideration. The foster parent who does not meet current caretaker status is considered a general applicant and may be considered at adoption committee with other general applicants. The foster parent who does does not meet current caretaker status would need to obtain an approved adoption homestudy to be considered. The exception is when the foster parent has been determined to have a significant emotional relationship to the child. Please refer to OAR 413-070-0500 to 0519.

Current Caretaker Criteria and Considerations and Procedures for Adoption

A “current caretaker,” for the purposes of the adoption process, is a nonrelative who meets the following requirements:

- Is currently caring for a child in the legal care and custody of the department and who has a permanency plan or concurrent permanent plan of adoption; and
- Has cared for the child or at least one sibling of the child for at least the 12 cumulative months or for one-half of the child’s or sibling’s life if the child or sibling is younger than 2 years of age.

Caseworker and supervisor’s work to consider a current caretaker who wishes to adopt a child or sibling group

Procedure

When a person meeting the current caretaker status expresses an interest in being considered as a potential adoptive resource, the caseworker and caseworker’s supervisor must:

- Review relevant rule:
  - OAR 413-070-0060 to 413-070-0087;
  - OAR 413-120-0700 to 413-120-0760.
- Review the agency’s diligent efforts to identify, contact and place a child with relatives and to place siblings together as required. If the department is in the process of identifying or assessing a relative as defined in OAR 413-070-0000 (74) (a)-(d) who has expressed an interest in being a resource and needs to be or Currently is being assessed as a potential adoptive resource, the department waits until the relative has been assessed.

- Discuss sibling planning issues related to consideration of current caretakers. When there are siblings in different current caretaker homes who have the plan for adoption together, these rules also apply. A foster care resource who meets the current caretaker status for one child meets the current caretaker status for each sibling as well. An example: A child is placed in a foster home and the foster parent has the child in the home for 12 months making them a current caretaker. The child’s mother has a new baby who is either placed in the same foster home to be with the sibling or placed in another foster home. Both children’s permanent plans become adoption. Regardless of how long the baby has been in foster care, if the current caretaker would like to be considered as an adoptive resource for both children, they are considered in the first order of preference as a current caretaker for both children because the foster parent has had one of the children in the sibling group for at least 12 cumulative months.

All current caretakers who have expressed interest in being an adoptive resource for a child or sibling group must be given the opportunity to be considered. They are in the first order of preference along with any relative who also wishes to be considered. The current caretaker must have an approved adoption home study. All current caretakers with an approved adoption home study must be taken to a selection process either with relative resources if there are any, or by themselves. You may not consider a current caretaker with general applicants. Current caretakers are given priority for consideration and you may only move to consider general applicants if you do not have relative or current caretaker resources.

Assessing Current Caretakers Who Want to Adopt a Child or Sibling Group

Procedure

If a foster parent wants to adopt a child or sibling group, you must determine whether they meet current caretaker status. If they meet current caretaker status, they are to be given first consideration along with any relatives who may also want to be considered. If the foster parent who wants to adopt a child or sibling group does not meet current caretaker status, they may be considered as general applicants so long as there are no current caretakers or relatives who wish to be considered.

When a current caretaker expresses an interest to be considered as an adoptive resource for a child or sibling group, the caseworker should:

- Initiate a discussion with the current caretaker about the impact of adoption on the child and the family. “Foster Parents Considering Adoption” is an article that may offer thought provoking and relevant ideas to both the caseworker and current caretaker and may be found at: www.childwelfare.gov/pubs/f_fospar.cfm.

- When a current caretaker expresses a desire to be the adoptive resource, provide the current caretaker with detailed information about the child. Do not assume because the child has been in the home, the current caretaker has all of the child’s information available to ODHS that the current caretaker needs to know to make a life-long decision. Provide appropriate disclosure of the child’s history, strengths, special needs and current functioning.
• When a current caretaker requests consideration as a potential adoptive resource, the child's caseworker discusses with the current caretaker their ability to meet the child’s short-term and possible long-term needs for safety, permanency, attachment and well-being. The caseworker is also to include their professional assessment of the current caretaker’s ability to be a current and long-term adoptive resource for the child. The child’s worker should be clear with the current caretaker if they have any concerns so later discussions of concerns are not a surprise.

• When the caseworker discusses the information in the paragraph above with the current caretaker, the worker includes the differences in benefits between adoption subsidy and foster care reimbursement. Refer to Chapter 5, Section 9 for more information about adoption assistance.

Scheduling and Arranging a Permanency Staffing to Consider a Current Caretaker for Adoption

Procedure

If a current caretaker wishes to be considered as a potential adoptive resource the caseworker must:

• Assess with the supervisor, whether the diligent search for relatives is sufficient. The relative diligent search must be documented in the file. This is to determine whether we are following the order of preference for adoption consideration. Discuss with the supervisor the possible need for a sibling planning decision if it is in the children's best interest to be placed in separate adoptive homes. The caseworker must use the Permanency Committee process to consider the sibling planning decision. Refer to Chapter V, Section 3 “Sibling planning procedures,” for more information about planning for siblings for adoptive placement.

• Schedule a Permanency Staffing. The purpose of the Permanency Staffing is to discuss the history of the child’s placement with the current caretaker and to ensure the adoption worker has all relevant information they will need to do a comprehensive child specific home study. This is a staffing intended to bring forth information from all relevant parties to be used by the adoption worker in completing a well-informed child specific adoption home study,

  • Follow the local office or district process to schedule a Permanency Staffing.

  • Follow the relevant policies if the current caretaker is also an employee of ODHS Child Welfare or Self Sufficiency. Consult the procedure manual’s Chapter V, Section 5, Section E “Child Welfare and partner agencies employee adoptions and exceptions to the conflict of interest ODHS policy.”

Notification and Invitations to the Permanency Staffing to Consider a Current Caretaker Who Wishes to Be a Potential Adoptive Resource

Procedure

Contact the child’s attorney, the Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) and the child’s tribe when applicable. If the child is a refugee, also request a Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC) member. Contact any other individual who the caseworker in consultation with a supervisor believes may provide valuable information regarding the child’s current and lifelong needs.

- Inform these individuals of the date, time and location of the Permanency Staffing. These individuals are invited to the Permanency staffing but are not required to attend. Obtain a Release of Information for the family information being discussed to be shared with any of the non-agency participants mentioned above.

- The caseworker, caseworker’s supervisor, courtesy caseworker and supervisor (if applicable), certifier and adoption worker (if different) must attend this Permanency Staffing.

- Document in the case record the above-mentioned persons were informed of the staffing date, time and location.

The Caseworker’s Role at the Permanency Staffing

Procedure

The worker should be well prepared to:

- Bring the child’s case file.

- Discuss information about the child’s history, progress in foster care, strengths, challenges, and current and possible long-term special needs.

- Discuss information about the foster family, along with the family’s foster care certifier, including the following:
  - Strengths as a foster family;
  - Concerns, including a full history of any screening referrals, whether assigned or closed at screening, and any certification issues present during the placement history;
  - How the family is meeting the child’s needs. (A cause for significant concern is a foster parent who does not take the child to health or mental health evaluations or appointments as needed);
  - Other children in the home;
  - Financial information; and
  - Whether the family will continue foster care for other children after the family is designated as the adoptive family for the child. There should be no hard rules about this, but consideration of the child’s perception, the changes in who lives in the home and the child’s attachment is needed.

- If the current caretaker lives outside of Oregon, the Department must submit a request for an adoption home study to ICPC. Document in this request any specific information the staffing participants determine must be explored in the adoption home study for the current caretaker.

The Certifier/Adoption Worker’s Role at the Permanency Staffing

Procedure
The certification/adoption worker should be well prepared to:

- Present information about the foster family, including the following:
  - Strengths as a foster family;
  - Concerns about the foster family as a current and long-term resource for the child, including any certification concerns present during the child’s placement;
  - How the family is meeting the child’s needs;
  - Other children in the home;
  - Financial information; and
  - Whether the family will continue foster care for other children after the family is designated as the adoptive family for the child. There should be no hard rules about this, but consideration of the child’s perception, the changes in who lives in the home, and the child’s attachment is needed.

- The Department certifier for the family must document in a provider note any specific information the staffing participants determine must be explored in the adoption home study for the current caretaker.

Permanency Staffing Discussion

The Permanency Staffing participants discuss the information learned during the staffing and must consider the following:

- The safety, attachment, and well-being needs of the child or sibling group under consideration for adoption and how well the current caretaker has met those needs;

- The history of the current caretaker in meeting the standards of certification pursuant to OAR 413-200-0301 to 413-200-0396

- Any child abuse reports or reported concerns made to the Department that were assigned for CPS assessment, closed at screening, or documented in the Department’s electronic information system related to the current caretaker;

- Recommendations for continued contact with birth parents, birth family, or other significant persons for the child or sibling group under consideration for adoption; and

- Any other information pertinent to the evaluation of the ability of the current caretaker to meet the lifelong safety, attachment, and wellbeing needs of the child or sibling group under consideration.

As there is no decision made at the end of the Permanency Staffing, the discussion should focus on what the adoption worker needs to know about the family for whom they will be conducting the child specific adoption home study. The adoption worker must have all the information needed to conduct a thorough home study.

Certification/Adoption Worker Responsibilities If the Foster Parent Does Not Follow Through with The Requirements for The Adoption Home Study Assessment
Procedure

If the foster parent is not making reasonably adequate progress on the home study assessment process, the family’s assigned certification/adoption worker should:

- Prioritize the child’s needs for permanency in an adequate timeframe.
- Consult with their supervisor about the issues of concern. In especially challenging cases, consult with the adoption placement specialist in the Central Office Child Permanency Program.
- Discuss with the child’s caseworker the problematic issues so they may also be apprised of the situation.
- Schedule a time, at which the caseworker may also be included if desired, to meet with the caregiver to discuss the need for a timely home study, consider any concerns the foster parent may have and determine if the foster parent is still interested in adopting the child.
- Send the foster family a letter with a brief summary of the discussion, the plan to move forward or not, and the dates when specific tasks must be accomplished if that is what the family stated they wish to do. The dates should be reasonable to the prospective resource and more importantly, to the child for whom permanency may be delayed without diligent staff movement addressing issues of concern regarding the current caretaker as a resource.
- Communicate with the caseworker if concerned about the foster parent not following through with the needed activities of the adoption assessment within the 90-day deadline the family’s certification/adoption worker must meet (unless it is extended by the Child Welfare program manager). The adoption application may be delayed for reasons that do not indicate the adoption process should be terminated, such as delays in getting a medical appointment due to a physician’s office schedule or a family move. If the adoption worker is concerned the foster parent is not able to meet the standards to be approved for adoption, the worker should discuss this with their supervisor. Denial of adoption home study approval is discussed in OAR Chapter 413, Division 120, Adoption.

Disclosure of Child Information to The Foster Parent if They Are Selected as The Adoptive Resource for The Child

Procedure

This information is for the caseworker and the certification/adoption worker. This is limited information about disclosure of child information to the selected adoptive family. Therefore, the two workers should refer to the procedure manual Chapter 5, Section 7 “Selecting adoptive families, disclosure of information to and about adoptive families” on sharing information with adoptive families.

- The caseworker provides the materials listed on the Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents form CF 963 to the adoption worker of the current caretaker if selected. If the adoption decision specialist makes the decision after an adoption committee adjourns, the worker for the family and the caseworker discuss how the materials will get to the adoption worker immediately.
- The caseworker and the adoption worker decide who should discuss the possible future ramifications of the child’s history (such as genetically transmitted conditions, prenatal exposure to substances, history of neglect, etc.) with the current caretaker. Give the foster parent an opportunity to ask questions, consult with specialists and, if they feel they cannot meet the child’s needs, decline to continue as the adoptive family.

The Supervisor's Role

- Consult with and provide guidance to the caseworker about the caseworker’s process to proceed to free a child for adoption and the foster parent’s request to be an adoptive resource for the child. Discuss the diligent search, the progress of the diligent search and confirm whether a relative is being considered for adoption. Support the worker in considering the child’s current and long-term needs when thinking about the foster family.

- Reinforce the agency’s emphasis on prioritizing relatives and current caretakers.

- Support and be available to provide guidance to the caseworker as they work with a foster family during the process of being studied and considered as a potential adoptive resource.

- Help the worker determine which adoption selection process should be used.

- Attend the Permanency Committee and/or adoption committee with the caseworker as needed when the worker is inexperienced or the case is highly controversial.

- After the current caretaker adoption home study or update is complete and approved, inform the worker of adoption selection process to use, as well as the notification responsibilities and deadlines related to selection. This is found in:

  A. Adoption Placement Selection I-G.1.5 at this link; and

  B. Chapter 6, Section 7 “Selecting the adoptive family” in the procedure manual.

- Identify the appropriate child information disclosure materials to the current caretaker if they are selected as the adoptive resource. The disclosure materials are indicated on the Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents form 963.

- Consult with the Central Office Child Permanency Program as needed if there are seriously concerning issues or questions along the way.

Section 5D: Child Welfare conflict of interest and employee adoptions and exceptions to the conflict of interest ODHS policy
Child Welfare conflict of interest and employee adoptions and exceptions to the conflict of interest ODHS policy

This section discusses potential conflict of interest in adoption application and consideration of:

I. Specific categories of ODHS employees;

OR

II. Partners for whom there may be a potential conflict with ODHS and who do not fall into the category of ODHS employees described above;

AND

III. The applicant described above wishes to adopt a child in the custody of:

A. ODHS;

OR

B. Another public child welfare agency and for whom there is an Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC) request for an adoption home study.

Determining conflict of interest for partners and ODHS employees who apply to adopt and referral for home study assessment

Procedure

I. Determine whether there is a potential conflict of interest for an adoption home study application. There are potential conflicts of interest with two categories of individuals submitting adoption applications to adopt children in the custody of ODHS or another public child welfare agency:

A. Partners (non-ODHS employees): The Child Welfare program manager (CWPM) determines a potential conflict of interest with a ODHS partner applying to adopt. If the CWPM is unable to determine if there is a conflict of interest, the Child Permanency Program manager or designee makes the determination about a partner applicant.

B. ODHS employees: ODHS staff members who are employees of Child Welfare or Self-Sufficiency Services have a potential conflict of interest as adoptive applicants.

II. When an applicant has a conflict of interest in a category above, refer the applicant to one of the following for the adoption home study assessment:

A. A local Child Welfare office in another district, with approval of the supervisor; or

B. A contracted adoption agency, with the approval of the Central Office Child Permanency Program manager or designee.
1. Provide the private contracted adoption agency with a description of the child’s strengths and needs, including the type of adoptive family most likely to be able to meet the child’s needs.

2. Provide the Adoption Child Summary and any other documentation that describes the child’s special needs, such as developmental, psychological evaluations, early intervention evaluations, mental health assessments or physician’s reports.

Conflict of interest procedure for specific ODHS employees

The administration has determined there is an inherent conflict of interest in being both an ODHS employee in Child Welfare and Self-Sufficiency positions (the ODHS organization formerly known as Children Adults and Families) and an adoptive parent for children in ODHS custody. Therefore, unless it is in the child’s best interest and an exception is granted, employees shall not be adoptive parents for children in the custody of the department.

ODHS employees of Child Welfare and Self-Sufficiency Services must obtain approval to adopt a child in the custody of ODHS. The employee has the primary responsibility to initiate and follow through with these conflict of interest policies. The adoption worker and caseworker should also become familiar with the relevant policies. The department’s approval must be complete by the time of the adoption selection process.

The administration has not made the exception for ODHS Child Welfare and Self-Sufficiency Services employees who wish to apply as general applicants for children in the custody of the department. The administration has granted exceptions when:

I. The child is a relative of the employee;

II. The employee is the substitute caregiver for the child; OR

III. The employee has a significant pre-existing relationship with the child.

When applicable, read the following policies related to ODHS employee conflict of interest:

I. Conflict of Interest Policy Addendum for CAF Employees

III. ODHS-060-002, Conflict of Interest Policy www.ODHS.state.or.us/policy/admin/hr/060_002.htm

IV. ODHS-060-002-01, Conflict of Interest Procedure www.ODHS.state.or.us/policy/admin/hr/060_002_01.htm

Procedure

The employee of ODHS Child Welfare or Self-Sufficiency Services applying to adopt a child in the custody of ODHS must:

I. Request an exception by completing the form ODHS 0103, Exception Request for Review and Determination:
II. Track the form to make sure it follows the required approvals. The exception request will be reviewed for approval by at least the employee’s supervisor, the district manager, the Central Office Child Welfare and Self-Sufficiency executive manager of field services and the assigned senior human resources manager and may include others. Approved exception requests will receive management oversight and will be considered an exception to the department’s official position on conflicts of interest.

III. Upon receipt, inform the caseworker and adoption worker of the outcome of the request.

Adoption home study release for an adoption selection process and redaction or summary if needed in a case with potential conflict of interest

An adoptive applicant must sign a release of information to release the adoption home study in an adoption selection process for a child in the custody of the department. The Central Office Child Permanency Program manager has discretion to determine that any written information released be a summary or redacted copy when:

I. An applicant requests their home study or other information be redacted or summarized; or

II. There is a conflict of interest, such as an employee or partner conflict identified by the Child Welfare program manager, Child Permanency Program manager or designee.

If concerned about an applicant’s private information being shared in an adoption selection process, a caseworker, adoption worker or applicant may request additional protections for the applicant’s private information.

Procedure

The caseworker, adoption worker or applicant makes a request to the Central Office Child Permanency Program manager for a summary or redaction to be provided for the department’s adoption selection process. The request may be verbal, though written is preferable, especially from ODHS staff. Include in the request:

I. Name of family being considered;

II. Name of child or children for whom an adoption selection process is being planned;

III. Description of the potential conflict of interest;

IV. Description of type of information to be summarized or redacted and why (please be brief); and

V. Indicate if there is a date set for the adoption selection process.

Referring adoption selection to Central Office Adoption Committee

After the adoption home study is complete, the caseworker refers a case to a Central Office Adoption Committee for the adoption selection decision when a potential adoptive resource to be considered is:

I. A ODHS staff member and the requirements of the ODHS-060-002, Conflict of Interest Policy and the Conflict
Chapter 6 • Section 5D: Child Welfare conflict of interest and employee adoptions and exceptions to the conflict of interest ODHS policy

The supervisor’s role

I. Assist a staff member as applicable who wishes to adopt to understand the adoption process for department employees in Child Welfare and Self-Sufficiency.

II. Help the adoption worker determine where to refer a partner for whom there may be a conflict of interest who wishes to adopt a child in the department’s custody.

III. Be familiar with ODHS-060-002, Conflict of Interest Policy and the Conflict of Interest Policy Addendum for CAF Employees and the conditions under which an exception to the policy may be made.

IV. Be familiar with the adoption application and selection policies related to conflict of interest and confidentiality.

Section 6: Recruitment for general applicant adoptive families (and occasionally for long-term foster families)
Recruitment for general applicant adoptive families (and occasionally for long-term foster families)

Recruitment is a critical step in finding prospective permanent families for a child and should be tailored to the specific child. Recruitment gives prospective adoptive families and their adoption workers an opportunity to learn introductory information about waiting children. Recruitment should begin in a timely manner so the child can begin living with their adoptive family as soon as possible. This procedure refers to caseworker activities for children who need adoption recruitment. In some cases, caseworkers may use recruitment tools for children needing permanency, when their relatives and foster family are not available.

The child’s caseworker must recruit for adoptive families for legal risk and legally free children when the child’s primary plan is adoption and the child:

I. Does not have a relative resource that the agency is attempting to contact, assess or select;

II. Does not have an identified current caretaker adoptive resource to be considered;

III. Has approval for recruitment from the legal assistance specialist from the Child Permanency Program if the child is not legally free; or

IV. Does not have a prospective resource identified through the Permanency Committee process to consider alone as a prospective a resource with whom the child has an existing relationship per OAR 413-120-0750 (5)(b) due to the child’s best interests.

In some cases, the caseworker may recruit for children who do not have adoption as the plan, but who need a permanent foster family. In most of these cases, the child’s team should maintain a sense of openness to the possibility that the foster family may eventually become more permanent through adoption or guardianship.

The minimum duration of recruitment is 30 days unless there is an approval from the Child Permanency Program assistant program manager or designee for a shorter timeframe.

Documented recruitment efforts are required for a child to be eligible for adoption assistance, except when it would not be in the best interest of the child. The child’s caseworker should contact the adoption assistance program coordinator for consultation when uncertain about eligibility requirements. The caseworker should document recruitment efforts and results in ORKids case notes.

Activities before recruitment

Procedure

Before recruitment for waiting general applicant families, the caseworker must work with their supervisor to ensure specific casework tasks have been completed for recruitment readiness. Keep in mind that the department’s preference for placement of a child for adoption is with current caretakers, relatives and with siblings.
Also remember recruitment efforts may not consider race, color or national origin of the adoptive family or child, except when the child is an American Indian or Alaska Native child. An Indian child is any unmarried person under age eighteen who is either a member of an American Indian or Alaska Native tribe or is eligible for membership in a tribe and is the biological child of a member of a tribe. See 413-070-0010 to 0030 and OAR Chapter 413, division 115.

I. Before pursuing a nonrelated potential adoptive resource, the caseworker and the caseworker’s supervisor must comply with the following requirements:
   A. Review the department’s diligent efforts to identify, contact and place a child or young adult with relatives and to place siblings together as required under OAR 413-070-0060 to 413-070-0087; and
   B. Confirm there are no current department actions to identify or assess a child’s relative who has either expressed an interest in and needs to be or currently is being assessed as a potential adoptive resource.
   C. Confirm there are no department actions to assess a child’s current caretaker who has either expressed an interest in and needs to be or currently is being assessed as a potential adoptive resource.

II. Consider the legal status of the child. There is no need for a court order to be able to recruit. When a child is not fully free for adoption, the legal assistance specialist must:
   A. Determine when recruitment may begin;
   B. Determine whether recruitment may begin for a child with extraordinary needs before the department initiates the process to free the child for adoption; and
   C. Notify the caseworker to begin recruitment efforts.

III. Ensure the following documents are received by the Central Office Child Permanency Program's seamless support staff person teamed with the legal assistance specialist:
   A. Father’s questionnaire, birth certificate and child adoption summary narrative;
   B. ICWA documentation; and
   C. If child is to be separated from other siblings for adoption by a Permanency Committee process, the Permanency Committee Form 0270, as applicable.

IV. Determine the child’s current and possible long-term needs in an adoptive family:
   A. Request input about the knowledge, skills, abilities and commitment a potential adoptive resource needs to best be able to meet the current and lifelong needs of the child from:
      1. Professionals who have worked closely with the child;
      2. Relatives and foster parents; and
      3. The child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative, Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC) representative and foster parent when applicable.

V. Consider the child’s readiness for adoption and discuss this with the supervisor. See the procedure manual’s Chapter V, Section 4 “Preparing children for adoption” for more information on this topic.

VI. Review ICWA information for each child. For children for whom the provisions of ICWA apply, the worker must follow preferences for adoptive placements. Where no different order of preference has been established by the child’s tribe for adoptive placement, the worker must, in the absence of the court’s determination that good cause to the contrary exists, give preference to placing the child with:

A. A member of the child’s extended family;
B. Members of the American Indian or Alaska Native child’s tribe; or
C. Members of other tribes.

This means that the worker may specify in the child bulletin that the department will give priority to recruited prospective families who are members of the child’s tribe, then members of other American Indian or Alaska Native tribes, and then, if the agency does not seem to have one or more compatible American Indian or Alaska Native prospective families, prospective parents who are not members of a tribe.

Waiting child bulletins and Oregon Adoption Resource Exchange (OARE)

A waiting child bulletin is a recruitment tool to notify department and Special Needs Adoption Coalition (SNAC) adoption workers, approved prospective families and recruiters that a specific child is waiting for an adoptive family. The Oregon Adoption Resource Exchange (OARE) features introductory information and photos of waiting children. OARE is a password-protected website. Waiting Oregon families with approved department or SNAC adoption home studies who are eligible to adopt waiting children in the department’s custody also receive permission to use OARE. Find the website at www.OARE-kids.org. Those needing access must register on OARE to get a password.

Posting of the waiting child bulletin on the Oregon Adoption Resource Exchange (OARE) is the minimum level of required recruitment; therefore the posting on OARE is a significant recruitment marker.

To keep information on OARE as current as possible, the caseworker must contact OARE at oare@nwresource.org and the assigned Child Permanency Program staff member responsible for processing bulletins when one of the following has occurred:

I. Families have been identified for consideration at an adoption selection process and a date for an adoption committee or caseworker selection has been scheduled. The child’s status on OARE will be changed to “on hold.”

II. A child has been placed in the adoptive home. The child’s status on OARE will be changed to “inactive.”

Obtain photos of the child for the waiting child bulletin

The caseworker is responsible for obtaining photos for recruitment. The Oregon Adoption Resource Exchange website allows up to three photos of a child or sibling group to be shown. Digital photos must be of high quality. Consider a closer head shot or head and shoulders shot for the opening page. Additional photos showing the child in full, with different expressions, or doing an activity they like may be used along with the narrative description of the child.

Website recruitment on the computer highlights the beauty of children’s photos, as well as the parts that are not so good. As a result, there is greater emphasis on the quality of photos for online use. Generally, for children with significant special needs, older children, minorities and sibling groups, the best practice is to engage in intensive recruitment efforts from the beginning and initial photos are very important. Starting recruitment with high quality photos typically generates more family interest and conveys respect for children.

The photos should be in focus, clearly show the child and be flattering. The child’s eyes should be open. See “Hints” below. The caseworker may take photos, foster parents often have photos, and many local Child Welfare offices may have arrangements with photographers. A free option for a portrait in most locations is a professional volunteer photographer. This is separate from the Heart Gallery. To easily request a photographer, go to the Waiting Child Bulletin form 0425 on the form server or to OARE to request the form. Here is the link: www.ODHS.state.or.us/caf/photo_gallery_form.doc. Send the completed form to the designated person in the Child Permanency Program, and that staff member will refer to the appropriate resource.

Reminders about photos for recruitment:

I. If professional photos are submitted, have written permission/copyright release by the photo studio for any photos to be used for recruitment purposes. Photos from the above website or any Heart Gallery do not require written permission.

II. Send photos in JPG format. Do not send photocopies or scanned copies of a photo, as these do not reproduce well in other media.

III. A short video on OARE is also an option.

IV. Include all siblings being recruited for together in one photo.

Hints from Adopt US Kids website on taking good photos

I. Take photographs at a time that is convenient for the child. Don’t take him out of his favorite class or stop her just as she is going to basketball practice.

II. Focus on the location for the child’s photograph. The easiest and best pictures frequently are outdoors, because there is plenty of light and the child is free to pose in a play area. (Do not have holiday themes or outfits in the photos, as they can make the photo focus too much on the child’s waiting time. For instance, a family seeing a bulletin in August may view the Christmas tree behind a sibling group as outdated.)

III. Let the child pick a favorite outfit and background for the photo. Be sure the child’s hair is clean and cared for and the child looks well-groomed.

IV. Consider taking pictures of the child doing a preferred activity or with a special toy. Keep in mind, however, that the child should be clearly visible in the photo. For example, if a child loves soccer, rather than taking a picture of her playing soccer, take a picture of her in her soccer uniform or holding a soccer ball. Make it fun!

V. Consider the child’s skin tone when picking the background.

VI. Take close-up photographs of the child (or children if a sibling group) that are face forward, and of the waist or shoulders up.

VII. Set aside enough time so that you won’t feel rushed. Plan to spend at least an hour at the photo session.

VIII. Shoot many photos – at least 24 shots. This number of photos generally guarantees three or four photos will be acceptable.
IX. Have a familiar person, such as a caseworker or foster parent, present during the photo session to put the child at ease.

Tip

Please avoid these cliché phrases in the bulletin: say hello to [child’s name], he is all boy, she is all girl or she is from typical Caucasian culture.

Create a waiting child bulletin

Procedure

The caseworker is to:

I. Obtain photos. If a child has photos taken by a Heart Gallery volunteer photographer, the worker may use those photos for the child bulletin.

II. Write the child’s bulletin profile using the form CW 425 from the ODHS forms directory. Be sure to enable macros when opening the form. The form has prompts about content describing the child. Find more depth about writing bulletin content on the Adopt US Kids website in the informative guide for caseworkers called Lasting Impressions: A Guide for Photolisting Children at this link. Another useful guide for bulletin narrative content is Making it Right available at this link and on the Oregon Adoption Resource Exchange website.

III. When writing about a child under 2 years of age, the worker may be challenged with a shorter history, compared to older children. For very young children, the worker strives to make the child come across as a unique individual to prospective families reading the bulletin. Here are some prompts:

   A. Consider how the child behaves during worker visits. What does the child like to do? How they respond to the foster parent(s). What the child’s general temperament? What does the child find interesting? How does the child respond to pets? What makes the child light up? What scares the child? What makes the child laugh? What has the child recently learned to do? If worker does not know child well, ask foster parents, social service assistant, child’s attorney, service providers, birth relatives or CASA some of these questions.

   B. Research developmental stages and tasks for the child’s age range and describe how the child has engaged in previous tasks and is currently developing new tasks.

   C. Think about the child’s medical and developmental history and the extended family’s genetic history. Describe the type of family likely to be able to meet the child’s needs based on current or possible future issues. Examples: she needs a calm, quite environment due to her level of sensitivity to stimulation, or he will do well with a parent who is able to be attuned to the child’s cues, be readily available to help the child self-soothe and work with professionals who can help with attachment.

   D. Briefly describe elements of the transition, such as the child needing their parent(s) to engage in an intensive concentrated transition time to attach to the new family.

IV. If the recruitment is for long-term foster care, Use the Long-Term Foster Family Recruitment Referral form in the Appendix for Chapter V, Section 6 to refer a child for a bulletin on OARE. Follow directions on the form.

V. Send an electronic version of the bulletin and up to three photos to the person in the local Child Welfare office. who is the identified “bulletin approver.” The worker may also send a short video of the child for posting. The worker should send the bulletin approver the child’s last name and case name in the email, but the last name of the child or case name is not included in the actual bulletin.

After ensuring any needed corrections are made in the local office to the bulletin form or photos, the bulletin approver emails an electronic copy of the bulletin and photos to the staff person in the Central Office Child Permanency Program responsible for processing bulletins.

Active retention: Respond to adoption workers of prospective families

After identifying families to consider at an adoption selection process, follow up with all adoption workers who have submitted home studies. Many adoption workers and hopeful waiting families have said this is important for family retention.

I. Send a confirmation email to the adoption worker that you received the home study. A simple, “Thank you for submitting the [Simpson] family for [children’s first names],” will suffice.

II. Identify families in categories for consideration. One possible system is to identify families for a selection process, as being “on reserve” in the event one of the originally identified families is no longer being considered, or is not identified for consideration at a selection process. “No thank you” is better for families than hearing nothing.

III. A simple statement to the adoption workers is sufficient and makes families and adoption workers have a sense of being respected. Follow up with adoption workers about their submitted home studies, by:
   - Sending the CF 0409, Adoption Home Study Response Checklist; or
   - Sending an email to the adoption workers providing the same information as listed in the CF 0409.

   The form is available in PDF at this link and in MS Word at this link.

IV. While receiving home studies, organize the studies in a way that will help you track responses. A system will be beneficial in your communications with adoption workers.
Recruitment for children who need wider exposure: Child-specific recruitment

Many children who are in sibling groups, older children, children of color or children with significant special needs require more extensive recruitment beyond the child bulletin on OARE. The department has valuable assistance to caseworkers for extensive recruitment through a contract with the Special Need Adoption Coalition. The caseworker considers the length of time for recruitment based on the response and the children’s special needs. Keep in mind the minimum recruitment is 30 days without Central Office approval to decrease that timeframe. If the caseworker has concerns the recruitment on OARE alone is not sufficient, refer the child for child-specific recruitment. The child’s picture and introductory information may be placed in newsletters, recruitment websites and other media. Recruitment options include ads in newspapers, TV spots and regional and national recruitment websites. Each referral for recruitment is individualized to the specific needs of the child or children and the caseworker approves the initial recruitment plan and all updates to that plan.

Procedure

I. Refer the child to a child-specific recruitment specialist (CSR) at 503-542-2301 or CSR@boysandgirlsaid.org.

II. Once the child or siblings has been assigned a CSR, meet face-to-face with the CSR. Allow the CSR to read the child’s file, including copies of evaluations.

III. Be responsive to the CSR’s requests for information. The recruiter will learn about the child’s history, strengths, interests, needs and challenges. Ask people who may have input about the child to assist the recruiter. Those people may include foster parents, therapists, school staff, CASAs, mentors and relatives.

IV. Give the CSR feedback. From the information provided by the worker and through discussion with the child and important people who know the child, the recruitment specialist will develop an individual recruitment plan (IRP) for each child or sibling group. The caseworker has input on the plan and approves the final plan.

V. The CSR will actively begin recruitment in Oregon and in most cases, throughout the United States, based on the IRP, unless directed differently.

VI. The CSR will meet with the child or sibling group and will attend team meetings, when appropriate. The CSR can provide additional support services to the caseworker by helping update child summaries, updating waiting child bulletins, contributing to the Life Story books for each child and screening adoption home studies. The CSR can also provide support to the child or sibling group, the foster family and the adoptive or permanent resource family through the transition.

VII. Participate in the monthly check-ins with the CSR who will contact the caseworker to determine what recruitment efforts should continue. This can be by email, phone or in person. Be prepared to address the following:

A. Report if there is a change in the child’s legal status.

B. Report any significant changes in the child’s needs relevant to recruitment such as new medical problems, severe behavioral changes, significant gains and separation or reunification of siblings.

C. If a child’s bulletin is no longer active, request the bulletin can be placed on hold. Recruitment can resume by requesting reactivation through the Central Office Child Permanency Program and OARE as describe above.

D. If appropriate, due to successful response to recruitment efforts, request that the recruitment end when the child transitions to the permanent family.

VIII. Accept help from CSRs. The recruiter’s main goal is to maximize prospective family interest in the child. The recruiter can help with screening, reading and responding to adoption workers. This can be an enormous help to the caseworker.

IX. If recruitment has occurred for more than six to eight months and the child has not had an adoptive family selected for them, the caseworker gets new pictures and revises the bulletin to give the child the best recruitment options for an adoptive family.

Worker information: Enhanced recruitment options through child-specific recruitment with the contracted SNAC agency

I. The Oregonian has a weekly waiting child feature accessed through Boys & Girls Aid Society.

II. Northwest Adoption Exchange (NWAE) recruitment is for children with significant special needs. This internet recruitment tool is a website featuring children from northwest states and may be found at this link: www.nwae.org/

III. ADOPT US KIDS is a national internet recruitment tool. To see the website follow this link: www.adoptuskids.org/

IV. Wednesday’s Child on KOIN News 6 in Portland features waiting children and is recorded monthly. Jeff Gianola, the host of the program, was awarded a national Angel in Adoption award for his dedication to finding families through this feature.

V. Wednesday’s Child in Idaho is enhanced recruitment for children who are older than the age of 8, are a sibling group, have special needs that require broader area recruitment or are on the recruitment track for six months or longer. There are generally two opportunities for recording in a year, summer and winter. The child’s caseworker and supervisor give permission for this service as they work with the CSR. The website is www.idahowednesdayschild.org.

VI. Wendy’s Wonderful Kids (WWK) is available in some counties. The WWK recruiters are housed at Boys & Girls Aid Society in Portland and at other some department offices. They work to find matches between children in foster care and potential adoptive families. The WWK recruiter does intensive and specialized recruitment for each child receiving WWK services. This is available to selected children who have very high special needs, are in large sibling groups, are older or for whom other efforts to recruit have been exhausted. The caseload is limited, but the caseworker in a county served by the grant may contact the Boys & Girls Aid adoption coordinator or the Central Office Child Permanency Program adoption placement specialist for information on referral. Support to the child and adoptive or guardianship family is ongoing until finalization, even when the child our sibling group is placed out-of-state.

VII. The Oregon Heart Gallery by Boys & Girls Aid and Northwest Heart Gallery by A Family for Every Child are recruitment options for children with approval from the child’s caseworker. The Heart Gallery is a unique opportunity for children to have their portraits taken by professional photographers to recruit families. The photos are publicly displayed in Heart Gallery exhibits that move around the state. Workers, supervisors and children can read about the Heart Gallery at this [link] at Adopt US Kids (look for Oregon and then Heart Gallery).

Criteria for Heart Gallery recruitment:

A. Sibling groups who need more efforts for recruitment;

B. Minority children of any age; or

C. Children with high needs who need additional recruitment.

Approval is through the supervisor and child’s caseworker if the child meets the above criteria. Referral is by email through the designated Central Office Child Permanency Program staff member who processes the waiting child bulletins. Find the referral form in the appendix of this chapter.

Ending recruitment

When the caseworker is ready for recruitment to end, the caseworker notifies the Central Office Child Permanency staff as discussed above in the subsection on OARE. Recruitment is automatically ended when the appropriate adoption selection report has been received in Central Office. In instances where the caseworker is recruiting for a young child and is inundated with home studies, the worker may, with supervisor approval, contact the Central Office Child Permanency Program staff person to request the bulletin status be changed to inactive when they have sufficient families (one to three in number) for adoption selection. In most other cases, the receipt of the adoption selection report will change the status from active to inactive.

The supervisor’s role

I. Help caseworker select the best recruitment options, tailored to the child’s characteristics and the child’s ability to handle certain recruitment methods.

II. Ensure the bulletin photos for children with higher needs are high quality and as appealing as possible.

III. Assist the caseworker determine and approve additional recruitment methods beyond the OARE child bulletin, as needed.

IV. Review the narrative content of the waiting child bulletin for children with higher special needs. Make sure that the content is compliant with MEPA/IPA and ICWA as applicable for the child.

V. For very young children, make sure that the bulletin content describes the child and is not generic.

VI. Assist the worker in their plan to read studies received through recruitment. Encourage the worker to use the child-specific recruitment specialist to screen, read and respond to home studies if there is recruitment beyond the use of OARE.

VII. Help the worker decide the appropriateness of adoption as a permanent plan if recruitment efforts do not result in appropriate families.

VIII. Discuss, in rare circumstances, cases in which a child has a significant relationship with a resource when it may be in the child’s best interest to consider a single general applicant, rather than multiple general applicant families. This is done with permission of the legal assistance specialist and adoption placement specialist.

Chapter 6
Section 7: Selecting the adoptive family
Selecting the adoptive family

A. Introduction to adoption selection decision making

This section describes for caseworkers and adoption/certification workers the department’s processes to make decisions to select the adoptive family for a child or sibling group in the custody of ODHS. The department must make a formal decision to select the adoptive family for a child or sibling group.

The goal of the adoption selection processes is to select an adoptive family likely to meet the child’s long-term needs for permanency, attachment, safety and well-being. Because this is a complex and life-changing decision for the child, the department seeks input from specific individuals who know the child and invites them to be involved in the process. ODHS selection procedures are intended to maximize the availability of information to those involved, use professional expertise, minimize or omit conflict of interest, and maintain the priority of making decisions based on the best interest of the child or children. Selection procedures also protect the confidentiality of the prospective adoptive families under consideration.

For more about the adoption selection process, refer to OAR 413-120-0010 to 0060.

B. Identifying the appropriate adoption selection process

Procedure

I. Before proceeding with an adoption placement selection process, the caseworker must follow the provisions of OAR 413-120-0700 to 0760, Identification and Consideration of Potential Adoptive Resources. OAR 413-120-0700 to 413-120-0760 to identify the family or families to be considered for an adoption selection process.

II. Consult with the supervisor to refer the child and the identified prospective adoptive family or families to the appropriate adoption selection process.

There are three types of adoption selection processes:

A. Caseworker selection after considering input from the child’s team and following consultation with the supervisor.

B. Local office adoption committee and selection by adoption decision specialist.

C. Central Office adoption committee and selection by adoption decision specialist.

An adoption selection chart is included in the Appendix of this section.

For both the local and Central Office adoption committees, the committee members make recommendations on the adoptive resource and the adoption decision specialist (ADS) makes the adoption placement selection. The ADS is appointed by the Central Office Child Permanency Program manager. The ADS must have significant expertise in the areas of adoption and permanency issues, experience with adoption placement planning, be knowledgeable of the importance of lifelong family and cultural connections, and have no personal or current professional relationship to the child or children or the potential adoptive resources being considered. The ADS attends the adoption committee meeting and may ask clarifying questions, but does not participate in the deliberations or recommendations of the adoption committee.

Include in the discussion with the supervisor the types of families who are being considered. Relevant family characteristic for the discussion include:

I. Relatives and how they are related.

II. Current caretakers (the family’s child-specific adoption home study or update must be complete and approved for adoption).

III. Recruited general applicant families who have no connection to the child.

IV. Family is within the ICWA placement preferences.

V. The child has a significant relationship with a general applicant family and it is in the child’s best interests to consider the family alone per Permanency Committee consideration of a resource with an existing relationship (nonrelative and noncurrent caretaker) per OAR 413-120-0750 (5)(b).

VI. Nonrelative foster parents who are not current caretakers being considered with other recruited general applicant families.

VII. Family resides outside the United States.

VIII. There is a potential for a conflict of interest, such as a Child Welfare employee.

Also include in the discussion the results of the diligent search for relatives.

I. In a case with high complexities or dynamics, the caseworker, following consultation with the supervisor, may request that rather than a case worker selection, the adoption placement selection be made by an ADS, following an adoption committee recommendation. The request must be approved by the Child Welfare program manager or designee for the use of a local adoption committee when policy indicates a caseworker selection process. The caseworker and supervisor may request the adoption placement selection be made by an ADS following a Central Office adoption committee recommendation. The request must be approved by the Central Office Child Permanency Program manager, assistant program manager or designee for the use of a Central Office adoption committee when the policy indicates use of a local adoption committee.

Children for whom the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) applies: Additional considerations in selection

Procedure

For children for whom the provisions of the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) apply, the case worker must:

I. Consult OAR Chapter 413, division 115. Follow the ICWA placement order of preference. ICWA compels the department to select a family with an approved home study who fits this order of preference unless there is a tribal resolution or good cause court order.

II. Refer the case to the appropriate selection process. If ODHS is considering only one family in the ICWA order of preference, the agency requires there be a formal selection event documented on the correct form.

Cases for adoption selection process by caseworker

Cases appropriate for the adoption selection by the caseworker, (after considering information from the specific individuals who have relevant input and consultation with the supervisor), are those in which at least one of the following circumstances applies:

III. The child is identified as an American Indian or Alaska Native child and the adoption placement selection complies with OAR Chapter 413, division 115.

IV. The child is a refugee child and the adoption placement selection complies with OAR 413-070-0300 to 0380, Placement of Refugee Children.

V. A relative of a child is being considered alone as the potential adoptive resource for a child or siblings, unless:
   A. A ODHS staff member is a potential adoptive resource, and the requirements of the ODHS-060-002, Conflict of Interest Policy and the Conflict of Interest Policy Addendum for CAF Employees apply.
   B. A non-ODHS staff member with a potential conflict of interest with the agency is a potential adoptive resource.
   C. A potential adoptive resource is living outside the U.S., or OAR 413-120-0900 to 0970, Intercountry Adoption Pursuant to the Hague Convention and Intercountry Adoption Act applies.

VI. A current caretaker is being considered alone for a child or siblings unless any of the following conditions are present:
   A. A ODHS staff member is a potential adoptive resource, and the requirements of the ODHS-060-002, Conflict of Interest Policy and the Conflict of Interest Policy Addendum for CAF Employees apply.
   B. A non-ODHS staff member with a potential conflict of interest with the agency is a potential adoptive resource.
   C. A potential adoptive resource is living outside the U.S., or OAR 413-120-0900 to 0970, Intercountry Adoption Pursuant to the Hague Convention and Intercountry Adoption Act applies.

VII. A single child under six years of age with no extraordinary needs and each potential adoptive resource is a general applicant. If the identified potential adoptive resources include the child’s current foster parent who is being considered as a general applicant along with other general applicants, see adoption committee qualification information below.

Another option is available to the caseworker. Following consultation with the supervisor, the caseworker may request the adoption placement selection be referred to a local adoption committee based on the complexities or dynamics of a case. The request must be approved by the Child Welfare program manager (CWPM) or designee.

Cases for referral to local adoption committee process

The local adoption committee recommends an adoptive resource, and the (ADS) makes the adoption placement selection in specific cases. The following circumstances require a local committee process:

I. The child is six years of age or older.

II. The child of any age has extraordinary needs.

III. A sibling group is being placed together for the purpose of adoption and each potential adoptive resource is a general applicant.
IV. The identified potential adoptive resources include the child’s foster parent (as a general applicant, rather than as a current caretaker) with other general applicants.

V. The CWPM or designee approved the use of a local adoption committee rather than a caseworker selection process when the case meets the criteria of the latter. For this option, the caseworker, following consultation with the supervisor, obtains approval for the use of a local adoption committee process based on the complexities or dynamics of the case.

TIP

Permanency Committees do not make adoption selection decisions.

Caseworkers use Permanency Committees to seek some specific permanency casework related decisions, but the Permanency Committee may never be used to make any adoption selection decisions.

Cases for referral to Central Office adoption committee process

Central Office committees are available in different areas around the state, but are administered by the Central Office Child Permanency Program. Caseworkers refer to a Central Office adoption committee process in which the ADS makes the adoption placement selection when one or more of the following criteria apply:

I. The potential adoptive resources include:
   A. More than one relative.
   B. A relative and a current caretaker.
   C. More than one current caretaker family is being considered for siblings to be placed together in adoption.
   D. A ODHS staff member when the ODHS-060-002, Conflict of Interest Policy and the Conflict of Interest Policy Addendum for CAF Employees apply.
   E. A non-ODHS staff member with a potential conflict of interest with ODHS.
   F. The potential adoptive resource is an individual living outside the U.S., or OAR 413-120-0900 to 0970, Intercountry Adoption Pursuant to the Hague Convention and Intercountry Adoption Act, applies.

II. The caseworker, following consultation with the supervisor, obtained approval for the adoption selection decision through a Central Office adoption committee process based on the complexities or dynamics of the case. The Child Permanency Program manager, assistant program manager or designee must approve the use of a Central Office adoption committee when the case would otherwise meet caseworker selection process or local adoption committee criteria.

Cases for referral to Central Office adoption committee process

An adoption committee must include the following individuals:

I. The caseworker of each child for whom adoption placement selection is being made. When the caseworker for a child is unavailable, the local office may substitute another worker or supervisor who is familiar with the case, to attend the adoption committee on their behalf.
II. Three individuals who are appointed by the CWPM or designee for a local adoption committee and appointed by the Central Office Child Permanency Program manager, assistant program manager, or designee for a Central Office adoption committee:
   A. Facilitator, who must be a department staff person; and
   B. Two neutral individuals who may be community partners or department staff.

These specific committee members must:
   A. Be knowledgeable of adoption and permanency issues;
   B. Be knowledgeable of the importance of lifelong family and cultural connections; and
   C. Have no personal or current professional relationship to any of the children for whom adoption placement selection is being made or to the potential adoptive resources being considered.

III. The following individuals for each child for whom adoption placement selection is being made must be notified of the adoption committee as applicable for each child. The following individuals may choose to be adoption committee members, but they are not mandated to be committee members:
   A. The CASA;
   B. The child’s attorney;
   C. A tribal representative if the child is an American Indian or Alaska Native child; and
   D. A member of the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC) if the child is a refugee child.

The ADS is not a member of the adoption committee.

The supervisor’s role

I. Provide consultation on the appropriate adoption selection process for the child or sibling group being placed together for adoption.

II. Be aware of the differences and tasks for the three adoption selection processes (caseworker adoption selection, local adoption committee and Central Office adoption committee) and the Permanency Committee.

III. Help the worker prepare to conduct disclosure about the child’s information to prospective families as appropriate for each specific stage in the consideration and selection process.

IV. Help the worker prepare for the adoption committee meeting when the case indicates a selection process at an adoption committee, especially if the worker is inexperienced in participating at an adoption committee. Encourage the worker to prepare their outline for the committee by using the form 0256 Child Presentation by Caseworker for Adoption Committee, which is an optional outline. The form helps the caseworker have a focused verbal presentation of child information at adoption committee.

V. Inform the worker of the form 0257 Child Presentation by Community Partner for Adoption Committee. This is an optional outline for the verbal presentation of child information at adoption committee. The CASA, child’s attorney, therapist, foster parent, mentor, service provider and other partners invited may use the form to give information about the child at the adoption committee.

VI. Help the worker maintain the focus on the child’s best interests when there seem to be vying interests in case planning for adoption selection.

VII. Consult with the Central Office Child Permanency Program’s adoption placement specialist or supervisor for question about the adoption selection process.

C. Caseworker and adoption worker responsibilities: Caseworker selection process

Specific cases are referred for the caseworker selection decisions after considering the input from the child’s team and following consultation with the supervisor. Cases in which caseworkers may select adoptive families are generally less complicated than cases referred to adoption committees. The caseworker is not alone when considering the decision, as the supervisor, specific individuals who know the child and the adoption workers are involved to provide information and recommendations. Workers can also consult with respected, knowledgeable colleagues about the selection process.

Adoption selections must be made according to OAR 413-120-0010 to 0060, Adoption Placement Selection rules at this link. See the Chapter 5, Section 7 appendix for information about what cases go to what adoption selection process.

When the caseworker selection process is the appropriate method for a child for whom ICWA applies, the worker must follow this entire process to select the adoptive family, except the caseworker follows the ICWA preferences for adoption selection found at this link.

When reading the following material, notice that within the stages of the process there are references to both business days and calendar days.

Procedure

The caseworker and adoption worker have interconnected responsibilities in the following procedure:

I. The timelines below may be changed when the caseworker, the adoption worker for each of the identified potential adoptive resources, and the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC representative as applicable, agree on a new timeline.

II. If any of the following individuals are involved, the caseworker must contact the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and member of the RCWAC to solicit their voluntary input regarding the child’s long-term needs and possible characteristics related to adoptive family compatibility. For formal adoption selection, this is the first time the caseworker is required to gather input from these individuals on consideration of families for the child.

III. The caseworker consults with their supervisor to consider others who may have input about parent and family characteristics related to a family’s long-term ability to successfully adopt the child and provide for the child’s safety, permanency and well-being. These individuals may be the child’s foster parent, therapist, former foster parent, extended family member, child when appropriate, treatment providers, mentor, medical provider, teacher and others who know the child and the child’s special needs.

IV. The supervisor reviews the diligent relative search with the caseworker. The supervisor ensures the agency has conducted a diligent search and is not assessing, identifying or having an adoption agency conduct an adoption home study for any other relatives not identified for consideration. The relative search and results should be well-documented; see OAR 413-070-0060 to 0087, Search for and Engagement of Relatives. at this link for more information.

V. The caseworker reviews home studies of applicants and identifies up to three potential adoptive resources according to the priorities in OAR 413-120-0700 to 0760, Identification and Consideration of Potential Adoptive Resources. Home studies must be approved for the purpose of adoption and be written or updated within the last 12 months. Home studies must be conducted by licensed adoption agencies.

VI. When the prospective adoptive family resides in a state that does not complete an adoption home study before a child is placed with an adoptive resource or before the child being legally free for adoption, the Central Office Child Permanency Program may approve use of a foster home study or a relative study as an adoption home study for the purpose of adoption selection. This is under the following conditions:

A. The family meets the other requirements of subsections (1)(a), (b), and (c) of 413-120-0246, Standards for an Adoptive Home and Release of an Adoption Home Study; and

B. The family must have an approved adoption home study completed before designation of the child’s placement for the purpose of adoption.

VII. When ICWA is applicable, the caseworker follows ICWA placement preferences, per OAR Chapter 413, division 115.

VIII. When the child is known to the family, the adoption worker sends the caseworker the completed and approved child-specific adoption home study or update before the selection process. This is to ensure the adoption worker has provided a completed adoption home study to the caseworker before caseworker selection.

IX. After receipt of the studies, the caseworker consults with the adoption workers for the one to three families the caseworker has identified for consideration for selection. The caseworker discusses the ability of the potential adoptive resource to meet the needs of each child under consideration.
X. The caseworker is to maintain confidentiality for prospective families regarding the release of home studies. Adoption home studies may not be shared with non-ODHS staff (the exception is contracted adoption recruiters) when the worker is still identifying families for an adoption selection process. Only when a date has been scheduled for a caseworker selection or adoption committee process may the identified home studies (that are part of the information packets) be sent to the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and member of RCWAC within the strict relevant rules of the Adoption Placement Selection OARs. The OARs are 413-120-0016, Confidentiality, 413-120-0021, Adoption Placement Selection by Caseworker and 413-120-0035 Invitation to and Notification of Adoption Committee and are found at this link.

XI. For each adoption worker of the families, the caseworker must provide written child information about the history and needs of the child, including child summary, evaluations and progress reports. The caseworker redacts identifying information from materials before giving materials to adoption workers of families. As needed, the caseworker discusses their questions, concerns and the ability of the family to meet the child’s current and potential long-term needs.

XII. Each adoption worker provides written information from the caseworker about the child to the family they represent. Each adoption worker works with the family to:

A. Describe the selection process;
B. Inform the family who will review their home study and relevant information; and
C. Obtain or verify releases of information to share family information with CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC representative as applicable.

XIII. In addition to written information and verbal disclosure from the caseworker, prospective families may talk with others who know the child. This should be strictly controlled to protect the child and confidentiality of the child, adoptive families and foster families. For more detail about sharing information about the child at this specific stage in the decision making process, see in Chapter 5, Section 7, Subsection E, “Disclosure of the child’s information to adoptive families.”

XIV. Adoption workers confirm with the caseworker whether families are still willing, available and appropriate to be considered for the child. This is especially important when there is a long wait between when an adoption worker submits a general applicant family’s study and the caseworker schedules the selection date.

XV. After the caseworker has confirmed the identified potential families are available and appropriate to be considered, the caseworker sets the date for selection and notifies the adoption workers of the date. Adoption workers do not attend the meeting between the caseworkers and supervisor, as the worker has already discussed information and questions with the adoption workers. There is not a local “mini committee” process or Permanency Committee process in which people “vote” for families.

XVI. The caseworker must complete the following for the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member at least 10 business days before adoption selection:

A. Notify them of date scheduled for selection.
B. Send packets of home studies and other relevant information, unless the person specifically states that they do not want a packet.
C. Request input about each family’s abilities to meet the child’s needs and notify each that the worker must receive voluntary input two days before selection.

XVII. Before selection, the caseworker:
   A. Considers input from CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member. This is the second time this request is required. Note this date and content in OR-Kids.
   B. Consults with the supervisor and notes the date in OR-Kids.

XVIII. On the date of the scheduled selection, the caseworker makes the decision on selection following consultation with their supervisor. The worker may select a backup family to be the adoptive family should the selected family not become the adoptive placement. The worker may also decide that none of the families considered were appropriate for selection as the adoptive resource.

XIX. The caseworker documents their selection decisions and rationale on one of the following ODHS forms:
   A. Caseworker Adoption Selection Decision form 0255 for all caseworker selections except when a nonrelative current caretaker is considered alone.
   B. Current Caretaker Consideration Report form for consideration of a nonrelative current caretaker alone. Use form 251’s page called Caseworker Selection Decision, Section 10. Use the form used for the Permanency Committee and documents the decision of the CWPM or designee.

XX. The caseworker’s documentation about their reasoning behind the decisions should include discussion about how the selected family is likely to meet the child’s current and possible long-term special needs. Bullets are fine. “Child attached,” alone is not sufficient information about the rational for a selection decision. The worker may also choose not to select a family, in which case, the worker briefly states the concerning issues. The worker should aim to have an informed reader understand their rationale for their decisions. See the Appendix for more detail in the article called “Caseworker and adoption decision specialist rationale documentation guidelines” for more information.

XXI. The CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative or RCWAC member who received adoption selection information packets of home studies and other materials during the selection process must return the materials to ODHS within seven business days of the notice of selection decision.

D. Caseworker and adoption worker notification responsibilities after caseworker selection process

I. The caseworker notifies the adoption workers of the decisions by the end of the scheduled day of the adoption selection process.

II. The caseworker sends written notice of the outcome by the end of the next business day following the selection date to the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member. This may be done by email, U.S. Postal Service, fax or other electronic means.

III. The caseworker sends written notice of the outcome by the end of the next business day following the selection date to the adoptive family not studied by ODHS using the ODHS 0260 Notification of the Adoption Selection Outcome form letter.
IV. ODHS adoption workers who presented families are responsible for sending letters to the respective families using the 260 Notification of the Adoption Selection Outcome form letter. This is sent by the end of the next business day following the adoption placement selection. As is good practice, workers are also responsible for engaged, direct verbal communication with families after the selection process. Document this information in OR-Kids provider notes.

V. The caseworker notifies the Central Office Child Permanency Program within three days of the decision of the selection. The worker notifies by sending a fax or email to the Central Office seamless support staff person who is teamed with child’s branch’s legal assistance specialist. The caseworker does not save the selection form in OR-Kids.

E. Relative expresses interest in adopting after the caseworker sends notifications

When a child’s relative expresses interest in being considered as a potential adoptive resource after the required notifications of the caseworker adoption selection process according to 413-120-0021, Adoption Placement Selection by Caseworker. The focus of decision-making is based on the child’s long-term needs.

I. The CWPM or designee must review the diligent efforts to identify a child’s relatives required under OAR 413-070-0060 to 413-070-0063, Search for and Engagement of Relatives and:
   A. Consider the impact of a delay in achieving permanency on the best interests of the child; and
   B. Make a determination whether it is in the child’s best interest for an adoption home study to be conducted with a relative despite the delay in achieving permanency.

When a CWPM informs the caseworker of the determination to consider a relative identified as described above:

I. The caseworker must notify the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member and the involved adoption workers that the adoption selection process has been suspended.

II. The adoption workers must notify each identified potential adoptive resource that the process has been suspended.

F. Scheduling and participating in the adoption committee

Procedure

Different offices have different processes to schedule an adoption committee, so this information is general and some local or district offices may have more or less support staff involvement than is described below.

The caseworker is to:

I. Determine, in consultation with the supervisor, the type of adoption selection process to be scheduled after considering the relevant family and child factors discussed in Chapter 5, Section 7, subsection “Identifying the appropriate adoption selection process.”

II. Ensure the Child Permanency Program has all required documents including:
A. Adoption Child Summary. This must be completed or updated within 12 months before the selection date.

B. Birth certificate (original).

C. Original ICWA correspondence.

D. Copies of all of the child’s psychological evaluations, developmental evaluations, therapist reports, early intervention reports, therapy progress reports and other documentation describing the child, their special needs and placement related recommendations.

E. Genetic and medical history of child and biological family.

F. Copies of adoptive family home studies and updates, if applicable. Home studies must be completed or updated within the 12 months.

III. For a local committee, email the local Child Welfare office adoption committee coordinator to schedule a local (sometimes called “district”) adoption committee. For a Central Office adoption committee, email the Child Permanency Program adoption committee coordinator. Include the following in the email requesting the committee:

A. Full names and age(s) of the child/children;

B. Name, telephone number and email of each adoption worker and the name of the local Child Welfare office or private agency each adoption worker represents;

C. First and last names for each family being presented and the family’s relationship to the child or children, if any;

D. Names of the people invited to committee to present information about the child; and

E. Names, phone numbers, email addresses and mailing addresses for the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and RCWAC member as applicable.

IV. Provide written information to be presented at the committee to the correct office staff member in time to be included in the committee information packets. The packets are mailed at least 10 days before the committee date by the:

A. Child’s caseworker or the local office adoption committee coordinator for a local office adoption committee, or

B. Child Permanency Program adoption committee coordinator for a Central Office adoption committee.

V. Ensure the information packets include the following information:

A. Adoption Child Summary.

B. Copies of all of the child’s psychological evaluations, developmental evaluations, therapist reports, early intervention reports, therapy progress reports and other documentation describing the child, their special needs and placement related recommendations.

C. Copies of approved adoption home studies and other information related to the family as identified by the adoption worker. The committee will need identification of who will supervise the adoption placement, which can be in writing or verbally shared if it is not a ODHS studied family.

D. CF 250, Adoption Selection Report, (for the facilitator and ADS only).
E. Copy of child’s recruitment bulletin, when applicable.

VI. Adoption workers of the families being presented must be notified of the date, time and place:

A. If a local committee is scheduled, check with the local committee coordinator to determine if the caseworker or the coordinator notifies the adoption workers for the families who will be presented at committee of the location, time and date of the committee. Notify or verify that notification has occurred.

B. If a Central Office adoption committee is scheduled, the Child Permanency Program adoption committee coordinator will coordinate and confirm this information.

VII. Contact the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member as applicable to inform them of the date, time and location of the committee.

VIII. Invite other individuals who may contribute to the adoption selection process being well informed due to their ability to provide vital information about the child to the committee and ADS. These people may include, but are not limited to the following:

A. Child’s foster parent. The foster parent may not attend the committee if they are being presented as a resource family.

B. Child’s therapist.

C. Mentor, teacher or professionals involved with the child.

IX. Inform presenters of information about the child that they may be in the meeting during the sharing of the information about the child and will then be excused for the remaining portion of the committee meeting (other than child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and RCWAC member). Notify them of the general times they are scheduled to present. These presenters of information about the child do not get adoption committee packet materials.

X. Give the schedule and guest list to the committee facilitator before the committee or at the beginning of the committee meeting.

Forms

I. Genetic and Medical History of Child and Biological Family

II. Adoption Child Summary

III. CF 0250 Adoption Selection and Recommendation Report.

G. Caseworker protection of prospective adoptive families’ home studies

Maintain confidentiality regarding release of prospective families’ home studies and family information. Adoption home studies may not be shared with non-ODHS staff (the exception is contracted adoption recruiters) when the worker is still identifying families for an adoption selection process. Only when a date has been scheduled for a caseworker selection or adoption committee process may the identified home studies (that are part of the information packets) be sent to the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and member of RCWAC within the strict relevant rules of the Adoption Placement Selection OARs. The OARs are 413-120-0016 Confidentiality, 413-120-0021 Adoption Placement Selection by Caseworker and 413-120-0035 Invitation to and Notification of Adoption Committee and are found at this link.

H. Invitations and notifications

Caseworker makes mandatory notifications and invitations to the prospective adoption committee members

I. The caseworker must invite to the committee as applicable for each child: the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and member of the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC). These specific individuals have different options for participation and providing input for the adoption selection process.

II. The caseworker informs the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and RCWAC member that they are invited for two optional tasks:

A. To present information about the child to the committee. They may attend in person, send a representative, present on a speaker-phone (the worker should make sure a phone is available in the room) or write a letter. They may choose not to participate. They may discuss characteristics of the type of adoptive family they believe will best meet the child’s needs and their preferences. Inform them of the optional ODHS form 0257 Child Presentation by Community Partner for Adoption Committee. It is an outline for the verbal presentation of child information and focuses information on the goal of the committee process. The child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative or RCWAC member may request that ODHS invite individuals to the adoption committee to present information regarding a child’s needs.

B. To be a committee member. This must be the specific individual or their supervisor. They must tell the facilitator at the beginning of the committee meeting that they wish to be a member.

III. The child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and RCWAC member receive the families’ home studies in their committee packets that ODHS provides. These individuals save their questions about families for the committee meeting at which they may make inquiries of the adoption workers. The caseworker may not provide family home studies to these individuals outside of the steps and purposes in the adoption selection process rules.

Caseworker invites partners for child presentations only

Community partners involved with the child may provide highly valuable information about the child for consideration in the committee process. The caseworker should inform the partners of the optional ODHS form 0257 Child Presentation by Community Partner for Adoption Committee, which an outline for the verbal presentation of child information and focuses information on the goal of the committee process.

I. The caseworker invites the foster parent to present information about the child, except when the foster parent is being considered as an adoptive resource or there is a conflict of interest. An example of a conflict of interest is a foster parent’s adult son or daughter is being considered as the adoptive resource, since this could be interpreted as a personal advocate for a prospective adoptive family. A worker with questions about inviting or preparing the foster parent should consult their supervisor.

A. Inform the foster family’s certifier that the child’s case will be going to adoption committee so that the certifier may support the family.
B. Prepare the foster parent if they are going to present:

1. Talk with the foster parent about what information about the child each plans to present in person (which is preferable) or by phone. The foster parent may also send a letter to the committee regarding the child’s personality, progress and needs.

2. If they have never presented at adoption committee, the worker will want to prepare them for the possibility of strong emotions at the thought of the child moving, which is understandable, especially if they had ambivalence about adopting or if they have great affection for the child.

II. The caseworker may invite others who know the child to present information. These partners may include therapists, service providers, mentors, teachers, school counselors and courtesy supervision worker if the child is in another county, and others who know the child well. These people can be critical in providing information to the committee. The worker should explain to them their role is to present information about the child and their needs. Help them understand that their role is not to advocate for a particular family. They may discuss the characteristics of a family that they believe will best meet the child’s needs (such as a calm environment, energetic parent, high structure, no other children of the same age, etc.).

III. If the child’s caseworker determines the child’s attendance is appropriate, on a case-by-case basis, the worker has the discretion to invite the child. This should be discussed with the supervisor and include planning for the preparation of the child before the committee. If the child has a therapist, the worker should seek their input.

I. Relative expresses interest in adopting after sending notifications of adoption committee

When a child’s relative expresses interest in being considered as a potential adoptive resource after the required notifications of the adoption committee adoption process have occurred according to 413-120-0035 Invitation to and Notification of Adoption Committee (2) have been provided, the Child Welfare program manager or designee has discretion to consider the relative according to (8). Refer to this link to policy for more detail. The focus of decision-making is based on the child’s long-term needs.

I. The Child Welfare program manager (CWPM) or designee must review the diligent efforts to identify a child’s relatives required under OAR 413-070-0060 to 413-070-0063 Search for and Engagement of Relatives, and:

A. Consider the impact of a delay in achieving permanency on the best interests of the child; and

B. Make a determination whether it is in the child’s best interest for an adoption home study to be conducted with a relative despite the delay in achieving permanency.

When a CWPM informs the caseworker of the decision to consider a relative identified as described above:

I. The caseworker must notify the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member and the involved adoption workers that the adoption selection process has been suspended.

II. The adoption workers must notify each identified potential adoptive resource that the selection process has been suspended.
J. Preparation for adoption committee

Procedure

The caseworker should be aware that they have two very active roles at the adoption committee:

I. To present comprehensive information to the adoption committee about the child; and

II. To participate as an active member of the adoption committee to make a placement recommendation at the end of the committee deliberation.

Caseworker preparation for presentation of information about the child

I. The worker provides the committee with a clear picture of who the child is, as well as their current and potential likely long-term needs. An adoption committee facilitator may even decide to cancel or reschedule the day’s committee if it appears that there is not enough information about the child to guide the committee’s recommendation and the ADS’s decision.

II. Even if the worker is relatively new to a case, they are responsible for understanding and conveying the child’s history. The caseworker must review the case record. Talk to the supervisor. Talk to available previous workers who worked with the child or knew significant information. Ask about the child’s issues, how they progressed and the circumstances around any moves in foster care. Read case notes in OR-Kids. Talk with the SSA about visits. Talk with the foster parent. Visit the child.

III. If a worker is inexperienced in presenting at adoption committee, they may wish to talk with their supervisor about being accompanied by the supervisor for support and direction. The worker may also reference OAR 413-120-0010 to 0060, Adoption Placement Selection, for additional information.

IV. The worker is responsible for some form content about the child on the 0250 Adoption Selection and Recommendation Report. The worker must complete their sections of the form before the committee information packets going to the ADS and facilitator. The report is used for adoption committee recommendations and ADS selection process. The adoption committee facilitator and the ADS are also responsible for form content during and after the committee meeting. The form is at this link.

V. Prepare to discuss relevant topics. The 0256 Child Presentation by Caseworker for Adoption Committee form is highly recommended. It is an optional outline for the verbal presentation of child information at the committee.

The caseworker (possibly with help from foster parent, therapist and others) should be prepared to cover the following:

A. When recruitment began and number of home studies received (if applicable).

B. Date and reason the child came into care

C. Sibling issues, including need for on-going connections

D. Need for contact with birth family members

E. Prenatal history, if known
F. Number of placements and reasons for moves
G. History of trauma, abuse and neglect
H. Sexual abuse history and history of any sexual acting out
I. Legal status
J. Family history
K. Social skills
L. Attachment history and quality to birth parents/care givers
M. Emotional, physical, verbal and cognitive development, prognosis
N. Medical/dental health, medications and possible future needs
O. Education
P. Discipline methods, what works and what does not work
Q. Child’s spiritual/religious experience and heritage. Attendance at church, temple, etc.
R. Child’s cultural and ethnic heritage identity, experiences and needs (remember MEPA/IEP)
S. Counseling history and history of any services provided
T. Child’s preparation for adoption and understanding of adoption
U. Composition of foster family
V. What the foster parent likes about child, foster parent’s concerns, challenges in parenting child
W. Child’s strengths
X. Characteristics of adoptive family needed, characteristics that may hinder a good match
Y. Safety issues not covered above, but relevant to adoptive placement
Z. Special considerations regarding transition

VI. If the adoption committee information packet has already been sent to the adoption committee members, ADS, child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative, and RCWAC member and the worker has new written information that will take more than a few minutes to read, the child’s worker is responsible for sending the information to the these individuals before committee if possible. For a Central Office adoption committee, contact the Central Office adoption committee coordinator by email to share additional information with those receiving the packets. It is not convenient for members to receive long documents they must read during committee time. Short documents are fine to bring to the committee if it was not possible to include them in the packet and are necessary.

VII. The caseworker should bring the child’s case file to the committee. Ensure that the case file has all appropriate records related to the child, such as medical, school, mental health, Head Start, etc. The caseworker should bring all of the material listed on the CF 0963 to give to the adoption worker of the selected family if the ADS announces their decision at the committee. Good practice mandates that the worker also bring the child’s Life Story Book. For more information about Life Story Books, see the Appendix for Chapter 5, Section 7.
Caseworker preparation to participate as a committee member

In addition to presenting child information, the caseworker is a committee member. The caseworker is to read all of the committee materials, hear the information presented at the committee, ask questions of presenters, participate in committee’s discussion and make recommendations to the ADS. The caseworker’s priority is the child’s best interests.

The caseworker’s knowledge of the case and the child is seen as critical information. Prepare to make a recommendation to the ADS regarding the adoptive resource that is likely to permanently and fully integrate the child into the family and to meet the child’s current and possible lifelong needs. The worker should have an open-minded perspective at the committee. Possible recommendations that a member may make to the ADS are one or more of the following:

I. A single adoptive resource is the most appropriate;
II. An order of preference of appropriate adoptive resources; or
III. One or more potential adoptive families are not appropriate and should not be considered.

Forms

I. CF [0963] Required Information Checklist for Adoption Workers
II. Adoption Child Summary
III. Genetic and Medical History of Child and Biological Family

K. Adoption committee responsibilities and process

The best adoptive placement decisions are made as the result of a collaborative and thorough information sharing process. The committee process provides objective, multilateral thinking that the neutral ADS considers as part of the decision-making to select the most compatible adoptive family for the child.

Conflict of interest for adoption committee members – information for the worker

I. To maintain objectivity, neutral committee members appointed to a local or Central Office committee may not have a personal or current professional relationship to any of the children or potential adoptive resources being considered. Maintaining a committee process that has maximum integrity, professionalism and objectivity is paramount.

II. Before the committee, if a neutral committee member or facilitator finds they have a conflict of interest, they must immediately notify the child’s caseworker and the committee facilitator and find an alternate committee member for that committee.

III. If a committee member is not certain if a conflict of interest exists, as soon as possible the member discusses the issue with the supervisor, CWPM or adoption placement specialist or assistant manager in the Central Office Child Permanency Program.

Confidentiality
Committee meeting attendees and presentation of child and family information

Everyone attending an adoption committee must follow Oregon statute and ODHS administrative rules, OAR 413-010-0000 through 413-010-0075, Confidentiality of Client Information at this link and OAR 413-120-0016 Confidentiality. The “Confidentiality Statement for Adoption Committee” form 0273 is used by individuals attending adoption committee. The facilitator and all participating in the committee meeting are responsible for signing the form.

Committee meeting attendees and presentation of child and family information

The committee members, facilitator, ADS, caseworker, CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member, presenters of child information invited to the committee, and adoption workers each have specific responsibilities discussed below.

Procedure:

I. The committee facilitator is responsible for:

A. Commencing the committee and keeping the committee focused on the task of having information presented and discussed for the purpose of adoption selection recommendations and decision making for the child. The last page of the Adoption Recommendation and Selection Decision form 0250 has the tasks listed in order for an easy reference.

B. Conducting introductions of attendees.

C. Explaining the purpose of the meeting and discussing ground rules for the committee.

D. Inquiring about the roles the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member plan to take at the committee (full committee member or to provide information about the child and observe).

E. Reading the confidentiality statement and ensuring all attendees sign the statement agreeing to follow ODHS confidentiality rules relevant to the committee. Those attending by phone verbally agree to the confidentiality rules.

F. Indicating when the child information presentations should begin, starting with the caseworker and followed by others presenting information about the child.

II. Committee members and the ADS may ask presenters questions about the child. The focus is for the committee and the ADS to obtain the most thorough and accurate picture of the child now and their potential needs in the future.

III. The ADS and facilitator each have sections of the Adoption Recommendation and Selection Decision form 0250 for which they have completion responsibility.

IV. Committee members record their notes individually.

V. After child presentations, the facilitator EXCUSES presenters of child information who are not eligible to serve on adoption committee. Excused are the foster parent, therapist and others. This is to protect the confidentiality of the prospective adoptive families’ information.

VI. The adoption workers make family presentations focusing on families’ abilities to parent the specific child or children. The family may have a family book for the committee to view during the meeting.

VII. Committee members, those eligible to be committee members if they choose, and the ADS may ask the adoption workers questions during and after each family presentation. The focus is to provide as thorough a picture of each family as possible related to what strengths, skills, knowledge and challenges they are likely to have when parenting the child in the future.

VIII. Prospective adoptive parents and legal or personal advocates for a family under consideration may not attend the committee. This means that a foster parent being presented at the committee may not be invited to present information about the child. A family may give their input to the committee through written communication, which is best provided in the committee packets along with the family’s home study.

Adoption committee member discussion and recommendations

I. After all presentations have been completed the following individuals

   A. Must remain at the adoption committee:

      1. The ADS,
      2. The adoption committee members, and
      3. The adoption workers for the potential adoptive families (which includes Special Needs Adoption Coalition workers who have been contracted to present out of state families at the committee).

   B. May remain at the adoption committee, if they so choose:

      1. The CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC representative who are attending the committee and have elected not to serve as committee members.
      2. With approval of the facilitator individuals described in OAR 413-120-0025(4); the supervisor for any of the following individuals; caseworker of each child for whom adoption placement selection is being made, the neutral individuals appointed to serve as committee members, facilitator, CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative, RCWAC member and adoption workers.
      3. Department staff, for training or observation purposes.

II. The facilitator initiates the discussion by the identified committee members, which is intended to be a thorough child centered exchange of ideas and consideration of each families’ skills, knowledge and abilities to meet the child’s needs.

III. Members consider information, deliberate and make recommendations regarding the presented adoptive family or families most likely to permanently and fully integrate the child into the family and meet the current and lifelong needs of each child being considered. Only adoption committee members may give recommendations regarding the selection of the family. The ADS listens, but does not participate in this deliberation.

IV. When adoption committee members all agree, the adoption committee may make one or more of the following recommendations:

   A. A single potential adoptive resource is the most appropriate.
   B. An order of preference of appropriate adoptive resources.
   C. A potential adoptive resource is not appropriate and should not be considered.

V. Optional recommendations may include recommendations regarding transition of the child to the adoptive family, preparation of the family, or preparation of the child for the adoptive placement.

VI. When the committee members cannot reach agreement, each adoption committee member gives their recommendations to the committee facilitator.

VII. The facilitator records committee information on the 0250 Adoption Selection Report form and submits the form to the ADS.

Adoption decision specialist’s decision-making and conclusion of meeting

I. The ADS considers the information and recommendations and makes the selection decision at the meeting’s end or by the end of the next business day following the meeting. The ADS may decide:
   A. A single potential adoptive resource is the most appropriate.
   B. An order of preference of appropriate adoptive resources in the event that the first selected family is not able to parent the child.
   C. A potential adoptive resource is not appropriate and should not be considered.

II. If the ADS does not select an adoptive family, the ADS may make recommendations to the child’s caseworker on how to proceed. The caseworker should discuss the recommendations with their supervisor.

III. If the ADS selects a family, they may make recommendations regarding transition of the child to the adoptive family, preparation of the family, or preparation of the child for the adoptive placement.

IV. All confidential written information for committee given to the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative, RCWAC member and committee members must be given to the department by the meeting’s end. When the individual did not attend the committee, the materials must be returned to the department within seven business days.

V. The facilitator reminds staff of their notification responsibilities and deadlines and adjourns the meeting.

Notification responsibilities after the adoption committee

I. The adoption workers who are not employed by the department, child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and RCWAC member must provide contact information for written notification of the decision from the department. The caseworker, department adoption workers, facilitator and ADS have email access for written communication. Written information may be by email, fax or other electronic methods, as well as by U.S. Postal Service, although more swift methods are generally preferable.

II. The ADS sends:
   A. Written notification to the caseworker, adoption workers and facilitator of the decision and if a backup family was identified. The ADS must notify these individuals by the end of the next business day following the meeting.
   B. The form 0250 Adoption Selection Report with selection and rationale to the Central Office Child Permanency Program within two business days following meeting. This may be by fax at 503-945-6633 or by email. Send to the Central Office seamless support staff member who assists the Legal Assistance Specialist for the child’s local office.
III. The caseworker sends written notification on a ODHS approved form, the letter in the Adoption Placement Selection Notification form 0272, to the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative, RCWAC member and adoption agency other than the department as applicable. This includes information about the review process. The worker must notify these individuals by the end of the next business day following the ADS’s written notification to the worker. Find the form at this link.

IV. ODHS adoption workers and caseworkers send written notification to each family as to whether the family was selected. This must be sent by the end of the next business day following the ADS’s written notification of the decision to workers. Workers notify by using the ODHS form 0260 Notification of the Adoption Selection Outcome letter at this link. As is good practice, the appropriate workers are also responsible for engaged, direct verbal communication with families after the selection process, rather than relying only on the form. The letter includes review information.
   A. The caseworker sends notification to families studied by an agency other than ODHS.
   B. ODHS adoption workers send notification to ODHS studied families.

V. There are no requests for review for committees on which all families considered are general applicants.

The supervisor’s role

I. Provide consultation to the caseworker on the appropriate adoption selection process to use for a child or sibling group being placed for adoption.

II. Ensure the caseworker is adequately prepared to present the child at the adoption committee.

III. Ensure the caseworker is adequately prepared to professionally participate as a committee member.

L. Disclosure of the child’s information to adoptive families

In order to make a well informed decision, prospective adoptive parents need to have all available background information about a child. The child’s caseworker and the family’s adoption worker need to work together to be certain that accurate and up-to-date information about the child is given to the adoptive parents before the child’s adoptive placement if the child is not already in the home for foster care or relative care.

Sharing information with prospective adoptive families

Procedure for the child’s caseworker before adoption committee

The caseworker provides as much information as possible about the child to the family’s adoption worker. The adoption worker uses this information to inform the potential adoptive family about the child. The caseworker:

I. Protects confidentiality by removing identifying information from the documents below before sending them to the adoption worker. This includes all last names, birth and foster parent addresses and phone numbers, Social Security numbers, date of birth of all people except the child, names of schools and treatment providers and other information that can be used to identify the child, birth family or foster family.

II. Provides the redacted information to the adoption worker that is accurate and balanced, including both positive and challenging aspects of the child. Documents include:

A. The adoption child summary.
B. Child development, psychological and other evaluations.
C. Health information.
D. Mental health information.
E. School information
F. Other documentation, such as the CANS evaluation, that will help the adoption worker and the adoptive family understand the child’s needs.

III. Clarify what information is unavailable or incomplete.

IV. When general applicant families who do not know the child are being considered, the worker or foster parent is not to provide the families being considered with any visits or contact with the child before the adoption selection and department driven transition. Visits with a prospective family before an adoption selection and planned transition can undermine the child’s success in a placement. Premature visits may cause complications when children may feel a sense of rejection if the family does not adopt them. In addition, children, applicants and community partners may develop expectations that a specific family was to become the adoptive resource with special rights not granted by policy or child-centered practice.

The caseworker’s role if requesting the foster parent to talk with prospective adoptive families about the child

At the explicit request of the caseworker, the child’s foster parents may share information about the child with families that the caseworker has identified for adoption selection consideration. This is for the purpose of helping families have a more thorough understanding of the child’s needs and the day-to-day responsibilities of caring for the child.
Procedure

The caseworker:

I. Decides if and how to include the foster parents in the information sharing process. If the foster parent is being considered along with others, the caseworker does not have other families contact the foster parents for information about the child, as the foster parent would be put in conflicting roles.

II. Talks with the foster parent about how the foster parent can help provide valued information about the child to the adoptive family. Remind the foster family of the need to maintain the child’s confidentiality regarding identifying information, such as the child’s last name or school. Foster parents may also talk with the adoptive family after they have been selected by the agency before the beginning of the transition with the child. Remind the foster family that the child may only meet a recruited family with whom the child has no relationship after the family is selected by the agency. This meeting is to occur only as part of a planned transition that the caseworker coordinates with others to plan for the first meeting with the child.

III. Participates in conference calls with foster parents, prospective adoptive families and adoption workers so that the caseworker is knowledgeable about what information the foster parent does share with the prospective adoptive family. The caseworker should not delegate to non-ODHS staff the task of disclosure of child information to the prospective family, since the department has the responsibility to thoroughly share the information with the selected family at a level that is appropriate for their need to know.
Sharing information about the child after the agency has formally selected an adoptive family

Procedure

After ODHS has formally selected the adoptive family, the caseworker provides the adoption worker of the selected family with:

I. A copy of information from the child’s case file, including all of the documents listed on the CF 963, Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents.

II. For a current caretaker adoption, the information listed on the CF 963 must be provided to the current caretaker before the adoption placement can be designated by Central Office. The current caretaker must sign the CF 963 upon receipt of the information.

III. The child’s Life Story Book or contents with narrative and photos.

IV. When a child is placed adoptively with a relative outside the United States, the child’s important documents from the form CF 963 should be translated to the relative’s language if the relative does not speak or read English well. Translation is also needed if the language of the country of the adoptive family is other than English so the child’s service providers may read the child’s information. Contact the Central Office Child Permanency Program for assistance with translation services so necessary information can be determined.

Tip

The last page of the Adoption Recommendation and Selection Decision form 0250 has the notification tasks for and timelines for the ADS, facilitator, and caseworker listed for easy reference.

The supervisor’s role

I. Talk with the caseworker about notifying the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative, RCWAC member, as applicable, of the adoption committee date, time and place.

II. Assure that the worker maintains the confidentiality of the prospective adoptive families.

III. Assure that the caseworker has supplied the family with the child’s complete Life Story Book or the unassembled contents to be assembled by the family.

IV. Assure that the caseworker has provided the adoption worker of the family with the Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents form 963 materials for disclosure of the child information.

V. Be aware of all of the steps in the adoption selection process and disclosure process when providing consultation with the caseworker engaged in the adoption selection process for a child in order to provide timely and accurate guidance.

VI. Contact the Central Office adoption placement specialist or their supervisor, for particularly challenging or complex cases. Small rural offices that rarely do adoptions are encouraged to contact the adoption placement specialist early in a process for additional assistance.

M. Disclosure of information about adoptive families and release of adoption home studies

Adoption home studies contain very comprehensive, personal and sensitive information about the adoptive family. Adoption home studies are released only in limited situations and to a limited number of participants in the adoption selection process. In order to be considered in an adoption selection process, adoptive applicants must sign an Authorization of Use and Disclosure of Information ODHS 3010 form to have their adoption home study released. There are limited situations in which ODHS may share or release a home study.

ODHS receives adoption home studies from other public and private adoption agencies. The procedure also applies to the release of other agencies' adoption home studies for families identified to be presented at an adoption committee or considered in a caseworker selection process.

Consider these principles when carrying out the procedure to release adoption home studies:

I. Children's needs are primary when considering adoptive families.

II. Prospective adoptive families provide sensitive, personal information to their adoption workers who prepare adoption home studies. This information and the adoption home studies are confidential and should be released only as described in policy and procedure.

Release and review of adoption home study reports for adoption selection processes
Procedure

This section discusses only release of prospective adoptive family home studies for the purposes of ODHS adoption selection processes, but does not discuss other types of release in detail. An adoption home study may be released only under the following conditions for adoption selection process:

I. To be considered as a potential adoptive resource, each applicant who is the subject of an adoption home study must provide a signed, valid release of information to consider the adoption home study in the adoption placement selection.

II. When ODHS considers information in addition to the adoption home study concerning a potential adoptive resource during the adoption placement selection, the adoption worker must:
   A. Notify the potential adoptive resource of the additional written information; and
   B. Have the potential adoptive resource sign a release of information for the additional written information to be considered in the adoption placement selection.

III. The Child Permanency Program manager, at their discretion, may determine that any written information released must be a summary or redacted copy when:
   A. An individual who is a subject of the adoption home study or additional information has requested that information be redacted or summarized; or
   B. There is a conflict of interest as described in Child Welfare Policy I-G.1.3, Adoption Application, Home Study and Standards for Adoption, OAR 413-120-0222 at this link.

IV. Any written information released for selection consideration must:
   A. Be kept confidential by the recipients;
   B. Be used only for the purpose of making the recommendation and selection of a child’s adoptive resource;
   C. Not be disclosed verbally or in writing;
   D. Not be copied; and
   E. Be returned to the department when the adoption placement selection has been made.

Family release for an adoption home study

An adoptive family who is the subject of the home study reviews and signs the completed adoption home study for accuracy. For circumstances in which a ODHS adoption home study may be released for reasons other than a ODHS adoption selection process, please see I-G.1.3, Adoption Applications, Adoption Home Studies and Standards for Adoption in the section titled, Standards for an Adoptive Home and Release of an Adoption Home Study, OAR 413-120-0246 at this link.

Redaction or summarization of a home study

Procedure

In the process of adoption selection, the caseworker or adoption worker may encounter circumstances in which release of an adoption home study may be inappropriate and a redacted study or summary is authorized. In very infrequent circumstances, protection of confidential information can be achieved through redaction or summarization. In these situations, the interest in protecting information in the adoption home study is weighed along with the benefits of a release of a redacted home study. The Central Office Child Permanency Program manager is responsible for determining whether a home study is summarized or redacted when:

I. An individual who is a subject of the adoption home study or additional information has requested that information be redacted or summarized; or

II. There is a conflict of interest as described in Child Welfare Policy I-G.1.3, Adoption Application, Home Study and Standards for Adoption, OAR 413-120-0222 at this link.

To obtain permission for redaction or a summarized home study:

I. The adoption worker or caseworker requests authorization from the Central Office Child Permanency Program manager.

II. The adoptions manager or designee will inform the field office staff of the decision.

Tip

If a recruited non-relative prospective adoptive family that has no connection to the child is concerned about the child’s special needs and wants to meet the child before the adoption selection process, respectfully tell the family that there are other ways of providing information to the family that will have the potential for less of an impact on the child. The worker can provide video of the child interacting with people they know and trust or engaging in a favorite activity. Some children have recruitment videos that can be shared with the prospective family. The caseworker wants to prevent inadvertently promoting fantasies about prospective families that lead to an unnecessary sense of loss if a particular family does not become the adoptive family.
Redaction of a home study

The worker should understand the circumstances for redaction of a home study as described directly above. When the Child Permanency Program manager decides a home study is to be redacted for the adoption selection process, the caseworker and adoption worker cooperate to identify who will do the redaction. The redacting worker:

I. Identifies the reasons for the redaction or summarization to target what information needs to be redacted or summarized.

II. Prepares a copy of the adoption home study with information removed. Redacts information to ensure that the prospective adoptive family cannot be identified as result of the release of the adoption home study. This may include:
   A. Identities of references
   B. Names of schools, businesses, or other places or information that could help identify a person who provided third party information for the assessment
   C. Dates of birth
   D. Last names of persons
   E. Addresses
   F. Personal identification numbers
   G. Telephone numbers
   H. Personal information that would likely embarrass members of the prospective adoptive family if the identity of the family became known
   I. Other information that could be used to identify a person, such as a job title, nickname, ceremonial title, a well-known achievement or subject of notoriety

III. Retains the original redacted version of the adoption home study. If the worker uses a black pen or whiteout to conceal information, make a copy to present to the family so that the information is fully concealed.

IV. If the family requests, makes a copy of the summarized or redacted adoption home study available to the family within a reasonable time for the family to review. The adoption worker should be available to the family during or after the reading of the adoption home study to answer questions and receive feedback. If the adoption worker is not the person receiving feedback from the family, ensure the feedback is given to the adoption worker.

Summarization of a home study

The involved workers should understand the circumstances described above in which a home study may be summarized for adoption selection purposes. When the Child Permanency Program manager decides a home study is to be summarized for the adoption selection process the adoption worker or their supervisor usually write the summary. The summarizing writer may wish to request a supervisor, paralegal or colleague to proofread the study to ensure the reasons for summarization were addressed.

The supervisor’s role
I. Ensure the worker follows the timelines for adoption selection process invitations and notifications before and after the scheduled selection process. This can trigger requests by child's team members for home studies. Be available for consultation regarding the abilities and limits to sharing home studies and other family information for adoption selection based on ODHS policy.

II. Ensure the worker is aware of the conditions under which an adoption home study may be released if there is a request for an adoption home study for circumstances other than as part of an adoption selection process described in OAR 413-120-0010 to 0060, Adoption Placement Selection.

III. Provide consultation and direction to the caseworker regarding the need to contact an assistant attorney general for advice if the caseworker receives a court order to release a home study in circumstances other than described in this procedure and ODHS policy.

IV. Talk with the caseworker about consulting with Child Permanency Program staff in complex cases.

V. If applicable, ensure that the adoption home study is redacted or summarized according to ODHS procedure and policy.

VI. Staff with the worker if there are requests for release of the adoption home study outside ODHS procedure and policy. Consult with the assistant attorney general if there is a court order to release an adoption home study outside the scope of ODHS policy and procedure.

N. The role of the adoption worker in the selection process

The adoption worker is responsible for discussing with the family the important information about the child. They also discuss the family's characteristics regarding possible compatibility with the child's caseworker and may verbally present the adoptive family to the adoption committee. Usually, the adoption worker learns about the family through the adoption assessment or foster certification process and has written the family's home study. The adoption worker should know the family well and be able to describe the family's skills, interests, desires and abilities to parent and meet a specific child’s special needs. If the adoption worker did not write the home study, it is imperative that they are very familiar with the family.

Disclosure and discussion with the family about the child’s information

The adoption worker is responsible for assisting the family in understanding and processing information from the caseworker about the child at different stages in the consideration process.

The adoption worker provides guidance and support to the family as they assess their own capacity to meet the child’s long-term needs. The adoption worker’s primary focus is always the child’s long-term well-being.

Procedure

Before the selection process, the adoption worker:

I. Talks with the family to provide information about the child.

II. Obtains from the child’s caseworker information that will assist the family in understanding the needs of the child. This includes the child summary, mental/physical health evaluations, early intervention evaluations, developmental evaluations, academic information and any other documentation that portrays the child’s strengths, interests, desires and challenges.

III. Ensures that all identifying information about the child has been redacted, which is typically done by staff in the child’s office. Last name, address, name of school, name of foster parent, foster parent’s address and phone number, etc., must be removed before providing the child’s information to the prospective adoptive family.

IV. Interviews the child’s foster parent, therapist and others involved with the child if given permission by the child’s caseworker.

V. Encourages the family to research and identify resources realistically available to them to meet the child’s needs.

VI. Only if approved of and arranged by the caseworker, participates with the family on a conference call with the child’s foster parent and caseworker.

VII. Converses with the family about the child’s current and projected long-term needs and how they see themselves addressing those needs. Ask about their plans for day care, after school plans, work schedules and respite care.

VIII. Assists the family in forming realistic expectations regarding the child’s transition and integration into their household.

IX. Explores how immediate and extended family members will adjust to the child.

X. Discusses safety issues with the family.

XI. Discusses with the family their willingness to maintain the child’s future contact with birth parents, siblings, extended birth family members and former care providers.
XII. Explores the family’s questions and follows up with the child’s caseworker.

XIII. Asks the family to prepare a photo album of themselves and their home to be shared with the committee. If they are selected, this album will also be shared with the child. The album should be child friendly and focused on the child as the reader. Pages can be added after the child is transitioned as a member of the family.

XIV. Explains to the family the role and purpose of the adoption selection process. Helps the family understand that adoptive placement decisions are based on the best interest and needs of the child. While they may be an exceptional family, they may not be the family selected for a particular child. If they are not determined to be the most appropriate family for a particular child, help the family understand this is not a negative reflection upon their family, but about the matching needs of the child. The adoption worker does not share information about the other families considered in the selection process, as that is confidential.

Adoption worker presentation at adoption committee

Committees are usually scheduled for approximately three hours, allowing approximately 20 minutes each for the presentation of the adoptive families. Presentations should be candid, objective and informative. An option for preparation is to use the Family Worker’s Presentation of Family for Adoption Committee form 258. The presenting adoption family’s worker may use it to outline the verbal presentation of family information for adoption committee. Find the form at this link.

Procedure

I. Be as informed as possible regarding the child’s needs. Maintain the perspective that the child’s best interest is paramount.

II. Be prepared to bring the family to life for those attending.

III. Provide a balanced presentation:
   A. Explain how the family would be capable, or not, of meeting the child’s specific needs.
   B. Discuss what they have done to prepare and educate themselves for the child and ways that they have demonstrated a strong interest in and commitment to the child.
   C. Avoid focusing on restating the bulk of the home study or other materials about the family. Focus on updated information that is not included in the home study.
   D. Discuss the types of discipline the family anticipates needing to use and how the family will deal with behavioral problems and the thoughts and feelings children may have due to their history of abuse and neglect.
   E. Discuss what the family has done to explore local resources on behalf of the child in the event they are selected as the child’s family.
   F. Discuss how the family would integrate the child into their family as a member, especially if there are children in the home.
   G. Be clear about the family’s support system and their plan for dealing with the inevitable crises that arise in families.
   H. Inform the committee of the level of contact (if any) that has occurred between the family and the foster parent or the child.

IV. Anticipate areas where the committee may have questions and be prepared to address these. Issues may include prior allegations of abuse or neglect, bankruptcy, multiple marriages, history of being abused as a child, spanking of their birth children, criminal history and resolution of infertility. It is acceptable for the adoption worker to state that they do not know specific information, which is preferable to uninformed speculation.

V. Avoid presenting the family as being the best match because they are a specific religion. As applicable, discuss their involvement in their spiritual community, how they hope to involve the child spiritually, their specific values and how they see their religion or spiritual practices influencing their discipline and parenting.

VI. Distribute the family’s album for viewing by ADS, committee members, CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member.

VII. Remain until the committee meeting has concluded.

Adoption worker follow up after the adoption committee

Procedure

I. Maintain confidentiality and do not share information about the other families presented at committee.

II. Notify the family of the committee’s decision in two ways:
   A. Contact the family as soon as possible about the results so that they have a sense of personal contact. This is usually by phone so that the worker can be direct and engaged with the family.
   B. Send them the 260 Notification of the Adoption Selection Outcome letter. It provides written notification to families of the selection decision after caseworker or ADS selection process. The caseworker is responsible for sending the letter to considered families not studied by ODHS. ODHS certification/adoption workers who presented families are responsible for sending letters to families studied by ODHS. As is good practice, workers are also responsible for engaged, direct verbal communication with families after the selection process. Find the form at this link.

III. If the family was selected:
   A. Inform them of any additional information about the child that may not have already been shared.
   B. Coordinate with the child’s caseworker regarding the development of the transition plan.

IV. If the family was not selected as the first choice, but was selected as the backup family:
   A. Verify they wish to be available for placement consideration if that becomes necessary.
   B. If appropriate and relevant, share feedback from the committee regarding the family’s strengths and/or areas that may warrant attention.
V. If the family was not selected as a backup family, talk with them sensitively to help them understand their strengths and potential areas that they may want to address or explore further, if relevant.

VI. If there are questions about the review process of the adoption selection, refer to Chapter 5, Section 5, “Adoption selection review process” for additional information.

0. Adoption selection review process

There are specific circumstances and avenues through which an adoption selection decision may be reviewed. The following procedures outline the request and review process if a review is granted. See the Adoption Placement Selection I-G.1.5 policy for more details at this link.

There are two routes to initiate a review of an adoption selection process:

I. The director of Child Welfare Programs or designee at their discretion and initiative may review adoption selection processes and decisions.

II. A request for review of the process or decision made through the adoption placement selection must be in writing and received by the Child Permanency Program manager or designee within seven calendar days of the notifications under:

A. OAR 413-120-0021(12)-(13) of the adoption placement selection process by caseworker, or

B. OAR 413-120-0057(2) (b) after the decision by the ADS through a committee process.

Administrative rule allows for specific types of individuals who can request a review and only in specific types of cases. The period in which a review may be requested is limited.

People who may request a review

Each of the following individuals may request a review of the process and the adoption placement selection under OAR 413-120-0021(10) or 413-120-0057(1), except when each potential adoptive resource was a general applicant:

I. The child.

II. The child’s attorney.

III. The CASA.

IV. A tribal representative.

V. A member of the RCWAC.

VI. The child’s caseworker, with the approval of the caseworker’s supervisor and the CWPMr or designee.

VII. A relative or current caretaker who was considered as the adoptive resource but was not selected.

In addition to those noted above, the director of Child Welfare Programs or designee may, on their initiative and without a request for a review, give notice of intent to review the adoption placement selection. This is possible when the director or designee decides to review within seven calendar days following the date of the notice of the adoption placement selection in:

I. OAR 413-120-0021(12)-(13) for caseworker selection process or

II. OAR 413-120-0057(2)(b) for decision by ADS in an adoption committee process.
People who may not request a review

I. Any person other than those listed directly above in this procedure;

II. A general applicant who is considered but not selected by an adoption committee; or

III. A ODHS employee, other than the child’s caseworker and the director of Child Welfare Programs or designee.

Timeframe in which a review may be requested

A request for review of the process or decision regarding the agency’s adoption placement decision must be in writing. Specific individuals allowed to request a review must send the request so that it is received by the Child Permanency Program manager or designee within seven calendar days of the date of the last written notification of the adoption placement selection:

I. For caseworker selection, based the date on which the department sent the written notification of the adoption placement selection to the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative or member of the RCWAC and when the written notification form approved by the department was sent to each identified potential adoptive resource. These notifications must be done by the end of the next business day following the caseworker’s selection decision.

II. For adoption committee selection, based on the latest date of the following process: after the ADS sends the written notification of the decision to the caseworker, adoption workers, and facilitator by the end of the next business day following the scheduled committee; following the notice from the ADS, the agency must send written notice by the end of the next business day to the families who were consider at the adoption committee and to the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and member of the RCWAC.

Caseworker request for a review

Procedure

I. If the caseworker does not agree with the ADS’s decision after the adoption committee and wishes to request a review, the worker discusses the case with their supervisor and CWPM.

II. If the CWPM or designee agrees that a review should occur, they submit a request for a review of the decision to the director of Child Welfare Programs or their designee. The request must be in writing and clearly state the concerns and the reasons for the request to the Child Permanency Program manager.

III. Keep in mind the deadline by which the request must be received by the Child Permanency Program manager. Since the timeline is so short, fax or email is recommended. Send a courtesy copy email to the assistant manager of the Child Permanency Program and the adoption placement specialist in Central Office.

Notification of receipt of a review

When a request for review has been received, the Child Permanency Program manager or designee must:

I. Notify the director of Child Welfare or designee and

II. Send written notice of the request to the following as applicable:
A. Each of the potential adoptive resources considered by selection process;
B. The caseworker;
C. The adoption workers for each family considered;
D. The supervisors of the workers;
E. The child’s attorney;
F. The child’s CASA;
G. The tribal representative;
H. The member of the RCWAC, if the child is a refugee child; and
I. The local CWPM for each worker.

Caseworker responsibilities while administrator determines whether there will be a review

If there is a request for review, the caseworker may need to provide information to Central Office staff. Be prepared to provide information about the following:

I. The selection process of the committee; questions may include observations regarding facilitation, management and professionalism of the committee participants, presenters or ADS.

II. The caseworker’s preparation before the selection process.

III. The caseworker’s ability and the adoption workers’ ability to provide needed information to the committee, including case history, diligent relative search, working with relatives, legal history, ICWA status, the child’s needs, appropriateness of the families for the child, safety concerns, the child’s attachment history, sibling issues, recruitment, visits, openness, disclosure, mediation and adoption assistance.

Timeframe after a request for review for administrator decision whether to review

The director of Child Welfare Programs or designee must decide whether to grant a review of the adoption placement selection within 14 calendar days after the notice of the adoption placement selection according to the notices below based on selection process. Written notice of the decision as to whether to conduct a review must be sent to the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative, RCWAC member, prospective adoptive families considered in the selection process and their adoption workers, the child’s caseworker and the supervisor and Child Permanency Program manager for each worker. This written notice is not required to be provided within the 14-calendar-day timeline for the decision as to whether to grant a review. Involved workers should remind considered families and community partners of this so that they do not expect to receive the notice by the 14th day.

For a review request regarding an adoption committee, based on the latest date of the following process: after the ADS sends the written notification of the decision to the caseworker, adoption workers, and facilitator by the end of the next business day following the scheduled committee; following the notice from the ADS, the agency must send written notice by the end of the next business day to the families who were consider at the adoption committee and to the child’s attorney, CASA, tribal representative and member of the RCWAC.
Review decision options

If the director or designee receives a request for a review, they decide:

I. Whether to review the adoption selection decision or process.

II. If the decision is to review, how the review will be conducted. There are three methods. The director or designee:
   A. Personally conducts a review of information considered in making the adoption placement selection and may consider additional, relevant information about the child or potential adoptive resource.
   B. Refers the adoption placement selection to a review committee appointed by and at the discretion of the director or designee.
   C. Appoints another individual to conduct the review.

III. If there is a review by a review committee or an appointed individual, the review process is to:
   A. Review the information considered in making the original adoption placement selection;
   B. Consider additional relevant information about the child or potential adoptive resources; and
   C. Issue a recommendation that the director or designee affirm or modify the original adoption placement selection of the caseworker or the ADS or recommend a different adoption placement selection.

Caseworker and adoption worker responsibilities in the review process

Procedure

In the case of a review, the caseworker and adoption worker are to:

I. Provide any additional information to Central Office Child Permanency Program when requested. This may include information about the child or families that is included in the packet for committee members if there is to be a review committee.

II. Be as flexible as possible to be available for the review committee meeting to hasten the time by which the final decision can be made.

III. Prepare to present information about the child and/or families if a committee conducts the review. The review committee meeting activities are similar to the order of presentations at an adoption committee.

IV. Be aware of the decision making process for a review. The director or designee makes the agency’s final decision. If the review committee or an appointed individual conducts the review, these entities are charged with giving the director or designee recommendations, but are not responsible for the final decision. Therefore, sharing of the review committee recommendations with those outside the review process is premature. Families or community partners may have inaccurate expectations if given premature information about the committee recommendations if the director or designee has not made the final decision.

V. Ask the Central Office Child Permanency Program’s adoption placement specialist or assistant manager questions about the review process.
VI. For the caseworker only, invite the CASA, child’s attorney, tribal representative and RCWAC member to the review. Inform them of the date, time and place if a review committee is the identified review method. They may be available by phone or in person. They may also send a letter to the review committee through the caseworker if they would prefer to not attend or are not available. Invite others to present relevant information about the child. Foster families may not present information about the child if they are being considered for selection or if they are personal advocates for a family being considered.

Notice of the agency’s decision after the review

After the review of the agency’s adoption selection decision, the director or designee must send written notice of either the affirmation of the original decision or a new decision to the following individuals as applicable:

I. Each of the potential adoptive resources considered by the caseworker or adoption committee and ADS;

II. The child’s caseworker;

III. The adoption worker for each of the potential adoptive resources considered;

IV. The supervisors of the caseworker and adoption workers;

V. The child’s attorney;

VI. The child’s CASA;

VII. The tribal representative;

VIII. The member of the RCWAC; and

IX. The CWPM for the caseworker and the department adoption worker.

As a courtesy, share the information with the facilitator of the original committee and ADS. If there was a review committee with a new facilitator, share the information with the review facilitator.

There is no required timeframe by which a review must be conducted or by which notifications must be provided. Each case is unique and multiple factors impact the review process. Central office staff members work on behalf of the child and waiting families to make the process go as quickly as possible.

With Central Office coordination, ODHS field staff may be involved in providing the final decision to the family or families who were considered in the review process. This is usually by letter along with the caseworker or an adoption worker personally delivering the letter to be available for communication with the family that requested the review. If the family resides out-of-state, the field staff may be asked to contact the family by phone. The requester who receives notification from the local office staff also receives a copy in the mail.

Director option for review

Apart from the types of cases and specific individuals who can request a review as listed above in this chapter’s subsection on the review process, the director of Child Welfare Programs may reconsider a decision and require a review. This rule can be found in OAR 413-120-0060 Review of the Adoption Placement Selection, subsection (3). The director has discretion to decide that there will be a review when the following conditions exist:
I. The time to request a review has expired for a caseworker selection or for an ADS decision after an adoption committee;

II. There is no request for review pending; and

III. The deadline set by statute for a person entitled to seek judicial review of an adoption placement selection entered under the rule has not expired.

Review decision is final

The adoption placement selection made by the director of Child Welfare Programs or designee is final and does not qualify for a contested case hearing through the department. Additional review may be available through the court system.

Procedure

The supervisor's role

I. If the caseworker wishes to request a review of the adoption selection decision or process, review the process with the caseworker and CWPM or designee. If a review appears to be in the child's best interests, approve the request.

II. Ensure the caseworker provides adequate documentation and information to the review process, if applicable.

III. As needed, consult about the review process with the Central Office Child Permanency Program adoption placement specialist or assistant manager.

Chapter 6

Section 8: Mediation in Adoption
Mediation in Adoption

Cooperative adoption mediation assists biological parents and adoptive parents to determine how to maintain communication after the finalization of an adoption. The decision to refer a child for cooperative adoption mediation is made on a case-by-case basis and is always premised on the best interests of the child and meeting the child’s safety and permanency needs post adoption. The department’s decision to refer a case for cooperative adoption mediation is independent from how the parental relationship is ended. It may be appropriate to refer for cooperative adoption mediation even after a parent’s rights are terminated through a contested trial. The mediation process is to assist in meeting the long-term best interest of the child and is not meant to be used as a part of the negotiations involved in the legal resolution of a parent’s rights. Refer to Appendix 5.31, Mediation Decision Flow Chart.

Referral to mediation

Procedure for the child's caseworker

I. Determine whether a referral to mediate is appropriate.
   A. Consult with the supervisor to assess the appropriateness of mediation for cooperative post adoption communication for a child by reviewing any safety concerns that may exist as well as whether a plan for openness will meet the individual needs of the child.
   B. Discuss the appropriateness of mediation for cooperative post adoption communication with the legal assistance specialist and, if seeking termination of parental rights, the legal assistance attorney.
   C. Discuss cooperative mediation with the birth parents to determine their willingness to participate in such a process. Reference OAR 413-120-0600 to 0635, Openness and Post Adoption Communication for information that will be helpful for this discussion.

II. Upon selection of an adoptive family for the child, discuss cooperative mediation with the adoption worker and family to determine whether the family will cooperate with the mediation process.

III. Obtain the birth parents’ signatures on a ODHS 3010, Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information, to share information with the mediator. Coordinate with the adoption worker to obtain the ODHS 3010 from the adoptive parents.

IV. Contact potential mediators to see if available for providing the service in the time frame needed. A list of qualified mediators is in Appendix 5.32. If there are additional questions about mediators, contact the legal assistance specialist.

V. Working with the assigned adoption worker, complete the CF 0437, Cooperative Adoption Mediation Referral.
   A. List on the referral form the benefits specific to the individual case and the safety concerns that must be met in the post adoption communication agreement.
   B. This form is completed with the understanding that the mediator will provide the birth parent(s) and adoptive parent(s) with a copy, minus the contact information for mediators.

VI. Send the completed, signed “Cooperative Adoption Mediation Referral” to Central Office, Adoption Services
Chapter 6 • Section 8: Mediation in Adoption

VII. Act as the primary contact for the mediator.

Procedure for the adoption worker

I. If not already done, provide the adoptive parents with the case materials itemized on the CF 0963, “Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents” so that they have necessary background information.

II. Review the statement of benefits for the child of cooperative adoption planning listed on the CF 0437 with the adoptive parents.

III. Obtain the adoptive parents’ signatures on a MSC 3010, “Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Health Information” to allow a release of information to the mediator.

Approval of the post adoption communication agreement

Procedure

I. Upon receipt of the post adoption communication agreement from the mediator, the child’s caseworker and adoption worker review the post adoption communication agreement and determine that child safety can be managed by the proposed agreement.

II. If the post adoption communication agreement meets the child’s safety needs, the child’s caseworker signs the final post adoption communication agreement and returns the agreement to the mediator.

III. Safety concerns with the post adoption communication agreement

Procedure

I. If unmet safety needs are identified in the post adoption communication agreement, notify the legal assistance specialist of the concerns.

II. The legal assistance specialist, after discussing the safety concerns with the child’s caseworker and/or adoption worker, informs the mediator in writing of the continued safety concerns for the child.

III. The mediator sets another mediation session with the mediation participants. An agency representative may be present, if requested by the participants.

IV. After the department determines the revised draft post adoption communication agreement meets the safety needs of the child, the mediator arranges for an agency representative and the parties to sign the agreement.

V. When no agreement can be reached, the mediator sends a letter summarizing the situation to the Adoption Services Unit with the final invoice.

The Supervisor's Role

I. Communicate the values inherent in cooperative mediation in adoptions, including the potential benefits to the child, birth parents, and adoptive parents (as detailed in OAR 413-120-0600 to 0635, Openness and Post Adoptive Communication Through Legal Assistance Mediation Services).
II. Consult with caseworker to determine whether cooperative mediation referral is appropriate, and ensure that the decision to use mediation is independent of the department’s and parent’s efforts to end the legal parental relationship.

III. Assist the caseworker to identify safety threats or other safety concerns that may exist, and when indicating approval for cooperative adoption mediation, ensure that all safety issues are well documented/explained on the CF 0437, Cooperative Adoption Mediation Referral.

IV. When the caseworker and adoption worker have questions as to whether the post adoption communication agreement is adequate to manage child safety, assist in decision-making, and ensure the legal assistance specialist is contacted if safety is not adequately managed by the proposed agreement.

Section 9: Activities Prior to Placement in Adoptive Home
Activities Prior to Placement in Adoptive Home

A. Transitioning Child to an Adoptive Placement

The adoptive placement transition begins after an adoption committee selects an adoptive family for a child. “Transition” includes telling the child about their family being selected, introducing the child to the adoptive family if they are not with a current caregiver family, the child’s pre-placement visits with the adoptive family, and the period of time the child is settling into the adoptive family after moving to their new home if there is a move.

Adoptive family decision

After the adoption committee selects a family for the child, the selected adoptive family makes a decision about either continuing forward with the adoptive placement or declining the opportunity to parent that particular child. In order to facilitate this decision the adoption worker has specific responsibilities.

Procedure for the child’s caseworker

I. Give the adoptive family’s adoption worker the available information about the child (see CF 0963, Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents);

II. Working with the adoption worker, assist the adoptive family in understanding the information about the child, and refer the adoptive family to specialists who have worked with the child as needed.

III. Provide the adoptive family’s worker with the Child’s Life Story Book.

Procedure for the adoption worker

I. Give the adoptive family available information about the child (see CF 0963, Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents).

II. Provide the adoptive family with additional information presented at the adoption committee that may not be in the prepared record.

III. Assist the adoptive family in understanding the information about the child, and refer the adoptive family to specialists, as needed.

IV. Provide the adoptive family with the Child’s Life Story Book.

V. Support the adoptive family’s decision making process.

Scheduling the transition

The child’s transition into an adoptive placement cannot begin until the Notice of Intent to Review seven-day waiting period has passed or, in the event that the assistant director gives Notice of Intent to Review, until the review is completed. During the Notice of Intent to Review seven-day waiting period:

I. The prospective adoptive parents can talk to the current substitute caregiver and others with knowledge of the child. The prospective adoptive parents are given information about the child and are allowed time to consider the placement.

II. The child is not moved to the adoptive home or told of the prospective adoptive family unless there has been a Request for an Early Transition.

Request for an early transition

In some cases, there may be a need to have the child begin transition earlier than the end of the seven days, due to exceptional circumstances. Notify the legal assistance specialist (LAS) and the adoption placement specialist (APS) prior to committee to make early arrangements if a request for an early transition is anticipated. To initiate the waiver approval process and request permission to begin transition into the adoptive placement earlier than seven days after the adoption committee complete the following actions.

Procedure

I. Prepare a written memo including the following information:

   A. The exceptional circumstance that would adversely effect the child if the transition was delayed the seven days. Exceptional circumstances may include but are not limited to the following:
      1. The current caregiver requests early transition due to a compelling reason such as illness, or needs to be relieved of care giving responsibilities for the child. – OR –
      2. It is in the best interest of the child; for example, the child needs to be in the adoptive home prior to the start of a new academic year. – OR –
      3. The selected adoptive family is a relative with whom the child has a pre-existing close relationship and the relative has requested that the transition begin earlier than the required waiting period.

   B. The diligent search for potential relatives resources was conducted according to OAR 413-070-0072 and suitability assessments of identified relative resources were completed according to OAR 413-070-0081.

   C. The current caregiver is in agreement with the request for waiver or reduction of the waiting period.

   D. No information was presented at adoption committee that would indicate anyone is likely to contest the committee’s decision and it is unlikely a review will be requested.

   E. In the case of an out-of-state placement, all Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC) requirements are satisfactorily completed and ICPC approved the placement.

   F. In the case of placement through an in-state or out-of-state private agency, all contract requirements are satisfactorily completed and a contract is in place.

II. Obtain supervisory approval.

III. Obtain written approval from the district manager or designee.

Waiver approval process

I. If the Child Welfare program manager or designee approves the waiver of the seven days after the adoption committee, the manager faxes the written request to the Adoptions Services manager.
II. The Adoption Services manager or designee verifies that all the requirements have been met.

III. If the waiver is approved, the assistant director or designee provides written authorization waiving their right to review the adoption committee’s decision in the case, and stating why the department is waiving the required waiting period.

IV. The Central Office Adoptions Unit will notify the child’s caseworker, supervisor, Child Welfare program manager of the decision to waive the request for an early transition.

Transitioning a child to their adoptive family through pre-placement visits

The number, duration, and location of pre-placement transition visits between the child and the selected adoptive family should be individualized to consider the child’s needs.

Procedure for the child’s caseworker

I. In planning pre-placement visits consider:
   A. The child’s preparation for adoption.
   B. The child’s attachments.
   C. The child’s safety.
   D. The child’s age.
   E. The child’s temperament and level of development (especially emotional and intellectual development).
   F. The foster parents’ situation.
   G. The location of the adoptive family’s residence.
   H. The child’s past experience with separation.
   I. The child’s perceptions of the reason for the separation.
   J. The child’s preparation for the move.

II. Work with the adoption worker, the adoptive family, and the foster family to create a transition plan.

III. Contact the child’s therapist, if any, for information and participation in developing the transition plan.

IV. Supervise the transition.

V. If at all possible schedule the transition to avoid key times that might negatively impact the transition, such as the anniversary of any moves in foster care, major holidays, or the anniversary date of a significant event in the child’s life.

VI. If the transition plan does not follow what might be considered the usual practice, request the supervisor or designee document in the child’s file the rationale for the alternative transition practice and the supervisory approval.

Creating the transition in stages

Transition of the child to the adoptive family should occur in several stages in order for both the child and the family to experience each other’s personalities and schedules at different times.
Procedure for the child’s caseworker

I. Arrange for the adoptive parents and current caregiver to meet prior to the adoptive family’s first contact with the child, if possible, and if the current caregiver is able to participate in the transition.

II. Schedule the initial visit with the adoptive parents and child in a place where the child feels comfortable, usually in the current caregiver’s home.

III. Schedule at least one, preferably several, pre-placement visits in the home of the foster parent.

IV. Allow the child and adoptive parents to experience the child’s routine at different times of the day and under different circumstances.

V. Schedule at least one, preferably several, pre-placement visits in the adoptive home prior to the child’s move.

VI. Suggest to the adoptive parents that they maintain the child’s schedule as much as possible during the transition.

VII. Schedule the transition at the child’s pace, and if necessary, slow down the transition. Communicate frequently with the foster parent during the pre-placement visits.

VIII. For more information on monitoring the child in the adoptive family’s home, see the section on Supervising Adoptive Placements in this chapter.

IX. Refer to Out-of-State Adoption Placement Through ICPC in this chapter for additional considerations when transitioning a child to an out-of-state adoptive placement.

X. Support the adoptive family until the adoption worker assumes supervision of the placement.

New information surfaces about the adoptive family during the transition period

Procedure for the child’s caseworker and the adoption worker

If, during the transition period, new information becomes known that is relevant to consideration of the family’s appropriateness for the child, both workers notify the supervisor and:

I. Consult with the adoption placement specialist or the assistant adoption manager about the concerns and the possibility of needing to restaff the adoption committee.

II. Inform the adoption worker for the family of the concerns and the need to put the transition on hold.

III. Inform the adoptive family of the concerns and the need to put the transition on hold.

IV. Inform the foster parent of the delay in the transition plan.

V. As soon as possible, reconvene a meeting with the original adoption committee.

VI. Provide the committee with any new written information about the family and the child prior to the committee.

VII. Invite all of the original participants to the reconvened committee.

VIII. The committee chair records the decision of the reconvened committee using the CF 0250.
IX. Notify the adoption worker and the family of the adoption committee’s decision immediately after the committee, both verbally and by letter.

Current caregiver adoption transitions

When being adopted by a current caregiver, the child still needs to transition emotionally from being in a temporary foster care living situation to understanding that he or she has a new role as a permanent member of the family. The current caregiver also needs to experience a transition from thinking of the child as a foster child to incorporating the child into the family as a permanent member. The child’s caseworker and adoption worker support the current caregiver and the child as they make the shift in roles and responsibilities.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Ensure the child’s caseworker has the time available to give the child needed attention during the transition process.

II. Provide concrete information about planning a transition and what the caseworker should look for when monitoring the child’s transition to the adoptive home. For more information on monitoring the child and the adoptive family, see the section 12 in this chapter, Supervising Adoptive Placements.

III. Assist the caseworker to evaluate the adoptive family’s and the child’s needs during the transition process.

IV. Assist the caseworker to negotiate an effective transition plan if there are conflicts between team members.

V. Where there is concern about a child’s safety in an adoptive placement, direct the worker to follow the procedures on Monitoring Child Safety and Face to Face Contact in chapter 4, section 9.

B. In-state Private Agency Placement Contract and Foster Care Certification Prior to Placement

When an in-state adoptive family will be supervised by a Special Needs Adoption Coalition (SNAC) private adoption agency, a child specific agreement known as the adoption placement document will need to be in place prior to the child’s placement in the adoptive home or shortly thereafter.

Procedure

I. Establish an agreement between ODHS and the Special Needs Adoption Coalition agency regarding placement payments and services for the child
   A. Notify the Technical Assistance Unit’s contract coordinator to arrange for an adoption placement document to be put into place for adoption services when the agency supervising the adoption is a Special Needs Adoption Coalition (SNAC) agency rather than ODHS.
   B. Send an email to the contract coordinator with the child’s first and last names, case number, first and last names of the adoptive parents, and name of the SNAC agency. The adoption placement document is needed for placement services, supervision of the placement and finalization services.

II. Ensure certification gets in place for families represented by a Special Needs Adoption Coalition agency.
   A. Determine the SNAC agency’s ability to provide foster home certification prior to placing a child in an adoptive home. Not all SNAC agencies are licensed to certify for foster care.
   B. If the SNAC agency is not licensed to certify foster homes, request that the local ODHS office serving the family’s area certify the adoptive family. The family should sign the Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information ODHS 3010 allowing the private agency to share the adoptive home study with the ODHS office for the certifier to use in writing a new ODHS certification study. The certifier will assess the family’s ability to meet all certification requirements. Certification is required until the family legally adopts the child.
   C. Share relevant information about the child with the ODHS certifier of the adoptive family. Send:
      1. The CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary.
      2. Psychological evaluations of the child.
      3. Any other information that will allow the certifier to understand the needs of the children and vulnerability issues for the children.
   D. Notify the child’s local branch payment staff to process foster care payment and medical coverage for the child in their adoptive placement.
   E. Send an email or memo to the legal assistance specialist and the Central Office Adoptions Unit staff member responsible for recording the child’s date of placement in the adoptive home. Include the child’s first and last names, adoptive parents’ first and last names and the date the child moved into the adoptive home.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. When a private agency will be supervising the case, ensure that the child’s worker requests an adoption placement document for adoption services prior to or shortly after placement with a SNAC agency family.

II. Ensure that when a SNAC agency will be supervising the adoptive placement, the worker determines the agency’s ability to certify the adoptive home. If the SNAC agency is able to certify the family’s home, this must be done prior to the child’s move to the new home.

III. If the SNAC agency is not licensed to certify the adoptive home, direct the worker to request that the family’s local ODHS office certify the home prior to the child’s move to the new home.

IV. Ensure that the worker has arranged for foster care reimbursement to the family for the child.

C. Out-of-state Adoption Placement and ICPC

On occasion, the best choice for an adoptive placement is with a family living in another state. When an out-of-state adoptive family is under consideration there are additional steps, beyond the requirements of an in-state adoption, required to complete the adoptive placement. Department staff need to be familiar with the unique characteristics of an out-of-state adoptive placement and move systematically through each step to avoid any delay in the placement or finalization of a child with his or her adoptive family.

General procedures for all out-of-state adoptive placements

Procedure

I. Complete an Oregon Interstate Compact for the Placement of Children (ICPC) referral packet requesting approval to place the child in another state. For details on interstate placement of children, the caseworker should refer to Chapter 5, Section 13, Placement in Another State.

II. If the child is already placed with a foster parent or relative caregiver in an ICPC approved out-of-state home, submit an ICPC referral packet to seek approval for an adoptive placement. See ICPC Procedure for placing children in another state for more information on this process.

III. Inform the family’s adoption worker that the family has been selected to be presented at an adoption committee. Also inform them of ODHS practices regarding out-of-state presentation at the adoption committee:

   A. If the child is a relative resource, the child’s local ODHS office will arrange for a ODHS worker to present the family at committee.

   B. If the resource is a general applicant family for a child being presented at the child’s local office adoption committee, the child’s local ODHS office will arrange for a ODHS worker to present the family.

   C. If the resource is a general applicant family for a child being presented at a Central Office adoption committee, the caseworker will arrange for a SNAC worker, currently under a separate contract to provide adoption committee presentation services, to arrange for their worker to present the family.

IV. Determine that the adoptive family’s home study has been completed by a public agency or private adoption agency that is licensed and has experience in special needs adoption in the state of residence of the potential adoptive resource.

V. Notify the Technical Assistance Unit’s contract coordinator to arrange for an adoption services contract when the out-of-state agency supervising the adoption is a private adoption agency. A contract is needed for placement services, supervision of the placement and finalization services. The contract must be fully executed prior to placing the child into the adoptive home for the purpose of adoption if the child is not in the home.

VI. If the child is in the home for the purpose of foster or relative care, but not adoption, and a private agency will be providing adoption supervision and finalization services, the contract will need to be implemented prior to the services changing from foster or relative to adoption supervision services.

VII. Determine if the applicant’s state provides a fingerprint-based criminal history check for applicants who have resided in their state for less than five consecutive years or, if an applicant has been arrested or convicted of a crime, that a fingerprint-based check from the FBI has been completed.

Additional considerations for out-of-state legal risk adoptive placements (the child is not yet legally freed for adoption)

Procedure

I. Secure the approval of the legal assistance specialist prior to scheduling an adoption committee for a child who will be placed as an out-of-state legal risk adoptive placement.

II. Ensure foster parents or relative caregivers are certified prior to placing a child in an out-of-state legal risk adoptive home. This placement is considered a foster parent or relative caregiver placement until the child is legally free and the home has been designated the adoptive placement.

III. Notify the court and obtain the court’s approval of the plan to place a child who is not legally free for adoption in an out-of-state adoptive placement.

After determining that the out-of-state family will be presented at the adoption committee

Procedure

I. Share all relevant information about the child with the prospective adoptive family’s adoption worker with the out-of-state agency. After redacting personal identifying information send:
   - A. The CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary.
   - B. Psychological evaluations of the child.
   - C. Any other information that will allow the prospective adoptive family to make an informed decision.

II. With approval from the agency representing the family, directly contact the prospective adoptive family. Consider the foster parent and others with relevant information about the child having direct contact with the prospective adoptive family. The child’s caseworker should be on the phone along with the prospective adoptive family and the foster family to assure that the appropriate level of information about the child is shared.

III. Communicate with the family’s adoption worker about the family’s continued interest in the child and any changes in family status or changes in the child’s needs. This communication should continue as long as the family is considered a prospective adoptive resource.

IV. Explain to the family and their adoption worker how the Oregon adoption assistance payments are determined.

V. Discuss financial issues and medical coverage with the family’s worker and, where appropriate, the prospective adoptive family.

Medical and financial planning for out-of-state adoptive placements

Procedure
The department is responsible for medical care and financial support from the date the child is placed in an out-of-state adoptive home. Legal risk placement vs. legally free placement, IV-E eligibility, the other state’s ICAMA reciprocity, relative or non-relative resource, and the child’s benefits may impact finances and medical coverage. Work with the ICPC coordinator to determine the receiving state’s resources available for the child.

I. Prior to going to adoption committee:
   A. Arrange for the branch eligibility specialist to make a determination of eligibility for Title IV-E.
   B. If the child is not eligible for IV-E coverage, contact an adoption assistance coordinator to clarify medical coverage.
      1. While many states provide a medical card for children who are not Title IV-E eligible, there are some states that will not. Those children remain eligible to receive an Oregon medical card.
      2. If a state is a non-ICAMA reciprocity state or if adoption assistance cannot be implemented upon the child’s placement due to the child having legal risk status and the receiving state not recognizing this as an adoptive placement, other arrangements for medical coverage must be made. Inform the adoption worker for the family and the adoptive parents in the receiving state that it will be the adoptive family’s responsibility to find medical providers in their state who are willing to enroll with the Oregon Medical Assistance Program (OMAP) as a Medicaid provider. Inform the family prior to adoption committee that this will be required in order for the child to be able to move to the home.
   C. Check to see if the prospective adoptive family has medical insurance and how comprehensive the coverage is. If there is an additional cost, determine whether the family is willing and able to afford the cost.

II. After the adoptive family is selected at adoption committee:
   A. Check with the branch eligibility specialist to determine if the child is receiving Social Security benefits, if an application has been submitted, or if there are conserved Social Security funds. Questions regarding Social Security benefits should be directed to the CAF Children’s Benefits Unit.
   B. Arrange foster care payment for IV-E eligible children to the foster parent or relative caregiver. The adoptive home must be certified/licensed for foster care in the receiving state. Coordinate with the out-of-state adoption agency prior to selecting a family to present to committee to assess the family’s feasibility for foster care.
   C. Discuss adoption assistance needs and limitations with the potential adoptive family and their adoption worker.
   D. If the child is eligible for IV-E coverage, obtain a COBRA letter from the IV-E eligibility worker.
   E. Seek clarification from the ICPC unit about up-front costs ICPC can cover for pre-placement visits and for placement of the child. ICPC funds need to be utilized prior to accessing adoption assistance funds.
   F. Consult with the adoption assistance program about “non-recurring” costs incurred by the adoptive family. Clarify which expenses qualify for reimbursement from the adoption assistance program.
   G. Make a final determination that the financial and medical plans are in place before a child is sent to the out-of-state adoptive placement. Do not place a child in an out-of-state adoptive placement before medical coverage and foster care payments are arranged in the receiving state.
Chapter 6 • Section 9: Activities Prior to Placement in Adoptive Home

Adoption committee scheduling when a resource family is out of state

Procedure

I. If an out-of-state adoptive family is one of the families selected from a general recruitment, select the appropriate adoption committee to present the child. Refer to the procedure manual section on selecting an appropriate adoption committee to determine which committee is appropriate for referral.

II. When a specific (not recruited general applicant) out-of-state adoptive resource (i.e., a relative, previous foster parent, or other person who has an existing relationship with the child) has been identified for a child, schedule an appropriate adoption committee meeting when:
   A. The approved adoption home studies are received.
   B. The ICPC approval for placement is received.
   C. Information about the child’s needs have been discussed with the receiving state’s adoption worker and the adoptive family.

Referral to Central Office adoption committee

The SNAC contracted agency presents all out-of-state general applicant families at Central Office adoption committees. The SNAC contracted agency completes a preliminary check and notifies the child’s caseworker if a private agency does not meet State of Oregon standards. Complete the following actions when making a referral to a Central Office adoption committee.

Procedure

I. Send the out-of-state adoption home study to the Adoption Services Unit staff member who coordinates the scheduling of Central Office adoption committee.

II. At least three weeks prior to the scheduled adoption committee meeting, forward a copy of the CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary (current and/or updated within the past 12 months), the prospective adoptive family’s home study, the child’s IV-E status, and all other relevant materials about the child to the SNAC contracted agency. The adoption committee will be scheduled at a minimum of approximately three weeks after the SNAC contracted agency has determined that the out-of-state study meets Oregon standards and contract terms are agreed upon.

III. Keep the SNAC contracted agency worker updated on important information or changes in the adoptive plan.

Referral to local office or district adoption committees

A ODHS local office representative presents out-of-state relatives or out-of-state general applicants at a local or district adoption committee. The child’s caseworker cannot present a prospective out-of-state adoptive family at adoption committee. The child’s caseworker completes the following actions.

Procedure

I. Consult with the supervisor regarding the need for a local ODHS office representative to present the prospective adoptive family at adoption committee.
II. As soon as possible prior to the scheduled adoption committee meeting, forward a copy of the CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary, the prospective adoptive family’s home study, the child’s IV-E status, and all other relevant materials about the child to the local ODHS office representative who will present the family at committee.

III. Send the out-of-state home study to the local staff member who coordinates the scheduling of adoption committees and request the committee be scheduled.

Preparation for transitioning the child to their out-of-state adoptive placement

If the child is not in the home of the out-of-state adoptive family (such as a current caregiver adoption) that has been selected by the adoption committee, the worker must make sure that several things are in place prior to the move. A child in the custody of the department cannot be placed in an out-of-state adoptive home without ICPC approval.

Procedure

I. After the adoption committee’s selection of the family and a signed approval on a CF 100A from the Oregon ICPC office, prepare a plan to move the child to the receiving state. Working with the receiving state’s adoption worker, Oregon ICPC, the adoptive family and the substitute caregiver, create a plan for moving the child to their new adoptive family. Work with others who may be involved with the child to facilitate a smooth transition to the adoptive family (for example, the child’s therapist, treatment provider or school staff). For more information, see Transitioning Children to Their Adoptive Placement in chapter 5.

II. Prior to the adoption committee, in a case where a private adoption agency will be supervising the placement, contact the Technical Assistance Unit’s contract coordinator to notify of the need for a contract with the particular agency for the child. After the committee and prior to the move, verify that the contract has been fully executed and the home is ready for placement.

III. Discuss the availability of adoption assistance to the family and their worker. Provide the family with PAM 9050 (Oregon Adoption Assistance Handbook).

IV. If a legally free non-Title IV-E eligible child is selected for an out-of-state placement resource in a state that provides medical card reciprocity through the Interstate Compact on Adoption and Medical Assistance (ICAMA), contact the adoption assistance coordinator for the family as soon as possible after the adoption committee meeting. The Adoption Assistance application process must be completed prior to placement with the adoptive resource in order to provide the child with a medical card in the new state of residence. The payment will be the basic rate Title IV-E foster care rate for the child’s age in Oregon or the receiving state depending on which rate is higher. The adoption assistance can be renegotiated at a later date if necessary. Adoption assistance benefits can only begin effective on the date of placement if the child is legally free, there are signed adoption assistance agreements and the placement has been designated.

   A. Send the CF 0969 Adoption Assistance application, Part B, pages 1 and 2, to the adoptive family as soon as possible after the adoption committee. Assist the adoptive family in completing the form over the phone if necessary.

   B. Complete the CF 0969, Part A, pages 1 and 2. Include pertinent medical, educational or psychological information that documents the child’s current special needs. Include copies of applicable reports and personal care assessment and/or special rate assessment.
C. Route the information to the branch Eligibility Specialist when Part A is completed and Part B of the CF 0969 is received from the adoptive family.

D. The branch eligibility specialist completes Part C and forwards the entire packet to Central Office Adoption Assistance.

E. Work with the adoption assistance coordinator as needed to obtain signed adoption assistance agreements prior to the child’s placement with the adoptive resource.

F. Contact Central Office Adoptions support staff to insure that all necessary documentation required for designation, other than notice of placement, is in the Central Office file.

G. Inform the Central Office support staff and the legal assistance specialist via email that the child has moved into the adoptive home, the name of the family and the date of the move. This cannot be entered into the computer system prior to the actual placement of the child.

V. In most cases, the adoptive parents travel to Oregon to transition the child. Prior to making arrangements for the family’s pre-placement visit in Oregon:

A. Check with Oregon’s ICPC coordinator regarding travel arrangements. After an out-of-state adoptive placement is approved through the ICPC process, but before the placement actually occurs, ICPC may approve and pay for the identified adoptive parents to travel to Oregon for a pre-adoptive visit with the child or for the child to visit the adoptive parents in the other state.

B. Check with the Adoption Assistance program to determine what other costs of transition/placement can be reimbursed at finalization.

C. Talk with the family about what expenses can and cannot be covered by ODHS. Talk with the family about keeping receipts and accurate records for the transition expenses. Provide the family with a CF 0254 Non-Recurring Adoption Expense form to document qualifying expenses that are not eligible for ICPC reimbursement. Inform them that the reimbursement is provided after the adoption finalization. If the adoption does not finalize, no reimbursement will be provided.

VI. After the family visits the child for the transition in Oregon, the child will move to their new home. Depending on the transition plan, the child may be transported along with the adoptive family and the child’s caseworker to their new home, or the family may return home prior to the child’s arrival and the child may travel with the caseworker. Make final travel arrangements for the child to move to another state after receiving an authorization number from Oregon’s ICPC coordinator.

VII. Notify the local branch payment staff to process foster care payment if applicable, for the child in their adoptive placement.

VIII. If applicable, provide a copy of the COBRA letter to the adoptive family at the time of placement.

Once a child is placed in an out-of state adoptive placement

Procedure

I. Inform the adoptive family of the steps to obtain medical coverage by applying through the local self-sufficiency office. If adoption assistance is in place, ICAMA forms will be sent by the Adoption Assistance program to the receiving state, but it may take some time for the receiving state to process them.
II. Complete the CF 0100B, “Interstate Compact Report on Child’s Placement Status,” in triplicate and mail these to the Oregon ICPC office. This form signals the receiving state that supervision needs to start.

III. If the child is already placed in an out-of-state home under foster care or relative care, complete the CF 0100B in triplicate to inform the receiving state about the change to adoptive placement.

IV. Submit a placement memo to the Adoption Services Unit notifying them of the child’s name, the adoptive family’s name and address, and the date the child was physically placed in the adoptive home. As noted above, this must be done immediately upon placement if adoption assistance is to begin simultaneously with the placement of the child in the new home.

V. Share with the receiving state’s adoption worker the requirements and request that their progress reports address this information. Information will be provided quarterly to the caseworker.

VI. If the adoption assistance application process has not already been completed, submit an application packet to the Central Office Adoptions Unit within 60 days of the selection of the adoptive resource. Use the CF 0450 (Adoption Assistance Application Packet Checklist) as a guide.
   A. Send the CF 0969 “Adoption Assistance” application to the adoptive family as soon as possible after the adoption committee. Assist the adoptive family in completing the form over the phone if necessary.
   B. Complete the CF 0969, Part A, pages 1 and 2.
   C. Route the information to the branch eligibility specialist when Part A is completed and Part B of the CF 0969 is received from the adoptive family.
   D. The branch eligibility specialist completes Part C and forwards the entire packet to Central Office Adoption Assistance.

Caseworker coordination of supervision, follow-up and finalization activities

Procedure

I. Notify the adoption assistance coordinator and ICPC if the placement status changes, such as a disruption, child’s move to residential treatment, child protective services removal from the home, or child’s permanent plan changes from adoption.

II. After six months, discuss with the adoption worker their recommendations regarding readiness to finalize. The adoption worker in the receiving state sends through their ICPC office a final progress report which recommends finalization of the adoption. ICPC rules require that an appropriate authority (generally the ICPC office) in the receiving state give concurrence before the sending state’s jurisdiction is dismissed, such as when the adoption finalizes. Therefore, the final report should be sent through the ICPC offices.

III. Once the adoption is finalized, submit the CF 0100B to close ICPC.

IV. Give feedback to the contract provider as well as the adoption placement specialist about the experience with the out-of-state agency if the services were exceptionally concerning or noteworthy, both positive and negative information.

V. If the adoption disrupts, send the disruption memo to the Adoption Services Unit and contract provider stating the child’s name, adoptive parent’s name, date of disruption, and reason for the disruption. Invite the contract provider to attend a disruption staffing if one is held. Contact ICPC for authorization of travel costs to return the child to Oregon when placement disrupts.

VI. Inform the adoption placement specialist if concerning incidents occur or if an agency is exemplary in their work.

Private agency adoption worker responsibilities in the receiving state

The private agency adoption services are specified in a contract between ODHS and the private agency. When a child is placed out of state and the placement is supervised by a public agency, ODHS does not require a contract with the public agency. Adoptive placements supervised by a public agency fall under the provisions of the receiving state’s supervision requirements. In private agency adoptive placements in another state, the caseworker will need to be familiar with expectations between ODHS and the private adoption agency providing adoption supervision. The focus of supervision includes evaluation of safety in the home until the adoption is finalized.

I. The family’s adoption worker in the receiving state will coordinate with the child’s caseworker all aspects of planning and implementing of placement. The family’s adoption worker will:

A. Inform the adoptive family of ODHS’ procedures and requirements for placement, supervision of the placement, adoption assistance, the consent to adoption letter, and the process of legalizing the adoption.

B. Discuss the need for adoption assistance and assist the adoptive family in completing the “Adoption Assistance Application – Family Information” form CF 969-B and submit to ODHS within 60 days of placement with the resource family.

C. Obtain the “Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents” form CF 0963 from the child’s caseworker and the material referenced on the form. The adoption worker will provide the material to adoptive family as soon as feasible. The adoption worker will obtain the signature of the adoptive family on the form CF 0963 to acknowledge receipt of the material and, once signed, will forward the original form CF 0963 to the ODHS Central Office Adoptions Services Unit. The adoption worker retains a copy of the CF 0963 and notes in the appropriate progress report the date the information was provided to the adoptive family.

II. When a child is placed by ODHS in a home supervised by an out-of-state private adoption agency, the agency agrees to:

A. Supervise the placement of the children and the adoptive family in compliance with referenced ODHS policies, including OAR 413-080-0040, Monthly Contact and Monitoring Child and Young Adult Safety. To monitor the safety and well-being of the child to assure child safety, the adoption worker must make the following contact, and document the contact in the required progress reports:

   1. Face-to-face contact with the child a minimum of every 30 days;
   2. Face-to-face contact with the adoptive family a minimum of every 30 days; and
   3. Face-to-face contact with the adoptive family a minimum of once every 60 days in the adoptive family’s home, with at least one of the adoptive parents present.

B. Monitor and assess the child’s safety and well-being with the adoptive family. Document the date, time, locations, and observation of the conditions that exist in the adoptive family’s home in the progress
1. If one or more of the conditions described in paragraph 2. a. above in this section do not exist in the home, or the adoption worker cannot confirm safety and well-being of the child in the home, the adoption worker must immediately contact the ODHS caseworker and participate in an assessment of child safety to determine if there is a safety threat to the child.

2. The family’s adoption worker will submit written progress reports to ODHS.

III. Beginning when a child is placed in the adoptive family’s home, the adoption worker will submit written 90 day progress reports on the safety and well-being of the child, the adoptive family and the progress of the placement in general. Copies of the report are submitted to the worker, receiving state’s ICPC office, the Oregon ICPC office, and the ODHS central office Adoptions Services Unit.

IV. In addition to any requirements listed above, written progress reports include, but are not limited to:

A. Description of the current and future needs of the child; and observations and analysis of the child’s physical, mental and emotional development.

B. An evaluation of the quality of the relationship existing between the child and adoptive family.

C. Ongoing and new services provided to the child; and ongoing and new services provided to the adoptive family.

D. Content, type, date and results of face-to-face contact with:
   1. The child.
   2. The adoptive family.
   3. With the adoptive parents, and document who was present.

E. Health and education information:
   1. Names and dates of last exam with doctors, dentists and therapists.
   2. A description of general medical and dental health, noting any significant known issues or problems. Include comments on health and dental care providers, if appropriate.
   3. Any current and ongoing medications taken by the child. If the child is medically needy, submit reports from medical providers.
   4. Date of child’s last psychological evaluation, diagnosis, and evaluation recommendations.
   5. Name and address of school, and current grade of the child. Has the child changed schools since last review: If yes, explain why this was in the child’s best interest; comment on attendance; comment of performance in math and verbal/reading skills; does the child have a learning disability; and does the child have a current Individual Education Plan (IEP) or equivalent? If the child is a high school student, will they graduate by age 19?
   6. Date and type of any immunizations received.
   7. Inform ODHS of any change in address, changes in the household, and any people joining or leaving the household.

V. Special updates and reports, verbal or written, may be requested by ODHS to accommodate a Citizen’s Review Board hearing, a court hearing, or another purpose. These special updates and reports are in addition to the 90-day progress reports, whose timing shall remain unaffected by these requests.

VI. The adoption worker will coordinate with ODHS and the adoptive family the legal finalization of the adoption. Unless ODHS’ Central Office Adoptions Services Unit specifically approves otherwise, or unless mandated otherwise by the receiving state, all legal finalizations of adoption will be conducted and finalized in an Oregon court.

If adoptive parents with a child placed in the home want to move out of Oregon

Procedure

I. Inform the adoptive family that making a move to another state often delays finalization of the adoption plan. If the adoption will be finalized in a short period of time and the family can manage to stay in Oregon until the placement is finalized, that is generally recommended.

II. If the adoptive family is struggling and the placement seems tenuous, discuss with the supervisor the advisability of the child moving with the family. Include the family’s adoption worker and their supervisor.

III. If a family is experiencing challenges, but disruption is not a consideration, inform the receiving state of the challenges the family is experiencing.

IV. Prepare and submit an ICPC referral packet as soon as it is known the adoptive family intends to move to another state.

V. If an adoptive family is receiving adoption assistance, contact the family’s adoption assistance coordinator to arrange medical card coverage in the new state of residence. See chapter V for more information on adoption assistance and medical coverage when residing out of state.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Review the adoption home studies from other states that the caseworker would like to consider for presentation at adoption committee. Studies must be approved for adoption and must be written or updated within the last 12 months.

II. Assist the caseworker to determine which adoption committee is appropriate for the child.

III. Assist the caseworker to determine who will represent an out-of-state relative family at adoption committee. If necessary, work with a supervisor or assign an experienced worker to present an out-of-state family when a ODHS worker will present the family from out of state. Direct the worker to contact the SNAC contracted agency when a ODHS worker will not present a family from out of state.

IV. Ensure the caseworker is aware of and adheres to the requirements of the ICPC when preparing to place a child in an out-of-state adoptive home.

V. Ensure that there will be an appropriate agency supervising the placement, and if it is a private agency, a contract has been fully executed between ODHS and the private agency prior to placement.
VI. Ensure that the worker has arranged for financial support and medical coverage for the child.

VII. Ensure that the caseworker begins the ICPC process immediately after a prospective out-of-state adoptive home is identified.

VIII. When the SNAC contracted agency will be presenting a family from out of state, ensure that the caseworker sends the out-of-state adoptive family’s home study and all other relevant material to the SNAC contracted agency.

IX. Ensure that an out-of-state placement does not occur before the caseworker has received an approved CF 100A from the Oregon ICPC coordinator.

X. If an adoptive family plans to move out of state, help the caseworker to determine if the move is in the best interests of the child before a decision is made to approve the move.

The department is responsible for medical care and financial support from the date the child is placed in an out-of-state adoptive home.

I. Prior to going to adoption committee:
   A. Arrange for the branch eligibility specialist to make a determination of eligibility for Title IV-E.
   B. If the child is not eligible for IV-E coverage, contact an adoption assistance coordinator to clarify medical coverage.

II. Discuss the availability of adoption assistance with the family and their worker. Provide the family with PAM 9050 (Oregon Adoption Assistance Handbook). Every state administers adoption assistance differently so do not assume that the family’s worker will be able to guide them through the adoption assistance process or provide Oregon information correctly.

III. If a legally free non-Title IV-E eligible child is selected for an out-of-state placement resource, contact the adoption assistance coordinator for the family as soon as possible after the adoption committee meeting. The adoption assistance application process must be completed prior to placement in order to provide the child with a medical card in the new state of residence. The payment will be the basic rate Title IV-E foster care rate for the child’s age in Oregon or the receiving state depending on which rate is greater. The family will need to be in agreement with this rate. The adoption assistance can be renegotiated at a later date if necessary. Adoption assistance benefits can only begin effective the date of placement if the child is legally free, there are signed adoption assistance agreements and the placement has been designated.

   A. Send the CF 0969 Adoption Assistance application, Part B, pages 1 and 2, to the adoptive family as soon as possible after the adoption committee. Assist the adoptive family in completing the form over the phone if necessary.
   B. Complete the CF 0969, Part A, pages 1 and 2. Include pertinent medical, educational or psychological information that documents the child’s current special needs. Include copies of applicable reports and personal care assessment and/or special rate assessment.
   C. Route the information to the branch eligibility specialist when Part A is completed and Part B of the CF 0969 is received from the adoptive family.
   D. The branch eligibility specialist completes Part C and forwards the entire packet to Central Office Adoption Assistance.
   E. Work with the adoption assistance coordinator as needed to obtain signed adoption assistance agreements prior to the child’s placement with the adoptive resource.
   F. Contact Central Office Adoptions support staff to ensure that all necessary documentation required for designation, other than notice of placement, is in the Central Office file.
   G. Inform the Central Office support staff and the legal assistance specialist via e-mail that the child has moved into the adoptive home, the name of the family and the date of the move. This cannot be entered into the computer system prior to the actual placement of the child.

A. If the adoption assistance application process has not already been completed, submit an application packet to the Central Office Adoptions Unit within 60 days of the selection of the adoptive resource. Use the CF 0450 (Adoption Assistance Application Packet Checklist) as a guide.

Section 10A: Making and Designating an Adoptive Placement
Making and Designating an Adoptive Placement

The next steps in the adoption process have to do with making the placement into the adoptive home, beginning the process for the adoptive family to obtain adoption assistance, and completing the steps to designate the placement as the legal risk or adoptive placement.

A. Notification of Placement

Unless the child has remained in the current caregiver’s home, the Central Office Adoption Services Unit needs to be notified when the child is placed into the selected adoptive family’s home. Additional individuals may need to be notified of the placement, as well, and the following procedure will provide more information. Central Office will be aware that the child is staying with a current caregiver, when the branch forwards the preliminary and final Current Caregiver Report, CF 251.

Procedure

I. Notify Central Office, Adoption Services Unit, when the child is placed into the adoptive home. This is done by memo stating the child’s current legal name, date of placement, and name of adoptive family with whom the placement is made.

II. If the child is placed in Oregon:
   A. Ensure the supervising worker (and certifier, if different) are aware of the placement.
   B. Ensure the branch staff that enter substitute care on IIS placement screen are notified of the change of placement.

III. If being placed outside of Oregon:
   A. Seek prior approval for the move by the court, legal assistance specialist, and legal assistance attorney, if involved, when the child is not yet legally free for adoption. Wait for approval to be given by all prior to the move.
   B. Notify the court of the move out of state if the child is already legally free for adoption.
   C. Notify branch staff that enter substitute care on the IIS placement screen of the placement change.
   D. If the placement is being made through a private agency:
      1. Contact the Technical Assistance Unit contract coordinator to notify of the planned move date and to ensure there is a signed contract with the placing agency in the receiving state before placing the child.
      2. Ensure that medical coverage is established for the child in the receiving state.
   E. Ensure the person who will be supervising the placement is aware of the move.
   F. Send the 0100B, Interstate Compact Report on Child’s Placement Status, when the child is being placed out of state into an ICPC approved placement.
   G. If the child is being moved out of the country, ensure the consulate is aware of the move. Refer to chapter VIII, section 7 for more details about international adoptive placements.
1. A child cannot be moved outside of the country before legally free for adoption and before adoption assistance is in place.

2. Ensure that the Technical Assistance Unit contract coordinator in Central Office is aware of the date of the planned move to ensure the contract for supervising the placement is in place.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Ensure that timely adoptive placements are made, and that individuals are notified of the move when needed.

B. Adoption Assistance

The Adoption Assistance Program in Oregon provides financial and/or medical assistance to adoptive families to help them with the costs associated with their adoptive child’s needs. Families may also receive a one-time, non-recurring payment up to $1,500, for costs incurred in legally finalizing the adoption of a special needs child. Adoption assistance supports the adoption of children with special needs who cannot be placed in an adoptive home without some form of medical coverage and/or financial assistance. Refer to Appendix 5.34 for more information about the Adoption Assistance Program.

Procedure

I. Documentation must be made that reasonable but unsuccessful efforts to place the child for adoption without adoption assistance. Such efforts could include statewide and interstate recruitment activities (e.g., registering the child with the Special Needs Adoption Coalition and/or the Northwest Adoption Exchange or other special needs recruitment resources, or by other attempts to locate an adoption placement resource that didn’t require adoption assistance). These efforts are documented in the child’s file.

II. Document these efforts in the child’s case file.

III. When it is not in the child’s best interest to recruit, an exception can be allowed to the recruitment requirement. Document the reason for an exception in the child’s case record. The only exception to the requirement of trying to place a child without adoption assistance is situations where it would not be in the best interest of the child.

IV. If the adoptive family is out of state, refer to section 9 C of this chapter for more information about out-of-state placement and ICPC as it relates to adoption assistance.

V. Notify or advise prospective adoptive parents of the availability of adoption assistance if the family wants to adopt a child who is eligible for adoption assistance.

VI. If an early review of adoption assistance is needed (refer to tip box on previous page for circumstances that warrant early review and other details), follow these steps:
A. Gather necessary documents for an early review, using the adoption assistance early review checklist (Refer to Appendix 5.35 for the checklist).

B. Place the form on the top of the adoption assistance application and send the packet to the Adoption Assistance Program.

VII. Share the ODHS 9050, “Oregon Adoption Assistance Handbook,” with the adoptive family.

VIII. Provide the adoptive parents with a copy of the adoption assistance policy, I-G.3.1.

IX. Explain to the family the difference between foster care payments and adoption assistance. Refer to Appendix 5.34 for more information.

X. Help the adoptive family complete the CF 969B, “Family Application” form. Refer to tip box on this page for information that will help the family determine the assistance that is needed and available.

XI. If the family has nonrecurring expenses, inform the adoptive family of the non-recurring payment process. Refer to Appendix 5.34 for more information about reimbursable non-recurring adoption expenses.

XII. If applicable, help the adoptive family complete the CF 0254, Nonrecurring Adoption Expenses.

A. Turn this form in with the adoption assistance application packet or, if done later, submit it to the adoption assistance coordinator upon completion.

B. The adoption assistance agreement with the nature and amount of the nonrecurring expenses must be signed prior to the final decree of adoption.

C. Non-recurring payments will be authorized by Central Office and provided to the adoptive family when the Adoption Assistance Unit receives the signed adoption decree. If the adoption does not finalize, there will be no reimbursement.

XIII. Complete the CF 0969A – Child’s Application, noting whether or not the caseworker agrees with the family’s request.

XIV. Gather all of the necessary forms and documentation:

A. CF 0969A, Child’s Application, completed by the child’s caseworker who can note whether they agree with the family request or not.

B. CF 969B, Family Application, completed by the adoptive family, reviewed and signed off by the caseworker and supervisor.

C. CF 969C, Title IV-E Determination, completed by the local office Title IV-E specialist.

D. CF 0254, Non-recurring Adoption Expenses, if applicable.

E. Documentation (less than two years old) of child’s current special needs, (e.g., CDRC or therapist report, day/residential treatment discharge summary, IEP, psychological evaluation, etc.).

F. Current special rate or personal care forms, if applicable (CF 172A and CF 172RN).

XV. Submit the entire adoption assistance application packet to the local child welfare IV-E eligibility specialist. The IV-E eligibility specialist completes the CF 969C and then forwards the entire application packet to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit or returns it to the caseworker to forward to Central Office Adoptions.

XVI. If the child is fully free for adoption, forward the complete packet within 60 days from the date the family is selected as the adoptive resource.

XVII. Verify that the Adoption Services Unit has all necessary materials to process adoption assistance as follows:

A. The complete application documents (refer to list above).
B. The CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary.
C. The adoptive family’s complete home study packet.
D. Keep the adoptive family informed on where their application is in the process. Up-to-date information can be obtained from the adoption assistance coordinator assigned to the family.

XVIII. If an adoptive family appeals the rate offered by the Adoption Assistance Program:

A. Participate in the adoption assistance review committee (usually by phone), providing updated information and answering the committee’s questions.
B. When requested by the adoptive family, ask the Adoptions Services manager to review the new payment offer made by the review committee.

XIX. If a child whose family is receiving adoption assistance benefits is placed into foster care or residential treatment, notify the family’s adoption assistance coordinator.

XX. If an adoptive family is out of state, or an adoptive family moves out of Oregon, Oregon remains financially responsible for the adoption assistance payments, but medical coverage may change.

A. Immediately notify the adoption assistance coordinator and ICPC staff so that arrangements can be made for medical card coverage and placement supervision.
B. If an adoptive family decides to move to a different state prior to finalization, advise the family that this will likely delay finalization of the adoption.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Provide guidance and assistance in determining adoption assistance benefits for an adoptive family.

II. Review and discuss high rate requests with the caseworker.

III. Review and sign the CF 969B.

C. Designation of Adoptive Status

The Central Office Adoption Services Unit declares “Designation of Placement for the Purpose of Adoption” when specific events have occurred and when specific documents have been submitted by the branch to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit. The date a child’s placement is designated is important because it is the date that sets the timeframes for adoption supervision as well as when the process of finalization of the child’s adoptive placement can begin. The designation date is used in all references to the child’s adoptive placement date. Except in ICWA cases, once the child’s placement is designated as the legal risk or adoptive placement, the parent can no longer revoke the relinquishment of parental rights. In order to designate as a legal risk placement or as an adoptive placement, the below procedures should be followed.

Designation of the placement

I. There are two placement designation categories:
   A. Designation of a legal risk placement when the child is not legally free for adoption.
   B. Designation of an adoptive placement when the child is legally free.

II. The placement is designated as either a legal risk placement or an adoptive placement when:
   A. All of the documents listed under Documentation Required for Designation in this section are received and accepted by the Adoption Services Unit.
   B. The child is physically residing in the adoptive placement.
III. Only the Adoption Services Unit can designate a placement for the purpose of adoption. The Adoption Services Unit sends the child's caseworker and the adoption worker written notice when a placement is designated as an adoptive placement.

Change of legal risk placement status to adoptive placement status

When a child in a legal risk placement becomes legally free for adoption, the Adoption Services Unit changes the child’s placement status from legal risk placement designation to an official adoptive placement designation.

Documentation required for designation

I. Submit or ensure the following documents have already been submitted to the Central Office Adoptions Services Unit so that the placement can be designated as either a legal risk or an official adoptive placement:

   A. A completed, signed CF 0421, Adoption Child Summary.

      1. This is due within 30 days from the date the relinquishment documents are signed or within 30 days from the completion of the legal assistance referral (for TPR cases).

   B. Original CF 1270 (Verification of ICWA Eligibility) for mother, legal father and Stanley-type putative father.

   C. CF 246, Genetic and Medical History of Child and Biological Family.

      1. This is due within 30 days from the date the relinquishment documents are signed or within 30 days from the completion of the legal assistance referral (for TPR cases).

   D. Original birth certificate for the child.

   E. Completed adoptive placement selection documents as follows:

      1. CF 251, Current Caregiver Report (both preliminary and final reports); and/or

      2. CF 0250, Adoption Selection Report; and/or

      3. If the child is an Indian child, submit written documentation that the Indian child’s tribe agrees with the selected placement (submit this documentation whether or not an adoption committee has occurred for the Indian child).

   F. Completed adoption home study packet.

   G. CF 0423, Adoptive Placement Needs.

   H. Placement memo stating child’s name, adoptive parents’ names and date placed. This is not required for current caregiver placements.

   I. Voluntary relinquishments or termination of parental rights and permanent commitment orders. The legal assistance attorney will have court certified copies of the TPR judgment forwarded to Central Office once filed and entered.

   J. CF 0100A, Interstate Compact form, if an out-of-state placement.

   K. Any Permanency/Adoption Council Committee notes approving sibling separation.
Child placed into adoptive home directly from the hospital

In the case of placing an infant for adoption directly from the hospital, submitting the documents listed above to the Adoption Services Unit prior to the placement is impossible. The local office certifies the adoptive family as a foster home. Consider the placement a placement for the purpose of foster care, not adoption, until the Central Office Adoption Services Unit receives and accepts the required documents.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Tracking the caseworker’s efforts to submit materials needed to designate placements for the purposes of adoption.

D. Tracking Adoption Cases

Achieving permanency through adoption in a timely fashion requires close tracking of materials that need to be submitted to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit.

Procedure

I. The child’s caseworker and the adoption worker:
   A. Exchange information about documentation that each has provided to Central Office.
   B. Maintain a tracking system for documents provided to Central Office.
      1. Note the date specific items are sent.
      2. Save email correspondence with Central Office Adoption Services Unit staff concerning what is requested and what has been provided.
      3. Utilize tools such as the CF 252, Adoption Checklist, which indicates items needed for finalization of an adoption and the date of completion.

II. Utilize technology that assists in tracking the status of adoption cases.
   A. Check on the case in the Child Welfare electronic database system.
   B. Utilize branch staff who has ARMS (Adoption Resource Management System) access to determine what has been received in Central Office and what is still needed before the next steps in the adoption process can occur.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Assist caseworkers to develop and maintain tracking systems when such assistance is needed to help children achieve timely permanency.

II. Assist workers to access the ARMS database through the local office workstation.

E. Adoption Case Status Inquiries

The adoption case status inquiry e-mail system provides caseworkers and supervisors with a single point of contact for a comprehensive status update on individual legal assistance and adoption cases. It is designed to answer questions the branch may have in order to expedite children’s permanency through the various phases of the adoption process including: legally freeing and placing children for adoption, designating placements, opening adoption assistance, and ultimately finalizing the adoption.

Guidelines for access to the adoption case status inquiry e-mail

Procedure

I. To determine up-to-date information on the status of an adoptive placement when the above tracking systems (in section D above) do not yield necessary information:
   A. Send an e-mail requesting adoption status information to the following Groupwise email address: CAF-ADOPTION, Caseupdate
1. Provide the child(ren)'s name(s), using the current legal name.

2. Make the request for information as far as possible in advance of the anticipated need. For example, make a request upon receipt of the notification of the Citizen Review Board rather than waiting until the day prior to a presentation before the board.

3. If there is a true emergency, and 72 hours is too long to wait for a response, call the Adoption Services Unit staff for assistance.

4. Print and store the e-mailed response from the case status inquiry as a reminder about the case status on that date.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Use the case status inquiry e-mail as described above for current-date checks, which include a check of the Central Office adoption case record when other tracking systems (listed in section D above) do not yield necessary information.

Section 10B: Establishing Adoption Assistance
Establishing Adoption Assistance

The Adoption Assistance Program in Oregon provides financial and/or medical assistance to adoptive parent(s) to help support the adoptive parent(s) in meeting their adoptive child’s special needs. Adoption assistance supports the adoption of children with special needs who cannot be placed in an adoptive home without some form of medical coverage and/or financial assistance.

This procedure is specific to the eligibility, application, and process requirements for establishing adoption assistance. Adoption assistance can include a subsidy payment and/or medical coverage for the child. There are four types of Adoption Assistance Agreements that are available to an adoptive parent:

I. Subsidy and Medical Agreement: provides a subsidy payment and medical coverage for the child.

II. Subsidy Only Agreement: provides a subsidy payment for the child.

III. Medical Only Agreement: provides only medical coverage for the child.

IV. Agreement Only: provides no subsidy or medical coverage for the child but allows the adoptive parent(s) and child to retain eligibility for such assistance if needed in the future.

The Adoption Assistance Program provides both Title IV-E adoption assistance, which is funded by a combination of state and federal funds, and state-only funded assistance to children who do not qualify for the Title IV-E assistance. As a result, almost all children being adopted from foster care are eligible for adoption assistance. A requirement of the program is a negotiation of the adoption assistance subsidy with the potential adoptive parent(s). There is not a standardized amount for the subsidy. The average adoption assistance subsidy is less than the foster care payment. In no case may the subsidy payment and the subsidy does not include many of the same funds as foster care such as daycare stipends and personal care rates. Families may also receive a one-time, nonrecurring payment up to $2,000 for costs incurred in legally finalizing the adoption of a special needs child, minus the fee paid to the vendor attorney to finalize the adoption for the family. The nonrecurring payment is paid after finalization of the adoption.

If the child meets all eligibility requirements, and the potential adoptive family requests an adoption assistance subsidy, then the subsidy amount will be negotiated by Central Office with the potential adoptive parent(s). The adoption assistance agreement must be signed by the potential adoptive parent(s) and approved by Central Office prior to the adoption finalizing to ensure the child’s eligibility for this assistance.

A. Adoption Assistance Eligibility Requirements

Caseworker

Procedure

I. Before submitting an application for adoption assistance, the caseworker must ensure the following requirements are met:

   A. The child is legally free and the pre-adoptive case is open in OR-Kids.

   B. The child is in a placement designated by Central Office as the adoptive home.

   NOTE: To determine if the placement of a legally free child has been designated: 1) Click on the file folder for the child’s pre-adoptive case; 2) Click on Adoption; 3) Click on central office adoption tracking hyperlink; 4) Click on status expander; 5) Locate the Legally Free Designation Date box. If the box is empty, the child is not yet eligible for adoption assistance.

C. The child must be determined to have special needs. All children in ODHS foster care will meet the special needs criteria for adoption assistance. At a minimum, the caseworker can indicate the child meets special needs criteria as he or she has been placed in foster care and is considered “at risk” due to genetic or environmental factors. The list of qualifying factors and conditions is below:

1. A documented medical, physical, mental, emotional condition or other clinically diagnosed disability, or a documented history of abuse or neglect or other identified predisposing factor that places the child at significant risk for future problems that need treatment;
2. Is a member of a sibling group that will be placed together and is difficult to place because there are three or more children, or if in a sibling group of two, at least one of the children is 6 years of age or older;
3. Is a member of an ethnic, racial, or cultural minority (such as African American, Hispanic, Asian, Native American, or Pacific Islander); or
4. Is 8 years of age or older.

D. Federal rules require that ODHS must have attempted to place the child with an adoptive family without adoption assistance or determined that placement with a relative or another person with whom the child has an established significant relationship is in the child’s best interest. To meet this requirement, the following must have occurred:

1. A potential adoptive family must have been identified and selected in accordance with OAR 413-120-0700 to 413-120-0760, Identification and Consideration of Potential Adoptive Resources and 413-120-0020, Adoption Placement Selection Options.
2. The potential adoptive family must have been informed about the Adoption Assistance Program.
3. An inquiry must have been made to the potential adoptive family regarding whether they need the assistance in order to adopt.

E. The potential adoptive parent(s) must agree to continue to meet the educational enrollment requirements for receipt of adoption assistance, which states that a child must be enrolled in an elementary or secondary school as determined by the law of the state of residence; home schooled in accordance with the law of the state of residence; enrolled in an independent study program in accordance with the law of the state of residence; or incapable of attending school due to a documented medical condition.

B. Informing a Potential Adoptive Parent(s) of the Availability and Purpose of Adoption Assistance

Caseworker Procedure

I. The caseworker has the primary responsibility for ensuring the potential adoptive parent(s) is prepared for the negotiation of the subsidy with Central Office. The practice among local offices differs regarding the person identified to educate the family about adoption assistance and assist the family in completing the adoption assistance application. However, it is ultimately the caseworker with case planning responsibility who is expected to ensure a timely and complete application is submitted on behalf of the family and that the family understands the purpose, limitations, and process related to adoption assistance. If additional assistance is needed to complete the application, the family may contact the Adoption Assistance Coordinator. The website with Adoption Assistance Coordinator contacts can be found here: https://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/CHILDREN/ADOPTION/Pages/Adoption-Assistance-Program.aspx.
Chapter 6 • Section 10B: Establishing Adoption Assistance

II. The following information should be discussed prior to implementing a plan in which adoption assistance will be requested:

A. Unlike the foster care payment, there is not a standard amount that the family will receive for the adoption assistance subsidy. Do not make promises to the family regarding what their subsidy amount will be.

B. The adoption assistance subsidy is meant to combine with the family’s income and resources to help subsidize expenses associated with meeting the child’s needs. It is not intended to cover all the costs of raising a child.

C. The adoption assistance subsidy must be negotiated based on the family’s out-of-pocket expenses incurred to meet the child’s basic and special needs.

D. The average monthly subsidy is less than the foster care payment, and the subsidy cannot exceed the Oregon foster care base payment as determined by the child’s age combined with the level of care payment as determined by a CANS screening. The CANS payment is not automatically added into the subsidy amount. The foster care base rate and the CANS rate only sets the maximum subsidy amount allowed (ceiling). The negotiated subsidy amount is based on the family’s actual out-of-pocket expenses for the child.

E. If the child’s placement is paid through the Office of Developmental Disability Services (ODDS), or the family receives a personal care payment for the child, these payments are not considered in setting the ceiling for the adoption assistance subsidy. ODDS payments, level of care payments and Personal Care Payments end when adoption assistance begins.

NOTE: If a child is placed in a foster home paid by ODDS and the child has behaviors that indicate a need for enhanced supervision, a CANS screening may be requested to determine if a child or young adult qualifies for a level of care payment for the purpose of negotiating or renegotiating the adoption assistance payment.

F. Adoption Assistance is not able to continue to provide the Child Welfare Child Care Reimbursement or the Foster Parent Support Funds: Flexible Funding and Respite Care.

G. Adoption assistance ends when the child turns 18, unless an extension is granted and then it must end by 21. Extensions are limited and only possible when:

1. The child, at the time of turning 18, is determined eligible for social security or developmental disability services based on their disability;

2. The initial adoption assistance agreement began on or after the date the child turned 16, the adoption finalizes before age 18 and the child is enrolled in specific vocational and/or educational activities or a medical condition prevents such activity. The child may also continue to be eligible for the Independent Living Program through the local Child Welfare office.

H. The family can request a renegotiation of the amount of adoption assistance if the circumstances of the family or needs of the child change. However, the same process and subsidy limitation as described above will apply in negotiating the new subsidy. This may mean that a new Level of Care CANS screening will need to be completed before the renegotiation can begin.

Early Review

When there are concerns that finances may be a barrier to finalizing an adoption, the caseworker should request an early review of adoption assistance. The early review should occur prior to formally changing the plan to adoption with the family. The caseworker follows the process described on the CF 0451 Adoption Assistance Early Review Checklist to request an early review.

The Adoption Assistance Program will review the documentation provided by the caseworker and talk with the potential adoptive parent(s) about the Adoption Assistance Program and the family’s current out-of-pocket expenses for the child. The Adoption Assistance Program will provide the caseworker and potential adoptive parent(s) with a memo stating the projected amount for the adoption assistance subsidy that the family would receive. The information is intended to assist the caseworker and family with deciding whether to proceed with consideration of the family as a potential adoptive resource for the child. Please remind the family that this is a projection and not a guarantee of the amount the family will ultimately receive. The offer is subject to change if the family’s expenses or resources change, if the child’s needs change, or if the Level of Care changes for the child.

C. Local Office Requirements for Completing and Submitting the Application for Adoption Assistance

Caseworker Procedure

I. The practice among local offices differs regarding the person identified to educate the family about adoption assistance and assist the family in completing the adoption assistance application. However, it is ultimately the caseworker with case planning responsibility who is expected to ensure a timely and complete application is submitted on behalf of the family.

II. The following needs to be completed to ensure the family is provided the support necessary to completely and accurately make the application for adoption assistance:

A. Review the directions with the family. The directions are located at the beginning of the application.

B. Remind the family of the purpose and limitations of adoption assistance as described above in section B, “Informing a Potential Adoptive Parent(s) of the Availability and Purpose of Adoption Assistance.” Ensure the family lists their specific expenses related to the child needs and that their request for assistance is based on these expenses.

C. Review the list of services and goods identified on the 969b form which are not eligible for consideration in negotiating the adoption assistance subsidy. Ensure the family is not requesting consideration of these expenses, and that the total request does not exceed the Oregon foster care base payment as determined by the child’s age combined with the level of care payment as determined by a CANS screening (if applicable).

D. If the family has nonrecurring expenses, advise the adoptive family of the nonrecurring payment process. Expenses that can be considered are expenses required to legally finalize the adoption such as payment for a private adoption home study, physical exams for the Medical Form B, and travel expenses to bring the child to the adoptive home for adoptive placement.

1. Help the adoptive family complete form CF 0254, “Nonrecurring Expenses.”
2. Scan the completed CF 0254 form and applicable receipts and save in the file cabinet in the OR-Kids pre-adoptive child case.
3. The Nonrecurring Expense Agreement will be sent to the adoptive family by the Adoption Assistance Program and must be signed and returned to the Adoption Assistance Program prior to the finalization of the Adoption.
4. Nonrecurring payments will be authorized by Central Office and provided to the adoptive family when the Adoption Assistance Program receives the signed adoption judgment. If the adoption does not finalize, there will be no reimbursement.

NOTE: Additional information is available for adoptive families through the following website: https://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/CHILDREN/ADOPTION/Pages/Adoption-Guardianship-Assistance.aspx

III. Review the adoption assistance application to ensure it is completely filled out and contains all the signatures and dates required.

IV. Provide a copy of the completed application to the family.

V. Confirm the application is scanned and saved in the file cabinet in the OR-Kids pre-adoptive child case in accordance with local office business protocols.

VI. Complete the Certificate of Special Needs on the pre-adoptive case and ensure the correct special needs are identified in order to ensure eligibility for the assistance. If “no special needs” is selected, the child will not be eligible for assistance. Consult with the supervisor before making this selection.

VII. After completing the Certificate of Special Needs, request and confirm the Title IV-E specialist complete the Title IV-E Adoption Assistance Determination.

Certifier/Adoption Worker

Procedure

As the person responsible for the provider record, the certifier/adoPTION worker must ensure the following items are completed prior to the caseworker submitting a request for adoption assistance to Central Office:

I. The adoption home study and any home study updates of the potential adoptive parent(s) have been scanned and saved in the file cabinet in the provider record in OR-Kids.

NOTE: The adoption home study should be scanned and saved in the OR-Kids provider record only (not the child’s case) for confidentiality purposes. To save the adoption home study in the OR-Kids provider record, you must be assigned to the provider record.

II. All four of the following adoption services in OR-Kids are active with Central Office identified as the office. The services include “AA Agreement Only-ODHS, AA Medical Only-ODHS, AA Subsidy and Medical-ODHS, and AA Subsidy Only-ODHS.”

III. The “AA open pre-adoptive placement certified service” is active with the local office of the certifier/adoption worker as the identified office. If the provider is out of state and is not certified, activate the “AA open pre-adoptive placement non-certified service” instead of the certified service.

NOTE: The certifier/adoption worker should not wait until adoption assistance is being requested to ensure these services are activated. Once the adoption home study is approved, the services can be activated. This will enable the caseworker to make a timely request for adoption assistance.

IV. The current 1011F Consent for Criminal Records and Fingerprint Check has been completed and signed for all members of the household age 18 and older and any applicable criminal history exceptions. In addition, an FBI fingerprint check showing that the fingerprints were processed for the current continuous certification period, and results received must have been completed on all members of the household age 18 and older during the current certification period (approval saved in the provider record in OR-Kids). This may mean the current 1011F will not suffice if it only indicates background checks were not required.

V. The current Child Abuse Registry checks for all members of the household age 18 and older completed, approved and documented in the provider record in OR-Kids.

Title IV-E Specialist

Procedure

I. Following a request from the caseworker and prior to the caseworker submitting a request for adoption assistance to Central Office, the Title IV-E specialist must complete the following:
   A. An Adoption Assistance Determination in the OR-Kids pre-adoptive case.
   B. Verify that the supporting Title IV-E documents have been scanned and saved in the file cabinet in OR-Kids pre-adoptive case.

II. There should always be a CF 0184 and one of the other options from the list:
   A. CF 0178
   B. CF 0184
   C. CF 0243
   D. DHR Screens
   E. Preponderance of Evidence Statement

Caseworker

Procedure
The caseworker makes sure all the requirements listed on the CF 0450 Adoption Assistance Application Requirements form have been met. The document must be complete with all required information filled out.

I. The required documents that must be created or scanned and saved in the file cabinet in the OR-Kids pre-adoptive child case include:

A. CF 0969B Adoption Assistance Application (Family Information)
B. Adoption Child Summary
C. Permanency Plan/Child Specific Case Plan
D. Supervision Plan for a child currently receiving a Level of Care CANS rate
E. Proof of citizenship or legal residency document for the child
F. If applicable, the CF 0254 Nonrecurring Expense form and related receipts
G. Title IV-E supporting documents. There should always be a CF184 and one of the other options from the list:
   1. CF 0178
   2. CF 0184
   3. CF 0243
   4. DHR Screens
   5. Preponderance of Evidence Statement

II. The following are the required documents that must be scanned and saved in the file cabinet in the OR-Kids provider record by the certifier, adoption worker, certification technician or support person:

A. Adoptive home study of the potential adoptive parent(s)
B. Any home study updates of the adoptive parent(s)
C. The current 1011F Consent for Criminal Records and Fingerprint Check that has been completed and signed for all members of the household age 18 and older. In addition, an FBI fingerprint check showing that the fingerprints were processed and results received must have been completed on all members of the household age 18 and older during the current certification period (approval saved in the provider record in OR-Kids).
D. Criminal or Child Welfare exceptions made by Child Welfare due to criminal history or child welfare history found on any member.
E. The current Child Abuse/Neglect Registry checks for all members of the household age 18 and older completed, approved and documented in the provider record in OR-Kids.

III. When all requirements have been met, the caseworker emails a completed copy of the CF 0450 Adoption Assistance Application Requirements form to “NEWAPPS AAGA” email address. The child’s first name must be typed in the subject line of the email and the child’s pre-adoptive case number in the body of the email.

Note: The caseworker approves this application by ensuring all information is complete and accurate. Another staff member may email the form, but the caseworker must be copied in the email to ensure they are aware of the case status.
Important information about CANS screenings and level of care payments:

I. If a CANS screening has been requested, is pending, or is in the process of a contested case hearing, the CF 0450 can be submitted. However, an AA negotiation cannot start until the final level of care is determined as the information is necessary for consideration in the AA subsidy negotiation. This is because the foster care base rate and the level of care combined determine the maximum amount allowed for the adoption assistance subsidy. Do not request a CANS screening after submission of the form without first consulting with the Adoption Assistance Program.

II. If the Enhanced Supervision (level of care payment) is approaching or within 60 days of expiring, an updated CANS must be requested and reported in the email.

III. Depending on the date for the annual CANS rescreening, the caseworker may submit paperwork for an early CANS rescreening to ensure this is complete prior to submitting the CF 0450.

The Supervisor’s Role:

I. Provide guidance and assistance as needed.

II. Review and discuss high rate requests with the caseworker.

III. Review and sign the CF 0969B.

IV. Review the CF 0450. Ensure all the requirements listed on the CF 0450 have been met.

D. Receipt of the Application and Supporting Materials in Central Office

Adoption Assistance Program Staff

Procedure

I. Upon receipt of the CF 0450, a staff member in the Adoption Assistance Program completes the following:

   A. Reviews the form and ensures all the required documents are complete and are located in the OR-Kids pre-adoptive child case or the provider record file cabinets.

   NOTE: Remember to uncheck the “date restricted” box to ensure all of the documents saved in OR-Kids appear.

   B. If complete:

      - Assigns the case to an Adoption Assistance Coordinator and
      - Emails the caseworker confirming that the application is complete and has been assigned to a coordinator.
      - Documents on the Central Office Adoption Tracking page in OR-Kids that the case has been assigned. Adoption Assistance Applications are assigned according to the first letter of the last name of the potential adoptive family. The alphabetical breakdown of assignment changes periodically according to workload and is available on the Adoption Assistance and Guardianship Assistance website.

C. If the Adoption Assistance Application Requirements are not complete:
   • AA staff notifies the caseworker by email that the requirements have not been met, identifies which items need completion, and informs the caseworker that the CF 0450 needs to be resubmitted when all of the requirements have been met.
   • The application will not be assigned for negotiation nor tracked by Central Office. No further email reminders will be sent regarding the incomplete application.

D. Documents on the Central Office Adoption Tracking page in OR-Kids that the checklist has been returned and the outstanding requirements not met. Also enters a case note.

II. Upon assignment of a case, the Adoption Assistance Coordinator completes the following:
   A. Reviews the case materials.

   NOTE: Remember to uncheck the “date restricted” box to ensure all of the documents saved in OR-Kids appear.

   B. Contacts the family by telephone to discuss and negotiate the adoption assistance subsidy unless a CANS screening is due, in process, or there is contested case hearing in process. Cases are worked in order of assignment.

   C. Upon reaching a verbal agreement with the family, sends the written Adoption Assistance Agreement to the family. Coordinator will include the Vendor Attorney Agreement and the list of vendor attorneys or the Non-vendor Attorney Agreement with the Adoption Assistance Agreement. The nonrecurring expense agreement will also be sent if applicable.

   D. Enters on the Central Office Adoption Tracking page in OR-Kids the date the above noted agreements were sent.

   E. Enters a provider note on provider record that the agreements were sent.

   F. Emails the caseworker and certifier that the agreement was sent to the family.

   G. Reviews and signs the agreement after the family has read, signed, and returned the agreement to Central Office.

   H. Reviews and signs the Attorney Agreement once the family and chosen attorney have read, signed, and returned the agreement to Central Office.

E. Opening the Adoption Assistance Services

Adoption Assistance Program Staff

Procedure

By federal law, adoption assistance must be opened prior to finalization of the adoption or the child is no longer eligible for the program. Adoption Assistance is opened effective the first day of the month that the signed agreements were received.
I. Upon receipt of the signed Adoption Assistance Agreement, the Adoption Assistance Program staff completes the following:

   A. Scans the signed Adoption Assistance Agreement into the file cabinet in the OR-Kids child’s pre-adoptive case.

   B. Closes the foster care placement and opens the adoption assistance service and the AA pre-adoptive placement.

II. Once adoption assistance is opened and the Legal Fee Agreement has been received, the Adoption Assistance Program staff:

   A. Sends a copy of the signed Adoption Assistance Agreement as well as information regarding the Adoption Assistance Program to the family.

   B. Sends the caseworker and the Legal Assistance Specialist an email notification regarding the opening of the adoption assistance service.

Caseworker

Procedure

I. Review and resolve any AFCARS and ticklers regarding the case and ensure any pending work is completed and approved. Once the adoption finalizes, the caseworker will receive an email notification with further direction regarding closure of case plans.

F. Finalization of the Adoption, Creating the Adoptive Case in OR-Kids and Transferring the Provider Record

Upon receipt of the adoption judgment, the Adoption Assistance Program staff will begin preparations to close the pre-adoptive child’s case so that the adoptive home case can be created in OR-Kids.

Adoption Assistance Program Staff

Procedure

I. Sends the caseworker an email notification stating that the adoption has finalized along with directions regarding closure of case plans.

II. Sends the certification/adoption worker an email notification that the adoption has finalized, and the provider record needs to be updated.

Caseworker

Procedure

I. Ensures all AFCARS, ticklers, and pending work are complete.

II. Closes all ongoing services and planning/permanency plans that are ongoing and/or pending.
Certifier/Adoption Worker

Procedure

I. Upon receipt of email instructions from Central Office Adoption staff, update the provider record by adding the adopted child to the provider record.

II. If the adoptive parent will no longer be providing any foster care services, the foster care certification can be closed, the provider type can be changed, and the adoption assistance coordinator can be assigned as the primary assignment. Do not close the provider record, as the family would be unable to receive their subsidy.

NOTE: Adoption assistance applications are assigned according to the first letter of the last name of the potential adoptive family. The alphabetical breakdown of assignment changes occasionally according to workload and is periodically distributed to field staff via the Who’s Who List for the Adoption Program. It is also available on the ODHS website under Adoption at:

http://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/CHILDREN/ADOPTION/Pages/Adoption-Guardianship-Assistance.aspx

Central Office, not the local office, closes the foster care placement when adoption assistance will be provided. Adoption Assistance must be opened prior to the finalization of the adoption or the child will no longer be eligible for the program.

The Role of the Supervisor

I. Ensure all pending work is complete and approved, including all AFCARS exceptions, so the pre-adoptive case can be closed by the Adoption Assistance Program staff and the adoptive case can be created.

Section 11: Affidavits in Support of Adoption
Affidavits in Support of Adoption

There are three common areas where a caseworker is responsible for preparing and signing an affidavit in support of an adoption petition:

I. Deceased parent (for legal parent or “Stanley” type putative father).
II. Presumed legal father.
III. Putative father (for “Pagan” type putative father).

In each instance, the purpose of the affidavit in support of an adoption petition is to inform the court granting the adoption, why there is neither a voluntary relinquishment nor a termination order on one of the parents or the presumed legal father.

Preparing a caseworker affidavit in support of an adoption

Procedure

I. Prepare an affidavit in support of adoption at the following points in the process:

A. Putative father: As soon as the child’s adoptive home has been designated by the Adoption Services Unit (includes legal risk placement) and the Center for Health Statistics has returned the vital statistics letter to ODHS;
B. Presumed legal father: Anytime after adoption becomes the plan
   1. An order/judgment of non-paternity is needed for most cases involving a presumed legal father.
   2. There are rare cases, approved for TPR prior to current changes in the law, which may still be appropriate for an affidavit. Check with the legal assistance specialist prior to submitting such an affidavit to determine whether this will be an adequate way to deal with the father’s rights. An affidavit regarding a presumed legal father is not needed in the following circumstances:
      - He relinquishes his rights as legal father.
      - If there is a judgment of non-paternity. – OR –
      - If there is a valid judgment of paternity entered as to the biological father of the child.
C. Deceased parent: Anytime after adoption becomes the plan.

II. When preparing the affidavit, follow the directions in Appendix 5.36, Instructions for Preparing Deceased Parent, Presumed Legal Father, and Putative Father Affidavits, and Appendix 5.37, Preparing a Putative Father Affidavit.

III. Use the sample affidavits found in the Appendix 5.38. Write the affidavit so it reflects the specifics of the particular case.

IV. Attach the following supporting documents to the affidavit:
   A. Putative father:
1. The child’s birth certificate.
2. CF 0418, Father’s Questionnaire.
3. Release and surrender document or termination of parental rights order for the other parent, if applicable.
4. Vital Statistics letter (see below for more detail).
5. Letters to the putative father, if applicable.

B. Presumed legal father:
1. The child’s birth certificate.
2. CF 0418; Father’s Questionnaire.
3. Presumed legal father’s affidavit signed by the presumed legal father (if available).

C. Deceased parent:
1. The child’s birth certificate.
2. The parent’s death certificate.

V. Contact the assigned legal assistance specialist if there are questions or unique situations regarding supporting documentation for an affidavit.

VI. Attach the original supporting documents (exhibits) to the first affidavit and copies of the original documents to the second and third affidavits. In some instances, original supporting documentation will have already been sent to the Adoption Services Unit. In this case, provide copies of the supporting documentation.

VII. Include two original copies of the affidavit with supporting documentation to the Adoption Services Unit as part of the adoption finalization packet. Place the third original in the legal section of the child’s case record.

VIII. The affidavit must be completed within the following timelines:
   A. Putative father: The affidavit is necessary for finalization.
   B. Presumed legal father: The affidavit is needed before the child can be declared legally freed for adoption and before the placement can be designated as a legally free adoptive placement.
   C. Deceased parent: The affidavit is necessary for finalization.

IX. The legal assistance specialist reviews the affidavit for accuracy and completeness and contacts the caseworker if corrections are needed. The caseworker’s affidavit with supporting documentation becomes part of the consent packet that the Adoption Services Unit sends to the attorney who will prepare the petition to adopt.

Preparing an affidavit for a putative father or presumed legal father’s signature

In some cases the caseworker can consider taking an affidavit from a putative father or presumed legal father to support an adoptive placement. An affidavit from a putative father or a presumed legal father could be obtained at any point in the case life. This affidavit can be used as an exhibit to the caseworker’s affidavit or as evidence if there is a court challenge to paternity.

Procedure

I. Consult with the legal assistance specialist to determine if an affidavit from a putative father or presumed legal father is appropriate to support an adoptive placement.

II. Prepare an affidavit for each child if the parent is willing to sign an affidavit. Follow the directions in Appendix 5.36, and the sample affidavits in appendices 5.39 and 5.40.

III. Once the affidavit is prepared and approved, bring the parent before a Notary Public to sign three copies of the affidavit.

IV. Use this affidavit as an exhibit to the caseworker’s affidavit in support of an adoption.

Vital statistics letter (Center for Health Statistics)

When completing the caseworker’s putative father affidavit in support of adoption, verify that no one has filed notice of a filiation (paternity) proceeding on or before the date the Adoption Services Unit designates the adoptive placement or designates a legal risk adoptive placement.

I. To obtain this verification, send a letter to the Oregon Center for Health Statistics. A sample of this letter can be found in Appendix 5.41.
   A. The letter should not be requested until the branch receives notification from Central Office that the placement has been designated as the legal risk adoptive placement or designated the adoptive placement.
   B. This letter is sent on pink paper with the branch letterhead.
   C. The caseworker includes the registration number from the child’s birth certificate for identification purposes.

II. File a copy of the response from the Oregon Center for Health Statistics in the legal section of the case record and attach the original copy to the affidavit in support of adoption that is sent to the Adoption Services Unit.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Provide guidance to the caseworker in preparing the affidavit and consider an affidavit for the putative or presumed legal father to sign.

II. Review any affidavit before it is sent into the Adoption Services Unit.

III. Periodically review the caseworker’s work to be certain that an adoption case is progressing in a timely manner toward finalization.

Section 12: Supervising the adoptive placement and adoption disruption
Supervising the adoptive placement and adoption disruption

This section covers adoption supervision activities and adoption disruption prior to finalization. Supervision in the context of adoption includes contacts with the child and family in the pre-adoptive home to confirm that the family is participating in the ongoing safety plan, the family’s environment is safe for the child and the family is meeting the child’s needs. Supervision in adoption includes monitoring services provided to the child (education, physical and mental health, or other treatment needs) and the child’s adjustment to the pre-adoptive family’s care. The procedure manual has more general information about supervision, so it will not be repeated here. For more general information about supervision, please see Chapter 4 “Managing child safety in and out of home,” Section 9 “Monitor the child welfare case plan through required contacts,” Subsection F “Contact with the child placed in substitute care.”

A. Monitoring and supporting the child and adoptive family, addressing concerns

When a child is placed with a family for adoption, the agency’s goal becomes supporting the child and the family to successful and timely legalization of the adoption. During the supervisory period, ODHS retains legal custody of the child, ensures the child’s safety, monitors the child’s adjustment and developing attachment to the family, and the ability of the family to cope with challenges. The active participation of the family is important to the success of the adoption. The adoption supervision period allows the adoptive parents or parents, the department adoption worker and the adoption agency (if other than ODHS) the opportunity to determine whether the adoptive parent or parents will be able to meet the child’s needs over time. Supervision services provide the opportunity for ODHS to support and facilitate the merging of parents, child and other family members into a new and different family unit. Active and supportive adoption supervision decreases the risk of adoption disruption.

Supervision of the child’s adoptive placement begins at the day of the child’s move into the adoptive home or designation of adoptive placement, if the child is already in the home. It ends upon finalization of the adoption. Supervision includes:

I. Monitoring child safety,
II. Observing, monitoring and supporting the child and the adoptive family,
III. Providing referrals and coordinating services with other agencies,
IV. Documenting the adjustment of the child and the adoptive family,
V. Providing related services toward legalization of the adoption,
VI. Phone contact, correspondence, contact with third parties,
VII. Face-to-face contact with the child and the family, and VIII. Monitoring compliance with certification and adoption standards.

Definitions of worker roles during adoption supervision

Three types of workers may be involved during the adoption supervision period. These workers are:

I. The child’s caseworker: The caseworker assigned primary responsibility for a child served by the Department of Human Services.

II. The adoption worker: The primary ODHS adoption or certification worker or licensed adoption agency employee assigned to the adoptive family for adoption serves purposes.

III. The supervising worker: The worker providing supervision to the adoptive placement.

This worker may be the child’s caseworker or the family’s adoption worker. The decision of which worker will supervise the placement is made based on the circumstances of the family, the location of the child’s local office and the location of the adoptive family. The child’s caseworker if within a reasonable distance of the child’s local office generally supervises current caretaker families.

All of the above staff are responsible for the safety of the child in the adoptive home. When the child is placed through an in-state private agency, ODHS must provide supervision of the placement and coordinate support services with the in-state private agency.

Length of supervision between adoptive placement and finalizing the adoption

The length of time between an adoptive placement and finalization of the adoption is dependent upon the readiness of the child and the adoptive family to finalize and consideration of reasonable efforts to achieve the child’s permanency plan in a timely manner.

I. Six months is the minimum standard supervision period for a child in ODHS custody. The time in which the child has lived with the family for foster care may be included in the six-month period.

II. When the child’s caseworker and the adoption worker agree that it is in the child’s best interests to proceed with finalization before six months:

   A. The child’s caseworker or adoption worker must request approval from:
      1. Their supervisor; and
      2. The Child Permanency Program manager or designee.

   B. The child’s caseworker must document in ORKids when the Child Permanency Program gives approval for a reduced post-placement supervision time.

Casework services during the supervisory period

Procedure

Providing casework services to the adoptive family and the child is the responsibility of the worker supervising the adoptive placement and begins when a child transitions from the substitute caregiver into the adoptive home if the selected adoptive family is not the child’s current foster parent. If the child’s substitute caregiver is the adoptive family, adoption supervision begins after the selection of the adoptive family. The adoption worker and the child’s caseworker are both responsible for:
I. Helping the child integrate into the adoptive home.

Tip

Sleeping and eating:

Practical ideas about proactively dealing with the adoptive child’s sleep is “What is This Thing You Call Sleep?” at this link: http://adoptmed.org/topics/sleep-and-adoption.html

Find useful information for adoptive children in “Transitional Feeding Difficulties” at this link: http://adoptmed.org/topics/transitional-feeding-difficulties.html

Both articles are by Julian Davies, MD, a pediatrician who specializes in adoption medicine.

II. Ensuring services important for the child’s safety and well-being (e.g., safety plan, medical, educational, and mental health services) continue in his or her adoptive family. Providing families with resources for potential for crisis may be needed for some children.

Support for safety may begin at the time of transition or later if indicated. The Oregon Post Adoption Resource Center has guidelines for adoptive families called “Safety Planning for Families in Crisis” and it is available at this link: www.orparc.org/services/CRISIS_FamilySafetyPlan.pdf

III. Completing adoption assistance application materials.

IV. Working together to achieve timely finalization of the adoption.

V. Supporting continuing relationships between the birth and adoptive families, whenever appropriate.

VI. Supporting the adoptive family.

VII. Assisting with adjustments in the family system.

VIII. Discussing the need for services after the adoption is finalized.

IX. Providing support and services to the adopted child including but not limited to:

A. Helping the family and child understand grief and loss issues related to adoption transition and loss of birth parents.

B. Helping the child master the new home environment by encouraging the child to make gains and use positive skills and coping strategies.

C. Identifying areas where the child is successful as well as areas where the child can use additional supports and services to adjust to the new home and family.

D. Building a relationship with the child and listening to what he or she is saying about the adoptive family, school situation, etc. The child may need visits more often than every month, especially during transition or when having increased difficulties. For more information about visiting with the child, refer to the procedure manual’s Chapter 3, Section 9F, “Contact with the child placed in substitute care.”

X. Providing intensive casework and support to help the child and family during a crisis period.

XI. Providing support and services to the adoptive family, including but not limited to:

A. Working with the adoptive family’s adoption worker or certifier (if someone other than the supervising worker) to implement a placement support plan, when needed, to increase the ability of the family to meet safety and well-being needs of the child. The supervising worker should monitor the placement support plan and assist the family with making adjustments as the child and family experience changes.

B. Supporting the adoptive parents in continuing services already in place and assessing the need for new services for the child.

C. Providing the adoptive family information about court and Citizen’s Review Board reviews and other aspects of being engaged in adopting a child in the custody of the department.

D. Giving the adoptive family information about the full range of financial supports, medical assistance, and services available to them and their child.

E. Reviewing agreements regarding adoption assistance and medical assistance with the family to ensure they understand the benefits and know how to access them.

F. Making referrals for services to assist the family with the integration process.

G. Helping the adoptive parents identify any doubts or concerns they have about raising the child and providing support and recommendations for services, when appropriate. Ambivalence is normal and the adoption worker can help the family understand their concerns.

H. Increasing the frequency of visits if the family and child need additional assistance to support the placement.

Family provision and preparation for a safe and secure home for children with a history of sexual abuse or touching problems

Parenting sexually abused children or children who have a history of sexually acting out is especially complex. Planning for parenting should start prior to the adoption transition. Research has shown that some children from foster care report after being placed in their adoptive families that they have been being sexually abused previously in their lives and the placing agency did not have prior information about this history. Therefore, all adoptive families should understand that their child may have experienced some level of sexual abuse without agency knowledge. Children who have been sexually abused may not feel comfortable telling anyone about the abuse until they feel they are in a safe, stable environment. The adoptive parent may be the first person a child feels comfortable talking to about being sexually abused.

For more information on the topic of creating a safe home environment for children with a history of sexual abuse or touching problems, a useful guide is “Parenting a Child Who Has Been Sexually Abused: A Guide for Foster and Adoptive Parents” at this website: www.childwelfare.gov/pubs/f_abused/f_abused.pdf. Share this article with families adopting a child with a history of sexual abuse or sexual acting out.

“Create Your Family Safety Plan” is another article that has tips for keeping all family members safe and is at this website: www.parentsprotect.co.uk/creating_a_family_safety_plan.htm.

The adoptive family should also prepare for the child’s arrival by talking with the children in their home about changes within the family upon the arrival of the new sibling.

Procedure
I. The worker talks with the adoptive parents about the child’s need to feel safe in their new home and how to make the home more likely to encourage healing and appropriate behavior. These guidelines are general and each family and child will have particular needs relevant to their unique situation:

   A. Be aware of and follow the ODHS policy, Standards for Certification of Foster Parents and Relative Caregivers and Approval of Potential Adoptive Resources II-B.1, regarding OAR 413-200-0371, Responsibilities and Notification Requirements for Selection and Use of Respite Care Providers and Babysitters for appropriate safeguards when considering other caregivers of the child.

   B. Work with the child’s therapist to continue addressing treatment needs if applicable. If the child is not in treatment at the time of the transition, be aware of concerning behaviors that may indicate a need to begin treatment or family counseling.

   C. Older children and children with significant emotional special needs and their adoptive families need additional support. In general, these families should have family therapy or counseling services started at the beginning of the adoptive placement or shortly thereafter. If the therapist is not familiar with adoption issues and family development, consider referring the therapist to the Oregon Post Adoption Center (ORPARC) for information about adoptive family dynamics and dealing with specific special issues. Here is the link to the home page of ORPARC: www.orparc.org. Note that ORPARC has services for Spanish speaking families.

Evaluating child safety and well being regularly and monitoring the home to ensure a safe environment for the child

For procedure on monitoring the safety and well-being of the child in a pre-adoptive home, see Chapter 6 “Family support services,” Section 6: “Monitor the family support services case plan through required contacts.”

This procedure discusses additional considerations pertinent to adoptive placement supervision.

Once a child is placed in the out-of-state adoptive placement

Procedure

The child’s caseworker is to:

I. Inform the Oregon ICPC office of the date of placement so that the 100B can be sent to notify the receiving state that the child has been placed.

II. Submit a placement memo to the Child Permanency Program seamless support staff person for the child’s county’s legal assistance specialist. Notify them of the child’s name, the adoptive family’s name and address, and the date the child was physically placed in the adoptive home. This must be done immediately upon placement if adoption assistance is to begin simultaneously with the placement of the child in the new home for a child who is not Title IV-E eligible.

III. If the child is already placed in an out-of-state home under foster or relative care, submit the CF100B to the Oregon ICPC unit in order to inform the receiving state about the change to adoptive placement.

IV. Request that the supervising worker in the receiving state send their quarterly progress reports through ICPC channels. If the supervising worker does not send quarterly reports, or information about face-to-face visit dates and case progress, contact the assigned Oregon ICPC coordinator.

V. If the adoption assistance application process has not already been completed, (such as when adoption assistance was put in place simultaneously with the child’s placement), submit an application packet to the Child Permanency Adoption Assistance Program. Do this within 60 days of the selection of the adoptive resource. Find information about adoption assistance at this link.

Caseworker to report significant changes and concerns to ICPC and Child Permanency Program after placement

Procedure

I. Notify the adoption assistance coordinator and ICPC if the placement status changes, such as a disruption, child’s move to residential treatment, child protective services removal from the home, the family’s move to another state, or child’s permanent plan changes from adoption. Contact the adoption placement specialist in the central office Child Permanency Program for consultation if there is a risk of disruption or a disruption of the placement.

II. Give feedback to the adoption placement specialist in the central office Child Permanency Program about the experience with the out-of-state agency if the services were exceptionally concerning or noteworthy, both positive and negative information.

Private agency adoption worker responsibilities in the receiving state

When a child is placed out of state and a public agency supervises the placement, ODHS does not require a contract with the public agency. Adoptive placements supervised by a public agency fall under the provisions of the receiving state’s supervision requirements.

When a private agency supervises the placement, the private agency adoption services are specified in a contract between ODHS and the private agency. In private agency adoptive placements in another state, the caseworker will need to be familiar with expectations between ODHS and the private adoption agency providing adoption supervision. The focus of supervision includes the adoption agency assisting the family in finding needed local services and resources to support the adoption.

Supervision also includes evaluation of safety in the home until the adoption is finalized.

I. The family’s adoption worker in the receiving state will coordinate with the child’s caseworker all aspects of planning and implementing of placement. The family’s adoption worker will:

   A. Inform the adoptive family of ODHS’ procedures and requirements for placement, supervision of the placement, adoption assistance, the consent to adoption letter and the process of legalizing the adoption.

   B. Discuss the need for adoption assistance and assist the adoptive family in completing the Adoption Assistance application forms and submit to ODHS within 60 days of placement with the resource family if the child is legally free or after the child becomes legally free.

   C. Obtain the “Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents” form CF 0963 from the child’s caseworker and the material referenced on the form. The adoption worker will provide the material to the adoptive family immediately. The adoption worker retains a copy of the CF 0963 and notes in the appropriate progress report the date the information was provided to the adoptive family.
The signed copy is returned to the caseworker.

II. When a child is placed by ODHS in a home supervised by an out-of-state private adoption agency, the agency agrees to services that include, but are not limited to the following:

A. Supervise the placement of the child and the adoptive family in compliance with referenced ODHS policies, including monitoring the safety and well-being of the child to assure child safety. The adoption worker must make the following contacts and document the contact in the required progress reports:

1. Face-to-face contact in the home with the child a minimum of every 30;
2. Face-to-face contact with the adoptive family a minimum of every 30 days; and
3. Face-to-face contact with the adoptive family a minimum of once every 60 days in the adoptive family’s home, with at least one of the adoptive parents present.

B. Monitor and assess the child’s safety and well-being with the adoptive family. If the adoption worker cannot confirm safety and well-being of the child in the home, the adoption worker must immediately contact the ODHS caseworker and participate in an assessment of child safety to determine if there is a safety threat to the child. The caseworker is to consult their supervisor if they have concerns about the child’s safety and well-being.

III. Beginning when a child is placed in the adoptive family’s home, the adoption worker will submit written 90-day progress reports on the safety and well-being of the child, the adoptive family and the progress of the placement in general. Copies of the report are submitted to the receiving state’s ICPC office, the Oregon ICPC office, the caseworker, and the ODHS central office Child Permanency Program.

IV. In addition to any requirements listed above, written progress reports include, but are not limited to:

A. Description of the current and future needs of the child; and observations and analysis of the child’s physical, mental and emotional development.
B. An evaluation of the quality of the relationship existing between the child and adoptive family.
C. Ongoing and new services provided to the child; and ongoing and new services provided to the adoptive family.

The supervisor’s role

I. If the adoptive family plans to move out of state prior to finalization, help the caseworker to determine if the move is in the best interests of the child before a decision is made to approve the move. An example is considering the move of a child who is not legally free and the child has regular visits with a birth parent.

Completing the adoption assistance process and pre-finalization notifications

Procedure

I. It is the supervising worker’s responsibility to assist the family in applying for adoption assistance and to ensure that adoption assistance is in place prior to finalization of the adoption. Refer to the Chapter 5, Section 10b, “Establishing adoption assistance” for details.
II. Prior to finalization of the adoption, the department must ensure that the adoptive resource is made aware of all of the following:

A. Available post-legal services;
B. The potential eligibility for federal or state adoption tax credits, or both; and
C. The ability to seek voluntary supportive services through the department to stabilize an adoption and promote lifelong permanency for children.

Adoptive family with a child placed in the home plans to move out of Oregon

Procedure

I. Inform the adoptive family that moving to another state prior to finalization will delay finalization of the adoption if the adoption is not finalized in Oregon before the move. If the adoption will be finalized in a short period of time and the family can manage to stay in Oregon until the adoption is finalized, that is generally recommended. Contact the central office Child Permanency Program legal assistance specialist or adoption placement specialist to discuss the option of achieving finalization before the family’s move to another state.

II. If the adoptive family is struggling and the placement seems tenuous, discuss with the supervisor the advisability of the child moving with the family. Include the family’s adoption worker and their supervisor.

III. If a family is experiencing challenges, but disruption is not a consideration, inform the receiving state of the challenges the family is experiencing.

IV. Prepare and submit an ICPC referral packet as soon as it is known the adoptive family intends to move to another state prior to finalization.

V. If an adoptive family is receiving adoption assistance, contact the family’s adoption assistance coordinator to arrange for medical card coverage in the new state of residence. See Chapter 5 for more information about adoption assistance and medical coverage when residing out of state.

When the family experiences major changes prior to finalization

When the caseworker or adoption worker become aware of significant changes to the adoptive family’s situation, including changes in the family structure, ODHS may require an updated adoption home study prior to making a determination to proceed with finalization of the adoption.

I. Consult with Child Permanency Program staff, such as the adoption placement specialist or supervisor when the family has a significant change that may affect the adoption. Examples of these changes may be divorce or separation of the adoptive parents, death of a member in the nuclear family, addition of a new partner, criminal or child protective services issues.

II. The adoption worker is to follow up with a home study update as directed. This should be submitted to central office Child Permanency Program. If the family is out of state, work with ICPC for additional assessment of the changes.

Progress reports on the adoption if the family is out-of-state

Procedure
I. The supervising worker completes quarterly progress report for the purpose of adoption supervision.

II. Information about the child may include:
   A. Adjustments in relating to peers;
   B. Self-esteem;
   C. Culture, religion and therapy needs;
   D. Special education needs and services;
   E. Special developmental needs and services;
   F. Special medical and dental needs and services;
   G. Issues or concerns about the child’s attachment to the adoptive family; and
   H. Progress toward finalization.

III. Specific adoptive family’s adjustment information may include:
   A. Significant changes in the family’s coping skills, marriage/domestic relationship and use of supports.
   B. Changes in sleeping arrangements, income, expenses, health, job, family composition and home.
   C. Other pertinent information about the progress of the adoptive placement toward finalization.

IV. The supervising worker maintains regular contact with the child’s caseworker and keeps the child’s caseworker informed of the progress of the adoptive placement.

The supervisor’s role

I. Review the case record to ensure that face-to-face contact, administrative reviews and progress reports are completed, as required, by the supervising worker during the adoption supervisory period.

II. Assist with the adoption assistance process, especially in cases where there are disputes about the amount of the adoption subsidy.

III. Provide consultation and guidance to the supervising worker when there are protective service, certification and other concerns about the adoptive placement.

IV. Review the supervising worker’s recommendation to finalize the adoption.

V. Support the caseworker in providing appropriate services to the adoptive family and the child during the adoption process.

VI. Assist in cases where the decision to disrupt the adoptive placement is considered by the agency.

B. Disruption decision making and process

Fortunately, disruption is a rare circumstance. A disruption refers to the ending of an adoption process after adoption selection of the family and placement of the child with the family for the purpose of adoption, but before the adoption is legally finalized.

An excellent resource for approaching disruption with children and families is the article by Jon Bergeron, Jr., Ph.D. and Robin Pennington, “Supporting Children and Families When Adoption Dissolution Occurs” in the Adoption ADVOCATE at this link:

For additional policy information about adoption disruption, see OAR 413-120-0870 “Disruption” at this link.

Most adoptive placements lead to finalization of the adoption. When disruption occurs, the decision to disrupt a child’s adoption may be made by:

I. The adoptive family; or
II. The department.

When made by the department, the decision to discuss disruption of an adoptive placement includes, if possible, the adoption worker, the caseworker, adoptive family, child (as age and developmentally appropriate). If possible, consideration of disruption occurs after exploration of other alternatives.

Serious situations such as child abuse/neglect or other circumstances that jeopardize the child’s safety, health and well-being may prompt an immediate decision to move the child from the adoptive home. This does not constitute an adoptive placement disruption, which would require additional assessment and decision-making if the family were not choosing to disrupt.

Adoptive placements should be preserved when possible and when in the children’s best interests. Safety is considered in attempts to consider preservation of an adoptive placement.

A decision to disrupt one or some of the children in a sibling group placed with the adoptive family needs to include consideration of sibling relationships. If a sibling group of children will be separated due to disruption of one or some of the siblings, the caseworker must consider whether to present the case for sibling separation to a Permanency Committee. Refer to the procedure manual Chapter 5, Section 3 “Sibling adoption planning” for more information about separating siblings for the purpose of adoption.

Child Protective Services move of the child in an adoptive placement

If the child was moved from the home for Child Protective Services (CPS) safety reasons, the move was initially to provide safety. In some cases, children return to their adoptive family after a CPS removal. An adoption is not disrupted until the agency follows the process to disrupt, if the family does not choose to disrupt after a CPS move. Consult central office Child Permanency Program staff, such as the Adoption Placement Specialist, Legal Assistance Specialist or their supervisor if a CPS removal is planned or occurs.

The adoption worker and the child’s worker and their supervisors should share their professional opinions about whether to consider the request for a department disruption. The primary concern is the child’s long-term best interests.

Planning process when the adoptive family disrupts the adoption

There are distinctions in processes when the family decides to disrupt the adoption and when the department decides to disrupt the adoption.

Procedure

When the adoptive family makes the decision to disrupt:

I. When an adoptive family expresses reservations about proceeding with the adoption, the child’s caseworker and the adoption worker should discuss the child and family’s progress and challenges and the family’s willingness to participate in services to preserve the placement. The supervising worker should make reasonable attempts to provide services to support and preserve the placement.
II. When the family’s final decision is to disrupt the placement, the supervising worker takes the following steps:

A. Staff the case with the supervisor and Child Welfare Program Manager to develop the most supportive plan for the adoptive family and the child. Include the Permanency Program’s Adoption Placement Specialist for consultation.

B. Determine whether the child can be maintained with the adoptive family pending the identification of another resource. If this is not possible, make placement plans with timelines. Consultation should include the child’s caseworker, the adoption worker and the adoptive family as appropriate.

C. Arrange to remove the child from the adoptive home. Make placement plans and timelines in consultation with the child’s caseworker and the adoptive family.

D. Evaluate the immediate needs of the child and the adoptive family.

E. Send a memo to the central office Child Permanency Program’s support staff person for the child’s Legal Assistance Specialist with the child’s name, the adoptive parent’s name, information about the reasons for the disruption, plus the disruption date. The worker does not send a memo to the Program Manager when the family decides to disrupt the child.

F. The caseworker must document the disruption in OR-Kids and notify the central office Child Permanency Program of the date of the adoption disruption.

G. If the child is placed in another state, notify the central office ICPC unit of the date of the adoption disruption. Work through ICPC for authorization of travel costs to return the child to Oregon.

Process if the supervising worker believes it is in the child’s best interest to disrupt the placement and the adoptive family has not made that decision

When the supervising worker believes that it is in the child’s best interest to disrupt the adoptive placement, and the adoptive parents have not come to that conclusion, complete the following activities.

Procedure for the supervising caseworker

I. Consult with the supervisor and child welfare program manager or designee about the need to disrupt the adoptive placement. Also, consult with the other involved worker, the caseworker or family’s adoption worker and their supervisor. These workers should inform their CWPM or designee, if different, about the supervising worker’s decision to disrupt.

II. When the caseworker for the child determines that a disruption is likely, the caseworker must consult with each of the following:

A. The adoption worker of the family

B. Members of the child’s team identified as individuals who can offer additional information or support, and

C. The family, if possible.

III. In some cases, after consultation, there may be a plan to try to preserve the placement, when it is in the best interest of the child to do so.

IV. When the Department is supervising an adoptive placement of a child in the custody of another public child welfare agency and concerns arise that indicate that the adoptive resource is no longer appropriate for the child or children, the caseworker must ensure contact is made with the responsible entity and coordinate subsequent actions.

V. Consult with the central office Child Permanency Program’s Adoption Placement Specialist about the problems regarding the placement.

VI. If the supervising worker, supervisor and Child Welfare Program manager or designee all concur, send a memo or email to the Child Permanency Program manager in Central Office requesting approval of the recommendation. This memo should include:
   A. First and last names of the child,
   B. First and last names of the adoptive family,
   C. Concerns that led the local office to request a disruption of the adoptive placement, including safety issues,
   D. Services and supports, if any, that have been recommended or implemented during the placement to support the child and family in the adoption,
   E. Sibling issues, if any, and
   F. Placement date.

VII. Await the decision. The central office Child Permanency Program manager must approve of the recommendation to disrupt the adoption.

VIII. Determine the immediate needs for both the child and the adoptive family.

IX. Follow the child protective services referral and assessment procedures for out-of-home placement in the event of suspected child neglect or abuse as found in OAR 413-015-0601 to 0608, Child Welfare Responsibilities When a Report Involves a Home Certified by Child Welfare, ODDS, or OYA.

X. The caseworker must document the disruption in OR-Kids and notify the central office Child Permanency Program of the date of the adoption disruption if decided by ODHS.

XI. If the child is placed in another state, notify the central office ICPC unit of the date of the adoption disruption. Work through ICPC for the return of the child to Oregon. Work through ICPC for authorization of travel costs to the return the child to Oregon.

Disruption staffing after a disruption occur

I. The caseworker is required, after the disruption of an adoptive placement of a child in ODHS custody, to consult with his or her supervisor, the child’s team and individuals with significant adoption experience to staff the case in order to:
   A. Gain a comprehensive understanding of the issues leading to the disruption; and
   B. Increase the likelihood for the child’s success in another adoptive placement.

II. If an adoptive placement disrupts and it is the child’s first adoption disruption, a more formal disruption staffing is recommended. If a child has had more than one disruption, a disruption staffing is highly encouraged. The purpose of the staffing is to benefit from the expertise of others who may have additional insights.

III. The worker may value the deeper and more structured disruption staffing process, especially with a complex case. Discuss with the supervisor how to request a local disruption staffing meeting after the disruption has occurred. The disruption staffing happens after the disruption decision and is to be a clinical debriefing and helpful consultation for future planning with possible ideas about the child’s lagging skills, recruitment, adoption preparation of the child, transition, disclosure, desired family characteristics, possible supports after the child is placed with a family and other recommendations. The disruption staffing is not to be used to determine whether the placement should be disrupted, since it occurs after the decision to disrupt.

Procedure for the child’s caseworker

I. Arrange a disruption staffing with assistance from the supervisor.

II. Coordinate with the adoption worker and discuss materials and who to invite to the disruption staffing.

III. Consult with the central office Child Permanency Program’s adoption placement specialist or their supervisor, about disruption staffing details as needed.

Determining the appropriateness of adoption as the child’s permanent plan after the child’s adoptive placement has been disrupted

Procedure for the child’s caseworker

I. If the caseworker has concerns that the child who has come from an adoption disruption is not likely to be able to be placed or parented successfully in an adoptive family after a disruption, the caseworker discusses appropriateness of adoption as the child’s plan with the supervisor.

The supervisor’s role

I. When the supervising worker expresses concerns about the viability of an adoptive family’s success with the child, assist the supervising worker in exploring ways to support and preserve the placement, if appropriate. Ensure that the child’s caseworker and the adoption worker are involved in discussions and planning. Include the Child Permanency Program staff for consultation in cases with serious issues that may indicate disruption.

II. If the adoptive family seeks a disruption, help the supervising worker determine how to support the family and the child through the removal and transition back to foster care. Workers can have very strong feelings about a family that is not able to meet a child’s needs.

III. If necessary, discuss whether adoption is an appropriate plan for the child.

IV. Discuss the need for a Permanency Committee if the child’s case should be referred for sibling planning.

V. Discuss the need for a disruption staffing after the disruption has occurred so that the child can benefit from the expertise of others. Disruption staffings help the worker understand the factors that contributed to the disruption and may plan to increase the child’s opportunity for future success in a family.

VI. Ensure the child’s caseworker and the family’s adoption workers are each included in discussions and decisions on the need for a disruption of the adoptive placement and need for a disruption staffing if there is a disruption.

VII. Assist the child’s caseworker to prepare for a disruption staffing. If appropriate, attend the disruption staffing with the supervising worker to examine agency practice, assist in future planning for the child, and support the individuals involved.

VIII. In a ODHS initiated the disruption, work with the supervising worker to assure that the local child welfare program manager and the central office Child Permanency Program manager approve the disruption decision.

Section 13: Finalizing the Adoption Finalizing the Adoption

A. Social Service Specialist Requirements for Finalization

The supervising worker proceeds to finalization of the adoption once the supervisory period is over, and there are no issues that would preclude the completion of the adoption. Section 12 of this chapter provides information about the supervision period and discusses issues that warrant delaying finalization of the adoption.

Recommendation to the Adoption Unit regarding readiness to finalize the adoption

Procedure for the supervising worker

I. Determine that the adoption is ready for finalization.
   A. Upon completion of the supervisory period, discuss finalization of the adoption with the other involved worker (child’s caseworker or adoption worker/certifier). Determine whether both workers are in agreement that the adoption is ready to finalize.
      1. If the child is placed outside of Oregon or in a private agency placement, secure from the family’s adoption worker their written statement indicating the placement is appropriate for finalization.
   B. When making this determination, take into consideration the best interest of the child and the adoptive family including:
      1. During regular contacts with the child and family, has it consistently been determined that the child is safe?
      2. Is the family meeting the child’s needs and utilizing services that are necessary for the child’s well-being? Will the family likely continue to do so without the involvement of a caseworker?
      3. Have the child and family adjusted to their new circumstances as an adoptive family?
      4. Is the family indicating their readiness to have the adoption finalized?

II. Upon completion of the supervisory period, after determining that the adoption is ready for finalization, and after required documentation is in Central Office, send a written recommendation to the Central Office Adoption Services Unit regarding the readiness of the adoption to finalize.

III. Include the following information, in the final progress report/request to finalize the adoption (Refer to Appendix 5.42 for a sample of the final report/request for finalization):
   A. Progress of the child and the adoptive family through the supervision period.
   B. Completion of the adoption assistance process.
   C. Receipt of required case file documentation by the Adoption Unit.
   D. Indicate in writing that the adoptive family has been notified of the availability of post-legal adoption services.
   E. Indicate whether or not a post adoption communication agreement has been developed.
   F. If a caseworker other than the supervising worker is involved, the final report should indicate that the other involved worker also concurs with finalization of the adoption.
Documents needed to finalize the adoption

Procedure of supervising worker

I. Determine if all of the documents needed to finalize the adoptive placement are in the Central Office adoption file prior to sending the final report/request to finalize the adoption. Refer to section 10, parts D and E of this chapter for information on ways that the caseworker can verify that all documents have been received in Central Office in order to finalize the adoption, ARMS read-only access in the branch, and case status inquiry e-mail. At the time the case is approved for TPR, the legal assistance specialist will provide an adoption checklist (CF 252) indicating which of the following are applicable for the particular case. These documents are part of the child’s permanent adoption record and are needed to finalize the adoption.

II. When the above documents are in Central Office, submit the final report/request for finalization.

Legalizing an adoption

There are two different ways to legalize an adoption:

(1) With a petition
(2) Without an adoption petition.

I. If the adoptive family lives out of state:

   A. Unless the worker can verify that one of the birth parents with legal standing lives in Oregon and has continuously lived in Oregon for the past six months (at the time of finalizing the adoption), the adoption will either need to be done as a petitionless adoption or the final judgment of adoption must be issued by the state in which the adoptive family resides.

      1. If being done as a petitionless adoption, no other steps are necessary.

      2. If a petition is used to legalize the adoption, the caseworker sends the Central Office Adoption Services Unit a memo indicating which parent resides in Oregon and has resided in Oregon continuously for the past six months, and explains how the caseworker knows this to be true.

B. Central Office, Attorney, and Court Requirements for Finalization
When all the required documentation is in the child’s adoption file and the legal assistance specialist has approved finalization, Central Office sends a consent packet to the attorney that was selected by the adoptive family. The attorney then prepares the appropriate documents based on how the adoption will be finalized. There is interaction between Central Office staff and the attorney finalizing the adoption until the general judgement of adoption is signed by the judge.

Procedure

I. There is nothing the caseworker needs to do during this part of the process.

   A. The caseworker may check in the CW electronic data system or with ARMS whether consents have been issued or whether the final court report has been sent.

   B. The caseworker may check whether the adoptive family has signed the petition, whether the attorney has filed the petition, or when the judge will sign the general judgment of adoption, by contacting the attorney who has been selected by the adoptive family.

C. Closing ODHS Court Case Once General Judgment of Adoption Is Entered

Dismissing jurisdiction

After the General Judgment of Adoption (adoption decree) is signed and the Adoption Services Unit receives a copy of the signed General Judgment of Adoption from the court, the adoption is final. A letter is sent from the Adoption Services Unit to the child’s caseworker notifying the caseworker to request jurisdiction be terminated and the file closed. The Adoption Services Unit also sends notification of the legalization of the adoption to the Citizen Review Board.

Procedure

I. Upon receiving the letter from the Adoption Unit saying the adoption is final, the child’s caseworker sends a letter to the court requesting dismissal of jurisdiction.

II. See CF 1286, Sample Letter to Court Requesting Dismissal of Jurisdiction for a sample template.

D. Post Legalization of Adoption Services

Children placed by the Department of Human Services often have special needs that may challenge an adoptive family’s skills and require specialized services after the adoption is finalized. The department maintains a commitment to these children and their adoptive families, until the child reaches age eighteen or emancipation, whichever comes first. The department assumes an obligation to maintain the adoptive placement through the delivery of post legal adoption preservation services. Chapter VI, Family Support Services, details the types of services available to families, including those who have adopted through ODHS, after an adoption finalizes.

Procedure

I. Prior to finalization of the adoption, the supervising worker (if a ODHS employee) or the child’s caseworker if the supervising worker is a private agency employee or out-of-state worker, should ensure the adoptive family is familiar with services that are available post adoption, if needed, and how to access those services.

   A. Refer to chapter VI, Family Support Services, for more information about services that are available through the department when the family requests assistance by contacting the intake screener in the area in which they reside, including:

      1. In-home services or services via voluntary placement agreement, while the child is temporarily placed in substitute care, to address identified needs.

      2. When an adopted child is placed in foster care or residential treatment through Family Support Services eligibility, the adoptive parents may be eligible for a permanent child support exemption. This would need to be further discussed with the supervisor and the adoption assistance coordinator upon the request for such exemption.

   B. Refer to Appendix 5.43, ‘Post Adoption Services’ and Appendix 6.3, ‘Additional Supports for Adoptive Families and Legal Guardians’ regarding support and assistance that is available without having an open family support services case with the department.

II. Include in the request for finalization verification that the family has been advised of services available to them post-finalization of the adoption, if needed.

E. Adoption Records

An adoption case record encompasses all the records, papers, files generated during the adoption process, whether held by the court, ODHS, or any adoption agency, and the vital statistics records (such as old and new birth certificates) that memorialize the personal relationships created and ended by an adoption. State statute (ORS 7.211) requires that upon finalization, all records, papers and files relating to the adoption be sealed, to be opened only by order of the court.

How to file adoption documents

During the period of supervision, between designation of the placement and finalization, the local child welfare office and the Central Office Adoption Services Unit each maintain files containing the same information pertaining to termination of parental rights and the adoptive placement.

Procedure

I. At the local child welfare office, file all material related to the adoptive family and adoption planning in file folder that is separate from the child’s case record. Materials listed in the CF 0963, Required Information for Adoption Workers and Adoptive Parents, is part of the adoption planning material.

II. When gathering required birth certificates, adoption forms, reports, court orders, etc., send originals or copies (as indicated on the 0439, Legal Assistance Checklist) of these documents to the Central Office Adoptions Unit to be filed, and in some cases, approved or acted upon.

III. Check the receipt and input of material by checking the FACIS adoptions tab or by referencing ARMS.

Confidentiality of adoption assistance records

Records and information obtained or created for determining eligibility or making payment for adoption assistance are confidential. Child welfare staff shall not use or disclose the information except for purposes directly connected with the administration of the adoption assistance program.

Disclosure of the adoption assistance records is permitted by court order or to an adult adoptee or adult genetic sibling (age 21 or older) and to a birth parent when they have met the legal requirements of the Voluntary Adoption Registry as specified in ORS 109.425 to 109.507.

Retention and sealing of local office adoption records

I. The local child welfare office records documenting an adoption include:
   A. Adoption home studies with no placement.
   B. Adoption case record.
   C. IIS.
   D. OR-Kids.

II. Local child welfare office adoption records are sealed and stored in a secure, designated location.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Review the CF 252 Adoption Checklist or documents included in it periodically in the course of the process of freeing and placing a child for adoption to determine if the adoption is progressing in a timely fashion.

II. Ensure the process regarding the sealing and storage of adoption records is followed.

Section 14A: Approving and Implementing Guardianship as a Permanency Plan
Approving and Implementing Guardianship as a Permanency Plan

Guardianship is an acceptable permanent plan for a child in substitute care when a child cannot be safely returned to the home of a parent. Adoption is the preferred plan; however, guardianship is an acceptable alternative plan when adoption does not best serve the interests of the child. A decision to pursue guardianship as a plan must be based on the individual safety, permanency, and well-being needs of the child. Only a child who has an approved plan of guardianship with a relative is eligible for a subsidized guardianship.

This procedure describes the process for seeking approval to implement a permanent plan pursuant to OAR 413-070-0655 to 0670, Guardianship as a Permanency Plan. The policy and this procedure require that guardianship as a plan be considered and approved by the Department when the potential guardian has been identified. The potential guardian should be the current substitute caregiver. If the potential guardian is not the current substitute caregiver then the local office must consult with the assigned permanency consultant. Local offices may encounter situations in which this requirement is not met, such as a case where the court or another legal party is recommending a change in plan to guardianship when there is no identified potential guardian or the person being considered is not the substitute caregiver. If this situation occurs, the local office should consult with the assigned permanency consultant.

Under this procedure, prior to pursuing Department approval of the guardianship plan the caseworker must assess the appropriateness of the plan and take into consideration the child’s needs and functioning, the role of the parents in determining and impacting the long term plan, and the relationship between the child and the potential guardian. The caseworker, along with assistance from the certifier, must assess the appropriateness of the substitute caregiver including the substitute caregiver’s commitment to the child and the abilities and resources available to the substitute caregiver to meet the child’s current and long-term needs for safety, permanency, and well-being. If the caseworker is considering a relative potential guardian who is not the current substitute caregiver then the caseworker and the certifier must consider the ability of the potential relative guardian and the substitute caregiver’s ability to work together to continue to meet the child’s current and long-term needs for safety, permanency and well-being. It must also be communicated to both the substitute caregiver and the potential guardian that the child will not be eligible for guardianship assistance including a subsidy payment and medical coverage.

When Guardianship May Be Considered

Caseworker

Procedure

Guardianship may be considered only when the Department has determined that the child cannot safely be returned to the home of a parent, there is a compelling reason to not pursue adoption, and it is in the child’s best interest to implement a permanency plan of guardianship. The caseworker must consult with his or her supervisor to determine whether or not to pursue a plan of guardianship.

The following questions must be considered:

- Is it possible for the child to return home, and if not, why not? What are the barriers to return home as a permanency plan, and what actions has the Department taken to address these barriers?

- Is it possible for the child to be adopted, and if not, why not? What are the barriers to adoption as a permanency plan, and what actions has the Department taken to address these barriers?

- Does the case file indicate a thorough relative search was completed? Have all identified relatives been contacted? Are there any identified relatives still needing to be assessed?

Prior to considering a substitute caregiver as a potential guardian, the caseworker along with the casework supervisor, must review all previous Department efforts to identify relatives, the outcomes of any assessment of a relative, and confirm that there are no actions that should be made or that are in process to identify or assess a child’s relative as a permanency resource.

Assessing the Appropriateness of the Plan of Guardianship for the Child

Caseworker Procedure

The caseworker must:

- Thoroughly review documentation and information regarding the child’s needs and functioning. Consider how well the child is functioning within the foster home and in other settings. Observe the interactions between the substitute caregiver and child.

- Observe the actions the substitute caregiver is taking to meet the child’s well-being needs. Child well-being includes, but is not limited to, the child’s physical health, mental health, developmental, educational, vocational, and emotional needs. Assessment of a family’s ability to meet a child’s well-being needs requires consideration of how the family and home environment are meeting the child’s current unique needs; and the likelihood that the family and home environment will continue to meet these needs and encourage the child to reach his or her potential.

- Request information from other members of the child’s team regarding the needs of the child, how the child’s unique needs are being met by the substitute caregiver, and the relationship between the child and substitute caregiver.

Tip: The child’s team refers to a group of individuals who have an interest in the child’s safety, permanency, and well-being. The team may consist of different individuals depending on the case dynamics and legal status of the child. At a minimum, the team must include the caseworker, child’s attorney, CASA, and Tribe if the child has ICWA status or a member of the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC) if the child has refugee status. It may also include parents, relatives, and other individuals familiar with the child’s needs such as therapists, community supports, mentors, and school staff.

- Seek input from the child as developmentally appropriate and ensure a child age 14 or older is consulted regarding the plan. Even a non-verbal child will offer behaviors and cues that they feel safe and attached to the substitute caregiver. Although the child’s consent is not required for the plan to be approved, a child’s support of the placement and plan can facilitate the implementation and long-term success of the plan.

- If considering a relative as the potential guardian who is not the substitute caregiver, observe the relative’s interactions with the substitute caregiver and the child. Observe the relative’s involvement and participation in meetings regarding the child’s needs being met including educational, medical and Individual Support Plans. Discuss with the child’s team the relative’s ability to ensure that the child’s needs and safety will continue to be met without ODHS oversight, including their understanding of the child’s unique needs, their ability to advocate for the child and their ability to work collaboratively with the child’s team.

- Document in the Department’s electronic data system in the case notes and the permanency plan how the above requirements were met.

Assessing the Parents’ Support of the Plan of Guardianship

Guardianship does not require the rights of the parents to be terminated and parents often have a continued relationship following the establishment of a guardianship. Depending on the type of guardianship established, a parent could return to court following the establishment of the guardianship and ask the court to reconsider the plan of guardianship and return the child home to the parent. For this reason, it is important that the parents support the plan of guardianship if at all possible. Although the court would likely only consider such a request if the parents had made considerable progress, the request itself could be stressful for the guardian and the child. As a result, the caseworker must assess the parents’ acceptance of guardianship as a permanency plan including their desire for continued contact with the child.

Caseworker

Procedure

The caseworker must:

- Make efforts to discuss with each parent the plan of guardianship and seek input from each parent regarding their support of the plan.

- Make efforts to discuss with each parent their desires for continued contact and determine the type of contact they envision. Consideration should be given to the reasonableness of their requests and how their desires fit with the needs of the child and desires and willingness of the potential guardian regarding ongoing contact.

- Information regarding the assessment of the support of the plan of guardianship by the parents must be documented in the Department’s electronic data system in case notes and the permanency plan.

Assessing the Appropriateness of the Potential Guardian

Caseworker and Certifier

Procedure

When considering guardianship as a plan both the caseworker and certifier must jointly assess the extent to which the child’s ongoing needs for safety, permanency, and well-being are met in the home of the substitute caregiver. A review of OAR 413-070-0640, Placement Matching, is necessary to determine the conditions that must exist in the family home to ensure these needs are met. The caseworker documents the information in the Department’s electronic data system in case notes and the case plan. The information will be presented to a Permanency Committee if and when the Department considers final approval of the plan. The following questions must be considered:

- Does the substitute caregiver demonstrate the ability to meet the child’s physical and emotional needs for safety, and does the home environment encourage these needs to be met?

- What is the substitute caregiver’s ability and willingness to promote and preserve the child’s attachment to his or her family, including the caregiver’s willingness to maintain relationships with siblings placed outside the home?

- Would permanent placement with the substitute caregiver provide a sense of continuity and familiarity for the child, such as keeping the child in a familiar school and preserving pre-existing relationships?

- Does the substitute caregiver demonstrate the ability and willingness to provide appropriate educational, developmental, emotional, and physical support, such as advocating in school for a child with special needs and working cooperatively with outside professionals?

- Does the substitute caregiver have the ability to provide a current and lifelong family relationship to the child, fully integrating the child into the family and providing support into adulthood?

- What information exists to illustrate the substitute caregiver’s ability to meet the child’s lifelong needs for stability, including the child’s lifelong needs for support and nurturing?

- What is the likelihood that the substitute caregiver will support the identity of the child’s specific developmental, cultural, religious, and spiritual background and connections?

Caseworker

Procedure When the Substitute Caregiver is the Potential Guardian

The caseworker must:

- Consider the substitute caregiver’s ability to meet the child’s specific needs, the child’s ability to maintain stability in the substitute caregiver’s home, and the appropriateness of the plan and of permanent placement with the substitute caregiver.

- Consult with the substitute caregiver regarding their financial needs and community supports as well as the availability of guardianship assistance. When guardianship assistance will be requested, inform the substitute caregiver of the eligibility, application, and ongoing requirements of guardianship assistance. Explain that if requested, any approved guardianship assistance subsidy will most likely be less than they are receiving for the foster care payment and can never exceed the foster care payment.

  Tip: A child must be placed with a relative in order to qualify for guardianship assistance. Refer to the Section 14.b Establishing Guardianship Assistance for a description of the requirements and procedure for establishing guardianship assistance.

- Review from the CF 0975 Duties of a Guardian with the guardian to ensure they are comfortable with the responsibilities involved in being a guardian, including the statutory requirement to provide an annual report. to the court.

Tip: The format of the annual report varies depending on the court of jurisdiction.

- Describe to the substitute caregiver the local office and court approval process involved in establishing guardianship.

- Consult with the supervisor regarding a decision whether or not to proceed to request Department approval to change the permanency plan to guardianship.

Before requesting a Permanency Committee and formal Department approval to change the plan the caseworker must ensure the following requirements to be considered as a potential guardian have been met by the substitute caregiver:

- When residing in Oregon, the substitute caregiver must have a certificate of approval to provide foster care from the Department, a licensed foster care agency in Oregon, or a federally recognized tribe with a Title IV-E agreement with the Department.

- When residing outside of Oregon, the substitute caregiver must be certified or otherwise approved by the state in which the substitute caregiver resides and approved as a placement for the child under the Interstate Compact on Placement of Children.

- The caseworker and the substitute caregiver must agree that the substitute caregiver and child can maintain a stable relationship and function effectively without Department supervision.

- The substitute caregiver must have an updated home study that describes how the substitute caregiver’s skills and abilities meet the child’s best interests and needs for safety and permanency. If this has not been completed the caseworker should request the certifier to complete an amendment or update to the home study.

- The substitute caregiver must have adequate income and connections to community resources to maintain the household and be self-sufficient. This means the substitute caregiver should have the ability to provide for shelter, food, and utilities. Neither the foster care payment nor a guardianship assistance subsidy should be the resource relied upon to pay the rent and meet the needs of the household. The foster care payment will no longer continue once the guardianship is implemented, and the guardianship assistance, if and when implemented, is to assist in meeting the child’s specific needs.

- The substitute caregiver must have a strong commitment to caring permanently for the child.

Certifier

When a home study has been completed but does not include information regarding how the substitute caregiver’s skills and abilities meet the best interests and needs for safety and permanency for the specific child, the certifier completes the Guardianship Home Study Addendum to address these issues. A SAFE home study update does not need to be completed unless it is due.

Caseworker and Certifier

Procedure When A Relative who is not the Current Substitute Caregiver Is The Potential Guardian
When considering guardianship as a plan, both the caseworker and certifier must jointly assess the extent to which the child’s ongoing needs for safety, permanency and well-being are met in the home of the substitute caregiver. The following questions must be considered:

- Is the substitute caregiver unable to provide legal permanency for the child in consideration but has demonstrated their commitment to the care and well-being of the child and desires to continue the placement of the child in their home?

- Does the substitute caregiver demonstrate the ability to meet the child’s physical and emotional needs for safety and does the home environment encourage meeting these needs?

- What is the substitute caregiver’s ability and willingness to support the child and the potential guardian in promoting and preserving the child’s attachment to his or her family, including when a home study has been completed but does not include information regarding relationships with siblings placed outside the home?

- Would continue placement with the substitute caregiver provide a sense of continuity and familiarity for the child, such as keeping the child in a familiar school and preserving pre-existing relationships?

- Does the substitute caregiver support the child and potential guardian in accessing appropriate educational, developmental, emotional and physical support, such as advocating in school for a child with special needs and working cooperatively with outside professionals?

- What is the likelihood that the substitute caregiver will support the identity of the child’s specific developmental, cultural, religious and spiritual background and connections?

Caseworker

Procedure

The caseworker must:

- Consider the substitute caregiver’s ability to meet the child’s specific needs, the child’s ability to maintain stability in the substitute caregiver’s home, and the appropriateness of the plan and continued placement with the substitute caregiver.

- Consult with the substitute caregiver regarding their ability to work with the potential guardian cooperatively to ensure the child’s needs continue to be met.

- Ensure that the substitute caregiver understands and signs ODHS 2424 Information and Responsibilities of a Caregiver and Legal Guardian confirming that the child, the potential guardian and the substitute caregiver will not be eligible to receive guardianship assistance at any time.

- Review the ODHS 2424 Information and Responsibilities of a Caregiver and Legal Guardian with the potential guardian and have them sign it to ensure they are comfortable with the responsibilities involved in continuing to be the substitute caregiver once the guardianship is ordered by the court.

- Describe to the substitute caregiver the local office and court approval process involved in establishing guardianship.

- Consult with the supervisor regarding a decision whether or not to proceed to request Department approval to change the permanency plan to guardianship.

- Before requesting a Central Office Guardianship Committee and formal Department approval to change the plan the caseworker must ensure the following requirements have been met by the substitute caregiver:
  - When residing in Oregon, the substitute caregiver must have a certificate of approval to provide foster care from the Department, a licensed foster care agency in Oregon, a federally recognized Tribe with a Title IV-E agreement with the Department or the Office of Developmental Disability Services.
  - When residing outside of Oregon, the substitute caregiver must be certified or otherwise approved by the state in which the substitute caregiver resides and approved as a placement for the child under the Interstate Compact on Placement of Children.
  - The caseworker, the potential guardian and the substitute caregiver agree that the substitute caregiver, potential guardian and child can maintain a stable relationship and function effectively without Department supervision.

Caseworker and Certifier

Procedure

The caseworker in collaboration with the certifier of the substitute caregiver will complete ODHS 2822R Guardianship Study: Relative to document the substitute caregiver’s and the potential relative guardian’s skills and abilities meet the child’s best interests and needs for safety and permanency.

Caseworker

Procedure

The caseworker must:

- Ensure that the potential guardian meets the definition of a relative under OAR 413-070-0000 (69)
- Assess the commitment of the potential guardian to the child, including maintaining lifelong contact with the child, participating in service planning, assisting with raising the child by assuring the child’s physical, emotional, developmental, cultural and educational needs are met.
- Assess the ability of the potential guardian to communicate effectively with and provide support to the substitute caregiver.
- Assess the ability of the potential guardian to make decisions in the best interest for the safety, permanency and well-being needs of the child.
- Assess the ability of the potential guardian to protect the child from inappropriate contact with those who may harm the child and ability to protect the child from further victimization.
- Ensure that the potential guardian is willing to participate in all activities required to maintain the foster care placement.
- Ensure that the potential guardian has been, pursuant to OAR 413-120-0440 to 413-120-0475, approved through a Department-approved, fingerprint-based criminal records check of the National Crime Information Databases (NCID) and a Child Abuse and Neglect (CAN) registry check.
• The potential guardian agrees that they, the child and the substitute caregiver can maintain a stable relationship and function effectively without Department supervision.

• Ensure that the potential guardian understands that the child, the potential guardian and the substitute caregiver will not be eligible to receive guardianship assistance at any time.

• Review [ODHS 2424 Information and Responsibilities of a Caregiver and Legal Guardian] with the potential guardian and have them sign it to ensure they are comfortable with the responsibilities involved in being the guardian once the guardianship is ordered by the court.

• Describe to the potential guardian the local office and court approval process involved in establishing guardianship.

• Consult with the supervisor regarding a decision whether or not to proceed to request Department approval to change the permanency plan to guardianship.

The Role of the Supervisor

• Review all previous Department efforts to identify relatives, the outcomes of any assessment of a relative and confirm that there are no current actions to identify or assess a child’s relative as a permanency resource.

• Determine with the caseworker if the case meets all requirements for a guardianship plan and ensure the caseworker has conducted a thorough assessment of the appropriateness of the plan and potential guardian.

• Ensure the caseworker schedules a permanency committee or Central Office Guardianship Committee to review a potential plan of guardianship.

Requesting Department Approval to Change the Permanency Plan to Guardianship

A Child Welfare Program Manager or designee must approve changing a primary plan to guardianship prior to the caseworker seeking approval from the court. When the potential guardian is the current substitute caregiver then the caseworker must request a Permanency Committee. When the potential guardian is a relative but is not the current substitute caregiver then the caseworker must request a Central Office Guardianship Committee. When the court changes the plan to guardianship prior to the Child Welfare Program Manager or designee approving a plan change, the caseworker still follows the procedure below to ensure the potential guardian is aware of the duties of a guardian and to ensure that the Department supports the plan.

Tip: Always consult with an attorney from the Department of Justice (DOJ) in order to determine the type of guardianship to pursue as there are differing types of guardianship. The type of guardianship to pursue will depend on the case dynamics and needs of the child. DOJ will assist in determining the type of guardianship that can be achieved and that best meets the needs of the child.

Caseworker

Procedure for Substitute Caregiver as Potential Guardian

The caseworker must:
• Request a Permanency Committee.

• Ensure the members of the child’s team, specifically those who are eligible members of the Permanency Committee, are informed of the date, time, and location of the committee meeting and are invited to present comments in person or in writing to the Permanency Committee for consideration. The following members of the child’s team are eligible Permanency Committee members: the caseworker, attorney for the child, CASA, a tribal representative for a child who is member of a Tribe or eligible for membership in a Tribe, and a member of the RCWAC for a child with refugee status.

• Ensure that other individuals from the child’s team whom can provide important information regarding the child’s needs and functioning have been invited to the Permanency Committee. Consult with the supervisor to identify these individuals. Potential invitees may include the substitute caregiver, the child and other individuals familiar with the child’s needs. Ensure these individuals know the purpose of the committee, why they have been invited to the committee, and that they will be excused after their respective presentations to the permanency committee.

• Complete the beginning section of the CF 0270 Permanency Committee Form to identify the case member information and reason for the Permanency Committee request. In the sections titled “Requested for recommendations and decisions” mark the boxes next to “Guardianship” and “Appropriateness of adoption as the plan”.

• Submit to the Permanency Committee and the Child Welfare Program Manager or designee the CF 0270 Permanency Committee Form, the recent case plan and child specific case plan, and any additional information regarding the child and family being considered as the potential guardian family.

• If guardianship assistance will be requested, complete the CF 0311G Guardianship – Case plan Addendum and submit this to the committee.

• Ensure that appropriate releases of information are on file if protected information is being released to the Permanency Committee regarding the substitute caregiver.

• Present to the committee a summary of all prior efforts to achieve a more permanent plan and to place the child with a relative.

Caseworker and Certifier

Procedure

The caseworker, along with input from the certifier, presents the results of the assessment conducted in evaluating the appropriateness of guardianship as a plan and presents information regarding the ability of the substitute caregiver to meet the child’s ongoing needs for safety, permanency, and well-being.

Review and Approval of a Guardianship Plan

The form is provided to the Child Welfare Program Manager or designee within three business days of the date of the committee.

Child Welfare Program Manager/Designee

Procedure

The Child Welfare Program Manager or designee attends the Central Office Guardianship Committee and may ask clarifying questions. He or she does not participate in the committee deliberations or recommendations. Within one business day, following receipt of the committee’s written recommendations, the Child Welfare Program Manager or designee makes the determination on whether or not guardianship is an appropriate plan. In making this determination, the Child Welfare Program Manager or designee considers the following:

- How the permanency plan of guardianship meets the child’s needs.
- The requirement that guardianship only be considered when a child cannot be returned home safely and adoption is not an appropriate plan.
- The input regarding the plan gathered from speaking with or observing the child.
- The parent’s acceptance of the plan of guardianship.
- The information presented regarding the relative’s ability to meet the requirements for consideration as a potential guardian.
- The information presented regarding the skills, abilities and commitment of the substitute caregiver to meet the child’s current and long-term needs for safety, permanency and well-being.
• The information presented regarding the substitute caregiver and the potential guardian’s ability to maintain a stable relationship and function effectively without Department supervision.

• Whether the Department has provided the child and child’s parents an opportunity to identify available permanency options.

• Whether or not the relative is able to ensure that the child’s need for the following are being met:
  • Physical and emotional safety.
  • Attachment.
  • Educational, developmental, emotional and physical support.
  • Lifelong family relationships.
  • Stability.
  • Identification with developmental, cultural, religious and spiritual backgrounds and connections.

Within one business day after receipt of the CF 0270A Central Office Guardianship Committee Form, if the decision is to approve the potential guardian, then submit a written recommendation to the Child Welfare Permanency Program Manager outlining why it is in the best interest of the child to pursue guardianship with the approved potential guardian when the potential guardian is not the substitute caregiver.

Upon receipt of the Permanency Program Manager’s decision, notify the caseworker of that decision.

Caseworker

Procedure

Following receipt of the decision by the Child Welfare Program Manager or designee the caseworker must notify the following individuals of the decision:

• The child, if developmentally appropriate.

• The substitute caregiver.

• The relative.

• The members of the child’s team who were eligible to serve on the Central Office Guardianship committee.

Requesting Court Approval to Change the Permanency Plan to Guardianship

Caseworker

Procedure

When the Child Welfare Program Manager or the designee decides to not approve changing the plan to guardianship the caseworker should consult with the supervisor to determine next steps in planning for the child. In addition, the caseworker should inform all members of the child’s team and convene a meeting with the team to reconsider the child’s permanency options.
When the Child Welfare Program Manager or the designee decides to approve a change in plan to guardianship the caseworker must:

- Inform the DOJ attorney of the Department’s approval to change the plan to guardianship as DOJ will file the petition and represent the Department in court.

- Work with DOJ to request a permanency hearing before the court within 30 days of a decision by the Child Welfare Program Manager or designee to approve the plan of guardianship.

- Prior to the court hearing, provide the court with documentation supporting the Department’s position that guardianship is in the child’s best interest and neither placement with parents nor adoption is an appropriate plan. The home study of the potential guardian family and the committee forms/Child Welfare Program Manager or designee report likely contain protected information regarding the potential guardian family that should not be released to the parties in the case. Instead, the reasons for supporting the plan should be summarized in a report to the court.

- At the court hearing, recommend that the court approve changing the child’s permanency plan to guardianship and inform the court whether or not the potential guardian is applying for guardianship assistance.

- When guardianship assistance is being requested, inform the court that after the Department has negotiated the amount of guardianship assistance with the potential guardian, a subsequent court hearing will be requested in order for the order of guardianship to be entered. The guardianship must not be established prior to the guardianship assistance agreements being signed as the child will not be eligible for the guardianship assistance.

- When the court does not approve the guardianship plan, the caseworker should consult with the supervisor to determine next steps in planning for the child. In addition, the caseworker should inform all members of the child’s team and convene a meeting with the team to reconsider the child’s permanency options.

Finalizing the Plan of Guardianship

Caseworker

Procedure

Following the filing of the guardianship petition by DOJ, the caseworker, with the assistance of the attorney from DOJ, requests a hearing to dismiss the Department from the case and establish the guardianship.

If guardianship assistance will be provided, the caseworker must await notification from the Guardianship Assistance Program that the guardianship assistance agreements have been signed and returned. This is required before requesting the final court hearing to establish the guardianship and dismiss the Department from the case. If the child is not eligible for guardianship assistance the caseworker must have both the substitute caregiver and the potential guardian sign the ODHS 2424 Information and Responsibilities of a Caregiver and Legal Guardian which outlines the duties and responsibilities, they have for the child and that the child will not be eligible for guardianship assistance once the court orders the guardianship.

The CF 0972 form Letter to the Court on the Suitability of the Proposed Guardian is completed by the caseworker and submitted to the DOJ attorney for filing along with the guardianship petition. This satisfies the statutory requirement that the Department provide to the court a report of suitability of a potential guardian for a child in Department custody.

When guardianship assistance is not being provided by the Department, the following is completed:

- Following the receipt of the court order to finalize the guardianship plan and dismiss the Department from the case the caseworker ensures the foster care placement is closed.

- The local office must not be providing services to a child or family member on the case in order to close the case. Prior to closing the case, all the plans and outstanding work must be complete and approved in OR-Kids.

When guardianship assistance will be provided, the case is not closed. Refer to the next Section 14.b Establishing Guardianship Assistance for the process involving closing the foster care service and transferring the case.

The Role of the Supervisor

Consult with the caseworker to determine next steps in planning when approval to change the plan to guardianship is not approved by the Department or the court.

Ensure all outstanding work is complete and approved before case closure or transfer to Central Office for cases involving guardianship assistance.

Chapter 6

Section 14B: Establishing guardianship assistance
Establishing guardianship assistance

The Guardianship Assistance Program in Oregon provides financial and/or medical assistance to the guardian on behalf of the child to help support the guardian in meeting the child’s special needs.

This procedure is specific to the eligibility, application, and process requirements for establishing guardianship assistance. Guardianship assistance can include a subsidy payment and/or medical coverage for the child. There are four types of Guardianship Assistance Agreements that are available to a guardian:

I. Subsidy and Medical Agreement: provides a subsidy payment and medical coverage for the child.

II. Subsidy Only Agreement: provides a subsidy payment to the adoptive family.

III. Medical Only Agreement: provides only medical coverage for the child.

IV. Agreement only: provides no subsidy or medical coverage but allows the guardian and child to retain eligibility for such assistance if needed in the future.

The Guardianship Assistance Program provides both Title IV-E guardianship assistance and state-funded guardianship assistance to eligible children. A requirement of the program is a negotiation of the guardianship assistance subsidy to the potential guardian. There is not a standardized amount for the subsidy. The average guardianship assistance subsidy is less than the foster care payment. In no case may the subsidy payment exceed the foster care payment. Families may also receive a one-time, nonrecurring payment up to $2,000 for costs incurred in legally finalizing the guardianship. The nonrecurring payment is paid after the guardianship finalizes.

Prior to pursuing a plan of guardianship in which guardianship assistance will be requested, the caseworker should ensure the child meets the requirements for the program. The Department must then approve the plan through a Permanency Committee and receive court approval of the permanency plan of guardianship. Guardianship assistance is then applied for through the Guardianship Assistance Program at Central Office.

If the child meets all eligibility requirements for guardianship assistance, a subsidy amount can be negotiated by Central Office with the potential guardian. The Guardianship Assistance Agreement must be signed by the potential guardian and approved by Central Office prior to the guardianship being established in court to ensure the child’s eligibility for this assistance.

A. Guardianship Assistance Eligibility Requirements

Caseworker Procedure

I. In order to ensure potential eligibility for guardianship assistance for a child and a potential guardian, the caseworker must have complied with the requirements of 413-070-0655 to 0670. Guardianship as a Permanency Plan, and followed the procedures in Chapter 6, Section 14a, Approving and Implementing Guardianship as a Permanency Plan.

II. In addition, prior to pursuing guardianship assistance for a child, the caseworker must ensure the following requirements are met:

A. The child must meet the Title IV-E Eligibility requirements for the Guardianship Assistance Program. If the child doesn’t meet the IV-E eligibility, the child must meet the state funded eligibility requirements. The caseworker should consult with the Title IV-E Eligibility Specialist assigned to the local office to confirm this requirement will be met.

B. The potential guardian must meet the definition of a relative in accordance with the guardianship assistance policy. This policy allows an unrelated substitute caregiver to qualify as a relative for guardianship assistance purposes in limited circumstances and only when all of the following circumstances are met:
   1. There is a compelling reason why adoption is not the most appropriate plan for the child.
   2. The foster parent is currently caring for a child in the legal custody of the Department who has a permanency plan or concurrent permanency plan of guardianship.
   3. The foster parent has cared for the child for at least 12 out of the last 24 months. The 12 months can be cumulative and do not need to be consecutive.
   4. The Department has approved the foster parent for consideration as a guardian.

C. The child must have been placed in the home of the potential guardian for six consecutive months during which the potential guardian was fully certified. The period during which an expedited certificate was in place does not count toward the six-month requirement.

D. The child must have a strong attachment to the potential guardian.

E. The potential guardian must agree to continue to meet the educational enrollment requirements for receipt of guardianship assistance which states that a child who has attained the minimum age for compulsory attendance under the law of the state of residence but has not completed secondary school must be:
   1. Enrolled in an elementary or secondary school as determined by the law of the state of residence;
   2. Home schooled in accordance with law of the state of residence;
   3. Enrolled in an independent study program in accordance with the law of the state of residence; or
   4. Incapable of attending school due to a documented medical condition.

III. Each sibling of a child eligible for guardianship assistance is also eligible for guardianship assistance without meeting the eligibility requirements in 1 through 4 above when the plan for the sibling is guardianship, the child is placed with the eligible child, and the Department and potential guardian agree with the plan.

B. Informing a Potential Guardian of the Availability and Purpose of Guardianship Assistance
Caseworker Procedure

I. The caseworker has the primary responsibility for ensuring the potential guardian is prepared for the negotiation of the subsidy with Central Office. The practice among local offices differs regarding the person identified to educate the family about guardianship assistance and assist the family in completing the guardianship assistance application. However, it is ultimately the caseworker with case planning responsibility who is expected to ensure a timely and complete application is submitted on behalf of the family and that the family understands the purpose, limitations, and process related to guardianship assistance.

II. The following information should be discussed prior to implementing a plan in which guardianship assistance will be requested:

A. Unlike the foster care payment, there is not a standard amount that the family will receive for the guardianship assistance subsidy. Do not make promises to the family regarding what their subsidy amount will be.

B. The guardianship assistance subsidy is meant to combine with the family’s resources to help subsidize expenses associated with meeting the child’s needs. It is not intended to cover all the costs of raising a child.

C. The guardianship assistance subsidy must be negotiated based on the family’s out-of-pocket expenses incurred to meet the child’s basic and special needs.

D. The average monthly subsidy is less than the foster care payment, and the subsidy cannot exceed the Oregon foster care base payment as determined by the child’s age combined with the level of care payment as determined by a CANS screening. The CANS payment is not automatically added into the subsidy amount. The base rate and the CANS rate only sets the maximum subsidy amount allowed (ceiling). The negotiated subsidy amount is based on the family’s actual out-of-pocket expenses for the child.

E. If the child’s placement is paid through the Office of Developmental Disability Services (ODDS) or the family receives a personal care payment for the child, these payments are not considered in setting the ceiling for the guardianship assistance subsidy. ODDS payments as well as Personal Care Payments are no longer available once guardianship assistance begins.

F. Guardianship Assistance is not able to continue to provide the Child Welfare Child Care Stipend or the Foster Parent Support Funds: Flexible Funding and Respite Care.

G. Guardianship assistance ends when the child turns 18, unless an extension is granted and then it must end by age 21. Extensions are limited and only possible when:

1. The child, at the time of turning 18, is determined eligible for social security or developmental disability services based on a disability; or

2. The initial guardianship assistance agreement began after the child turned 16 and the child is enrolled in specific vocational and/or educational activities or a medical condition prevents such activity. The child may also be eligible for the Independent Living Program through their local Child Welfare office.

H. The family can request a renegotiation of the amount of guardianship assistance if the circumstances of the family or needs of the child change. However, the same process and subsidy limitation as described above will apply in negotiating the new subsidy. This may mean that a new Level of Care CANS screening will need to be completed before the renegotiation can begin.

I. A guardian is required to submit an annual report to the court reporting on how the child is doing in their care.

III. Early Review

A. When there are concerns that finances may be a barrier to finalizing a plan of guardianship, the caseworker should request an early review of guardianship assistance. The early review should occur prior to formally changing the plan to guardianship with the family. The caseworker follows the process described on the CF 0958 Guardianship Assistance Early Review Checklist to request an early review.

B. The Guardianship Assistance Program will review the documentation provided by the caseworker and talk with the potential guardian about the Guardian Assistance Program and the guardian’s current out-of-pocket expenses for the child. The Guardianship Assistance Program will provide the caseworker with a memo stating the projected amount for the guardianship assistance subsidy that the family would receive. The information is intended to assist the caseworker and family with the decision regarding whether to proceed with consideration of the family as a potential guardian resource for the child. Please remind the guardian that this is a projection and not a guarantee of the amount the guardian will ultimately receive. The offer is subject to change if the guardian’s expenses or resources change, if the child’s needs change, or if the Level of Care changes for the child.

Tip

If a child is placed in a foster home paid by ODDS and the child has behaviors that indicate a need for enhanced supervision, a CANS screening may be requested to determine if a child or young adult qualifies for a level of care payment for the purpose of negotiating or renegotiating a guardianship assistance payment.

C. Local Office Requirements for Completing and Submitting the Application for Guardianship Assistance

Caseworker Procedure

I. The practice among local offices differs regarding the person identified to educate the family about guardianship assistance and assist the guardian to complete the guardianship assistance application. However, it is ultimately the caseworker with case planning responsibility who is expected to ensure a timely and complete application is submitted on behalf of the family.

II. The following needs to be completed to ensure the guardian is provided the support necessary to completely and accurately make the application for guardianship assistance:

A. Review the directions with the guardian. The directions are located at the beginning of the application.

B. Remind the family of the purpose and limitations of guardianship assistance as described above in section B, “Informing a Potential Guardian of the Availability and Purpose of Guardianship Assistance.” Ensure the guardian lists their specific expenses related to the child needs and that their request for assistance is based on these expenses.
C. Review the addendum at the bottom of page two with the family. There is a list of selected services and goods that are not eligible for consideration in negotiating the guardianship assistance subsidy. Ensure the guardian is not requesting consideration of these expenses, and that the total request does not exceed the Oregon foster care base payment as determined by the child’s age combined with the level of care payment as determined by a CANS screening (if applicable).

D. If the family has nonrecurring expenses, advise the guardian of the nonrecurring payment process. Expenses that can be considered are expenses required to legally finalize the guardianship.

   1. Help the guardian complete the CF 0254, Nonrecurring Expenses form.
   2. Scan the completed CF 0254 form and applicable receipts and save in the file cabinet in the OR-Kids case.
   3. The Nonrecurring Expense Agreement will be sent to the guardian by the Guardianship Assistance Program and must be signed and returned to the Guardianship Assistance Program prior to the finalization of the guardianship.
   4. Nonrecurring payments will be authorized by Central Office and provided to the guardian when the Guardianship Assistance Program receives the signed court order establishing the guardianship. If the guardianship does not finalize, there will be no reimbursement.
   5. Review the guardianship assistance application to ensure it is filled out and contains all the signatures and dates requested.
   6. Provide a copy of the completed application to the guardian.
   7. Confirm the application is scanned and saved in the file cabinet in the OR-Kids case file in accordance with local office business protocols.
   8. Request the Title IV-E specialist complete the Title IV-E Guardianship Assistance Determination.

Tip

Additional information is available for guardian families through the following website: https://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/CHILDREN/ADOPTION/Pages/Adoption-Guardianship-Assistance.aspx

The current 1011F Consent for Criminal Records and Fingerprint Check that has been completed and signed for all members of the household age 18 and older and any applicable criminal history exceptions. In addition, an FBI fingerprint check showing that the fingerprints were processed and results were received must have been completed on all members of the household age 18 and older.
during the current certification period (approval saved in the provider record in OR-Kids).

D. The current Child Abuse/Neglect Registry checks for all members of the household age 18 and older completed, approved and documented in the provider record in OR-Kids.

A. CF 0178

B. CF 0184
C. CF 0243
D. DHR Screens
E. Preponderance of Evidence Statement
F. If applicable, the CF254 Nonrecurring Expense form and related receipts.

III. The following are the required documents that must be scanned and saved in the file cabinet in the OR-Kids provider record by the certifier, certification technician or support person:
A. Home study and home study updates of the potential guardian
B. Guardianship Home Study Addendum
C. The current 1011F Consent for Criminal Records and Fingerprint Check that has been completed and signed for all members of the household age 18 and older. In addition, an FBI fingerprint check showing that the fingerprints were processed, and results received must have been completed on all members of the household age 18 and older during the current certification period (approval saved in the provider record in OR-Kids).
D. Criminal or Child Welfare exceptions made by Child Welfare due to criminal history or child welfare history found on any member.
E. The current Child Abuse/Neglect Registry checks for all members of the household age 18 and older completed, approved and documented in the provider record in OR-Kids.

IV. When all requirements have been met, the caseworker emails a completed copy of the CF 0982 Guardianship Application Requirements form to “NEWAPPS AAGA” email address. The child’s first name must be typed in the subject line of the email and the case number in the body of the email.

Note: The caseworker approves this application by ensuring all information is complete and accurate. Another staff member may email the form, but the caseworker must be copied in the email to ensure they are aware of the case status.

Tip

The OR-Kids child case refers to the case in OR-Kids where the child is actively receiving services and has an open placement. In most cases where guardianship is the permanency plan, the child case would be a CPS or FSS case. However, in some circumstances, the child may be actively receiving services and have an open placement under a pre-adoptive case. This occurs when a child has been legally freed as part of a prior permanency plan of adoption and an adoption does not finalize prior to changing the permanency plan to guardianship.

Important information about CANS screenings and level of care payments:

I. If a CANS screening has been requested, is pending, or is in the process of a contested case hearing, the CF 0982 can be submitted. However, a GA negotiation cannot start until the final level of care is determined as the information is necessary for consideration in the GA subsidy negotiation. Do not request a CANS screening after submission of the form without first consulting with the Guardianship Assistance Program.

II. The foster care base rate and the level of care combined determine the maximum amount allowed for the guardianship assistance subsidy. As a result, the guardianship assistance subsidy cannot be negotiated or finalized until the CANS process is complete and the level of care payment determined.
III. Depending on the date for the annual CANS rescreening, the caseworker may submit paperwork for an early CANS rescreening to ensure this is complete prior to submitting the CF 0982.

The Supervisor’s Role:

I. Provide guidance and assistance as needed.

II. Determine with the caseworker if the case meets all requirements for guardianship assistance.

III. Review and discuss high rate requests with the caseworker.

IV. Review and sign the CF 0969B.

V. Review the CF 0982. Ensure all the requirements listed on the CF 0982 have been met.

D. Receipt of the Application and Supporting Materials in Central Office

Guardianship Assistance Program Staff

Procedure

I. Upon receipt of the CF 0982, a staff member in the Guardianship Assistance Program completes the following:

A. Reviews the form and ensures all the required documents are complete and are in the OR-Kids case or the provider record.

B. If complete, assigns the case to a guardianship assistance coordinator and emails the caseworker with a confirmation that the application is complete and that the application has been assigned to a coordinator. Guardianship Assistance Applications are assigned according to the first letter of the last name of the potential guardian. The alphabetical breakdown of assignment changes periodically according to workload and is available on the Adoption Assistance and Guardianship Assistance website.

C. If the documents are not complete, GA staff notifies the caseworker by email that the requirements have not been met, identifies which items need completion and informs the caseworker that the CF 0982 needs to be resubmitted when all of the requirements have been met. The application will not be assigned for negotiation or tracked by Central Office. No further email reminders will be sent regarding the incomplete application.

D. Document in case notes that the checklist has been returned and the outstanding requirements not met.

II. Upon assignment of a case, the guardianship assistance coordinator completes the following:

A. Reviews the case materials.

B. Contacts the guardian by telephone to discuss and negotiate the guardianship assistance subsidy unless a CANS screening is due, in process, or there is contested case hearing in process. Cases are worked in order of assignment.

C. Upon reaching a verbal agreement with the family, sends the written guardianship assistance agreement to the family. The nonrecurring expense agreement will also be sent if applicable.

D. Enters in the OR-Kids provider notes the date the agreement was sent to the guardian.
E. Emails the certifier and the caseworker that the guardianship assistance agreement was sent to the guardian.

F. Reviews and signs the agreement after the guardian has read, signed, and returned the agreement to Central Office.

III. After the agreement has been signed by the family and the guardianship assistance coordinator, a staff person in the Guardianship Assistance Program will send an email to the caseworker and caseworker’s supervisor notifying them that they need to submit a memo recommending that the guardianship finalize. The memo must state that the caseworker, the caseworker’s supervisor, the certifier and the certifier’s supervisor agree and recommend that the guardianship be finalized.

IV. Upon receipt of the memo recommending that the guardianship finalize, support staff in the Guardianship Assistance Program will send a Go To Court Memo authorizing the finalization of the guardianship for the child.

E. Finalizing the Plan: Opening the Guardianship Assistance Services and Transferring the Case

Caseworker Procedure

I. Upon receipt of the court order establishing the guardianship, the caseworker completes the following:

A. Immediately ensures the order is scanned and saved in the file cabinet in the OR-Kids child case and sends an email to NEWAPPS AAGA that the order has been received and is available for review in OR-Kids.

B. Ensures all AFCARS, ticklers, and pending work are complete.

Guardianship Assistance Program Staff Procedure

I. Upon notification by the caseworker of an Order of Guardianship, the Guardianship Assistance Program staff will complete the following:

A. The guardianship assistance coordinator reviews the guardianship order to ensure there are no errors. If sufficient, the coordinator will ask support staff to open the guardianship assistance for the child effective the date of the order. If there are items that need to be amended, the coordinator will email the caseworker and the assigned AAG with the necessary changes.

B. Support staff will close the foster care placement and open the guardianship assistance service.

C. When the AFCARS, ticklers, and outstanding work are complete and no other members on the case are receiving services from the local office, central office will request the caseworker to assign the case to Central Office with primary assignment to the guardianship assistance support staff member.

II. If the guardian will no longer be providing any foster care services, the foster care certification can be closed, and the guardianship assistance coordinator can be assigned as the primary assignment. Do not close the provider record.

The Role of the Supervisor

I. Ensure the caseworker notifies the Guardianship Assistance Program when the guardianship is established.

II. Ensure all pending work is complete and approved, including all AFCARS exceptions, before the primary assignment of the case is assigned to Central Office.

Tip

Guardianship assistance applications are assigned according to the first letter of the last name of the potential guardian family. The alphabetical breakdown of assignment changes periodically according to workload and is available on the Adoption and Guardianship Assistance website: http://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/CHILDREN/ADOPTION/Pages/Adoption-Guardianship-Assistance.aspx

Tip

Central office, not the local office, closes the foster care service when guardianship assistance will be provided. Immediate notification to Central Office of the final order of guardianship helps ensure the foster care service is closed in a timely manner and reduces the possibility of an overpayment of foster care to the guardian.

Section 15: Placement with a fit and willing relative Placement with a fit and willing relative

Placement with a fit and willing relative is a permanency option for a child or young adult only when there are compelling reasons not to pursue more preferred permanency plans.

The more preferred plans are:

I. Reunification
II. Adoption, or
III. Guardianship.

While placement with a fit and willing relative is an approved permanency plan:

I. It does not achieve legal permanency
II. The child remains a ward of the court and in the care and custody of ODHS, and
III. It requires biannual reviews through the CRB and court.

While considering this plan, you must determine which relatives are able and willing to have a lasting, supportive relationship with the youth extending into the future and well beyond a foster care placement. The intent is to secure a lasting, forever commitment from a relative caregiver that will endure into adulthood and remain a permanent connection and support throughout the child or young adult’s life.

Tip

Compelling reason means: a convincing and persuasive reason why it would not be in the best interest of the child or young adult to be reunified with a parent, placed for adoption or placed with a legal guardian.

A compelling reason must be supported with very strong, case-specific facts and evidence including justification for the reasons and decisions why each more preferred permanency option is not reasonable, appropriate or possible.

Tip

Even adoption or guardianship with a nonrelative is a preferable permanency plan than placement with a fit and willing relative. Children deserve legal permanency if at all possible. While still an acceptable permanency plan, placement with a fit and willing relative keeps the child in the foster care system, which is never more desirable than achieving legal permanency.

A. When placement with a fit and willing relative can be used

Procedure

I. Placement with a fit and willing relative may be considered only when ODHS has determined it would not be in the child’s best interest to use one of the three more preferable permanency plans. You and your supervisor must fully explore all preferred permanency options before considering a placement with a fit and willing relative plan and determine there are compelling reasons to proceed with this plan.
II. You must consider what the barriers are to a more preferred permanency plan, and what actions ODHS has taken to address these barriers. You and your supervisor must also decide that a thorough relative search has been conducted, and that all paternal and maternal relatives have been identified and contacted.

III. It is never appropriate to consider placement with a fit and willing relative if reunification is still an option, or adoption or guardianship could be achieved with either a relative or nonrelative.

B. Process for approval of placement with a fit and willing relative

Procedure

I. During the course of the case, a child or young adult’s team must be involved in any discussion regarding their permanency plan. When the decision is made to consider implementing a specific concurrent permanency plan, you must convene a team meeting.

II. When placement with a fit and willing relative is being considered, before any team meeting, you should always meet individually with the child or young adult and the potential relative caregiver to assess both the needs of the person and the caregiver’s commitment to the long-term plan. The relationship and commitment should last beyond the child or young adult’s legal custody with ODHS. Discuss that intent, the specific requirements of the commitment, the responsibilities required of the relative provider, and the approval process for this plan.

III. The following individuals are part of the child’s team and must be invited to the team meeting to review the decision to implement the placement plan:

- A. Caseworker
- B. Parents, unless a supervisor has approved a parent not participate or parental rights are terminated
- C. Both the parent’s and the child’s attorney
- D. The child or young adult
- E. At the option of a child aged 14 and older, up to two members of the child’s team who are not the caseworker or the foster parent
- F. The relative caregiver under consideration
- G. Assigned CASA
- H. Tribe, if applicable
- I. RCWAC, if applicable, and
- J. Other persons who may hold or have held an important role or significant involvement in the child or young adult’s life.

IV. At the meeting, you must ensure:

- A. All permanency options are discussed. These include any barriers to adoption or guardianship.
- B. The child or young adult and their parent(s) have the opportunity to talk about their feelings and ideas about the plan, what services would be appropriate to meet the child or young adult’s needs, and their desire to maintain contact with the child or young adult.

C. The relative caregiver has the opportunity to discuss their long-term commitment and ability to meet the child or young adult’s needs.

D. When the meeting ends, if the team agrees, the team will recommend implementing the permanency plan. You must document the considerations and determinations made during the meeting in the youth’s case plan, and in meeting notes or case notes.

V. The team’s responsibility is to decide if placement with a fit and willing relative meets the child or young adult’s best interests and needs. Also, to ensure there are compelling reasons a more preferred permanency option should not be considered.

Tip

- The child or young adult’s team must have the opportunity to convene outside the formal Permanency Committee process to discuss the permanency plan because not all team members are allowed to participate in the entire Permanency Committee process.

- All team members are allowed to attend the first portion to present relevant information to the Permanency Committee, but they must be excused after presenting their information and responding to questions.

- Only the following team members are allowed to attend the entire Permanency Committee:
  - Caseworker
  - Child’s or young adult’s attorney
  - CASA
  - Tribe, if the child is enrolled or eligible for enrollment with the tribe, and
  - A member of RCWAC, if the child is a refugee.

C. Review and approval of a placement with a fit and willing relative plan

Procedure

I. Within 30 days of the team’s recommendation of placement with a fit and willing relative as the child or young adult’s permanency plan, you must request a review by the Permanency Committee. In preparation for the Permanency Committee meeting you must:

   A. Ensure the child or young adult’s team is informed of the date, time and location of the meeting and are invited to present comments in person or in writing to the Permanency Committee for consideration.

   B. Prepare written or presentation materials about the youth’s needs, including, but not limited to, areas outlined in “Section D Case plan for placement with a fit and willing relative.”

   C. Include a written, up-to-date child-specific certification home study of the relative caregiver.

   D. Ensure the relative caregiver is prepared to answer questions and is able to address the long-term needs of the child or young adult.

II. The committee will review the information and make a recommendation whether the proposed placement is the most appropriate permanency plan for the youth. That information must include, but is not limited to, the following:

A. Prior efforts to achieve a more preferable permanency plan with both relative and nonrelative providers
B. Efforts to identify all of the child or young adult’s relatives
C. Reasons the relative caregiver under consideration might not agree to a more preferable permanency plan, and
D. How ODHS is addressing the child or young adult’s safety, permanency and well-being.

III. The Permanency Committee provides a recommendation to the Child Welfare program manager or designee. When the committee members cannot come to a consensus, the committee facilitator documents each member’s recommendation and its basis and provides all the recommendations to the Child Welfare program manager or designee.

IV. The Child Welfare program manager or designee makes the decision whether to recommend a placement with a fit and willing relative plan to the court.

When the Child Welfare program manager or designee does not approve the placement, you must go back to the child or young adult’s team to gather and document any additional information to justify the appropriateness of a placement with a fit and willing relative, or begin the actions and activities to achieve a more preferable permanency plan.

Tip
Some compelling reasons the fit and willing relative plan is chosen over a more preferable permanency plan:
• Relatives often want to maintain their status of grandma, grandpa, aunt or uncle, as opposed to mother or father,
• The parent cannot care for the child for reasons beyond their control such as mental illness or developmental disability and the child or young adult remains connected,
• Currently, the child or young adult is opposed to adoption or guardianship as a permanency plan, and
• Relatives may rely heavily on the support and services of ODHS if the child has significant special needs they cannot meet on their own. This will be most true with children who have developmental disabilities and are in the foster care system.

D. Case plan for placement with a fit and willing relative

Procedure

I. When placement with a fit and willing relative has been recommended as the preferred permanency plan and will be presented to the court, you must update the case plan with the following:

A. Family composition, which includes identifying information for each parent (unless parental rights have been terminated), legal guardian and siblings
B. Impending danger/safety threats identified in the CPS assessment, except when parental rights have been terminated
C. Ongoing safety plan, except when parental rights have been terminated
D. Why ODHS chose the plan as the most appropriate permanency plan. Include each compelling reason a more preferred permanency plan was not selected. You can use, but are not limited to, documentation gathered from the team meeting

E. How the child’s attachments and relationships with each parent, sibling and other family members will be developed while they are in permanent placement with a fit and willing relative

F. Current placement information including the location of the youth’s substitute caregiver if this individual authorized release of their address, except when doing so would jeopardize the child or young adult’s safety

G. Record of the child’s visits with their parents and siblings

H. Comprehensive transition plan required for any youth 14 years of age or older and services that assist their transition to adulthood

I. Services ODHS is providing for the emotional, medical, educational, cultural and physical needs of the child and that are being met, including:
   1. Health information that documents the youth’s specialized medical, dental and mental health services
   2. Education services, including the child’s school or educational placement history, high school credits earned when older than 14 years of age, or any special educational needs, and
   3. Services required to prepare the child or young adult to live in the least restrictive setting possible at the most appropriate time.

J. Services that may make it possible to achieve a more preferred permanency plan,

K. Services ODHS may continue to make available to the child’s parents that are in the best interests of the child or young adult. These types of services can vary widely from assistance with visitation to services improving protective capacity so a child or young adult may eventually return to the parent’s home, and

L. Steps ODHS has taken to ensure the relative caregiver applies the reasonable and prudent parent standard, and the child has regular, ongoing opportunities to engage in age- or developmentally appropriate activities.

II. Except when parental rights have been terminated or ODHS is unable to obtain the signature of the parent or legal guardian, the case plan must include the signature of the caseworker, the supervisor and each parent or legal guardian, and

III. Once a relative is approved as the fit and willing placement resource, a Placement with a Fit and Willing Relative Agreement must be signed by the relative caregiver and ODHS. This agreement should be attached to the child or young adult’s case plan.

E. Court review

Procedure

I. Within 30 days after the placement plan is approved by the Child Welfare program manager or designee, you must schedule a permanency hearing in court.
II. For the court, you must document and submit a case plan report as described in “Section D, Case plan for placement with a fit and willing relative.”

F. Monitoring the placement with a fit and willing relative plan

I. Once a plan for placement with a fit and willing relative has been approved by the court, you continue to meet monthly with the child or young adult. You must meet with the child or young adult alone. You are responsible for monitoring the safety of the child or young adult during every visit. Always discuss the child or young adult’s personal and service needs and any barriers with these needs being met.

II. Because the child or young adult remains in foster care when on a fit and willing relative placement plan, you must develop the comprehensive youth transition plan by the time the child reaches 14 years of age. Also, you must monitor the progress toward achieving the goals of the transition plan. The transition plan may indicate whether the child or young adult will remain into adulthood with the relative provider.

For more information on transition planning, refer to Chapter 5, Section 29.

III. Continue to examine any concerns the relative caregiver may have about adoption or guardianship.

G. Placement with a fit and willing relative permanency reviews

Procedure

I. The placement with a fit and willing relative plan is reviewed a minimum of every six months by the CRB or the court. An internal review must occur before the external review. The internal review requires:
   A. A meeting with the child or young adult and their relative caregiver
   B. Consideration to meet with the child or young adult’s team to gather input
   C. A discussion and determination whether a higher level of permanency might be achieved and if so, what steps are needed to achieve a higher level of permanency, and
   D. A discussion to determine the child or young adult’s progress toward goals in the comprehensive transition plan.

H. Termination of the placement with a fit and willing relative plan

Procedure

I. Placement with a fit and willing relative case plan must be terminated when:
   A. Court wardship is terminated,
   B. The young adult has reached the age of 21,
   C. The court has relieved ODHS of legal custody,
   D. The court has determined that placement with a fit and willing relative is no longer appropriate, or
   E. The relative caregiver’s certificate of approval cannot be maintained.

II. Placement with a fit and willing relative case plan may be terminated when:
A. One of the more preferred permanency plans is in place,
B. ODHS and the relative caregiver mutually agree to termination,
C. The child or young adult is removed from the substitute caregiver’s home by ODHS, or
D. The child or young adult requests termination of the agreement because of serious or extraordinary circumstances.

III. When a placement with a fit and willing relative plan has terminated, the caseworker must notify the court in writing of the changes in the child or young adult’s placement and must request a permanency hearing within 90 days after the change in placement so the court can review the permanency plan.

IV. When a placement with a fit and willing relative plan is terminated but the child or young adult remains in the care and custody of ODHS, it is critical the caseworker review their safety, permanency and well-being. It is important to understand the reasons for the disruption and to work with the child or young adult and their team to review their needs and placement options.

The role of the supervisor

I. Determines with the caseworker if the case meets all requirements for a placement with a fit and willing relative plan and ensures the caseworker has provided the child or young adult and their relative caregiver the opportunity to fully explore more preferred permanency options.

II. When a placement with a fit and willing relative plan is considered, instruct the caseworker to bring a team together, identify who should be on the team, and the function of the team. The supervisor can attend, but attendance is not mandatory.

III. Ensure the caseworker has developed a placement with a fit and willing relative case plan that meets all of the youth’s needs.

IV. Ensure the caseworker schedules a Permanency Committee to review a proposed placement with a fit and willing relative case plan.

V. Review the Placement with a Fit and Willing Relative Agreement.

VI. Regularly review with the caseworker the fit and willing relative plan and the efforts ODHS is making to achieve a higher level of permanency.

Section 16: Another planned permanent living arrangement
Another planned permanent living arrangement

Another planned permanent living arrangement (APPLA) may only be used for children and young adults ages 16 and over. For that reason, it is the least preferred permanency option for a child or young adult.

“Planned” means the arrangement is intended, designed, considered or deliberate.

“Permanent” means the plan is enduring, lasting or stable.

“Living arrangement” includes not only the physical placement of the child or young adult. APPLA also considers quality of care, stability, supervision and nurturing a youth receives.

An APPLA plan:

I. Does not achieve legal permanency,

II. Lasts only through dependency,

III. Is reviewed semi-annually through the CRB and the court,

IV. Is not intended to be a catch-all plan when a youth has complicated needs or is difficult to place or stabilize, and

V. Is, rather, a well thought-out substitute care arrangement while the youth remains in the legal custody of ODHS.

When considering APPLA, you must assess and determine the persons in the youth’s life who are able and willing to have a lasting, supportive relationship with the youth beyond their foster care placement during dependency. A youth for whom a caseworker may be considering an APPLA plan must have these lasting, supportive and caring relationships to provide continuity and a sense of belonging into adulthood.

APPLA is considered an appropriate permanency plan only when there are compelling reasons not to pursue one of the four more preferred permanency plans, listed below in order of preference:

I. Return to a parent,

II. Adoption by a relative or nonrelative adoptive home,

III. Guardianship with a relative or nonrelative guardian, and

IV. Placement with a fit and willing relative.

Tip

Identifying supports and long-term relationships:

• Review the entire case file in detail. Locate relatives, or other persons, who have significant connections with the youth that may have been missed or have developed during dependency.

• Talk to the youth about important people in their life whom they look up to and feel they could count on.

• Assess the person’s willingness and ability to develop and maintain an appropriate and long-lasting relationship with the youth.
• Support the development of these relationships through visitation and information sharing.

Tip

Compelling reason means: A convincing and persuasive reason why it would not be in the best interest of the youth to be reunified with a parent, placed for adoption, placed with a legal guardian or permanently placed with a fit and willing relative.

A compelling reason must be supported with very strong, case-specific facts and evidence, including justification for the reasons and decisions each more preferred permanency option is not reasonable, appropriate or possible.
Types of APPLA plans

I. There are two categories of APPLA plans:
   A. Permanent foster care, and
   B. Permanent connections and support.

II. Permanent foster care is appropriate only when:

III. The youth resides in a foster home, or with a relative who is committed to the long-term care, support and well-being of the youth, which would not likely be disrupted by this placement, unless or until a more permanent plan can be accomplished.

IV. Permanent connections and support may be appropriate when:

V. The youth is living in foster care or living independently and receiving an Independent Living subsidy from ODHS, and

VI. The focus of the plan, in addition to education, vocational training, health and treatment needs, is meeting the need to develop and maintain adult relationships, including relatives and caregivers who can play a significant role in the child or young adult’s life after they leave substitute care, or

VII. A youth in a psychiatric residential setting, Developmental Disabilities placement or residential placement will not be discharged while ODHS maintains legal custody.

Tip

Research indicates all young people must have a relationship with at least one adult who is nurturing, protective and fosters trust and security over time to become a psychologically healthy human being.

A. When APPLA can be used

Procedure

Consider an APPLA plan only when ODHS determines there are compelling reasons one of the four more preferable permanency plans would not be in the youth’s best interest. You and your supervisor must fully explore all permanency options before considering an APPLA plan. You must consult with your supervisor to determine if there are compelling reasons for proceeding with an APPLA plan.

You must consider the following questions:

A. Is it possible for the youth to return home, and if not, why not? What are the barriers to this and what actions has ODHS taken to address them?

B. Is it possible for the youth to be adopted, and if not, why not? What are the barriers to this and what actions has ODHS taken to address these barriers?

C. Is it possible to establish a guardianship plan with a relative or with the substitute caregiver, and if not, why not? What are the barriers to this permanency plan and what actions has ODHS taken to address them?

D. Is it possible for the youth to be placed permanently with a fit and willing relative, and if not, why not?
What are the barriers to this and what actions has ODHS taken to address these barriers?

E. Does the case file indicate a thorough relative search? Have paternal and maternal relatives been identified and contacted? What is the current status of the relatives’ interest in involvement with this youth?

F. Has the case file been reviewed thoroughly to ensure nothing has been missed?

I. You must review all previous ODHS efforts to identify relatives, the outcomes of any assessment of a relative, and confirm there are no current actions to identify or assess a youth’s relative as a permanency resource.

II. You must review all previous ODHS efforts to develop and maintain relationships with any potential permanency resources and with identified relatives.

III. Youth being considered for an APPLA plan must have the opportunity to fully explore alternative permanency options in a safe environment, weigh the pros and cons of each permanency option, think about their wants and needs, as well as what an APPLA plan means in terms of important decisions in their life and the legal status of dependency.

IV. When all more preferred permanency options have been considered, and after you have discussed APPLA and the youth is in agreement with this plan, you must convene a meeting of the youth’s team to consider APPLA as a permanency plan.

C. Process for approval of an APPLA plan

Procedure

I. Meet individually with both the youth and the substitute caregiver to assess both the needs of the youth, and the substitute caregiver’s commitment to the long-term plan of foster care placement. Ideally the relationship between the youth and substitute caregiver will last beyond legal custody with ODHS.

Discuss the specific requirements, responsibilities and approval process for the Permanent Foster Care Placement Agreement and APPLA permanency plan.

II. When you and your supervisor consider an APPLA plan, you must convene a team of individuals who have an interest in the safety, permanency and well-being needs of the youth.

A. The team must include the:

1. Caseworker,
2. Parents (unless a supervisor has approved a parent not participating),
3. Parent’s attorney,
4. Youth (unless they refuse to attend or are unable to participate), at the option of a youth,
5. Youth’s team (up to two members),
6. Assigned CASA,
7. Youth’s attorney, and
8. Tribe (if the youth has ICWA status) or a member of RCWAC, if a refugee.

B. Other members may include, but are not limited to:
1. The substitute caregiver, the caregiver’s certifier, the youth’s relatives, persons with a caregiver relationship, any other persons who may hold or have held an important role or significant involvement in the youth’s life, and individuals with expertise in permanency.

C. The team will decide whether an APPLA plan meets the youth’s best interest and needs, as well as ensure there are compelling reasons a more preferred permanency option cannot be considered. At this meeting, the caseworker must ensure:

1. All permanency options are discussed and APPLA is truly the most appropriate option.
2. The youth, along with their parent(s) if present at the meeting, has the opportunity to identify individuals who may be a permanency resource.
3. The parent(s) have an opportunity to express their feelings and ideas about the APPLA plan, what services would be appropriate to meet the youth’s needs, and their desire to maintain contact with their child, including appropriate visitation.
4. The substitute caregiver is given the opportunity to discuss their abilities to meet the youth’s needs and their long-term commitment to them.
5. At the conclusion of the meeting, if the team concurs, the team will recommend one of the two types of APPLA permanency plans. You must document the considerations and determinations made during the team meeting in the youth’s case plan and in meeting notes or case notes.

D. Review and approval of an APPLA plan

Procedure

I. Within 30 days of the team’s recommendation of APPLA as the youth’s permanency plan, you request a review by the Permanency Committee. In preparation for the Permanency Committee meeting you must:

A. Inform the youth’s CASA and attorney, a tribal representative, if the youth is an American Indian/Alaska Native child, or a member of RCWAC, if the youth is a refugee child, of the date, time and location of the meeting. Ensure they are invited to present comments in person or in writing for consideration by the committee.

B. Ensure other team members you believe can provide important information for consideration have been invited to the meeting. This may include the substitute caregiver, the youth and others. Ensure these individuals know that they will be excused after their respective presentations.

C. Prepare written materials or presentation materials about the youth’s needs, including, but not limited to, those subject areas required in the case plan, as outlined in “Section E. APPLA case plans.”

D. Ensure the substitute caregiver is prepared to answer questions and address the long-term needs of the child or young adult.

II. The committee will review the information and recommend whether the proposed APPLA permanency plan is the most appropriate permanency plan for the youth.

III. The caseworker presents the case history, including:
A. Prior efforts to achieve a more permanent permanency plan.
B. Efforts to identify the youth’s maternal and paternal relatives, and the results before considering an APPLA plan.
C. Information in the case plan about how ODHS addresses the child’s safety, permanency and well-being needs and transition planning.

IV. The Permanency Committee makes a recommendation to the Child Welfare program manager or designee if committee members cannot reach a consensus. The committee facilitator documents each Permanency Committee member’s recommendation and its basis, and provides all the recommendations to the Child Welfare program manager or designee.

V. The Child Welfare program manager or designee decides whether to recommend an APPLA permanency plan to the court.

VI. You must go back to the youth’s team if the Child Welfare program manager or designee does not approve an APPLA plan. The caseworker must gather and document any additional information to justify the appropriateness of an APPLA plan, or begin the actions and activities to achieve another more permanent permanency goal.

E. APPLA case plans

Procedure

I. When APPLA has been recommended as the preferred permanency plan and will be presented to the court, the caseworker must update the case plan with the following:

   A. Family composition, which includes identifying information for each parent (unless parental rights have been terminated), legal guardian and sibling.

   B. Impending danger/safety threats identified in the CPS assessment, except when parental rights have been terminated.

   C. Ongoing safety plan, except when parental rights have been terminated.

   D. How ODHS determined the APPLA is the most appropriate permanency plan for the youth and each compelling reason why the more preferred permanency plan options were not selected for the youth. The caseworker can use, but is not limited to, the documentation gathered through the team meeting to document this information.

   E. How the youth’s attachments and relationships with each parent, sibling, other family member, advocate, substitute caregiver and other persons will provide continuity, belonging, stability, support, nurturing, caring relationships and cultural connections for the youth when they are in substitute care. Also, how these will be maintained when the youth reaches the age of majority or the juvenile court relieves ODHS of legal custody.

   When appropriate, describe:

   1. How each parent and sibling may participate actively in the youth’s life. Include visitation plans and other plans for ongoing connection with the youth’s family.

   2. How relationships may be maintained with each permanent adult caregiver or parental figure.
capable of sustaining a significant relationship with the youth. Describe visitation plans and other plans for ongoing connections with the youth’s family.
3. How relationships with relatives and other persons in the youth’s life may be developed and maintained. Describe visitation plans and other plans for ongoing connections.

F. Current placement information, including the location of the youth’s substitute caregiver when this individual authorizes release of their address, except when doing so would jeopardize the youth’s safety.

G. Record of the youth’s visits with their parents and siblings.

H. Plan to transition a developmentally delayed youth, when applicable, to an appropriate adult program and steps to facilitate a smooth transition.

I. Comprehensive transition plan required for the youth and services that assist his or her transition to adulthood.

J. Reasonable efforts by ODHS to meet the youth’s needs and stabilize their living arrangement when they are not living with a specified adult, including frequent face-to-face contact and assurance they are in a safe and stable living arrangement.

K. Services ODHS provides to meet the emotional, medical, educational, cultural and physical needs of the youth, including:
   1. Health information that documents the youth’s specialized medical, dental and mental health services.
   2. Education services, with school or educational placement history, high school credits earned when older than 14 years of age, or any special educational needs.
   3. Services that will prepare the youth to live in the least restrictive setting possible at the most appropriate time.

L. Services that may make it possible to achieve a more preferred permanency plan; and

M. Services ODHS may continue to make available to the youth’s parents, upon request, that are in the best interests of the youth. These can vary widely, from visitation assistance to improving protective capacity so the youth may eventually return to the parent’s home.

II. Except when parental rights have been terminated or ODHS is unable to obtain the signature of the parent or legal guardian, the case plan must include the signature of the caseworker, the supervisor and each parent or legal guardian.

III. Within 30 days after the Child Welfare program manager approves an APPLA permanent foster care or APPLA permanent connections and support plan, you must schedule a permanency hearing in court.
   A. For the court hearing, submit a case plan, as described in Section E, that states compelling reasons why a more preferable permanency plan is not in the child or young adult’s best interest, and justification for this recommendation.
   B. Request the court approve the APPLA plan.
   C. Except in cases of aggravated circumstances as described in ORS 419B.340(5), provide the court with information regarding services ODHS will provide the youth’s parents that meet the best interest of the youth until another permanency plan can be achieved or the youth reaches the age of majority, reaches independence or they are no longer in the custody of ODHS.
D. Provide the court with information regarding the status of parent and sibling visitation.
   1. When the court has previously ordered, or ODHS recommends, no contact or restricted contact between the youth and their parents or siblings, request a court order outlining the restriction or prohibition, including the reasons why.

E. When the court does not approve the APPLA plan, inform all members of the youth’s team and reconvene the team to reconsider the youth’s permanency options.

IV. Continue to meet with the caregiver and youth, or the youth alone when they have an independent living housing subsidy, once an APPLA plan has been approved by the court.

V. Discuss the youth’s personal and service needs, and address any barriers to meeting those needs.

VI. Monitor the safety of the youth during every visit.

VII. Develop the comprehensive transition plan by the time the youth reaches 14 years of age, and monitor progress toward a transition plan. For more information about transition planning, refer to Chapter 5, Section 29.

VIII. Document annual efforts ODHS has made to identify and contact maternal and paternal relatives. Also, efforts to place with, or develop and maintain, the youth’s connection and support from identified relatives.

IX. Examine the youth’s current circumstances and that of the youth’s parents to determine if the APPLA plan remains the most appropriate and permanency plan or whether a more permanent plan can be achieved. Always clearly document the justification for a continuation of the APPLA plan.

X. Minimum monthly contact with the youth and substitute caregiver is required to monitor the youth’s safety and stability in the caregiver’s home when APPLA permanent foster care is approved by the court.

Tip

Some common compelling reasons:

- The youth is an older teen who refuses adoption or guardianship as a permanency plan
- An adult in the youth’s life with whom there is a significantly supportive relationship is not able to adopt or become the legal guardian, or
- The tribe has identified APPLA as the preferred plan.

XI.

H. APPLA permanency reviews

Procedure

I. The CRB or court reviews APPLA plans a minimum of every six months. An internal review must occur before the external review.

II. You must meet face-to-face with the youth and the substitute caregiver.
   A. Members of the youth’s team may also participate in the case review.
1. Whether the caseworker meets only with the youth and their substitute caregiver or convenes the youth’s team (as outlined below), the caseworker needs to determine whether the current placement is the most appropriate for the youth’s permanency needs or if a higher level of permanency can be achieved.

B. Consider responses from the youth, their substitute caregiver, service providers, CASA, attorney, parents, other persons with attachments to the youth, the tribe if the youth is an American Indian/Alaska Native child and a member of RCWAC if the child is a refugee child. This is an opportunity to talk about the youth’s needs and how these needs are being met.

1. Discuss steps ODHS has taken to identify or reconnect the youth with relatives, and achieve a higher level of permanency for the youth.

2. Discuss and determine whether a higher level of permanency might be achieved and if so, what steps are needed for this to occur.

3. Discuss and determine the youth’s progress in achieving the goals of the comprehensive transition plan.

C. Document:

1. How the current placement continues to be the least restrictive placement available to meet the youth’s permanency needs, and

2. Whether a more permanent plan for adoption or guardianship or to return home is appropriate, and steps ODHS is taking to achieve a higher level of permanency.

III. Review the case when the court has approved an APPLA plan:

A. At every 90-day case review

B. In court at least every 12 months

C. Within 90 days of any change in substitute care placement, and

D. Every six months by the Citizen’s Review Board, unless the court has relieved the CRB of that responsibility. A copy of the Permanent Foster Care Placement Agreement should accompany these reports.

I. Ongoing casework responsibilities

I. Continue to provide services to any youth with an APPLA permanency plan and ensure:

A. The youth is safe, and safety is confirmed through face-to-face contact.

B. The youth has a comprehensive transition plan, and services and supports are available for a successful transition to adulthood.

C. The youth is receiving health, mental health, dental and educational services that meet their needs to succeed in all aspects of their life.

D. The youth has appropriate contact with family and continues to develop a network of supports and persons who will remain in the youth’s life into adulthood.

II. Continue to seek a higher level of permanency and ensure:
A. Whether there are services and supports available to successfully meet the expected outcomes for a return home, if parental rights have not been terminated.

B. Efforts have been made for adoption, guardianship or permanent placement with a fit and willing relative, if a return to a parent is not possible. Have these options been explored again with the substitute caregiver and any barriers eliminated?

C. You complete an annual review of ODHS efforts to identify, locate and seek to place a child with relatives. Have both maternal and paternal relatives been identified? Has any further contact with the youth’s relatives resulted in additional family connections or potential placement resources?

J. Termination of APPLA permanent foster care plan

Procedure

I. An APPLA permanent foster care plan must be terminated when:
   A. Court wardship is terminated
   B. The youth reaches the age of majority
   C. The court relieves ODHS of legal custody, or
   D. The court determines the APPLA plan is no longer appropriate.

II. An APPLA permanent foster care plan may be terminated when:
   A. One of the more preferred permanency plans is in place
   B. ODHS and the certified caregiver mutually agree to termination
   C. The substitute caregiver’s certificate of approval cannot be maintained
   D. The youth is removed from the substitute caregiver’s home by ODHS, or E. The youth requests termination of the agreement because of serious or extraordinary circumstances.

III. When an APPLA plan is terminated, notify the court in writing of the changes in the youth’s placement. Within 90 days after the change in placement, request a permancy hearing for the court to review the permanency plan.

IV. When an APPLA plan is terminated, but the youth remains in the care and custody of ODHS, it is critical that you review their safety, permanency and well-being needs. It is important to understand the reasons for the disruption and to work with the youth to review their needs and placement options.
   A. This may be an appropriate time to schedule a meeting with the youth’s team to discuss placement and permanency options.
   B. If the youth is an older teen or a young adult, discuss not only placement needs but transition planning and services.
   C. There must be a court hearing within three months of a youth being removed from a court-approved APPLA permanent foster care placement. The court will review the permanency plan for the youth.

The role of the supervisor
I. Determine with the caseworker if the case meets all requirements for an APPLA plan.

II. Ensure the caseworker has provided the youth and their substitute caregiver the opportunity to fully explore more permanent permanency options.

III. Instruct the caseworker to bring a team together when an APPLA plan is being considered to identify who should be on the team and the function of the team. The supervisor can attend, but attendance is not mandatory.

IV. Ensure the caseworker has developed an APPLA case plan that meets all of the youth’s needs.

V. Ensure the caseworker schedules a Permanency Committee to review a proposed APPLA case plan.

VI. Review the Permanent Foster Care Placement Agreement.

VII. Regularly review with the caseworker the APPLA plan and the efforts ODHS is making to achieve a higher level of permanency.

Family Support Services

Section 1: Overview
Overview

A. Description of family support services

ODHS provides family support services (FSS) to eligible families who request help for their particular circumstances. These services are available to an eligible family or former foster child when there are no reported safety concerns and the family or former foster child is requesting short-term, goal-oriented services.

FSS cases are handled differently than a case in which a parent or caregiver’s behavior, condition or circumstance results in a safety threat to a child. In FSS cases, the caseworker determines service needs, provides assistance, and works with the family and the child to access services that address the time-limited service goals developed with the family and documented in the FSS Case plan. The casework activities of protective capacity assessment, developing and monitoring the ongoing safety plan, and determining expected outcomes apply to child welfare cases where a child has been determined to be unsafe, but not in FSS cases where a family, or a former foster child, has requested, or the court has ordered services, through ODHS for a pre-adjudicated delinquent.

In some FSS cases, a child is placed in substitute care through either a Voluntary Placement Agreement or Voluntary Custody Agreement, or when a pre-adjudicated delinquent is ordered to receive placement services by the court.

ODHS provides six types of family support services. This chapter describes the procedures that apply to FSS cases and includes procedures unique to each type of service provided.

Tip

The Family Support Services Case plan has different components than the Child Welfare Case plan, which addresses child safety in the family home.

Family Support Services, 413-030-0000 to 0030, and this chapter of the procedure manual, detail requirements for FSS case plans.

Whenever an FSS case involves substitute care:

The requirements detailed in 413-080-0040 to 0070, Monitoring Child Safety, regarding monitoring child safety in substitute care, procedures for placement selection in Chapter 5, and monitoring child safety in Chapter 4 apply to monitoring a child’s placement and safety in substitute care.

B. Types of family support services and eligibility requirements

I. Voluntary Placement Agreement: A Voluntary Placement Agreement is limited to specific situations, is defined in statute, and is used when a parent or legal guardian requests temporary substitute care placement for a child and the “sole reason for placement is the need to obtain services for the child’s emotional, behavioral or mental disorder, or developmental or physical disability.” (ORS 418.312). In this type of FSS case, the family retains the legal custody of the child.

A Child Welfare program manager must approve entering into a Voluntary Placement Agreement.

II. Voluntary Custody Agreement: A Voluntary Custody Agreement is limited to specific situations when a parent or legal guardian requests ODHS to take legal custody of the child on a temporary basis for a crisis intervention.
All of the following must apply:

A. The parent or legal guardian requests ODHS to take legal custody of the child.

B. The parent or legal guardian is immediately and temporarily unable to fulfill their parental responsibilities.

C. The inability will be alleviated with short-term placement when one of the following conditions exists:
   1. The child cannot remain at home due to a temporary crisis in the family, and cannot safely stay with a member of the extended family or another responsible adult who is well known to the child,
   2. The parent or legal guardian is temporarily or will be temporarily unable to fulfill parental responsibilities due to a diagnosed medical or mental health condition, or
   3. The child needs to be placed outside the home due to problems in the family that could compromise the safety of a family member, and a placement of short-term, limited duration in conjunction with intensive services is likely to reunite the family and reduce safety concerns for the family member.

D. A Child Welfare program manager must approve entering into a Voluntary Custody Agreement.

A Voluntary Custody Agreement is not appropriate when a parent or legal guardian was the perpetrator of a founded disposition of child abuse or neglect within the past 12 months or when the parent or legal guardian is unwilling to be a permanent resource for the child.

Tip

Most individuals receiving ILP services do so based on a case that is already open due to abuse or neglect.

III. Independent Living Program (ILP) services to a former foster child: A former foster child is defined as a person under 21 years of age, who was in substitute care in Oregon (including substitute care provided by a federally recognized tribe) at or after 16 years of age and had been in substitute care after 14 years of age for an accumulative 180 days or longer. When a former foster child requests ILP services, the caseworker will determine which of the ILP services the individual is eligible to receive. Eligibility factors vary by type of service. Chapter 5, Section 29, Youth Transitions, describes in more detail the procedures for accessing ILP services. The former foster child (if over age 18) or the former foster child’s family must agree to these services.

IV. Post-legal adoption and post-assisted guardianship assistance to a family: ODHS provides services when a family whose adoption or assisted (subsidized) guardianship occurred in Oregon through ODHS, and the family requests services to support or maintain the adoption or guardianship. A family may request services while the child remains in the family home or request the child be placed temporarily in substitute care to address identified needs.

V. In-home family support services: Family support services are available to a family that requests in-home family support services, if all of the following eligibility conditions are met:
   A. Other community resources have been used and determined to be ineffective,
   B. Members of the extended family and other responsible adults who are well known to the child have been explored or used and determined to be unsafe, unavailable, unwilling or ineffective as support for the family,

C. The parent or caregiver is temporarily or will be temporarily unable to fulfill parental responsibilities due to a diagnosed medical or mental health condition,

D. The parent’s or caregiver’s inability to fulfill parental responsibilities is temporary, immediate, and will be alleviated with short-term services, or short-term services will transition the family to community services,

E. The Child Welfare program manager approves the request for services, and

F. If Child Welfare funds for in-home family support services no longer are available, services may be discontinued, even if the affected individuals still meet other eligibility criteria.

VI. Services to pre-adjudicated delinquents when ordered by the court: ODHS must provide family support services when the court has ordered ODHS to provide services to a pre-adjudicated delinquent.

VII. Unless eligible based on a court order to provide services to pre-adjudicated delinquents, the parent, legal guardian or former foster child must fully and continually cooperate with ODHS in the following processes to remain eligible to receive family support services:

A. Determination of service needs,

B. Preparation of the Family Support Services Case plan, and

C. Monitoring of the Family Support Services Case plan.
Chapter 7
Family Support Services

Section 2: Receiving the case and first face-to-face contact
Receiving the case and first face-to-face contact

The following steps are written in a logical order, but the order in which they occur depends on the specific circumstances of the child and family. Due to differences between the types of family support services available, some activities and approaches may vary.

Procedure

I. Review and confirm legal authority for providing services.
   A. Within five days after receiving information from a screener, review the family information on any family members’ current or previous Child Welfare case records to:
      1. Confirm there currently are no reported safety threats to the child,
      2. More thoroughly understand any prior Child Welfare involvement with the family,
      3. Review any past requests for family support services and the outcome of any services, and
      4. Contact Central Office when there is a branch code 60 if a family requests post-legal adoption or post-legal guardianship services.

II. Identify legally recognized parental relationships.
   A. Use tools such as the Father’s Questionnaire form (CF 418) when appropriate.
   B. Ask the child and parent or legal guardian about individuals with parental relationships.
   C. Ask the parent or legal guardian whether there are additional individuals with legal custody. Arrange for those individuals to participate in the determination of need and sign a Service Application form (CF 304a).
   D. Ask the parent or legal guardian about any tribal affiliation of the parent and child. Complete the ICWA for both parents. If it is known the child is an Indian child, notify the tribe immediately. (OAR chapter 413, division 115).
   E. Arrange face-to-face contact with the family or former foster child within 10 days of receiving the screening information.
   F. ODHS must have authority to provide services to a family or former foster child. During the first face-to-face contact, explain the Service Application form (CF 304a) to the family or the former foster child and have the family or former foster child complete the form.
   G. Discuss the Service Application with the family or former foster child.
   H. Explain what will be expected of the family or former foster child in order to participate and remain eligible for family support services.
   I. Discuss ODHS eligibility requirements for the specific family support services the family or former foster child is requesting.
   J. Answer questions they may have.
   K. To initiate services, all individuals with legal custody of a child must sign the Service Application, if those individuals are available.
   L. Give a copy of the Service Application to the family or former foster child. Keep a copy in the case file.
Chapter 7
Family Support Services

Section 3: Determine the family or former foster child’s service needs through a family support services assessment
Determine the family or former foster child’s service needs through a family support services assessment.

Procedure

Complete the following actions within 30 days of receiving the screening information.

I. Visit in person with the people involved within these timelines:
   A. You must have face-to-face contact with parents, legal guardians or the former foster child within 10 working days of receiving the case.
   B. You must have face-to-face contact with the child:
      1. Within 10 days of receiving the case, if the child is in the family home at the time of referral, or
      2. Within 30 days of receiving the case, if the child is in substitute care at the time you receive the case.

Assessment of the family

I. During the meeting with the family or former foster child, continue to assess specific support services needed.

II. Observe and assess, at a minimum:
   A. Parent or legal guardian’s functioning in their home environment,
   B. Child or former foster child’s functioning in their home or substitute care placement, and
   C. Interactions between family members.

III. Gather information during your contacts with the parents, legal guardians or former foster child. Assess current behaviors, conditions and circumstances in the family. Ask about a variety of topics to develop a thorough understanding of the family and their unique and specific needs.
   A. Generally, the assessment should provide answers to the following questions:
      1. Why is the family requesting services at this time? What behaviors, conditions or circumstances led to the call for services?
      2. Is the request for services distinctly separate from a parent’s or legal guardian’s behavior, condition or circumstances causing a safety threat to a child? Always assess for child safety.
      3. Are the services or assistance the family is requesting available through ODHS?
      4. Are there other community resources for the family without ODHS intervention? Can ODHS provide information and referral services that would meet the family’s needs?
   B. For all types of family support services cases, ask about:
1. The family’s history and what led to the current situation,
2. Any family members’ special needs (health, educational or learning, emotional),
3. Whether there has been a professional diagnosis of a medical or mental health condition for any family members. And if so, by whom and when,
4. Other resources the family has used in the past to address current or former issues within the family,
5. Strengths and interests of the child, former foster child and family
6. Supportive individuals and positive connections, and
7. Resources in the community and within the family’s support network.

Assessment of ICWA status

I. Determine the child’s ICWA status and notify the child’s tribe if ICWA applies.
   A. Follow up on unfinished determinations of a child’s tribal or refugee status as described in procedures in Chapter 3.
   B. Have each parent or guardian (when the guardian is a relative) complete the Verification of ICWA Eligibility form (CF 1270).
   C. Follow up with any statements that the child is an Indian child or may have Indian heritage.
   D. Use ODHS resources to assist with family support services cases when there are questions about the applicability of ICWA or about how to manage a case. These resources include the ICWA local office liaison, your supervisor and the ICWA manager.
   E. If the child is an Indian child, immediately involve the child’s tribe(s).
   F. Explore available services provided by the tribe that may address the needs of the child and the family, or the former foster child.
   G. Refer to specific procedures in this chapter regarding a request for a Voluntary Placement Agreement or Voluntary Custody Agreement if the child is an Indian child.
   H. Document in the case notes all contacts with the child’s parents, Indian custodian and tribal social services representatives.

Assessment of the child’s specific needs

As appropriate, use the following contacts and activities to assess the specific circumstances of the child or gain additional information about the family:

I. Physical health needs:
   A. Talk with the child’s physician.
   B. Ask the doctor, child, former foster child or family about current health and dental problems.
   C. Obtain the dates of the last routine preventive medical and dental appointments, and ask about upcoming appointments.
   D. Request medical and dental records.
Chapter 7 • Section 3: Determine the family or former foster child’s service needs through a family support services assessment

E. If the child was previously in substitute care, read the medical section of the child’s file for any remarkable information and follow up as needed. Check for personal care nurse assessments if the child was in substitute care, or if there was an adoption or guardianship through ODHS.

F. Inquire about potential sensory integration dysfunction (the inability of the brain to correctly process information brought in by the senses) and interventions.

G. Review immunization records.

H. Determine if special needs (or risk thereof) were identified at birth by reviewing hospital records. Determine whether the child was exposed to alcohol or drugs in utero.

I. Ask the family about significant family medical history and use the Genetic and Medical History of Child and Biological Family form (CF 246) to document the information.

J. Consider whether the child should be referred for a Personal Care Nurse Assessment if the child has an identified medical diagnosis. See Chapter 5, Section 5, for more information about Personal Care Services.

II. Mental health needs:

A. Ask about any past or current mental health history or need for mental health assessment or other specialized assessment, including a psychological evaluation or CASII (see Chapter 5, Residential Placement, for more information regarding mental health assessments).

B. Ask the parents, guardians or counselor about therapeutic needs, and obtain any existing records.

C. Obtain reports for services that have been provided to address past recommendations.

D. Review any past special rate, Level of Care, and supervision plan information, if the child was in substitute care.

E. Refer a child for a CANS screening if the child is placed in substitute care through a voluntary custody or voluntary placement agreement. See Chapter 5, Section 6 for more information about Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths tools and screening process.

F. Obtain information about the nature of the parent and child relationship. Attachment and bonding are important components of emotional well-being.

III. Developmental needs:

A. Ask the parents or legal guardians about the child’s development and obtain records about the child’s developmental level, including any developmental screening done by a pediatrician, educational professionals or others.

B. Obtain any referrals or assessments regarding potential developmental delays, including referrals to Early Intervention or Early Childhood Special Education (if the child is younger than school age) or contact the county mental health department for a developmental disabilities assessment.

C. Request a copy of any Individualized Education Plan (IEP) or 504 plan. Contact the school for records from, or referral to, services that address delays in cognitive, social or adaptive, fine and gross motor skills, or speech, communication and language development.

IV. Educational needs:
A. Talk with the child’s teachers or other school staff about the child’s educational needs and their observations.

B. Request records from the school, including a copy of the current IEP or 504 plan, records of attendance, immunizations, report cards, or other school records that may assist in understanding the child’s needs.

C. Verify that school records have been requested if the child is in substitute care, when transferring to another school. Ensure school personnel know your name and number, and share educational information with the substitute caregiver.

D. Find out if the child has a surrogate parent for the purposes of special education.

E. Provide information as needed to parents or legal guardians about special education needs and how to advocate for these needs at school.

F. Obtain information about, or refer to, activities that support positive educational development.

Using expert evaluations in the assessment

I. As appropriate, ask the parents, legal guardians or former foster child to sign the Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information form (MSC 3010) to allow ODHS to contact, obtain from and exchange information with, individuals or organizations that may have or need additional information to determine appropriate services.

   A. Request copies of any evaluations, reports or records the family or former foster child may have.

   B. Consider contacting physicians, mental health providers, school employees, potential substitute care placement resources, or other service and treatment providers.

   C. After obtaining authorization on MSC 3010 contact the individuals or agencies to better understand the past and current services, treatment, and needs of the family or former foster child and the child.

   D. Ask the parents or legal guardians for their consent, and then obtain expert evaluations to determine specific treatment needs when a condition or behavior requires additional professional evaluation.

      1. An expert evaluation of a parent, legal guardian or child is required to determine treatment or service needs, or to assist in analyzing other needs when there is a specific condition or behavior that requires additional professional assessment. Examples include, but are not limited to:

         ■ The parent, legal guardian or child is displaying unusual or bizarre behaviors indicative of emotional problems or behavioral problems

         ■ Physical illness, physical disability or mental illness

         ■ Suicidal ideation, and

         ■ Homicidal ideation.

      2. The parents’ or guardians’ consent is required prior to arranging such an evaluation for a child. Their cooperation also is required when the evaluation is for one of the parents or legal guardians.

II. Consult with a supervisor if an expert evaluation appears warranted, but the parent or guardian is not willing to consent to an evaluation.
Assessments for specific family support services

I. For all family support services cases that may involve substitute care (post-adoption or post-legal guardianship, voluntary placement agreements, or voluntary custody agreements) assess:
   A. The child’s needs for safety, permanency and well-being,
   B. The qualities a substitute caregiver would need to be successful with the child,
   C. Any safety considerations or issues with adjustment concerning other children who currently may live with a substitute caregiver,
   D. Reasons substitute care is requested and needed at this time,
   E. Is substitute care a temporary, short-term plan to alleviate a crisis or must safety threats be considered,
   F. What will assist the child and family in a transition to substitute care (see Chapter 5, Prepare a Child and Family for Placement), and
   G. When the assessment involves placing a child in substitute care, assess the child’s need for connection to important people:
      1. Ask the child, parents or legal guardians about important people to whom the child is connected (any need to improve relationship with parents or guardians, siblings, especially if placed away from siblings, supportive relationships in extended family, and people in child’s neighborhood or at school)
      2. Assess the child’s needs specifically regarding substitute care as described in Chapter 5, Placement Services Generally, and
      3. Assess specifically whether it is in the best interests of the child to stay in the current school if entering substitute care, and make arrangements for the child to continue in the current school whenever possible.

II. Assess the child’s need for experiences that support a child’s strengths and skills.
   A. Ask the child, former foster child, parents, legal guardians or others about extra-curricular activities and hobbies the child has enjoyed, including sports, physical activities, music and artistic endeavors, and facilitate involvement in similar activities whenever appropriate.

III. As appropriate, obtain from the parents, legal guardians or former foster child the names of persons who can provide additional information about the needs of the child, former foster child and family. Engage with the parents or legal guardians in contacting extended family members who may be able to assist with the needs of the family.

IV. There are specific assessment activities when a family requests placement of their child through a Voluntary Placement Agreement. You must:
   A. Identify the child’s specific emotional, behavioral or mental disorder, or developmental or physical disability. Remember to refer the child for a CANS screening or a Personal Care Services Assessment as appropriate to the child’s needs and condition.
   B. Identify who has evaluated the child or provided diagnostic or treatment services.
   C. Inquire about:
1. Length of time the child’s issues have been a challenge,
2. Child’s most challenging behaviors,
3. Frequency of concerning behaviors,
4. Events that precede concerning behaviors and patterns,
5. Successful interventions that previously may have been used,
6. Any risk the child may pose to other people’s safety, and
7. Services the family has accessed or tried to access prior to contacting ODHS, including any evaluations and recommendations made, mental health counseling, medication management interventions, IEPs or disability services.

D. Assess whether there are other agencies or resources more suited to meet the child’s needs (e.g., mental health, developmental disabilities programs or services available through the family’s medical insurance program). Consult frequently with the supervisor to ensure the case is and continues to be appropriate for a Voluntary Placement Agreement.

E. Determine the child’s legal custodians. Only parents or legal guardians who have legal custody of the child may enter into a Voluntary Placement Agreement, unless one person is missing.
   1. If one person with legal custody of the child is missing, all other persons with legal custody of the child must sign the agreement and must provide ODHS with information about the persons and places likely to know the missing person’s whereabouts.
   2. You must immediately begin a reasonably diligent search to find the other person with legal custody of the child to provide them notice of the agreement.
   3. Ask the mother to complete the Father’s Questionnaire form (CF 0418). The completed CF 0418 helps identify fathers with legal standing.

F. At the conclusion of your inquiries, you must determine that the sole reason for the request for placement is to obtain services for the child. After that determination you must staff the case with the supervisor and request the approval of the Child Welfare program manager.

G. Request from the child’s parents or legal guardians information about medical insurance and other financial resources to meet the medical, dental and mental health needs of the child by completing the DCS Referral for Child Placement Agreement form (CF 0496) and the Medical Resources form (ODHS 415H).
   1. Inform the parents or legal guardians that the Division of Child Support Children’s Benefits Unit may prepare a non-adversarial support agreement for child support obligations.
   2. Inform the parents or legal guardians that if the DCS Referral for Child Placement Agreement form (CF 0496) is not returned within 30 days, the Division of Child Support Children’s Benefits Unit may enter a support order.
   3. If the parents or legal guardians have questions about this process, refer them to the Children’s Benefits Unit.

H. The Central Office Child Support Team completes the initial analysis about whether a case should be referred for child support. The ODHS computer-based system automatically interfaces notices to the Central Office Child Support Team.

I. Work closely with the family and the substitute caregiver to build on the child’s strengths and address the child’s special needs, including those identified by the CANS or Personal Care Services Assessment and Personal Care Services Plan. Consult regularly with the supervisor about appropriate substitute care placement to meet the child’s identified special needs. Follow procedures in Chapter 5, Services to Children, regarding appropriate substitute care placements.

J. Explain to the parents or legal guardians the intent of this type of short-term, temporary voluntary placement service, and the legal limitations of voluntary placement. A Voluntary Placement Agreement is valid only until a child reaches 18 years of age.

K. Work closely with the family, even at the beginning of this agreement, to plan for the child’s return home.

V. There are specific assessment activities when a family requests placement of their child through a Voluntary Custody Agreement.

A. There are only very limited circumstances under which parents or legal guardians can enter into a Voluntary Custody Agreement.

B. Assess the family to confirm that the parents or legal guardians are eligible to request voluntary custody of their child. Parents or legal guardians are not eligible for a Voluntary Custody Agreement if:
   1. There has been a CPS disposition within the past 12 months that a parent or legal guardian was the perpetrator of a founded disposition of child abuse or neglect,
   2. The parents or legal guardians are unwilling to be a permanent resource for the child, or
   3. The parent or legal guardian is requesting placement for the child under conditions required for a Voluntary Placement Agreement.

C. Voluntary Custody Agreements are not used when, at the completion of the safety assessment, the child is determined to be unsafe and the parent or caregiver cannot or will not protect the child. When a child must be placed in substitute care due to an indentified safety threat, the case is taken before the court, which makes the decision whether the child’s custody is given to ODHS to protect the child.

D. Determine the legal custodians of the child. Only parents or legal guardians who have legal custody of the child may enter into a Voluntary Custody Agreement, unless one person is missing.
   1. If one person with legal custody of the child is missing, all other persons with legal custody of the child must sign the agreement and must provide ODHS information about the persons and places likely to know the missing person’s whereabouts.
   2. You must immediately begin a reasonably diligent search to find the other person with legal custody of the child to notify them of the agreement.
   3. Ask the mother to complete the Father’s Questionnaire form (CF 0418).
   4. You must immediately begin a reasonably diligent search to find the other person with legal custody of the child to notify them of the agreement.
   5. The completed CF 0418 helps identify fathers with legal standing.
E. Assess the family to determine whether all of the following circumstances apply:

1. Parents or legal guardians have requested ODHS to take legal custody of the child,
2. Child is under 18 years of age,
3. Parents or legal guardians are immediately and temporarily unable to fulfill the parental responsibilities,
4. Parents’ or legal guardians’ inability to fulfill parental responsibilities will be eased with short-term placement, and
5. One of the following conditions exists:
   - The child cannot remain in the home due to a temporary crisis in the family and cannot safely stay with a member of the extended family or another responsible adult who is well known to the child
   - Parents or legal guardians are temporarily, or will be temporarily, unable to fulfill parental responsibilities due to a diagnosed medical or mental health condition, or
   - The child needs to be placed outside the home due to problems within the family that could compromise the safety of a family member. A placement of limited duration in conjunction with intensive services is likely to reunite the family and reduce safety concerns for the family member.

F. If, after completing this assessment, the family appears eligible for a Voluntary Placement Agreement, staff the case with the supervisor and request the approval of the Child Welfare program manager.

G. Analyze the behaviors, conditions and circumstances of the family to determine appropriate substitute care needs and other needed services based on information gathered from the above activities.

H. Document the activities in a Family Support Services Assessment.

VI. There are specific assessment activities when a former foster child requests Youth Transition services.

A. Confirm that all the following eligibility requirements are met for the former foster child to be eligible for Youth Transitions (formerly ILP services):

1. The request occurs prior to the former foster child’s 21st birthday
2. The child has spent an accumulative (but not necessarily consecutive) 180 days or more in substitute care (either through ODHS or a federally recognized tribe) after their 14th birthday. Also, that the former foster child was terminated from the Child Welfare system at age 16 or older
3. The child and, if a minor, their parents or legal guardians, agree to cooperate with ODHS in determining the need for Youth Transitions. Also, preparing and monitoring the Family Support Services Case plan, and
4. The child meets any additional eligibility requirements for the particular Youth Transition services (formerly ILP) in which the child wishes to participate (see Appendix 7.1, Available ILP services, for former foster children, and Appendix 7.2, Eligibility Requirements, for specific ILP services provided to a former foster child).

B. When completing the Service Application form CF 0304A, remember:
1. If a former foster child is under the age of 18, the child’s parents or legal guardians must sign the Service Application, and

2. If the former foster child is 18 to 21 years of age, the young adult signs the Service Application.

C. Talk with parents, legal guardians, teachers, other service providers and the former foster child about independent living skills the child already has developed and those skills that still need to be developed.

D. Talk with the former foster child about what specific services they believe would be useful and why.

E. Obtain the documentation of any Youth Transition services (formerly ILP) previously provided.

F. Analyze the behaviors, conditions and circumstances of the former foster child to determine the specific Youth Transition services (formerly ILP) needs based on information gathered from the above actions.

G. Document the assessment activities in a Family Support Services Assessment.

VII. There are specific assessment activities when an adoptive parent or legal guardian requests post-adoption or post-assisted guardianship services.

A. Acknowledge ODHS’ obligation to assist the family and respond sensitively to the family’s needs.

B. Assess the behaviors, conditions and circumstances that have precipitated the request for services and determine that there are no child safety threats.

C. Determine the specific supports the family is requesting that require ODHS involvement.
   1. When the family is requesting respite care, supportive or remedial day care services can be used for a maximum of 8 hours per day, 5 days per week.
   2. When the family is requesting assistance in addressing the child’s mental health needs, refer to Chapter 5, Section 24, Mental Health Services.
   3. Refer to Voluntary Placement Agreement criteria in this chapter when a family is requesting substitute care placement to address a child’s mental diagnosis or physical disability needs. Analyze the behaviors, conditions and circumstances of the family to determine the specific service needs based on information gathered from the above activities.

D. Document the assessment activities in a Family Support Services Assessment.

VIII. There are specific assessment activities when an adoptive parent or legal guardian requests in-home family support services.

A. Verify that ODHS services have been approved by a Child Welfare program manager, that a family is eligible for in-home family support services, that funding is available for services, and that all of the following apply:

   1. Other community resources have been used and determined to be ineffective.
      ▪ Determine what community services the family has used to address the family’s specific circumstances.
   2. Members of the extended family and other responsible adults who are well known to the child have been explored or used and determined to be unsafe, unavailable, unwilling or ineffective as support for the family.
      ▪ Determine why these supports are unavailable to the family. Explore with the family what supportive resources within the extended family or other responsible adults in the family’s support network may be available.

- If necessary, request that the family complete an Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information form (MSC 3010) to obtain and exchange information with individuals who have provided services for, or offered support to, the family.

3. The parent or legal guardian is temporarily or will be temporarily unable to fulfill parental responsibilities due to a diagnosed medical or mental health condition.

- Gather information to fully understand why and how the parent is unable to fulfill parental responsibilities, what types of supports are requested, and how long it is anticipated the parent will be unable to fulfill their responsibilities.

B. Request that the parent or legal guardian complete an Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information form (MSC 3010) to obtain and exchange information with any medical professionals who have diagnosed the medical or mental health condition and provided services to the parent or legal guardian.

C. Determine, through an assessment with the family, that the parent or legal guardian’s inability to fulfill parental responsibilities is temporary and that, by providing services of limited duration, the services will assist in a remedy to the current crisis and will avoid substitute care placement of the child.

D. Analyze the behaviors, conditions and circumstances of the family to determine the specific service needs based on information gathered from the above activities.

E. Document the assessment activities in a Family Support Services Assessment.

Tip

Post-adoption and post-assisted guardianship services may include referrals to services in the community or services provided through contracts with ODHS, such as counseling, adoptive parent support groups, family meetings or respite care. The family also may request to enter into a Voluntary Placement Agreement if the sole reason for the placement request is the need to obtain temporary services for the child’s emotional, behavioral or mental disorder, or developmental or physical disability. Availability of services is dependent upon the availability of ODHS and community resources.

IX. There are specific assessment activities when the court has ordered ODHS to provide services to a pre-adjudicated delinquent.

A. Review the orders of the court regarding any specific services ODHS is ordered to provide.

B. Verify who has legal custody of the child. If ODHS was given legal custody of the child, immediately follow the procedures for evaluating the most appropriate substitute care placement of the child. Refer to Chapter 5 for placement procedures.

C. Coordinate the assessment of needs with the juvenile department and request information from the family and records from ODHS about the child’s involvement with law enforcement.

D. Identify the child’s specific strengths and needs, including use of the CANS and, when appropriate, Personal Care Services Assessment.

E. Assess whether anyone has evaluated the child or provided diagnostic or treatment services.
F. Ask the child’s parents or legal guardians, the juvenile department, or the court about:
   1. The length of time the child’s issues have been a challenge,
   2. The child’s most challenging behaviors,
   3. The frequency of concerning behaviors,
   4. The events that precede concerning behaviors and/or patterns,
   5. Successful interventions that previously may have been use,
   6. Any risk the child may pose to other people’s safety, and
   7. Services that have been used or that the family tried to access prior to contacting ODHS, including any evaluations and recommendations made, mental health counseling, medication management, IEPs or disability services.

Tip
There are several supports available to adoptive families that do not require Child Welfare involvement to initiate services. A family may not know about or know how to access available community services. If a family is able to access available supports without the involvement of a caseworker, a caseworker should share information about the resources described in Appendix 7.3, Additional Supports for Adoptive Families and Legal Guardians. Analyze the behaviors, conditions and circumstances of the child to determine the child’s specific service needs based on information gathered from the above activities.

G. Document the assessment activities in a Family Support Services Assessment.

The supervisor’s role

I. Assist the caseworker by answering questions and connecting the caseworker with ICWA experts when a family support services case involves a child, pre-adjudicated delinquent, or former foster child for whom ICWA may apply.

II. Consult with the caseworker when there are questions about whether an expert evaluation may be appropriate.

III. If an expert evaluation is appropriate, but the parent or legal guardian does not give consent, provide assistance to the caseworker:
   A. Discuss ways to engage the parent or legal guardian to gain their permission.
   B. Decide whether the family remains eligible for family support services, if the parent or legal guardian no longer is cooperating with the caseworker in determining the service needs.
   C. Determine if there are safety threats that need to be addressed in a CPS assessment.

IV. Assist the caseworker when Child Welfare program manager approval is needed to open a case or enter into an agreement with the family.

V. Assist the caseworker in coordinating services with the court or juvenile department when the court orders a pre-adjudicated delinquent to ODHS for placement or services.

VI. If questions about the family’s continued eligibility for family support services arise, determine whether it is appropriate to close the case. Refer to Close a Family Support Services Case plan in this chapter for more information.

Tip

When the court orders a pre-adjudicated youth into substitute care under a family support services case, it is important to analyze the actions, behaviors, and circumstances of the entire family in the family support services assessment to determine if these are short-term services or may be linked to safety threats and need to be addressed in a comprehensive CPS assessment. If it determined the family is more appropriately served through a comprehensive assessment, the caseworker must report that information to the court.
Chapter 7
Family Support Services

Section 4: Develop an individualized Family Support Services (FSS) Case plan
Develop an individualized Family Support Services (FSS) Case plan

The parents or legal guardians or the former foster child must be involved in the development of the Family Support Services Case plan. The caseworker is responsible for the development of the plan within 30 days of completing the determination of need family support services assessment as described in Sections 2 and 3, and within 60 days when a child has been placed in substitute care.

Procedure

The caseworker must:

I. Use the information gathered during the assessment (determination of need) to develop an FSS Case plan to address the specific needs of the child, family or former foster child.

II. Include the following people in the development of the FSS Case plan:
   A. The parents or legal guardians, or the former foster child,
   B. A tribal custodian, when applicable,
   C. When the child is an Indian child, the child's tribe(s) and extended family members, and
   D. As appropriate:
      1. The child,
      2. Other relatives,
      3. Other service providers, and
      4. The substitute caregiver when the child is or will be placed in substitute care.

III. An FSS Case plan is based on the determination of need, and is not dependent on analysis of parental protective capacity. In most instances, an FSS Case plan is used for short-term and focused services designed to meet the particular need of the family or former foster child.

IV. Document the FSS Case plan in the ODHS information system on the appropriate Family Support Services Case plan form (CF 333 series).
   A. Use the Family Support Services Case plan for services provided to a family or to children who remain in the parents’ or legal guardians’ homes. These cases include:
      1. An eligible former foster child requesting one or more of the services available through the Independent Living Program,
      2. A pre-adjudicated delinquent ordered by the court, for reasons other than child abuse or neglect, to receive Child Welfare services, and who remains in the parents’ or legal guardians’ home, or
      3. An eligible family who has been approved by the Child Welfare program manager to receive services, and the child remains in the parents’ or legal guardians’ home.
   B. Use the Family Support Services Case plan for services provided when a child is placed in substitute care. These cases include:

1. A family, approved by the Child Welfare program manager, entering into a Voluntary Placement Agreement,
2. A family, approved by the Child Welfare program manager, entering into a Voluntary Custody Agreement, or
3. The substitute care placement of a pre-adjudicated delinquent ordered by the court, for reasons other than child abuse or neglect, to ODHS custody.

V. Include all the following information in the FSS Case plan:

A. Document family composition. This information will prefill into the forms. Provide identifying information regarding:
   1. Each child,
   2. Each young adult (a former foster child over 18 years old is the adult self in the case),
   3. When the child is an Indian child, the child’s tribe(s), and
   4. Each parent or legal guardian, including the documentation about how the father was determined to be the legal father.
   5. When the case involves a former foster child age 18, 19 or 20 years old who is parenting a child, provide identifying information for the former foster child and their child.

B. Document active efforts to ensure the Indian child’s tribe or Indian parent’s tribe participates in person, by telephone or another effective means of communication in the selection of services and activities.

C. Document the identified issues shared with Child Welfare staff through the intake screening process and screening referral.

D. Document and determine service needs. Document a clear description of the service needs of the family, the child or the former foster child that are determined as a result of the needs assessment. The Family Support Services Case plan when the child is in the home, or the Family Support Services Case plan, when the child is in substitute care, will prompt this description.

E. Document service goals and activities.
   1. Document specific information about what ODHS and the parents or legal guardians, or former foster child will achieve through the services documented in the FSS Case plan.
   2. Develop the specific goal(s) that shape(s) the scope and duration of ODHS involvement with the family or former foster child. Family support services generally are short-term services. Avoid goals that are vague or inappropriately long-term in nature as the goals are meant to be short-term. When other community service resources are able to accept responsibility for providing services to achieve the goals, the family support services case should be closed.
   3. List the specific activities that will help achieve the service goals and the specific services to the parent or legal guardian, and services to the child. The Case plan form will prompt these descriptions.
   4. Select services and service providers to assist the parents or legal guardians and the child, or the former foster child to achieve the identified goals.
F. List the services ODHS will provide, including:

1. Case oversight and routine contact with the parents or legal guardians and the child or the former foster child,
2. Routine contact with the juvenile department staff, parents or legal guardians, and the child when the court has ordered ODHS to provide services to a pre-adjudicated delinquent,
3. Arranging visitation for the parents or legal guardians and the child when a child is in substitute care,
4. Timely referral, access to, and use of culturally appropriate services and service providers to address the identified needs, to the extent that resources are available, and
5. Timely preparation of reports required for the court or other service providers.

G. When a child is voluntarily placed by the family in substitute care through a Voluntary Placement Agreement or Voluntary Custody Agreement, or if a pre-adjudicated delinquent was referred for placement by the court (not due to child abuse or neglect), include in the FSS Case plan:

1. The type of placement selected for the child.
2. The anticipated date of the child’s return home and the circumstances under which a child will return to and remain in the home. The description of the child’s current placement. (The ODHS information system will prompt questions regarding the specific placement selected for the child and the child’s adjustment to placement.)
3. The description of the substitute caregiver. (The ODHS information system will prompt questions regarding the services the caregiver will provide.)
4. The strengths and needs of the child including those identified by the CANS screening and, when applicable, the Personal Care Services Plan. Include what services are being provided in order to build upon the child’s strengths and meet the child’s needs, information about the child’s supervision plan when applicable, and information about the child’s personal care services plan when applicable.
5. Completed 310 Health and Education forms for the printed FSS Case plan whenever ODHS has custody of the child. When ODHS is the legal custodian, it is responsible for monitoring the child’s health care and educational needs.
6. The description of the child’s visitation plan. Narrate the plans for visits and other contacts, or attach the CF 0831.
7. The identified primary permanency plan and the concurrent permanency plan. In almost every family support services case involving substitute care placement, the plan will be for the child to return home. These services are intended to be short-term services to assist a family through a crisis, rather than long-term placement of a child.

H. Document the conditions for case closure. Conditions may include, but are not limited to:

1. Changes in behavior, condition or circumstances that indicate the identified case goals have been achieved
2. The parent or legal guardians, or former foster child no longer wish to continue family support services
3. The person requesting services is no longer working in cooperation with ODHS
4. ODHS determines funding no longer is available for the service
5. The eligible person no longer meets eligibility criteria, or
6. The court dismisses the order requiring ODHS involvement with a pre-adjudicated delinquent.

I. Document progress the family, child or former foster child have made to date in achieving case goals and completing service agreements, and any actions ODHS has taken to support achieving the case goals.
   1. Document actions ODHS has taken to support the child’s return home (when the child is in substitute care).
   2. When the child is in substitute care, indicate whether the child has been in substitute care 15 of the last 22 months.
   3. Remember that, any time a child is in substitute care, the court reviews placement after six months in placement and at each six-month interval thereafter. Document reasons why the case remains open as an FSS case at all court reviews.

J. Document the FSS case plan review date.
   1. The FSS case plan must be reviewed, at a minimum, with the parent, legal guardians or former foster child every 90 days during a face-to-face contact. An agreement may be made to review the FSS case plan sooner.

K. The caseworker must obtain signatures on the appropriate FSS Case plan document from the following persons:
   1. The caseworker, and
   2. Each parent or legal guardian, or the former foster child.

L. Whenever a family support services case involves a Voluntary Placement Agreement (CF 0499) or parents giving custody to ODHS through a Voluntary Custody Agreement (CF 1005), the caseworker must meet with the family to complete the Voluntary Placement Agreement or Voluntary Custody Agreement.
   1. When completing either agreement, ensure appropriate legal authorities regarding decisions affecting the child have been discussed with the family, and both ODHS and the parents or legal guardians are in agreement on designated responsibilities regarding the child’s care, supervision, education, health and mental health needs.
   2. Ensure the Child Welfare program manager approves and signs either a Voluntary Placement Agreement or a Voluntary Custody Agreement.

M. Submit the FSS Case plan to the supervisor for review and approval.

N. Distribute the FSS Case plan as soon as possible, but no later than seven days after the supervisor approves the plan.
   1. Give a copy of the FSS Case plan to the following people:
      ■ The parents or legal guardians, or former foster child, and Chapter 7 • Section 4: Develop an Individualized Family Support Services (FSS) Case Plan

The child’s tribe(s) if the child is Indian.

O. When a child is in substitute care and one of the parents’ or legal guardians’ whereabouts are unknown:
   1. Conduct a search for the absent parent.
   2. Upon locating the parent, engage in discussion about planning for the child, including participation in the FSS Case plan.
   3. Consult with the supervisor as needed to determine ways to involve a parent or legal guardian who has been located.
   4. Determine if this is a safety threat case and, if it is, request an assessment be completed for child safety purposes.

P. Request an extension from the supervisor, if information essential to the development of the FSS Case plan is not yet available due to circumstances beyond the control of ODHS. In almost all cases, the FSS Case plan must be developed within the 30-day timeline.

The supervisor’s role

While reviewing the FSS Case plan, the supervisor ensures:

I. The caseworker has gathered sufficient information about the family’s and child’s needs (determination of service needs) to prepare the FSS Case plan.

II. The assessment was thorough and there is a good understanding of the specific needs of the family, child or former foster child.

III. Family support services are being appropriately used.

IV. The goals, services and activities are appropriate and in-line with the scope and duration of services provided in family support services cases.

V. The services selected are adequate, appropriate and culturally relevant, such that they will likely meet the identified goals.

VI. The caseworker has confirmed there are no safety threats to the child.

VII. At case review, reasonable progress is being made toward achieving the case goals, and actions are taken to enhance progress as needed.

The supervisor

I. Approves and signs the FSS Case plan when the plan is appropriate and no changes need to be made.
   A. If changes are needed, consults with the caseworker.
   B. If changes may affect the family, child or former foster child, encourages discussion with the individuals before changes are made.

II. Is available to meet with the caseworker and other individuals involved in case planning, if needed.
III. Consults with the caseworker as needed and provides connections with others who can assist the caseworker with understanding the need for and accessing culturally appropriate services and service providers.

IV. Ensures the parents or legal guardians, or the former foster child, are adequately included and involved in the development of the FSS Case plan.

V. Consults with the caseworker when a parent or legal guardian is absent to determine ODHS is conducting a thorough search, following up appropriately when location is identified, and that the parent is contacted and informed of the FSS Case plan.
Chapter 7
Family Support Services
Section 5: Arranging services and using a Service Agreement
Arranging services and using a Service Agreement

Once the parents and the caseworker have explored services and activities that may assist the family in meeting the family’s or a child’s specific needs, and have developed the FSS Case plan, the caseworker arranges services for the family and the child or the former foster child. As much as department resources allow, services must be culturally appropriate. (Refer to the requirements for securing culturally competent services for an Indian child and his or her parents in Section 6 of Chapter III, Determine Appropriate Actions, Services and Activities.)

Tip
Remember that Voluntary Placement Agreements end when a child reaches his or her 18th birthday, at which time the person no longer is considered a child. Voluntary Custody Agreements can be continued only under very limited circumstances when the temporary conditions for which a family entered into a Voluntary Custody Agreement still exist, the 18-year-old agrees to continue in placement under a Voluntary Custody Agreement, and the district manager approves the continuation of a Voluntary Custody Agreement.

Procedure

I. Make the referrals to appropriate services. State in the referral the specific reasons for the referral to services, and include:
   A. The goal of the service;
   B. What the family and the department need from the service provider;
   C. The expected timeframes for service delivery; and
   D. A process to receive feedback about progress, including:
      1. How often updates or reports will be received (at a minimum, once every 90 days);
      2. The expectations regarding updates or reports (e.g., phone contact and/or a written report), and to whom progress will be reported;
      3. Whether updates or reports will be requested by the department or whether the provider will automatically provide the information; and
      4. The methods through which progress will be measured by the service provider.

II. When the referral includes the substitute care placement of a child through a Voluntary Placement Agreement, Voluntary Custody Agreement or an order of the court for a pre-adjudicated delinquent (not because of child abuse or neglect) the caseworker is responsible for following the child placement and services to children procedures in Chapter IV of this manual. When a child is in substitute care the caseworker also must:
   A. Select an appropriate substitute caregiver able to meet the child’s identified needs.
   B. Develop a Visit and Contact Plan (CF 0831).
   C. Work with the substitute caregiver in meeting the identified needs of the child. This is especially important when the family enters into a Voluntary Placement Agreement, and the substitute caregiver is one who can meet the child’s needs to address the diagnosed mental health condition or disability.
   D. Develop a child’s individual service plan when the child is placed in any type of residential care.
   E. Attend to the child’s return home plan. Substitute care placement under an FSS Case plan is intended to be temporary and time-limited. If the family has no intention to be a permanent resource for the child, immediately staff with the supervisor.
F. Monitor the child’s safety and well-being in substitute care through required face-to-face contacts with the child and with the substitute caregiver, and assess the child’s safety and well-being in substitute care. Refer to Chapter 5, Section 9 for more information.

G. Manage the child’s education, health care and mental health needs to the extent ODHS is authorized to do so through a Voluntary Placement Agreement or Voluntary Custody Agreement. When the court orders the substitute care placement of a pre-adjudicated delinquent, ODHS is responsible for the child’s education, health care and mental health needs as the legal custodian of the child.

III. In most cases the signed FSS Case plan provides sufficient documentation of the scope of services that will be provided to the family in a family support services case. In some instances, however, when a series of services or actions is a part of the FSS Case plan, or services are sequential in nature, it is appropriate to develop a time-limited service agreement with the family or the former foster child that focuses on one or more services.

IV. It is the caseworker’s responsibility to make sure the Service Agreement includes:

A. At least one of the goals in the FSS Case plan.
B. The specific activities or services required to achieve the goal.
C. The specific services or activities related to the specific change being sought.
D. Services which are as culturally and gender-specifically appropriate as possible, given the department’s resources. This may include locating a service provider who speaks the parents’ language, a service provider of the same ethnicity/race as the parents, or a service provider who is familiar with the parents’ cultural background.
E. The services are clear, succinct and manageable. The parents or legal guardians, or the former foster child need to understand what the services are, and how those services relate to the goals of the FSS Case plan.
F. The responsibilities of each participant.
   1. The Service Agreement must describe the responsibilities of the parents or legal guardians, or the former foster child and the department.
      ■ It is important for the caseworker to follow through with any responsibility listed for the department.
      ■ It also is important for the caseworker to make sure that anything listed as a department responsibility is something that can be provided by the department. If there is a question as to whether ODHS can provide or pay for a particular service, the caseworker should consult with his or her supervisor.
G. The start and completion dates.
   1. The Service Agreement needs to list the anticipated start date and anticipated completion dates, based on the assessment of the service provider.
H. Indicate whether a particular service or activity is an order of the court (if applicable for a pre-adjudicated delinquent).

Tip
A Service Agreement is a time-limited written document between the department and the parents, legal guardians or a former foster child that identifies one or more of the services or activities to achieve the goals of the Family Support Services Case plan. The Service Agreement is developed in conjunction with the FSS Case plan, but it is a stand-alone, time-limited agreement. The caseworker can develop sequential service agreements when the parents or legal guardians, or the former foster child need to take smaller steps to achieve progress. As long as sufficient resources are available, the Service Agreement must use culturally appropriate services and service providers whose interventions are focused on the parent’s achievement of the goals identified in the FSS Case plan.

V. Make sure the FSS Case plan goals and the Service Agreement are related to one another. The Service Agreement should not include an activity for the parents or legal guardians or the former foster child that is not linked to the request for ODHS services and the results of the determination of needs.

VI. Document the method of measuring progress.
   A. The Service Agreement documents how changes will be measured, such as by professional assessments or observations of changes in behavior, condition or circumstances by family or other community members, or by a demonstrated change in behavior, condition or circumstance that relieves the crisis.
   B. The parents or legal guardians or the former foster child need to understand how progress will be measured at the onset of the Service Agreement.

VII. Indicate the date the Service Agreement will be reviewed.

VIII. Obtain signatures.
   A. The Service Agreement is signed by the parents or legal guardians or the former foster child and by the caseworker. The Service Agreement also lists the date to review, and if necessary, update the Service Agreement. Again, it is important to follow through with this review as a way to monitor compliance with services.

IX. Provide a copy of the Service Agreement to the parents or legal guardians, or former foster child no later than seven days after the agreement is signed.
Chapter 7
Family Support Services

Section 6: Monitor the Family Support Services case plan through required contacts
Monitor the Family Support Services case plan through required contacts

The caseworker is responsible for 30-day face-to-face contacts. The purposes of this contact are to monitor the changes in the family that address the family’s specific circumstances, and to ensure the family is using services that appropriately address the child or family’s identified needs.

However, when a child is placed in substitute care through a Voluntary Placement Agreement or Voluntary Custody Agreement or because a pre-adjudicated delinquent has been ordered into ODHS custody (for reasons other than child abuse or neglect), the purposes for face-to-face contact with the child and the substitute caregiver also include monitoring the safety and well-being of the child in the substitute care placement.

The caseworker must have the following contacts:

I. Face-to-face contact with the child every 30 days.
II. Face-to-face contact with each parent or legal guardian every 30 days.
III. Contact with the substitute caregiver every 30 days when a child is in substitute care.
IV. Face-to-face contact with the substitute caregiver in the home or facility of the substitute caregiver every 60 days.
V. Contact with the service providers a minimum every 90 days.

A. Parent or legal guardian contact and contact with a former foster child

Procedure

I. The caseworker must have contact with each parent or legal guardian and with the child or the former foster child every 30 days. The contact should occur in the parents’ or legal guardians’ or the former foster child’s home. Activities during the contact may include, but are not limited to:
   A. Review how the services are helping family members make progress toward FSS Case plan goals;
   B. Review the progress on any active Service Agreement;
   C. Verify individuals still remain eligible for services;
   D. Assess and determine that services are still appropriate in addressing the identified need; and
   E. Check that services the department has agreed to provide are being provided.

II. When services are not addressing the child’s, family’s or former foster child’s needs, re-evaluate the services, and/or develop additional strategies to address the identified needs.

III. Ensure that the child’s or former foster child’s needs are being met.

IV. Ensure that a review of the FSS Case plan is considered after receiving an expert evaluation.
V. Review the FSS Case plan a minimum of once every 90 days.

B. Contact with the child placed in substitute care

Contacts with the child in substitute care involve not only monitoring services to the child, but confirming the safety and well-being of the child in the substitute care environment. This involves monitoring services provided to the child (education, physical and mental health, or other treatment needs), the child’s adjustment to substitute care, and the ability of the substitute caregiver to provide a safe environment for the child.

Procedure

Contact with the child placed in a foster home or with a relative caregiver

During each face-to-face contact the caseworker must monitor the safety of the child by:

I. Assessing the progress in, and adjustment to, the placement of the child.

II. Receiving updates from the child and the substitute caregiver.

III. If the child has a supervision plan, ensure that the plan continues to meet the child’s needs as identified by the CANS and make adjustments with the substitute care provider as necessary.

IV. If the child is receiving personal care services, ensure that the personal care service plan is meeting the child’s needs. If you are unsure as to whether the plan is being followed or is meeting the child’s needs, this may include consulting with the Personal Care Nurse Manager in central office.

V. Assessing the safety and well-being of the child by determining whether each of the following conditions exists in the home:

A. The child is comfortable and the environment of the home is supportive and safe.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child alone and if the child is old enough to communicate, ask him or her questions about how the child feels in the placement, and whether he or she feels comfortable in the home.

B. Adults in the home take an active role in caring for and supervising the child.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child, if the child is old enough to communicate, about who takes care of him or her, what they do, and related topics.

C. Adult family members possess the physical, emotional and cognitive capacity to sufficiently care for the child.
   1. The caseworker should assess whether the child is getting to medical and other appointments, getting to school on time, and what treatment providers for the child report about the child’s needs being met or not met.

D. Family members and the child have contact with others in the community.
   1. The caseworker should ask the substitute caregiver and the child what they do for recreation, and whether they attend school functions, church, neighborhood events and other activities.

E. The child is accepted as part of the household.
1. The caseworker should ask questions such as where the child eats, where they spend their time in the home (e.g., is much of the home restricted to the foster child), and whether the child participates in family activities with the substitute caregiver.

F. The substitute caregiver understands and is attentive to the child’s vulnerability and need for protection.
   1. Is the substitute caregiver attending to the child’s special circumstances and protective of the child when the caregiver may be fearful or sensitive to the special issues that a victim of child abuse (for an adoptive or guardianship child) may need to address?

G. The substitute caregiver is amenable to department oversight and willing to partner with ODHS.
   1. Is the substitute caregiver following the FSS Case plan, including the visitation plan? Does the substitute caregiver share negative information about the case with the child?

H. The child has a sufficiently positive relationship with the substitute caregiver’s own children who live in the home.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child about their interactions with the foster parents’ own children, (e.g., do they play together, do they fight or argue?).

I. The substitute caregiver is caring for children matching the preferences and experience of the family.
   1. The caseworker should talk with the substitute caregivers about how they are managing the care of the children in their home (e.g., are they stressed, do they feel overwhelmed).

J. The interactions between the child and other children placed in the home are sufficient to ensure safety.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child about the interactions with other foster children in the home (e.g., do they play together, argue or fight, do they generally get along).

K. The present demands do not exceed the ability of the substitute caregiver to provide safe and protective care.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the substitute caregiver about their stress level, how they handle stress, whether they get breaks, whether they enjoy foster parenting, and how circumstances in their own lives may be impacting the children in the home.

VI. If any of the above conditions do not exist in the home, and the caseworker cannot confirm the safety and well-being of the child, the caseworker must:

A. Assess child safety immediately to determine if there is a safety threat
   1. If a safety threat is identified, the caseworker must immediately:
      - Consult with the caseworker’s supervisor to determine any immediate protective action required to ensure the child’s safety or any action required to ensure the safety of the child; and
      - Contact a CPS screener and report the identified safety threat to the child.

B. Document the behaviors, conditions or circumstances observed in the home and any immediate protective actions in OR-Kids.
VII. When the child currently is safe in the home but a certification rule is being violated or, for other reasons, the caregiver is struggling with the responsibilities of caregiving, the caseworker must:
   A. Document date, time, location and current behaviors, conditions or circumstances observed in the home in OR-Kids case notes, and notify the certifier or certifier’s supervisor within one day.
   B. Have face-to-face contact with the substitute caregiver within the next 30 days and the visit must occur in the home. The caseworker must observe the behaviors, conditions or circumstances of the substitute caregiver, the child and other children in the home, and conditions in the home.

VIII. When the caseworker can confirm the child is safe, current conditions in the home provide safety and well-being for the child, and the certification violation has been remediated or, for other reasons, the caregiver’s struggles with caregiving have been resolved, the caseworker must:
   A. Document the date, time, location and observations of the conditions of the environment in OR-Kids; and
   B. Notify the certifier of the improved behaviors, conditions or circumstances in the home.

IX. When the caseworker can confirm the child is safe but cannot confirm that the certification standard has been remediated or if the caregiver continues to struggle with the responsibilities of caregiving, the caseworker must:
   A. Consult with the supervisor to determine whether to recommend implementation of a Placement Support Plan (Refer to Chapter 8 for detailed procedures regarding the Placement Support Plan) to the certifier, or whether the child should no longer remain in the home because the conditions necessary to provide safety and well-being cannot be sustained in this home.
   B. Notify the certifier of the behaviors, conditions or circumstances in the home.
   C. Document the date, time, location and the behaviors, conditions or circumstances in the home in Or-Kids, in the notes tab for the certified family.

Contact with the child placed with a provider

A provider is defined as a “person approved by a licensed private child-caring agency to provide care for children or an employee approved by a licensed private child-caring agency.” In other words, it is a placement in a residential treatment facility or a foster home licensed or approved by someone other than a child welfare certifier.

During every contact with a provider, the caseworker must:

I. Assess the progress in, and adjustment to, the placement of the child.

II. Receive updates from the child and from the provider.

III. Assess the safety of the child in the home or facility by determining whether each of the following conditions exists:
   A. The child is comfortable and the environment is supportive and safe.
      1. The caseworker should talk to the child alone and if the child is old enough to communicate, ask him or her questions about how the child feels in the placement, and whether he or she feels comfortable.
B. Adults take an active role in caring for and supervising the child.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child, if the child is old enough to communicate, about who takes care of him or her, what they do, and related topics.

C. Adults possess the physical, emotional, and cognitive capacity to sufficiently care for the child.
   1. The caseworker should assess whether the child is getting to medical and other appointments, getting to school on time, and what the treatment service providers for the child report about the child’s needs being met or not met.

D. The child has formal and informal contact with others in the community.
   1. The caseworker should ask the substitute caregiver and the child what they do for recreation, and whether they participate in school functions, church or other neighborhood events.

E. The child is accepted as part of the household or facility.
   1. The caseworker should ask questions such as where the child eats, where they spend their time in the home or facility (e.g., are there restrictions placed on the child), and whether the child routinely participates in activities with the substitute caregiver.

F. The provider understands and is attentive to the vulnerability and need for protection of the child.
   1. Is the substitute caregiver attending to the child’s special circumstances and protective of the child when they may be fearful or sensitive to the special issues that a victim of child abuse may need to address?

G. The provider is amenable to department oversight and willing to partner with ODHS.
   1. Is the substitute caregiver following the FSS Case plan, including the Visit and Contact Plan?
Does the substitute caregiver share negative information about the case with the child? Is the substitute caregiver ensuring the child is receiving the treatment services he or she needs?

H. The child has a sufficiently positive relationship with other children in the home or facility of the provider.
   1. Observe the child in the home or facility. Ask about his or her relationships with others, the friends he or she has developed, and what relationships are meaningful to the child.

I. The substitute caregiver is caring for children matching the preferences and experience of the substitute caregiver.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child about the interactions with other foster children in the home (e.g., do they play together, argue or fight, do they generally get along).

J. The interactions between the child and other children placed in the home or facility is sufficient to ensure safety.
   1. Observe the care provided to all the children in the home or facility. Do people seem to get along?
Is everyone valued as a member of the group? Do caregivers appear to possess the knowledge and skills needed to care for the child and other children in the home?

K. The present demands of the home or facility do not exceed the ability of the substitute caregiver to provide safe and protective care.
IV. Document the date, time, location and observations of the conditions of the environment in OR-Kids.

V. If any of the above conditions do not exist in the home or facility, and the caseworker cannot confirm the safety and well-being of the child, the caseworker must:
   A. Assess child safety immediately to determine if there is a safety threat.
      1. If a safety threat is identified, the caseworker must immediately:
         ■ Consult with the caseworker’s supervisor to determine any immediate protective action required to ensure the child’s safety or any action required to ensure the safety of the child; and
         ■ Contact a CPS screener and report the identified safety threat.
   B. Document the behaviors, conditions or circumstances observed in the home or facility, and any immediate protective actions in OR-Kids.

VI. When the child currently is safe in the home or facility, but the conditions described above are not fully met, the caseworker must:
   A. Contact the child caring agency’s management to report the conditions of the home or facility, and request additional supportive resources for the provider.
   B. Document in OR-Kids case notes the contact with the child caring agency’s management.
   C. Have face-to-face contact with the provider and the child within the next 30 days and the visit must occur in the home or facility. The caseworker must observe the behaviors, conditions or circumstances of the home or facility and the child and other children in the home or facility.

VII. When the caseworker can confirm that current conditions in the home or facility provide safety and well-being for the child, the caseworker must:
   A. Document the date, time, location and observations of the conditions of the environment in OR-Kids; and
   B. Contact the child caring agency’s management and report the improved behaviors, conditions or circumstances in the home.

VIII. When the caseworker can confirm the child’s safety but cannot confirm that current conditions in the home or facility meet the requirements in OAR 413-080-0059 (3)(a)(D) the caseworker must:
   A. Consult with the supervisor to determine whether an immediate protective action is required to ensure the child’s safety or any other action is required to ensure the child’s safety; or
   B. Whether consultation with the child caring agency’s management is necessary to provide additional support and ensure child safety.
   C. Document the date, time, location and the behaviors, conditions or circumstances in the home or facility, and any actions in OR-Kids.
   D. Document contact with the child caring agency’s management.
C. Contact with the service providers

Procedure

I. Maintain regular contact with service providers a minimum of every 90 days to monitor the services provided through the FSS Case plan.

   A. It is helpful to talk with service providers prior to beginning services and reach agreement about how the department and the service provider will maintain regular contact, and what specific information needs to be shared at the time of the contact.

   B. Arrange details such as:
      1. Who will initiate the contact;
      2. Whether contact will be by phone, in writing or other means of communication;
      3. Notification of the parent, legal guardian or child’s attendance and participation in the service;
      4. Progress being made toward the case plan goal and how the service provider will measure progress (e.g., observable changes in behavior, condition or circumstance);
      5. New information either the department or the service provider has become aware of that may impact the delivery of services.

   C. Consider developing a standardized format to maintain timely communication and provide adequate information to monitor progress.

D. Monitor the Family Support Services case plan

Procedure

I. The caseworker is responsible for the ongoing oversight of all aspects of the FSS case plan. This includes:

   A. The services provided to the family, child or former foster child;
   B. The progress made toward achieving the case plan goals;
   C. The services provided by ODHS;
   D. The Visit and Contact Plan when the child is in substitute care;
   E. The completion of actions and activities for which ODHS is responsible; and
   F. The safety and wellbeing of the child and the child’s environment (when the child is in substitute care).

II. The caseworker monitors the FSS case plan by making required contacts. This includes completing the following activities:

   A. Ensure the department receives timely and accurate information from the service providers.
   B. Confirm current service(s) are meeting identified needs and are helping to resolve issues that resulted in family support services. Remember, family support services are intended to be short-term services to a family or former foster child. When services do not appear to have intended results, staff the case with the supervisor and consider using other service options to achieve the case goals.
   C. Confirm the safety of the child.
III. Respond in a timely manner to issues that may impact the safety of the child.
   A. If the caseworker becomes aware of a safety threat to the child, report that information immediately to an intake screener; and
   B. Consult with a supervisor to determine whether a protective action needs to be put into place to protect the child.

IV. Consult regularly with your supervisor on the case.

E. Documentation

Procedure

I. Document in OR-Kids case notes:
   A. The date, type and location of each contact with the child, parent or legal guardian, or former foster child;
   B. The date and type of each contact with each service provider;
   C. Observations and conditions of the child during the 30-day contact;
   D. Observations and conditions of the parents or legal guardians during the 30-day contact;
   E. Changes in the family;
   F. Updates or reports from service providers;
   G. Observations or reports from the substitute caregiver (when a child is in substitute care); and
   H. Any immediate protective action, if required to ensure a child’s safety.

The supervisor’s role

I. Consult regularly with the caseworker regarding the progress achieved in meeting the FSS case plan goals in a timely manner.

II. Keep the focus on the effectiveness of the services in meeting identified needs.

III. Confirm the caseworker is monitoring the safety of the child when placed in substitute care.
   A. If informed by the caseworker about a safety threat to a child:
      1. Discuss the situation with the caseworker to obtain information and provide direction;
      2. Determine whether a protective action needs to be put into effect to protect the child; and
      3. Ensure information is immediately reported to an intake screener.

IV. As appropriate, assign another staff person to make required contact when the assigned caseworker is unable to do so.
   A. Determine:
      1. Who may make contact: A Child Welfare Program Manager; Child Welfare Supervisor; or another caseworker may be authorized to make the contact in the caseworker’s place.
2. What the person needs to know: Prior to contact, the person making contact must have information regarding the FSS Case plan, the parent or guardians, and the child or former foster child, including any special needs of the child or former foster child.

3. What the person does: The person making contact is responsible for assessing the safety of the child or former foster child, if placed in substitute care, confirming appropriateness of services, and completing documentation requirements.

V. When approving an exception to the required 30-day face-to-face contact with a child or former foster child, ensure:

A. The safety and well-being of the child or former foster child can be confirmed by another responsible adult who has the face-to-face contact with the child or former foster child; and the responsible adult confirms the child or former foster child is safe.

B. The exception to face-to-face contact documentation is in the case file, including approval for the exception, reason for the approval of the exception, and length of time the exception is in effect.

C. The exception to required face-to-face contact is no longer than 90 days unless the caseworker obtains approval of the Child Welfare program manager or designee, and the Child Welfare program manager or designee confirms the facts demonstrating that child safety and well-being are confirmed without the required face-to-face contact.

D. Reasons to grant an exception to face-to-face contact for a family support services case include, but are not limited to:

1. The child or former foster child has been placed in another planned permanent living arrangement (APPLA) that has been approved by the court. If appropriate, an exception may be granted when in APPLA for face-to-face contact every 90 days. In this situation the above documentation requirements apply.

2. The child or former foster child has been placed in substitute care with a provider (meaning with a person or employee approved by a licensed private child caring agency to provide care to children, such as in a residential treatment program). If appropriate, an exception may be granted for face-to-face contact every 60 days. In this situation the above documentation requirements apply.

3. A former foster child is receiving only Youth Transition (formerly ILP) services. If appropriate, an exception may be granted for face-to-face contact every 60 days. In this situation the above documentation requirements apply.

4. The child or former foster child is unavailable (for example, the child has gone on vacation with the foster parent).

5. The parent or legal guardian of the child or former foster child is unavailable.

6. A parent or legal guardian presents a safety risk to the caseworker or department staff, which has been documented in the case file.
Chapter 7
Family Support Services
Section 7: Measuring progress
Measuring progress

Whenever ODHS is involved with a family or former foster child because of a request for services, or when the court orders a pre-adjudicated delinquent to ODHS for services or placement, you are responsible for measuring, on a continual basis, the progress in meeting the specific needs identified in the FSS Case plan. Family support services cases, in particular, are most often short-term involvements with ODHS, when services are provided to meet an identified need.

Regularly measuring progress increases the likelihood that the goals of the FSS Case plan are achieved in a timely manner. Also, it focuses ODHS attention on meeting identified needs. When measuring progress, a number of areas need to be considered, including whether:

I. Parents, legal guardians or the former foster child are making adequate progress toward achieving the FSS Case plan goals

II. Services provided through ODHS are effective in assisting the family, and

III. Child-specific needs are being met, and can be adequately managed and sustained without ongoing ODHS involvement.

Procedure

The caseworker must:

I. Measure progress as part of the ongoing intervention with the family or former foster child, including at the following times:
   A. During and (or) after any contacts with the parents, legal guardians, former foster child, children, service providers and others who are connected with the child and or the family.
   B. Every 90 days, formally measure progress when reviewing the FSS Case plan as described previously.

II. Progress is measured in terms of changes in behavior, conditions or circumstances that ease the identified needs of the family. Progress can be documented, because it has been verified that it has occurred, changed or been observed. Measure progress with respect to the following:
   A. When a child has been placed in substitute care through a Voluntary Custody Agreement or Voluntary Placement Agreement, is there progress toward achieving the child's return home?
   B. When a pre-adjudicated delinquent is in substitute care through an order of the court, what behaviors, circumstances or conditions have changed toward achieving circumstances in which the pre-adjudicated delinquent can return home?
   C. When working with a family who is receiving post-adoption or post-assisted guardianship services, are the services effective in meeting the identified case goals?
   D. When working with a family using voluntary services for a temporary crisis in the family, how are the family's circumstances changing?

III. Adjust the following, when indicated, based on the information gained when monitoring the FSS Case plan, maintaining case contacts and measuring progress:

A. ODHS interventions including, but not limited to, service agreements when a family needs logically sequenced actions or services that are time-limited,
B. Caseworker contacts, or
C. Caseworker approach with the parents, legal guardians or former foster child.
D. The FSS Case plan, including:
   1. Securing other services or supports that more appropriately address the identified needs, or
   2. Increasing the family's support system so that the changes occurring through the services can be sustained without ODHS involvement.

IV. Consider the following when measuring progress toward change:

A. What observable changes do you see?
B. How does this compare with what you have seen previously in this family or with this former foster child?
C. What is the motivation to do something or not do something? Is there a motivation that demonstrates intent and choice to change? Reflect on:
   1. What the parent, legal guardian, former foster child or child does or says
   2. The approach to problem-solving
   3. The follow through, and
   4. The extent to which the family remains focused on achieving FSS Case plan goals.
D. In what ways is movement demonstrated toward the desired change? Movement is demonstrated by activity and behavior. Reflect on:
   1. Evidence of trying, participating, follow through, dependability, commitment and making gains.
   2. Qualities of the movement. Reflect on:
      ■ What small steps are occurring?
      ■ In what ways are you, as the worker, helping motivate change?
      ■ How are you acknowledging movement and changes in behavior?
      ■ How are service providers contributing to change?
      ■ Are services facilitating positive change?
      ■ Do adjustments need to be made?
E. How likely is it that change will occur within the timeframes of the FSS Case plan?
   1. How does the answer to this question affect the child's need for permanency in a reasonable amount of time?
   2. What has happened historically within this family?
   3. What supports are in place within the family or what additional support could be put into motion to improve chances for success?
4. Are there any other personal or substantive resources available to the family to support and sustain change?

F. Use the child as a source of information.
   1. Does the child notice any changes (particularly in post-adoption and post-assisted guardianship cases where adjustment has been problematic for the child)?
   2. What observations does the caseworker have when seeing parents and children together?

G. Use the reports from service providers.
   1. What progress is reported by service providers?
   2. What observations are documented in updates or reports to the caseworker regarding changes in behaviors, conditions or circumstances?
   3. How have the service providers arrived at these conclusions?

H. Use reports from other ODHS staff involved with the family (the social service assistant, supervisor or other staff).

I. Whenever a child is in substitute care, make appropriate adjustments when assessing the safety and well being of the child in substitute care.
   1. Are the services provided meeting the child’s identified needs and build upon the identified strengths?
   2. Is the family continuing to work toward the child’s return home, and actively participating in the FSS Case plan goals?
   3. Is the child safe in the substitute care placement?
   4. Does the child have a supervision plan and a personal care services plan and if so, are those plans meeting the child’s needs?

V. Ensure that an FSS Case plan continues to be the appropriate plan for the child whenever a child is in substitute care. Consider:

   A. Is the permanency hearing approaching?
      1. If so, is it likely the child will return home soon? If not, reconsider the appropriateness of the current FSS Case plan.

   B. If a child has been placed through a Voluntary Placement Agreement, is the child nearly age 18 when a Voluntary Placement Agreement must end?
      1. How does the FSS Case plan address a child’s transition to adulthood and independence? How are available ILP services being used?
      2. What has the court determined are the best interests of the child?

   C. If a child has been placed through a Voluntary Custody Agreement, is the child nearly age 18?
      1. What is the nature of the family crisis and is there a plan for the child?
      2. Does the child want to agree to voluntary custody after age 18? What is the long-term plan for the child? Is this agreement something the district manager and the court would approve?
      3. What has the court determined to be in the best interests of the child?
D. Has the child been in substitute care almost 15 of the last 22 months?

   1. If so, the law requires that there are compelling reasons not to file a petition to terminate parental rights. Is there justification for these compelling reasons (e.g., a child’s special medical or mental health needs continue to require substitute care).

The supervisor’s role

I. Provide regular consultation with the caseworker.

II. Review the progress reported, ask questions and review case notes.

III. Assist the caseworker in making decisions when progress is slow or there is no evidence of progress in meeting the FSS Case plan goals.

IV. Review again with the caseworker the purpose of the FSS Case plan and the scope of the services ODHS is providing to the family.

V. Suggest alternate methods to achieve the FSS Case plan goals.

VI. Assist the caseworker in meeting with the family or former foster child when a joint meeting would be helpful.
Chapter 7
Family Support Services

Section 8: Conduct a Family Support Services Case plan review
Conduct a Family Support Services Case plan review

Family support services are intended to be short-term services to assist a family through a crisis. When reviewing the FSS Case plan, be attentive to the family, child or former foster child’s progress in achieving the case plan goals.

Procedure

I. Review the FSS Case plan a minimum of every 90 days and make necessary updates.

II. Consider revising the FSS Case plan to include recommendations from an expert evaluation within 30 calendar days of receiving an expert evaluation.
   A. If the recommendations are not implemented and included in the FSS Case plan, the rationale must be documented in OR-Kids.
   B. Document in OR-Kids case notes when the decision is made; and
   C. Document the decision in the next CF 333d or CF 333e (when the child is in substitute care) FSS Case plan update.

III. Review the FSS Case plan in a face-to-face meeting with the parents, legal guardians or former foster child.
   A. If parents, legal guardians or the former foster child are unavailable for the review, the caseworker must document the following:
      1. The reason the parents, legal guardians or former foster child were not available; and
      2. The efforts that were made to involve the parents, legal guardians or former foster child in the review.
   B. The meeting also may include the child, service providers, attorneys, family members and the substitute caregiver when a child is in substitute care.
      1. The caseworker must consider input received from the child, the service providers, safety plan participants, substitute caregivers, attorneys, a child’s CASA persons with significant attachments to the child, and family members during a case plan review whether the input is received during a meeting or through other contacts or correspondence.

IV. In all cases, the case plan review must include:
   A. An assessment of the progress that has been made in meeting the goals of the Family Support Services Case plan. Input received from service providers, foster parents, attorneys, CASA, and family members.
   B. The reduction or elimination of the circumstances, conditions, or behaviors for which the department is providing services.

V. In substitute care cases, the case plan review must also include:
   A. An assessment of the progress toward achieving a return home.
B. A review of the services being provided to the child and whether they are building upon the strengths of the child and meeting the child’s needs, including those identified in the CANS screening and, when applicable, the personal care services plan.

C. An assessment of the ability of the substitute caregiver to meet the identified needs of the child including:

1. The child’s physical and emotional safety
   - Does the substitute caregiver possess the skill level or willingness to acquire the skills necessary to meet the physical, emotional and supervisory needs of the child?
   - What are the ages, number and gender of other children currently in the home?
   - What are the behaviors of the children currently in the home as they relate to protection from further victimization and from harm to self or others should another child be placed in the home?
   - What is the substitute caregiver’s ability to protect the child from inappropriate contact with those who would harm the child?
   - Does the physical layout of the home affect the substitute caregiver’s ability to adequately supervise children?

2. Preserving existing attachments to family
   - Is the substitute caregiver a relative? If not, what does a review of the diligent relative search indicate? What are the barriers to placement with a relative and can they be eliminated?
   - Does the substitute caregiver meet the family’s placement preference?
   - Is this the substitute care placement the child requested?
   - Does the substitute caregiver support the child’s attachment through visitations and working with the family?
   - Does this substitute care placement provide mutual care when both child and parent require out-of-home placement?

3. Supporting continuity and familiarity
   - What is the parents’ relationship with the substitute caregiver or the child’s ability to develop relationships with a substitute caregiver?
   - What is the substitute caregiver’s proximity to the child’s neighborhood, school and family?
   - What is the substitute caregiver’s capacity to provide a permanent home or ability to support transition to a permanent home?

4. Supporting appropriate educational, developmental, emotional and physical support for the child
   - Does the substitute caregiver have a demonstrated capacity to meet the child’s specific or unique needs, including needs identified in the CANS screening?
   - If the child is receiving a Level of Care as a result of the CANS screening, has the substitute caregiver demonstrated the capacity to implement the Enhanced Supervision Plan?

- Is the substitute caregiver willing to acquire the skills necessary to meet the child’s specific needs?
- Does the substitute caregiver have the ability to meet the child’s needs considering the number and type of children in the home?
- Is the substitute caregiver willing and able to assist, participate in decisions about, and act as an advocate for the child?
- Is the substitute caregiver able to identify and build upon the child’s strengths?
- If the child is receiving personal care services, does the substitute caregiver appear to be able to provide those services?

5. Meeting the child’s needs to be nurtured and supported

- Considering the other children in the home, what is the substitute caregiver’s:

  (1) Desire to provide care for this child and ability to provide the necessary nurture and support?

  (2) Willingness to provide care as long as needed?

  (3) Ability to recognize a child’s needs and build on the child’s strengths?

6. Supporting the child’s cultural and religious background

- What is the substitute caregiver’s ability to:

  (1) Appreciate, nurture, support and reinforce the identity of the child?

  (2) Support the child’s development and help the child develop age-appropriate developmental and social skills?

  (3) Communicate with the child?

  (4) Honor and accommodate religious differences, and support the child’s religious heritage and preferences?

D. A review of the supervision plan and/or personal care services plan if one or both are in place.

1. The review of the supervision plan should include at a minimum the substitute caregiver and may also include the child, when appropriate, and the certifier for the substitute caregiver. Questions to consider include:

   - Whether the plan is meeting the child’s supervision needs as identified in the CANS screening.
   - Whether the plan should be adjusted to be either more or less restrictive depending upon how the child is progressing in the placement.
   - Whether or not there has been a significant change in the pattern of the child’s behavior to warrant a referral for a new CANS screening.

2. The review of the personal care services plan should include at a minimum the substitute caregiver and may also include the child, when appropriate, the certifier for the substitute caregiver, and the Personal Care S Nurse manager in central office.
E. A review of the search for the child’s relatives. The following questions may assist you in this review:

1. What maternal and paternal relatives have been identified and contacted?
2. What maternal and paternal relatives have responded and have we followed up on their interest to be a placement resource, visiting resource, person to maintain connections for the child, or safety service provider?
3. Is it time to contact relatives again who did not respond to our initial inquiry?
4. Is it time contact relatives again who have previously responded with some interest (ie: considering a placement change, considering a case plan change, considering a return home)?
5. In what ways are relatives engaged as placement resources, visiting resources, persons to maintain connections for the child, safety service providers, or in case planning for the child?
6. Are there some relatives who were denied placement but could be engaged to participate in the child’s life in other ways and if so, how are the relatives involved?

Tip

A worker may decide to document the 90-day review in the Family Support Services case plan (CF 333d or CF 333e) rather than in case notes when the information will soon be needed for an upcoming court or Citizen Review Board hearing. The CF 333 form must be used for the initial Family Support Services Case plan and every six months thereafter, for the six-month Family Support Services Case plan reviews.

F. A review of the Visitation Plan. The following questions may assist you in this review:

1. Does the visitation plan meet the child’s needs?
2. What opportunities are there for the child to visit with other family members?
3. Does the visitation plan support progress toward the child’s return home?

G. Consideration of sibling issues.

1. If the child has siblings in substitute care, are siblings placed together? If so, and there are supervision and/or therapeutic issues (ie: aggression or sexual acting out between siblings), how are those issues being addressed?
2. If siblings are not together, what efforts are being made to place them together? What efforts are being made to keep them connected?
3. Has a determination been made by a permanency committee that it would not be in their best interests to be placed together? If so, what efforts have been made to assess their need for ongoing connection and meet that need?

1. What are the child’s permanency needs?
2. In what ways has the family been engaged in developing and implementing the concurrent plan?
3. What still needs to be done in order to implement the concurrent plan?
4. Has the child been in care for 15 out of the last 22 months, and if TPR has not been filed, what is the compelling reason not to pursue TPR?
VI. Review the Child Welfare Case plan with the Supervisor to gain approval of the revised case plan. The Supervisor will document the outcome of the meeting in OR-Kids case notes under “90 Day Staffing”.

VII. Document the FSS Case plan review by recording the updated information in OR-Kids:
   A. The information gathered for a 90 day review may be documented in OR-Kids case notes, or
   B. The 90 day review may be documented on the appropriate FSS Case plan form.
      1. Use the CF 0333d for an FFS Case plan developed with a family when the child remains in their own home, including:
         - In-home family support services,
         - Independent Living Program services provided to a former foster child, or
         - Services provided to a pre-adjudicated delinquent who remains in the home and is ordered by the court to receive department services (not due to abuse or neglect).
      2. Use the CF 0333e for an FFS Case plan developed with a family when a child is placed in substitute care including:
         - Voluntary Placement Agreements,
         - Voluntary Custody Agreements, and
         - Services provided to a pre-adjudicated delinquent who is placed in substitute care, when ordered by the court to receive department services (not due to abuse or neglect).

VIII. Review and fully update the FSS Case plan at least every six months.

IX. Document all of the following in OR-Kids after the face-to-face meeting with the parents, legal guardians or the former foster child:
   A. The services provided to the parents, legal guardians or former foster child and the impact on achieving the case plan goals.
   B. When a child is in substitute care:
      1. The progress made on achieving the return of the child to the home;
      2. Implementation of the Visit and Contact Plan;
      3. The actions the department has taken toward any concurrent permanency plan;
      4. A review of the child’s education, health and mental health services to ensure his or her needs are being met;
      5. A review of other services provided to address the identified needs of the child; and
      6. An assessment of the capacity of the substitute caregiver to meet the identified needs of the child.
   C. Observations of measurable changes in behavior, conditions or circumstances that indicate case goals have been achieved, or substantial progress has been made, including reports from service providers.

X. Distribute the updated FSS Case plan not later than seven days after the supervisor has approved the FSS Case plan to the following individuals, unless doing so would provide information that places another person at risk:

A. The parents or legal guardians,
B. An Indian child’s tribe(s), and
C. If involved with the court, also distribute to:
   1. The court-appointed special advocate, and
   2. Attorneys of record for the parent, legal guardians, and child or former foster child.

The supervisor’s role

I. Regular consultation with the caseworker regarding case planning and progress is imperative. Regular consultation may include brief issues specific staffing as well as at least monthly reviews of an entire case load. Worker face to face contact with supervisors should take into account the needs and experience of the worker, and the difficulty of the case load.

II. Supervisors and workers should use the exploratory questions contained in the Appendixes 4.10 and 4.11.

III. Review and approve the updated FSS Case plan (CF 0333d or CF 0333e).

IV. Consult with caseworker if the updated FSS Case plan is not adequate or needs revisions.

V. When an updated FSS Case plan cannot be approved as submitted by the caseworker, consider the following:
   A. The impact of changes to the FSS Case plan on the parents, legal guardians, child or former foster child; and
   B. Whether meeting with the parents, legal guardians or former foster child would facilitate the process of updating the FSS Case plan and keeping the parents, legal guardians or former foster child up-to-date about the contents of the updated FSS Case plan.

Section 9: Close a Family Support Services Case plan
Close a Family Support Services Case plan

ODHS is always working toward terminating interventions with a family. In family support services cases this is particularly true, since the services are intended to be short-term and time-limited.

Procedure

I. The caseworker must consult with the supervisor whenever any of the following circumstances exist, as this signals the likely need to close the FSS Case plan:
   A. The parents, legal guardians, former foster child or department indicates the FSS Case plan goals have been achieved.
   B. The parents, legal guardians or former foster child states that he or she is withdrawing the request for voluntary family support services.
   C. The caseworker has been unsuccessful in contacting the parents, legal guardians or former foster child after diligent efforts. The caseworker documents in OR-Kids the attempts made to contact the individuals and the reason for closing the case, if closure at that time is approved by the supervisor.
   D. The department, parents, legal guardians or former foster child determines that the FSS Case plan no longer is appropriate or effective.
   E. A child who had been voluntarily placed in substitute care based on a parent’s or guardian’s request for voluntary placement has returned to the parent’s home.
   F. A child who had been placed in substitute care based upon a Voluntary Custody Agreement has returned to the parent’s home.
   G. The court dismisses a pre-adjudicated delinquent child from the department’s custody or the court relieves ODHS of the need to provide services to a pre-adjudicated delinquent, when services were previously ordered by the court.
   H. Another community service resource accepts responsibility for providing services to the child, former foster child or family.

II. When closing the family support services case after the final visit with the family has occurred, the caseworker must:
   A. Ensure all case notes are completed.
   B. Ensure the case file is in order and ready for filing.
   C. Ensure all services to the family have been closed.
   D. Complete the CF 333g Case Closure narrative in OR-Kids.
   E. Obtain the signature of the supervisor.

The supervisor’s role

I. Regularly consult with the caseworker to determine whether it remains appropriate to keep the case open.

II. Direct the caseworker to close the case or approve the caseworker’s request to close the case when appropriate.
III. Provide consultation to the caseworker when needed on case closure.

IV. Support the worker in ending the relationship between the family and the department.

V. Confirm the closing of the case and approve the CF 333g Case Closure narrative.

VI. Review and confirm that case documentation is completed.

VII. Review and approve closing the case.

Appendix 7.3: Additional supports for adoptive families and legal guardians
Additional supports for adoptive families and legal guardians

Additional supports for adoptive families

Adoption assistance

At the time of an adoption through Oregon’s child welfare system, families apply for adoption assistance (AA), which is financial and/or medical assistance to help with the costs associated with the adoptive child’s needs. Families may apply for and access a monthly payment, reimbursement for nonrecurring costs associated with an adoption finalization, special payments and medical assistance, or they may sign an ‘agreement only’ which allows the family to access assistance if or when a need for payment and/or medical coverage arises prior to the child’s 18th birthday. An adoptive family also may call their AA coordinator to request renegotiation of the existing financial assistance through AA if there are changes in the child’s needs or the family’s circumstances.

Though extremely rare, a family may not have applied for adoption assistance. The family may contact an AA coordinator to request an opportunity to apply for AA after the adoption has been finalized if there are extenuating circumstances.

Families who adopt children from other states’ child welfare systems also may have access to such services from their child’s state of residence prior to the adoption.

Adoption assistance coordinators in the central office are available to speak directly with families who have questions related to insurance coverage and financial supports that may be available through the AA program.

Voluntary Adoption Registry and assisted search

The Adoption Registry program maintains a registry of persons wishing to receive adoption information and provides information to eligible adoptees and eligible relatives of adoptees. The individuals involved in an adoption (adoptive parents, adult adoptees and birth families) seeking identifying or non-identifying information or requesting assistance in searching for others involved in an adoption should be referred to the Adoption Registry and assisted search programs at the central office adoption unit.

Oregon Post Adoption Resource Center (ORPARC)

ODHS also contracts with the Oregon Post Adoption Resources Center to provide a variety of services such as training, information and referrals, access to a lending library, assistance with planning for respite care, and referrals to and assistance with the development of support groups. These services are available to families who adopt children through any state’s child welfare system, as verified by their inclusion in the state’s adoption assistance program, and to families who receive guardianship assistance through Oregon’s child welfare system.

As a caseworker, you may not be well-versed in adoption issues or you may want some quick and helpful information about some of the special needs that children in post-adoptive or post-guardianship homes may face. There are handy packets of information about a variety of children’s special needs that can be e-mailed or mailed to caseworkers and eligible families. Topics explored in these no-return-necessary packets include the needs of a child who has been sexually abused; self-destructive behavior; ADD/ADHD; attachment; effective discipline; parenting children who have been exposed to methamphetamine; transracial parenting; mood disorders; and alcohol-related neurodevelopmental disorders. Caseworkers also can borrow materials from ORPARC’s lending library, obtain lists of adoptive family support groups, attend trainings, and receive information about and referral to services or providers who may be geared toward the unique needs of adoptive and guardian families. You may visit ORPARC on-line at www.orparc.org or call toll-free 1-800-764-8367.

Additional supports for legal guardians

Several supports are available to some legal guardians that do not require contact with the child welfare office to initiate services. However, families may not know about the resources or the process to access these services.

Subsidized guardianship

Some children who were in ODHS custody at the time the guardianship was established may have qualified for ‘guardianship assistance,’ which refers to financial or medical benefits to guardian families for costs associated with the needs of the child under their guardianship. If enrolled in this program, the family likely is receiving a payment similar to a foster care payment.

In a guardianship, unlike an adoption, the biological family case file remains accessible, and historical information about the child and birth family also can be accessed by the caseworker if more information is needed about the child. A closed provider file may have additional information about the guardians.

Oregon Post Adoption Resource Center (ORPARC)

Please refer to the full description in the above section entitled “Additional supports for adoptive families” for more information about ORPARC services available for people who have an assisted guardianship through the department.
Chapter 8
Certification and Management of Applicants and Certified Families

Section 1: Approval of Potential Adoptive Resources
Approval of Potential Adoptive Resources

Overview of ODHS Certified Families

A child is placed in substitute care to manage child safety, health and well-being and to promote an environment and circumstances where the child’s family of origin can stabilize, access resources to strengthen parental protective capacities, and in most cases, allow a child to return home. In cases when a child or sibling group are not able to remain in their family home, substitute care provides a safe and nurturing environment while waiting to return home or an alternate permanent plan has been implemented.

Every certified family and each approved potential adoptive resource must understand and demonstrate the characteristics and ability to provide a safe and protective environment, and must understand that Child Welfare’s first priority is family reunification. Each foster, relative caregiver or adoptive applicant must participate in the Oregon SAFE home study process.

In addition, potential adoptive resources must also understand the importance of and demonstrate the ability and willingness to sustain parenting responsibilities for a child until the child reaches adulthood. A person who approaches Child Welfare to adopt a child is referred to as a “potential adoptive resource”. The applicant completes a home study process, and, at the completion of that process Child Welfare staff make a decision whether or not to approve the applicant as a potential adoptive resource. The person becomes certified when selected as an adoptive resource for a child, prior to the time the child is placed in the home, and remains certified until the adoption is finalized.

A. Certification and Adoption Worker Activities

Certification and management of applicants and certified families and approval of potential adoptive resources includes:

- Assessment of applicants through the Oregon SAFE home study process
- Training provided to all applicants and certified families.
- Using a Customer Service approach for the retention of certified families
- Confirmation of safe environments during all home visits
- Providing support to applicants and certified families
- Monitoring certification compliance and when needed issue specific certification actions.

For some certifiers, supervision of a child’s placement in an adoptive home is required. The person responsible for this function is determined by the local district and/or local child welfare office.

B. Preferences for Certification

The Department is required by Oregon state and federal law, and Oregon administrative rule to give placement preference to a child’s relatives. The placement preference required is in the following order:

NOTE: For cases identified as ICWA, placement preference is dictated by the ICWA laws and procedures.
• First to relatives, as defined in Oregon Administrative Rules in which a person might be defined as a relative: A person related to the child or young adult through a parent, including a putative father, unless the relationship has been dissolved by adoption of the child, young adult, or parent. This includes:
  1. Blood relatives that have prefixes of grand, great, or great-great.
  2. Half blood relatives with prefixes of grand, great, or great-great. Individuals with one common biological parent are half-blood relatives.
  5. First Cousins and First Cousins once-removed (a parent’s cousin).
  6. The spouses of any of the above-listed relatives.
  7. The ex-spouses of any of the those persons listed in 1. – 6. if the child or young adult had a relationship with the child PRIOR to entering substitute care.
  8. Siblings, including siblings that are related through a putative father.

The Department may also consider Kin, or distantly related persons. This includes those persons who the family or child identifies, or the person self-identifies, as being related to the child by blood, adoption, or marriage but to a degree other than specified in 1-8.

• A person related to the child but not always through the child’s parent. This includes:
  1. A person defined as a relative by the child’s tribe if the child is an Indian child under the ICWA/ORICWA or is in the legal custody of the tribe.
  2. A person defined as a relative of a refugee child.
  3. A child’s step parent or former step parent if the child had a relationship to the former stepparent prior to coming into substitute care.
  4. The registered domestic partner or former registered domestic partner of the child’s parent if the child had a relationship with the former registered domestic partner prior to coming into substitute care.
  5. The adoptive parent of a child’s sibling.
  6. The unrelated legal or biological parent of a child’s half sibling if that half sibling is living with the unrelated parent.

The Department may also consider kith, or a person not related to the child by blood or through legal means but are identified by the child or the family and are considered by the child or child’s family as a relative. These people must have an emotionally significant relationship with the child or the family and are identified by the child or the family. There is no comprehensive list of such persons but may include Godparents, neighbors, close family friends, spiritual advisors, or congregation members, and others identified by the child or family.

Note:: The emotionally significant relationship must have occurred prior to the child entering substitute care.
• A person who has a caregiver relationship with the child. Persons with a caregiver relationship are defined by Oregon Revised Statute. These are persons who meet all of the following criteria:

1. Have had physical custody of the child
2. The child must have depended upon the relationship to meet the child’s needs.
3. Lived in the same household as the child for specific periods of time listed below.
4. This relationship must have existed:
   a. For at least 12 months immediately preceding the initiation of a dependency proceeding;
   b. For at least 6 months during a dependency proceeding, if that person is a relative or;
   c. For half the child’s life if the child is less than 6 months of age.
5. This may include an unrelated foster parent only when the relationship has continued for at least 12 months.

NOTE: When multiple relatives are available as a potential substitute care resource, the caseworker will be making decisions about which relative(s)- kith or kin- will be brought to the attention of the certifier, along with a request to be considered for certification. Policies including Placement Matching 413-070-0600 & Search for and Engagement of Relatives 413-070-0060 as well as procedure manual Chapter 4, section 4 highlight some of the considerations made by the caseworker, including but not limited to:

1) Talking with the child’s parents, other family members, and when possible, the child, about how to best maintain family ties and to gather their input about the best substitute care resource within the family system. A family meeting is one good way to obtain such input;

2) Utilizing information regarding the child’s unique safety, permanency, and well-being needs, identifying which potential substitute caregiver has the capacities and qualities to meet the child’s needs;

3) Ability to place a child with siblings who are in substitute care, to be with person who has the closest existing personal relationship with the child when more than one person is requesting to be a placement resource, to allow the child to continue in the same school/educational placement,

4) Gathering information to determine the relative who can and will meet the child’s needs for safety and who can be certified by the Department.

When the caseworker can articulate to a child’s relatives information about the opportunities and requirements associated with being assessed to become a relative caregiver, relatives are better informed about how decisions are made and can give better input to the Department about the relative who is the most appropriate person to be considered as a relative caregiver. The ‘Options for Relatives’ brochure, form ODHS 9360, provides some of this important information to relatives.

• Lastly, the order of preference for certification ends on an unrelated person or foster parent. Sometimes, relatives or other persons who are known to the child are not available or appropriate, and cannot be certified by the Department. It is important to recruit, train, certify and retain a pool of qualified foster parents to provide safe and protective care for children who are placed in the Department’s care and custody.
C. Placement Matching

Regardless of the order of preference in the selection of a placement resource, ensuring that the child’s needs for safety, health, well-being, and permanency are met while in substitute care takes priority. When determining whether a particular certified family can meet these needs, follow the placement matching procedures in Chapter 4, Section 2 and 3: Match the child’s needs with a certified family’s ability.

D. Working with Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities

- When children have intellectual or developmental disabilities (I/DD), they may be eligible for services through the Office of Developmental Disability Services (ODDS) via the K Plan. This plan provides supports to a person with I/DD who is living in home and community settings. The following are considered ‘in-home’ for the purposes of the K Plan: living with a biological parent; placed in a Child Welfare paid foster care placement; living with a guardian; or living with an adoptive family.
- For children with I/DD who require the use of foster care, the general expectation is that caseworkers utilize Child-Welfare paid foster placements, rather than ODDS-paid foster care placements, when a child who is eligible for I/DD services first enters substitute care or when a child who was already in substitute care is newly determined eligible for I/DD services through ODDS. For other children, whose current placement is already being paid for by ODDS, the caseworker, foster parent, and the Community Developmental Disability Program (CDDP) service coordinator may discuss the child’s best interests, and consider whether changing to Child Welfare paid placement may be preferable, based on the individual child’s needs and circumstances. Utilizing Child Welfare paid placements may increase the chance of achieving legal permanency, and allows for some ‘in-home’ supports to be provided by the ODDS system, via the K-Plan. Collaboration between the Child Welfare caseworker and CDDP service coordinator is necessary to determine the least restrictive placement that is in the best interest of the child. Refer to Chapter IV, Section 14 of the Procedure Manual, for additional information.

The Inter-Program Placement Agreement between Child Welfare and ODDS provides the guidelines and practices for Inter-Program use of Child Welfare certified foster homes and ODDS certified child foster homes. This does not include ODDS certified adult foster homes.

- There is only one certificate and one certifying program for the foster home. Collaboration and communication regarding use of the other program’s home must occur in advance of utilizing a home certified by another program. For more information, refer to procedure manual Chapter 9, section 4.
- When the program paying for the placement differs from the program certifying the placement, the Inter-Division Foster Care Placement Form MSC 5031 must be utilized. For example, if utilizing an ODDS certified child foster home for a child whose placement will be a Child Welfare paid placement, form 5031 must be used. Likewise, if ODDS is seeking use of a Child Welfare certified home for placement of an ODDS-paid foster placement, form 5031 must be used.
- Adult DD foster homes, Adult DD Group Homes or Adult DD Facilities licensed by the Office of Developmental Disability Services can be used when:
  1. The young adult is 18 years of age or older and is receiving Adult I/DD services through ODDS and is placed in an ODDS-licensed adult foster home, adult group home, or adult facility, by the adult DD case worker.

2. A child who will be eligible for Adult DD services on their 18th birthday, whose placement needs will best be met by the Child Welfare-certified foster home they are currently residing in, and whose placement will be determined and paid for by Adult DD services, can remain in the Child Welfare-certified home. This requires a Child Welfare Program Manager approval and Adult DD licensing approval of a variance if the certified provider intends to continue providing foster care to children in the Department’s custody while also providing an Adult DD placement for the young adult. Steps to initiate this process should be taken well in advance of the child’s 18th birthday.

3. If Child Welfare is paying for the placement in an Adult DD Foster Home, the local Child Welfare Office must certify the home prior to placement. There is no Inter-Program Agreement allowing for Child Welfare ODHS to honor the license/certificate that is issued by the Adult DD system.

- Provider Entry into OR-Kids:
  1. When a child/youth young adult in Child Welfare custody is placed into a foster home or residential facility that is licensed by DD Services, Central Office will open/update and maintain DD providers and complete annual renewals in OR-Kids.

Child Welfare caseworkers placing children with DD licensed providers must send an email to CW DD Placements with notification to request that a DD provider be created (or updated) in OR-Kids. Include in the email:

- Child/youth young adult name; OR-Kids case number and person number;
- Date of placement;
- Provider’s full name (include both provider’s name if more than one);
- Provider’s full address; and
- Provider’s date of birth, social security number or any other identifying information you have (for both provider’s if more than one).

The assigned Central Office worker will send an email to the Child Welfare case worker to confirm the provider has been opened/updated, so the child’s placement may be input into OR-Kids.

2. Central Office Child Welfare staff open and maintains: Child DD Group Homes & Child DD Facilities, Adult DD Foster Homes when placement is paid by DD & Adult DD Group Homes or Facilities.

   a. The local Child Welfare Office should email the DD Group Homes dedicated email address at: DDGroup.Homes@ODHSoha.state.or.us, providing the following information:

   For Adult DD Foster Home:
   - Provider(s) Full name, DOB, and marital status
   - Provider Address (note if physical address and mailing address differ- provide both)
   - Provider’s Phone #
   - Date of placement
- Name and DOB of child/young adult being placed
- Local office from which child is being placed

For child DD group home/facility & For Adult DD group home/facility:
- Name of agency that license the group home
- Name of group home (if there is one)
- Address of group home (if physical address and mailing address differ, note that and provide both)
- Group Home/Facility Phone #
- Date of placement
- Name and DOB of child/young adult being placed
- Local office from which child is being placed

Child Welfare certifiers with DD providers assigned to their workload, must change the designated local office to Central Office and send an email to CWDD.Placements@dhsoha.state.or.us with notification that the provider has been designated to Central Office.

Below are the steps to change the designation:

1. The certifiers is assigned to the Provider (Ensure all work is complete before taking this step as it will end the user's ability to complete)
2. Navigate to Provider Work > Maintain Physical Address
3. Select Central Office from the “Designated Branch” dropdown menu and save

After the certifier has changed the office designation to Central Office, send an email to CWDD.Placements@dhsoha.state.or.us notifying Central Office of the change. Please include the following information:

- Provider #
- Provider’s full name (include both provider’s name if more than one)
- Name and DOB of all children/young adult placed in the home at the time of reassignment.

From that point forward, all annual renewals and licensing actions will be completed by Central Office/CW DD Placement staff. The physical file that the local office was keeping may be destroyed.
Chapter 8

Section 2: The Certification Process
The Certification Process

Overview

The certification process is an assessment of a family’s ability to provide for the safety, well-being, health, and permanency needs of children in substitute care. It includes an assessment of the physical environment as well as an assessment of the dynamics of the family system. The assessment includes the applicant’s ability to manage the demands and stressors of a certified family. There are many tools that a certifier uses in the information gathering and assessment process. These include but may not be limited to questionnaires, medical forms, financial forms, the safety assessment home and surroundings, criminal history checks, child welfare checks, references, mental health forms (if applicable), psychosocial inventories, SAFE Desk Guide, and use of clinical supervision with a certification supervisor. This section discusses the steps and assessment necessary to issue a Certificate of Approval. For guidance on the home study process, see section 3.

There are two types of full foster care certificates issued by Child Welfare: Certificate of Approval or Child-Specific Certificate of Approval. Applicants for a Certificate of Approval usually do not know the children prior to placement and may care for children from several caseworkers at a time. Child-specific certificates are issued for certified families who care for a specific child or children for whom the Department determines a placement is needed. Both types of certified families must meet the certification standards. However, in the case of child-specific certificates, there is an expedited process that allows a certificate to be issued prior to a full SAFE home study being completed. This certificate is called a Temporary Certificate and is only issued to applicants applying for a specific child.

- Form series 1091 is one tool to help track specific procedures for assessing and issuing these types of certificates. The 1091 series broken into different certification types:
  - 1091a Temporary Certificate Checklist
  - 1091b Convert Temporary Certificate to a full Child-specific Certificate of Approval Checklist
  - 1091c General Applicant Checklist
  - 1091d Renewal Checklist
  - 1091e Adoption Only Application Checklist

Note: When a completed application is received, the Department must determine whether to approve or deny the application within 180 days of receipt, unless the application is withdrawn, or the Program Manager or designee extends the period to assess the application. A completed application is needed prior to starting the assessment process of the applicant(s).

- In both types of full certificates, the same tools are used, and the same level of assessment is required, but a slightly different process is followed. The processes will be described step by step in this section. The tools are:
  1. Application (form 1260A)
  2. Consent for Criminal History Checks (in Oregon and out of state/country, if applicable) including fingerprinting (form 1011F)
  3. Child Welfare Background Checks (in Oregon and out of state/country, if applicable)
4. SAFE Questionnaires I and II
5. Financial Form (form 1291)
6. Medical A Form (form 1257A) and Medical B Form (form 1257B) (Medical B form, if applicable)
7. Mental Health Form (form 1258) (if applicable)
8. References
9. Safety Assessment Home and Surroundings (form 979)
10. SAFE Desk Guide Ratings
11. Psychosocial Inventory
12. Oregon SAFE Home Study
13. Clinical supervision with certification supervisor

NOTE: There are instances in which the Child Welfare does not need to assess an applicant:

1. The applicant has had a previous application for certification denied or if has been revoked during the five years prior to the date on the application;
2. The applicant is seeking to care for a specific child or young adult who is not in the care or custody of the Department;
3. The applicant is seeking to care for a specific child or young adult the Department has determined does not require a placement change. This is not to be used to circumvent the rules around placement preference with relatives, people with a caregiver relationship, and placement with siblings. The Diligent Relative Search should always be utilized to help determine placement preference and matching with relative connections. The Department can choose to assess another relative even if the Department is not planning on moving the child from their current placement.
4. The applicant is seeking to care for a specific child or young adult for whom Child Welfare has not received a request for a home study under the Interstate Compact for the Placement of Children (ICPC).

NOTE: Current relative placement does not want to be a permanent placement resource and Child Welfare has decided to assess another relative who is interested in being a placement resource. If Child Welfare is proceeding to deny the application, talk to the applicant and provide them with the opportunity to voluntarily withdraw the application. If the applicant does not wish to voluntarily withdraw, staff with the AAG to determine ability to proceed to deny the application.

General Applicant

An applicant for the general population of foster children is commonly referred to as a General Applicant, and the certificate is referred to as a Foster/Adopt Regular Certificate in OR-Kids. The type of certificate the family will receive will be a Certificate of Approval and lists the number of children who may be placed in the home. A General Applicant family receives a full assessment, and a written SAFE home study is completed and approved by a certification supervisor prior to receiving a certificate or placing children in the home. The assessment process begins when the Department receives a completed application. It may be mailed to or dropped off at the local office, may be received when the family begins to attend training, or may be received when the certifier makes their first home visit to the family.

Procedure

- Upon receipt of the application, forms and consent to conduct background checks:
  1. Review the application and any other forms received from the applicant(s). In OR-Kids, begin the process to open a Provider Record via the Home Inquiry.

NOTE: For opening a Home Inquiry, visit the Business Process Guide: Home Inquiry.

  2. Begin checking criminal history of each applicant and adult member of the household, including providing information on obtaining fingerprints once the signed application and signed consents for background checks have been received. Fingerprinting should be completed by using the statewide DAS contract with Fieldprint.

NOTE: When being fingerprinted, subject individuals should follow the instructions provided on the provided scheduling aid. For more information on fingerprinting and BCU, visit the website.

  3. Review information from the Oregon Judicial Information Network (OJIN) or eCourt for all applicants and other adults in the household. Each branch office has access to OJIN/eCourt and should have its own password. Remember to check for all names that the applicant/persons in the household listed. Prior to a certificate being issued, the certifier must assure completion of the criminal records check and fingerprint-based criminal records check on each adult member of the household, as well as any Management Approvals if needed. See section 3 of this chapter for further information on assessing an applicant/adult member of the household’s criminal history. BCU requests criminal history from any state where an applicant has resided within the past 5 years; BCU does not request criminal history from out of country.

NOTE: It is often useful to contact the local police jurisdiction’s records department and request information about any police reports regarding the applicant or other in the household. Consider requesting the local LEA to provide a premise check, which will provide information in regard to any activity at the applicant’s address. Because LEDS, fingerprinting, and OJIN/eCourt only show history of actual arrests, some vital information can be missed. Police reports are generated when a person is investigated for a crime, when a person has police contact, when a person is the complainant in a police report, etc.

- Criminal background checks can also be obtained on any child under 18 at the Department’s discretion. The certifier may consider seeking a background check when in the course of the assessment there is reason to believe that a child under age 18 in the home poses a risk for safety.

- The background check must include a child welfare history check. Conduct a search for each applicant, each adult member of the household, and any respite providers in the OR-Kids system. Member of the household includes anybody living in the home.

- If there is history of child abuse, the certifier must review it, assess whether, and how, the history is relevant to the individual’s ability to care for a child and determine whether to seek management approval in order to certify the family. Management approvals, documented on form 117, are required when anyone in the household has a founded, unable to determine, substantiated, or inconclusive disposition of a child abuse allegation or a similar disposition in another state. If any applicant, potential respite provider, child care provider, or adult in the household does not have founded, substantiated, unable to determine or inconclusive allegations but does have unfounded allegations or closed at screening reports, review and consider the information learned in the assessment of the family. This information is discussed with the supervisor, but these results do not require management approval in order to certify.

- If the applicant or adult member of the household has lived outside the state of Oregon in the previous 5 years, a Child Welfare background check from that state(s) must be received and assessed. If the applicant or adult member of the household who lived out of state has a child welfare history from another state with similar dispositions to a Founded or Unable to Determine, the certifier must review it, assess whether and how the history is relevant to the individual’s ability to care for a child and determine whether to seek management approval in order to certify the family.

NOTE: BCU requests child welfare history from any state where the applicant reports having resided within the past 5 years. If the applicant resided in another state more than 5 years ago, the certifier would have to contact the other state to obtain the child welfare history, if the certifier or supervisor has concerns that warrant the need for the information.

- If the applicant or adult in the household has lived outside of the country in the previous 5 years, a Child Welfare background check from that country must be submitted. It may take time to receive a response from the other country, and this should not delay the assessment process. The certifier should work with their supervisor to determine if an appropriate amount of time has passed and whether the attempts made to receive information from that country are adequate, if the certifier is unable to receive a response.

  - BCU does not request child welfare history from other countries. The certifier can make a request through the American Embassy offices of that country. The embassy may have information or suggestions of where to seek criminal history and child welfare checks in that country. The applicants or adult member of the household would need to sign a release of information. The certifier can also make an effort to contact the Department of Human Services in those countries, requesting how the agency may be able to assist in information gathering, or if they have any record on these families. Accessing the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services site may yield contacts in countries who hold a child abuse registry.

  - If an applicant or adult member of the household was in the military, ask the applicant/adult member of the household to sign a release of information and attempt to contact the government officials in that country and the military branch to see if there was any criminal or child welfare history, to their knowledge, while living abroad.

- If one of the applicants or adult member of the household has criminal history and/or child welfare history, consult with the supervisor to determine whether a management approvals should be sought for the purpose of moving forward with the applicant(s). If a management approval is needed for either/both criminal history or child welfare history, refer to Section 3 of this chapter. Management approvals need to be completed prior to issuance of a certificate. Request for a management approval for criminal history is documented on form 1011D; request for Management Approval for child welfare history is documented on form 117.

- Prior to the initial home visit, the certifier:
1. Reviews Questionnaire 1 and any other application packet materials received and completes the Harvesting Sheet.

2. The Questionnaire I and Harvesting Sheet is shared with supervisor for clinical supervision.

- Schedule the first home visit with the applicant(s).

- At the initial home visit:

  1. The first home visit includes meeting with all applicants and is predominantly an information-gathering, relationship-building appointment for discussing motivation and for seeing the home environment. If there are two applicants, and one is not available, schedule a second visit to meet the second applicant. The certifier:

     (a) Verifies identification of all applicants and adult members of the household.

     (b) Provides and assists the applicants with any incomplete paperwork that is required. If not previously provided, provide a copy of the Oregon Foster Child Bill of Rights (CF 9014) and the Oregon Sibling Bill of Rights (CF 0262), and the Foster Parent Bill of Rights (CF 1019).

     (c) Informs the applicants of Orientation and Foundations Training, including the schedule, how to register, and what is required.

     (d) Provides a copy of Foster Home Certification rules (413-200-0260 – 413-200-0424) to the applicant(s) if they do not already have one and discusses the requirements and/or answers any questions.

     (e) Conducts a walk-through of the home, using the Safety Assessment: Home and Surroundings form (form 979), and points out areas that may need some modification in order to meet certification standards (see below for completing form 979).

- When conducting a walk-through, use the Safety Assessment: Home and Surroundings (form 979), and take the following steps:

  1. Determine whether safe and appropriate sleeping arrangements exist based upon the individual characteristics, behaviors, and needs of a child or children. If the applicants believe they are willing or may be willing later to provide care for an infant (child 0-12 months old), review the following requirements with the applicants. Specific requirements for safe sleep for infants 0-12 months:

      ■ Administrative Rule: 413-200-0335(1b)

      ■ Sharing the same sleep surface with a child under the age of 12 months is prohibited.

      ■ A child under the age of 12 months must be placed on their back for sleep.

      ■ Use of crib bumpers, pillows or other soft materials in the sleeping area of a child under the age of 12 months is prohibited.

Procedure:

Discuss with the applicant/certified family the importance of safe sleep for infants.

- Certified families are prohibited from sleeping in the same bed as an infant in their care or sharing any sleep surface. Bed-sharing refers to an infant and one or more adults or children sleeping together on any surface, not necessarily a bed; they could be sharing a surface such as a couch, chair or futon. Caregivers are prohibited from bed-sharing with an infant in foster care. This applies for nighttime sleep as well as nap time. Room sharing is ok and even encouraged. Room sharing refers to an infant sleeping in the same room as a caregiver or other household member. When room sharing the infant is on a separate surface that meets the safe sleep needs of infants.

- Emphasize that all infants in care must be placed on their back to sleep. Infants are less likely to choke on their backs. In fact, placing an infant on their back is the most effective action for caregivers to reduce SIDS.

- In addition, let them know that no soft materials may be placed in the crib. Babies that sleep on soft surfaces or are placed with soft, squishy objects are at risk for SIDS or suffocation. Soft objects and loose bedding can obstruct an infant’s nose and mouth. Examples of soft surfaces or objects include:
  - Soft mattresses
  - Pillows
  - Blankets, comforters, quilts
  - Other loose bedding (such as non-fitted sheets)
  - Sheepskins
  - Bumper pads
  - Stuffed toys
  - Infant positioner (products designed to keep an infant in a certain position, such as wedges, padded tubes or mats with side bolsters)

- Explain to the applicant(s) and adult members of the household the reasons for these requirements and that there is research which supports that these actions reduce the risk of infant death. Acknowledge that this information may be different than what they learned at the time that they may have parented an infant, but that we need to follow current medical research.

- Observe the planned sleeping environment in which an infant would be sleeping if there is a plan for the applicant to provide care for an infant. Confirm there is a flat, firm sleep surface free from any sleep hazards. Document this observation on form 979 when there will be an infant placed in the home.

- At times a certified family that was not approved for infants and did not plan to ever take an infant has an infant placed in their home. When this occurs, it is important to go over the infant safe sleep requirements and ensure the certified family is prepared to meet the requirements. It is possible that a crib or bassinet may need to be purchased before an infant can be placed in the home.

- Upon placement of an infant in the home, discuss with the certified family the sleep environment and document the sleeping environment of the infant in provider notes immediately upon observation. Provider notes should include a description of the sleep environment, the caregivers current/planned sleep practices and efforts to provide information on safe sleep. Document the caregivers understanding of safe sleeping arrangements for infants and any potential barriers to the caregiver’s acceptance of safe sleeping arrangements for infants.
• Inquire with the applicant(s) any discussions they will have with other caregiver supports (babysitters, respite care providers, and child care providers) regarding safe sleep practices.

NOTE: Although we do not have any policy requirements about genders and rooms, if a youth identifies as transgender, non-binary (NB), is gender fluid, or gender non-conforming (GNC), the caseworker/certifier should ask the youth in private conversations about what is most comfortable to them for sleeping arrangements. Asking the youth whether they feel more comfortable sharing a room with male- or female-identified children, or occupying their own room, and/or having the opportunity to have privacy when changing, doing grooming or other ‘getting ready’ activities can be a way to add comfort and safety for transgender, non-binary, GNC, gender fluid, or otherwise gender diverse youth when sharing a room. Accommodate their wishes whenever feasible. Some youth are GNC or gender fluid and may not identify as male or female, so room-sharing with the gender the youth identifies with may be more challenging.

1. When a home is connected to a public water supply, assume the drinking water to be safe. When a home has a private well, inquire as to whether the water has been tested and, if so, when and with what results. If it has not been tested within the previous two years, recommend that the applicant have it tested for bacteria, nitrates and arsenic.

2. Confirm that a working telephone is available to the home. A working telephone may be a home phone, a cellphone, or even a neighbor’s phone if that neighbor can confirm that the applicant can use the phone as needed.

NOTE: If the applicant(s) primary working phone is a cellphone, inquire and make a plan for how a foster child/young adult would have access to phone, especially in the event the cellphone is not available to the child/young adult in an emergency. Per the Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights, a child/young adult needs to have access to a working phone.

3. Ensure that there is equipment for the safe preparation, storage, serving and clean up of food by confirming that the refrigerator and cooking appliances work and that the surfaces upon which food will be prepared and served are sanitary.

4. Ensure safe storage and administration of all medications in the household. Consider the age, developmental level, and needs of the child(ren) and young adults who may be placed in the home. Consider privacy information regarding children’s health and medical needs as well as safety from intentional or accidental ingestion.

5. Ensure that basic first aid supplies such as Band-Aids, ointments, tape, tweezers, gauze, scissors, cold packs, and supplies for basic wound care are available.

6. Observe the home’s heating system to ensure is appears operational. Inquire as to whether it has ever been inspected and, if so, when. If it has not been inspected in the previous two years, recommend that the applicant schedule an inspection with a local heating/cooling system company.

7. Walk through the entire home, including all rooms and out-buildings, to ensure that the interior and exterior are free from hazards to a child or young adult’s safety and wellbeing. If a building is a separate residence that is self-contained and is rented or owned by another person(s), a walk-through of the separate residence is not required.

NOTE: Sometimes it can feel confusing to determine whether another adult living on the property of the applicant is also considered an adult member of the household. The certifier needs to assess all buildings and rooms on the property. If there is a separate and self-contained residence in which an individual is living, ask key questions around that individual’s presence in and around the applicant’s home. These questions may include: where does the individual conduct their main living (cooking, food preparation, toileting and bathing)? If it is determined that the individual is coming into the home to conduct main living, the certifier should consider this person as an adult member of the household and conduct appropriate background checks and assessments.

8. Inspect play equipment for loose hardware such as screws, nuts, bolts, etc. and to ensure it is safe for children.

9. If the home has swimming pools, hot tubs, wading pools or other water hazards, observe whether there are physical/environmental safeguards that make the water inaccessible to a child or young adult unless reasonably supervised. Inquire as to how the applicant intends to ensure no children or young adults in care will have access unless responsibly supervised. Consider the age and development of who the family plans to care for. Check with the local ordinances for specific water hazards. Most often, this information can be found on the county website. Document any plan made to ensure the safeguarding of children around potential water hazards in a provider note.

10. When ensuring that poisonous chemicals/cleaning supplies are stored safely, consider paint products, cleaning agents, car/auto-related products, hobby and recreational supplies, pesticides, and medications.

11. Always consider the needs, development, and abilities of the child when determining if a pet or other animal in/around the home is safe.

12. When ensuring that hunting/sporting equipment is kept safely and securely, inquire also about firearms. While there isn’t a requirement that firearms be stored in a specific manner, discuss with the applicant who has firearms how the applicant intends to ensure the children/young adult’s safety. Dangerous hunting or sporting equipment is to be kept safely and securely inaccessible to a child or young adult.

13. Ask the applicant to demonstrate smoke alarms are working by pressing the test button on each. There must be a working smoke alarm in each bedroom where a child or young adult sleeps as well as at least one working smoke alarm on each floor of the home. Working smoke alarms must be in place within 24 hours of the applicant becoming certified.

14. When checking for carbon monoxide detectors, be aware that they do not have to be installed on the ceiling unless they are part of a CO2 detector/smoke alarm combination. They may be plugged into an outlet, installed on the wall, or even sit on a table. Ask the applicant to demonstrate that the detectors work by pressing the test button. There must be at least one working carbon monoxide detector within 15 feet of a bedroom where a child/young adult sleeps as well as one carbon monoxide detector on each floor. Working carbon monoxide detectors must be in place within 24 hours of the applicant becoming certified.

15. Fire extinguishers can be stored anywhere in the house, but the kitchen or laundry rooms are the recommended locations. There must be at least one operable fire extinguisher rated 2-A:10-B-C or higher. Fire extinguishers must be in place within 24 hours of the applicant becoming certified.
16. When assuring that there are two means of exit and rescue, check for obstacles that may block each of them. When there are barred windows in a child/young adult’s bedroom or on another window that would be used as a means of exit, observe the child/young adult operate them.

17. Adequate safeguards around operating fireplaces, wood stoves, or other heating systems need be sufficient enough to prevent a child who developmentally cannot keep themselves safe around them from coming into contact with them. If the fireplace, wood stove, or other heating system does/will not be used, it is not considered to be “operating.”

18. Discuss with the applicant(s) the plan of evacuation in case of an emergency. Ask the applicant to explain their plan for practicing it with the child/young adults within 24 hours of placement and every six months and for evacuating children/young adults who cannot get themselves out of the home in a safe manner.

19. Ensure that all bedrooms for children/young adults have free and clear access to other parts of the house. Ensure that there is at least one secondary exit from the room, such as a window or door, and at least one unrestricted exit. If the home has barred windows, quick-release mechanisms need to be operable on all windows that are barred. The Child Welfare Program Manager may approve the home not have quick release mechanisms on all barred windows, if the family has an adequate evacuation plan in place. If approval is granted, it must be documented on form CF 0017.

20. When doors to rooms in the house have locks on them, observe whether they can be opened from both sides. When they cannot be opened from both sides, instruct the applicant to remove or replace the lock with one that can be opened from both sides, and check the home again once this has been completed.

Note: If a certified home will be utilized for a child with intellectual or developmental disabilities, it will be important to ensure that there is ongoing communication between the caseworker, certifier, and the Community Developmental Disabilities Program (CDDP) service manager. Some modifications, such as allowing for locks on doors to allow additional privacy for people with intellectual or developmental disabilities, may be suggested by the CDDP worker to comply with Home and Community Based Services (HCBS) and Settings regulations. However, for any home certified by Child Welfare, such modifications cannot conflict with our certification standards.

21. Ensure that the home does not utilize electronic monitoring, which is prohibited by Oregon Administrative Rule. Privacy and normalcy for children and young adults in care is important. Video monitoring and listening devices to monitor or record the behavior of a child or young adult is not authorized. The following are not considered electronic monitoring: Door monitors, window alarms, motion detectors, security systems used for general home security, audio or video baby monitors used to monitor a child placed by the Department who is five years of age or under, and monitors approved by a medical or mental health provider. When asked about use of electronic monitoring of behavior, inquire about the following:

- What is the reason somebody is suggesting electronic monitoring of behavior? What behaviors are of concern? By whom? How recently were they occurring?
- Is there a supervision plan in place for one or more children? If no, does that need to be considered? If yes but the supervision plan is not adequate, should/could it be reviewed
Chapter 8 • Section 2: The Certification Process

- How many children/young adults are in the home requiring a high level of supervision?
- Can the certified family continue to care for the number of children/young adults and meet their supervision needs?
- What other options are there for supervision and monitoring of the children/young adults placed in the home?
- What other options are there for supports, services, or activities to be provided for the child or young adult to be more successful?
- In what ways could the certified family alter the daily activities or child welfare alter the schedules of the children/young adults in order to provide the necessary level of supervision?
- Is the electronic monitoring approved by the child/young adult’s physician or mental health provider? What is the purpose of the monitoring?

- When the foster family uses a car for safe and reliable transportation, ensure that it is insured by looking at a copy of the insurance paperwork. Check for the coverage dates to ensure they are current. When viewing the driver's licenses, check the expiration dates. In addition, when the foster family takes placement of children who require child car seats, view the seats to ensure they are the appropriate size and type allowed by current law. For current regulations, refer to the following websites:
  - Car Seat Recommendations by Age
  - Transportation Safety
  - Car Seat Resources

The foster family must not use the car seat for unsupervised infant sleep. Sitting or reclining devices, such as car seats, strollers, swings, infant carriers, and infant slings, are not recommended for routine or unsupervised infant sleep. Infants in these sitting devices may be able to move into a slouched forward position that can cut off their airway and straps do not prevent this.

1. When any of the adults in the home smoke, inquire as to how they plan to prevent the children/young adults from being exposed to any secondhand smoke either in the home or in a vehicle. You may suggest a smoking jacket. If there is an infant in the home, make sure the adults are aware of the increased risk of sleep related infant death as a result of exposure to secondhand smoke. Document this plan.

   - Ensure the form 979 is signed by the certifier and all applicants before a certificate is issued.
   - Complete the first psychosocial inventory (PSI) using the SAFE Desk Guide. Based on all the information learned to this point in the assessment, from Questionnaire I, the application, other certification forms, and the first home visit, rate each of the PSI categories with a 2, 3, 4, or 5.

NOTE: Remember the “Rule of Two.” Any area of the PSI without complete information is given a desk guide rating of a 2 until such time that enough information is known to confidently rate that category.

- Prior to completion of assessment:
  1. Interview applicants regarding their motivation for becoming a certified family. Interviews throughout the assessment process utilize the applicant responses to Questionnaire I and Questionnaire 2. The number of home visits and interviews to cover the information in the Questionnaires vary depending on each individual applicant. Consult with supervisor regarding sequencing and need for additional follow-up.

Note: Questionnaire II is given to the applicant(s) and completed in the certifier’s presence. Do not leave Questionnaire II with the applicant to complete on their own. When there are two applicants, instruct each applicant to complete Questionnaire II individually, without sharing answers with each other or discussing with each other during completion. Explain that Questionnaire II asks about very sensitive family matters. Meet with each applicant individually to discuss the responses, on the same day the Questionnaire II is administered, paying particular attention to questions for which the applicants each provided different responses.

- Complete the PSI desk guide ratings for each psychosocial factor of the PSI after each visit.
- Continue gathering information and interviewing applicants and others until all the information needed to confidently score each psychosocial factor on the PSI is obtained.
- The Final Desk Guide rating is the rating that the certifier needs to consider when determining mitigation and writing the home study.
- Between home visits, ensure all 4 references are gathered and reviewed, all background checks are completed (including fingerprinting results) and assessed, all outstanding paperwork is returned and reviewed, and the applicants are completing or have a plan to complete Foundations Training within the first 12 months of being certified. Use all of the information to gain a fuller understanding of the functioning of the family, and assess the knowledge, skills, and abilities of the applicant family.
- After home visits and interviews are completed:
  1. Once all of the assessment activities are complete, determine mitigation ratings on the PSI. Mitigation is the certifier’s assessment of those issues that received a final desk guide rating of a 3, 4, or 5. Mitigation will be discussed in more detail in Section 3 of this chapter, titled Assessment of an Applicant, of this chapter.
  - After mitigation is complete, consult with the supervisor before writing the home study. Seek input on any psychosocial factors and get guidance on whether any factors will need further assessment.

NOTE: The SAFE Consortium for Children has numerous skill building articles to assist in the assessment process. Foster Care Coordinators can also assist in providing guidance.

NOTE: For further information on writing the home study, please review Section 3.

- After the home study is written, the certification supervisor reviews the study, determines whether more information is needed, if information needs to be edited, and makes the decision to approve or deny the application.
- When the supervisor approves and has signed the study, provide a copy of the study to the applicants for review and signature. Explain that any inaccurate factual information can be corrected but the assessment will not change, unless factual information indicates that a change in the assessment is warranted.

1. The supervisor signature on the home study must be on the same day as or before a certificate is issued.

- If necessary, conduct a final safety walk-through of the home, using form 979.
- In OR-Kids:
  1. Upload all documents related to the certification of the applicant into the provider record of the OR-Kids system. The home study is signed by both the certifier and their supervisor prior to approving the certificate in OR-Kids.
  2. In order to issue the certificate, the certifier must open and launch a certificate from OR-Kids by entering all the information for the home in the home provider record. This includes basic information, characteristics of children the family will accept, and the certification information such as certified services.
  3. After entering all of the information, the certifier completes the certification checklist and launches the certificate.
  4. Submit the request to approve the applicant(s) for a Certificate of Approval to the certification supervisor. The supervisor approves the request in the electronic system. The approval of the certificate is based on the approval date by the supervisor in the electronic system. Once approved, the certifier may print the certificate and sends it to the certified family.

- The instructions for issuing a certificate in OR-Kids can be found in OR-Kids Online.

NOTE: To enter the certification, visit the Quick Reference Guide: Certification.

Supervisor’s Role

- Review the application, Questionnaire I and Harvesting Sheet from the certifier. Meet with the certifier to identify any potential concerns or issues.
- Review the Psychosocial Inventory and Desk Guide Ratings after each home study interview. Meet with the certifier to review Final Desk Guide Ratings and discuss mitigation.
- Review all assessment-related activities and make a determination regarding the application. If approving the final home study, sign and date the home study prior to approving the certificate in OR-KIDS.

Child Specific Certificates: Temporary Certificate

Child Specific Certificates are issued to applicants who wish to provide a placement to a specific child or children. There is an expedited process for issuing a Child Specific Certificate that allows these applicants to be certified prior to issuance of a full SAFE home study or training. The expedited certification process is referred to as a Temporary Certification. The Temporary Certificate issuance can be completed by the caseworker or the certifier, but whenever possible, it is best for a certifier to do it. The procedures that outline the process refer to the certifier, but if a caseworker is completing the expedited process, the same procedure is followed.
Procedure

Upon receipt of request for child specific certification:

1. The expedited assessment process typically begins when a certifier receives a request from a caseworker to certify a relative or other person known to a child. The assessment process usually begins on the same day or within a few days. Gather as much information from the caseworker as possible about the prospective applicant.

2. Contact the applicant as soon as possible to arrange a time to meet at the home and to explain the certification process. Inform the applicant of certain requirements:
   - Physical requirements of the home so that the applicant(s) can begin to prepare their home right away
   - The background checks required (including criminal history and child welfare checks for all adult members of the household)
   - The Child Welfare checks conducted through OJIN/eCourt and OR-Kids. Consents are not needed from the applicants for these database checks, but notify the applicant these checks will be completed.

Prior to going out to the home, conduct background checks in OJIN/eCourt and OR-Kids regarding the applicants and adult members of the household. Ensure all required paperwork necessary for a Temporary Certificate is available and ready. This includes:
   - Application (form 1260A)
   - Consents for background checks for all adults in the household (form 1011F)
   - Safety Assessment: Home and Surroundings (form 979)
   - Copy of the Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights (form 9016) and Oregon Foster Children’s Sibling Bill of Rights (form 0262)
   - Copy of the Oregon Foster Parent Bill of Rights

NOTE: There is additional paperwork that is not required to complete a Temporary Certificate but is required for the full Certificate of Approval and can be left with the applicant(s). If time permits, some of this paperwork can be completed during the first home visit. The additional forms include:

1. Financial Form (form 1291)
2. Medical Form A (form 1257A)
3. Medical Form B (form 1257B) (if applicable)
4. Mental Health Form (form 1258) (if applicable)
5. SAFE Questionnaire I

At the initial home visit:

1. Provide the applicant(s) with a copy of the Foster Home Certification rules (413-200) and explain the importance of the applicant becoming familiar with them
2. Have all applicants and adult members of the household complete and sign form 1011F to consent to background checks.

3. The certifier assists the applicants in completing the required paperwork by answering questions.

- The Safety Assessment: Home and Surroundings, form 979, must be complete except for those items that can be completed within 24 hours. The items that can be delayed by one day include smoke alarms, carbon monoxide detectors, and fire extinguishers. For further information regarding form 979, review section A, General Applicants.

  - If the temporary certificate includes placement of an infant, discuss the Safe Sleep requirements. Observe where the infant will sleep and follow the guidance in Section A, General Applicants.

- If the certifier is working in a district that provides orientation training as part of Foundations, inform the applicants of the requirement to complete orientation within 30 days of being certified and provide them with the schedule. If the certifier is responsible for providing orientation, using form 9800, this first home visit may be a good time to provide the orientation. If not, schedule a time to meet with the applicants within the first 30 days of certification to do so.

- Provide a copy of the Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights to be posted and provide a copy of the Oregon Sibling Bill of Rights (Sibling Bill of Rights must be made available to foster youth but is not mandated to be posted).

- Provide a copy of the Foster Parent Bill of Rights.

- Explain to the applicant(s) that the certification will not be approved until the results of the background checks are obtained and assessed, and a certification supervisor approves the Temporary Certificate. Inform the applicants that they will be notified later that day as to whether they will receive a Temporary Certificate or will require further assessment prior to approval.

- Upon returning to the local office after the initial home visit:

  1. When the certifier returns to the branch office, complete the background checks. The preferred way is to email the completed and signed 10llf to the BCU. (BCU.CW.1011fs@ODHSoha.state.or.us.) If it is after 3:00, and the local office has a LEDS operator they may complete the LEDS check.

NOTE: If any known criminal history exists which requires a fitness determination, the approval for criminal history must be completed prior to issuance of the certificate and placement of children in the home.

  2. If one of the applicants has criminal history, child welfare history, or presents any other concern that could prevent certification, consult with the supervisor to determine whether management approvals should be sought for the purpose of moving forward with the Temporary Certificate that day. In some cases, further assessment is needed prior to making a certification decision. In these cases, notify the caseworker immediately so that other placement resources can be sought for the child. Notify the applicants that further assessment will be conducted before a decision can be made.

  3. If management approval is needed for criminal history or child welfare history, refer to section 3 of this chapter. Management approvals need to be completed prior to issuance of a certificate. Request for management approval for criminal history (and analysis which may lead to disapproval based on criminal history) is documented on form 1011D; request for management approval for child welfare history (and analysis of information which may lead to disapproval based on child welfare history) is documented on form 117.

- When the applicant has a criminal history that is not approved, or fits within the crimes federal law prevents child welfare from approving, notify the applicant and provide him/her the opportunity to voluntarily withdraw the application. If the family chooses not to voluntarily withdraw the application, contact the supervisor and request to staff with the AAG regarding denial of the application.

NOTE: Every time an application is received, a Home Inquiry should be created in OR-Kids. If the family voluntarily withdraws their application or Child Welfare moves to deny an application, this information can be documented in the record along with any materials used during the assessment scanned into the OR-Kids File Cabinet. This is important if the applicant(s) makes contact with Child Welfare in the future, there will be a record of what occurred at the time of withdrawal or denial.

- Complete the child abuse history background checks. If child welfare background checks were not already checked for each applicant and other adults in the home prior to making the home visit, they are completed at this time.

NOTE: If it is known management approvals would be needed for child welfare history, due to an applicant or other adult member of the household having any CPS assessment dispositions that resulted in founded, unable to determine, or a similar disposition, the management approval must be completed prior to issuing the certificate and the information is documented on form 117.

- Obtain two references and document on the SAFE Reference form. In the event that two references cannot be reached in a timely manner, make contact and conduct reference checks within 24 hours of receiving the completed application. The 24-hour period is allowed when:
  1. All four possible references have been called, but no one could be reached.
  2. The expedited certification process occurs late in the evening when references would likely be asleep.

- When all of these actions have been completed, staff the assessment of this home with the certification supervisor. If the assessment indicates it is appropriate to certify, complete the Oregon Temporary Certificate SAFE form, following the prompts, and request approval from the certification supervisor.

NOTE: Following the prompts on the Temporary Certificate SAFE form, write why the applicant(s) are being approved for a Temporary Certificate, including information regarding their relationship to the child(ren) and ability to maintain safety, health and well-being.

- Once the certificate is approved, contact the family and inform them they have been temporarily certified and that further assessment activities will be conducted to consider whether a full Child-Specific Certificate of Approval will be issued. Contact the caseworker and inform the caseworker they can place the child/children in the home. Open the home provider record in the OR-Kids system, and activate the appropriate certification services.

NOTE: For assistance in completing a Temporary Certificate in OR-Kids, use the Quick Reference Guide: Temporary Certificate

- After the applicants are issued Temporary Certificate, complete all the remaining activities and assessment required during the certification process to move toward a full (up to two year) Child Specific Certificate of Approval. These activities are completed as soon as possible up to 180-days. All of the certification assessment activities must be completed prior to issuing a biennial certificate. See part C for further details.

NOTE: There are instances in which completing the assessment within the 180-day period is unattainable. If this occurs, the certifier may seek approval from their supervisor for a 30-day extension of the Temporary Certificate on form 117. If the assessment of the applicant is not yet completed at the end of the 30 day extension, the Program Manager may extend the Temporary Certificate of Approval for more than 30 days.

- For Child Specific certificates, once the child for whom the Department certified the specific placement leaves the home, the certification terminates within 60 business calendar days. When a Temporary Certificate was issued, and the specific child leaves the home, the application is still “live” and child welfare must either proceed to continue to assess for a full Certificate of Approval, deny the application or the applicant may withdraw the application. If the certified family has been issued a full Child Specific Certificate of Approval and would like to become a general applicant family, the family can provide a request to the Department in writing prior to the 60th calendar day after the specific child has left their home. The certifier will provide the family with an Application for Renewal or Change of Status (form CW 1001). The certifier will assess the family’s ability to meet the needs of the general foster population rather than a specific child.

Supervisor’s Role

- Review the application and meet with the certifier to identify any potential concerns or issues.
- Ensure all criminal background and child welfare checks are completed, and any necessary management approvals have been obtained.
- Review all assessment related activities and make a determination regarding issuance of the Temporary Certificate. If approving the Temporary Certificate, sign the Oregon Temporary Certificate template.

Child Specific Certificates: Assessment to Move from a Temporary Certificate to a Full Certificate of Approval

For applicants who are issued a Temporary Certificate and will continue to be providing care for the specific child(ren), the certifier must complete the assessment of the applicant(s) no later than 180 days from the date the Temporary Certificate was issued to determine if a full (up to two year) Child Specific Certificate of Approval should be issued.

In addition to the assessment activities completed to issue the Temporary Certificate, the certifier will take the following actions prior to issuing a Child Specific Certificate of Approval:

Procedure

- Home Visits:
  1. Conduct home visits with the certified family every 90 days. Additional home visits may be completed as necessary. Document each home visit in the Provider Record, under Provider Notes.
NOTE: During each visit, review and assess the family’s ability to meet the specific child’s safety, health and well-being needs as well as compliance with certification standards. Consider utilizing the Confirming Safe Environments checklist in your assessment.

- Gather personal, family, and social information using SAFE Questionnaires, interviews with the certified family and members of the household (adult and minor), adult children not living in the home, and others.

Note: Consider using the SAFE Questionnaire for Adult Children of Applicants as part of the interview and information gathering process.

- Administer Questionnaire II to each applicant in person. Remember, Questionnaire II is given to the applicant(s) and completed in the certifier’s presence. Do not leave Questionnaire II with the applicant to complete on their own. When there are two applicants, instruct each applicant to complete Questionnaire II individually, without sharing answers with each other or discussing with each other during completion. Explain that Questionnaire II asks about very sensitive family matters. Meet with each applicant individually to discuss the responses, on the same day the Questionnaire II is administered, paying particular attention to questions for which the applicants each provided different responses.

- Complete desk guide ratings for each psychosocial factor of the PSI after each home visit.

- Continue gathering information and interviewing applicants and others until all the information needed to confidently score each psychosocial factor on the PSI has been obtained.

- The Final Desk Guide rating is the rating that the certifier needs to consider when determining mitigation and writing the home study.

- Ensure the certified family has completed Orientation training within the first 30 days of issuance of the Temporary Certificate. Discuss the certified family’s training plan to complete Foundations training within the first 12 months of issuance of the Temporary Certificate.

- Ensure completion of the following forms filled out by the certified family:
  1. Medical Report A (form 1257A)
  2. Medical Report B (form 1257B) (if applicable)
  3. Mental Health Form (form 1258) (if applicable)

- While completing the assessment of the certified family during the 180-day period, the certifier will:
  1. Obtain two additional references (for a total of at least four references) using the SAFE Reference form.
  2. Connect with the caseworker(s) of the specific children in the home to discuss the child’s adjustment and appropriateness of placement.
  3. Assure completion of criminal records and fingerprint-based criminal records checks on each applicant and adult member of the household. This includes that any out-of-state criminal and child welfare records have been received, reviewed and assessed. If having trouble receiving notice from out-of-state records, continue to attempt to contact that state and receive a statement from it. If the other state does not have records due to record retention, request a statement from that state indicating such. If out-of-country criminal and/or child welfare checks have not been received, the certifier will staff with their supervisor to determine if sufficient efforts have been made to obtain those records.

- If any additional management approvals are needed, they need to be completed prior to issuance of the Certificate of Approval. Section 3 of this chapter describes further details on these approvals. Management approvals need to be completed prior to issuance of a certificate. Information about any criminal history which requires fitness determination and management decision is documented on form 1011D; Analysis of any child welfare founded or unable to determine or similar dispositions and management decision is request for management approval for child welfare history is documented on form 117.

- Once all information is sufficiently gathered to have high confidence ratings/Final Desk Guide rating, determine mitigation ratings and document them on the PSI. Mitigation is the certifier’s assessment of those issues that received a final desk guide rating of a 3, 4, or 5. Mitigation will be discussed in more detail in section 3, Assessment of an Applicant, of this chapter.

- After mitigation is complete, consult with the supervisor before writing the home study. Seek input on any psychosocial factors, and get guidance on whether any factors will need further assessment.

- If assessment indicates (and supervisor agrees) that it is appropriate to certify, write the home study using the SAFE Oregon Home Study template, following SAFE narrative prompts and instructions.

- Submit home study draft and supporting materials to the certification supervisor for review. The certification supervisor reviews the study, determines whether more information is needed, or information needs to be edited and makes the decision to approve or deny the application. If approving, the supervisor signs the written homestudy. The certification supervisor signature needs to be on the same day as or before the date the Certificate of Approval is issued.

NOTE: The Consortium for Children has numerous skill building articles to assist in the assessment process. Foster Care Coordinators can also assist in providing guidance.

NOTE: For further information on writing the home study, please review section 3.

- When the supervisor approves and has signed the study, provide a copy of the study to the applicants for review and signature. Explain that any inaccurate factual information can be corrected, but the assessment will not change, unless factual information indicates that a change in the assessment is warranted.

- In OR-Kids:
  1. Upload all documents related to the certification of the applicant into the provider record of the OR-Kids system. Remember: The home study is signed by both the certifier and supervisor prior to approving the certificate in OR-Kids.
  2. In order to issue the certificate, the certifier must open and launch a certificate from OR-Kids by going into Additional Certification Actions and selecting “Convert to Certificate of Approval.”
  3. After entering all of the information, the certifier completes the certification checklist and launches the certificate.
4. Submit the request to approve the applicant(s) for a Certificate of Approval to the certification supervisor. The supervisor approves the request in the electronic system. The approval of the certificate is based on the approval date by the supervisor in the electronic system. Once approved, the certifier may print the certificate and send to the certified family.

Supervisor’s Role

- Review the application, Questionnaire I and Harvesting Sheet, Questionnaire II from the certifier. Meet with the certifier to identify any potential concerns or issues.
- Review the Psychosocial Inventory and Desk Guide Ratings after each home study interview. Meet with the certifier to review Final Desk Guide Ratings and discuss Mitigation.
- Review all assessment related activities and materials, and make a determination regarding the application. If approving the final home study, sign the home study on the same day as or prior to the date the Certificate of Approval is approved and issued.

Renewal of a Certificate of Approval

When a certified family is nearing the end of its Certificate of Approval period, the family may decide to renew the certificate for an additional up to two-year period. This process is called renewal and is used for both general applicants and Child Specific certified families.

Procedure

At the certified family’s request, provide the certified family with an Application for Renewal or Change of Status (form 1001).

NOTE: Once an application for renewal is received, Child Welfare must assess the certified family, whether to renew the Certificate of Approval or the Child Specific Certificate of Approval for two additional years. Child Welfare may terminate the assessment process at any time if the certified family is no longer meeting Certification Standards and/or if a renewal application cannot be approved. The certified family would need to either voluntarily withdraw the renewal application or a decision would need to be made to deny the application.

NOTE: The Application for Renewal and consent for background checks (1011F) may be sent to the certified family prior to the certifier’s home visit.

- The Certifier must complete the following to assess the certified family prior to renewing a Certificate of Approval or Child Specific Certificate of Approval:
  - Conduct at least one home visit with the certified family, which includes:
    - Face-to-face contact with each member of the household (including all adults and minor children).
    - Complete SAFE Update Questionnaires with the certified members.

NOTE: Facilitate the SAFE Update Questionnaires just as one would in administering Questionnaire II: Never let the Update Questionnaire leave the sight or control of the certifier; if two applicants, they do not share information nor talk during the process of completing the questionnaires; they are interviewed separately by the certifier immediately. following completion of the Update Questionnaire..

- Interview certified members to determine if anything has changed in the last certification period that impacts the Psychosocial Evaluation.

- Assess the family’s ability to maintain conditions in the home that provide safety and well-being for the children placed in the home and the attributes that confirm a safe environment.

- Review with the certified family the changes that have occurred in the family during the most recent two-year period in the following domains:
  - Life Experiences and Challenges
    - How has the experience of providing substitute care changed the life of this family? What have the certified caregivers learned about themselves? What have they learned about each other?
  - Marriages and Significant Relationships
    - Have any significant relationships changed during the past two-year period? How has the experience of providing substitute care impacted the marriage or significant relationships?
  - Children Living in and Out of the Home
    - How has providing care for other children impacted the biological or adopted children in the family? What have the children learned? How has the family changed? What was gained/lost?
  - Parenting Skills and Values
    - What new parenting skills have the certified caregivers learned/re-learned during the past two years? What is important to the caregivers in their relationship to the children placed in their home?
  - Support System
    - Who does the certified family use for support? How has the family’s support system changed during the past two years? Is it sufficient to meet the need for the difficult task of parenting another person’s child? Has the family participated in local support groups? How has that been helpful? Have they used mentor foster parents? Have they used respite providers? Child care providers?
  - Ability to Work as Part of a Child’s Team
    - How does the certified family perceive the working relationship between them and the department? What worked well? What areas need more attention?
  - Ability to Support Child and Birth Family Relationships
    - How has the certified family worked with the child’s family, including any siblings not also in their care? What has been the level of involvement with the family? How would they like to be involved in the child’s family? What worked well? What could be more effective?
Education and Training
- What education and training were most helpful? What are areas the family would like to have more information/further develop caregiving skills or areas of expertise?

Home and Community
- What community resources have been most useful in addressing children’s needs? How has the certified family connected with local schools, mental health providers, medical providers, other recreational or social activities for the children in their home? Who has the certified family used for support and respite?

Employment and Finances
- Has the family’s employment or financial situation changed? Have household or other family expenses changed?

Health
- What is the general health status of the certified family? Have there been any significant changes in the health status- physical or emotional- of anyone in the family over the past two-year period?

Religion and Spiritual Beliefs
- Has the family’s religion or spiritual beliefs changed significantly during the past two years? How has the family addressed meeting the religious and spiritual needs of the children placed in the family’s home? Has substitute caregiving impacted the family’s religious activities?

- Assure each certified caregiver possesses a valid driver’s license and auto insurance if the certified caregiver will be transporting a child has placed in their home.
- Observe and assess the safety of the physical environment, including walking through each room in the primary residence and each surrounding building and structure on the property. Document on the Safety Assessment, Home and Surroundings (form 979). The assessment of the physical environment of the home determines whether the applicants can safely care for a child. View and assess every room in the home, and the yard or other surrounding outdoor areas, and give special attention to anything in the home that appears to pose a safety concern, even if it is not listed specifically on the CF 979.
- If an infant, ages 0-12 months is placed in the home, discuss with the certified family the importance of Safe Sleep. Observe the sleeping area of the infant, and go over the requirements:
  - Sharing the same sleep surface with a child under the age of 12 months is prohibited.
  - A child under the age of 12 months must be placed on their back for sleep.
  - Use of crib bumpers, pillows or other soft materials in the sleeping area of a child under the age of 12 months is prohibited.
- If an infant is not currently placed in the home but there may be an infant placed in the future, assess the planned sleeping conditions for an infant.
- Document the observation in provider notes including a description of the sleep environment, the caregivers current/planned sleep practices and efforts to provide information on safe sleep. Document the caregivers' understanding of safe sleeping arrangements for infants and any potential barriers to the caregiver's acceptance of safe sleeping arrangements for infants.

- Discuss and confirm completion of required hours of training. Develop a training plan for the next certification period. Update the Training Tab in OR-Kids in the Home Provider with completed training requirements.
  1. Explore with the certified family the areas in which they would like to develop a stronger knowledge base or increase their skill level.
  2. Explore how the family learns best and discuss the variety of training venues available to them for gaining additional skills.

- If not previously received, ensure receipt of signed 1011F forms by all adult members of the household.

NOTE: A fingerprint-based criminal records check is not required unless an applicant or member of the household has lived outside of Oregon for more than 60 consecutive days during the two-year certification period. If an applicant or adult member of the household has lived out of the state of Oregon for more than 60 consecutive days, criminal and child welfare history must be obtained from these states prior to issuing the renewal Certificate of Approval. Out of country checks must be requested and efforts made to obtain information.

- Assure completion of criminal records checks and child abuse background checks on each applicant and on each adult member of the household, age 18 and older (excluding a young adult in the care or custody of the Department) and any previously approved respite providers or child care providers. Criminal records checks are completed by sending in the signed 1011F of the Subject Individual into BCU. Child Abuse History checks are compiled in OR-Kids, or, if the subject individual disclosed that they lived outside of Oregon for more than 60 consecutive days, BCU will request out-of-state checks. Out-of-country checks are not requested by BCU and are the certifier's responsibility to attempt to obtain.

- If new criminal history or child abuse history is received that was not previously assessed, staff with the certification supervisor. If moving forward with renewal for this provider, despite the new information, management approvals are required prior to proceeding with the renewal. Criminal history management approvals are documented on form CF 1011D, while child abuse histories are documented on form CF 0117. If there is a CPS investigation in the certified foster home, wait until the conclusion of the assessment to determine renewal.

- If any assessment activity required for renewal is not yet completed, do not sacrifice the quality of assessment. OAR 413-200-0287(7) “Pursuant to ORS 183.430, if the certified family has submitted a timely Renewal Application and the Department does not complete the activities in sections (3) to (5) of this rule before the stated expiration date on the certified family's Certificate of Approval, the certified family's Certificate of Approval may not be deemed to expire until the Department has issued a new Certificate of Approval or there is a final order denying renewal.” If this situation occurs, the certifier/certification technician is able to extend the certificate in OR-Kids until a thoughtful determination can be completed during renewal. A renewal Certificate of Approval should not be issued until all safety related checks and other activities described in 413-200-0287 are completed.

- Connect with caseworkers who have had children placed in this home to discuss any strengths or concerns of the certified family. It is best to try and connect with caseworkers prior to the home visit with the certified family to ensure if there are any issues/concerns, they may be addressed at that time. If it is not possible to gather that information prior to the home visit, make efforts to gather that information as soon as possible after that visit. Consider reviewing OR-Kids case notes of those children to gather an idea about the needs of those children formally/currently placed in the home.

• If moving forward to renew the Certificate of Approval:
  1. If applicable: Obtain Management Approval from program manager or designee on the CF 117, Request for Management Approval for Specific Rules when, during the assessment, you learn any of the following:
     - When any member of the household is an in-home day care provider.
     - When any member of the household is an adult foster care or in-home adult day care provider.
     - When any member of the household is an adult foster care or in-home adult day care provider, the certified family must also request and receive a variance from DD licensing to become a certified family.
     - The certified person is re-applying to become a relative caregiver is under 21 years of age.

   • If applicable: Obtain child welfare program manager approval if the children placed in the home or the anticipated placement of children in the home will make the number of total children in the home more than 1 certified adult to 4 children; 2 certified adults to 7 children, more than 6 children placed in the home by child welfare; or more than 2 children under the age of 3.

The approval should be based upon:

  1. Allowing a parenting young adult to remain with their child;
  2. Allowing siblings to remain together;
  3. Allowing a child or young adult to be placed with a relative or with a caregiver who has a relationship with the child or young adult; or
  4. Allowing a family with special training or skills to provide care to a child or young adult with specific needs.

• Complete a SAFE Update Home Study. If any new criminal or child welfare history since the last home study, document the new information and what impacts this has to the caregiving. The certification supervisor must review the home study prior to renewing the Certificate of Approval.

• If the supervisor approves the SAFE Update Home Study, the renewal Certificate of Approval may be issued on or after the supervisory signature on the Update Home Study.

• In OR-Kids:
  2. If the current certificate was extended in OR-Kids, and all renewal assessment activities are completed, issue the renewal Certificate of Approval for two years following the date from when the certificate expired (example: Certificate of Approval was due to expire 7/1/17, but LEDS checks were not returned until 7/15/17. If all assessment related activities were completed
7/15/17, issue a new renewal Certificate of Approval that ends 6/30/19.)

NOTE: If all documentation required for Renewal is not completed on or before the expiration date of the Certificate of approval, and:

- A Renewal Application is signed and dated prior to expiration of the Certificate of Approval, the Certificate of Approval is deemed not to have expired and must be extended through the Additional Certification Actions page in OR-Kids. This provides a clear record and meets IV-E regulations for continued reimbursement

OR:

- A Renewal Application is not signed prior to expiration of the Certificate of Approval, but at least one document required for renewal is received prior to expiration: the Renewal Application will be considered timely, and the Certificate of Approval may be extended if management approval is documented on the CF 117.

Supervisor's Role

- Review all assessment activities.
- Assure the applicant meets the certification standards.
- Assure any required exception has been made for any criminal history, and any required Management Approvals have been obtained.
- Review the home study update to determine the update documents the family's ability to meet the safety and well-being needs of a child placed in their home. If approving, sign the Update Home Study on the same day or prior to approving the certification.
- Assure the Certificate of Approval includes all applicable information.

Reopening of a Previous Certificate of Approval

In addition to assessment for the foster care certificates, there are also instances when a family that was previously certified in the past six months requests their certificate to be reopened. There is certain criteria in which a previous certificate may be reopened. All of these conditions must exist in order to reopen the certificate:

- The certification has been closed less than six months;
- A decision has not been made to pursue revocation;
- The certificate would not have expired during the months the certification has been closed nor was it revoked;
- There have been no additions to adult members of the household, and the applicants are the same as those who were previously certified;

NOTE: If a minor child, not in the care or custody of the Department, living in the home, turns 18 years old in between time of certification and reopen, fingerprint checks are required at the time of the next renewal.

- The former certified family continues to live in the same residence;
- For all adult members of the household, no Child Welfare history exists, other than history which was previously assessed; and
For all adult members of the household, no arrests or convictions exist, other than history which was previously assessed.

Procedure

- When a former certified family requests certification to be reopened, and the above criterion is met, the certifier will complete the following steps prior to reopening a certificate:
  1. Provide the former certified family with an Application for Renewal or Change of Status (form 1001) to be completed.
  2. Assure completion of new criminal records checks, including a new fingerprint-based criminal records check on each adult member of the household.
  3. If management approvals were obtained during the previously issued certificate, new management approvals are required for reopening the certificate.
  4. If new criminal history is found to exists that was not previously assessed during the last certification period, staff with the certification supervisor. Child Welfare may discontinue its assessment for reopening the certificate.

- Assure completion of a new child abuse history background check for each adult member of the household.
  1. If management approvals were obtained during the previously issued certificate, new management approvals are required for reopening the certificate.
  2. If new child abuse history is found to exists that was not previously assessed, staff with the certification supervisor, and district manager. Child Welfare may discontinue their assessment for reopening the certificate.

- Conduct a home visit that includes the following:
  1. Face-to-face contact with the applicant(s) and each member of the household.
  2. Observe and assess the safety of the home; walk through each primary residence and each surrounding building and structure on the property.
  4. Confirm that the Oregon Foster Child Bill of Rights is posted in the home; provide an Oregon Foster Child Bill of Rights poster if one is not posted. Confirm that the Oregon Sibling Bill of Rights is accessible in the home. Provide the Oregon Foster Parent Bill of Rights.

- Staff the assessment of reopening the former certified family’s certificate with the certification supervisor. The supervisor will decide to approve or deny the family’s request to have their certificate reopened.

NOTE: If the supervisor decides not to approve the reopen, speak with the family regarding its willingness to voluntarily withdraw the application; if the family will not voluntarily withdraw the application, discuss next steps with the certification supervisor.

If a certificate of approval only has a few months left to expiration, the certification supervisor may decide to not complete the reopen and instead move to assess for a Temporary Certificate due to the amount of work and time... involved for a certificate that would only last a few months.

- If the certification supervisor approves the request to reopen the certificate, reopen the certificate in OR-Kids. The certificate of approval can only be reopened for the time remaining on the certification period.

NOTE: If the former certified family has an Additional Certification Action of “Closed” that was approved within the past 180 days, and the “Certification To” date has not exceeded today’s date, OR-Kids allows the user to enter a new Certification Action of “Reopen.” This will reopen the certification, and original services need to reviewed/reselected and saved to make them available on the new certification. The certification dates will only be restored to the time that would have been remaining on the former Certificate of Approval.

- To conduct a reopen, select the Additional Certification Actions in the certification page and select the action of “reopen.” Please review the Additional Certification Action Quick Reference Guide for assistance.

- Once the Provider Record is opened, and the Certificate of Approval has been reopened, the certifier will document in a Provider Note that the provider has been reopened, the circumstances that led the certification to be reopened, the certified family’s skills and abilities to meet the safety, health and well-being needs of the child(ren) placed in this home. Scan the application, form 979, new 1011Fs, and any other supporting documentation. Ensure that an individualized training plan is developed, or the family has a plan to complete Foundations training, if necessary.

- Print a copy of the certificate and provide to the certified family.

Supervisor’s Role

- Discuss with the certifier whether proceeding with the ‘reopen’ process makes the most sense, given the time that would be left on the certificate if reopened. It may be that proceeding with a new application and possible issuance of Temporary Certificate, if placement of a child into the home is an imminent need, is a preferable course of action.

- If proceeding to reopen, review that the certifier received an Application for Renewal or Change of Status from the former certified family, and completed all required background checks and (if applicable) management approvals.

- Discuss the certifier’s assessment of the home with the certifier.

- Approve or deny the request to reopen the Certificate of Approval of the former certified family.

When a Certified Family Moves

- When a certified family moves to another residence in the state of Oregon, the certifier must terminate the Certificate of Approval. The certifier may issue a new Certificate of Approval for the residence after the certifier has done the following within 10 business days of the family moving:

NOTE: If the family moves within the same county or district, the same certifier already assigned may complete the actions. If a family moves outside of the district, the Child Welfare Program Managers or designees from both districts must coordinate how the transfer of record and certification assessment will occur.

When a certified family intends to move outside the state of Oregon, ICPC applies. See 413-040-0270. Payment may continue for up to 180 days or until the family is licensed by the other state, whichever is earlier.

1. Provide the certified family with form CF 1001, Application for Renewal or Change of Status Application;
2. Schedule a home visit with the family to assess any changes in the home or any family configurations;
3. Observe and assess the physical environment and complete a form CF 979;
4. Walk through each room in the home and each surrounding building;
5. Provide the results of the assessment to the supervisor and recommend the opening of the Certificate of Approval at the new residence.

If the supervisor approves opening the certificate, the certifier will:

1. Write a Provider Note in OR-Kids documenting that the family moved residences and the family's ability to meet safety, health, and well-being needs of a child or young adult.
2. If needed, obtain any management approvals prior to issuing the certificate.
3. Upload the CF 1001 and CF 979 into the OR-Kids File Cabinet of the Provider Record.
4. Change the physical address in the Provider Record; see OR-Kids Guide: Change Physical Address. A pending certificate will be created.
5. Open the pending certificate and complete the actions.

Supervisor’s Role

- Review all assessment activities.
- Assure the applicant, in the new environment, continues to meet the certification standards.
- Assure any required approval has been made for criminal history, and required Management Approvals have been obtained, if applicable.
- Approve the Certificate of Approval when that is the decision being made.
Chapter 8
Section 3: Applicant Assessment
Applicant Assessment for Foster, Relative Care, or Adoption

Certification is an assessment process. A home study for the purpose of either foster care and/or adoption is a thoughtful analysis of all the information gathered through interview, observation, collateral contacts, and background checks.

- The Department uses the SAFE Home Study process to assess families for certification and adoption. The SAFE Home Study process, including all tools, are copyrighted by the Consortium for Children. The description below is only a brief overview of the way Oregon utilizes the SAFE process. Each certifier and adoption worker must attend SAFE training and refer to the SAFE Workbook and other materials on completing the SAFE process, including the SAFE questionnaires and psychosocial inventory.

- A SAFE Home Study is required for all families issued a 2-year certificate and for applicants seeking adoption. There are four main components of SAFE:
  1. Information Gathering Tools
  2. Structured Analysis Tools
  3. Preformatted Home Study Reports
  4. Compatibility Inventory

  Note: The Compatibility Inventory is an optional tool.

- The most important aspect of completing the assessment are the interviews with the applicants. The tools used to gather information support the interview process but are intended to guide the interviews, not replace them.

SAFE Home Study Tools

Procedure

The initial tool for gathering personal information from the applicant is SAFE Questionnaire I. Questionnaire I is provided to the applicant(s) to complete prior to the first interview. If the applicant has a Temporary Certificate, Questionnaire I can be left with the applicant to be completed. Questionnaire I covers eight areas of family history and functioning:

1. Personal History
2. Parenting Practices
3. Personal and Family Values
4. Health
5. Support System
6. Work
7. Family Relationships
8. Marital/Domestic Partner Relationship
• The certifier reviews Questionnaire I and highlights responses that require further clarification. Based upon what is highlighted on Questionnaire I, create a “harvesting sheet” of factors to discuss with the applicant(s).

NOTE: The SAFE Harvesting Sheet is a way to help organize the information as well as plan the home study interviews.

• The first interview with the family, if they do not have a temporary certificate, may focus on motivation, a walk-through of the home, and basic certification requirements.

• Administer questionnaires according to the processes outlined in SAFE training. Be mindful that it may take multiple home visits to cover all the items from questionnaires and other application materials. Ask open-ended questions, and allow the applicant(s) to provide the additional information in a safe and non-judgmental environment.

• Questionnaire II should be administered to the applicant(s) in the home. Questionnaire II is completed by the applicant(s) in the presence of the certifier or adoption worker. This never leaves the sight and control of the certifier or adoption worker. If there are two applicants, each applicant completes Questionnaire II separately, without talking about or showing one another their responses. Immediately after completing the Questionnaire II, the certifier or adoption worker interviews each applicant separately about their responses to Questionnaire II, but during the same visit to the home. and are interviewed separately. Questionnaire II covers 10 general areas:

  • Problem issues/behaviors
  • Personal alcohol consumption
  • Personal legal/illegal drug use
  • Family substance abuse
  • History of childhood and adult sexual, emotional or physical abuse
  • Child abuse allegations
  • Family violence and crime
  • Family sexual abuse perpetrators
  • Domestic violence
  • Mental illness

• After each interview with a family, the psychosocial inventory (PSI) is completed, utilizing the SAFE Desk Guide as the reference to properly rate each factor. The PSI looks at an applicant’s history that has impacted his/her functioning and is used to help determine if the particular issue in his/her history could or currently impacts the applicant’s functioning.

• Keep interviewing and collecting information until all items on harvesting sheet and other areas needing further clarification are understood, so that all psychosocial factors can be rated on the PSI with high confidence ratings. When ready, note the Final Desk Guide Rating on the PSI.

NOTE: Although not mandatory, consider administering Questionnaire I and II to other adults living in the household who may play an integral part of caregiving.

Assessing Criminal History

(Rev. 08/01/2022)
Obtaining and Assessing Criminal History Information

Obtaining criminal history information is one aspect of assessing an applicant for certification as a resource parent. The assessment of information regarding an individual’s criminal history is looked at in relationship to all the information collected and observed as part of the certification process. Criminal history information is assessed as part of the SAFE Home Study process and is also specifically addressed as part of OAR 413-120-0400 through 413-120-0475.

OAR 413-120-0000 definition Criminal History Records Check Requirements:

- “Criminal records check” means obtaining and reviewing criminal records as required by these rules and includes any or all of the following:
  - An Oregon criminal records check where criminal offender information is obtained from the Oregon State Police (OSP) using the Law Enforcement Data System (LEDS). The Oregon criminal records check may also include a review of other criminal records information obtained from other sources.
  - A national criminal records check where records are obtained from the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). The national criminal records check may also include a review of other criminal records information.
  - A state-specific criminal records check where records are obtained from law enforcement agencies, courts, or other criminal records information sources located in, or regarding, a state or jurisdiction outside Oregon.

- “Criminal Offender Information” means records, including fingerprints and photographs, received, compiled and disseminated by the Oregon Department of State Police (OSP), or by other states, for purposes of identifying criminal offenders and alleged offenders, and maintained as part of an individual’s records of arrests, the nature and disposition of criminal charges, sentencing, confinement, but does not include the retention by OSP or records of transfer of inmates between penal institutions or other correctional facilities, and release. It also includes the OSP Computerized Criminal History System.

- Other criminal records information” means information obtained and used in the criminal records check process that is not criminal offender information from OSP. “Other criminal records information” includes but is not limited to police investigations and records, information from local or regional criminal records information systems, justice records, court records, information from the Oregon Judicial Information Network, sexual offender registration records, warrants, Oregon Department of Corrections records, Oregon Department of Transportation’s Driver and Motor Vehicle Services Division information, information provided on the background check requests, disclosures by a subject individual, and any other information from any jurisdiction obtained by or provided to the Department for the purpose of conducting a fitness determination.

Required Criminal Background Checks

With limited exceptions specified in rule and this procedure, each applicant and all members of the household 18 years of age or older will require the completion of a criminal history records check. There are two types of checks that require consent prior to obtaining the information, a LEDS check and a fingerprint-based FBI background check.

FBI fingerprint background-based checks and LEDS background checks are required to be completed on:

- An applicant seeking initial approval as a certified resource family;
• An applicant seeking approval as a potential adoptive resource;

• An adult member of the household of an applicant seeking initial approval a certified resource family or potential adoptive resource; and

• A potential respite provider or childcare provider, not otherwise licensed, listed or approved by a state or county entity with child-care licensing authority.

A respite or childcare provider may be utilized after receiving the LEDS reports but prior to receiving fingerprint-based background check results with a Child Welfare Program Manager or designee approval, recorded on the Management Approval Form 0117.

Background checks for respite providers and childcare providers follow the same process as applicants and must have a fitness determination if there are criminal convictions unless the certified family no longer plans to use them.

• Any individual required to have a background check who has lived outside of Oregon for more than 60 consecutive days after their last criminal records check.

• An approved individual discloses, or the Department becomes aware of previously unknown criminal history must complete a new criminal history background check.

A LEDS check, but not a FBI fingerprint check is required for:

• An applicant for renewal of certification.

• A potential adoptive resource when a previously approved adoption home study is being amended or updated within the 12 months prior to an adoption placement selection as required by OAR 413-120-0246.

• An adult member of the household of a certified resource family applying for renewal of certification, who previously had a fingerprint-based FBI background check under OAR 413-120-0400 to OAR 413-120-0475.

Limited exclusions to the requirements of obtaining a criminal background check include:

• Young Adults (age 18-20) placed in the home by the Department;

• Rare circumstances where an individual is determined to be unable to consent to or obtain a fingerprint-based background check due to a physical or mental condition;

  • Situations where an individual living in the home is unable to consent to a background check or it is unreasonable for that person to obtain a fingerprint-based background check should be very rare, and often those individuals should not be in a caregiving role, or have child caring responsibilities. There may be times an applicant may not be able to obtain fingerprints temporarily due to a condition, however, this should be very rare. Staffing these unique situations with a supervisor and a Foster Care Coordinator (FCC) is recommended.

  • This exclusion is documented on the 1011D with approval by the Child Welfare Program Manager. This exclusion must be reviewed at a minimum at each renewal. If circumstances change at any juncture, however, the certifier should initiate the criminal history process.

• An individual who is living in and receiving services in an adult foster home for individuals with intellectual or developmental disabilities.
Other Individuals:

- In addition to the individuals described above, the Department has discretion to require criminal records checks on others when it impacts child safety of a child or young adult placed in the home by the Department.

- When determining whether to seek a criminal records check on an individual who does not live in the home, factors to consider include:
  - How much contact does the person have with the child?
  - Does the person come into the home only/primarily when the child is away?
  - Do they have any unsupervised contact with the child?
  - What type of contact do they have with child? Is it in a caregiving capacity?
  - Is the person providing any type of care for the child?
  - What is the relationship of the individual to the child or the resource family?
  - Is there information about the individual that is concerning?

It is within ODHS discretion to seek a criminal-records check on an individual frequenting the home. However, if the person has limited contact and there is no reason to be concerned, a check is likely not necessary. If the individual has a great deal of personal contact with the child, particularly unsupervised and there are aspects of caregiving involved, it may make sense to seek the check. Discuss situations with your supervisor and FCC when there are questions about whether a criminal records check should be sought.

Visitors to a Certified Family’s Home

When a certified family has individuals staying for more than a few weeks or stay beyond the planned amount of time, consider them as additional members of the home and follow the procedure for assessing new members of the household. Examples of individuals who should receive a criminal records check may include but are limited to:

- A college student returning to the home for the summer.
- A friend or family member staying beyond a few weeks while looking for housing.

Criminal Records Check Process

Temporary Certificates:

- The criminal records check process begins when the applicant or other individual completes a 1011f Consent for Criminal Records and Fingerprint Check. This consent is then emailed to the Background Check Unit (BCU) (BCU.CW.1011fs@dhsoha.state.or.us). When a response is needed quickly for purposes of a Temporary Certificate, the email to BCU must be sent by 3:00 Monday through Friday. For criminal records checks required for a Temporary Certificate outside of these hours, email ORCAH utilizing the process developed by ORCAH and available on the OWL intranet site.

- The initial results received will be Law Enforcement Database System (LEDS) information. This includes arrests and convictions in the state of Oregon. Review the information received along with the information the subject individual provided on the 1011f. If there are no arrests or convictions, no additional steps in the criminal records check process are needed to move forward with the expedited certification process. If there are arrests or convictions, assessment of the information must occur prior to issuing the Temporary Certificate as follows.

Arrests Only:

- Discuss with the subject individual the nature of the arrest. Think about the nature of the arrest and if this information presents concerns regarding child safety or well-being that may impact the decision to issue a Temporary Certificate. A fitness determination is not required for an arrest that did not or has not yet lead to a conviction. The information gathered and assessed is part of the overall assessment of the family and home environment and will be included in the home study.

Convictions:

- When a subject individual has a criminal conviction, an approval by a Department individual at the appropriate level must be granted prior to issuing a Temporary Certificate and placing a child in the home. The process of approving the subject individual includes utilizing a weighing test to come to a fitness determination. The analysis and fitness determination is documented on the ODHS form 1011D.

Weighing Test:

Rule: "Weighing test" means the process in which an authorized designee considers available information to make a fitness determination when a subject individual has a criminal conviction.

Fitness Determination:

Rule: "Fitness determination" means the decision made by an authorized designee, with regard to information obtained through a criminal records check, to either approve or deny a subject individual under these rules.

NOTE: A Weighing Test and Fitness determination is not required for juvenile court adjudications and cannot be used as a basis for denial. Expunged records, whether juvenile or adult also do not require a weighing test or fitness determination and may not be used as a basis for denial.

Completing a Weighing Test:

The following factors should be taken into consideration when assessing criminal convictions and completing a weighing test:

- When the applicant is a relative or has a caregiving relationship with the child or young adult requiring placement, whether placement of the child or young adult with the subject individual would provide for the child or young adult’s safety, well-being and permanency, and may mitigate the trauma experienced by the child or young adult. Evaluate whether this potential placement resource:
  - Could provide the child or young adult with connection to their family constellation, cultural practices, identity, community and other familiar people, supports or resources.
  - May result in possible reduction in immediate and long-term trauma and improvement in well-being and safety.
  - Has an investment in maintaining the relationship with this child or young adult as well as with their family. Consider how these factors may increase the child or young adult’s placement stability and permanency.

- The impact of cultural or societal forces such as structural racism or poverty and other impacts to marginalized communities, upon the subject individual and whether those forces contributed to the circumstances leading to a conviction.

Structural Racism:

- Increased law enforcement presence and surveillance in communities of color.
- Targeting of “high crime” areas, often constitutes higher concentrations of African American, Native American, Latinx and other people of color, which leads to higher law enforcement contact.
- Racial profiling, in particular convictions initiated by traffic stops and contact due to questions of legal residency status impacting Latinx individuals.

Effects of Poverty:

- Escalation/development of criminal record created by inability of subject individual to pay fines/fees for minor infractions or meeting basic needs.
- Inability to post bail, resulting in pre-trial detainment.
- Parents with perceived substandard housing characterized as “neglect”.
- Increased surveillance by CPS, schools and community organizations, leading to disproportionate contact by law enforcement.

Other Impacts to Marginalized Communities:

- Access.
  - Legal and other services not available in applicant’s language.
- Financial/physical/psychological/developmental barriers to accessing legal services, complying with parole/probation, attending legal proceedings.
- LGBTQIA2S+ Discrimination.
  - Criminal justice discrimination based on sexual orientation, gender identity and/or gender expression.
  - Lack of support in probation, parole and re-entry programs around navigating employment, housing, public service and health care discrimination.
- The nature of the crime, including the relevancy of the crime or false statements made by the subject individual about the crime, to the ability to be approved as a certified resource parent.
- Does the crime relate to possible safety or well-being issues in regards to parenting a child in care? Does the individual acknowledge the conviction and speak honestly and about the circumstances surrounding the conviction?
- The details of the incidents that led to the criminal convictions.
• What was occurring in the individual’s life at the time?
• How does the individual describe their life and circumstances leading to the criminal involvement?
• The details of the conviction, including periods of incarceration and compliance with parole, post-prison supervision, or probation.
  • Is the individual continuing to work on aspects of the conviction, check-ins, supervision requirements or is it completed?
  • If completed, do we have access to information about compliance, completion, etc.?
• The timeline and frequency of criminal convictions and criminal involvement not resulting in conviction, including arrests, criminal investigations and unresolved or pending arrests, charges, indictments or outstanding warrants.
  • Has there been a pattern of behavior resulting in criminal convictions and arrests?
  • Was it a particular timeframe in their life?
  • How long of a period of time was the individual involved in the criminal system?
• The passage of time since the conviction and criminal involvement and likelihood of a repetition of offenses or the commission of another crime.
• Information suggesting changes in circumstances or behavior of the subject individual since the conviction showing self-improvement including, but not limited to:
  • The subject individual’s experience in caregiving or parenting, engagement in substance use disorder or mental health treatment, work experience, relevant education or training, community involvement; and
  • Information from references, community members, employers or other sources with knowledge about the subject individual.

Fitness Determination

The Weighing Test assessment is documented on the ODHS form 1011d, and submitted to the certification supervisor. The level of manager able to make the fitness determination depends on the type of conviction and amount of time that has passed since the conviction. Levels of approval needed are listed in Appendix 8.9.

NOTE: If the conviction is from a state other than Oregon, or from another country, and if there is not clear what level of approval to obtain, seek guidance from your assigned AAG and FCC.

Certified Resource Families and Criminal Activity

When an individual who is certified is arrested, an assessment must occur regarding the continued certification and if there is a child or young adult placed in the home, a determination must be made regarding the continued placement. Within 24 hours of the Department learning of the arrest the Child Welfare Program Manager must make a determination of whether to continue the placement of a child in the home. This decision is made with information available to the Department. Factors to consider:

• Is the crime related to child safety?
• Is the individual in the home?

Document the decision to continue a placement of a child or young adult in Or-Kids provider notes.

Consider whether the certified resource family should be placed on inactive referral status pending assessment and gathering of information regarding the arrest. Information regarding the process for Inactive Referral process can be found in Chapter 8 Section 10 of the Child Welfare Procedure Manual.

If the arrest leads to a conviction, determination of the fitness of the individual must be made assessing:

• The details of the incident.
• The social context of the incident.

When the subject individual is a relative or has a caregiving relationship with the child or young adult, whether continued placement of the child or young adult with the subject individual would provide for the child or young adult’s safety, well-being and permanency, and may mitigate the trauma experienced by the child or young adult. Consider the impact of a placement move on the child or young adult.

Contesting Criminal Background Check

If the Department determines that an applicant, or member of the household cannot be certified or approved the Department must notify the subject individual in writing that the subject individual:

• Has a right to inspect and challenge their Oregon criminal offender information through OSP procedures as adopted per ORS 181.555(3) and OAR 257-010-0035; 257-010-0035;

• May challenge the accuracy or completeness of any entry on the subject individual’s criminal records provided by the FBI by filing a challenge with the FBI’s Criminal Justice Information Services Division; and

• May appeal the Department’s determination of unfitness or indicate an intent to challenge information in the OSP or FBI report by requesting a contested case hearing pursuant to ORS Chapter 183 and OAR 413-010-0500 to 413-010-0535 provided that the Department receives the request for a contested case hearing in writing within 30 days from the date of mailing the notice.

OAR 413-010-0500 to 413-010-0535 describes the requirements and process for requesting a contested case hearing due to the denial or revocation of a Certificate of Approval or a denial of approval to be an adoptive resource, including denials based on the criminal records check, or false statement with regard to criminal history, of an applicant or member of the household.

Sharing Information

Criminal records check information is, in general, confidential information. Information should only be shared with those with a need to know consistent with the criminal records check administrative rules and procedure.

An individual may have a copy of their FBI background check.

Criminal background check information may be shared for the purpose of an administrative hearing.

Assessing Child Abuse History
Assess Child abuse history in the Department’s OR-Kids electronic system and any reports received from other states or countries in which the applicant or adult member of the household was either alleged, Unable to Determine, or Founded to have committed an act of child abuse or neglect.

NOTE: Having trouble receiving results from another state agency? Review the Adam Walsh State Contacts for Child Abuse Registries for contact information to individually contact that state.

- When the applicant(s) or adult member of the household has an unfounded allegation of abuse, Closed at Screening reports, prior Oregon Alternative Response assessments, or similar dispositions from another state, consider whether there is a pattern of behavior, indicative of poor decision making, poor coping skills, ineffective parenting, or dysfunctional family relationships. There is no management approval needed for these types of reports or dispositions.

- When the applicant(s) or adult member of the household has a founded allegation of child abuse/neglect (or similar disposition from another state), or a substantiated finding from the Office of Training, Investigation and Safety (OTIS), staff with certification supervisor and consider the following questions to determine whether to seek management approval:
  1. What was the severity of the abuse?
  2. What were the circumstances surrounding the abuse?
  3. How long ago did the abuse/neglect take place?
  4. Did the applicant have an open child welfare case as a result, and were children placed in substitute care?
  5. Did the applicant receive services, and is there evidence that protective capacity increased?
  6. Was there a pattern of abusive behavior, and if so, for how long? Was there a pattern of unable to determine dispositions?
  7. What does the applicant say about the abuse?

- When the applicant(s) or adult member of the household has an unable to determine allegation of child abuse (or similar disposition from another state) in addition to the considerations above, consider the following:

  1. What was the reason for the disposition? Was the Child Protective Services worker unable to locate the family, or was there conflicting information that resulted in the disposition?

- Consult with the certification supervisor, program manager, and, optionally, the Foster Care Coordinator, to determine whether to seek approval to continue the assessment given the applicant(s) or adult member of the household’s child welfare history. Document the assessment of the information on form CF 0117.

Physical/Social Environment

- Assess the physical environment through observation and the social environment through observation and interviews. When physical areas need improvement, assess the applicant’s response to feedback as well as the effort to remedy the issue. Take into consideration the age and characteristics of children for whom the applicants are interested in (or are currently) providing care.
Assessing the Physical Environment

- Using CF 979 Safety, Home Environment and Privacy Acknowledgement assess the physical home environment. This includes:

1. The cleanliness and maintenance of the home. Consider the following:
   - Is the home exterior and property well kept, is some maintenance required, or is it extremely run down?
   - Is the home interior clean and comfortable, slightly cluttered, or dirty with pronounced, offensive odors?
   - Does the home interior reflect consistent care and attention, are some minor repairs in order, or are there signs that it has received virtually no upkeep (e.g.; heater does not work, problem with mold, or substantial renovation is required in order to be habitable)?

2. The home is a safe environment. Consider the following:
   - Are there any safety issues noted on the Safety, Home Environment and Privacy Acknowledgements?
   - Is the applicant safety conscious?
   - Is the applicant knowledgeable about child safety issues?

3. Specific safety requirements for safe sleep for infants 0-12 months:
   - Administrative Rule: 413-200-0335(1b)
   - Sharing the same sleep surface with a child under the age of 12 months is prohibited.
   - A child under the age of 12 months must be placed on their back for sleep.
   - Use of crib bumpers, pillows or other soft materials in the sleeping area of a child under the age of 12 months is prohibited.

Procedure:

- Discuss with the applicant/certified family the importance of safe sleep for infants. Emphasize all infants must be placed on their back to sleep, and that they must never share a sleep surface with an infant. In addition, let them know that no soft materials should be placed in the crib, including blankets, stuffed animals. Explain to the foster parent the reasons for these requirements, that there is research which supports the lowering of infant death. Acknowledge that this information may be different than what they learned at the time that they may have parented an infant, but that we need to follow current medical research.

- Support the family in problem solving to reduce risk. For example, request funds to pay for a safe sleep surface if one is not available through other resources with the family.

- Observe the environment in which an infant would be sleeping to confirm it is a flat, firm sleep surface free from hazards.

4. The condition of the furnishings, play areas, and clothing. Consider the following:
• Is the home adequately furnished with clean, sturdy, and functional furniture?
• Does the applicant understand the need for and provide proper clothing, toys, and equipment that are age appropriate for the children being considered?
• Staff any safety issues with the supervisor. If needed, consult with the Foster Care Coordinator.

Marijuana in the Applicant(s) Home

• When assessing an applicant’s marijuana use, either medical or recreational, ask them similar key questions you would ask for other legal (and potentially addictive and mind altering) drugs, including alcohol, and certain prescription medications such as opiates:

1. How often are they using marijuana?
2. What times of the day are they using marijuana?
3. In what form are they using marijuana (i.e., smoking, edible consumption)? And how much THC are they consuming?
4. What effects does marijuana have on their ability to have sound judgment and decision making?
5. Where do they store their marijuana products, and are the storage processes child proof?
6. What is the plan to assure any child placed in the applicant’s home would not have access to the marijuana or be subjected to any secondhand smoke?
7. Does the applicant’s doctor have any concerns about this applicant’s ability to provide safety and well-being for a child?

Marijuana – Recreational

While medical marijuana has been legally authorized by physicians in Oregon for years, as of July 1, 2015, recreational marijuana is also legal for Oregonians age 21 and over. Oregonians may grow up to four plants on their property (regardless of how many people live in the residence). Homegrown marijuana is not allowed to be in public view, meaning the plants cannot be readily seen from a public place (i.e., outside the residence from the street).

• Personal possession for Oregonians age 21 in older per household includes:

1. 8 ounces dried flowers/leaves
2. 4 plants
3. 16 ounces homemade solids
4. 72 ounces homemade liquids
5. 16 ounces homemade concentrates

• Beyond homegrown/produced product, households may consume purchased products, including items called “edibles” that may be in the form of cookies and candies, etc. These “edibles” often appear attractive to children. Recreational marijuana cannot be sold or used in public, nor can it be used recreationally by anyone under the age of 21.

Marijuana – Medical

A patient with a qualifying condition and a recommendation from an attending physician may register for a medical marijuana card through the Oregon Health Authority. There are many regulations set for the number of plants grown by someone growing marijuana for themselves or others. Oregon law allows limited use and growing of medical marijuana. For more information on Oregon’s Medical Marijuana Program (OMMP), refer to the website. Ask for a copy of the medical marijuana card to verify authenticity with the OMMP.

- An OMMP cardholder may possess up to:
  1. 6 mature plants
  2. 18 plant seedlings
  3. 24 ounces of usable marijuana

NOTE: In limited circumstances, outside evaluations such as substance use disorder evaluations are helpful in informing the assessment process. Always consult with your supervisor and, if needed, a Foster Care Coordinator in determining whether an outside evaluation is needed. It is important that Child Welfare seek only diagnostic information and information about how an applicant’s condition may impact daily functioning. Child Welfare does not ask the evaluator to recommend whether an applicant should be a foster parent, or what services be provided to make them safe as a foster parent. It is the role and responsibility of Child Welfare to use the diagnostic information from the evaluation in the determination whether the applicant meets certification standards.

Assessing the Social and Personal Qualifications

Respecting, Accepting, and Supporting the Race, Ethnicity, and Culture (REC) and Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity, and Gender Expression (SOGIE) of a child or young adult in ODHS care.

NOTE: In this section, to remain consistent with the language used in Oregon Administrative Rules, we use the words “child” and “young adult” to refer to people ages 0-21. However, individuals may prefer to use the words “youth” or “young person” and they can be used interchangeably.

OAR 413-200-0308(2)(k) reads: Respect, accept and support the race, ethnicity, cultural identities, national origin, immigration status, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, disabilities, spiritual beliefs, and socioeconomic status, of a child or young adult in the care or custody of the Department, and provide opportunities to enhance the positive self-concept and understanding of the child or young adult’s heritage.

Race, Ethnicity and Cultural (REC) Identity

OAR 413-200-0308 (2)(k), in part, speaks to applicants’ and resource families’ ability to parent children with diverse racial, ethnic and cultural identities, which requires an understanding of race, racial identity, culture and racial/cultural socialization. The Center for the Study of Social Policy (CSSP) defines race as “a social and political fabrication – with no inherent genetic, biological or scientific basis.” Despite this lack of scientific basis, most individuals have a racial identity and are racially identified by others on the basis of physical appearance (particularly skin color), ethnicity and culture. Ethnicity, according to CSSP, “denotes groups that share a common identity based on ancestry, language, or culture. It is often based on religion, beliefs and customs, as well as memories of migration or colonization.”

Culture refers to the total system of values, beliefs, attitudes, traditions, and standards of behavior that regulate life within a particular group of people. Culture includes components that organize people into social groups and that regulate both individual and group behavior. Cultural patterns are transmitted over time by a social group naturally as a byproduct of growing up in a community and in a family, whether it be the nuclear, extended or a resource family.
The 2020 Child Welfare Data Book indicates that Black and American Indian or Alaskan Native children are overrepresented in Oregon’s foster care system. This trend is also reflected in national child welfare data. Further, several studies cited in Child Welfare Practice to Address Racial Disproportionality and Disparity reveal that Black children are less likely to return home to their families, be adopted or achieve legal guardianship than other children. They are 30 percent more likely to be placed in congregate care. American Indian or Alaskan Native children are more likely than other children to be removed from their homes and to experience termination of parental rights.

According to Ariella Hope Stafanson, in an article titled Supporting Cultural Identity for Children in Foster Care, (November 2019, American Bar Association), “cultural identity is a significant part of who children are and plays a key role in youths’ lives. By identifying with a culture, which is often tied with an ethnic identity, a child acquires that group's core values and adopts their sociocultural practices and rituals. This identification helps shape the way a child positions themself [sic] in society, interacts with others, and thinks. Several studies show that having a strong, positive racial and cultural identity leads to:

- Greater self-esteem
- Higher education levels
- Better psychological adjustment
- Improved coping abilities
- Decreased levels of loneliness and depression.”

Stafanson explains that cultural identity forms during the child’s early years through the child’s immediate family and close friends when the child learns their family’s view of the world. This view becomes instilled as part of the child’s identity. When the child reaches school age, “the child’s worldview is embedded and internalized into the child’s sense of self as an individual, unique person. This identity is then strengthened through everyday interactions, daily social and cultural practices, and reinforcement by immediate family and friends. Examples of these distinctive family practices include:

- Food
- Holidays and Age Milestones
- Music and Dancing
- Clothing – including ways of dressing for special occasions
- [Hair – including ways to style or cutting]
- Language – speaking or hearing ones’ language.”

Resource parents are tasked with parenting children in a way that solidifies a positive sense of identity and a sense of belonging and connectedness to their racial, ethnic, and cultural group, to prepare them for ease of navigation with their communities, to navigate the messages and experiences they will face, and to counteract negative messages from media, community, and institutions. Certifiers are tasked with supporting resource parents in this undertaking.
Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity, and Gender Expression (SOGIE)

NOTE: The terms lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, questioning, intersex, asexual, two-spirit, and other sexual and gender identities which are not otherwise specifically listed but which are equally important and valid, will be reflected below as LGBTQIA2S+.

Families who become certified should be prepared to respect, accept, and support the children or young adults placed in their home, as well as the networks of people who are important to these children and young adults. Having a home environment that is welcoming and accepting regarding a multitude of identities (race, ethnicity, culture, disability, religion, spirituality, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression) helps all children and young adults feel safe, seen, and valued. It also sets the stage for them to become adults who are better prepared to interact with and embrace diversity among others.

Everybody has a sexual orientation and gender identity, and it is important to be supported in the healthy development of these dimensions of identity. Within the past decade, additional data collection and research have helped child welfare professionals better understand that LGBTQIA2S+ children and young adults are overrepresented in the child welfare system. While we do not have Oregon-specific data at this point, at least three recent studies, cited in a 2021 Children’s Bureau article, Supporting LGBTQ+ Youth: A Guide For Foster Parents, estimate that approximately 30% of children and young adults in foster care identify as LGBTQIA2S+. When compared to the experiences of their cisgender, heterosexual peers, LGBTQIA2S+ children and young adults are found to experience greater placement instability, higher rate of placement in congregate care settings rather than family settings, significantly greater rates of hospitalization for emotional reasons, and were twice as likely to report being treated poorly by the foster care system.

Certainly, some children and young adults who encounter the child welfare system may openly identify as LGBTQIA2S+ and may share that information with their caseworker(s) and caregivers. However, for a variety of reasons, that is often not the case. Some children or young adults may not feel safe and/or comfortable sharing that information with others. Other children may not yet understand their sexual or gender identity, may not have exposure to language and information that helps them articulate to us their identity, or may be questioning their SOGIE. Therefore, it is important that we don’t make assumptions about children and young adult’s SOGIE and that applicants and certified resource families are prepared to respect, accept, and support children and young adults with diverse SOGIE.

Having caregivers accept children’s and young adults’ identity, now and in the future, increases their safety and well-being. As we know from important research done by Dr. Caitlin Ryan, Director of the Family Acceptance Project, accepting caregiver behaviors protect children and young adults from adversity, help them thrive, and lead to good outcomes (better health, higher self-esteem, stronger social support, better family relationships, less likely to be depressed, think about and attempt suicide, and to have substance use problems). Conversely, caregiver rejecting behaviors put children and young adults at much greater risk for a host of poor outcomes. The research indicated that people with caregivers who exhibited high levels of family rejecting behaviors had six times greater depression, five and a half times more suicidal thoughts, eight times more suicide attempts, three times more illegal drug use, and three times more HIV/STD risk.

Children and young adults who experience foster care also have important people in their lives, whose connection and support are critical to their success. These networks include their parents, siblings, other relatives, friends, service providers, caseworkers, coaches, teachers, CASAs, attorneys, former and possibly future caregivers, etc. Any of these important individuals in a young person’s life may also have diverse SOGIE. Having caregivers who respect and accept the individuals who are part of the child’s or young adult’s support network helps a child or young adult successfully make and maintain these important connections.

For these reasons, it’s important for ODHS certifiers to understand applicants’ and certified resource families’ current readiness, willingness, and ability to be respectful, accepting, and supportive regarding children’s and young adults’ identities. Certifiers must also understand how resource families will help children and young adults in their care to develop a positive self-concept.

Procedure

During the home study process, a certifier must assess an applicant’s readiness to respect, accept, and support children’s and young adults’ race, ethnicity, culture, sexual orientation, gender identity and gender expression, and help children and young adults develop a positive self-concept. To aid in understanding a family’s readiness, willingness, and ability to respect, accept, and support a child or young adult’s REC or SOGIE:

- Ask open-ended questions and inquire how they would approach hypothetical but realistic scenarios which may be encountered when caring for children and young adults in ODHS custody.

- Evaluate information gathered during the interviews.

Note: For additional tools which can help the certifier with interviews and evaluation, refer to the following:

- Appendix 8.11, CW Procedure Manual “Indicators of Families Likely to Respect, Accept, and Support REC and SOGIE & Indicators of Possible Concern”.

- Appendix 8.12, CW Procedure Manual “Using SAFE Home Study Tools to Assess for Applicants’ and Resource Families’ Readiness to Respect, Accept, and Support Children’s and Young Adults’ REC and SOGIE”.

- “Resources: Respect, Accept, and Support Children’s and Young Adults’ REC and SOGIE”, available on the OWL Certification Support page.

- “Supporting LGBTQIA+ Youth,” state form ODHS 3990, available in English and Spanish, which provides helpful information for caregivers.

- “Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights”, state form de 9016, which includes numerous references to the rights of children and young adults related to their REC and SOGIE. As part of a family’s readiness to accept and to provide for safety and wellbeing, the certifier may highlight the applicable sections of this document and discuss these areas with the applicant or resource family.

- Chapter 5 Services to Children, section 41, CW Procedure Manual, which provides information for ODHS Child Welfare employees about supporting children and young adults receiving services from our agency. The case planning and supportive services arranged by the caseworker for the child or young adult in our care will need to be followed by certified resource families. The certifier can help applicants and current resource families understand their role and the expectations of certified resource families.

- Assess the applicant’s and certified resource family’s ability to have and maintain conditions in the home that meet the safety, health, and wellbeing needs for children and young adults. This is critical for the initial home study and is also important to monitor as part of confirming safe environment and during the home study renewal process.

• Specifically discuss these issues with the applicants:
  • Share with applicants and certified families that children and young adults are to be protected from harassment. Harassment could be behaviors and statements made by any household members, including the resource parents themselves, children or young adults who are in the agency’s care and living in the home, and any other household members, as well as those in the extended family and support system of the resource family. Examples of harassment could include derogatory remarks, racist, homophobic, or transphobic statements, teasing or taunting regarding one’s identity or appearance.
    • Resource parents must be willing to intervene to interrupt and address problematic statements and behaviors.
    • Resource parents need to notify the caseworker and certifier if others in the home have exhibited or are exhibiting harassing behaviors.
    • If other children or young adults placed in the home are the source of problematic statements or behaviors to another child or young adult in the home, the resource parent and ODHS child welfare staff can collaborate to identify solutions to ensure safety and wellness.
  • Articulate to applicants and certified resource families that they are not:
    • To make derogatory remarks about or use language that demeans, ridicules, or condemns children and young adults based on REC or SOGIE.
    • To tell or imply to children or young adults that they can or should change their SOGIE.
  • Discuss with applicants and certified resource families that they must:
    • Use a child and young adult's chosen or self-identified name and pronouns. This name may differ from the legal name that is on the birth certificate or other documents.
      ■ The child or young adult may ask that a certain name and pronoun only be used in certain settings and/or around certain people. Such requests are often made because this helps a child or young adult to be safe and well.
      ■ Certified resource families must use good judgment when sharing personal information about a child or young adult (as in OAR 413-200-0377).
      ■ The OWL Certification Support page has Resources to support a variety of learning needs surrounding SOGIE, including information about pronouns and names.
    • Work cooperatively with the Department to meet the needs of a child and young adult, including physical health and mental health care, emotional, social, and recreational needs, and clothing that meets the cultural and gender identity and gender expression of the child or young adult (as in OAR 413-200-0352 and 413-200-0362)
    • Allow children and young adults to determine and express their gender and sexual identity for themselves, including allow them (as outlined in the Oregon Foster Child Bill of Rights):
      ■ To groom themselves according to their culture and identity; and
      ■ To wear clothing that corresponds to a gender identity of their choice.
When information is gathered by a certifier which indicates an applicant is uncomfortable or unprepared to respect, accept, support or to help develop a child’s or young adult’s positive self-concept related to REC or SOGIE (Refer to Appendix 8.10, CW Procedure Manual “Indicators of Families Likely to Respect, Accept and Support REC Identities and SOGIE” for more information):

- Seek supervision and consultation. In addition to discussing this with the certification supervisor, consider consulting with Foster Care Coordinators, Child Welfare Equity staff, and/or peers through group supervision.
- Consider whether there are additional training materials, learning opportunities, resources, or partnerships (such as mentoring or information the caseworker and/or certifier can share) to help increase the applicant’s or certified family’s knowledge and to further develop skills.
  - If yes, provide community resources and/or educational and training materials to the certified resource family as applicable regarding LGBTQIA2S+ supports and material related to children from diverse racial and cultural groups. (Refer to the Certification & Caregiver Training Resources on OWL)
  - Incorporate educational materials into the family’s Training Plan and award training credit upon completion.
  - After exposure to new information, discuss with the applicants or certified resource family any new understandings or shifts in perspective. Document this interaction in the provider record.
- For child-specific applicants and certified resource families with child-specific certificates of approval, including relatives, share the information being learned about this family with the child’s caseworker and their supervisor. Among important points for discussion are the child’s or young adult’s needs and placement-matching considerations (as detailed in OAR 413-070-0600). Plan next steps as a team.
- When applicants and certified resource families are not prepared to respect, accept, and support REC and SOGIE, discuss with supervisor available options and plan next steps. Foster Care Coordinators are also available as a resource.
- When applicants are able and willing to respect, accept, and support children and young adults but have areas identified for additional growth, strategize ways the agency can provide ongoing learning opportunities and support to resource families so that they can be most successful in showing respect, acceptance, and support of children and young adults surrounding their identity.
  - This could include conversations between the certifier and caseworker at the time a child or young adult joins the family and prior to certifier contacts such as the 180-day contact.
  - Share with the caseworker information that helps them know the family’s current level of comfort and familiarity with ways to respect, accept, and support the children and young adults in their care. Doing so can help the caseworker plan their monthly contact with the child or young adult and the resource family.
- During certifier home visits, as part of confirming a safe environment and monitoring certification, as well as at renewal, confirm that the resource family is using children’s and young adults’ chosen or self-identified names and pronouns and otherwise continuing to show respect, acceptance, and support of children and young adults. This information can be learned by certifier via discussion with children and young adults directly and through certifier conversations with the caseworker who meets more often with children and young adults through monthly caseworker contact.

Medical

Does the applicant(s) take any prescription medication? Consider utilizing the ODHS form, Medical B (required for adoption applications), for a medical provider for information on potential medical concerns. Assess how the medicine and the underlying medical condition impacts the applicant’s ability to meet the safety and well-being needs of a child placed in the home.

Finances

Assess the applicant’s financial history and current finances. The applicant must have adequate financial resources. Use the Department Financial Form 1291 to gather and assess the financial stability of the applicant. Form 1291 is always used at initial certification but may be used at time of renewal if the certifier deems necessary.

Support System

- Assess the applicant’s emotional and tangible support available. Consider the following:
  1. Does the applicant have friends who are supportive and helpful and live in close proximity?
  2. Does the applicant have a plan for babysitting, child care, and/or respite care?
  3. Does the community provide adequate, affordable resources?
- Household Pets. Assess the presence of household pets. Consider the following:
  1. Are the pets treated well by the family members?
  2. Does the applicant provide appropriate shelter, diet, grooming, and veterinary services for the pet?
  3. Are the pets comfortable with children?
  4. Does the pet behave in a predictable and safe manner around people, particularly children?
  5. Is the pet an unusual pet that may pose unique threats to children?

Applicant’s Children

Minor Children

If an applicant has minor children, assessment of the children will vary depending upon their age and whether they live in the home. When the minor children do not live in the home, the assessment includes the reasons that the children do not live in the home. When they live in the home, whether it be full time or part time as part of a custody arrangement, assess each child’s functioning and attitude about having foster children placed with their family. If age-appropriate, interview the children to gain information regarding their interests, perceptions of their parents, and readiness to accept foster children into the home.

- Consider the following:
  1. Is the child’s behavior, age, and development appropriate?
  2. Is there a reason to believe a child’s behavior may pose a threat to the safety, health, or well-being of others, including any drug/alcohol use?
  3. What is the extent of each child’s health, educational, or mental health needs? Are the applicant(s) capable of meeting those needs?

4. If appropriate, request a signed Release of Information to obtain:
   - School records
   - Medical records
   - Treatment records
   - Juvenile Court, when there is reason to believe the minor has juvenile records.

Adult Children

Adult children are a good resource of information concerning the applicant’s functioning and parenting abilities. This includes adult children who are estranged from the applicant. Assess the level of participation the adult child will have in the care of the foster children. Use of the SAFE Questionnaire for Adult Children is recommended to gather information about them and the how the applicant’s parenting impacted their well-being. When adult children live in the home, assess each adult child as a member of the household, conducting the same criminal history and child welfare history checks as mentioned earlier in this section.

There are situations where the applicant is the grandparent of the child placed in foster care, and therefore the adult child is the parent of the child being placed. When this occurs, connect with the child’s caseworker to determine what information is appropriate to gather from that adult child/parent. It is possible to utilize the SAFE Questionnaire for Adult Children even with an adult child involved with Child Welfare. Even if it is not used, it is relevant to ascertain how that adult child feels about the child being placed with the applicant. Reach out to other adult children for additional information.

Parenting Skills

During the interviews and home visits, assess the applicant’s parenting skills, including both general parenting and specialized parenting. Observe them with their own children. When applicants are not parents, assess based on the applicants’ report. Gain additional information from references or family members if the applicant has been around other people’s children. Discuss whether the applicant appears to be gaining knowledge and skills from participation in training with the Foundations trainer.

- Discuss the following with the applicant:
  1. The applicant’s knowledge of child development.
     - Realistic expectations of child development.
     - Healthy activities, including the ability to apply the Reasonable and Prudent Parenting Standard. Discuss the role of the foster parent in ensuring the child is able to participate in typical childhood experiences, including school activities, sleepovers and other activities with friends.
  2. Appropriate Discipline
     - Discuss whether the applicant has ever used physical discipline, and whether they plans to.
     - Discuss Child Welfare’s prohibition of any form of physical discipline, including cold/hot showers, exercise (as a form of discipline) or group punishments. Discuss the reasons for this, how discipline may trigger a child’s trauma based upon their experiences.

- Discuss appropriate discipline techniques and refer to training if necessary.

3. Respite/Child Care

- Discuss requirements when utilizing others to care for foster children. Explain background checks will need to be completed for anyone providing respite care/child care unless:

  (1) A babysitter

  (2) A licensed child care provider

NOTE: It is the responsibility of the applicant/certified family to vet a potential respite and child care provider. Sometimes applicants/certified families may request the assistance of Child Welfare in locating respite or child care resources. Some branches local offices may have a list of previously approved respite providers who have voiced a willingness to help other foster families. The branch local office may refer the family to Oregon 211 for child care resources.

4. The applicant’s learning experiences. Assess the applicant’s investment in the child’s social and academic development based on the applicant’s functioning with their own children or, if there are no children, on what the applicant reports they intend to do and what others say about the applicant. Consider the following:

- Is the applicant directly involved in their own children’s learning experiences? What is the applicant’s plan for involvement with the foster children?

- How will the applicant be involved in school (checking homework, meeting with teachers, participating in IEP meetings)?

- How will the applicant directly and indirectly help a child to attain expected developmental tasks and social communication skills?

Specialized Parenting Skills

The assessment of specialized parenting skills may reveal that the applicant does not possess competency in specialized parenting skills or parenting children with special needs, unless they have parented a special needs child, had some sort of experience with the foster care system, or has some sort of experience with children with special needs. Again, discovering how well the applicant is integrating the Foundations topics into their thinking about these topics will assist the certifier in assessing this area.

- Consider the following:

  1. The applicant’s expectations of foster parenting.

     - Does the applicant have realistic expectations of foster parenting?

     - Does the applicant have an awareness of their own limitations in understanding of the challenges of child placement?

     - Is the applicant ready to learn?

  2. The applicant’s understanding of the effects of abuse and neglect on children:

     - Assess the applicant’s ability to comprehend and manage the special dynamics resulting from child abuse.
Chapter 8 • Section 3: Applicant Assessment

- Does the applicant demonstrate an understanding of how a child’s normal emotional and physical development may be gravely impacted by the abuse and/or neglect they experienced?
- How does the applicant intend to manage the challenging child behaviors associated with abuse?
- Does the applicant demonstrate an understanding of the unique issues, dynamics, behaviors, and skills needed to parent a child who has been sexually abused?

3. The applicant’s understanding of the effects of separation and loss on children.
   - Does the applicant have an understanding of the behavioral and emotional effects of separation and loss for children?

4. The applicant’s ability and willingness to use therapeutic and educational resources.
   - Does the applicant demonstrate an understanding of the need to be responsive to appropriate birth sibling contact?

Child Specific Assessments

When the applicant is requesting placement of a specific child/young adult or sibling group, assess whether the applicant has the skills and ability to meet the needs of the children/young adults being considered. Discuss with the child’s caseworker to determine if the applicant has the skills/resources to parent the child and what supports may be necessary to support the placement. This discussion may include: Consider all of the elements of general parenting and specialized parenting and do so in the context of what is known about the child/young adult being considered for placement. In addition, the certifier should become familiar with the child’s case plan, permanency plan, concurrent plan, visitation plan, and supervision plan in order to best assess the applicant’s ability to follow and support these plans.

- Consider the following:
  1. The child’s medical, dental, educational, developmental, and mental health needs.
  2. The child’s behavioral and supervision needs.
  3. The child’s Supervision Plan and Level of Care.
  4. CANS assessment
  5. Visitation and case plan.

Critical Analysis using the SAFE Home Study

Evaluation and Mitigation

Mitigation is the process by which the certifier evaluates all of the information gathered during the home study process. Evaluate how the changes in the applicant’s life and/or behavior sustains, reduces or erases the level of potential concern reflected by the final desk guide rating. Take into account considerations independent of the Desk Guide through certifier observation, assessment, and judgment. Consider the likelihood that any issue that received a final desk guide rating of 3, 4, or 5 would have an adverse effect on safe and effective family functioning and parenting.

- The mitigation process includes documenting in the SAFE home study the following mitigation questions for any final Desk Guide Rating of a 3, 4, or 5:

- What issues/behavior or event warranted the final SAFE Desk Guide Rating of 3, 4 or 5? State what the issue/behavior or event is/was.
  1. What is the issue/behavior/event of concern?
  2. Describe the societal, personal, cultural and/or family dynamic that contributed to or set the stage for the issue/behavior or event.
  3. What is the issue/behavior/event’s roots in time, place and cultural/social context?
  4. Describe the frequency and severity or intensity of the issue/behavior or event.
  5. What was/is the issue/behavior/event’s frequency and severity or intensity?
  6. Describe how the issue/behavior or event influenced the Applicant’s ability to function, both in the past and currently.
  7. Has the applicant resolved or adapted to the issue/behavior/event? If the applicant has adapted, how much energy is needed for the applicant to sustain their degree of adaptation? (Provide evidence that support this evaluation: facts, observations, analysis and examples.) If the issue is sustained, how is the issue/behavior/event affecting the applicant’s current functioning and ability to parent and how does or could that affect children in the home?
  8. Could a placement re-trigger the issue/behavior/event?
  9. How much energy remains to parent if the issue/behavior/event is not resolved?

- If the applicant(s) continues to put energy into a PSI that is a 3, 4, or 5, the desk guide rating cannot be mitigated to a 2 as the issue/behavior continues to impact their functioning (the applicant(s) are still adapting their life around the issue/behavior). If the applicant is not expending any energy into the issue/behavior currently (it is resolved), the desk guide rating can be mitigated to a 2. Any item mitigated to a 2 or reduced through mitigation needs to be corroborated by outside sources.

- Mitigation is not only what the applicant tells the certifier, it needs to be collaborated by outside sources. If the certifier has only the applicant’s information, write about what is known and what the issue/behavior/concern may look like when parenting in the future. Consider using the following outside sources:
  1. Correspondence from:
     - Therapists/Clinicians
     - Counselors
     - Mentors
     - Employers
     - Other Professionals
  2. Interviews with:
     - Spouses
     - Children
     - Relatives
- Neighbors
- Co-Workers
- Friends

- Remember, the narration in the study should stand up to a challenge.

NOTE: When determining that an issue cannot be mitigated to a lower rating than the final desk guide rating, determine how to proceed with the applicant. Unchanged mitigation ratings are not necessarily grounds for a denial of an application. They may, however, impact placement matching, capacity decisions, the training plan for the applicant, etc. Sometimes unmitigated concerns will be severe enough to warrant a denial. Consult with the supervisor throughout the home study process and again during mitigation (assessment/evaluation of the information) to determine the course of action. In addition, the supervisor may choose to consult with the Foster Care Coordinator.

Writing the Home Study

Once the certifier has completed all interviews, gathered all collateral and background information, completed final desk guide ratings and mitigation ratings, the certifier may begin writing the home study that documents the assessment.

- When writing the home study, pay attention to the narration instructions provided in each section of the Oregon SAFE home study.
  1. Use behaviorally specific language that provides clear description.
  2. Reference the source of any information you cite.
  3. Present all essential and critical information.
  4. Avoid generalizations.
  5. Avoid labels.
  6. Narrate the strengths of the foster family in a concise manner.
  7. Fully narrate any concern that received a final desk guide rating of 3 or higher.
  8. Fully narrate critical analysis for mitigation scores and evidence for such scores.
  9. Do not mention the final desk guide ratings within the study itself.

Role of the Supervisor

The role of the supervisor in the home study process is critical. The supervisor is available to the certifier for clinical consultation after each home study interview. Items that require mitigation should be discussed between the supervisor and the certifier. When the certifier and supervisor need additional consultation, the supervisor may contact the Foster Care Coordinator for their district.

- During and at the conclusion of the assessment process, the supervisor:
  1. Follows the SAFE Home Study guidelines for supervision. In addition to the 2-day SAFE Home Study training, a SAFE Supervisor training is required for all certification supervisors. Utilize the SAFE Supervisor’s Manual as a reference for ongoing supervision of the SAFE Process.
  2. Ensure that all necessary management approvals are obtained, including assessments and approvals for criminal history and child abuse history. For a Temporary Certificate, ensure receipt
3. Ensure the certifier’s ongoing assessment of the family proceeds quickly, and the family is issued a 2-year certificate as soon as possible.

4. If necessary, the supervisor may approve a 30-day extension of the Temporary Certificate. If there is a need to extend the Temporary Certificate longer than an additional 30 days past the 180 days allotted for assessment, request an additional extension from the District Program Manager. When requesting an approval for an extension of the Temporary Certificate, the supervisor must discuss the delays with the certifier, determine the actions that need to occur, and develop a timeline to complete the certification process and issue a 2-year certificate.

5. Approve the written Home Study. Approval of the Home Study indicates all assessment requirements have been completed and the family meets certification standards to provide care for a child. The supervisor signature must be on or before the date of approval of certification.

6. Approve the certificate in OR-Kids.

Assessment and Home Study Requirements for Purposes of Guardianship

When there has been a casework decision to pursue guardianship with an identified resource there must be an assessment of the potential guardian’s ability to meet the current and long-term needs of the child or young adult. The approval and selection of a guardian is shared by both caseworker and certification staff.

A potential guardian must have a current certificate of approval from ODHS child welfare, Aging and People with Disabilities, a private child caring agency, a federally recognized tribe in Oregon with a Title IV-E agreement with the Department, or another state when the potential guardian is currently certified or approved in the state where the potential guardian resides.

Procedure:

The Department must complete an updated home study on the potential guardian. If there is a completed SAFE Home Study, the certifier completes an addendum to the home study unless there is a need to complete the certification renewal. The update home study or addendum must focus on the long-term commitment of the potential guardian and their ability to meet the long term safety and well-being needs of the child or young adult. The addendum is documented on ODHS 2822, and should include:

- How the certified family meets the child or young adult’s safety needs, including physical and emotional safety. Include any child abuse reports and other certification concerns and how they were resolved.
- How the certified family can provide a lifelong commitment to the child or young adult, including fully integrating the child or young adult into the potential guardian’s family.
- How the certified family has met the physical and mental health needs of the child or young adult, including the developmental, educational, social and emotional needs. Include the support of the child or young adult’s identity, including cultural, racial, ethnic, religious, spiritual, sexual orientation and gender identity.

If the potential guardian does not have a completed SAFE Home Study, the certifier will need to complete one unless the Child Welfare Permanency Manager approves an exception to this requirement. (Refer to OAR 413-070-0917 (5)-(7).
In completing the SAFE Home Study, utilize the process on the Consortium for Children website for ‘Converting a Non-SAFE Home Study to a SAFE Home Study.’ In the home study focus on the long term needs of the child or young adult and the ability of the potential guardian to meet those needs.

Section 4: Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules
Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules

A. Child Abuse Disposition

- Certification standards require that Oregon child abuse background checks are conducted for each applicant and each adult living in the home before the Department issues a Temporary Certificate of Approval and/or Certificate of Approval to provide foster care as well as prior to renewing the certificate. A child abuse background check is required for all adults living in the home and respite care providers.

- Out-of-state and out-of-country requests apply when the applicant, other person in the household, or prospective respite provider have lived outside of Oregon or the United States in the previous five years. The Background Check Unit will assist in completing out-of-state background checks on applicants only. Out-of-state and out-of-country child abuse background checks must be requested by the local office regarding all respite providers and all adults living in a foster home. Such requests must be made to each state or country in which the adults and respite providers have resided in the previous five years.

Level of Approval Required: Program Manager

Procedure

- When founded, unable to determine, substantiated or inconclusive dispositions — or similar disposition from another Department division such as OTIS or the equivalent disposition from another state or country — are identified, review all available documentation related to the disposition. If an applicant, adult member or other person in the household, or prospective respite provider has been identified as a perpetrator of abuse or neglect in a child protective services assessment, management approval is required before issuing a Temporary Certificate and/or Certificate of Approval and before placing children in the home (for an applicant or adult member of the household) and before approving the respite or child care provider. When an applicant, other person in the household, respite or child care provider is not the identified perpetrator, management approval is not required.

- Determine the following information in regard to the certification assessment:

  1. In determining whether to request management approval for the child abuse history, consider the following:

     - The time passed since the abuse occurred.
     - Age of the victim.
     - Who was the perpetrator or alleged perpetrator?
     - Relationship of the individual to the victim(s).
     - The nature of the abuse/neglect and whether serious injury occurred.
     - Whether a child was removed from the individual's care as a result of the abuse.
Chapter 8 • Section 4: Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules

1. Whether the individual was arrested and/or convicted of a crime related to the abuse.
2. Steps the individual took to address the issues that led to the abuse/neglect.
3. Level of participation in required or voluntary services resulting from the abuse.
4. How the issues that led to the abuse/neglect either are: no longer present, less present, or still present and impacting the individual’s current functioning.
5. Individual’s reports about the abuse now and what insights the individual has about what led to the abuse.
6. What changes the individual has made in their life (environmentally, behaviorally, and/or cognitively) that inform your assessment. Staff with the certification supervisor the details of the abuse history and assessment of the information obtained. Discuss whether management approval is appropriate or whether proceeding to withdraw or denial of the application is best.

2. Based on the information provided, the certification supervisor determines if a request for management approval will be made.

- If no management approval for Founded or Unable to Determine/similar disposition will be given, the following needs to occur:
  1. The applicant may voluntarily withdraw the application, or the Department must deny the application.
  2. For an adult member of the household, discuss with applicant(s) to advise that the family cannot be certified if the adult member of the household remains. Determine if they wish to have that individual move from the home or voluntarily withdraw the application. If neither, the Department must deny the application.
  3. For a prospective respite provider, notify the applicant(s)/certified family that the respite provider is not approved.

- Regardless of the decision to seek approval or to disapprove the individual with child welfare history, document the assessment on form CF 0117 Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules. The rationale behind the decision needs to be clearly documented regarding the applicant(s)/certified family’s abilities to meet the safety, health and well-being needs of children/young adults placed in the home. Information surrounding the applicant(s)/certified family’s skills, specialized training and any supports should be included to discuss the overall family functioning.

NOTE: Administrative rules require out-of-state and out-of-country requests be made when applicable. In the event that responses to these requests have not been received at the time of the Temporary Certificate process, and all other requirements for temporary certification have been met, certifiers can proceed with issuing a Temporary Certificate. It is mandatory to request child abuse background checks from other states and/or countries, but it is not mandatory to delay temporary certification until a response is received. Similarly, the out-of-state request needs to be initiated for prospective respite providers but does not have to be completed or a response obtained prior to approving use of the respite provider. Track response from the other state and if out-of-state child welfare history is found to exist on an already approved respite provider, quickly staff with supervisor for consideration to determine whether the respite provider’s approval to serve in that role should continue or be disapproved, and document analysis and decision-making on form CF 0117. All out-of-state abuse background checks must be completed prior to issuing a full Certificate of Approval.

- Submit the completed CF 0117 to the supervisor for signature (whether approval or denial). If the request is moved forward for approval, forward to the Program Manager.

- When there is child welfare history connected to an applicant but the applicant is not the identified perpetrator, management approval is not required. However, consider the following:
  1. The individual’s role as a non-perpetrator in abuse reports.
  2. Whether the individual had a passive role that may have contributed to the abuse.
  3. Whether the individual had prior knowledge of risk.
  4. History of closed at screening reports and unfounded dispositions.
  5. The individual’s perspective of the child abuse history.

Although this individual’s involvement would not necessitate a management approval, it provides the certifier with information regarding the skills and ability of the person to parent children in foster care. There may be information documented in a closed at screening that necessitates follow up and information in an unfounded CPS assessment that is inconsistent with the individual meeting certification standards.

Supervisor Role

- Review the completed CF 0117 submitted by the certifier.

- Determine if there is sufficient documentation of the analysis of the Founded/Unable to Determine/similar disposition or if more information is needed.

- Either approve or deny and sign the CF 0117. When approval is sought, submit the document to the district manager or designee program manager.

- Ensure certifier takes all appropriate actions.

- If not proceeding with certification due to (or in part of) the child abuse background check, unless the applicant wishes to withdraw the application, contact the certification AAG to set up a staffing for denial of application or revocation of a current Certificate of Approval.

B. Exceeding the Maximum Number of Children Placed in a Certified Home

- Management approval is required prior to placing an additional child in a certified home when:

  1. The maximum number of children will exceed four when placed with a single certified individual

  2. The maximum number of children will exceed seven in a home with two certified individuals. Only 6 children may be children in the care/custody of the Department.

  3. When any certified family(s) is caring for two children under the age of 3 and another child under the age of 3 will be placed in the home.
• In all cases, the total number of children residing with a certified family includes all children and young adults in the care and custody of ODHS, the family’s own children and other children under the age of 18 also residing in the home and not in the Department’s custody.

Level of Approval Required: Child Welfare Program Manager or Designee

Procedure

• Speak with caseworkers of children/young adults placed in the home and determine the impact of placing additional children in the home on the certified family’s overall ability to provide quality care, if possible, prior to the overfill occurring. If it is not possible to speak with each caseworker prior to the placement of an additional child, ensure that a conversation occurs with the caseworker and/or caseworker supervisor as soon as possible.

• The certifier and the caseworker of children/young adults in the certified home should together assess the needs of the children/young adults for whom the request is being made.

• Supervision Plans are required for all children placed in certified homes whose CANS screening results indicate enhanced supervision is needed to maintain the safety and support of the well-being of the child/young adult.

• Caseworkers are required to provide a completed copy of the Supervision Plan to the certifier assigned to the identified certified provider.

• Supervision Plans are located in the child’s OR-Kids case file cabinet under Services>Treatment Plan.

• When this information is not found in the child’s OR-Kids case file, contact the child’s caseworker for the information.

• Review Personal Care Service Plans for each child who has Level 1, 2, 3, or 4 services to understand the medical tasks and responsibilities placed upon the certified family to meet the medical needs of children/young adults currently placed in the home. Review the specific tasks required to meet the child/young adult’s medical needs.

• Children with a Personal Care Service Plan each have identified medical needs that require additional tasks to be performed by the certified family.

  1. Personal Care Service Plans are located in the child’s OR-Kids case file cabinet under Health Record>Other.

• When the majority of children/young adults — those in the home and those being considered for placement — have supervision plans or personal care service plans, assess whether is it reasonable to expect this certified family to be able to meet each child/young adult’s individual needs.

• When reviewing this material, consider the additional expectations placed on the certified family in conjunction with their skills, abilities and willingness to meet the special needs of each child currently placed in the home.

• Consider whether the certified family has effectively been able to ensure each child/young adult’s case plan needs are being met, including education, medical, dental, and mental health care. Consider the following questions:

  1. How long has the certified family been certified, and how much experience do they have caring for the total number of children/young adults being considered? If there have been concerns expressed about the care of children/young adults placed in their home, how were those concerns addressed, and were they resolved?

2. How does this certified family manage stress?

3. Will placing additional children/young adults in the home reduce the certified family’s ability and desire to form individual relationships with each child/young adult?

4. Will this certified family need additional supports to meet the needs of these children/young adults; if so, is the support available and sufficient?

5. Will the certified family request assistance or seek out additional training when needed?

6. Is the certified family’s home large enough to provide adequate space for each child/young adult, including bedroom space?

7. Is the home emergency or fire escape plan reasonable considering the number and needs of the children/young adults?

8. If the certified family has caretaking responsibilities for others, such as adult children or other dependent adults, what impact do these responsibilities have on the certified family’s ability to provide care to another child/young adult in the home?

• Discuss the assessment of the above-listed factors and dynamics with the certification supervisor.

• Complete the Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, CF 0117, and include a summary of the information known about each child’s needs in conjunction with the certified family’s skills, energy, personal characteristics and desire to meet the needs of each child. Include details of the Supervision Plans, Personal Care Services Plans, and the impacts this may have by placing additional child(ren)/young adult(s) in the home.

• Submit the completed document to the certification supervisor and/or Child Welfare program manager for review, approval and signatures.

• Additional children cannot be placed in a certified home until there has been supervisory and/or program manager approval.

• When a certified home has been approved to care for additional children/young adults, the assigned certifier must visit in the certified family’s home a minimum of every 90 days. Document the home visit in Provider Notes noting any strengths or concerns and how concerns have or will be addressed.

NOTE: Best practice suggests frequent contact with the provider by phone, email, and in person. This provides additional insight in order to assess the provider’s continued willingness and ability to meet each child’s unique needs. Being alert to any early warning signs, maintaining availability for support and having a nonjudgmental attitude is an important factor that can contribute to the certified family’s continued success in meeting the individual needs of each child in the home. In many cases, maintaining nonjudgmental and supportive communication will also allow the provider to acknowledge when they may be struggling.

Supervisor Role

• The certification supervisor approves when appropriate and signs the Request for Management Approval.
• Ensure the certifier visits the certified family a minimum of every 90 days and is alert to any signs that the certified family is overly challenged by having this number of children placed in the home.

• When a certified home remains above the limits of children, overfilled on the date the Management Approval is slated to end, the supervisor and assigned certifier determine whether to extend the approval based on:
  1. Caseworker reports.
  2. The certified family’s ability to meet the educational, medical, dental and mental health needs of each child/young adult.
  3. Each child/young adult’s needs for nurturing, family inclusion, individual attention and supervision.

• After considering the above, the supervisor determines the appropriateness of approving an additional Management Approval for overfill.

C. Extending the Response to an Application Beyond 180 Days

• There may be instances in which an application is unable to be fully assessed within 180 days of receipt of a completed application. Circumstances justifying an extension include, but are not limited to, the following:
  1. An influx of assessments that hindered the completion of this assessment;
  2. Illness: include the period of time the certifier is absent from work contributing to the need for additional time;
  3. Information received during the assessment process requiring additional time to assess;
  4. Circumstances beyond the control of the certifier, such as: one or both applicants’ unavailability; and/or
  5. Requested additional information was not received in time to complete the assessment.

Level of Approval Required: Child Welfare Program Manager

Procedure

• Request approval from the Program Manager when circumstances have occurred preventing completion of assessment activities within 180 days of the receipt of an application to become a certified family.

• Program Manager may approve an extension based on information contained in the request:

  1. Completed requests for extension include information of the circumstances that prevented the completion of certification assessment and activities not completed as well as a plan to ensure completion within a reasonable amount of time. Supervisory approval is required prior to submitting the request to the program manager.

Supervisor’s Role

• Ensure certifiers are managing their time and workload appropriately;
• Ensure certifiers keep you informed in advance when it may not be possible to complete an assessment within 180 days;
• Provide mentorship and coaching when workers need additional support or training;
• Review all management approvals for additional time and assess the appropriateness of the request;
• Review and approve all appropriate requests for Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, CF 0117, prior to submission to the next approval level.

D. 180-day Temporary Certificate, Extension

• Level of approval required:
  1. 30-day approval — Supervisor
  2. More than 30 days — Child Welfare Program Manager

Procedure

• Document detailed information regarding the circumstances preventing the completion of all assessment activities within 180 days.
• Document activities not completed as well as a plan to ensure completion within the next 30 days.
• Complete the Request for Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, and meet with the supervisor to review the request.
• Submit the request to the supervisor for extending the Temporary Certificate for 30 days.
• If after the 30 days there continues to be extenuating circumstances so that the full Certificate of Approval cannot be issued, meet with the supervisor to discuss requesting an additional extension to the Temporary Certificate. If the request is granted that an additional extension is needed, the program manager evaluates the request based upon:
  1. Circumstances justifying an extension beyond 30 days; and
  2. The certifier’s plan to complete the assessment within the requested period of time (stating amount of additional time likely needed).

Supervisor’s Role

• Ensure the following:
  1. Certifiers are managing their time and workload appropriately.
  2. Provide mentorship and coaching when a certifier needs additional support or training in completing timely work.
  3. Review all requests for additional time and assess the appropriateness of each request.
  4. Review requests for Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, CF 0117, and approve each request prior to submission.

E. Applicants who Provide Adult Foster or Adult Day Care

Level of Approval Required: Child Welfare Program Manager or Designee
Procedure

• When an applicant is also an adult foster care or adult day care provider, there are several steps required prior to certification. Most of the difficulties for these applicants are due to the administrative rules for conducting criminal records checks on adult foster care or adult day care clients in the home. Assess the need for certification of this specific home prior to proceeding with certification, and consult with the Foster Care Coordinator when necessary. These certifications are rare and usually occur when the applicant is a relative to the child needing substitute care.

• The certifier contacts Community Developmental Disability Program (CDDP) Foster Care Certifier/Licenser to request obtaining criminal history for the adult day care or foster care clients in the applicant’s home and forwards the 1011F form to the adult’s CDDP Services Coordinator to fill out and obtain consent for the 1011F form.
  1. If the adult is their own guardian and is capable and willing to give consent, the CDDP Services Coordinator obtains consent from the adult and proceeds.
  2. If the adult is their own guardian and declines to give consent, the CDDP Services Coordinator stops the process, and the certification process ends.

• When an adult has a legal guardian who provides consent, the CDDP Services Coordinator follows the described process for securing a criminal history background check.

• If the adult’s legal guardian declines to give consent, the CDDP Services Coordinator stops the process, and the certification process ends.

• When an adult is their own guardian but is unable to give consent, and a family member provides consent, the CDDP Services Coordinator follows the described process for securing a criminal history background check.

• If the family member declines to give consent, the CDDP Services Coordinator stops the process, and the certification process ends.

• When an adult is their own guardian, is unable to give consent, and does not have a family member or legal guardian from whom consent can be obtained, the adult’s CDDP Services Coordinator requests consent from the adult’s Individual Service Plan team.

• If the ISP team declines consent, the CDDP Services Coordinator stops the process, and the certification process ends.

• When an adult resident’s background check is approved by Background Check Unit (BCU), the assessment of the applicant continues.

• When BCU does not approve an adult resident’s criminal history, the child welfare certifier and supervisor will determine whether to pursue local office and administrative exception as outlined in policy, OAR 413-120-0400 thru through 413-120-0470.

• When a request for exception has been approved:
  1. A copy of the completed, approved exception will be sent to the CDDP services coordinator.
  2. The approved exception will be maintained in the provider’s certification record at the Child Welfare local office and at the CDDP.
3. The CDDP will send a copy of the approved exception to the Developmental Disability Services (DDS) certification/licensing coordinator to be included in the provider’s certification record.

4. The CDDP will send a copy to the DDS certification/licensing coordinator to be included in the provider’s certification record.

Supervisor Role

- Provide support and direction to the assigned certifier.
- Actively participate with the:
  1. Community Developmental Disability Program
  2. ISP teams, and
  3. DDS services coordinator assigned to adults in this home. Provide and receive additional information that will contribute to decision making.
  4. Assist in the assessment of the functioning of adults living in the home.
  5. Provide the approval to proceed with management approval when it is deemed appropriate.

F. Applicants and Certified Families who Provide or Intend to Provide Child Care

- When a family currently providing child day care applies to become a certified provider, a thorough assessment should be completed to ensure the safety and well-being needs of both the foster children/young adults and the children being cared for in day care. This also applies when a certified family informs the certifier of their intent to apply for a family day care license.
- Child Care Division The Early Learning Division (ELD) licenses and regulates child care facilities. Child care regulations contain basic health and safety standards for child care facilities and family day care, including the number and ages of children. When a child day care provider also provides foster care, the individual is responsible for including the number of foster children/young adults and the number of day care children. That total cannot exceed the number of children they have been licensed to care for by ELD. Child Welfare cannot give permission to waive the child care regulations or approve or deny anyone from providing day care.

Level of Approval Required: Child Welfare Program Manager or Designee

Procedure

- When a certified day care provider applies to become a relative or regular foster care provider, secure a release of information from the applicant to the ELD allowing contact to learn the history and status of this child care provider relating to safety and well-being of children.
- Consider child specific applicant’s relationship to the child(ren)/young adult(s) for whom they are seeking certification.
- Assess the applicant’s or certified family’s skills and abilities, along with the specific needs of the child(ren)/young adult(s) being considered for placement or currently placed in the home.
• Consider the potential number and ages of children/young adults in the home when an applicant or certified family plans to provide both foster and day care.

• Assess the applicant’s or certified family’s plan for supervision of the children/young adults in the home.

• Consider the known behavioral or medical issues of the child(ren)/young adult(s) placed in the home or those being considered for placement.

• Consider any prior child safety concerns, assessments or other caregiving concerns during the period of time the family has been certified.

• Complete assessment of information gathered, and based on the assessment, determine if the applicant or certified family is able to meet the needs of both foster youth and children in the home receiving child care.

• Maintain contact with the ELD for updates, including concerns and total number of children in the home.

• Meet with the certification supervisor, review the assessment and recommendation.

Supervisor Role

• Determine if the assessment and recommendation to approve this individual providing both day care and foster care is thorough and the certifier sought input from caseworkers and other appropriate parties.

• Approve or deny the request, and if approved, submit to the Child Welfare Program Manager for approval.

• Direct the certifier to monitor this home closely.

• Ensure the certifier maintains contact with the ELD and reciprocal sharing of concerns or changes in the certified family’s home.

• Ensure the certifier has informed the certified family of reporting any changes in circumstances or plans to increase or decrease the number of children in day care.

• Exercise caution when additional children will place this home over capacity.

G. Family Requests to be Certified by Local Office in Another County

Level of Approval Required: Child Welfare Program Manager or Designee

Procedure

• Approval is required from the local office in which an applicant family resides when the applicant family is certified in another county or local office within a district.

• Approval to proceed is required prior to beginning the expedited certification process. Commonly, an applicant family is applying for certification for the placement of a relative child or sibling group. Some counties/districts have developed intercounty agreements for situations such as this. If that is the case,
Chapter 8 • Section 4: Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules

A CF 0117 is not needed prior to the approval to proceed.

- The certification supervisor from the county having custody of the child, for whom the child specific certification is needed, contacts the local office certification supervisor in the applicant’s county of residence to determine local staff ability to conduct an expedited certification within the requested timeframe.

- When completion of an expedited certification process is needed before staff in the applicant’s county of residence obtains written approval, request verbal approval from the supervisor to proceed with requesting Management approval. Approval may come from the Child Welfare Program Manager or Child Welfare Certification Supervisor.

- Complete the Management Request using CF 0117 form, documenting the justification for the request.

- The Child Welfare Program Manager or Child Welfare Supervisor reviews the request and notifies the worker or certification supervisor of the decision.

- A Temporary Certificate can be issued once management approval has been given.

Supervisor Role

- Certification supervisors in both the county in which the applicant resides and the county having custody of the children confer and determine how to proceed based on certifier availability.

H. Exempting Attendance to Foundations Training for General Applicants

- Foundations training must occur before or within 12 months of an issued certificate unless the applicant has written documentation of completion of equivalent training within the past two years from the date of the current application.

Level of Approval: Certification Supervisor

Procedure

- Request documentation from the applicant(s) to demonstrate the curriculum completed and evaluate its equivalency to Oregon’s Foundations training.

- Assess the family’s parenting and caretaking skills related to the Foundations curriculum content. Does this family already have sufficient mastery of skills covered?

NOTE: Discuss with the family their understanding of caregiving as it relates to their understanding of parenting children who have been abused/neglected. Ask prompting questions around “what if” scenarios to assess their understanding and what they may do in certain situations.

- Prepare and submit to the certification supervisor the request for Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, CF 0117, exempting the family from taking Foundations training. If this is a Child Specific family, include the proposed training plan.

- Complete the development of an individualized training plan, including subject areas required by administrative rule, when approval has been obtained.
NOTE: Waiving Foundations training does not equate to the family not having any training requirements. The family is still responsible for completing training requirements.

Supervisor Role

- Determine if there is sufficient information based on the family’s skills and prior experience caring for this child to approve the request to exempt the family from taking Foundations training.
- Review the proposed individual training plan; determine if the plan is sufficient to meet the special needs of the child placed in this family’s home.

I. Exempting Attendance to Foundations Training and Approval of Individualized Training Plans for Providers Who Hold a Child Specific Certificate

- Exceptions to the required Foundations training is rare. It may be granted when the applicant is a relative of the child coming into care with extensive experience in child rearing or a relative who has provided care to the child prior to Department and court involvement with the family.
- Individualized training plans are developed with families holding a child specific certification and having placement of a child with few specialized needs, a consistent relationship, the skills and knowledge to generally parent the child adequately without attending Foundations training and in situations where attending Foundations training would cause a hardship for the family.

Level of Approval Required: Certification Supervisor

Procedure

- Determine, with the assigned caseworker, the strength of the relationship between the child and relative.
- Consider whether the family has previously been responsible to provide primary care of the child. If known, was the care provided appropriate and without concerns?
- Meet with the family and assess the ability and desire to work with Child Welfare, the relationship with the child placed in the home, and understanding and willingness to meet the child’s needs.
- Assess the family’s history and current functioning with consideration given to:
  1. Having no prior child abuse history;
  2. Motivation and understanding of the specific child’s needs and has demonstrated they are fully capable of meeting those needs.
- Meet with the supervisor and determine if the applicant meets the criteria for this type of specialized training plan.
- If the decision is no, work with the family to schedule attendance at Foundations training.
- If the decision is yes, prepare an individualized training plan for the family.
- In preparing the individualized plan, the certifier can meet with the family to gain additional information on matters of importance to the family in terms of caring for the specific child and can incorporate... some of the Foundations classes when they may be appropriate.

NOTE: If the family has been issued a Temporary Certificate, the individualized training plan must be created within 90 days of the issuance of the Temporary Certificate. An individual training plan must be completed prior to issuing the full Child Specific Certificate of Approval.

- Provide the CF 0117 for exempting the Child Specific applicant from completing Foundations training, documenting the justification for this plan, along with a copy of the completed training plan developed with the family to the certification supervisor.

NOTE: Some relatives may interpret training requirements to mean Child Welfare does not understand, accept or respect the nature of their relationship with the child, or they may feel they know the child well and feel insulted by the requirement to attend classes. Sharing with the family what is known about the unique challenges relatives face when a related child has experienced abuse and neglect can be helpful to the family. The relatives may not have seen some behaviors before or recognized these behaviors as trauma related. Try replacing the word “training” with “support,” and encourage their participation.

Supervisor Role

- Review individualized training plans for the following:
  1. Does an individualized plan sufficiently address the certified family’s need for support and education?
  2. Is the plan realistic, and is the certified family in agreement?
- Encourage creativity when certifiers develop individual training plans.

J. Individualized Training for a Foster Parent due to Level of English Proficiency or Receptive Language Impairment

Level of Approval Required: Certification Supervisor

Procedure

- Several resources to assist certified families receiving required training are available for non-English speaking certified families and those who are receptive language impaired. For example:
  1. Translated materials;
  2. Interpreters and interpretation services;
  3. Interpretation equipment;
  4. Internet resources;
  5. Smart phone language translation technology; or
  6. Local community resources
- For additional information about translation resources, see Section 6 of this chapter regarding training.
- Meet with the supervisor to staff the case, and determine if the family needs some type of translation or interpretation services to attend training.
• If translated training is needed, complete the management approval form describing the need for the specialized translation or interpretation services.

• Provide the CF 0117 along with a copy of the completed training plan developed with the family to the supervisor.

Supervisor Role

• Review all plans; provide feedback and additional resources.

• When training plans do not include a variety of appropriate topics, review with the certifier, and determine what should be added.

• Approve completed training plans.

K. Request for an Alternate Training Program for a Potential Adoptive Resource

Level of Approval Required: Adoption Program Manager

Procedure

• A family selected to adopt a child in the custody of the Department who has a home study approved by the Department or an Oregon private adoption agency must have completed Foundations training or have approval from the adoption program manager for an alternate training program.

• The Adoption Program accepts certification and training standards for out-of-state and out-of-country applicants and does not require Adoption Program Manager approval.

Supervisor Role

• Maintain a current list of Oregon private adoption agencies whose training programs have been approved by the Department Adoption Program Manager.

• Assist the certifier in obtaining adequate training information from private agencies whose training programs do not have prior Department approval.

• Review and assess the private adoption agency’s training curriculum material prior to requesting approval from the Adoption Program manager.

L. Placement from Other Agencies or Sources

• Certified families are required to notify their assigned certifier any time another agency has contacted them for the purpose of placing a child in their certified home.Level of approval required: Child Welfare program manager or designee

Procedure

• When an inter-division agreement is in place, follow the procedures of the inter-division agreement.

• When such an agreement has not been negotiated, notify the agency or program requesting placement that placement must not occur prior to Child Welfare Program Manager’s approval.
• Contact the agency or source and learn the basis upon which this request is being made. Some of the more common reasons, though not limited to those below, may be:

  1. The child/young adult was previously placed with the certified family and the relationship maintained;
  2. The certified family is committed to the well-being of the youth;
  3. The child/young adult is related to the certified family;
  4. The child/young adult has siblings placed in the certified family’s home;

• Determine if there will be a supervision plan in place documenting agency responsibilities, supervision and payment.

• Determine the current functioning and service needs of the child/young adult in relationship to the certified family’s skills to meet those needs.

• Assess the certified family’s motivation and interest in having the child/young adult placed in the home.

• Determine if the child/young adult is likely to pose a risk to any child/young adult currently placed in the certified home.

• Is the certified family optimistic, and do the family members believe the child/young adult’s transition into their home will be positive?

• Assess the functioning of children/young adults currently placed in the home; consult with caseworkers who have children/young adults placed in the home and together determine how this child/young adult is likely to fit considering current dynamics in the certified home.

• At the conclusion of this assessment, review the placement request with the certification supervisor and together determine if there is sufficient information and justification to request approval.

NOTE: If the certifier and supervisor have determined they want to request approval, be sure to include information regarding communication between the two agencies to prevent any unplanned placements or if an out-of-home care assessment is initiated.

• When the certification supervisor approves this placement, complete a Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, CF 0117, providing detailed information supporting this placement, and submit the completed request to the certification supervisor for signature.

• Submit the request to the Child Welfare program manager or designee.

• Notify the private agency and the certified family when a decision has been made.

Supervisor Role

• Assess the thoroughness of the certifier’s assessment and resulting recommendation.

• Direct the certifier to secure additional information prior to supervisory approval when needed to make an informed decision.

• Sign and process the management request when in support of the plan.

• Submit to the Child Welfare program manager when appropriate.

M. Barred Windows
• Barred windows are metal bars that are installed to prevent intruders from entering the home. When completing form 979, and Home Evacuation Plan, CW 0043, with the applicant(s), if the home has barred windows, the windows must have operable, quick release mechanisms.
• Quick release mechanisms should be accessible inside the home and not be accessible outside of the home if the window were to be broken. The quick release mechanism should not require any special knowledge to operate. Ask the applicant(s) to demonstrate how the quick release mechanism works.
• If the barred windows do not have operable and quick release mechanisms, the Child Welfare program manager must approve the plan for evacuation.

Level of Approval Required: Child Welfare Program Manager of Designee

Procedure

• If the barred windows do not have operable, quick release mechanisms, assess the applicant(s) plan for escape by another means of exit and rescue. Document this plan on Home Evacuation Plan, CW 0043.
• Discuss the home evacuation plan with the supervisor and program manager to determine if this plan will be appropriate for the children/young adults who may live in this home. Complete a Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, CF 0117, submit to supervisor for signature, and route to the Child Welfare program manager for approval.

Supervisor Role

• Assess the thoroughness of the certifier’s assessment and resulting recommendation.
• Sign and process the management request when in support of the plan.
• Submit to the Child Welfare program manager for approval.

N. Extension of Respite Beyond 14 Consecutive Days

• Respite care is a formally planned arrangement between a certified family and a pre-approved respite provider to temporarily relieve the certified family from assuming the care and supervision of a child or young adult. Respite care may only be used for up to 14 consecutive days at a time.
  1. There are instances in which it may be appropriate for respite care beyond 14 consecutive days.
     • Examples may include:
       (1) Certified family has an 18-day vacation in which it would not be appropriate to change placement of the child for 4 days. Payment to the foster parent may continue, but IV-E monies may not be claimed after 14 consecutive days have passed until the respite period ends.
  2. Authorization for respite care beyond 14 consecutive days must have prior authorization.

Level of Approval Required: Child Welfare Program Manager or Designee

Procedure

• Discuss with the certified family their plan for respite. Consider their request for respite beyond 14 consecutive days and if this is appropriate for the child/young adult they are caring for. Seek information regarding:

1. Where the respite care will occur (in the certified family’s home or in the respite providers home); and

2. The certified family’s knowledge regarding the respite providers’ skills and abilities to provide care for the child/young adult for an extended period.

- In consultation with the supervisor, discuss the family’s request for respite care beyond 14 consecutive days.
- Complete a Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, CF 0117, including the rationale for extending respite care, submit to supervisor for signature, and route to the Child Welfare program manager for approval.
- If form CF 0117 is approved by the program manager, notify the district Title IV-E specialist regarding the time frame beyond 14 consecutive days being approved. IV-E may not be claimed during the period beyond 14 consecutive days until certified care resumes.

Supervisor Role

- Assess the thoroughness of the certifier’s assessment and resulting recommendation.
- Sign and process the management request when in support of the plan.
- Submit to the Child Welfare program manager for approval.

0. 180-Day Home Visit Requirement Waived When No Child Remains in the Home

- When a certified family initiates Inactive Referral Status and children/young adults in care remain in this home, all certification standards and responsibilities remain in effect. The certified family must continue to meet certification standards and notify the Department when any required notifications go into effect during Inactive Referral Status. If while the certified family is on Inactive Referral Status, there are no children/young adults placed in the home, the certifier may request to have the 180-day home visit waived. Activities for the assessment of renewal of a Certificate of Approval may not be waived.

Level of Approval Required: Child Welfare Program Manager or Designee

Procedure

- If no children/young adults in care remain in the certified family’s home and a 180-day home visit is coming due, the certifier may request to waive the 180-day home visit requirement.
- Complete a Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules, CF 0117, and submit to supervisor for signature, and/or the Child Welfare program manager for approval.
- Document the approval in a provider note, indicating that the 180-day home visit was waived and the management approval may be found in the File Cabinet of the provider record.

Supervisor Role
• Assess the thoroughness of the certifier’s assessment and resulting recommendation.
• Sign and process the management request when in support of the plan.

Section 5: Managing Certified Homes
Managing Certified Homes

The Department is responsible for managing substitute care resources. These responsibilities include:

- Ongoing assessment to ensure the certified family is in compliance with certification standards and is providing safe and protective care;
- Support for continued professional development through ongoing training;
- Support for individual certified families who need additional support;
- Providing information and guidance to certified families regarding their role and responsibilities for the child placed in their home, and their rights as a certified family.

Contact Requirements

Procedure

- The certifier must conduct a home visit with the certified family at the following points in time:
  1. At least once every 180 days to support the relationship with the certified family, confirm a safe environment is provided, and assure compliance with certification standards.
     - Face to face contact must occur with at least one certified individual, and at least verbal contact with both certified adults.
     - When a certified family is on Inactive Referral Status and no child or young adult is placed in the home the 180 day visit requirement may be waived by the Program Manager or designee. Use the ce117, Management Approval for Specific Certification Rules to document the approval.
     - If a two-parent certified home, face to face contact must occur with one of the certified parents, and at least verbal contact with the other certified adult. At renewal, the certifier must see all members of the household.

  NOTE: Although not required to see each child (including foster children/young adults) and adults living in the household at 90- and 180-day home visit contacts, it is always good practice to do so. Seeing children and adults who live in the home provides the certifier with a greater understanding of family dynamics and ability to confirm safe environments.

     - Document in the Provider Record of OR-Kids, the certified family’s compliance with certification standards and confirmation that conditions in the home appear to provide for the safety, health and well-being for the children in the home.
  2. At least once every 90 days whenever a Temporary Certificate of Approval is effective.
     - If a two-parent certified home, the certifier may see only one of the certified parents at 90-day home visit contacts.
  3. At least once every 90 days whenever a certified family has been approved to exceed the maximum number of children in a home.
     - The visit occurs to ensure the certified family continues to demonstrate the skill and ability to provide safe and protective care for every child placed in the home.
     - The visit occurs whether or not the number of children in the home exceeds maximum capacity at the 90-day point in time. In other words, contact is required because of approval, not because of the number of children in the home at the time.

- If a two-parent certified home, the certifier may see only one of the certified parents at 90-day home visit contacts.

(1) The 90-day contact requirement ends when the approval to exceed maximum capacity is rescinded.

4. When assessing a certified family for renewal

5. When the composition of the certified family's household changes.

- If the change is due to an addition to the household, not including children placed by Child Welfare or another agency, the certification worker has contact with the new member of the household. Consider the age of the new person of the household when determining the need for contact. For example, if the new member of the household is the result of a birth, it is not necessary to have contact with the new baby.

- When a new adult has moved into the household, discuss with the certified family the role and contact he/she has within the family and contact. Obtain authorization to conduct the criminal history and child abuse and neglect history background checks and move through the background check process swiftly.

NOTE: Talk to certified families about their obligation to notify Child Welfare when someone joins or leaves the household. Whenever possible, the certified family should notify the certification worker in advance of a new household member. Certified families have up to one business day to notify their certification worker (or the certification worker’s supervisor) of anyone joining or leaving the household.

- When making contact with the family, assess the ability of the certified family to maintain conditions that provide for the safety, health and well-being for children with the new addition to the household.

6. At the completion of an assessment of child abuse or neglect when it has been determined that a Placement Support Plan is necessary for the certified family to maintain conditions that provide safety and well-being in the home.

7. If at any time it becomes known that a member of the certified family or member of the household is arrested or has a conviction that was not previously assessed, complete criminal records checks and make contact with the certified family.

8. Subsequent to the completion of a home visit, document in OR-Kids, provider notes, information gathered and assessed regarding the visit, the certified family’s compliance with certification standards, and confirmation that conditions in the home appear to provide for the safety, health and well-being for the children in the home. Be sure to document any changes in the family dynamics and if/when respite is being utilized.

Certifier contact with a certified family is advised:

1. Whenever necessary to support the certified family in the difficult task of caring for a child or young adult placed in the home.

2. Whenever a change occurs at the certified family’s physical home that could impact the safety of the environment or the health or well-being of the children in the home. This includes, but is not limited to, remodeling, adding a hot tub or pool as well as sustaining damage due to a natural disaster or fire.

3. During the assessment of a report of child abuse to describe the parameters of support available through the certifier during a CPS assessment.

4. A certifier may also have an occasional unscheduled home visit with the certified family to confirm the safety of the environment in the home. When considering an unscheduled home visit, consider the family’s and children’s schedules.

Ongoing Assessment and Confirmation of the Safety of the Environment

Procedure

For all casework staff, confirming safe environments is essential at each face-to-face contact with children and their caregivers. Use your experience and expertise to take into consideration the safety and well-being of the child(ren) in the foster home. Consider using Confirming Safe Environment tools to guide your assessment.

- Use every contact with a certified family as an opportunity for ongoing assessment of the family’s ability to provide the conditions in the home that support the ongoing safety, health and well-being of children placed in the home, including:
  1. The certified family’s adjustment to the children and the adjustment of the children placed in the home;
  2. The amount of care and supervision required for each child in the home;
  3. The certified family’s contacts and connection with others in the community;
  4. The certified family’s working relationship with the department;
  5. The certified family’s follow through on their ongoing training plan.
  6. When the certified family is a relative, how the other extended family members are understanding the family’s role in protecting the child;
  7. Whether the children placed in the home match the preferences and skills of the certified family;
  8. The relationships between the certified family (both the adults and the children) and the children placed in the home; and
  9. The level of stress the responsibility of substitute care giving adds to the home.
  10. When there were final desk guide ratings of 3, 4, or 5 in the initial or update home study assess whether the factors that lead or didn’t lead to a lower mitigation score are still true and consider whether current functioning is impacted.
  11. The certified family’s ability and willingness to provide the level of supervision required in a supervision plan, particularly when the child receives a Level of Care payment and therefore must have a supervision plan in place.
  12. The certified family’s ability and willingness to provide the Personal Care services needed when a personal care services plan is in place for a child or children in the home.

13. The certified family’s ability to use positive forms of discipline and behavior management that are in compliance with the certification standards listed in OAR413-200-0358(1-5).

NOTE: What contributes to the makeup of a safe substitute care environment? Empathy * Attachment and Bonding * Reality Testing and Judgement * Nature and Motivation to Provide Care * Quality of Relationships and Interaction * Protective Capacity* Assess in your contacts with the certified family and the children placed in the home how the child(ren) lives in an environment that is supportive and if the child feels accepted. Look at the quality of the placement. Is the certified family attentive and understanding of the child’s trauma and utilization of skills to parent the child? Assess the certified family’s stress level, how they handle stress and if there are any circumstances in their own lives impacting how they parent children in their home. You must know how to confirm the safety of an environment before you can see, analyze, and act to confirm or address it.

• If one or more of the conditions in the home do not support ongoing safety, health and well-being of children placed in the home, work with the certified family to identify and implement strategies and resources to improve the conditions in the home.

  1. Share ideas and strategies that have worked with other certified families.
  2. Help the family understand changes that may need to be made in family schedules, routines, parenting or discipline techniques, understanding a child’s behavior, etc.
  3. Connect with a child’s caseworker if there are challenges with a particular child in the home.
  4. Encourage additional training or resources on a particular topic. Review upcoming training sessions in the local branch or other branches within traveling distance.
  5. Search for any resources available through the lending libraries.
  6. Check on training modules available through Foster Parent College.
  7. Encourage attendance at foster parent or relative caregiver support groups.
  8. Encourage the certified family to take some time for themselves, even if it’s an evening away from the responsibilities of care giving.

• Document the contact, your assessment and any actions taken including but not limited to support provided to the certified family, training offered, placement changes, or certification actions in OR-Kids as a provider note.

• Schedule a home visit every 180 days.

  1. In your conversations with the certified family, assess the conditions that support ongoing safety, health and well-being of children placed in the home.
  2. Contact caseworkers of the children who have been placed in the home during the past six months for input on the care the certified family has provided to the children. Be sure to assess any areas of the certified family’s care giving which were raised as a concern.
  3. Review the Safety Assessment of the physical environment and walk through the entire home. Confirm continued compliance with certification standards.

  ▪ If there is an infant placed in the home, observe the sleeping area for the infant and verify with the certified family that Safe Sleep requirements are being followed. The sleeping environment for infants currently or prospectively placed in the home must be observed at renewal and documented in provider notes.

4. Review the certified family’s follow through on the training plan. Support and reinforce ongoing training and professional development.

5. Seek input from the certified family on additional supports or resources that would be helpful in their work as caregivers. Encourage involvement with other certified families.

6. Work with the certified family to identify and implement strategies or resources to improve the conditions in the home when appropriate.

NOTE: When documenting the result of the home visit, the certification worker should consider the following information:

- Who the certification worker met with, including all certified individuals as well as any children currently placed in the home
- Observations of the physical environment
- Any family changes or stressors that impact the certified home
- Any certification standards not in effect and the plan to assist the family to meeting the certification standards
- Any special circumstances such as a placement support plan, in-home services to assist the child, or the home is overfilled and the developed plan for these circumstances
- Certified family’s relationship with Child Welfare and other community partners
- If any children are on prescribed psychotropic medications and if these medications have changed since the last home visit
- If any children placed in the home receive and Enhanced Supervision or Personal Care rate, review of both of those plans
- How the certified family is applying the Reasonable and Prudent Parenting Standard
- Review the family’s training plan.
- Schedule a home visit every 90 days when management has approved the certified family to exceed maximum capacity.

1. In your conversations with the certified family, assess the conditions that support ongoing safety, health and well-being of children placed in the home.

2. Consider contacting the caseworkers of the children who have been placed in the home during the past three months for input on the care the certified family has provided to the children. Be sure to assess any areas of the home or environment or the certified family’s care giving practices which were raised as a concern.

3. Seek input from the certified family on additional support or resources that would be helpful in their work as caregivers.

4. Assess compliance with certification standards and the safety, health and well-being of all children placed in the home.
5. Document the assessment and any actions taken as a provider note in OR-Kids.

- When a caseworker or a screener reports a concern regarding the conditions in the home (a concern that is not a safety threat to a child).
  1. Follow the directions for the Certification, Safety and Well Being Procedure.

- Unscheduled Visits
  1. There may be times when you are in a neighborhood, or for other reasons, you may want to visit the family at a time that has not been previously scheduled with the certified family.
  2. When making an unscheduled visit, respectfully acknowledge your interruption of the certified family’s schedule and routine, be specific on the reason for your visit, and ask if you can take a bit of the certified family’s time for the visit.
  3. Following the visit, document the contact and any observations or actions taken in the Department’s Or-Kids information system as a provider note.

Contact considerations when an individual joins or leaves a household.

- General Assessment of new members of the household
  1. Ensure completion of criminal background checks and child welfare checks for new adult members of the home. When history is found, the certifier conducts an assessment of the history as described in the Assessment section of this chapter. If appropriate and after the assessment is complete, the certifier requests the required management approvals for the background history.
  2. Consider whether there is reason to request a juvenile background check when the new member of the household is a minor.
  3. Assess the current functioning of the new member of the household via interviews with the new adult and the certified family.
  4. Assess whether the certified family can ensure that the new member of the household meets certification standards listed in OAR 413-200-0308(3)(i)(A-D).

- There are other unique situations upon when an individual joins or leaves the household. Although these particular examples are not all-encompassing, they should provide the certification worker with an idea of how to assess the newly discovered information. The certification worker should always reach out to the certification supervisor to discuss the situation in detail before moving forward. Examples include:
  1. Divorce
  2. Married couple, separated and living in different residences
  3. Single certified person gets married
  4. Significant other moves into the home
  5. Single certified person adds adult child to certification

Situation 1: Divorce

A certified family who goes through the process of divorce cannot continue to have both adults certified for the care of the same child, unless they continue to live in the same residence. When one parent leaves the home, the certified family will need to make a decision about which of the certified adults will continue to be the certified family for the child.

- Ask the adult who will continue to be certified to complete an Application for Renewal or Change of Status (CF 1001). Update the provider record in Child Welfare’s information system to reflect the new composition of the household, including deactivating the certified person who will no longer be on the Certificate of Approval. When deactivating the person leaving the home, select the reason of “Other” and document in a provider note why that member was deactivated.

- Reassess the individual’s household and assess the individual’s capacity to provide safe and protective care in a safe environment.

- Inform each child’s caseworker of the divorce and the conclusions of the assessment in order that the caseworker can determine if continued contact with the previously certified divorced parent is in the best interest of the child.

- Update the home study or complete an addendum to the current study. If all certification standards can be met, recommend a new Certificate of Approval to the person who will continue to provide care to the child.

- Close the current certification of the two-parent certified family and create a new certification and Certificate of Approval.

Situation 2: Married couple, separated and living in separate residences

A certified family that goes through marriage separation, is living at separate residences and has a foster child in their care. The certified family must notify their certifier of anyone leaving the household.

- Further conversation and assessment needs to occur with both certified members about the current situation around their separation and intentions. Ask the family:
  1. How long do they anticipate the separation?
  2. Are they pursuing divorce?
  3. Do they both want to continue to be certified?
  4. Do both members wish to have parenting time of the foster child?
  5. What does childcare look like if both certified members are living in other residences?
  6. Will the foster child be staying at both residents? If so, which residence should be the certified home?

- If the family is proceeding toward divorce, please follow the instructions for divorce above in situation 1.

- If the family describes working on their marriage, the separation is temporary, and both members want to remain certified, the certifier should staff their assessment with their supervisor. The family could remain certified together but would need to continue their training requirements for both certified members as well as be present for 180-day home visits. The certifier also needs to consider if the certified member leaving the home results in an overfill capacity situation that would necessitate a management approval.
• From the information gathered and assessment, the certifier should contact the child’s caseworker and discuss the appropriateness of the home, including if it is in the child’s best interest to remain with the certified family.

• The certifier should document the assessment in an OR-Kids provider note as well as the decision made.

Situations 3 and 4: Single Certified Member gets married; significant other joins the home

• The certified family member must notify their certifier of any individual joining the household. Married and cohabitating couples must both be applicants unless Program Manager approval is given for unique circumstances.

• When a single parent marries or their significant other moves into the home, the current certificate (single) should end. The couple would complete a new application and be assessed. If there are children in the home, and it is necessary to do so, a temporary certificate may be issued. The certified family should have notified the certifier of the intent to get married. At that point, the certifier should explain the Department’s requirement that married couples and romantic partners who reside together must both be certified. If the new partner is unwilling to participate in the certification process, discuss the options of: voluntarily terminating their certificate or staffing the case for revocation.

NOTE: Why a new application? This is considered a new family composition with the addition of the spouse/significant other, which means the certification worker needs to assess the new applicant and the couple as a whole. This is not considered a renewal or change of status as it is a new family composition.

• The local office has the decision to conduct its assessment of the home in an expedited process. If this is a child specific certificate and the foster child is in the home, to continue with a valid certificate of approval, the branch can proceed with expedited assessment activities (413-200-0274) and issue a Temporary Certificate for up to 180 days.

• Close the previous certificate for the initial certified family in OR-Kids; add the spouse/significant other to the provider record; issue a Temporary Certificate; and document expedited approval on the new home study, as this is the first time the couple is being assessed together.

• Continue to assess the new family composition, using the Questionnaire 1 and 2 for couple, gathering new references, conducting new criminal history checks, and new child welfare checks for both applicants.

• Complete a new home study regarding this couple. Reference the applicant’s previous home study prior to the marriage/significant other joining the home.

• If after the full assessment is completed and the branch is proceeding to approve this family, issue a full two-year Certificate of Approval.

Situation 5: A certified individual wants to add an adult child as a certified member

A single adult and an adult child applying to become a certified family.

• Cohabitating couples must apply together. In this scenario, the adult child living in the home does not fall under the definition of cohabitating couple. The certifier should discuss with the parent/adult child the reasons both would like to be certified and consider ramifications of proceeding. What length of time do they anticipate they will live together? Is their permanency planning including complications that may occur? Are they both truly planning to co-parent? If the decision is to pursue joint certification, the certifier must:

1. Provide an application and have them complete it as Applicant 1 and Applicant 2. All assessment activities with any new application should be done with both applicants. Initiate the necessary criminal and child abuse checks and criminal history for both applicants.

2. Provide both Single Applicant Questionnaires 1 and 2 to applicants and follow certification process. Interview the applicants separately for questionnaire 2 as done for couples. Discuss with the applicants how they will handle disagreements regarding parenting, finances, or any other conflict that may arise.

• A currently certified single adult and their adult child would like to be certified together.

1. Discuss the reasons for wanting to be certified together as in a) above. If the decision is to pursue the certification of the adult child, the following process is completed:

2. Both adults would complete a new application as Applicant 1 and Applicant 2. If the current single certified adult parent has a certification open, keep the existing certificate open until the certification worker has completed the assessment process of both applicants. The adult child would not be considered certified until the entire home study process is completed and they are approved as co-applicants with a new certificate in both adults’ names issued.

NOTE: Why would a certification worker keep the current certificate open while assessing both applicants? Proceeding in this way prevents ending the current certificate and issuing a Temporary Certificate in the interim time, a situation which would prevent Child Welfare from utilizing IV-E funding during that expedited assessment period. Since an adult child living in the home isn’t required to apply, we can keep the existing certificate open while determining if a new certificate will be issued, with both individuals becoming certified.

• All assessment activities associated with a new application for certification should be done. Initiate the necessary criminal and child abuse checks for the adult child as an “applicant” for the first time; update the criminal history and child abuse checks for adult as part of the new application process.

• For the adult child, complete Questionnaire 1 and Questionnaire 2. For the adult parent, complete an Update Questionnaire. The information gathered during interviews and information you knew previously regarding the adult parent can be reflected upon a new home study. Do not use the “Update Home Study” template as the adult daughter/applicant is new and has not been studied.

• When the assessment of the family is completed, and if this family has an approved home study, terminate the adult parent’s single certificate and issue a new two-year certificate for both applicants.

• Assessment of visitors to the household:

1. When the certified family has guests staying in the home for a short period of time, no background checks are required or authorized.

2. Ask the certified family how long the visitors will be staying, what the sleeping arrangements will be, and whether the visitors will be providing any babysitting or respite care. Complete the required background checks for respite care providers if the visitors will be providing respite care.
3. When the visitors are staying for more than a few weeks or stay beyond the planned amount of time, consider them as additional members of the home and follow the procedure for assessing new members of the household. Examples might include but not be limited to:
   - A college student coming home for the summer
   - A friend or family member staying beyond a few weeks while looking for housing.

4. When the certified family has family or friends who frequently visit the home, no background checks are required. If the frequent visitors are staying the night on occasion, ask about sleeping arrangements and whether the visitors will be providing any care to the children in the home.

5. It is the responsibility of the certified family to ensure that all visitors to the home are safe and appropriate persons to be around foster children. When there is cause or reason to be concerned about those frequenting the home or the certified family’s ability to exercise sound judgment in this area comes into question, the Department has discretion to do background checks:
   - Consult with your supervisor.
   - Consider convening a Certification, Safety and Well-Being Review Committee to discuss concerns and form a plan to ensure the safety of the children placed in the home, which may include removal of the children in extreme situations.
   - Consider consulting with the Foster Care Coordinator.

Supervisor’s Role

- Ensure the certifier is conducting the required contacts, ongoing assessment of the safety of the environment, assessment of the safety, health and well-being of the children, and completing required documentation.
- Staff cases with the certifier during regular supervision and when concerns arise.
- Advise the certifier on actions and resources for a certified family that needs support.

Respite Providers, Child Care and Babysitters
Overview

The Department supports foster parents’ use of respite care, child care and babysitters. Respite care is a formal planned arrangement to relieve a certified family’s responsibilities by an individual temporarily assuming responsibility for the care and supervision of the child or young adult and can range anywhere from part of a day up to 14 days. Child care is the supervision of a child by a licensed, approved or listed caregiver required due to employment or education program of the certified family. Babysitting is the provision of temporary, occasional care for a child or young adult that is not longer than 10 consecutive hours and not overnight. If the temporary care is longer than the 10 consecutive hours, is overnight, or is shorter but is a planned formal arrangement, it falls under the definition of respite care. The importance in this distinction lies in the difference in the level of assessment required by the Department for each of these types of care.

Procedure for Assessing Potential Respite Care Providers

- When the certified family intends to use an individual for respite care, the assessment of potential respite care provider is the responsibility of both the certified family and their certifier. This is whether the respite provider was identified by the certified family, or if Child Welfare provided the certified family with potential respite provider resources. The certified family must assure that respite providers have the ability to meet the needs of the children. The certifier must conduct background checks and assess information from those checks.

1. Check for criminal history using the signed consent for background check (1011F). If respite care will be provided in the respite caregiver’s home, all adult members of the prospective respite caregiver’s household must have criminal background and child welfare background checks completed as described in this section. Fingerprint results must be obtained if:
   - The individual has ever been arrested, charged, or convicted of a crime.
   - The individual has lived outside of Oregon in the previous 5 years.

   (1) A respite provider may be used prior to receiving fingerprint results. If there has been criminal history, either self-disclosed or show on the LEDS background check, a management approval must be obtained prior to the individual providing respite care.

2. Check for child welfare history, including checking other states in which the individual has lived in the previous 5 years. The Background Check Unit (BCU) will initiate these requests upon receiving the 1011F and fingerprint cards.

3. Assess any criminal history or child welfare history and determine whether to seek management approval for the individual to provide respite care.

4. If criminal or child welfare history is found, the certifier, in consultation with the certification supervisor, determines whether to continue the assessment or deny the request to use the individual for respite care.

5. If the decision is made to continue the assessment of the individual, interview the potential respite care provider to assess the criminal or child welfare history and follow the procedures outlined in Section 3, Assessing Criminal History and Child Abuse History, of this chapter.

- When the certified family intends to use an individual certified as a foster parent for the purpose of respite care, the certifier for the certified family who intends to provide the respite care is responsible for the assessment.

1. Determine whether the certified family who is going to provide respite has the skills to meet the children’s needs.

2. Determine whether providing respite care to additional children would impact the certified family’s ability to provide for the safety, health, and well-being of the children already placed in the home.

NOTE: When assessing this information, take into consideration the needs of the current children in the home and needs of the children needing respite. The certification worker should staff with the certification supervisor about the unique needs of the children in the home and any impacts additional child would place on the certified family.

- When the certified family intends to use a licensed, registered, or approved childcare center, no assessment is required by the certifier. However, ensure that the caseworker is aware of the plan and supports the plan.

- If the certified family intends to use an individual exempt from licensing requirements from the Office of Child Care and is not listed through SSP, the certifier must conduct the background checks described above for respite providers.

- The assessment of potential babysitters is the responsibility of the certified family. The certified family must be reasonably sure that persons chosen for babysitting does have child welfare or criminal history or the other behaviors or circumstances that would pose a risk to the safety, health, or well-being of the child/children.

- When it becomes known to the certifier that a potential or current babysitter for a certified family may have some child welfare or criminal history or some other behavior/circumstance that could pose a risk to the safety, health, and well-being of the child/children being babysat, the certifier has the discretion to require a background check be completed by Child Welfare prior to further use of the babysitter. When unsure of what circumstances under which to exercise this discretion, consult with the certification supervisor who may also decide to consult with the Foster Care Coordinator.

- When alternative care is going to be used in which the only access to a working telephone is the a cell phone, the certifier ensures that there is a plan for the alternative care provider to have access to a working telephone while providing respite care or babysitting.

Placement Support Plans

Placement support plans are designed as a process for child welfare to partner with a certified family in maintaining conditions that provide safety, health, and well-being for children placed in the home by the department. A placement support plan is developed when a certifier becomes aware that a certified family needs additional training or instruction to improve their care giving practices or the certified family is not in compliance with certification standards and the non-compliance does not compromise child safety. During a CPS Assessment of a certified family, Placement Support Plans should never be used in place of an Initial Safety Plan or Protective Action if there are Safety Threats or Present Danger identified.

NOTE: What is the difference between an Initial Safety Plan and a Placement Support Plan in a Department Certified
Initial Safety Plan

- Initial Safety Plans (ISPs) should never be used with a certified family if the impending danger safety threat/s are more likely than not to still be present at the conclusion of the CPS Assessment.

- When it’s likely that more information may resolve an impending danger safety threat, the CPS supervisor may approve an ISP. ISPs should be time limited to allow for expedited information gathering.

- Impending danger safety threats must be managed by safety actions/safety service providers that have been confirmed to be suitable. Never use a caregiver who is the alleged perpetrator to provide protection or any other adult who was aware of the threats to child safety and did not protect.

- If at the conclusion of the CPS Assessment an impending danger safety threat remains, the ISP must be ended, and children must be removed. Ongoing Safety Plans can never be used to manage safety following the out-of-home care assessment

Placement Support Plan

- Children are safe in the certified foster home.

- Only used when the certified family needs additional support, training, services or resources to maintain safety and well-being of children in the home; or when certification standards are not being met.

- Time limited agreement.

- Plan outlines the supports the Department will provide to the certified family as well as any actions the certified family will participate in.
Procedure

- When the certifier learns that a certified family needs additional support, either through routine contact with the certified family during visits, during training or support groups, when the certified family is transporting a child to a family visit, or other contact with the certified family, consult with the certification supervisor regarding the certified family’s circumstances and need for support to develop ideas to support the certified family.

- Gather additional information from the certified family, from children placed in the home (when appropriate), from caseworkers of children placed in the home, and from other collateral contacts that may have information regarding the conditions in the home or the care provided for the children placed in the home.

- Contact the certified family and arrange a meeting to talk about the circumstances existing or occurring in the home and the need for additional support or services for the certified family.

- Work with the certified family and others to identify actions and/or services that will assist the certified family in skill development, caretaking ability, and/or compliance with certification standards or other administrative rules.

- Work collaboratively with the certified family either in person or phone conversation to plan the services or activities in which the certified family will participate and what the department will do to support the certified family.

- Develop the written placement support plan that specifies:
  1. The actions or services in which the certified family will participate;
  2. Any actions or services Child Welfare will provide to support the family in maintaining conditions that provide safety and well-being for children placed in the home;
  3. The agreement that the certified family will participate in the actions or services;
  4. An agreement that the Placement Support Plan will be reviewed within 90 days; and
  5. An anticipated end date for the Placement Support Plan.

- Obtain the supervisor’s approval of the Placement Support Plan.

- Provide a copy of the Placement Support Plan to the certified family, scan a copy and save to the file cabinet of the Provider Record in OR-Kids, and document a summary of the Placement Support Plan as a provider note.

- Send an email notice to caseworkers of each child placed in the home of the Placement Support Plan in the certified family’s home.

- Maintain regular contact with the certified family to monitor effectiveness of the Placement Support Plan and ensure the actions and activities outlined in the Placement Support Plan are achieving the desired result.

- Review the Placement Support Plan on the designated review date. Ensure that the certified family can meet the needs of the children placed in the home and is in compliance with certification standards before ending the Placement Support Plan.

- When the Placement Support Plan has ended, document the end of the placement support plan in OR-
Kids provider notes and notify the caseworkers of each child placed in the home

Supervisor Role

- Consult with the certifier in the preparation of the Placement Support Plan.
- Review and approve the Placement Support Plan.

Sharing Information

About a child

- Child Welfare staff must notify the certified family of information about a child to manage child safety, to keep the members of the certified family safe, and to provide services to the child.

1. Child placement information is given to the certified family by the child’s caseworker on the Child Placement Information For Foster Care and Residential Placements form CF6713 for ODHS child welfare placement information. This is accessed through the Department's information systems in Create Case Work > Placement Services > Child Placement information.

2. The caseworker can also share information from evaluations completed on the child may also be shared. This may include evaluations such as:
   - Psychological evaluation,
   - Mental health evaluation
   - Educational testing results, IEPs or 504 plans, and
   - Written reports from other professionals.

NOTE: Copies of mental health and psychological evaluations should have information redacted that is not specific to the child. This includes any birth parent confidential information.

3. The child’s family may also wish to share information regarding the child.

A child’s social security number

- If requested, a certified family may have a child’s social security number.

Note: Each year, about tax time, certified families ask whether foster children can be claimed on their personal income tax returns. Advise the certified family Child Welfare does not provide tax advice on income tax laws. You may refer them to the IRS website at http://www.irs.gov/ or the national foster parent association which often provides reference materials: http://nfpaonline.org/taxinfo.

About a Certified Family

- A certifier may disclose a foster parent’s/relative caregiver’s name, address, and phone number to the Oregon Foster Parent Association.

- A certifier may disclose foster parent/relative caregiver identifying information to a law enforcement agency for the purpose of a criminal investigation.

- A certifier may disclose information about a foster parent/relative caregiver when ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

- Other disclosures regarding a certified family’s information cannot be disclosed without the certified family’s permission or by court order.

- A certified family is given a copy of their SAFE home study and their SAFE Home Study Update. They can also have Medical Reports, and other documents they have completed and submitted to Child Welfare. The SAFE home study specifically states the sole purpose of the home study is for the assessment of the family for the purposes of certification to provide foster care or adoption in the State of Oregon.

- A certified individual can have a copy of the Medical Report B (CF 1257B) or Mental Health Information (CF 1258), because this information is related to an individual’s right to their to his or her own medical information under HIPAA unless information must be withheld from the individual if the information could cause harm to the individual or someone else.

- A certifier cannot disclose any other third party information in the family’s certification file to the certified family.

When a Certified Family Moves

Certification of a family is tied both to their family assessment, as well as to their physical residence. When a foster family moves to a new residence, the certifier must note any concerns about the certified family’s ability to meet safety, health and well-being of the child during the assessment. The certifier completes the following actions and should issue the certificate for the date that the application and CF 979 were signed by the certified family. As a certifier, encourage families to give Child Welfare as much advanced notice as possible prior to a move.

When a certified family moves to a new home in the same county

In each situation where a certified family moves, it is required to change the family’s address in OR-Kids. Each time the certified family’s address is changed, the certificate of approval is closed, and a pending certificate is created. A new address is created through the Provider Work option and going to the Maintenance drop down to create physical address. For more information about changing or maintaining an address or changing the designated branch, refer to OR-Kids online.

- When the certified family moves to another residence in Oregon, the Certificate of Approval automatically terminates. The Certifier has up to 10 business days to assess the new residence. The Department may issue a new Certificate of Approval for the new residence after the activities described in this section are completed.

- The certifier must:
  1. Provide the certified family a CF 1001 form, Application for Renewal or Change of Status.
  2. Communicate the move to all caseworkers involved in case planning for children in the home.
  3. Complete a home visit within 10 business days of the certified family’s move, prior to recommending a Certificate of Approval for the family to the supervisor.
  4. Observe and assess the safety of the physical environment of the home and surroundings and document on form CF 979.
  5. Walk through every room in the home and each surrounding building
  6. Assess any concerns about the certified family’s ability to meet safety, health, and well-being needs of a child or young adult. Also, document those assessment activities in the provider record.
  7. Document in OR-Kids, as a provider note, the circumstances of the family’s relocation.
  8. Issue a new certificate once all certification items have been completed.
Note: If the new residence does not meet certification standards, the certificate of approval at the former address cannot remain in effect since it terminates with a move from the location. The certifier needs to take immediate steps to notify their supervisor and children's caseworkers who have children placed in the home, that the certificate terminated, and children cannot remain in this home.

9. Transfer the certification file to applicable child welfare branch according to district procedure when there are multiple branches within a district.

Role of Supervisor

- Review the certification file to confirm all steps of certification are complete.
- Contact the supervisor of the certification unit of applicable child welfare office if the file will be transferred.
- Issue a new certificate with new address, once certification is complete.

When a certified family moves to a new home in another county

When the certified family moves to a residence in another county in the State of Oregon, the Certificate of Approval automatically terminates. The department may issue a new Certificate of Approval for the new residence after the activities described in this section have been completed.

- The Program Manager, or designee, of the branch that last certified the family must:
  1. Coordinate with the Program Manager, or designee, of the district the certified family has moved to regarding the transfer of information, record, and any certification responsibilities. Any certification concerns should be discussed.
- After a certification file has been transferred to the receiving county, the sending certifier must:
  1. Communicate the move to all caseworkers involved in case planning for children in the home.
  2. Notify the local office responsible for certification in the area where the family has relocated.
  3. Arrange with the new local office the logistics of completing the requirements to certify the family.
- The receiving certifier must:
  1. Provide the certified family a CF 1001 form, Foster Home Certificate Renewal or Change of Status Request if it has not already been completed;
  2. Complete a home visit and complete a CF 979 within 10 business days of the move, and assess the home to ensure it provides an environment that provides safety and well-being for a child in the home, prior to recommending a Certificate of Approval for the family to the supervisor.
  3. Document in Department’s information system the circumstances of the family’s relocation in provider notes.
  4. When the sending office (the area from which the family is moving) accepts the responsibility to complete the actions required in 2, the home provider record is not transferred until the required actions are complete.
  5. The receiving child welfare office issues a new certificate once certification is completed.
Role of the Supervisor

- The issuing Child Welfare office’s certification supervisor must notify the certification supervisor in the Child Welfare office in the county to which the certified family is moving of a family’s move.

Note: The certification file and ongoing Department responsibilities are transferred to the Child Welfare office in the county to which the certified family is moving, unless the district manager or designee in the county to which the certified family is moving has approved department certification responsibilities remaining in the Child Welfare office in the county from which the certified family is moving.

- Notify the certification supervisor in the receiving county to discuss the certification transfer.
- Review certification file, before transfer, to ensure file contains all necessary certification documents.

When a Certified Family Moves Out of State

- When a certified family wishes to move out of the State of Oregon with a child in the department’s custody, refer to Child Welfare Policy I-B.3.4.2, “Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children,” OAR 413-040-0200 to 413-040-0330, and to Chapter IV, Section 13, Placement in another state.

  1. The caseworker and certifier must work together to:
     - Assess whether it is in the best interest of the child or young adult to move out of state with the certified family.
     - Inform the court of the plan for the child or young adult to move out of state.

  2. The certifier:
     - Reviews the certified family’s certification to determine whether there are approvals for criminal history records or founded child abuse history, which could prevent the certified family being certified in another state. If so, contact central office ICPC staff or a Foster Care Coordinator and request additional information on whether the state to which the certified family will be moving has administrative rules that would prevent the family from being certified.
     - Notify the certified family regarding foster care reimbursement. Certified families who receive approval to move out of state with a child in their home, may continue to receive foster care reimbursement for that child for up to 180 days or until licensed or certified in the receiving state, whichever is earlier per child welfare policy, I-E.5.1, Maintenance and Treatment Payments. In addition, if a family is receiving a level of care payment, the caseworker will need to work with child welfare for the annual CANS screening that determines the level of care payment. The annual CANS screening may be completed by phone.
     - Notify the family their reimbursement rate will continue to be based on Oregon’s rates.

Note: Personal Care Services do not transfer to another state. The caseworker and the family will need to work with that state’s Medicaid providers to determine how personal care services are offered in that state.

Role of the Supervisor

- Ensure the certification file contains all necessary ICPC approvals and applicable paperwork.
When a Certified Family Moves Out of State with a Child in ODHS Custody with Developmental Disabilities Child Whose Placement is Paid Through the Office of Developmental Disabilities (ODDS):

• The ODDS program does not have an ICPC process. The best way to ensure a smooth transition is to have child welfare take responsibility for the family’s certification, as soon as approval has been given for the certified family to move out to another state.

• Notify the certified family they will have to enroll the child in the receiving state’s Developmental Disabilities program, as soon as possible after moving to the other state. The certified family will need to explore whether they need to become certified by the receiving state’s Developmental Disabilities Program or through the state’s Foster Care Program, as this differs from state to state.

• Contact central office ICPC staff or a Foster Care Coordinator and request additional information on administrative rules and the most appropriate program for the certified family in the state to which the certified family is moving.

When a Certified Family Moves Out of State with a Young Adult, Ages 18 through 20:

• The caseworker and the certifier:
  1. Work with ICPC to determine whether or not the receiving state’s child welfare program provides services to a child 18 years or older. Some states will issue a foster home license or certificate, but will not offer services such as face to face contacts or 90 day reports.
  2. Report this information to the court, to assist in determining whether or not it is in the child’s best interest to move to another state.

Risk Management Claims

The state of Oregon provides property and liability insurance for foster children through Risk Management Division. Claims should be made as soon after the loss or incident as possible, but generally must be made within 90 days of the incident. Payments do not exceed actual cash value for property losses or ‘economic’ losses for injury. Many factors determine payment reimbursement limits, such as the damage or injury being intentional or unintentional. A certified family’s own medical or disability insurance pays first for the injury claims. Risk management generally pays first for property claims. More information can be obtained from calling 503-373-7475 and at the Oregon Risk Management site online.

Role of the Certifier

• The certifier:

  1. Educates and informs certified families of the risk management procedure during the certification process (refer to Appendix 7.5).
  2. Ensures risk management forms are available to certified families.
  3. Ensures the child’s caseworker is aware of the claim and process to ensure completion in a timely manner, when a family calls a certifier about a possible risk management claim,
  4. Promptly shares information in order for the claim to be processed within the reimbursement time frames when risk management calls the certifier to verify claim information.
  5. Staffs the case with the supervisor and risk management, if there are concerns about fraudulent claims.

Role of the Caseworker

• The caseworker:

  1. Makes the risk management form, CF0003, available to the certified family upon request.
  2. Explains the process of risk management claims to the certified family.
  3. Notifies the certified family’s certifier of potential of a risk management claim.
  4. Promptly shares information in order for the claim to be processed within the reimbursement time frames when risk management calls the caseworker to verify claim information.
  5. Staffs the case with the supervisor and risk management, if there are concerns about fraudulent claims.

Section 6: Training and Support
Training and Support

Overview

- Child Welfare supports initial and ongoing training for foster parents, relative caregivers and potential prospective adoptive resources to provide children and young adults with caregivers who:

  1. Are provided opportunities for training and support to effectively parenting care for a child/young adult in a trauma-informed manner;
  2. Have an increased understanding of the perceived behavior difficulties presented when children and young adults externalize or internalize the emotion and experience of abuse, which is their reaction to trauma; and
  3. Realize the importance of self-care while also meeting the safety, health, and wellbeing needs of children and young adults.

Prospective caregivers, certified families and potential prospective adoptive resources participating in training continue to develop skills to parent effectively. Training provides information and tools to assist children and young adults in processing the experience of removal from their family and supporting family ties. Training also allows prospective and certified families to problem solve issues in a safe environment with support from individuals experiencing similar challenges.

These procedures cover Orientation, Foundations, and ongoing training requirements for applicants, certified families, and pre-adoptive parents.

This section also covers the biennial training plans developed through each District regarding utilization of Child Welfare Partnership classes and other training resources available through the Department.

All certified families are required to participate in training activities. These training activities include:

- Orientation to child welfare and the role of a certified family,
- Foundations training that includes information relating to caring for the population of children and young adults served by the Department, and
- Ongoing training to enhance skills and abilities during the course of certification.

Orientation and Foundations training is provided by Department staff in the branch offices around the state. Some private adoption agencies also provide the Foundations curriculum.

Ongoing training can be obtained through a variety of sources. Some ongoing training is provided by Department staff with knowledge in areas such as addiction, mental health, medication management, or department rules and procedures. Other ongoing training is obtained through various community resources, collaborative efforts between the local branch offices and community partners, regional or national conferences, support groups, books and articles, and other electronic resources available on line or through various libraries.

Procedure

Orientation
Orientation is intended to provide a high-level overview of information related to the Child Welfare system. There are multiple ways to present Orientation information.

A certifier can present the Orientation material during the application and assessment process. Orientation can be:

1. Incorporated into a group meeting of prospective or currently certified caregivers; or
2. Incorporated into the Foundations training schedule as a distinct, additional topic. When Orientation is incorporated into the Foundations training schedule, it should be the first topic covered.

A certifier can also present Orientation on a one-to-one basis during an expedited assessment process (issuance of a Temporary Certificate). In these instances, the certifier must present the Orientation within 30 days of issuing the Temporary Certificate of Approval.

A certifier conducting Orientation, whether in a meeting with a group of applicants or on a one-on-one basis:

1. Provides an individual with the booklet “Foster Parent Orientation Basics” (form 9800), and
2. Reviews content, emphasizes main points, answers questions, and provides specific local area information. Handing the booklet to an individual without conversation and review of the information is not considered an orientation.

Online Orientation can be accessed by prospective caregivers and currently certified foster parents from our public facing webpage: https://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/CHILDREN/FOSTERPARENT/Pages/Training.aspx The Online Orientation is available in both English and Spanish and has an accompany Knowledge Check to ensure learning objectives are met.

Note: The Child Welfare Caregiver Training Intranet page offers an example Orientation PowerPoint in both English and Spanish that can be downloaded and modified for local use. This page also offers a suggestion of packet items that can be provided to families as a resource.

- When a certifier conducts a one-to-one Orientation during a Temporary Certificate, answer the caregiver’s questions, and provide information regarding next steps in the assessment and certification process. Provide information on the caregivers role and the process of child welfare case management. When in doubt about case specific information,
- Connect with the child’s caseworker to ensure you are providing the newly certified family with correct information about caseworker contact, any visitation plans that have been arranged, and other case-specific information.

Foundations Training

Foundations training is a series of in-classroom trainings based on a standardized curriculum. Families may enter Foundations training prior to applying for becoming a certified caregiver, or, can apply to become a certified caregiver and then participate in Foundations training. Foundations training must occur before or within 12 months of issuance of a Certificate of Approval.

As the certifier, discuss the plan for completing Foundations training within 12 months from the issuance of the initial certification (example: Temporary Certificate of Approval). If the family was not initially issued a Temporary Certificate of Approval but was initially issued a Certificate of Approval and training was not previously completed, a plan needs to be made with the family to ensure they complete Foundations training within 12 months from that issuance. Provide the caregiver with Foundations training session dates and registration information. Note: If a Foundations offering in a different area of the state is more accessible to the caregiver due to schedule or location, provide them with the appropriate contact/registration information for that training. A full list of Foundations training offerings may be found on the Child Welfare Caregiver Training Intranet page.

Sometimes when a certified family has been certified for several years, it is appropriate to recommend taking one or more of the Foundations classes again as a refresher course.

NOTE: Foundations is not required if the applicant provides written documentation of completion of equivalent training content from Child Welfare or another licensed child-caring agency within two years of an applicant’s dated application for certification, and the certification supervisor agrees to waive Foundations. Waiving Foundations training is documented on form 117. The waiver of participating in Foundations training does not indicate that the applicant does not have to do any training – a training plan should be developed to enhance the caregiver’s skills and abilities to care for the population they intend/are caring for. That document what training opportunities the caregiver will participate in. Utilize form 2831 “Training Plan for Child Welfare Certified Foster Parents and Relative Caregivers” to document the training plan.

- When a certifier issues a Temporary Certificate:
  1. Work with the certified family to enroll in Foundations training as soon as possible. The process of enrolling a certified family in Foundations training varies across the state in each district and local office. The certified family should be made aware of the training requirements as part of initial and subsequent conversations.

- Encourage participation and provide information about any available supports, such as child care or transportation that may be available.

- Support attendance by sharing the networking opportunities with other foster parents or relative caregivers that come with attendance.

- Facilitate contact with other certified families who may be able to offer assistance or other types of support during Foundations training.

  1. Provide the certified family a schedule information of Foundations training in bordering counties when training times or locations are more convenient in a nearby location, and assist in the process to enroll in Foundations training in a bordering county. Contacts for each county can be found on the training page. Or a schedule can be found on the Child Welfare Caregiver Training Intranet page.

  2. When efforts to facilitate completion of Foundations training are unsuccessful, consult with the certification supervisor and Foster Care Coordinator. Invite the caseworkers of any children placed in the home to participate in the consultation.

  3. During consultation with the supervisor, determine if the certified family’s lack of Foundations training creates a safety or well-being concern for any children placed in the home and, if so, discuss the actions the Child Welfare needs to take to address the issue.

  4. Document the certified family’s completion of Foundations training in the Home Provider Record.
NOTE: Inputting training credits: On the OR-Kids desktop, click on the provider name hyperlink; click on the Training tab; click insert to fill out the training information completed regarding the certified member.

- Individualized Training Plans:
- Individualized Training Plans are developed for all families, regardless of certificate type. There are specific outlines for developing an Individualized Training Plan for caregivers who hold a Temporary Certificate or Child Specific Certificate of Approval. Training Plans help develop a road map for the types of training opportunities and skill development caregivers can participate in to enhance their parenting capacity.
  1. Utilize form 2831 “Training Plan for Child Welfare Certified Foster Parents and Relative Caregivers” and document the information regarding ongoing training opportunities that the caregiver plans to engage in. The training plan should be co-developed with the caregiver and caseworker if children are currently placed in the home.
  2. The form should be signed by the family, certifier and certification supervisor.
  3. Provide a copy of the signed training plan to the family. Upload the signed training plan into OR-Kids.
  4. Update the training plan at time of renewal. It is a great opportunity to revisit the training plan at 180 day home visits.

There are two types of individualized training plans developed for families in place of the required Foundations training. Individualized plans are considered when language barriers exist or when attending Foundations would cause a hardship for a child specific certified individual, and the child’s needs can be addressed through other training options. Consult with the certification supervisor or with the Foster Care Coordinator when preparing an individualized training plan for this reason.

1. Individualized training plans for families who have limited English proficiency and/or hearing or visual impairments.
   - Consider local Child Welfare resources such as interpreters, community resources, and written or audio books, videos, DVDs, internet resources or other resources which may be available in languages other than English or are available to the hearing or visually impaired. Interpreters can be accessed via the Language Access Guide.
   - Develop the individualized training plan with the certified family using form 2831 “Training Plan for Child Welfare Certified Foster Parents and Relative Caregivers”.
   - Obtain approval of the plan from the certification supervisor.
   - Upload the Individualized Training Plan into the File Cabinet of the Provider Record.

2. Individualized training plans for child-specific certified families are developed when the family:
   - Has a significant relationship with the child,
   - Would incur a hardship by attending the full Foundations training, and
   - Is able to meet the child’s individual needs with less than the entire Foundations training. The plan must be developed within the first 90 days of the Temporary Child Specific Certificate being issued. If the Individualized Training Plan was not completed within the first 90 days of the Temporary Certificate, it needs to be completed within 90 days of issuing the full Child Specific Certificate of Approval.

NOTE: In the Safety Tab in the Home Provider Page, the Temporary Certificate and/or Child Specific Certificate of Approval requires a date that the individualized training plan occurred. This is to remain in compliance with ORS 418.640.

- Plan must include training on the topics of the mental and emotional issues that occur in child victims of abuse and neglect, including sexual abuse and rape of a child, and
- Plan must include the reason why Foundations is not appropriate for the family and how the individualized training plan will strengthen the certified family’s ability to understand and meet the safety and well-being needs of the child.

- Foundations training, or part of it, can be waived when an individualized training plan is in place.
- The training plan is not developed for the sole purpose of relieving the foster parent from attending Foundations training. Waiving Foundations for either instance noted above does not mean that the family should not participate in any training. Additional training opportunities and skill development should be discussed and planned with the family. For example, instead of attending Foundations training, the child specific family may participate in the child’s counseling sessions which help the family understand and meet the specific needs of the child in their home. Consult with the Foster Care Coordinator when developing Individualized Training Plans.

Additional Training Requirements and Information Notification

In addition to Orientations and the Foundations curriculum, prospective and currently certified families need to be aware of two federal mandates and one state that impact them as caregivers: The Reasonable and Prudent Parenting Standard, Notification Requirements for Missing Children, and mandatory reporting training.

Reasonable and Prudent Parenting Standard

All applicants and certified families must receive training on the Reasonable and Prudent Parenting Standard (RPPS) and, how as providers, to apply the standard. The certifier should document in their initial assessment as well as ongoing assessment of the family how the family is applying the RPPS. There is also a video available regarding the RPPS. The digital version of the video is available on the Web in several locations.

For caregivers:
http://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/CHILDREN/FOSTERPARENT/Pages/index.aspx

For children and young adults:

For Child Welfare staff, Staff Tools (Foster Care Section):
http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/caf/cw_stafftools.htm

* Versions of the video with captions in English and Spanish, as well as transcripts in English and Spanish, are also on the websites.
NOTE: When an applicant applies for adoption, training hours must be completed prior to approval for adoption.

Mandatory Reporting

Mandatory reporting is part of foundations training. All foster parents and relative caregivers are defined as mandatory reporters in Oregon statute. Foster parents and relative caregivers who have caregiver employees, including respite providers and non-licensed childcare providers, must train each person in the responsibility of mandatory reporting. Training requirements can be found here:

Computer Based Training: Reporting Suspected Abuse & Neglect of Children in Care

When a Child Goes Missing From the Department Certified Home

Certified families need to receive information on how to properly report if a child in their care goes missing from the home:

- Substitute caregivers must notify LEA and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC) by calling the Hotline Number 1-800-THE-LOST (800-843-5678) when a child or young adult in their care is missing. This notification will often fall on the foster parent, as the caregiver is generally the first to know and the person with the most information surrounding the incident. It is already commonplace for foster parents to contact LEA when a child is missing.

NOTE: See Appendix 7.6, Missing Child/Young Adult

Ongoing Training

Ongoing training provides certified families with current information on parenting trends and research, strengthens their skills, provides opportunities to stay connected to other certified families, and allows a sharing of knowledge. Ongoing training can be obtained in a variety of settings and methods. Each certified adult must obtain thirty (30) hours of ongoing training for each 24-month period of certification.
The thirty hours of required ongoing training can be obtained from various sources. All the hours of Foundations training the certified family completed during the first two-year certification period, count toward the required 30 hours of ongoing training during the first biennial.

Meet with the certified family to discuss the following:

- Discuss the parenting issues challenges that have been presented with the child(ren) or children young adult(s) in their home.
- Discuss topics or information that would be useful in further developing are-giving skills.
- Review any information from children/young adults who have been or are currently placed in the home and review the supervision needs identified through a CANS screening, any medical issues that are being addressed through a Personal Care Services Plan, or other issues unique to the children/young adults in the home, including medical, mental health, educational or developmental issues the children/young adults may have.
- Take into consideration the developmental stages of the children in the home when recommending specific subject area interests.
- Provide information about local support groups and encourage attendance. Provide information on the ORPARC Lending Library which offers materials to be checked out and mailed directly to the caregiver, and materials that are available for direct download onto a mobile device.
- Encourage certified families to complete their ongoing training through training multiple interactive components. This includes: classroom training, online/webinar style training such as Foster Parent College, attending support groups, conferences, or seminars, and active participation in a child’s counseling sessions. Additional training can be obtained through independent study, which includes reading books or articles, viewing videos or DVDs, or listening to audio recordings.
- Additional local resources can greatly expand the learning opportunities that might be available locally. Examples of possible community partners the training may be coordinated with can include, local school districts, educational service districts, Head Start, Early Intervention, local Indian tribes or tribal organizations, Oregon Post Adoption Resource Center, religious communities who may offer parenting or other appropriate training, mental health organizations, the local commission on children and families, hospital education programs, public health or WIC offices, public libraries and other
- Develop the written training plan with the foster parent or relative caregiver.
- Discuss the completion of training during regular contacts during the certification period.
- Approve ongoing training hours as described in Awarding Training Hours for Ongoing Training, described in the next section.

Awarding Training Hours

- Classroom Training

Training hours are awarded for the scheduled hours of the specific training. For example, if Managing Difficult Behaviors is scheduled from 6 to 9 p.m., attendance at this training is 3 training hours.

- NetLink Training
Training hours are awarded for the scheduled hours of the specific NetLink training. For example, if Transitioning Children with Sensitivity is scheduled from 8 a.m. to noon, attendance at this training is 4 training hours.

- Library Resources, Library books, DVDs, and audio recordings are another resource for certified families to obtain continuing education credit.

1. Public Library:
   - Document the title of the library resource used and, whenever possible, have a conversation ensuring the materials were useful to the foster parent or relative caregiver.
   - Assign the number of training hours appropriate to the library resource. A certifier can use the training hours chart used for the Department lending library resources as a guideline.

2. Oregon Post Adoption Resource Center (ORPARC) Lending Library
   - The ORPARC lending library has hundreds of resources available for training credit including books and videos as well as digital items that can be directly downloaded to a mobile device.
   - Certified Families can access the lending library directly at https://www.orparc.org/library-request-materials.php?tn=4. Families may call ORPARC directly for assistance, or order materials online.

- Training credit is given for reading books, viewing videos or listening to books or training materials. Certified Families may use form 34 to document their training credits.

3. Training hours for library materials are allotted as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Books, including books on tape or CD</th>
<th>Training Videos (VHS or DVD)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Number of Pages</td>
<td>Training Hours</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>100 – 170 pages</td>
<td>1.5 hours</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>171 – 275 pages</td>
<td>3 hours</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>276 – 375 pages</td>
<td>4 hours</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Over 375 pages</td>
<td>5 hours</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

It is best practice for the certifier to have a conversation with the certified family about what they learned.

- A child’s counseling or other therapeutic services
  - When a certified family is involved in a therapeutic service with a child, the length of the service may be counted as training credit. For example, the certified family may be involved in the first or last 15 minutes of the child’s session; the 15 minutes may be counted as training credit.

- Support Groups
  1. The hands-on experience of being a certified family is an invaluable tool and can be used to help train and support others. The criteria of a support group include settings where attendees:
     - Receive support
     - Identify mentors
     - Get ideas from others
     - Participate in a forum to communicate with others
■ Express emotions and frustrations with others
■ Provide constructive support and guidance
■ Network and build relationships with others.

2. Structured Support Group

■ In a structured support group, a professional, designated leader, or facilitator directs the meeting, and includes an agenda or outline of items discussed during the meeting. A structured support group could also provide a speaker/trainer on specific topics related to foster or adoption issues. Structured support groups have a regularly scheduled time and meeting location.

■ Some counties have a Foster Parent Association that provides support group meetings in their area. In some counties, there are multiple structured support groups, such as groups for foster parenting children with medical needs, a group solely for relative caregivers, a group for Spanish, or other non-English speaking certified families, or a group for those caring for teens. In some counties, Department staff leads the support group.

■ Child Welfare participation in support groups is based on resources, foster parent desire, and the focus of the support group. When Child Welfare staff participates in structured support groups, the personal connection between workers and support group members builds strong working relationships. In a support group setting, Child Welfare staff can provide updates on policy, changes in practice, answer general questions etc. but need to be sensitive to how and when support group members perceive Child Welfare involvement. Although part of a structured support group may include discussion about concerns or disappointments with Child Welfare, it is paramount that a structured support group be positive and supportive of certified families and the role with Child Welfare.

3. Unstructured Support Groups

■ An unstructured support group is more of a social gathering to provide support and connection without the structure of a regular or designated facilitator.

■ Unstructured support groups include social events such as Day at the Park where adults get together to talk while the children play or one-on-one mentoring situations. This could also include larger informal group gatherings.

4. Training Hours for Support Groups

■ Granting training hours are an incentive for participation in support groups. Either type of support group should be considered for training hours; however, the number of hours will vary depending on the event. A certifier makes the decision about the approval of hours for support group.

■ Base the decision on the length of the activity/group, if training was or was not part of the group, and the agenda of the group’s meeting. Support group sign-in sheets should be completed at structured support group and individual essay/reports (similar to short book reports) be completed by certified families for unstructured meetings.

- A maximum of twelve training hours is the total allowed for any 24-month period from attending support group activities or meetings.

- Approve a maximum of 3 training hours for a structured support group.
- Approve a maximum of 2 training hours for the unstructured support group.
- Approve up to 1.5 training hours for mentoring
- Approve up to 1 training hour for attending foster parent advisory committee or local foster parent association meetings.
- Approve .5 training hours for a social gathering

Note: Formal training or presentation of educational material that is part of a support group can be counted separate from support group hours. For example, when 30 minutes of a 2-hour support group is formal training this would be counted as 90 minutes of support group time and 30 minutes of in-person training time.

- For a quick reference to training hours awarded for various types of training, see Appendix 7.2.

Documentation

Certifiers and certified families can use the form CF 34 Report of Certified Caregiver Training for Credit to track ongoing training credit received during a certification period. Document all training for the current certification period in OR-Kids in the provider module training tab.

For some training, a certificate of completion is provided. The certifier can view the certificate of completion to verify training has been completed. Certifiers will document the training in OR-Kids in the Home Provider Record under the training tab.

I. Foster Parent College

- Foster Parent College is an online training resource for certified families. Foster Parent College has a variety of training topics that a certified family can use. Follow the link to the website, to view the subject areas provided through this resource(http://www.fosterparentcollege.com/?gclid=CNv6h6fe9KcCFeUbQqodBHVGbw) Each District is allotted a specified number of foster parent college training units each biennium. Each District has representative selected to monitor Foster Parent College utilization. The certification supervisor knows who in the District monitors and allocates Foster Parent College units.

II. Training provided through other community agencies

- When the district has engaged the local community in planning for training opportunities for certified families there may be opportunities to greatly expand classroom offerings. Working together with local partners, arrange for sharing training resources, cross-training groups of parents and caregivers, or ask that certified families can participate in trainings offered through these community organizations. The District or local offices can delegate staff to facilitate these discussions and provide regular contact and communication with the community partners.
- Under district or branch management approval, establish connections and relationships with the identified individuals through in-person meeting, phone calls, or email.
- Facilitate meetings during the year for the purpose of reviewing the trainings each community partner has scheduled and those trainings appropriate for foster parent or relative caregiver attendance.

III. Develop Strategies to Promote Training Opportunities

- Develop strategies to share upcoming training information with foster parents and relative caregivers through newsletters, posting information on the foster parent website, sending information by email, or through visits or other in-person contact. When possible, make phone calls to foster parents and relative caregivers, to remind them of upcoming training opportunities and to personalize notification.

- Share your plan with all certifiers and certified families so everyone knows where to find information on upcoming training.

IV. Special Considerations

- Training for Spanish-Language Speakers (Spanish language training is available from various sources)
  - Foundations training is provided in Spanish in several branches throughout the state. Contact your Foster Care Coordinator if you do not know which branches provide training in Spanish. This may be a resource for a Spanish language family if travel is reasonable.
  - Child Welfare’s lending library has materials in Spanish.
  - Spanish language training resources can also be found on the internet. One such resource is through the Child Welfare Information Gateway at http://www.childwelfare.gov/spanish/#tab=general.
  - Check with local community resources for Spanish or other non-English training opportunities. Community resources such as the Educational Service District, local school districts, community mental health agencies, and hospitals could be resources for training.

- Translation
  - Translation equipment is available for checkout in through Central Office. To use this equipment for bilingual training, the branch will need to have a translator in the classroom when an English-speaking trainer is teaching material. See Appendix 7.3 for more details about requesting this equipment.
  - There may be occasions where the certifier may use an American sign language interpreter. See Appendix 7.4 for more details.

- Special Accommodations
  - There may be occasions where other accommodations need to be made, for example a foster parent or relative caregiver who is blind, hearing impaired or has other needs for special accommodations. If the local branch office cannot arrange for these accommodations, contact the Foster Care Coordinator and see whether additional resources might be available.

V. Foster Parent Training Support Funds

- Each District is given a specified amount of flexible funds dedicated to support foster parent and relative caregiver training. These funds can be used to provide a variety of supports. The Department Training Unit staff support the distribution and expending of these funding resources. In the planning process for the biennium, be aware that funds can be used to support the following items and plan to use funds to best support ongoing training for your foster parents and relative caregivers:
- Child Care
- Refreshments
- Facility Rental
- Scholarships
- Travel to attend approved conferences
- Per-diem expenses related to approved conferences
- Training Supplies
- Contracted Training

- Staff in the Department’s Training Unit are available to answer questions about these funds when needed.

VI. Training Incentives

- Incentives can be helpful to improve the participation of some certified families in the training process. Plan whether and how the District will support training through the use of incentives. There are many ways to support training efforts through incentives. Types of Incentives the Department can encourage and support include:

  - Award certificates to individuals that complete a training session,
  - Acknowledge individuals during support group meetings.
  - Provide child care services to the children of foster parents that attend training.
  - Provide snacks, highlight a foster parent or relative caregiver in local newsletters when certified families have attained a certain number of training hours i.e., 10, 20, and 30
  - Award a small gift to individuals that accomplish training milestones. For example, the certified family caregiver who achieves the greatest number of training hours or who completes the required training earliest could receive a small community donated gift.
  - Distribute donated goods and services through a drawing to a certified family who have has completed training.
  - Approach community partners and business for donations that can be given to certified families. Local offices can provide community businesses and partners with a letter containing information necessary for them to use the donation as a tax deduction.

Supervisors Role

- Discuss training with the certifier during regular case staffing.
- Review whether training plans are being followed or whether there are specific training topics from which a certified family could benefit.
- Confirm through a certifier’s documentation that a family has completed the required training prior to approving renewal.
- Participate in the development of the District’s biennial training plan.

Section 8: Involvement in Case Planning Decisions
Involvement in Case Planning Decisions

Certified families are an integral part of successful case planning. As a participating and valued member of the child’s team, the certified family needs to understand their role and responsibilities in the case planning process, and in meeting a child’s needs while the child is in substitute care in their home.

Procedure

- During Foundations training and in regular contact with the certified family, the certifier informs them of their right to involvement in the case planning process for a child in the certified family’s home.

- Inform the certified family it is likely there will be some contact with the child’s family. Explain that a child’s caseworker establishes the appropriate parameters for this contact and will monitor the child’s contact with their family. Assist the certified family in establishing positive relationships with a child’s birth family and understanding these positive relationships contribute to successful case plan outcomes.

- Establish early in the certification process the expectation that the certified family will work cooperatively with Child Welfare, with caseworkers, supervisors, and others who may be a part of the child’s case plan.

- Assist the certified family in establishing good communication processes with a child’s caseworker and others involved in the case. Offer options for communication processes, such as routine phone updates, weekly emails, or other forms of ongoing input to the caseworker.

- Encourage the certified family’s participation in planning meetings for the child, if not in person, then through providing information about the child that can inform good decision-making.

- When there are challenges or circumstances in which good communication between the certified family and the caseworker, seek input from the child’s worker on ways to assist in improving this process.

Relative Caregiver Involvement in Initial Case Planning

- Because relatives frequently enter the role as a certified family through an expedited certification process, it is important to assist the provider in understanding the child welfare program. Inform the relative caregiver what to expect during the entire certification process, financial support they will receive, the role of the case worker, the development of a case plan, court involvement and court functions, and the certification rules that apply to their household and the care of their relative children. Let them know some of the unique specifics of relative involvement:

  1. Possible invitation to participate in meetings regarding the safety of the children,

  2. May be interviewed about the history of their own children (the parents involved in the case, and their protective capacities), and

  3. Invitation to court hearings and the opportunity to limited participation in the court process.

  4. Let them know of the Foster Parent Bill of Rights, the Oregon Foster Child Bill of Rights, and the Oregon Sibling Bill of Rights.
Inform Caregivers of Involvement in Case Planning

- Inform the certified family of the most common types of involvement in the child’s case plan, beyond the day to day care of the child, which include:

  1. School involvement.
     - Registration after the caseworker or the court has approved the school or educational placement
     - Respond to inquiries from the school, monitor children’s educational progress
     - Ensure regular school attendance
     - Keep records of report cards, school reports, educational testing and assessment results, disciplinary actions
     - Keep samples of the child’s school work
     - Keep the caseworker informed of progress towards graduation by age 19
     - Encourage the child’s participation in school activities, social and sporting events, cultural events, and field trips.
     - Participate as appropriate during assessment of a child’s possible disability or impairment.

  2. Health care
     - Ensure the child receives regular medical and dental care.
     - Seek approval prior to any medical procedure other than regular medical care.
     - Mental health appointments.
     - Remind the certified family that they must allow vaccinations and immunizations unless specifically directed otherwise by the caseworker.
     - Notify the Department as soon as possible when a child needs emergency medical treatment.
     - Maintain accurate documentation of all medical, mental health and dental appointments.
     - Ensure the certified family’s understanding of medication management rules.
     - Ensure the certified family knows how to use and submit medication logs, and takes these to medical appointments.
     - Ensure the certified family understands the specific rules around psychotropic medication.

  3. Transportation to the child’s visits with parents, other family members, and others important to the child as approved by the caseworker

  4. Notice of the child’s court hearings

  5. Right to limited participation in court hearings

  6. Right to involvement in the child’s case planning process.

- The certified family may be invited to case planning meetings. Informing the certified family, in advance, of the purpose of the meeting and the types of decisions made helps the family prepare for the meeting.
• Advise the certified family to report any concerns about the child or any identified needs the child has which are not being addressed to the child’s caseworker during monthly contacts with the caseworker.

• Advise the certified family when there are concerns to work with the child’s caseworker to resolve the conflict or better understand the decision.

  1. Support the certified family by contacting the child’s caseworker if a certified family has contacted the certifier with concerns or questions regarding a child’s case plan or if the certified family has not received information about a child placed in the home.

  2. Contact the caseworker’s supervisor if concerns or questions continue to be unresolved or unanswered.

• Advise the certified family that case plans are reviewed every 90 days, and that there may be occasions when the certified family is asked to participate in the case review.
Chapter 8

Section 9: Complaint Review for Certified Families
Complaint Review for Certified Families

Procedure

The certifier is most often the certified family’s most consistent link to other staff in the office.

• Note: As an employee of the Department of Human Services, it is a professional responsibility to uphold Department rules and procedures related to complaints, investigations and hearings.

• When a family has requested an informal or formal Complaint Review, Contested Case Hearing, or Founded Disposition Review, a Department employee does not have an advocacy role in the process as this conflicts with Department rules.

NOTE: Certified families always have the option of bypassing local office review procedures by sending a written a letter of complaint directly to the ODHS Director, the Child Welfare Director, or the Child Welfare Deputy Director as well as the Governor’s Advocacy Office. In this event, the Governor’s Advocacy Office will review and investigate the complaint. This may involve contacting all persons connected to the complaint. The Governor’s Advocacy Office will issue a final determination and the provider will have no further review rights. (OAR 407-005-0100 through 407-005-0120)

• Inform every certified family of the right to have a complaint reviewed when they disagree with an action or decision made by the Department or believe their rights have been violated under the Foster Parents Bill of Rights ORS 418.648.

• Inform the family of the four procedures available to certified families to have a specific issue resolved:
  1. Informal Complaint Review
  2. Written Complaint Review
  3. Review of a CPS Founded Disposition
  4. Contested Case Hearing Review

Procedure

Informal Complaint Review

• When a certified family notifies their certifier or the certifier’s supervisor with a complaint for which they are seeking assistance for resolution inquire about the nature of the complaint. Discuss with the certified family steps that can be taken to resolve the issue on an informal basis.

  1. Frequently the issue that generated the complaint can be resolved when the family is able to meet with caseworkers and their supervisors and engage in a candid conversation geared towards resolution.

  2. When this process does not end in a satisfactory resolution provide the certified family with information clarifying the processes available for further review and resolution of the complaint.
     - Local Office review process;
     - Submitting a written request to the Governor’s Advocacy Office by filing a Client Complaint
Written Complaint Review

A written complaint review is reviewed and investigated by the Governor’s Advocacy Office. The Governor’s Advocacy Office makes the final decision on a written complaint.

- Written Complaint Reviews do not apply to the following circumstances:
  1. The certified family is entitled to or has requested a Contested Case Hearing
  2. The complaint should be or is being reviewed by a judge
  3. An Adoption Committee decision
  4. A Child Protective Service disposition
  5. A Juvenile Court ruling
  6. Complaints filed anonymously

- When an informal review has not resolved a certified family’s complaint, the certified family has five days from the receipt of the program manager’s written notification to file a Client Complaint or Report of Discrimination (ODHS Form 0170). This completed form is submitted to the local office. The local office is responsible to forward the completed form to the Governors Advocacy Office with 5 business days.

- The Governor’s Advocacy Office will begin the review within 2 business days of receiving the written complaint request.

- The Governor’s Advocacy Office, after reviewing the complaint may speak with the certified family and other parties in order to make an informed final decision. The Governor’s Advocacy Office issues the final determination and the complainant will have no further rights to review.

NOTE: Client Complaint or Report of Discrimination (form 0170A) should be completed by the local office to document a complaint response, review process and results of each level of review: Supervisor review; Program Manager Review; District Manager and Governor’s Advocacy Review. This three-page form is also a tool that includes procedures for review and documentation of the results for each level of review. Information contained in the completion of this form may prove to be important in the event a complainant seeks legal action.

Review of a CPS Founded Disposition

- When a certified family has been the subject of a CPS assessment which results in a Founded disposition, the CPS worker or supervisor, and the certifier or supervisor must meet with the provider within 10 business days of the completion of the assessment and explain the disposition and any certification actions which will be taken.
  1. When the disposition is Founded, the Department must notify the provider in writing using the “Notice of a Founded Disposition (CF 313). The notice contains instructions on how to request a review of the Founded disposition.

9. A Notice of Central Office CPS Founded Disposition Review Decision is sent to the certified family.

Contested Case Hearing Review

A certified family has the right to file a Request for A Contested Case Hearing to review the following decisions made by the Department:

- Within a 30-day period of receiving notification by the Department a certified family may request a contested case hearing on behalf and as a representative of a child in their care when:
  1. The base foster care rate has been reduced or terminated;
  2. Level of Care rates have been denied, reduced or terminated;
  3. Level of Personal Care rates have been denied, reduced or terminated.
  4. Denial of an application to provide foster care or revocation of a Certificate of Approval

Section 10: Certification Actions for an Application or Certificate of Approval
Voluntary Withdrawal of an Application or Voluntary Termination of a Certificate of Approval

Procedure

- When an applicant requests to voluntarily withdraw their application for a Certificate of Approval, the certifier must document the communication regarding the applicant’s request in a Provider Note in OR-Kids. The applicant can request to voluntarily withdraw their application verbally or in writing.

Note: If the applicant verbally withdraws their application, the certifier should follow up by letter to the applicant indicating the date the verbal withdraw was received. A copy of the letter should be uploaded into OR-Kids file cabinet. Utilize the Voluntary Withdrawal or Termination form CW 1007 for written withdraw.

- When a certified family requests, verbally or in writing, that its home be closed, the certified family may request that their Certificate of Approval be voluntarily terminated.

Note: There may be times when a certified family requests that its Certificate of Approval be voluntarily terminated; however, the Department is not required to accept the request. Circumstances include but are not limited to when allegations of abuse or neglect have been made against the certified provider or when the Department plans to issue a Notice of Revocation.

  I. The certifier should discuss this request with the certification their supervisor. The Department may have decided to revoke the certification and therefore would not be accepting the family’s request to terminate their certification.

    A. If the Department accepts the family’s voluntary request to terminate their certificate, the certifier:

        - Documents a Closing Narrative with the information regarding the circumstances the family is closing in a provider note. The Certificate of Approval cannot be closed until all children placed in the home by the Department are no longer living in the home.
        - Once all children in substitute care have left the home, the Certificate of Approval may be closed.
        - Once the final foster care reimbursement has been received, close the Provider Record.

The Supervisor’s Role

Review the certification file and ensure all documentation is complete.

When the Specific Child leaves the Home of a Certified Family that Holds a Child-Specific Certificate of Approval and When a Certified Family Requests to change their Certificate Type from Child Specific to General:

Procedure:

- When a certified family holds a Temporary Certificate or Child-Specific Certificate of Approval, the Certificate of Approval terminates 60 calendar days from the date the child leaves the certified family’s
NOTE: During the time the family holds a Temporary Certificate, their application for a Certificate of Approval is still “live” until they are issued a full/up to two-year certificate. If the child leaves the home during the Temporary Certificate, the certifier must terminate the Temporary Certificate 60 calendar days from the date the child leaves the home and ask the family if they are willing to voluntarily withdraw their application, or if the family is unwilling to voluntarily withdraw their application, the certifier will proceed to deny their application.

- If the certified family holding a Temporary Certificate or Child-Specific Certificate of Approval wishes to continue to provide substitute care as a regular foster home, they may submit their request to do so.
  - For a Temporary Certificate: The certifier will bring the family’s application and allow the family to update their application to reflect the appropriate applicant type.
  - For a Child-Specific Certificate of Approval: The certifier will provide the family with a CF 1001, Certified Family Certificate Renewal or Change of Status Application.
- The Department will only accept this request for either certificate type if the address is the same and the applicants applying are the same as the applicants on the Child-Specific Certificate of Approval. No child or young adult shall remain in a home that does not have an active Certificate of Approval.

NOTE: If the certified family wishes to change their certificate type, their certificate in OR-Kids remains active until the assessment is complete or unless the family requests to voluntarily terminate their certificate and the Department agrees to terminate the certificate. There may be instances in which the Department removed the specific child due to the family’s inability to meet the safety, health, or well-being needs and has violated one or more of the certification standards rules or the Department has decided to proceed to revoke the certificate. The certificate will remain active in the system until revocation is completed.

- The certifier reviews the updated application or the completed CF 1001 and the most recent home study documentation. Pay particular attention to any changes since the time of the original study as well as previous mitigations.
- Review provider staffing notes from Certification Safety, and Wellbeing Concerns Committees, caseworker feedback, Out of Home Care assessments, closed at screening reports, and any requests for management approval. If manager approval was given previously for criminal history, a new approval would be required in order to issue a Certificate of Approval as a regular foster home.
- Discuss with the family the age range, gender, types of needs, and number of children they plan to care for.

If the original training plan was created to address the needs of a specific child(ren) for whom the family was certified, consider updating the training plan to be inclusive of the new population they will be caring for.

NOTE: When utilizing this process, consider how long until the provider needs to be renewed, and if the renewal time frame is approximately 3 months away, you might consider utilizing the renewal process is instead.

- Evaluate all of the information gathered through the process above and consult with supervisor.
  - If the certifier recommends to proceed with changing the certificate type from Child Specific to General, document the assessment and recommendation in a provider note. Before changing the certificate type in OR-Kids, the supervisor must ensure all assessment activities have been...
If the supervisor decides to approve the certified family’s request to change certification types, the certifier can issue a Certificate of Approval. The certifier will update the provider type in OR-Kids, and update the age range and capacity on the provider certificate. The certification time frame should remain the same as the certificate that is being updated from Child Specific to regular. Launch the new certificate, and receive supervisor approval; once signed, send the new certificate to the family.

If the certifier recommends denial the change of status application with changing the certificate type from Child Specific to General and the supervisor also decides not to approve the certified family’s request to change certification types, the Department can handle this two ways:

- The certifier can contact the family and discuss voluntarily withdrawing their application due to the concerns or certification standards not met. If the family does indeed voluntarily withdraw their application, ensure the documentation in the OR-Kids system reflects the concerns the certifier/supervisor had. If the family is not willing to voluntarily withdraw, proceed toward denial.

- The certifier and certification supervisor can proceed toward denial of the application. Contact your Foster Care Coordinator when proceeding toward denial and requesting a staffing with the AAG.

NOTE: A Notice of Intent to Deny regarding their application is provided to the family, outlining the reasons for proceeding toward denial, via the local branch process. The applicant has a right to request a case hearing to contest the Department’s decision to deny. See Section E for further information regarding denial.

The Supervisor’s Role

- Review the certification file to ensure all documentation is complete.
- Review all assessment activities.
- Assure the applicant meets the certification standards.
- Assure any required management approval has been made and obtained for any criminal history.
- Assure the Certificate of Approval includes all applicable information

Denial of an Application for a Certificate of Approval

When assessing an applicant for a Certificate of Approval, the certifier consults with the supervisor during the process. This is especially important if, during the assessment, the certifier becomes aware of information that may impact the Department in its assessment to issue a Certificate of Approval.

NOTE: Applicants have the burden of proof to demonstrate they meet the safety, health, and/or well-being needs of a child or young adult.

Procedure

If an applicant has applied for foster care, a Certificate of Approval, the Department may terminate the application process when one or more of the following applies:
• If an applicant falsifies information before the Certificate of Approval is issued, the department may deny an application.
• If the applicant fails to provide information regarding a disqualifying conviction and/or a member of the household or person who frequents the home has a criminal conviction in which an authorized designee makes a negative fitness determination.
• If an applicant(s) fails to meet one or more of the certification standards, the Department may deny an application.
• If an applicant fails to provide requested information within 90 days of written request by the Department.
• When an adult member of the household has been identified as a perpetrator or possible perpetrator of abuse or neglect in a child protective services assessment with a Founded, Unable to Determine or similar disposition and a Management Approval has been denied.
• During the course of the assessment, the certifier discusses the information that indicates the applicant(s) does not meet one or more of the certification standards.

NOTE: If information regarding an applicant learned during the assessment is confidential, such as criminal history or child abuse and neglect information that one applicant does not already know, and cannot be shared with another applicant in the household, the certifier can indicate that they cannot move forward due to the applicant’s history without providing specific information about the history.

I. If the matter can be resolved or the applicant’s explanation or actions alleviate the concern, the certifier may proceed with the assessment.
   A. When the certifier and certifier’s supervisor conclude from the information gained during the assessment that a Certificate of Approval should not be issued, the certifier may meet with the family to explain the certification standards that the applicant does not meet and which prevent the Department from issuing a Certificate of Approval. The certifier may also discuss with the applicant the process of denial, including the contested case hearing process, and the option of withdrawing the application.

NOTE: If the certifier and supervisor believe the applicant may be unwilling to voluntarily withdraw their application, schedule a meeting with the Foster Care Coordinator and AAG to discuss the legal sufficiency.

II. If an applicant should choose to withdraw the application rather than receive a notice of denial, provide detailed documentation of the circumstances under which the applicant withdrew the application in the certification file, section 10, part A of this section.

III. If the applicant makes a decision not to withdraw the application, the certifier and their supervisor must request an AAG staffing to discuss denial. If from the staffing the decision is made to pursue a denial, DOJ will draft a letter that documents the certification standards that the applicant(s) cannot meet and state the Department’s intent to deny the application. The letter also includes information regarding the applicant’s right to request a contested case hearing.
   A. Once DOJ has completed the drafted letter of Intent to Deny the application, the letter will be sent to the applicant through certified mail.
If the certified family does not respond to the letter within 30 days with a written request to a program manager for a contested case hearing, the certifier prepares the final order and submits to the supervisor for approval.

NOTE:

- Be honest with applicants during the assessment process. If the supervisor determines enough information has been gathered, discontinue the assessment process.
- Do not certify a family if the Department does not intend to use them as a resource.
- If a family cannot be certified but has the ability to serve in other ways, refer them elsewhere. Perhaps a family could tutor, serve as a CASA, or volunteer in the schools, or work with the local foster parent association in some way.
- Slow down if it is determined that more information is needed to confirm the family’s ability to provide safe and protective care for children in the Department’s custody.

If an applicant has applied for adoption, the Department may terminate the application process when one or more of the following applies:

- If an applicant has lost permanent custody of a child, and the certifier and their supervisor would like to proceed with this applicant as an adoptive resource, the District Manager or designee must request an approval by the Adoption Program Manager.
- If an applicant fails to meet one or more of the adoption home study standards, the Department may deny an application.
- The applicant’s license or certificate to provide services to children, elderly or individuals with disabilities has been or is currently being denied, revoked or suspended.
- The applicant has falsified information.
- The applicant does not respond to inquiries or requests for information as requested by the Department.
- The applicant is selected by another adoption agency to adopt a child.

When the Department terminates the adoption application process and proceeds toward denial, the certifier and supervisor should contact the Adoption Decision Specialist and their AAG. If from the staffing the decision is made to pursue a denial, the Department will draft a letter that documents the adoption home study standards which the applicant(s) cannot meet and state the Department’s intent to deny the application. The certifier must send written notification to the adoptive applicant and document this information in a Provider Note in the Provider Record. The letter should be scanned and saved in the File Cabinet. Applicants for adoption are not provided a Contested Case Hearing process.

NOTE: Remember, if an applicant applies for both Foster Care and Adoption, the Department must provide a denial for each program area. If you are unsure of which denial to use or process, contact your Foster Care Coordinator.

Role of the Supervisor

- Review all documentation related to denying a Certificate of Approval and Adoption including the draft copies of the letter of intent to deny and the final order.
- Seek AAG review of letters of intent to deny and final orders.
- When a Child Welfare Program Manager has received a request for a contested case hearing, follow procedures in Section 10 E of these procedures.
- Notify the AAG of a request for a contested case hearing when requested.

Revocation of a Certificate of Approval

- The Department can consider revocation of a Temporary Certificate or Certificate of Approval under the following circumstances:
  1. When the applicant or certified family does not meet one or more of the certification standards rules;
  2. When the Department determines that the applicant has not proven they are able to meet or the Department determines the certified family does not or cannot continue to meet the safety, health, or well-being needs of a child or young adult.
  3. When the Department learns the applicant or certified family has falsified information; or
  4. When the applicant or certified family fails to provide information or inform the department of a disqualifying conditions that arises after the Certificate of Approval has been issued.
  5. When an adult member of the household or someone who frequents the household is found to have a disqualifying criminal conviction or an authorized designee makes a negative fitness determination.
  6. When the certified family has failed to follow through with a Placement Support Plan.
  7. When the Department determines that a child was removed from the certified family’s home due to the family being unable to meet the safety, health, or well-being needs of a child or young adult.

- The department must revoke a Temporary Certificate or Certificate of Approval when at the conclusion of a CPS assessment, the Department determines that there is an impending danger safety threat in the home.
  - In this situation, if the family makes a request to voluntarily terminate the certification, the Child Welfare Program Manager must agree to accept the voluntary termination of certification or else the Department will proceed to revoke to certification.

Procedure

- When a certified family has violated one or more of the Department’s certification standards, and the environment in the certified family’s home cannot maintain conditions that provide safety and well-being for children placed in the home, it may be time to consider revocation of the Temporary Certificate or Certificate of Approval. The decision to revoke must always be reached after thorough assessment of the circumstances in the certified family’s home. The certifier’s assessment includes, but is not limited to, consideration of the following:
  1. What is the nature of the certification violation and can efforts be made to remedy the situation?
Has the certified family been willing to remedy certification violations in the past?

2. Has the certified family demonstrated a pattern of certification violations or non-compliance with certification standards?

3. Does the certified family fully understand the nature of the certification violations and the impact on child safety and well being?

4. Is the certified family able and willing to provide safety and well being for children placed in the home?

5. Is the certified family able and willing to work with the department to mitigate the current situation?

- Consult frequently with the certification supervisor and with the caseworkers of children placed in the certified family’s home when a certified family is violating certification standards.

- Consult with the AAG and with the Foster Care Coordinator when proceeding toward revocation.

- The AAG will need information surrounding the decision to revoke. Be prepared to discuss the situation in detail and provide information as to why the family is no longer able meeting certification standards. Some AAGs prefer a consult form — connect with the branch/district paralegal if this form is necessary.

- When it has been determined that a report of child abuse or neglect will initiate a CPS assessment, refer to section 7 of this chapter.

the written notice was sent to the family, the certifier prepares the final order and submits to the supervisor for approval.

- When the certified family requests a contested case hearing, follow procedures in Section G.

The Supervisor’s Role

- Provide consultation and guidance to the certifier in the process of revoking a Certificate of Approval.
- Review all documentation prior to submission to any party.
- Contact the family and attend meetings with the certifier when scheduled whenever possible.
- Request AAG consultation from the child welfare program manager as appropriate.

Contested Case Hearing Process

A contested case hearing is a quasi-judicial hearing required by ORS183.310(2) before an impartial hearing officer in which the complainant and/or their representative may present all pertinent facts and evidence in order to show why the action or inaction of the department should be considered. As a result of the hearing, the hearings officer reports findings and recommendations to the Department Director, who makes a final order on the matter.

Procedure

- Requests for a contested case hearing must be forwarded to the DOJ within two working days of receipt of the request. When the DOJ provides ODHS Child Welfare with the proposed order to deny or revoke, it often provides details of who to specifically send the request to within the department.
- Work with the Child Welfare Program Manager and the certification supervisor in preparing the documentation sent to the DOJ.
- When the DOJ receives a request for a contested case hearing, the request is submitted to an Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) to schedule a hearing.
- If additional information or documentation is requested prior to the hearing, submit the information to the DOJ in a timely manner.
- There may be occasions when a meeting with the AAG is warranted prior to the hearing. Consult with the certification supervisor regarding the request for this meeting as the child welfare program manager approves consultation with the AAG.
- The certifier and certification supervisor may be asked to have meetings with the AAG in preparation for the hearing.
- If, at any time during the preparation for a contested case hearing, the family withdraws its request for a hearing, the request must be in writing or documented and confirmed in writing. Two copies of the withdrawal of request must be sent to the Child Welfare Program Manager within three working days of receipt.

NOTE: The family requesting the contested case hearing has several options after requesting a contested case hearing, including withdrawing the request or requesting a postponement of a scheduled hearing. Department actions in these circumstances are guided by Administrative Rule in Child Welfare Policy 413-010-0500.

- When asked to testify at the hearing, prepare for the testimony and respond with the facts and to the questions asked during the hearing.

- The certifier needs to be aware of the actions subsequent to the hearing.
  1. The ALJ will prepare a proposed order and will include the findings of fact and the conclusions, which will be sent to all parties. Parties will also be notified when written exceptions must be filed or oral arguments (if any) may be made.
  2. The proposed order will be reviewed by the DOJ, and
     - Will advise the Child Welfare Director to sign the order if the Child Welfare Program Manager agrees with the order, or
     - If the Child Welfare Program Manager disagrees with the findings of fact or conclusion of law section and the recommended action, the program manager will revise content for the section and prepare a memo explaining reasons for recommending overruling the ALJ.
     - If exceptions have been filed, the Child Welfare Program Manager will also consider the exceptions in the preparation of a memo to the Child Welfare Director.
     - The proposed order, the amended order, any exceptions filed and the memo are submitted to the Child Welfare Director.
     - A final order containing the elements outlined in the Attorney General’s Model Role 137-003-0665 is issued by the director, along with the family’s rights to judicial review of the final order.
- Once a final order is received, close the Certificate of Approval as revoked or denied, whichever is appropriate to the case.
- File a copy of the final order in the certification file, Section 1, Certification Actions, and scan a copy into the OR-Kids Provider Record File Cabinet.
- Document the denial or revocation of the application, Temporary Certificate or Certificate of Approval in OR-Kids, Provider Notes.

The Supervisor’s Role

- Provide consultation and guidance to the certifier in the process of the contested case hearing.
- Review all documentation prior to submission to any party.
- Attend the contested case hearing whenever possible.
- Request AAG consultation from the child welfare program manager as appropriate.

Child Welfare Policy, I-A.5.2.1 Contested Case Hearings
Inactive Referral Status

Procedure

There are several reasons why a certified family may be on inactive referral status.

- When a report of child abuse or neglect meets the criteria for a CPS assessment, the family is automatically placed on inactive referral status.

- When a certified family requests that their home be placed on inactive referral status for any reason, the certifier must:
  1. Consult with the certified family to explain the reasons for the inactive referral status request and the length of time the certified family does not want additional children placed in the certified family’s home.
  2. Notify child welfare staff responsible for placement that the certified home is unavailable using local branch protocol for notification.
  3. Send the certified family a letter within 30 days verifying the inactive referral status. This letter must contain reasons for and length of the inactive referral status. Scan this letter into the file cabinet in the Provider Record in OR-Kids.

NOTE: In OR-Kids, activating inactive referral status is done in the Additional Certification Actions by selecting “Placed on Hold.” Note that if a family is placed on hold, and if any children remaining in their home during inactive status have a birthday that moves their age to the next birthday batch, the OR-Kids system will not recognize that. Manually, close the certificate, add the appropriate age service and issue a new certificate in order for proper reimbursement to occur. See Appendix 7.7, Example Inactive Referral Status Letter In OR-Kids, update the Provider Record by placing the certified family “On Hold.”

4. The inactive referral status ends at the request of the family or up to 12 months. Contact the certified family within 30 days prior to the end of the inactive referral status to confirm the certified family will be available for placement at the termination of the inactive referral status.

NOTE: If a child or young adult is placed in the home during inactive referral status, all certification standards and responsibilities remain in effect, including 180-day home visits. Remind the family that all required notifications are still required. If no child or young adult are placed in the home during inactive status, the certifier may request management approval on form CF 117 to have the 180-day home visit requirements waived. If during the inactive referral status, the family is due for the renewal process, the home visit contact cannot be waived. Instead, have a conversation with the family about the requirements for renewal and need for home visit contact if the family would like to proceed to renew the Certificate of Approval. If the family is over capacity but on inactive referral status, there is no management approval to waive home visit requirements; 90-day home visits requirements are still required to ensure the safety, health and well-being of the children placed in the home.

5. When the inactive referral status ends:
   - Document the removal of the inactive referral status in the certification file in a provider note in OR-Kids and remove the certified family “On Hold” in the Provider Record;
• Within 30 days, send the certified family a letter confirming the end of the inactive referral status; and
• Notify child welfare staff responsible for placement that the certified home is available, using local branch protocol for notification.

• The Department may choose to place a certified family on inactive referral status for one or more of the following reasons:
  1. The special needs of a child placed in the home require so much of the certified family’s care and attention that no additional children should be placed in the home;
  2. The certified family or members of the household are experiencing significant family stress; or
  3. The certified family does not meet one or more of the certification standards.

• When determining whether a certified family must be placed on inactive referral status, consider the following:
  1. If additional children were placed in the home, would child safety be compromised?
  2. What is the nature of the certified family or household member’s stress? Is it likely that not placing additional children in the home would assist in resolving the issue?
  3. Does the certified family need a period of time to adhere to the department’s certification standards?
  4. Will stabilizing the population of children in the household assist in resolving the issues within the family?

• Once it has been determined that the Department will place the certified family on inactive referral status, schedule a time to explain the reasons for the decision with the certified family.
  1. It is always best to visit the family in their home, but there may be occasions when a home visit is not possible. In those instances, make phone contact with the certified family to discuss the circumstances in the certified family that led to the department’s determination.
  2. Send the certified family a letter within 14 days that contains the reasons for, any specific certification violations, actions the Department may take if the conditions resulting in the inactive referral status are not resolved, and length of the inactive referral status.
  3. There may be occasions that the reasons surrounding the inactive referral status may be addressed by developing a Placement Support Plan. Refer to Section 5.D of this chapter for procedures to develop a Placement Support Plan.
  4. Document in a Provider Note in OR-Kids the reason for inactive referral status, and scan a copy of the letter sent in the File Cabinet of the Provider Record. In the Provider Record, place the certified family “On Hold.”
  5. It is the Department’s responsibility to determine when the inactive referral status ends when the Department initiated the status. The certifier must determine that if additional children were placed in the certified family’s home the certified family could maintain conditions in the home that provide safety and well-being for the children placed in the home.
  6. After the determination to end the inactive referral status has been made, the certifier:
- Notifies the certified family the inactive referral status has ended;
- Within 30 days, send the certified family a letter confirming the end of the inactive referral status;
- Document the removal of the inactive referral status in OR-Kids in a Provider Note and remove “On Hold” in the Provider Record; and
- Notify child welfare staff responsible for placement that the certified home is available using local branch protocol for notification.

The Supervisor's Role

- Review with the certifier the circumstances that are initiating an Inactive Referral Status.
- Review the written confirmation of the Inactive Referral Status letter sent to the certified family.
- Review with the certifier the circumstances that resolved the initiation of the Inactive Referral Status before reactivating the Certificate of Approval.
Chapter 8

Section 11: Conflict of Interest
Applying and Serving as a Foster Parent, Respite Care Provider, Guardian, Relative Caregiver or Adoptive Resource While a ODHS Child Welfare Employee

ODHS has determined that a ODHS Child Welfare employee may serve as a foster parent, respite care provider, guardian, relative caregiver or adoptive resource. ODHS has developed mandatory procedures to reduce the risk of any actual or perceived conflict of interest. These procedures apply to all ODHS employees who work with Child Welfare programs, including staff with oversight for these programs.

Child Welfare programs will assess Child Welfare employee applicants by standard processes and rules, including OAR 413-200-0270 through 413-200-0298, Responsibilities for Certification of Foster Parents and Relative Caregivers and Potential Adoptive Resources. Other ODHS employees must follow standard ODHS Human Resources policies and procedures to ensure there is no conflict of interest.

Application Process

Any ODHS employee interested in becoming a resource for a child or young adult in the care and custody of ODHS may apply for any of the below certificates of approval (see Types of Applicants). ODHS must ensure no preferential treatment is given to employees in the assignment of cases, the certification process, monitoring or reporting the employee’s activities, and in the placement of children or young adults in an approved and certified home of an employee.

Caseworkers and certifiers will not communicate with employee applicants through their state email, work cell phone or desk phone or at the applicant’s office during work hours.

An employee may have or may be perceived to have a conflict of interest when either of the following is true:

I. The employee’s position allows them to have influence, decision-making power, approval ability or any type of authority for case management decisions for a child or young adult in their care, or

II. The employee’s position within the agency may lead others to provide preferential treatment or consideration to the employee as a caregiver.

To address these potential or perceived conflicts of interest, all Child Welfare employees must comply with the following procedures.

Types of Applicants

Relative or child-specific

ODHS recognizes the value of placing children and young adults in ODHS custody with relatives and others with whom they have relationships. When an employee applies to be a relative or child-specific foster parent, ODHS will process the application pursuant to OAR 413-200-0270, which includes the option to issue a Temporary Certificate of Approval for an expedient placement in the home, when appropriate.

General applicant or non-child specific

An employee who applies to become a foster parent and does not meet the criteria for a relative or child-specific placement will be considered as a non-child specific applicant (also known as a general applicant) per rule (OAR 413-200), UNLESS there is an extraordinary circumstance.

Examples of extraordinary circumstances include, but are not limited to, the following:

I. An employee had responsibility or a decision-making role for the case or someone in the family, but that responsibility concluded far enough in the past (determined on a case-by-case basis by the employee’s district manager or designee) and is not currently deemed a conflict (or the conflict is waived) by any party to the case.

II. A child or young adult needs a placement, and the employee is the only person available to be the placement resource. In this example, the employee must agree to give up any case-management responsibility or decision-making role for the case.

III. The employee’s involvement in the case was so minor, it is not deemed a conflict of interest (or the conflict is waived) by any party to the case. Examples might include participation in a case staffing for the child or young adult, helping to supervise a visit or two, or having some involvement with a sibling or other member of the family in the past.

A Temporary Certificate of Approval must be processed and approved by the employee’s district manager or designee. The district manager or designee may only approve processing a Temporary Certificate of Approval for a Child Welfare employee if it is in the best interest of the child or young adult requiring care.

Adoption

An employee who seeks to become an adoptive resource must follow the specific adoption home study process outlined in Adoption Applications, Adoption Home Studies, and Standards for Adoption (OAR 413-120-0190), and meet the standards in the Adoption Application Requirements (OAR 413-120-0220), in addition to the approval processes described above for general applicants.

Adoption placement selection must comply with OAR 413-120-0020, Adoption Placement Selection Options.

Respite care

If a certified foster parent or relative caregiver requests an employee’s assistance with respite care, the employee must coordinate their request with the provider’s certifier and supervisor. The certifier must document that the decision to allow the employee to provide respite care was made based on a determination that it is in the child’s best interest.

There is no application for respite care; however, the certifier must comply with OAR 413-200-0281, Respite Care Providers, Child Care, and Babysitters. Pursuant to this rule, employees will be required to complete a Consent for Criminal Records and Fingerprint Check form (1011F) as well as a Child Welfare background check as part of the approval process. Once approved, the employee must review the Conflict of Interest Policy (MSC 060 002) before submitting the completed Conflict of Interest Review and Determination form (MSC 0104) to their immediate supervisor. The supervisor will then submit the completed MSC 0104 to Human Resources. Human Resources will notify the employee of their altered responsibilities.

Submission of Application and Assignment

The applicant will request an Application for Approval by ODHS to Care for a Child in the Care and Custody of Public Child Welfare form (1260A) from the certification unit. The applicant will submit the completed form to the certification unit in the ODHS Child Welfare office nearest to the home of the applicant.

Once the branch receives the completed application, the certification supervisor will coordinate with a certification supervisor in the nearest branch outside of the receiving branch for assignment and coordination, if that employee works and resides in the same district.

No preferential treatment is allowed for the applicant. The application must fall in the normal order with all other applications received, and the employee's application and certification oversight must be managed by a branch other than the employee's branch of employment. In counties with only one branch, these applications will need to be routed to a neighboring county for processing.

Exception

If the district manager or designee determines that another branch within the district can assess the applicant without a conflict of interest, then the assignment and assessment may be determined by the district manager's or designee's written approval.

Certification Assessment Processes

Once assigned, the certifier will follow OAR 413-200-0270 through 413-200-0298, Responsibilities for Certification of Foster Parents and Relative Caregivers and Potential Adoptive Resources. All requirements of certification must be adhered to for an employee, including criminal history and child abuse background checks of the employee and others in the home, and the use of the SAFE home study process, including the psychosocial inventory. An employee must also meet all foundation training requirements, unless an exception is granted under OAR 413-200-0379, Education and Training for Applicants and Certified Families.

Upon approval

If the agency employee is approved as a certified provider, they must review the Conflict of Interest Policy (MSC 060 002) before submitting the Conflict of Interest Review and Determination form (MSC 0104) to their immediate supervisor. The supervisor will submit the MSC 0104 to Human Resources, and Human Resources will provide proper notification to the employee of their employee versus caregiver responsibilities.

Denial or Revocation of Certification

If there is a decision to deny an application or revoke a certification, adherence to OAR 413-200-0296, Responsibilities Regarding Denial or Revocation of a Certification, is mandatory. The certification supervisor and program manager supervising certification must be notified by the certifier, per rule. The certifier and certification supervisor may request an additional staffing with the district manager and foster care program manager or designee prior to requesting Department of Justice involvement. The decision to deny or revoke a Certificate of Approval must also be reported to Human Resources by district management.

Employee vs. Caregiver Responsibilities

The employee providing foster care must fulfill the caregiving responsibilities for a child or young adult placed in their home in the same manner that any other foster parent is required to fulfill these responsibilities.

The employee may not use ODHS resources for caregiving responsibilities. This includes, but is not limited to, use of state email, state vehicles, or personal use of state equipment or work time.

The employee may not use work time for caregiving responsibilities, such as visits, children’s medical appointments, court, attendance at family meetings, consultation with the caseworker, or visits with the certifier. The employee may use vacation, personal leave or sick time as is appropriate and approved by their supervisor. It’s critical that the employee and their supervisor discuss and clearly delineate employee responsibilities versus caregiver responsibilities.

The employee must clearly delineate their role to others in any case-related meetings such as safety meetings, family decision meetings, committee meetings, court hearings, etc. (For example, stating, “I am here today as the foster parent of the child.”)

Placement Matching

No preferential treatment or special consideration is allowed for general applicant employees during the placement matching process. For example, an employee on an availability list for a baby may not be called first for every baby who enters foster care. Likewise, no one may pressure the employee who is certified into taking a child or young adult into their home. The best interests of the child and standard considerations around placement with siblings, being close to home and school, etc., shall continue to remain our primary considerations.

The employee’s certifier is responsible for notifying the certification supervisor or placement desk worker in the county in which the employee intends to provide care of the employee’s availability for placement. If the employee is on “Inactive Referral Status,” the certifier must exercise discretion in sharing that information on a need-to-know basis in order to remove the employee from any availability lists.

Confidentiality of Records

The certification supervisor for the certified employee must ensure the home provider (certification record) in OR-Kids is sensitized as soon as the home inquiry is completed.

The child or young adult’s home branch must ensure the child or young adult’s case is sensitized in OR-Kids as soon as placement with an employee is being considered.

The child’s or young adult’s home branch must ensure that the employee does not have access to the child’s or young adult’s physical case record or any other information that would not otherwise be available to any other foster parent.

When an employee accesses any case record, the employee must have a legitimate business need to access the case. If an employee accesses a case and does not have a legitimate business need, that access is a violation of ODHS confidentiality policies and may result in disciplinary action.

Sensitive Issue Reports

All sensitive issue reports involving agency employees as caregivers will be handled pursuant to agency policies and include the certified employee’s district manager or designee and supervisor.

Child Abuse Allegations and Out-of-Home Care Assessments

When a screening report involves a certified employee, the screener must immediately consult with a CPS or screening supervisor per OAR 413-015-0212.
Employees must comply with OAR 413-200-0404 through 413-200-0424, Department Responsibilities During Screening and Assessment of a Child Abuse or Neglect Report Involving the Home of a Department Certified Foster Parent or Relative Caregiver.

When the decision is made to close at screening, pursuant to OAR 413-200-0414, Department Actions During Screening, all of the following staff must be notified of the screening report:

I. The employee’s certifier

II. The child’s case worker, and

III. Respective supervisors.

When the decision is made to assess, the CPS screening supervisor must:

I. Immediately refer the assignment to a program manager or designee in a nearby district to assign for assessment

II. Notify the following ODHS staff of the assessment: the employee’s supervisor, program manager, district manager, and assigned certifier and certification supervisor

III. Complete and submit a Sensitive Issue Report form (ODHS 0150), and

IV. Sensitize the employee’s CPS case in OR-Kids.

Human Resources Reporting

Any concerns related to an employee’s ability to be a foster parent/respite provider should be staffed with a supervisor. The supervisor will notify the Office of Human Resources if appropriate.

In addition, the supervisor will report to Human Resources the certification decision and any subsequent decision to deny or revoke a Certificate of Approval. Examples of when reporting to Human Resources would be appropriate may include, but are not limited to:

I. Concerning criminal history that is discovered

II. Substance abuse

III. Abuse or neglect toward a child or other adult in the home, and

IV. Misuse of public money.

Examples of when the supervisor would not report certification concerns or a denial or revocation of a certified employee to Human Resources may include, but are not limited to:

I. The behaviors or conditions of another person in the employee’s home, and

II. Conditions or circumstances that are not behavior related, such as a living environment that does not meet certification standards.
Certification Records

A. Hard Copy Certification Files

Procedure

Hard Copy Certification files are separated into six distinct sections (refer to Appendix 8.5).

The certifier files information according to the following sections:

I. Section 1 contains information regarding certification actions. This includes:

A. Consent for Criminal Records and Finger Print Check form; See OR-Kids File Cabinet Guide, page 6 for details about entering this information into the Provider Record;
B. Criminal History Approval Request; (CF 1011D)
C. Request for Management Approval for Specific Rules; (CF 117)
D. OJIN/eCourt reports;
E. Police reports; and
F. Any child abuse and neglect history obtained during certification and renewal processes.

V. Section 5 contains information regarding training the certified family has attended. This includes:

A. Report of certified caregiver training for credit. (CF 0034);
B. Training logs;
C. Training verifications and certificates.

VI. Section 6 contains notes and general correspondence. This includes:

A. Letters and emails to and from the certified family;
B. Information received from caseworkers unrelated to a report of child abuse or neglect (which is in Section 1); and
C. Provider notes.

- Document in the Department’s information system, Or-kids as a provider note, information related to the circumstances of the certified family whenever:
  1. The certified family is participating in a Placement Support Plan;
  2. The certified family has been placed on inactive referral status;
  3. Information regarding conversation with certified family regarding information received at screening but determined not to meet the criteria for a report of child abuse or neglect;
  4. A CPS assessment is underway;
  5. At the conclusion of a CPS assessment;
  6. There are specific conditions in the certified family’s home that need additional oversight of Child Welfare staff;
  7. When the applicant has had a Certificate of Approval denied or revoked; and
  8. Other information that is important for ready access to other Child Welfare staff.
- Review the certification file regularly and, at least biannually, ensure all information is current and accurately reflects the status of the certified family.

B. Electronic Certification Files

- In addition to maintaining the paper certification file, the documentation needs to be electronically scanned into OR-Kids. Documents that are generated by the information system do not generally need to be printed and placed into the paper file.

- The filing guide to where scanned documents are stored is located on the OR-Kids online website and can be found here.

The Supervisor's Role

- Regularly review certification files; and
- Ensure all certification staff are knowledgeable regarding accurate certification documentation requirements.

C. Request for certification records

Per Oregon laws, information retained by the Department for a certified family is confidential and not available for public inspection.

Procedure

- Records are released for federal and state audit purposes. The local office will be notified by central office staff when an audit is occurring.
- Prior to providing access or providing copies of any Department records, the certifier must have the supervisor review all records. Many local offices utilize the district paralegal to assist in records requests. If needed, contact the central office Foster Care Coordinator for questions. The following records may be made available to the certified family or certified family's attorney:
  1. The certified family’s home study, after third-party confidential information has been redacted. The certified family or family’s attorney may receive a copy of the redacted copy with a cover letter expressly describing the specific purpose of the home study was to determine the applicants’ ability to comply with certification standards required by the Department.
  2. Information or forms the family has provided to the Department, such as the family financial form, Medical Report A, or letters and email correspondence the certified family has sent to the family.
  3. Medical information received from a medical provider, mental health information received from a mental health provider unless information contained in these records could cause harm to the individual or someone else.
- Third party confidential information including, Criminal History information, references, any Department database information, or CPS assessments is confidential and not to be released.
- Department certification records that are approved for access are made available within 10 working days of the request unless the time frame is not possible, in which case the certifier arranges a time convenient to the person authorized to have access to the certification records.
- When the reviewer who has requested access to the records views the records the Department ensures:
  1. The reviewer is provided a space to review the records; and
  2. There is a Department employee with the reviewer to assure records are not altered in any way.
When the reviewer requests a copy of the records or designated parts of the record, only Department staff must make copies of the requested records.

Department records that are approved for release are copied and made available within five working days of the request unless the time frame is not possible, in which case the certifier arranges another date for the release of copied records.

When a request for disclosure of information in a certification file or electronic record is received from the certified family or the certified family's attorney the certifier:

1. Staffs the request with the supervisor,
2. Contacts the certified family to arrange receipt of a signed release of information when appropriate. For example, when a family requests information be sent to their attorney or when the requested documents include information about both foster parents
3. Talks with the requestor to determine if the documents will be mailed, picked up in person, or delivered by other means.
4. Prepares the documents from the certification file or electronic data system.

When a certifier receives a request for disclosure of information regarding a certified family from a person outside of the Department other than certified family or the family’s attorney, discuss the request with the certification supervisor, the assigned AAG, and the central office foster care coordinator.

When a certifier receives a subpoena to release a certification record, discuss the request with the certification supervisor, the assigned AAG, and the central office foster care coordinator.

When a prospective adoptive family's home study is requested, the certifier must follow Child Welfare Policy, I-A.3.3, Release of Adoption Home Study Reports

The Supervisor's Role

- Review all certification records when a request is received.
- Advise the certifier on the information that needs to be redacted from records that will be made available for access or release.
- Review and approve all redacted records prior to access or release.

Section 13: Safety and Wellbeing Reviews
Safety and Wellbeing Reviews

This procedure is a formal review process for Foster Parent, Relative Caregiver and/or Adoptive Families, prospective or certified, by the Department when an issue of concern, closed at screening, allegations of abuse, or rule violation occurs. This review provides increased communication and collaboration among staff in ensuring the safety, health and wellbeing needs of children and young adults are being met on an ongoing basis. This process is a comprehensive review, not incident based, to support our foster parent and relative caregivers by understanding the complexity of current family circumstances and what interventions may be needed.

Safety & Wellbeing Review Procedure

Each district/local office is responsible for the development of a local protocol and scheduling to ensure that the Safety & Wellbeing Review structure for foster homes certified by Child Welfare (CW), is enacted when CW is made aware of the following regarding certified or prospective foster and adoptive homes:

- An issue of concern related to the home, members of the household, persons frequenting the home;
- Allegations of abuse;
- Rule violations relating Foster Home Certification; or
- Closed at Screening report.

The local Safety & Wellbeing Review includes a regularly scheduled review meeting at a minimum of two times per month in which the committee meets. The purpose of having a regular scheduled time is to minimize the workload of coordinating a review committee among multiple individuals. This schedule is not intended to replace current administrative rule requirements and timelines pertaining to Department Responsibilities When a Report Involves a Home Certified by Child Welfare (Out of Home Care Assessments). OHCA pre-staffings and post-staffings may take place during Safety & Wellbeing Reviews.

This review structure allows for a staff person to:

- Request a review of certified or prospective foster and adoptive homes;
- Prepare any materials that need to be presented, including but not limited to, provider chronologies, summary of concerns, summary of provider strengths, summary of needs and behaviors of children and young adults placed in the home; and
- Provide materials to the review committee prior to the scheduled meeting.

The standing members of the Safety & Wellbeing Review process:

- Child Welfare program manager or designee;
- Certification supervisor or designee;
- Certifier;
- Caseworker Supervisor or designee;
- Caseworker; and
• ICWA representative, if applicable.

Others to consider may include:

• Social service assistant;

• CPS or Screening supervisor or designee; and

• Program Consultants & Coordinators – Central Office consultants/coordinators (Foster Care, Safety, Adoption, Residential Treatment, ICWA, Permanency Consultants, Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC), or Health and Wellness) should be used in complex cases, or cases reviewed previously, or when the district or branch requires additional review participants.

When Information is received through the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline (ORCAH) that does not require a CPS assessment (Note) See Chapter 3, section 24 for what the required actions are during an OHCA.

When a screening decision has been made that the information about a certified foster home will not be assigned for CPS assessment but will be Closed at Screening the following procedure applies.

• When the certifier is notified by a screener that information regarding one of the certifier's homes was Closed At screening, the certifier and certification supervisor must:

  • Assess the information and determine whether the information may be:
    • A certification concern;
    • A violation of certification standards; or
    • An indication that the certified family may need additional support.

  Ways of doing this may include:

  ▪ Talking to caseworkers;
  ▪ Discussing with the foster parent;
  ▪ Arrange a home visit if a certification action will support the family toward mitigating concerns;
  ▪ Reading the screener’s notes;
  ▪ Discussing with the screener; and
  ▪ Other relevant collaterals.

  • Assess and Determine if additional actions are necessary to ensure or support safety by way of a certification action, such as:
    • Initiating a placement support plan;
    • Invoking inactive referral status; or
    • Making the decision to send a notice of intent to revoke the certificate of approval.

Exception to CAS Staffing:

The Certification Supervisor must review CAS information and determine if the CAS must be staffed at a Safety &
Wellbeing Review or if the information does not require a formal review. The supervisor must document their decision and rationale in the Lighting Bolt (on the summary page).

When a certifier receives information, which is information only and is not a Closed at Screening or Out of Home Care Assessment the certifier must:

- Review the information;
- Identify any potential certification issues, training, or support needed; and
- Follow-up as appropriate to ensure the safety of the certified family’s home environment.

Documentation in OR-Kids:

Documentation of the Safety & Wellbeing review must be entered in the OR-Kids Provider record under the Certification/Licensing Issues (Lightning Bolt) expando:

Appendix 8.4: How to Request Verbal Language Interpretation Including American Sign Language and Written Translation for Foster Home Certification
How to Request Verbal Language Interpretation Including American Sign Language and Written Translation for Foster Home Certification

Orientation handbook

I. Orientation booklets are available in Spanish for mono-lingual Spanish speaking applicants.

II. The Orientation can be translated to other languages when necessary. To have translation in another language considered, contact a central office Foster Care Coordinator to see if a translated version has already been completed.
   A. If the Foster Care Coordinator determines the need, then they will complete the ODHS 1001 Project Request and send to ODHS-OHA.PublicationRequest@ODHSoha.state.or.us.

III. Foundations and ongoing training needs:
   A. Plan in advance when it is known language services will be needed.
      1. Arrange for in-person spoken language interpreters according to OEMS Language Access Service Guide and check out Simultaneous Interpretation Equipment through the Foster Care Program Office. Refer to Appendix 8.3 for reserving and equipment check out instructions.
      2. If there is a need for American Sign Language (ASL) or other services for Deaf and Hard of Hearing services, follow instructions below in the “Services for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing.”

IV. SAFE Home Study Template:
   A. Upon completion of the SAFE Home Study (and any SAFE Home Study updates), if a family’s primary language is not English and the family requests materials in their primary language, the certifier should provide a translated version of their study(ies) to them in the requested language.
      1. The certifier will submit a request to ODHS-OHA.PublicationsRequest@ODHSoha.state.or.us with a completed ODHS 1001 Project Request and the Word version of the home study template. See the Publications Request webpage for other details. On the Consortium for Children Website/Safe Templates are templates that have been translated into alternate languages.
         - If the family’s primary language is one of the previously translated templates provided by the Consortium for Children: Include that translated template and the Word version of the narration in the project translation requests. Emphasize in the project request that the narration is the only portion that will need to be translated. Omit the Psychosocial Inventory page.
         - If the family’s primary language is not one of the previously translated templates provided by the Consortium for Children: Provide the template and the narration, as all of the document will need to be translated. Omit the Psychosocial Inventory page.
Publications will provide an email receipt of the project request, notify the sender of the assigned Publications staff, and provide updates on how long the translation request may take for completion. If the cost is over $800, supervisor approval is required.

2. Upon receipt of the completed translated home study, provide the home study to the family and keep a copy in the OR-Kids Filing Cabinet of the Provider Record.

Services for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing

In-person interpretations

I. For in-person interpreters for American Sign Language (ASL) and Hard of Hearing communications assistance (with at least 48-hour notice), submit a Communication Service Request to Oregon Deaf & Hard of Hearing Services (ODHHS). Due to the limited availability of ASL interpreters, complete the online request as early as possible.

II. ODHHS will ask which type of interpreter is needed. If you are unsure, ODHHS will ask additional questions once the request is submitted to assist in locating the appropriate resource. Here are some common services ODHHS will schedule:

A. American Sign Language (ASL) interpreters
B. Certified Deaf Interpreters (CDI)
C. Communication Access Realtime Translation (CARTs)
D. Tactile interpreters
E. Assistive listening devices (large group or small group)
F. Other languages for sign language

G. Note: IF ODHHS is unable to fulfill your request, the branch may look for available interpreters through the Oregon Association of the Deaf Interpreter directory.

PROVIDER NAME(S)

ADDRESS LINE

Dear NAME(S),

The Department of Human Services (DHS) has received a report that someone in your home abused a child or young adult in your care. You will be placed on inactive referral status pending the completion of Child Protective Services (CPS) Assessment of these concerns. Inactive referral status is a period, not to exceed 12 months, during which neither DHS nor any other agency may place an additional child or young adult in your home. During the CPS Assessment, the child(ren) or young adult(s) may remain in your home, or may be removed for safety, well-being or permanency needs.

The following is excerpted from policy found in 413-015-0601 thru 413-015-0608 regarding your certifier’s role during the CPS Assessment:

413-015-0606(2) Child Welfare Certifier and Certification Supervisor Actions. When the assigned certifier is notified that information received by a screener involving a home certified by Child Welfare is referred for a CPS assessment—

(a) Within one business day after the CPS worker has made initial contact, the certifier must contact and notify the certified family and provide them with the following information:

   (A) The certifier is available to answer questions related to certification but will not discuss the specifics of the CPS assessment;
   (B) The certified family is immediately placed on inactive referral status pending the completion of the CPS assessment;
   (C) The certified family has the option of having a consulting foster parent or relative caregiver available for support during the assessment; and
   (D) The names of foster parents and relative caregivers who have agreed to serve in this role.

(d) Within 14 days of the notification required in paragraph (2)(a)(B) of this rule, the Department must provide written notification to the certified family that the home has been placed on inactive referral status and place a copy of the written notification in the certification file.

Safety, health and independence for all Oregonians
At the conclusion of the CPS Assessment you will be notified of the disposition. If it is determined you are responsible for abuse, you will receive a letter that explains your right to have the decision reviewed. There is only a review process if the results are “founded” or “substantiated.”

If you have further questions about this matter please contact me.

Sincerely,

Tips For Writing the Oregon Temporary Certificate Narrative

Please note This is just a Tip Sheet and is not meant to be viewed as a complete list of what is needed to be addressed before issuing a Temporary Certificate. It may be appropriate to issue a Temporary Certificate prior to having an opportunity to gather all this information; the detail in this Tip Sheet is not meant to be a barrier to having children join the home of a family known to them. Conversely, there may be instances in which you need to address something which is not listed below.

The prompt in the Oregon Temporary Certificate narrative document reads: [-Summarize information known about the applicants and all members of the household, at the time the Temporary Certificate was issued, regarding safety, motivation, knowledge, skills, current functioning, and personal qualifications-]

Introduction:

Who is applying?

What is the family composition? Are there any other children in the home? Are there any other adults in the home?

Discuss any information you might have on the applicant(s) children who are already in the home. What are their needs? Discuss any information you might have on how they will react to the children being placed.

Who are the applicants applying for?

What is their motivation to apply for these children?

Describe the relationship between the applicants and the children. Describe any care that they have previously provided for these children.

Information About the Children:

Briefly describe the children, anything that you know about their emotional needs and behaviors. If you know, and find it important to mention, include any information you might have about why and how the children came into substitute care (include information about the child/ren’s removal if this is important for the applicant(s) to know).

What do the applicants understand about the child/ren’s needs? Talk about whether the applicants will be able to meet the child/ren’s needs and whether there’s any history of them previously meeting these child/ren’s needs.

Talk about whether there are any case plan restrictions regarding safety of the children and how the providers were made aware of those safety issues. Will the applicant(s) be able to support the case plan and meet the child/ren’s safety needs. Summarize whether the information you currently have supports whether they can successfully meet the specific needs of the child/ren (while we continue to assess).

Mention the child information the applicants received to prepare them to provide care to the child (e.g. child information form, previous CANS assessment, updated supervision plan, medical information, etc.). If none provided yet, mention plan for family to receive asap.

Home/Safety/Environment:
Talk about the home generically (how many bedrooms, etc.).

What is the plan for each child to have safe and age appropriate sleeping arrangements?

Talk about any other safety information about the home. You could refer to the safety assessment, such as when a safety assessment was completed (smoke detectors, fire extinguishers, carbon monoxide alarms, medication, water hazards and sporting equipment inaccessible). Refer to anything that is/was a potential concern and how it was or will be addressed. You could mention the Foster Child’s Bill of Rights being posted, or Sibling Bill of Rights accessible, and age appropriate sharing of the evacuation plan.

Give a summary of any pets that are in the home and any information about their safety with children (demeanor, are they up to date on shots?).

Criminal and Child Welfare History:

Briefly mention the following (I state briefly mention, because this will be well documented in either the CF 117 or the 1011D):

What did the CW history check reveal? Were Management Approvals needed? Were they obtained in writing?

What did the Criminal History check reveal? Were any Management Approvals needed (aka fitness determinations made)? Were they obtained in writing?

Were they referred/given the information for finger printing?

Assure that all adults in the home are discussed.

*Alternately you can just indicate that Child Welfare History Management Approvals or Criminal History Management Approvals (fitness determinations) were signed off on and are discussed further in the CW 117 or 1011D.

Current Functioning/Personal Qualifications:

Describe anything you know about the applicant(s) current functioning and personal qualifications. What you know at this juncture may be somewhat limited. Discuss any medical or mental health, substance abuse information that you may have about the applicant.

Discussions with applicant(s):

(Suggestions for topics to discuss as part of Orientation and in recognition that Orientation may not occur immediately (policy allows Orientation within 30 days):

Discussed:

- Mandatory abuse reporting requirements for certified families & resources available to them to understand their responsibilities (e.g. website for foster parents that has training video links)
- Discuss child care, respite care requirements. Talk with Foster parents about who they’ll use for child care or respite care.
- Foster parent responsibilities regarding educating anybody they utilize to help care for the children about their mandatory reporting requirements and child abuse information including statutory definitions of child abuse and abuse of children in care (website training resources)
- Discipline policy
• Additional Oregon law definitions of child abuse for a child in care
• Shared 211 Foster Parent support line information (and any other local resource information which is helpful for crisis or support needs).

References:

Gather information from two personal references for the applicant. If information from the references was not able to be gathered prior to issuance of a Temporary Certificate, then policy allows 24 hours to gather those.

If you have gathered this reference information, were the two references positive? What did they say about the applicant(s) current functioning and personal qualifications?

Recommendation:

Do you recommend that they be issued a Temporary Certificate for these children?

Again This is just a Tip Sheet and is not meant to be viewed as a complete list of what is needed to be addressed before issuing a Temporary Certificate. There may be instances where you may need to address something that is not listed above. You may also not be able to address all the items above, and it still may be appropriate to issue the Temporary Certificate. This Tip Sheet is not meant to be a barrier to issuing a Temporary Certificate and continuing to assess the family.

Appendix 8.10: Sample Interview Questions: SOGIE and REC
Sample Interview Questions: Respect, Accept, and Support Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity, and Gender Expression (SOGIE) and Race, Ethnicity, and Culture (REC)

This guide is a resource to help certification staff plan for their interviews with applicants and resource families. It is not the intention to ask all the questions below, as if going through a checklist. Rather, it is a tool to give ideas about how to gain a greater understanding of families. It is meant to help certifiers assess applicants’ and resource families’ readiness and abilities to meet the certification standards related to respecting, accepting, and supporting children’s and young adults’ identity, as well as protecting children’s and young adults’ rights under the Oregon Foster Child Bill of Rights. This guide may also help us identify knowledge and skill gaps to customize learning opportunities and determine the type of support we can provide to resource families to partner with them in best meeting the needs of children and young adults.

As with any contact with our families, engagement skills are critical. We seek to build rapport, maintain a non-judgmental stance, and gather information that helps us better understand families. We want them to feel comfortable to let us know when they may struggle with something, don’t understand it, or may foresee difficulties in fulfilling their role in meeting the expectations of a certified resource family.

We want families to feel free to express their perspectives and to pose questions. Certifiers should find ways to encourage dialogue such as thanking them for asking their questions and for expressing their thoughts and views. Take time to draw out more information to have a good understanding of people’s perspectives and how they would likely behave. Questions to draw out more information include:

- What does that look like?

  You say you’d accept; what does that look like?

- What does that mean to you?

  You say you’d respect that; what does that mean to you?

- Tell me more about that.

  You say you don’t agree with that. Tell me more about that.

- How would you respond to ________?

  Pose to the applicant/resource family a hypothetical scenario and ask how they’d respond to that. When they say how they’d respond, ask a follow-up question:

  What impact do you think that (response/behavior) would have on the child/young adult?

---

Assessing applicants’ readiness and ability to respect, accept, and support children’s and young adults’ sexual orientation, gender identity and gender expression (SOGIE) and to enhance their positive self-concept.

Legend:

The bolded text below lists behaviors which align with respecting, accepting, and supporting children and
The italicized text below are sample open-ended questions or realistic scenarios that can be utilized by certification staff who are assessing applicants and certified families as part of the home study process.

Using the name and pronouns the young person wants you to use.

How would you rate your comfort level with using the name and pronouns a young person says are correct for them when the name and/or pronouns are not what you may have assumed the young person would use? For the rating, a rating of one would be “very uncomfortable” and a rating of ten would be “extremely comfortable”.

(If the applicant or resource family’s response is a low rating, consider asking a follow up question- What would you need to help you increase your comfort level?).

What would you say or do if a child whose sex assigned at birth was male asks you to please stop using “he, him” pronouns and to instead use the pronouns “she, her”?

If a child or young adult says they use the pronouns ‘they, them, theirs’ or “zi, hir, hirs” and they want you to use those pronouns for them, how would you respond? What are your thoughts about this?

How would you respond if a child or young adult says they no longer want to be called their legal name ‘Shelly’ and request that you now call them ‘Shawn’?

Make your home a safe space where people can be their authentic selves. This includes creating and maintaining a home environment where bullying and harassment is not tolerated.

How would you challenge bias and hateful statements in your home and within your network of family, friends, and community?

How might you respond if a youth in your home speaks about sexual orientation, gender identity or gender expression in a way that is insensitive, biased or prejudiced?

If a child identifies as lesbian, gay, bisexual, pansexual, transgender, non-binary, two-spirit, or is questioning their sexual or gender identity, what is your comfort level with that?

We do not always know a child’s sexual orientation or gender identity. Let’s say a child comes into our care at age seven and is living with you for three years. What do you do/how do you respond if that child who is now 10 years old says they are attracted to a child of the same gender or if they say they are lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, or two-spirit?

How would you prepare your birth children, other children in care, and other family members for the arrival of an LGBTQIA2S+ child? (How do you do that preparation regardless of whether you think the child who will be joining is a sexual or gender minority?)

If one of your relatives says a child who is placed in your home is not welcome to be part of an activity with the extended family because of their actual or perceived gender identity or sexual orientation, how would you handle this?

If you are taking care of a child or young adult who has told you they are bisexual or has said they are attracted to boys and girls and your faith leader says in service that same-sex attraction or behavior is a sin, how do you approach this?

How will you set the tone for/communicate the expectation in your home for respectful behavior from others toward all members of the household and their loved ones?

An adolescent view of their own sexual orientation and gender expression can change and evolve over time. As a resource parent, how do you envision supporting a child in your home whose thoughts around their own sexual orientation and gender expression may develop or change as they get older?

For youth in your home with diverse SOGIE, support and assist them to be involved with LGBTQIA2S+ resources and supports.

Tell me your thoughts about kids in your home being part of gatherings which provide social connections for kids who identify as LGBTQIA2S+ (e.g., Gender and Sexuality Alliances aka Gay Straight Alliances at school, Youth Groups for LGBTQIA2S+ young people, online social, support, affinity groups for LGBTQIA2S+ youth).

What would make you comfortable or uncomfortable about a youth in your care attending a support group or participating in an on-line community with people who identify as LGBTQIA2S+? What concerns would you have? And what benefits do you think there could be?

How would you go about connecting a youth to an LGBTQIA2S+ organization or event?

How familiar are you with ways to locate LGBTQIA2S+ resources/supportive environments outside of your home?

What role would you play when a child or young adult in your care is referred to or is already connected to a medical professional or mental health professional who is providing support and care related to the child’s or young adult’s diverse sexual orientation or gender identity? (e.g. youth is receiving trans affirming medical care services, is being referred to a counselor to support a youth whose well-being has been impacted by stigmatization due to SOGIE). What questions or concerns might you have about this?

Support a child to dress in the way they feel most comfortable according to their gender identity.

How would you handle a child wanting to express themselves in ways that don’t correspond with the sex they are assigned at birth (appearance, clothing choices, make-up, etc.)?

When discussing clothing and attire for children and young adults, include some hypothetical situations for consideration, which could be more specific to youth who are transgender, gender non-conforming, gender fluid, or otherwise gender diverse.

• What if a boy wants to wear makeup, a dress or skirt, high heels? What if that child’s age is 5? 15? Any difference in how you respond or approach that situation?

• If a child wants to wear clothing known to be attached to their gender identity, how would you handle it?

If a child or young adult in your home shares with you that they are LGBTQIA2S+, show them affection, express your care for/love for them, thank them for sharing.

Tell me about your comfort level with a youth sharing with you that they are LGBTQIA2S+.

How would you rate your comfort with a youth sharing they are LGBTQIA2S+, one being “very uncomfortable” and ten being “extremely comfortable”? How would you respond? What do you think would be important for them to hear? What do you think would not be helpful from you?
How would you respond to a child who wants to talk about their feelings in these situations: Child says having feelings about/attracted to somebody of the same gender; Child says I feel like I’m really a boy (sex assigned at birth was female) or I don’t really feel like I’m a boy or a girl?

What if a youth wants more information on what it means to be lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender? What do you see as your role? What would you do?

Support a child to be with friends who are also LGBTQIA2S+ and accepting the friends in your home, as you would all other friends.

Would you welcome an LGBTQIA2S+ youth’s friends and partners into your home? Why or why not? Please explain.

Keep the same dating rules for LGBTQIA2S+ youth as you would for non-LGBTQIA2S+ youth.

What are/will be some of your home’s rules about dating, privacy, etc.? At what age do you support activities like going to a movie with friends or with somebody they are romantically interested in? What if a girl has a romantic interest in another girl rather than a boy, would there be any differences in your answers about rules in your home?

Assessing applicants’ readiness and ability to respect, accept and support children’s and young adults’ race, ethnicity, and cultural (REC) identities and to enhance their positive self-concept and understanding of their heritage.

Set the stage for this interview by explaining that we want to know more about our applicants and resource families: who they are, how they have come to understand messages about culture and identity, where they are coming from as it relates to the care of children whose identity may be similar to theirs and some who are less similar.

1. What parts of your cultural identity* do you identify with or value the most? (2) *age, race/ethnicity, national origin, gender identity and expression, gender, family role, sexual orientation, mental/physical ability, income, religion, education, communication and language skills, appearance, political belief, etc.

2. Why do you identify with or value these pieces of your cultural identity? (2)

3. What is your family’s racial and/or cultural heritage? Was it particularly valued by your family? If so, how was this expressed? (3)

4. What messages did you receive about your or your family’s cultural identity growing up (directly or indirectly)? (2)

5. Reflect on a time in childhood when you were aware of race (your own or someone else’s racial identity or characteristics). What thoughts and emotions do you associate with that moment? (4)

6. Did you have family, friends, acquaintances of other races or cultures? How were they accepted? How were they treated? (3)

7. What did you notice about the words, actions and attitudes of others about race during your childhood? What messages did you get about yours or other’s characteristics, especially racial identity? How have these messages impacted your life? (4)
8. What stereotypical messages related to race, ethnicity and culture have you received from parents, friends, and the community? (2)

9. How do these messages influence your view of the world and the people in it (positively or negatively)? (2)

10. What oversimplified beliefs (positive or negative) do you have about people who are similar to or different from you? (2)

11. What past experiences have you had that may be contributing to these feelings? (2)

12. Are there any individuals from particular cultural (or racial) backgrounds who make you feel anxious, uncomfortable, angry or resentful? (2)

13. Are there types of individuals or families with whom you need to expand your understanding, comfort, or acceptance?

14. Have you ever had a significant or intimate relationship with a person of another race? (5)

15. Do you currently have people, other than acquaintances, who are actively involved in your life who are of different racial or cultural backgrounds? What is your relationship with them? (3)

16. What racially-mixed functions do you currently attend? (3)

17. Do you have access to professionals or others who can give insight to understand cultural groups?

18. Share your thoughts on increasing social contacts and friendships with people from other cultures?

Child in Your Care

19. Thinking about your family and community, what do you think you might need to consider before opening your home to children of different cultures (i.e. is your social network made up of people from all different cultures and races; does religion play a large part in your daily family functioning and how might that impact the child, does your local community and/or school include children from all different races?).

20. Are there certain ethnic groups or people with different backgrounds than yours that you are unsure of, or have no knowledge /experience with, that you would be uncomfortable interacting with? What proactive steps might you take to ensure you have some knowledge and experience before a child comes to your home?

21. How do you think parenting a child of a different race will be for you compared to a child of the same race? What will be similar or different?

22. How do you think parenting a child of a different tribe will be for you compared to a child of the same tribe as your own? What will be similar or different?

23. Have you thought about learning and exploring the history of your child’s heritage? What are some steps you will take?

24. What steps will you take to help a child of a different race, culture and/or tribe feel comfortable in your family?

25. What kinds of things might you do or say to demonstrate to the child that you are interested in embracing their diversity and to help them feel comfortable within the culture of your family?

26. Have you given any consideration to providing music, art, magazines, books, art work or cultural artifacts reflective of your child’s heritage, and placing them in your home?

27. What connections can you make between the way you were parented and how you might alter the way you parent a child from a different race, culture and/or tribe?

28. Why can it be difficult for children to enter a home that is different from their own even if the new home provides them with a stable, safe, and healthy environment?

29. What impact do you think the child’s history (e.g., pre-placement history, history of trauma/abuse, experiences of racism or oppression) might have on their relationship with you?

30. What are your thoughts on preparing your child to answer questions about race differentness that makes sense to him/her?

31. Have you considered your comfort level with learning about a child’s experience as they navigate their world?

32. What steps can you take to insure a child of a different race, culture and/or tribe will have the relationships they need to maintain a positive racial identity?

33. What is your comfort level with including the child’s extended family?

34. What is your comfort level with continuing to develop adult and child relationships with individuals of the child’s race and culture?

35. Do you envision yourself attending cultural functions sponsored or presented by ethnic groups?

Chapter 8 • Appendix 8.11: Indicators of Families Likely to Respect, Accept, & Support REC & SOGIE & Indicators of Possible Concern

After certification staff have gathered information from the family, this appendix may be used as a guide to ascertain whether the family’s responses suggest they are likely to respect, accept and support a child’s REC and SOGIE. This guide is not meant to be an exclusive list of indicators of strength or indicators of concern. Note, while the document refers to applicants, these statements are also applicable to resource families.

Indicators of strength - The following items are indicative of a family who is likely to respect, accept, and support a child’s race, culture, and ethnicity (REC):

Applicant has explored their own heritage and history and has learned what brought them here.

According to Joseph Crumby, author of Transracial Adoption and Foster Care, the first parental task of parents in transracial foster care is acknowledging the existence of prejudice, racism and discrimination. In addition to recognizing their existence, they must also acknowledge that they have been impacted by these inequities. Even members of the group that has power over the distribution of goods, services, rights, privileges, entitlements and status are negatively impacted. When individuals observe that “those in power are racially the same as [they are] and those not in power are of a different race,” and then detect prejudiced or discriminatory practices against the other racial group, they may develop the belief that their racial group is better. Conversely, when individuals observe that those who are not in power are racially the same as they are and those in power are of a different race, and then detect prejudiced or discriminatory practices against the first racial group, they may develop the belief that the other racial group is better. This could further lead to the embracing of stereotypes, fearing differences and perpetuating prejudices. Knowing this allows this applicant to avoid denying and minimizing the child’s experiences, or excusing behavior that is racist, prejudiced or discriminatory. They will be better able to talk with the child, to provide the child with a repertoire of responses, and to develop strategies for intervening on the child’s behalf, based on personal experience and knowledge. [1]

Applicant recognizes and values cultural differences and is curious about different cultures and beliefs.

Children are able to perceive when parents are open to and comfortable with their curiosity and exploration. They naturally take their lead from their caregivers. If they sense their parents don’t want to attend to or discuss their cultural heritage, racial identity or national origin, they will likely shy away from bringing those topics up. Or they may wait until they can explore these areas without parental encouragement or participation. Often, this exploration takes place after reaching adulthood. This can be years of a missed opportunity to understand who they are.

It is a parental task to take the lead in discussing these topics in age-appropriate ways. It’s important to let children know that their family and home are safe places to bring up questions and concerns about race, culture and personal history. Children should be given the opportunity to know and understand this part of themselves.

Applicant is willing to learn about different cultures – reading about cultures before trips, expanding their friendship circles.

Applicant values cultural differences and has changed their behavior to communicate more effectively with people of different backgrounds.

Applicant is aware of cultural nuances and can move in and out of varying cultural communication styles.

Applicant is non-defensive when given suggestions on how to strengthen the child’s cultural identity.

Applicant is open to discussing different ways to include culturally relevant experiences for the child.

Celebrating certain holidays, displaying art and eating foods from a child’s culture is a good start to including culturally relevant experiences. Deeper and more meaningful exploration of the child’s cultural heritage is also important. Stories can also be read, music learned, history studied, and other connections, traditions, and interests encouraged. The entire family could enroll in a language class. Joining with the child to explore and understand their culture of origin is an important part of helping them to develop a whole, positive self-image that includes their racial and cultural identity.

Applicant is not threatened by the possibility that the child wants to learn a culture or belief system different from their own.

As children enter adolescence, they begin their search for personal identity. They ask, “Who am I? Who can I be?” Teens of color are also likely to be actively exploring their racial identity. They explore this area of identity because it is reflected to them in their community and society as a whole. It is likely they will encounter an experience or series of experiences that triggers a heightened awareness of the significance of race. They seek answers to, “Who am I racially? What does it mean to be part of this racial group? How should I act? What should I do?” During early adolescence, it is common for teens of color to begin actively identifying with their racial group and to seek out a same-race peer group. At this stage it is helpful for parents to provide ongoing opportunities to connect with same-race peers, even if it means traveling outside of their community. As awareness of the daily challenges of living in a race-conscious society increases, being able to share one’s experiences with others who have lived them is highly beneficial. Being able to see yourself as part of a larger group who can be of support is an important coping strategy. This means the parent will need to be willing to feel discomfort while navigating relationships with persons of the child’s culture.

Applicant is willing to join with the child in discovering their culture.

It is important for parents to make it clear that they support and want to be a part of their child’s cultural exploration. The child may also be more interested in this exploration if their family lives in a diverse community where they can see that their culture is represented, and if their family also fosters relationships with individuals who share that culture. Otherwise, the isolation, the sense of being different from family and friends, could overwhelm the natural interest and curiosity they might feel. Many children of color who live in primarily white communities spend their childhood and adolescence simply wanting to “blend in,” and these feelings are not very conducive to meaningful exploration of their cultures and countries of origin. Applicants should not allow their own fears about temporarily being in the minority themselves keep their children from moving within environments and coming into contact with individuals who could be sources of great comfort, knowledge, and understanding.

Applicant is willing to match their communication style with the child’s.

Both applicants agree on strategies to be used to strengthen the child’s cultural identity.

Applicant is willing to find out about adults in child’s family, kinship circle or community who can serve as cultural guides or mentors.

It is not enough to live in a diverse area or even send your children to a diverse school if your family has no significant relationships with people of color. Having a multiracial family by no means guarantees that all of your family members or friends will be sensitive to or even understand the work people of color must do to adjust to and move within a society that is still, in many ways, deeply prejudiced. Children cannot learn about or come to appreciate the experiences of people of other races, as well as people of their own race, if they never come into contact with them.

Indicators of possible concern – The following items may be indicative of a family who may struggle to respect, accept and affirm a child’s REC:
Applicant claims to be color blind, recognizing the common humanity of people regardless of race and culture.

Well-intentioned people often claim colorblindness as a way to indicate they are not racist. They believe being blind to the factor that seems to cause prejudice and racism is the best way for them to avoid racist behavior in themselves. This is based on the following misassumptions: (1) That seeing physical differences causes prejudice and racism, rather than the attaching a value of normal to one group and its members and a value of other to every other group and (2) That “equality and connectedness depend on sameness, and that seeing race fosters inequalities and disconnections.” [2]

Maintaining a colorblind approach often means ignoring race entirely and believing that race is or should be irrelevant to a person’s understanding of themself, as well as their experiences throughout life. An applicant who claims that the child’s race is of little, or no importance ultimately fails to recognize, accept, and know a crucial part of that child’s identity — and thus fails to love and celebrate the whole and unique person their child is. There is the very real risk that the children will feel that their caregivers are rejecting a part of them. Insisting that a child’s race “doesn’t really matter” often means ignoring and failing to equip children with the tools to identify and to act against injustice. [3]

Applicant’s assumptions of similarity are used to avoid recognizing their own cultural patterns, understanding others, and making necessary adaptations.

Applicant believes that because of cultural similarities, they just need to be themselves in cultural interactions.

Establishing cross-cultural connection means engaging with others on universal level, such as being warm, welcoming and respectful. It also requires an ability to recognize differences such as cultural values around personal space, tone and volume of one’s voice, the emphasis on non-verbal communication and cultural interpretations of words and concepts. Successful interactions require cultural awareness and a willingness to adjust based on understanding about the other person’s way of sharing and receiving information.

Applicant is aware of cultural differences but sees it in a polarized way — us and them.

Applicant sees their culture as positive and other cultures are viewed as less than.

Applicant views other cultures as positive and their own culture as less than.

Applicant is focused on their own group and does not have the opportunity or motivation to notice cultural differences.

An applicant who resides in a mostly white neighborhood, work and/or socialize almost exclusively with other white people, send their children to predominantly white schools, and live in mostly white communities, may never have a reason to examine or question the lack of racial or cultural diversity among the people with whom they regularly associate. They may be comfortable with the status quo. However, in order to care for a child of color, they need to consider how their neighborhood, local schools, religious community, social activities and even their primary social relationships would look through the eyes of a child of color. They need to consider: How comfortable will the child feel as a person of color group in their area? Would the child be the only person of color in their school? At the family church? On their street? Would they regularly see many faces that looked at all like theirs? Can these places and people help provide them with an environment in which they could be comfortable, easily find friends, feel confident and thrive?

Applicant intentionally interacts with their own group, with little awareness of cultural difference.
Applicant believes children in their care will be fine as long as they speak the same language.

After experiencing abuse and being taken into care, child placement with a resource family whose practices are different from their own is another source of anxiety for a child. Spoken language is only one aspect of communication and culture. Although we may use the same words, the manner in which they are used or their context can have different connotations depending on one's lived experiences. Cultures also vary in terms of being high context or low context. High context cultures are more attuned to non-verbal cues and messages while low context cultures typically focus on precise, direct verbal communication. Being able to recognize and to adjust for different communication expectations is crucial.

Applicant believes they can be successful in any cultural interaction without making any special effort.

Applicant believes children in their care will simply adapt to how they do things.

In the progression of moving towards cultural competency, this stance is just the beginning. It is a place of recognizing only one worldview. However, children need to feel a sense of safety, to have a sense of belonging, to be seen and to feel valued. Children living with families from a race and culture different from their own need parents who recognize their need to continue practicing and have the sense of familiarity with their cultural practices, to build their sense of racial identity, and to connect with their culture.

Applicant believes all children are the same.

All children have the same basic needs, as well as unique needs. Children of color need parents who value and can commit to helping children in their care develop an identity that includes competencies for transacting race and culture in everyday life.

Children are able to differentiate between skin colors as babies. Children absorb messages about race from all around them – from caregiver responses, seeing what people say or don’t say to one another, and messages (verbal and non-verbal) on media.

Children also observe and notice which group is in power, who holds privilege, status and resources. Children notice whether or not the group in power shares their racial and cultural characteristics. Without intentional support from adults, children are likely to internalize negative ideas about race. Children whose membership is of the group that controls resources and power may internalize stereotypes about themselves while children of color may observe or experience prejudice, discrimination and internalize those stereotypes. Children in the first group may assume being like the group in power allows them the same rights and will lead them to achieve the same power. Children of color may assume they will have the same limited rights, power, achievements and status.

Children need adults who can affirm and encourage them to see themselves reflected positively. Adults provide a buffer against negative societal messages.

Indicators of strength - The following are indicators that a family is likely to respect, accept, and support a child’s sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression (SOGIE):

Applicant endorses and engages in use of accepting behaviors which are shown to help children and young adults thrive and avoids rejecting behaviors which are shown to be connected to poor outcomes for children and young adults.
Refer to Dr. Caitlin Ryan’s Family Acceptance Project research and materials explaining accepting behaviors and rejecting/harmful behaviors. See references at the end of this document and the OWL Certification Support page for more Resources.

Applicant recognizes that diversity with respect to sexual orientation, gender identity and gender expression is and has always been part of human experience across cultures and throughout time.

Sexuality occurs across a continuum; same-gender attraction and relationships are normal variations of human sexuality. Similarly, a gender identity that is incongruent with assigned sex at birth, as well as a gender expression that diverges from stereotypical cultural norms for a particular gender, are normal variations of human gender (SAMHSA, Ending Conversion Therapy: Supporting and Affirming LGBTQ Youth).

Applicant is aware that people from historically excluded communities, including those with diverse SOGIE, experience stressors due to discrimination, harassment, bullying, and aggression. Applicant recognizes that these stressors can lead to use of coping strategies, some of which may negatively impact health and wellness, and uses this awareness to provide trauma-informed care that is respectful, accepting, and supportive.

Applicant recognizes the importance of providing support, allyship, and advocacy, and is interested in partnering with the child or young adult and others to do so.

Applicant supports child or young adult’s participation in counseling and medical appointments, which is aligned with the case plan. Applicant sees the potential benefits of these services to support the child or young adult’s safety, health, and wellbeing.

Applicant embraces young people being with other members of the LGBTQIA2S+ community and supports activities and relationships which help young people to be connected.

Relationships and connections with others are protective can increase resiliency. When in the company of people who have shared experiences and identities, people come to see that they are not alone in their feelings and experiences, and they can learn from others who have survived and thrived with similar challenges related to living in a society with homophobia and transphobia. Such connections can reduce stress and feelings of isolation while providing hope for a happy and healthy future, which leads to more positive outcomes.

Examples of connections could include school clubs such as GSAs (Genders and Sexualities Alliance or Gay-Straight Alliance), youth groups which are LGBTQIA2S+ friendly, PRIDE events, welcoming faith communities, online support, and social networking groups for youth (e.g., Gender Spectrum Lounge, Q-Chat, and TrevorSpace, an affirming international community for LGBTQ young people ages 13-24).

Applicant has thought about the messages received (from family of origin, the media, and society at large) regarding sexual orientation, gender identity and gender expression, sex, gender roles and gender expectations. Applicant has considered how these influences may impact parenting and seeks to remain vigilant regarding one’s biases, so that children and young adults experience respect, acceptance, and support for who they are.

Applicant talks openly about SOGIE in a positive way. Applicant believes and communicates that positive outcomes are possible for children and young adults who are LGBTQIA2S+.
Indicators of possible concern - The following are indicative of a family who may struggle to respect, accept, and support a child's SOGIE:

The below behaviors are some examples of actions that reject a person’s identity and/or are otherwise problematic and can cause harm.

Applicant refuses to use a person’s self-chosen name and pronoun or dismisses a person’s statements about their sexual orientation, gender identity, chosen name or pronoun (e.g., justifying saying things like- they’re just trying to get attention; it’s the popular thing to do/be; it’s just a phase; they’re too young to know that about themselves; that’s not a real word —or- it’s not grammatically correct- or- it’s too hard for me to say or remember, so I’m not going to say that or try).

Applicant endorses doing any of the following with respect to a child or young adult: changing a person’s sexual orientation or gender identity, behaviors or expressions of self, or reducing attractions or feelings toward people of the same gender (e.g., through prayer, counseling, or by getting them to date someone of the opposite gender).

Trying to change a person’s sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression, or to otherwise send a message that their identity or expression is problematic, wrong, sinful, a sickness, a bad behavior, or otherwise that it should be changed, is not only ineffective- it’s also harmful. The above actions are examples of conversion techniques. Numerous national medical and mental health professional organizations have specific statements and positions rejecting interventions which can be described as conversion, reorientation, or reparative therapy, noting the great risks of physical and emotional harm (including provoking feelings of guilt, anxiety, self-criticism and internalization of prejudice and increasing suicide attempts, depression, use of illegal drugs and raising risk for other poor health outcomes).

As articulated by the Family Acceptance Project, based on their extensive research, “Being valued by their (caregivers) parents and family helps children learn to value and care about themselves. But hearing that they are bad or sinful sends a deep message that they are not a good person. This affects their ability to love themselves and care for themselves. And it increases risky behaviors.”

Applicant suggests a person should hide their identity, keep it a secret, or indicates they would not permit them to talk about it.

It can be extraordinarily stressful to conceal one’s true authentic self. Monitoring one’s statements, mannerisms, and actions to determine how they may be judged or “read” by others takes a lot of energy. Requiring another person to utilize their precious energy in this way is unfair and can negatively impact their ability to succeed and thrive.

Applicant fails to recognize that behaviors such as these could harm a child or young adult: pressuring a child or teasing them to be more or less masculine or feminine or requiring they dress in a way that is uncomfortable to them.

Applicant is unwilling to include a child in family events or traditions due to their SOGIE.

Applicant would impose different dating guidelines or rules based on sexual orientation, gender identity or gender expression.

Applicant fails to recognize or accept the importance of learning about, preparing for, and creating an environment in which children and young adults with diverse SOGIE would experience the home as... welcoming, supportive, and respectful of LGBTQIA2S+ individuals.

Some families may think they don’t need to be supportive of children and young adults’ diverse SOGIE in order to serve as resource parents. Or they may not believe they need to think about it in advance and plan for how to create a welcoming environment, one of respect, accept, and support regarding diverse SOGIE, until and unless a child for whom they’re considering care is known to have diverse SOGIE.

Some of the following statements may reflect this sort of thinking:

“We plan to take care of babies (or only young children), so we don’t need to think about this.”

Some of the problems with this thinking/statement:

Sometimes families have preconceived thoughts and ideas about who a child is and what their SOGIE is or will be. But a baby hasn’t come to understand that yet. A baby isn’t old enough to make that known to us. That baby may or may not be who you assume they will be. We don’t want to set children up for being displaced from your home. Moves are disruptive and can cause negative impacts (e.g., disrupted attachments and relationships with people in their home and community, loss of relationships with friends, schoolmates, teachers, coaches, clergy). With moves, children can develop thoughts that they are unlovable, unworthy, unacceptable, and it can damage their sense of self-worth. Therefore, we seek to place in environments that will endure for the time needed in accordance with the case plan (e.g., until reunification, placement with sibling, relative, or achievement of an alternative permanency plan).

Children can start to solidify their gender identity at very young ages. Even at three years of age, some children are experiencing when their gender may not match their sex assigned at birth.

Babies grow up and become toddlers who take in messages from their environment. They may learn from the messages given that it is not okay to do certain things or behave in certain ways that have to do with the family’s own ideas of gender norms based on the family’s values, beliefs, and socialization. Some of these expectations may infringe on the child’s rights (Oregon Foster Children’s Bill of Rights) and can negatively impact the child’s developing sense of self.

“I am seeking to care for this specific child and this child isn’t LGBTQIA2S+.”

“If approached about an LGBTQIA2S+ child or young adult, I’d just decline to be a placement resource.”

“If a child is placed in my home and we later come to know they have diverse SOGIE, I’ll just ask that the child be moved.”

“If we come to learn that a child already placed in our home in fact does have diverse SOGIE, at that time I’ll start to learn more about how to support their identity.”

Problems with statements such as these:

We cannot assume that any child is heterosexual and cisgender. We don’t know how children identify. We only know what children have told us thus far. We know that a disproportionate number of children and young adults in care identify as LGBTQIA2S+ as compared to the population of children and young adults who are not placed in out of home care. From a number of studies, it is thought that the percentage of children and young adults who are LGBTQIA2S+ may represent around 30% of children and young adults in care.
The child may or may not identify as LGBTQIA2S+ at this point. But what if they do so in the future? We cannot know how people identify; we only know that when they know that about themselves and have decided to share it with us. People don’t always share with others what their thoughts and feelings are. Over time, people come to understand new things about themselves; this can be true for people well into their adulthood and even late adulthood. Who they know themselves to be now may not be how they know themselves to be in the future. We want them to know that they’ll be loved, cared for, supported for who they are and however they identify now and in the future. That unconditional love and positive regard is such an important part of wellbeing.

We don’t want children to be in an environment that doesn’t accept them for who they are, or which doesn’t support their being able to express their authentic selves. We don’t want children and young adults to have to decide between either being their true authentic selves or having stability and permanency.

We don’t want children and young adults to be in environments where they are consumed with monitoring their behaviors, mannerisms, ways of expressing themselves because they don’t know if they will be rejected if they express their authentic selves. This causes extraordinary stress and can keep children and young adults from attending to all the important tasks in life such as building skills, thriving in school, taking chances with new experiences, learning from mistakes, etc.

Young people will get a sense of a home environment; if it’s transphobic, homophobic, and not actively sending signals that the home is welcoming, accepting, and inclusive, the child or young adult would likely not let you know how they identify, and you wouldn’t likely know how they identify. Even when people in a home environment send all the great messages of being accepting and supportive, young people still may not share their identity, or they may still be coming to understand about their identity.

Children and young adults often watch for signals of acceptance and respect from others (whether people with diverse identities are accepted for who they are, just as they are) before sharing with people more about themselves. Research shows that some children who realized they were gay did not tell anybody because they “...learned that being gay was shameful and wrong from family, friends and other people in their community. They learned that gay people were called names, could be discriminated against and hurt by others, and they could embarrass and shame their families. So, from an early age, many gay children and adolescents learn how to hide their deepest feelings from people they love.” (Ryan, 2009). Children may have received these messages prior to coming into the home of a certified resource family and they will be watching for actions and behaviors from the family they join through foster care placement.

It’s important that children and young adults in care are respected, accepted, and supported for who they are no matter what their identity is. We want them to be cherished for who they are, not only if they meet certain “criteria” that we have for them. This is not about behaviors or choices. This is about their identity, a core part of who they are. We want them to be respected, accepted, and supported in their whole identity. That’s why we look for families who partner with ODHS as resource families to be respectful, accepting, and supportive to ALL children with respect to all facets of their identity.

Chapter 8

Appendix 8.12: Using SAFE Home Study Tools to Assess for Applicants’ & Resource Families’ Readiness to Respect, Accept, & Support Children’s & Young Adults’ REC & SOGIE
This appendix seeks to highlight how the Consortium for Children’s SAFE home study tools can be utilized to better understand applicants’ and resource families’ readiness to support children and young adults who come from a variety of racial, ethnic and cultural (REC) backgrounds and who may currently or in the future have diverse sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression (SOGIE), including those who may identify as LGBTQIA2S+.

Interviews:

While the Consortium for Children does not provide interview tools specific to the ODHS Child Welfare certification standard regarding respecting, accepting, and supporting the identity of children and young adults, the home study model intends for certifiers and their supervisors to collaborate with one another throughout the home study process, including planning for interviews. Appendix 8.10 of the Child Welfare Procedure Manual contains sample questions and hypothetical scenarios which may be a helpful tool for certifiers and supervisors as they prepare for home study interviews (initial home studies, renewal studies, or other update studies). After each interview, the certifier reflects on the information learned and assigns desk guide ratings on the psychosocial inventory.

Psychosocial Factors:

Information learned about a family’s readiness to respect, accept, and support children with respect to their REC and SOGIE may be connected to a variety of psychosocial factors. So, it’s possible that a certifier assigns desk guide ratings on numerous psychosocial factors, associated with the information learned through the interview process and via information from references and/or other outside sources. However, as discussed further in the narration section below, that doesn’t necessarily mean the information will be written about in numerous places within the home study.

The following psychosocial factors are likely where the ratings about REC and SOGIE will be reflected:

Section A- History

SOGIE (A1) Childhood Family Adaptability: Refers to level of adaptability in the Applicant’s childhood family.

REC (A2) Childhood Family Cohesion (identification with ethnic/cultural roots).

Section B- Personal Characteristics

REC (B4) Interpersonal Relationships.

SOGIE & REC (B7) Acceptance of Differences: Refers to an individual’s ability to respect, understand and relate to people with a different perspective on life due to differences such as race, physical ability or appearance, political or cultural perspective, generation, sexual orientation, socioeconomic class, religion, educational background, medical or psychiatric condition.

SOGIE & REC (B13) Adaptability: Refers to the individual’s ability to adjust to change and take on new challenges.

Section E- Extended Family Relationships

SOGIE & REC (E-2) Extended Family Adaptability: Refers to the level of adaptability in the Applicant’s extended family.

Section F- Physical/Social Environment

REC (F-6) Support System
Section G- General Parenting

SOGIE (G-2) Parenting-Style: Is parenting style associated with secure attachment or harmful to children’s development?

SOGIE & REC (G-6) Parental Role: In part, this psychosocial factor looks at acceptance or resistance to learning new parenting skills.

REC (G-7) Child Interactions: Ability to cope with conflict, encourage positive interaction among children.

Section H- Specialized Parenting

SOGIE & REC (several psychosocial factors in this section could be applicable).

Narration:

While there may be numerous psychosocial factors which have ratings impacted by information learned about the family’s readiness to respect, accept, and support children’s and young adults’ identity, certification staff make decisions about the best location(s) in the home study template to write about the information learned. It may make sense to write about these items in just one section of the study or it may be that the content is interspersed in sections where it best fits. It is up to the certifier and their supervisor to decide where in the study is the best location for this information. Remember the Consortium’s guidance to avoid repeating information throughout the study (“say it once and say it well”).

Consider the following for sections of the home study:

In the Home and Community section, the certifier could describe access to cultural activities. For the Extended Family Relationships section, even if the ratings are strengths (final desk guide rating “2”), consider including content such as: description of their family’s values; the discussions they have had with their friends and family members about their new role as resource parents, including ensuring that those who are around the child will be welcoming and respectful of a child who may hold different REC identity or who may have diverse SOGIE; the resource family’s readiness to set limits on the behaviors of others who could negatively impact the child’s sense of safety and wellbeing with respect to the child’s identity; and how the family plans to address stereotypes or challenge potentially harmful statements made by others who interact with the child placed in their home. In the Physical/Social Environment section, if not already addressed in the Extended Family Relationships section, consider adding content such as: who is in their support system?; how do they see their support system supporting them as they take on the new role as a resource family, including ensuring their friends/community will be welcoming and respectful?; and how will they navigate their supports if there is ever a time that anyone from their support system causes harm, intentionally or unintentionally?

Compatibility Inventory:

The “SAFE Compatibility Inventory for Applicant(s)/Caregiver(s)” is another Consortium for Children tool which can help gather information to assist the agency in achieving a successful placement match between child(ren)/young adult(s) and applicants or certified families. This tool asks families to consider a variety of child needs, characteristics, or behaviors and asks families about their readiness, willingness, and ability to care for a child who has a particular need, characteristic or behavior. Amongst the child characteristics are several which relate to SOGIE and REC. The form allows families to check:

- ‘Yes’ if they’re ready, willing and able to parent a child who has this particular need, characteristic, or behavior;
• ‘Unsure’ if they will consider parenting a child who has this particular need, characteristic, or behavior, but feel unsure or unprepared;

• ‘No’ if they’re not ready, willing, or able to parent a child who has this particular need, characteristic, or behavior.

The responses provided by applicants help elicit further conversation between the family and the certifier. The information learned during the conversation helps with assessing goodness of fit as a resource family, placement matching, and identification of training, services, resources, or supports which may be helpful to the children or young adults being considered for placement in a family’s care and to the family providing the care.

Chapter 9
Working with the Courts and External Partners

Section 1: The Courts
The Courts

This chapter will guide the caseworker and supervisor in working with the Oregon courts, attorneys, CASAs, the Citizen Review Board, service providers and community partners. The juvenile court system protects children when parental or guardian capacity is diminished. Caseworkers must have a strong, professional and respectful relationship with the courts and other partners to effectively serve children and families.

Overview

Child Welfare frequently interacts with the Oregon courts. Most often, Child Welfare caseworkers appear in juvenile court. But caseworkers also have involvement with criminal cases, domestic relations cases and other civil cases involving children and families. A law enforcement investigation into alleged child abuse related to a child protective services assessment may lead to criminal charges against a parent or caregiver. A CPS caseworker may be called upon to testify in the criminal proceeding. The outcome in the criminal case could affect the juvenile court proceeding. At times, Child Welfare caseworkers are involved in domestic relations proceedings to assist a protective parent in obtaining legal custody of his or her child. Caseworkers may also be asked to testify about Child Welfare’s previous involvement with a family. This section explains the caseworker’s role in the juvenile court process, discusses typical issues involving domestic relations cases, and explains how to respond to attempts to obtain testimony and records in court proceedings.

A. The Juvenile Court

The juvenile court has the authority to provide for the safety of a vulnerable child. The juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction in any case involving a person who is under 18 years of age, and:

I. Who is beyond the control of the person’s parents, guardian, or other person having custody.

II. Whose behavior is such as to endanger the welfare of the person or of others.

III. Whose condition or circumstances are such as to endanger the welfare of the person or of others.

IV. Who is dependent for care and support on a public or private child-caring agency that needs the services of the court in planning for the best interests of the person;

V. Whose parent or any other person or persons having custody of the person have:
   A. Abandoned the person;
   B. Failed to provide the person with the care or education required by law
   C. Subjected the person to cruelty, depravity or unexplained injury; or
   D. Failed to provide the person with the care, guidance and protection necessary for the physical, mental or emotional well-being of the person.

An Indian tribe has exclusive jurisdiction over any child custody proceeding involving an Indian child who resides or is domiciled on the reservation of the tribe, unless federal law vests jurisdiction in the state. In Oregon, the Burns Paiute Tribe and the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation have exclusive jurisdiction. Even where the tribe has exclusive jurisdiction or the child is a ward of the tribal court, the state may take emergency custody of a child temporarily off the reservation to prevent imminent physical damage or harm to the child. The caseworker must immediately contact the tribe to arrange for a return of the child to the tribe. Emergency custody must terminate when removal is no longer necessary to prevent imminent physical damage or harm to the child or when the tribe exercises jurisdiction. If termination of an emergency placement is not possible, the juvenile court must order continued placement of the child within 24 hours of the child’s placement in protective custody.

1. When to Seek Court Intervention

When at the conclusion of the CPS assessment the CPS worker determines a child is unsafe and juvenile court intervention is necessary to assure child safety and that the child and family receive appropriate services, the CPS worker must make arrangements for a juvenile court petition to be filed. If there is concern about the safety of the child between the time the petition is filed and the shelter hearing takes place, the CPS worker, in consultation with the CPS supervisor, considers protective custody. See Chapter 3, section 14 “Protective Custody” for more information regarding when to take protective custody, how to take protective custody and related requirements.

Cases Involving an Indian Child

If the caseworker decides to seek juvenile court involvement, the caseworker initiates the process to determine if the child is an Indian child as defined by the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) and notifies the child’s tribe if ICWA applies or may apply. See Chapter II: Screening and Assessment, Assessment, Section 22.D, Determine and Respond to ICWA Status, for additional requirements for ICWA cases. The determination of the child’s status should be made before the court process is initiated whenever possible so the tribe is involved at the start of the juvenile court’s involvement with the family. ODHS is required to make active efforts to provide remedial services and rehabilitative programs designed to prevent the break-up of the Indian family. For additional information regarding Active Efforts, See Chapter II: Screening and Assessment, Assessment, Section 16.

Procedure

I. The CPS caseworker completes the form CF 1270, “Verification of ICWA Eligibility,” to assist in determining whether the child is or may be an Indian child.

II. If the child is enrolled or eligible for enrollment in a federally recognized tribe or Alaskan village, the CPS caseworker notifies the child’s tribe when the child may be placed in protective custody or when a petition may be filed on behalf of the child.

III. The CPS caseworker consults with the local office ICWA liaison, a supervisor, or the ICWA manager if the CPS caseworker has questions about whether the child is an Indian child or the involvement of a tribe.

IV. Before placing an Indian child in protective custody, the state must be able to prove, by clear and convincing evidence, that continued custody of the Indian child by the parent or Indian custodian is likely to result in serious emotional or physical injury to the Indian child.

Cases Involving a Refugee Child

ORS 418.925 defines a refugee child as a “person under 18 years of age who has entered the United States and is unwilling or unable to return to the person’s country because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, nationality, membership in a particular group or political opinion, or whose parents entered the United States within the preceding 10 years and are or were unwilling or unable to return to their country because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, nationality, membership in a particular group or political opinion.” If the CPS caseworker decides to seek juvenile court involvement, the caseworker must initiate the process to determine the child’s refugee status and notify the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee if the child is a refugee child. See Chapter 2: Screening and Assessment, Assessment, Section 22.E, Determine and Respond to Refugee Status, for additional requirements if the child is a refugee child. This determination should be made before the court process is initiated to provide remedial or preventative services to manage the child’s safety in the home whenever possible.

Procedure

I. If it appears the child may be a refugee child, the CPS caseworker consults with parents and other family members about the cultural heritage of the child as soon as the caseworker believes the child may be a refugee child.

II. If the child appears to be a refugee child, the CPS caseworker must proceed as though the child is a refugee child until the CPS caseworker is able to confirm the child is not a refugee child.

III. If child safety can be maintained, the CPS caseworker must provide remedial or preventative services to alleviate the possible harm to the child.

IV. The CPS caseworker may only place the child in protective custody if removal is necessary to prevent imminent, serious emotional or physical harm to the child and reasonable efforts to alleviate the harm through remedial or preventative services do not alleviate the harm, have failed, or are not practical in an emergency situation.

V. If the child is placed in protective custody, the CPS caseworker follows the placement preferences in ORS 418.937: natural parents, extended family members, members of the same cultural heritage, or persons with knowledge and appreciation of the cultural heritage of the child.

VI. The CPS caseworker notifies the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee of the placement.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consults with the caseworker prior to a decision to place a child in protective custody or after placement if consultation before placement will delay the safety intervention.

II. Consults with the caseworker prior to the worker initiating court action or after initiating court action if consultation before placement will delay the safety intervention.

III. Ensures the caseworker has initiated the process to determine if the child is an Indian child or a refugee child.

IV. Consults with the caseworker who is denied access to a child about the need for a protective custody order from the juvenile court.

2. Initiating a Juvenile Court Case

Once the CPS caseworker has determined, in consultation with a supervisor, that juvenile court intervention is necessary, a CPS caseworker may initiate a juvenile court case in one of three ways:

I. File a petition alleging the child falls within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court for one of the reasons outlined in ORS 419B.100.

II. Complete a declaration in support of a request for protective custody and present the declaration to a judge for one of the reasons outlined in ORS 419B.150(4)(a).

III. Take protective custody of a child without a protective order for one of the reasons outlined in ORS 419B.150(3)(a) and file a Protective Custody Report with the court the day the child was taken into protective custody or no later than the morning of the next business day (ORS.419B.171).

For procedure specific to protective custody, see Chapter 3 Section 14: “Protective Custody”.

Petitions

If the child is not placed into protective custody, the filing of a juvenile court petition starts the process of involving the juvenile court with the family. If the child is placed in protective custody, either with or without an order, the petition should be filed prior to the shelter hearing, which must be held within 24 hours of the child’s placement in protective custody.

If one of the circumstances described in ORS 419B.340(5) exists, such as the parent’s rights to another child have been terminated involuntarily or the parent has been convicted of murder of another child of the parent, and Child Welfare does not wish to provide reasonable efforts to the parent and can identify an appropriate permanency plan for the child, the caseworker should discuss with the Department of Justice whether to include in the petition an allegation that one of the circumstances in ORS 419B.340(5) exists. ORS 419B.340(5) is discussed in more detail in “Disposition Hearing,” Section 1.A.4.f of this chapter.
Special Requirements for filing a petition if the Child is a Refugee Child

If the child meets the definition of a refugee child in ORS 418.925, the caseworker must:

A. File the petition within one working day of the child’s placement in protective custody.

B. Include in the petition a specific and detailed account of the circumstances which led Child Welfare to conclude the child was in imminent danger of serious emotional or physical harm; specific actions Child Welfare is taking or has taken to alleviate the need for removal; an assurance Child Welfare has complied with the placement preferences in ORS 418.937; and an assurance Child Welfare is making or has made diligent efforts to locate and to give notice to all affected refugee family members and to the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee that a petition is pending.

C. Provide notice of the filing of the petition to the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee.

D. Provide notice of the filing of the petition to all affected refugee family members (defined in OAR 413-070-0310 as biological and legal parents, extended family members, and any person within the fifth degree of consanguinity to the child) that the caseworker has been able to locate.

IV. Special Requirements for Foreign Nationals

If the child is a citizen of a foreign country and not a citizen of the United States, the child is a foreign national. The caseworker must provide a copy of the petition on a child that is a foreign national to the consulate for the child’s country.

V. Amendments

If, during further CPS assessment of the parents or legal guardians, the caseworker finds one or more of the facts claimed in the petition cannot be proven or are different than originally believed, the petition may need to be amended to more accurately reflect why the child is unsafe. If the caseworker believes the petition should be amended, the caseworker should consult with his or her supervisor and the district attorney’s office. Additionally, the court may order a petition be amended. If the amendment of the petition substantially changes the petition, the court may postpone the hearing on the petition to allow the parties additional time to prepare. If new facts come to light that were not included in a petition that has already been heard by the court and the facts raise additional barriers to reunification that must be addressed before the child can be safely returned home, the caseworker should consult with his or her supervisor and the assistant attorney general assigned to the branch about the need to file a new petition.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consult with the caseworker to determine whether a child should be placed in protective custody, whether a court order for protective custody should be sought, and whether a juvenile court case should be initiated.

II. Review the protective custody report and the petition.

III. Ensure the caseworker has identified and notified all persons entitled to notice if a child has been placed in protective custody.

IV. Ensure the caseworker has identified fathers (both legal and putative) and has initiated a search for any fathers the caseworker has been unable to locate.
V. Ensure the caseworker has inquired about the child’s Indian heritage and, if the child is an Indian child, the caseworker has notified the child’s tribe and complied with the placement preferences of the ICWA.

VI. Ensure that, if the child is a refugee child, the caseworker has complied with ORS 418.925 to ORS 418.945.

VII. Consult with the caseworker regarding possible amendments to the petition.

3. Parties to Juvenile Court Proceedings
Parties to the juvenile court case have the right to notice; to copies of any documents filed with the court; to request a hearing; to appear with counsel at any juvenile court proceeding; to call witnesses, cross-examine witnesses, and participate in juvenile court hearings; and to appeal.

Parties to juvenile court proceedings include:

I. The child.

II. The parents or legal guardians of the child.

III. A putative father to the child who has demonstrated a direct and significant commitment to the child by assuming, or attempting to assume, responsibilities normally associated with parenthood, unless a court found the man not to be the child’s legal father or the man filed a petition for filiation that has been dismissed.

IV. The state.

V. The juvenile department.

VI. A CASA (court appointed special advocate), if appointed.

VII. ODHS or other child-caring agency if the agency has temporary custody of the child or ward.

VIII. The child’s tribe in cases subject to the Indian Child Welfare Act if the tribe has intervened pursuant to the Indian Child Welfare Act.

IX. A person who is permitted to intervene under ORS 419B.116.

If a child is a refugee child, any person within the fifth degree of consanguinity to the child may petition the juvenile court for standing in actions arising under ORS 419B.150 (protective custody) if the primary parenting family has been determined incompetent, missing, dead, or has had parental rights terminated as a result of judicial proceedings.

Unless a foster parent or grandparent has been granted intervenor status, foster parents and grandparents are not parties to juvenile court proceedings. However, when a child or young adult is committed to the Department’s custody, the caseworker must notify foster parents and grandparents (who is the legal parent of the child or young adult’s legal parent, as defined in ORS 109.119,) of court proceedings regarding the child or young adult. The foster parent and grandparents have the right to be heard at those proceedings.

Procedure

The caseworker:

I. Asks the available parent to identify any persons who may have legal rights to the child.

II. Identifies the child’s fathers and ensures that all fathers with legal rights are notified of proceedings concerning the child (See Section 2 of this chapter, Legal and Other Fathers, for information about legal fathers and other fathers who have rights).

III. Provides information to the child’s parents (including a putative father who has demonstrated a direct and significant commitment to the child) and legal guardians, consistent with local court practice, about the procedure for requesting court-appointed counsel.

Diligently searches for grandparents and when a child or young adult is committed to the Department’s custody, provides notice of juvenile court proceedings to grandparents who are the legal parents of the child. or young adult’s legal parent, as defined in ORS 109.119), unless 1) they have been present at court and have already been notified of the date and time of the hearing by the court or 2) the court has relieved the Department of the responsibility to provide such notice, after making a finding of ‘good cause’.

IV. Provides notice of juvenile court proceedings to the child’s foster parents.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Review the case with the caseworker to ensure all legal parties are identified and included in planning for the child.

II. Ensure the caseworker is providing notice of juvenile court proceedings to foster parents and any grandparent who is the legal parent of the child or young adult’s legal parent, as defined in ORS 109.119, when a child or young adult is committed to the Department’s custody.

4. The Juvenile Court Process

The federal Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997 (ASFA) requires child welfare agencies to consider child safety and a child’s need for permanency as the guiding factors when working with families. In 1999, Oregon passed legislation to implement the requirements of ASFA. This legislation imposed timelines on juvenile court cases with the goal of achieving permanency for children in a timely manner.

The juvenile court process includes the following timelines:

I. Within 24 hours of the child’s placement in protective custody, the court holds a shelter hearing and the caseworker or district attorney files a petition.

II. Within 30 days from the date the petition was filed, each party about whom allegations have been made must admit or deny the allegations.

III. Within 30 days from the date the petition was filed, the caseworker must provide discovery.

IV. Within 60 days of the date the petition was filed, the court holds a hearing on the petition and enters a disposition order.

V. Within 6 months of the child’s placement in substitute care, the Citizen Review Board conducts a review of the child’s case. Subsequent reviews are conducted every six months as long as the child remains in substitute care.
VI. Within 12 months of the date the child was found to be within the jurisdiction of the court or within 14 months of the child’s placement in substitute care, whichever is earlier, the court conducts a permanency hearing.

VII. If the child has been in substitute care for 15 of the most recent 22 months, Child Welfare is required to file a petition to terminate the rights of the child’s parents unless:

A. The child is being cared for by a relative and the placement is intended to be permanent.

B. There is a compelling reason, which is documented in the case plan, for determining that filing a petition would not be in the best interests of the child.

C. ODHS has not provided to the family of the child such services as ODHS deems necessary for the child to safely return home, if ODHS is required to make reasonable efforts to make it possible for the child to safely return home.

The juvenile court process may vary from county to county. The court may, for instance, schedule settlement conferences prior to a hearing on a petition or require admissions or denials on a petition to be in writing. What follows are the statutory requirements for the juvenile court process.

a. Shelter Hearing/Preliminary Hearing

When a child is taken into protective custody, with or without a court order, the CPS worker must schedule a shelter hearing. State law prohibits a child from remaining in shelter care more than 24 hours (excluding weekends and judicial holidays) unless the court enters an order, after a hearing, finding that the child should be removed or continued out-of-the-home. A shelter hearing can also be held before a child is actually placed into protective custody. A shelter hearing gives the parent or child the opportunity to present evidence the child can be returned home without further danger of suffering physical injury or emotional harm, endangering or harming others, or not remaining within the reach of the court process prior to adjudication. At a shelter hearing the judge must also determine: whether Child Welfare made reasonable efforts or, if the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) applies, active efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for the child to be removed and to make it possible for the child to safely return home, whether removal from the home is in the child’s best interests, and whether the child is an Indian child, as defined by ORS 419A.004. In some counties a shelter hearing may be called a preliminary hearing or an original hearing.

Procedure

The CPS caseworker or designee:

I. Follows local practice and files the petition and the Protective Custody Report (CF 464) with the court, providing copies of the documents to all parties (see Chapter 3 Section 14 on the Protective Custody Report).

II. Provides documentation to the court (either included in the Protective Custody Report or as a separate document) describing the reasonable or active efforts made to prevent the need to remove the child from the home and to provide services to make it possible for the child to return home, the diligent efforts Child Welfare has made to place the child with relatives or persons with a caregiver relationship to the child (as defined by ORS 419B.116(1)) and to place the child with his or her siblings, and the reasons why protective custody is in the child’s best interests.

III. Notifies the child’s parents, including any presumed legal fathers and Stanley putative fathers, and the child’s legal guardians, if any, of the shelter hearing by providing information to the parent or legal guardian in person or by telephone, by personally serving a summons on the parent or legal guardian, or by having a summons served on the parent or legal guardian (see the procedure on summonses in this section 1.A.4.b. for additional information about issuing and serving summonses).

IV. Notifies the child’s tribe, if the child is an Indian child, of the shelter hearing and arranges for the tribe to appear by telephone if the tribe cannot attend the hearing.

V. Provides information verbally to the court about Child Welfare’s prior involvement with the family and why the child currently needs the court’s intervention, including details of the safety assessment made by the caseworker and the current safety threats and parental, or legal guardian, protective capacity.

VI. Discloses initial discovery materials to parties to the case or, if represented, their attorneys, and continues to disclose case file materials throughout the court process. Initial discovery materials include the CPS Assessment, other 307 information, case notes and other documents that support the petition allegations.

VII. Provides pamphlet 1536, “What You Need to Know about a Child Protective Services Assessment,” if the shelter hearing is the first contact the CPS worker has with a parent,

At the shelter hearing the court is required to inform the parents and legal guardians of the child about the obligation to pay for compensation and reasonable expenses for counsel for the child, support of the child while the child is in state custody, and other financial obligations that might arise because the child is within the jurisdiction of the court; the assignment of support rights; the right of the parents or guardians to appeal a decision on jurisdiction or disposition; and the time for filing an appeal of a decision of the court. The court should provide the parents and guardians with a standard notice detailing this information.

The court’s shelter hearing order will include the following:

I. A determination of whether the child should be removed from the home or continued in care.

II. A written finding describing why it is in the best interests of the child that the child be removed from the home or continued in care if the court orders removal or continuation in custody.

III. Written findings as to whether ODHS made diligent efforts to place the child with relatives or persons with a caregiver relationship to the child and to place with child with his or her siblings and a brief description of the efforts made if the court orders removal or continuation in custody.

IV. Written findings as to whether ODHS made reasonable or active efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from the home and to make it possible for the child to safely return home and a brief description of the efforts made.

V. A determination of whether the child is an Indian child.

In addition, the court may:

I. Grant temporary custody of the child to ODHS Child Welfare.

II. Appoint attorneys for the child and the parents or legal guardians of the child.

III. Appoint a court appointed special advocate (CASA) for the child.

IV. Receive admissions or denials to the allegations in the petition from the parents or legal guardians.
V. Schedule a jurisdiction hearing within 60 days.

If the court knows or has reason to know that the child is an Indian child, the court shall order ODHS to notify the child’s tribe of the proceedings and of the tribe’s right to intervene. The caseworker should ask the court to include in the order permission for ODHS to send a copy of the petition with the notice, as required by the Indian Child Welfare Act and the regulations interpreting the Act. The requirements for this notice are described in this section, part 1.A.4.e, “Jurisdiction Hearing.” The case is to be treated as a case subject to the ICWA until the court determines that the case is not an ICWA case.

b. Issuance of a Summons

A summons notifies a person that a juvenile court proceeding has been initiated and directs the person to appear before the court in connection with the proceeding. A summons must provide specific information to the person, as specified in ORS 419B.815, including, but not limited to the following:

I. A petition has been filed to establish jurisdiction of the named child under ORS 419B.100.

II. If the person fails to appear as required in the summons, the court may establish jurisdiction without further notice to the person.

III. The person has the right to be represented by an attorney.

IV. The parent or other person legally obligated to support the child may be required to pay a portion of the support of the child.

V. If the petition alleges that the child has been physically or sexually abused, the court may enter an order restraining the alleged perpetrator from having contact with the child.

The summons may be issued by the petitioner, the petitioner’s attorney, the juvenile department, the district attorney, the assistant attorney general, or ODHS.

Procedure

Responsibility for issuing the summons depends on local practice. If ODHS issues the summons, the caseworker:

I. Prepares a summons in substantially the form set forth in ORS 419B.818 and containing the information required by ORS 419B.815. The summons must contain the name and address of the person being served and must direct the person to do one of the following, depending on local practice:

   A. Appear personally before the court at the time and place specified in the summons for a hearing on the petition.
   B. Appear personally before the court at the time and place specified in the summons to admit or deny the allegations of the petition.
   C. File a written answer to the petition within 30 days from the date on which the person is served with the summons.

Note: If the court does not direct the type of response, the summons must require the person to file a written answer.
I. Issues a summons to the following people:
   A. The child if the child is 12 years of age or older.
   B. The parents of the child.
   C. The legal guardian of the child.
   D. The person that has physical custody of the child if the child is not in the physical custody of a parent.
   E. A putative father who has demonstrated a direct and significant commitment to the child by assuming, or attempting to assume, responsibilities normally associated with parenthood unless a court has found that the putative father is not the child’s legal father or a petition for filiation filed by the putative father has been dismissed and no appeal from the judgment or order of dismissal is pending.
   F. A putative father if notice of the initiation of filiation or paternity proceedings was on file with the Center for Health Statistics prior to the initiation of the juvenile court proceedings unless a court has found the putative father is not the child’s legal father or a petition for filiation filed by the putative father has been dismissed and no appeal from the judgment or order of dismissal is pending;

II. Signs and dates the summons and prepares a copy of the summons to be served on the person. The copy must contain a statement signed by the caseworker certifying the copy is an exact and complete copy of the original.

III. Attaches a copy of the petition to the summons. The copy of the petition must contain a statement signed by the caseworker certifying the copy is an exact and complete copy of the original.

IV. Follows local practice for serving a true copy of the summons and petition on the person named in the summons. The person may be served by the following methods:
   A. Personal service by handing true copies of the summons and petition to the person to be served.
   B. Substituted service by leaving true copies of the summons and petition with a person 14 years of age or older who resides at the same dwelling house or usual place of abode as the person to be served and by mailing true copies of the summons and petition to the person to be served with a notice explaining the date of service, time of service, place of service, and the person with whom the documents were left.
   C. Office service by leaving true copies of the summons and petition with a person apparently in charge at the office maintained for conducting business by the person to be served and by mailing true copies of the summons and petition to the person to be served with a notice explaining the date of service, time of service, place of service, and the person with whom the documents were left.
   D. Service by mail by mailing true copies of the summons and petition to the person to be served by first class mail and by certified or registered mail, return receipt requested, or by express mail.

V. Consults with a supervisor and contacts the district attorney’s office for assistance if a person who must be served with a summons cannot be served with one of the above methods. If the person cannot be served, a summons may be served by publication. The caseworker should attempt to locate an absent parent by following the procedure outlined in Chapter II: Screening and Assessment, Assessment, Section 17.

VI. Follows local practice for filing the original summons and the proof of service with the court. Proof of service or of mailing may be made by:

A. The sheriff or deputy sheriff certificate of service indicating the time, place and manner of service and, if the summons was not personally served, when, where and with whom copies of the summons and petition were left.

B. The certificate of the server, indicating the time, place and manner of service; that the server is a competent person of at least 18 years of age and a resident of this state or of the state where the summons and petition were served; and either stating the server reasonably believes the person served is the identical one named in the summons if the summons was personally served, or stating when, where, and with whom copies of the summons and petition were left if the person was served by substituted service or office service.

C. A written acceptance of service by the person to be served.

D. The certificate of the person completing the mailing or an attorney for any party detailing the circumstances of the mailing and attaching a copy of the return receipt. Service by mail is complete on the date the person to be served signs a receipt for the mail.

TIP: Consider using the “impending danger safety threats” language to articulate the family’s behaviors, conditions and circumstances that cause the child to be unsafe.

c. Disclosure/Discovery

Disclosure: Information or documents provided to other persons:

I. If required or permitted by state law, federal law, federal regulations or state administrative rules (CASA, CRB, LAE, other child welfare agencies, hospitals, doctors, court reports).

II. Pursuant to a court order.

III. As required by Subpoena Duces Tecum.

IV. In response to a public records request.

V. As part of Discovery; see additional information below.

VI. To facilitate the provision of services to children, parents, or families.

VII. In other circumstances where ODHS is required or authorized (release of information) to release information or documents.

Discovery: Ongoing statutory obligation to disclose specific types of information and documents to all parties in a juvenile court proceeding within mandated time lines.

Once a petition has been filed on a child, the parties to the case are entitled to information from the case file. ORS 419B.881 outlines the specific information that must be provided to all parties:

I. The names and address of all persons the party intends to call as witnesses at any stage of the hearing, together with relevant written or recorded statements or memoranda of any oral statements of such persons.

II. Any written or recorded statements or memoranda of any oral statements made either by the parent or by the child to any other party or agent for any other party. In addition to what we routinely provide in this category, any informal complaints, any ODHS 0170 Client Complaint or Report of Discrimination Form submitted by a parent or child, and any request for a review of a CPS assessment founded disposition as well as related notification letters to the requestor should be included in discovery.

III. Any reports or statements of experts who will be called as witnesses, including the results of any physical or mental examinations and of comparisons or experiments that the party intends to offer in evidence at the hearing.

IV. Any books, papers, documents, or photographs that the party intends to offer in evidence at the hearing, or that were obtained from or belong to any other party.

Disclosure of case file materials is an ongoing responsibility of Child Welfare. In addition to the material that Child Welfare is required to provide to the parties under ORS 419B.881, in certain circumstances Oregon law requires Child Welfare to disclose additional information. For instance, ORS 409.225 requires Child Welfare to disclose records that contain information about an individual child, family, or other recipient of services to the juvenile court in proceedings regarding the child, and ORS 419B.035 requires Child Welfare to disclose records compiled under the child abuse reporting law to attorneys of record for the child or the child’s parent or guardian in any juvenile court proceeding. In cases of domestic violence, the caseworker should be cautious about providing information that may put either the non-abusing parent or the child in an unsafe situation. If good cause is shown, the court may order that an otherwise required disclosure be denied, restricted, or deferred. Thus, in the case of domestic violence, the court may restrict the disclosure of the nonabusing parent’s address. Consult with your supervisor for additional information regarding this procedure. Should there be remaining questions regarding discovery, your supervisor may approve a consultation with the AAG assigned to your case.

Disclosure applies to most all case management activities, including collateral information included with letters and referrals to schools, providers, service coordination, etc.

Drug and alcohol information may not be disclosed without either a release of information from the parent whose records are being disclosed or a court order that complies with federal regulations at 42 CFR part 2. The caseworker should attempt to get a signed release authorizing ODHS to provide drug and alcohol records to the Citizen Review Board, the juvenile court, and all parties to the juvenile court case.

In addition to drug and alcohol information, there may be other information in the file which should not be disclosed to other parties; protected mental health and medical records, communications between Child Welfare and DOJ, and information that may pose a safety threat to victims of domestic violence. Documents or case notes consisting of attorney-client privileged information should be clearly marked as ATTORNEY CLIENT PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS and should not be disclosed. All of these types of information should be removed from the Child Welfare file before a party is given access to the case file.

Procedure

A standardized procedure for identification, preparation and distribution of Disclosure/Discovery documents is in the process of being developed and will be provided as a separate document in early January 2010. This will include guidelines on redacting confidential information from documents.

d. Hearing to Admit or Deny Allegations in the Petition

No later than 30 days after a petition alleging jurisdiction is filed, each party about whom allegations have been made must admit or deny the allegations. Admissions and denials may either be made orally in court or in writing. Some courts may schedule a hearing for the purpose of receiving admissions and denials to the allegations in the petition. If a person admits each of the allegations in the petition, the court may enter an order directing the disposition of the case or may schedule a disposition hearing. If allegations in the petition are denied, the court may issue an order directing the person to appear at the jurisdiction hearing. Allegations that are not admitted are deemed denied.

e. Jurisdiction Hearing

The jurisdiction hearing is the hearing at which the parties present evidence to prove or disprove the facts alleged in the juvenile dependency petition. State law requires this hearing occur within 60 days of the date the petition is filed, unless the court has entered an order finding good cause to continue the hearing beyond the 60-day time limit. Each allegation in the petition not admitted must be proved by a preponderance of competent evidence. The court may dismiss one or more allegations in the petition after the proponent of the petition (usually the State) has presented its evidence if the court finds the petitioner has failed to prove the allegations or the allegations do not constitute a legal basis for jurisdiction. The court may not dismiss the petition prior to the jurisdiction hearing unless every party has been given the opportunity to investigate and present a case supporting the petition or has waived the opportunity to investigate and the right to present a case. If the court finds it has jurisdiction under ORS 419B.100, the court has jurisdiction over a party who has been properly served with a summons, a child under 12 years of age who is the subject of the petition, and any other party in ORS 419B.875(1).

I. Prior to the jurisdiction hearing, the caseworker should discuss the caseworker’s testimony with the district attorney’s office. In cases involving an Indian child, the caseworker should meet with the district attorney’s office and the child’s tribe to discuss the need to have an expert witness testify regarding the petition allegations, the child’s safety, and the risk the parents present to the child. The court must find, by clear and convincing evidence, including the testimony of an expert witness, that the continued custody of the Indian child by the parent or Indian custodian is likely to result in serious emotional or physical injury to the Indian child. A qualified expert witness must be someone who possesses special knowledge of social and cultural aspects of Indian life.

II. In cases involving an Indian child, the caseworker must notify the child’s tribe, in writing, of the date, place, and time of the hearing at least 10 days prior to the hearing date.

III. Prior to the hearing, the caseworker should review the CPS assessment, case notes and other documentation to prepare to testify at the hearing.
The Indian Child Welfare Act requires the party seeking the foster placement of an Indian child in any involuntary proceeding in state court, where the court knows or has reason to know that an Indian child is involved, to notify the parent or Indian custodian and the Indian child’s tribe of the pending proceeding and of the tribe’s right to intervene in the proceeding. 28 USC § 1912(a). See Chapter I; Section 8: Indian Child Welfare and Working with Native Families, for notification requirements in compliance with the Indian Child Welfare Act.

f. Disposition Hearing

After the evidentiary hearing, the court will enter an order directing the disposition of the case. If the court determines the petition allegations were not proven by a preponderance of the evidence, the court will dismiss the petition. If the court finds one or more of the petition allegations were proven, the court may conduct a disposition hearing immediately following the jurisdiction hearing or may set a separate hearing. The disposition hearing must occur within 28 days of the court assuming jurisdiction unless the court finds good cause to hold the hearing later.

Procedure

At this hearing the caseworker:

I. Presents a court report to the court and all parties providing information about the family and the case plan. The contents and format of the court report are discussed in depth in “Court Reports,” Section 1.A.5. of this chapter.

II. Provides information to the court showing Child Welfare has made reasonable efforts or, if the child is an Indian child, active efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from the home and to make it possible for the child to safely return home. A description of the efforts made by Child Welfare must be included in the court report. A more thorough description of reasonable and active efforts is found in Section 3.B of this chapter.

III. Provides information to the court, in a case involving an Indian Child, that Child Welfare has made active efforts to provide remedial services and rehabilitative programs designed to prevent the breakup of the Indian family and that those services were unsuccessful.

IV. Provides information to the court that the placement for an Indian child is consistent with the placement preferences of the ICWA, which include, in order of preference:
   A. A member of the Indian child’s extended family.
   B. A foster home licensed, approved, or specified by the Indian child’s tribe.
   C. An Indian foster home licensed or approved by an authorized non-Indian licensing authority.
   D. An institution for children approved by an Indian tribe or operated by an Indian organization, which has a program suitable to meet the Indian child’s needs.

V. Provides information to the court showing Child Welfare has made diligent efforts to place the child with relatives or persons who have a caregiver relationship with the child (as defined by ORS 419B.116) and diligent efforts to place the child with his or her siblings.

VI. Provides information to the court that the placement for a refugee child is consistent with the child’s culture and tradition and is with one of the following, in order of preference, unless such a placement is inappropriate or inconsistent with the child's best interests:

   A. Natural parent.
   B. Extended family members.
   C. Members of the same cultural heritage.
   D. Persons with knowledge and appreciation of the child’s cultural heritage.

If the court has found one or more of the petition allegations proven by a preponderance of the evidence, the court must make the child a ward of the court. The court’s order may direct the child be placed under protective supervision or the child be placed in the legal custody of ODHS for care, placement, and supervision.

I. Protective supervision: If the court finds it is in the best interest and welfare of the child to be under protective supervision, the court may direct the child remain in the legal custody of the child’s parents or other person with whom the child is living, be placed in the legal custody of a relative or a person maintaining a foster home that is approved by the court, or in a child care center or youth care center authorized to accept the child. The court may also grant guardianship of the child to the suitable person, entity or agency to which the court granted legal custody. The court may specify particular requirements, including but not limited to restrictions on visitation by the child’s parents; restrictions on the child’s associates, occupation and activities; restrictions and requirements on the person having legal custody; and requirements for visitation by and consultation with a juvenile counselor or other suitable counselor.

II. Commitment to the custody of ODHS: If the court finds it is in the best interest and welfare of the child to be placed in the legal custody of ODHS, the court may, but is not required to, grant guardianship of the child to ODHS. The court may also specify the particular type of care, supervision, or services to be provided by ODHS to the child and to the parents or guardian of the child. The court may make an order regarding visitation by the child’s parents or siblings.

A court order removing a child from the home or continuing the child in care must include written findings as to whether:

I. Removal of the child from the child’s home or continuation of care is in the best interest and for the welfare of the child.

II. Reasonable efforts, considering the circumstances of the child or parent, have been made to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from the home or to make it possible for the child to safely return home.

III. Diligent efforts have been made to place the child with relatives or persons with a caregiver relationship to the child and to place the child with his or her siblings.

The court must give a preference to placement of the child with relatives or persons with a caregiver relationship with the child. If the child is an Indian child, the placement preferences of the ICWA must be followed. If the child is a refugee child, the placement preferences in ORS 418.937 must be followed.
If the court places the child in the legal custody of ODHS, the court’s order must include the following:

I. A determination whether ODHS has made reasonable efforts or, if the Indian Child Welfare Act applies, active efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from the home.

II. A determination of whether ODHS has made reasonable or active efforts to make it possible for the child to safely return home if the child was removed prior to entry of the disposition order.

III. A description of the preventative and reunification efforts made by ODHS and why further efforts could or could not have prevented or shortened the separation of the family.

In addition, the court’s order may include the following:

I. Recommendations regarding the primary and concurrent permanency plans for the child.

II. An order requiring the parent to participate in specific treatment or training if the court finds in an evidentiary hearing that treatment or training is needed by the parent to correct the circumstances that resulted in wardship or to prepare the parent to resume the care of the child and participation by the parent in treatment or training is in the child’s best interests.

III. An order setting the permanency hearing for the child, which must be held either 12 months from the date the child was found within the jurisdiction of the court or 14 months from the date the child was placed in substitute care, whichever is earlier.

Note: In the case of substituted service or office service, proof of service may include both the certificate of the server and a certificate from the person who mailed the statement of service and true copies of the summons and petition to the person to be served. Service by substituted service or office service is not complete until the statement explaining when, where, and with whom the documents were left and true copies of the summons and petition are mailed to the person to be served. Proof of service by substituted service or office service should include a copy of the statement that was mailed to the person to be served.

Finally, if the court finds that certain circumstances exist, the court may make a finding that ODHS is not required to make reasonable efforts to make it possible for the child to safely return home.

Those circumstances include:

I. Aggravated circumstances, which may include but are not limited to:

   A. The parent has caused the death of any child by abuse or neglect.
   B. The parent has attempted, solicited, or conspired to cause the death of any child.
   C. The parent has caused serious physical injury to any child by abuse or neglect.
   D. The parent has subjected any child to intentional starvation or torture.
   E. The parent has abandoned the child as described in ORS 419B.100(1)(e).
   F. The parent has unlawfully caused the death of the other parent of the child.

II. The parent has been convicted in any jurisdiction of one of the following crimes:

   A. Murder of another child of the parent.
B. Manslaughter in any degree of another child of the parent.

C. Aiding, abetting, attempting, conspiring, or soliciting to commit murder of another child of the parent or manslaughter of another child of the parent.

D. Felony assault that results in serious physical injury to the child or another child of the parent.

III. The parent’s rights to another child have been terminated involuntarily.

If the court makes a finding that ODHS is not required to make reasonable efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from the home or to make it possible for the child to safely return home and ODHS decides it will not make such efforts, the court must hold a permanency hearing no later than 30 days after the finding.

g. Review Hearing

The juvenile court has the authority to review the child’s situation at any time. Each party has a right to request a hearing. In addition, the court may hold a hearing after receiving a report filed under ORS 419B.440 to review the child’s condition and circumstances and to determine if the court should continue jurisdiction and wardship or order modifications in the care, placement and supervision of the child. The reports that are required by ORS 419B.440 are discussed in more detail in “Court Reports,” Section 1.A.5. of this chapter. The court must hold a hearing in the following situations:

I. When parental rights have been terminated and Child Welfare has not physically placed the child for adoption or initiated adoption proceedings within six months of the termination.

II. Not later than six months after the court received a report from Child Welfare because it placed the child with the child’s parent or a person who was appointed the child’s legal guardian prior to the child’s placement in the legal custody of ODHS.

III. Within 30 days of the court receiving a report from Child Welfare because, for six consecutive months, the child has been in the physical custody of the child’s parent or a person who was appointed the child’s legal guardian prior to the child’s placement in the legal custody of ODHS.

IV. If requested by the child, the child’s attorney, the parents, or Child Welfare within 30 days of receiving from the court a report filed pursuant to ORS 419B.440.

Procedure

I. If the court will hold a review hearing and the caseworker has not prepared a report under ORS 419B.440, the caseworker should prepare a court report providing updated information to the court and the parties. The court report should follow the format in “Court Reports,” Section 1.A.5 of this chapter. The caseworker should follow local practice requirements for submission of court reports.

II. If the caseworker has already prepared a court report as required by ORS 419B.440, the caseworker need not prepare an additional court report unless the caseworker has updated information to provide to the court and the parties.

III. No later than 3 days prior the hearing, the caseworker must disclose to all parties any information that must be disclosed under ORS 419B.881 (see “Disclosure/Discovery,” Section 1.A.4.c of this chapter for information on required disclosures).
If the court was required to conduct a review hearing as explained above or the court exercised its discretion to hold a review hearing after receiving a report required under ORS 419B.440 and the court continues the child in substitute care, the court’s findings must state:

I. Why continued care is necessary and the expected timetable for return or other permanent placement.

II. Whether Child Welfare has made diligent efforts to place the child with relatives or with persons having a caregiver relationship with the child (as defined by ORS 419B.116) and to place the child with his or her siblings.

III. The number of placements made, schools attended, face-to-face contacts with the assigned caseworker, and visits with parents or siblings since the child has been in the guardianship or custody of ODHS, and whether the frequency of each of these is in the best interests of the child.

IV. If the child is 14 or older, whether the child is progressing adequately toward graduation from high school and, if not, the efforts that have been made by Child Welfare to assist the child to graduate.

In a review hearing, the court should consider the efforts made to develop the concurrent case plan, including but not limited to identification of appropriate permanent placement options for the child both inside and outside of Oregon and, if adoption is the concurrent case plan, identification and selection of a suitable adoptive placement for the child. The court may order ODHS to consider additional information in developing the case plan or concurrent case plan.

If the child is in the legal custody of ODHS but has been placed in the physical custody of the child’s parent or a person who was appointed the child’s legal guardian prior to the child’s placement in the legal custody of ODHS, and the decision after the review hearing is to continue the child in the legal custody of ODHS and the physical custody of the parent or guardian, the court’s findings must state:

I. Why it is necessary and in the best interests of the child to continue the child in the legal custody of ODHS.

II. The expected timetable for dismissal of ODHS’ legal custody and for termination of wardship.

h. Permanency Hearing

The court must conduct a permanency hearing:

I. If a child is in substitute care, no later than 12 months after a child is found to be within the court’s jurisdiction or 14 months after the child was placed in substitute care, whichever is earlier.

II. No later than 30 days after making a finding that ODHS is not required to make reasonable efforts to make it possible for the child to safely return home, if ODHS determines it will not make reasonable efforts to reunify the family.

III. No later than 3 months after the date a child is removed from court-sanctioned permanent foster care.

IV. No later than 30 days after receiving a report from Child Welfare if Child Welfare has not physically placed the child for adoption or initiated adoption proceedings within six months of the date the child’s parents surrendered the child for adoption or an order terminating parental rights was entered.

V. No later than 90 days after vacating a guardianship order under ORS 419B.368.

VI. As soon as possible after receiving a request to conduct a permanency hearing from Child Welfare, the child’s parents if parental rights have not been terminated, an attorney for the child, a court appointed special... advocate (CASA), a citizen review board, or a tribal court, unless good cause otherwise is shown.

VII. Upon the court’s own motion.

If a permanency hearing is conducted because a child has not been physically placed for adoption or because adoption proceedings have not been initiated within the required timeframe, subsequent permanency hearings must be held every six months until the child is physically placed for adoption or adoption proceedings have been initiated. In other cases, permanency hearings must be held every 12 months for as long as the child remains in substitute care.

Procedure

To prepare for the permanency hearing, the caseworker:

I. Gathers information regarding the parents and the child from service providers.

II. Staffs the family situation with the supervisor, other appropriate Child Welfare staff, and the assistant attorney general assigned to the local office to determine the appropriate case plan for the child.

III. Prepares a court report using the format described in “Court Reports,” Section 1.A.5. of this chapter.

IV. Includes in the court report a list of the efforts made by Child Welfare to make it possible for the child to safely return home or, if the permanent plan is something other than return to parent, the reasonable efforts made to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanent plan and to complete the steps necessary to finalize the permanent placement.

V. Includes in the court report the comprehensive plan for the child’s transition to independent living if the child is either 16 or older or the child is at least 14 and there is a comprehensive plan for the child’s transition to independent living.

VI. Includes in the court report the efforts made to develop the concurrent permanent plan, including but not limited to, identification of appropriate permanent placement options both inside and outside of Oregon.

VII. Includes in the court report Child Welfare’s recommendation of the plan that should be adopted at the permanency hearing.

VIII. Provides the court report to the court and all parties following local practice.

IX. Discloses to all parties, at least 3 days prior to the hearing, any information that must be disclosed under ORS 419B.881 and has not previously been disclosed (see “Disclosure/Discovery,” Section 1.A.4.c of this chapter).

The court shall enter an order within 20 days of the permanency hearing, which must include the following:

I. If the case plan at the time of the hearing was to reunify the family, the court’s determination as to whether ODHS has made reasonable efforts or, if the ICWA applies, active efforts to make it possible for the child to safely return home and a brief description of the efforts made.

II. If the case plan at the time of the hearing was to reunify the family, the court’s determination as to whether the parent has made sufficient progress to make it possible for the child to safely return home.

III. If the case plan at the time of the hearing was something other than to reunify the family, the court’s determination as to whether ODHS has made reasonable efforts to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanent plan and to complete the steps necessary to finalize the permanent plan and a brief description of the efforts made.

IV. If the case plan at the time of the hearing was something other than to reunify the family, the court’s determination as to whether ODHS has considered permanent placement options for the child, including options both inside and outside of Oregon.

V. The permanency plan for the child, including whether and, if applicable, when the child will be returned to the parent, the child will be placed for adoption and a petition for termination of parental rights will be filed, the child will be referred for establishment of a legal guardianship, or the child will be placed in another planned permanent living arrangement.

VI. If the permanent plan for the child is return home because further efforts will make it possible for the child to safely return home within a reasonable time, the court’s determination of the services in which the parents are required to participate, the progress the parent’s are required to make, and the period of time within which the specified progress must be made.

VII. If the permanent plan for the child is adoption, the court’s determination as to whether there exists an exception to the mandate in ORS 419B.498 that ODHS file a petition to terminate parental rights.

VIII. If the permanent plan for the child is establishment of a legal guardianship or placement with a fit and willing relative, the court’s determination as to why neither placement with the parents nor adoption is appropriate.

IX. If the permanent plan is a planned permanent living arrangement, the court’s determination of a compelling reason, that must be documented by ODHS, why it would not be in the best interests of the child to be returned home, placed for adoption, placed with a legal guardian, or placed with a fit and willing relative.

X. If the court decides to continue the child in substitute care, the court’s findings as to why continued care is necessary as opposed to returning the child home or taking prompt action to secure another permanent placement, the expected timetable for return or other permanent placement, and whether ODHS has made diligent efforts to place the child with relatives or persons with a caregiver relationship with the child (as defined by ORS 419B.116) and to place the child with his or her siblings.

XI. The number of placements made, schools attended, face-to-face contacts with the assigned caseworker and the visits with parents or siblings since the child has been in the legal custody of ODHS and whether the frequency of each of these is in the best interests of the child.

XII. If the child is 14 years of age or older, the court’s determination as to whether the child is progressing adequately toward graduation from high school and, if not, the efforts that have been made by ODHS to assist the child to graduate.

XIII. If the child is 16 years of age or older, or if the child is at least 14 and there is a comprehensive plan for the child’s transition to independent living, the court’s determination as to whether the comprehensive plan for the child’s transition to independent living is adequate to ensure the child’s successful transition to independent living, whether ODHS has offered appropriate services pursuant to the plan, and whether ODHS has involved the child in the development of the plan.

XIV. If the child is an Indian child, the tribal affiliation of the child.
XV. If the child has been placed in an interstate placement, the court’s determination of whether the interstate placement continues to be appropriate and in the best interest of the child.

If the court order establishes a timetable for return home or for placement in another planned permanent living arrangement because the current placement of the child is not expected to be permanent and Child Welfare does not meet the timetable set forth in the order, the caseworker must notify the court and all parties that the timetable was not met.

At the hearing the court may:

I. Determine whether ODHS has made reasonable efforts or, if the Indian Child Welfare Act applies, active efforts to make it possible for the child to safely return home if the case plan changed during the period since the last court hearing or review by the Citizen Review Board and a plan to reunify the family was in effect for any part of that period.

II. Determine whether ODHS has made reasonable efforts to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the case plan and to complete the steps necessary to finalize the permanent placement if the case plan changed during the period since the last court hearing or review by the Citizen Review Board and a plan other than to reunify the family was in effect for any part of that period.

III. Determine the adequacy of and compliance with the case plan and the case progress report.

IV. Review the efforts made by ODHS to develop the concurrent permanent plan.

V. Order ODHS to develop or expand the case plan or concurrent permanent plan and provide a case progress report to the court and the other parties within 10 days after the permanency hearing.

VI. Order ODHS to modify the care, placement and supervision of the child.

VII. Order the Citizen Review Board to review the status of the child prior to the next court hearing.

VIII. Set another court hearing at a later date.

i. Hearings to Implement the Permanent Plan (Guardianship/ Termination)

Once the case plan changes from a plan to reunify the family to adoption, establishment of a legal guardianship, placement with a relative, or a planned permanent living arrangement, the court may conduct one or more hearings to implement the permanent plan. The caseworker should consult with his or her supervisor and, if appropriate, the assistant attorney general assigned to the local branch or the Multnomah County deputy district attorney handling the termination case, for information about how to prepare for a hearing to implement the permanent plan for the child.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consult with the caseworker to ensure that each child’s case follows the timelines required by Oregon law and the Adoption & Safe Families Act.

II. Ensure that diligent efforts have been made to place the child with relatives or persons having a caregiver relationship with the child and that diligent efforts have been made to place the child with his or her sibling.

III. Ensure that the caseworker has complied with the Indian Child Welfare Act requirements.
IV. Ensure that the caseworker has complied with ORS 418.925 to ORS 418.945 (Refugee Child Welfare Act).

V. Ensure that the caseworker is knowledgeable about the juvenile court process and is in compliance with court procedures.

VI. Ensure that a summons and petition are served on all persons that are required to be served.

VII. Consult with the caseworker if a person cannot be served with a summons.

VIII. Consult with the caseworker regarding the disclosure of case file materials to the parties and ensure that relevant information that may be disclosed is provided to the court and the parties.

IX. Staff the case with the caseworker to determine the permanent plan for the child and accompany the caseworker to internal staffings or staffings with the assistant attorney general.

X. Give approval for AAG consultation in legal matters related to contested hearings.

XI. Accompany the caseworker to complicated court proceedings when requested and accompany or arrange for someone else to accompany a new caseworker to his or her first court hearing to provide training and support.

I. CF 464: Protective Custody Report
https://apps.state.or.us/Forms/Served/CE0464.doc

5. Court Reports

A court report is a written report prepared by a caseworker that provides the judge and the parties with information about the case, including: a summary of the situation that clearly articulates the identified safety threats, present or impending; the analysis of those threats; actions taken to manage and control the threats; discussion of caregiver capacity to protect or not, and how all of this information informs the safety decisions and intervention recommendations of Child Welfare. If the child is out of the home, the report clearly articulates the conditions for return, that is, what exactly has to happen in order for the family to be reunited. These conditions must be directly related to eliminating or decreasing safety threats and increasing the parent’s or caregiver’s protective capacities. They are behaviorally stated, not task oriented (i.e., not parent will go to counseling). If the protective capacity assessment has not been completed at the time of the first report, the first report will contain an initial assessment, which can be completed and further explained in later court reports.

The length and format of the court report depend on the purpose of the report and the preferences of the court. If the caseworker is preparing a court report for a shelter hearing, the caseworker prepares the Protective Custody Report. The caseworker prepares a 333 Case plan for a disposition hearing and a permanency hearing.

For most hearings, the court report is to include some or all of the following information:

I. Date of the hearing, name of the caseworker, juvenile court case number, and Child Welfare case number.

II. The child’s full legal name and date of birth.

III. The parents’ full legal names, addresses, and dates of birth.
IV. The full legal name, address, and date of birth of the child’s legal guardian, if any.

V. The legal status of the child’s father or fathers.

VI. Whether jurisdiction has been established over the child.

VII. The child’s residence, except when the child is in foster care, the caseworker does not provide the exact address and instead indicates that the child is in a ODHS Child Welfare certified foster home.

VIII. The names of the attorneys for the parties.

IX. If applicable, whether the child is an Indian child or a Refugee child.

X. A history of Child Welfare contacts with the family, which includes the most recent referral to Child Welfare, the protective action taken, the identified safety threats, the safety analysis, and the CPS assessment disposition.

XI. Information about each parent or legal guardian, including: family social history, enhanced parental protective capacities (cognitive, emotional, and behavioral), diminished parental protective capacities (cognitive, emotional, and behavioral), relationship with the child, and other parental factors that bear on the parents’ ability to provide for the safety, permanency, and well-being of the child.

XII. A list of visits the child has had with the child’s parents and siblings since the child has been in the legal custody of Child Welfare, including the place and date of each visit.

XIII. Information about the child, including: family history; school history, including, if the child is 14 or older, the number of high school credits the child has earned; placement history, including a list of all placements made since the child has been in the legal custody of Child Welfare and the length of time the child spent in each placement; vulnerability; strengths; problems; talents; relationships with others; disabilities; physical health; and mental health.

XIV. The type of care, treatment and supervision that Child Welfare is providing to the child and an analysis of the effectiveness of the care being provided.

XV. A description of the ongoing safety plan currently in place and whether or not the child is able to return to the parent’s home at this time.

XVI. A list of dates of face-to-face contacts the caseworker has had with the child since the child has been in the legal custody of Child Welfare and the place of each contact or, if the child is placed outside the state, whether the child has been visited no less frequently than once every six months by a state or private agency.

XVII. The diligent efforts being made by Child Welfare to identify and locate relatives and to place the child with a relative or a person with a caregiver relationship to the child.

XVIII. The diligent efforts being made by Child Welfare to place the child with his or her siblings.

XIX. A description of the parents’ involvement with planning as well as that for other relatives, community partners and service providers.

XX. A description of the action agreement developed with the parent, the services the parent was referred to, and parental involvement with services.

XXI. A description of the conditions for return of the child, the expected outcomes and the actions that will be taken to achieve the outcomes.

XXII. An outline or summary of the reasonable, or if the Indian Child Welfare Act applies, active efforts made by Child Welfare to return the child to the parent, or to complete the steps necessary to finalize the permanency plan.

XXIII. A description of the parent’s progress on achieving the outcomes set out in the conditions for return.

XXIV. A description of the alternate or concurrent permanency plan and efforts made with regard to the plan, such as identification of a permanent placement for the child.

XXV. Recommendations for court orders, including orders regarding:
   A. Visitation between the parent and the child.
   B. Expected outcomes for the parent related to eliminating or decreasing the identified safety threats, as outlined in the action agreement and which are rationally related to the basis for juvenile court jurisdiction.
   C. Services for the child, as outlined in the safety plan.
   D. Safe and stable housing.
   E. Contact with unsafe people.
   F. Providing relative information to Child Welfare for possible placement if the parent has been unwilling to do so.
   G. Conditions for return home.
   H. Reasonable or active efforts.
   I. Changing the case plan for the child.
   J. Relieving the Citizen Review Board.
   K. Terminating Child Welfare’s legal custody and, if applicable, guardianship of the child and terminating wardship.

Where appropriate to do so, if consistent with local practice, the caseworker should attach documentation to the court report (i.e., a copy of the action agreement or a psychological evaluation).

Most courts prefer that subsequent court reports not repeat the same information in prior court reports, except information that is pertinent to the current situation of the child and the parent. Each district has developed a court report format in conjunction with that district’s juvenile court, so the caseworker should follow local practice on the structure and content of the report.

Required Court Reports (No Hearing Identified)

Oregon law requires Child Welfare to file reports with the court or the Citizen Review Board even though no hearing is scheduled in the case.

I. A report to the court is required when a child is moved from one substitute care placement to another, or a child is placed in the parent’s home. The caseworker will:
A. Inform the court of the child’s move prior to the move or as soon as practicable after the child is moved.

B. Use the 333 form as the court report when possible. A report is not required if the court has received a report or treatment plan indicating the actual physical placement of the child.

Depending on local practice, notification may be done at a hearing, through a letter, or with the assistance of the assistant attorney general assigned to the local branch, with supervisor approval. The caseworker should see his or her supervisor for direction.

I. Prepare a court report using the 333 form. The report must include the information required by ORS 419B.443(1) but need not contain information in prior reports. If the child’s case is being regularly reviewed by the Citizen Review Board, the report after the initial report shall be filed with the Citizen Review Board rather than the court.

II. A report to the court is required when a child has been surrendered for adoption or the rights of the child’s parents have been terminated and Child Welfare has not physically placed the child for adoption or initiated adoption proceedings within six months. The caseworker will:
   A. Prepare a court report using the 333 form. The report must include the information required by ORS 419B.443(1) but need not contain information in prior reports.

III. A report to the court is required when a child is in the legal custody of Child Welfare but has been placed for six consecutive months in the physical custody of a parent or a person who was appointed the child’s guardian prior to the child’s placement in the legal custody of Child Welfare. The caseworker will:
   A. Prepare a court report using the 333 form. The report must include the information required by ORS 419B.443(1) but need not contain information in prior reports. In addition, the report must include a recommended timetable for dismissal of Child Welfare’s legal custody and termination of wardship and a description of the services that Child Welfare will provide to the child and the physical custodian to eliminate the need for Child Welfare to have legal custody. The report shall be filed with the court even if the Citizen Review Board is regularly reviewing the case.

IV. A report to the court is required when a child in the legal custody of Child Welfare needs medical care or other special treatment. The caseworker will:
   A. Prepare a plan for the child’s care or treatment within 14 days after assuming custody of the child.
   B. Provide the court with a copy of the plan, including a time schedule for implementation.
   C. Provide progress reports to the court as requested, and at least annually.
   D. Notify the court when the plan is implemented.
   E. Notify the court of any revisions to the plan and the reasons for the revisions.

See Chapter IV: Section 21 for more information on a medically needy child.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Review the caseworker’s court report to see if it is professionally done and provides the court with needed information about the family.
II. Assist the caseworker, when needed, in determining appropriate recommendations for the court to order.

III. Ensure a report is made to the court prior to or as soon as practicable after the caseworker moves a child in foster care or returns a child home and consult with the caseworker about the appropriate format for the report.

IV. Ensure the caseworker files a medical plan for a medically needy child according to the appropriate timelines.

V. Ensure other required reports are completed and contain the necessary information.

Forms

I. CF 0333: Case plan

6. Court Orders

The caseworker will:

I. Obtain a written copy of the order filed by the court.

II. Read the order thoroughly to ensure that the order reflects the caseworker’s recollection of the court’s statements at the hearing and to ensure that the caseworker understands the order.

III. Consult with his or her supervisor if the caseworker has any questions about the order, if the order raises a legal issue that requires mandatory consultation with an assistant attorney general, or if the caseworker disagrees with the order.

IV. Comply with the order.

If there is an error in the order (i.e., the order is incorrect or the order fails to contain a required finding), the caseworker will immediately inform his or her supervisor and get permission to contact the assistant attorney general assigned to the branch. The order remains in effect until it is modified, so the caseworker must comply with the existing order during this time. The caseworker should discuss compliance with the order with his or her supervisor and the AAG. If the juvenile court has ordered a parent to complete a specific service, the caseworker should refer the parent to the appropriate service, especially when Child Welfare pays for the service. See Chapter VI: Family Support Services for service referral procedures.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Give approval for an AAG consultation in cases where mandatory consultation with an assistant attorney general is required or for assistance with orders that are incomplete, inaccurate, or with which the agency disagrees.

B. Domestic Relations Cases

Overview

Child Welfare caseworkers have only limited contacts with domestic relations cases. Typically, domestic relations cases deal with issues regarding marital dissolution, separation, family abuse prevention, and parent and child rights and relationships.

Child Welfare caseworkers may be served with a subpoena to appear as a witness in cases of marital dissolution or child custody if the caseworker had involvement with the family, either as part of a Child Protective Services investigation or an open Child Welfare case. If the caseworker is served with a subpoena, requiring the caseworker to testify, to provide records, or to provide records and testify, the caseworker:

I. Consults with his or her supervisor about the confidentiality of ODHS records.

II. Refers to Section 1.C of this chapter for information on responding to subpoenas.

When a parent has made significant progress in achieving the expected outcomes of a case, child safety is being sustained in the parent’s home, the safety threats have been eliminated or mitigated, and child safety can be sustained without ongoing Child Welfare involvement, but the parent needs an order granting the parent custody and control of the child in order to protect the child, the caseworker:

I. Refers the parent to his or her attorney to discuss options for obtaining legal custody of the child.

II. Requests the juvenile court maintain wardship of the child, place the child under the protective supervision of the court with legal custody to the parent, and terminate Child Welfare’s legal custody and, if applicable, guardianship, until that parent can obtain a circuit court order granting the parent legal custody of the child.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consult with the caseworker regarding a subpoena, the confidentiality of ODHS records, and testifying.

II. Assist the caseworker in preparation of testimony.

III. Approve consultation with the assistant attorney general assigned to the local office in cases where there are legal questions about a subpoena, records, or testimony.

C. Responding to Subpoenas, Summonses, and Court Orders

1. Overview

Any department employee, case record or a child in the department’s legal custody can be the subject of a subpoena, summons or court order. A subpoena is directed to a person and may require the person to testify as a witness at a particular time and place on behalf of the party issuing the subpoena or may require the person to produce books, papers, documents or other things and permit inspection of them at a particular time and place. A subpoena may require appearance and testimony under oath at a location outside of the courtroom, called a deposition. A summons notifies a person that a court action has been initiated against them and requires the person to appear before the court either in person, at a designated time and place, or by filing a document with the court.

If the department or an employee is not able to legally comply with the subpoena, summons or court order, or if there are questions about whether the department can or should comply (i.e., a subpoena compels a child in the custody of the department to testify and testifying may not be in the child’s best interests), the department must seek assistance from an assistant attorney general (AAG) to protect client rights and to ensure that the department follows state and federal laws regarding the confidentiality of client and department records. This section guides department staff to properly respond to subpoenas, summonses, or court orders.

Procedure

The department employee receiving the subpoena, summons, or court order must:

I. Date stamp the document and note the method by which the document was received (by mail, by hand delivery, by facsimile, etc.).

II. If the document is a summons or subpoena directed to a specific department employee and the employee receiving the document is not the named employee, immediately deliver the summons or subpoena to the named employee.

III. If the document is a summons or subpoena directed to a child in the legal custody of the department, immediately deliver the document to the assigned caseworker for the child.

IV. If the document is a court order directing a specific department employee to take a particular action and the employee receiving the document is not the named employee, immediately deliver the court order to the named employee.

V. If the document is a court order in a juvenile court proceeding or in another proceeding involving a child in the legal custody of the department, a family member of a child in the legal custody of the department, or a family with whom the department is working voluntarily, immediately deliver the court order to the assigned caseworker for the child or family.

VI. If the document is a summons or subpoena that is not directed to a specific department employee but rather is directed to the department generally or to the “custodian of records,” immediately deliver the summons or subpoena to the caseworker assigned to the case or, if a caseworker is not assigned to the case, to the local employee designated to review records requests.

VII. If the document is a court order requiring the production of department records, immediately deliver the court order to the caseworker assigned to the case or, if a caseworker is not assigned to the case, to the employee designated to review records requests.

Note: Due to the unusually short timeframe within which the department must typically comply with a subpoena, summons, or court order, the employee receiving the document may not leave the document for an employee who is absent. If the employee to whom the document should be delivered is gone, the employee receiving the document must deliver it to the designated employee’s supervisor or to staff providing coverage for the designated employee.

Once the subpoena, summons, or court order is received by the department employee named in the subpoena, summons, or order, by the caseworker or by the employee designated to review records requests, the named employee, the caseworker, or the employee designated to review records requests, examines the subpoena, summons, or court order to determine:

I. What type of proceeding is involved (criminal, domestic relations, paternity, juvenile dependency, etc.).

II. What court issued the subpoena (state, federal, out-of-state, etc.).

III. What the document requires and when.

Note: If payment for witness fees or copying costs accompanies a subpoena or subpoena duces tecum, the named employee, caseworker, or the employee designated to review records requests, must notify his or her supervisor of the payment. The payment may need to be returned to the attorney issuing the subpoena if the department objects to the subpoena. If the payment can be kept, it must be surrendered to the department.

2. Responding to Summons, Subpoenas, or Court Orders in Juvenile Dependency Cases

In a juvenile dependency proceeding, a summons may be issued to require the appearance of any person whose presence the court deems necessary. A subpoena may be issued by an attorney for any party, by the clerk of the court, or by a judge. Under ORS 419B.884, before a subpoena in a juvenile case may command a person to appear for a deposition, the deposition must be authorized by the court. In addition, department employees are expected to comply with an informal notice to attend a juvenile court hearing.

Procedure

Once the caseworker assigned to the juvenile court case receives the document and reviews it, the caseworker:

I. If the document is a court order, follows the procedure in this chapter, Section 1.A.6, Court Orders.

II. If the document requires the caseworker’s presence at a court hearing, through either a summons or a subpoena, complies with the command. If the caseworker has any questions about his or her ability to comply, the caseworker should consult with his or her supervisor and seek approval to consult with an AAG.

III. If the document requires the testimony or appearance of a child in the custody of the department, provides a copy of the document to the child’s attorney and, if appropriate, arranges for the child to appear. If the caseworker has any questions about whether it is in the child’s best interests to appear, the caseworker should consult with his or her supervisor and discuss the concerns with the child’s attorney. If questions remain, the caseworker should seek approval to consult with an AAG.

IV. Notifies his or her supervisor of any order that requires the disclosure of department records. If there are any questions regarding the disclosure of records, the caseworker should seek approval to consult with an AAG.

V. Consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG if a subpoena requires the caseworker to appear for a deposition.

VI. Consults with his or her supervisor if the time to respond to the subpoena, summons, or court order is less than 24 hours or is otherwise unreasonable.

VII. Consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG if the order requires the caseworker to appear and show cause why the caseworker should not be held in contempt of court.

VIII. Consults with his or her supervisor if the caseworker has any questions about his or her ability to testify.

3. Responding to Summonses and Court Orders (Not Involving the Disclosure of Department Records) in Civil Cases

The department may receive a summons or a court order in a civil case. For instance, if the department is sued, the department may be served with a copy of the complaint and a summons requiring the department to respond to the complaint within 30 days. In addition, the department could receive a court order, other than orders requiring the disclosure of records, in a civil case. Sometimes, a court will issue an order called an Order to Appear and Show Cause in order to bring a person before the court. A court may issue an order to appear and show cause directing a person to appear before the court to show cause why he or she should not be held in contempt of court.

Procedure

Once the document is reviewed, the named employee, the caseworker, if the document involves a child in the legal custody of the department, or the employee designated to review records requests:

I. If the document is a summons directed to a named employee or to the department generally, forward the summons to the Department of Justice immediately.

II. If the document is a summons directed to a child in the legal custody of the department, consults with his or her supervisor and provides a copy of the document to the attorney for the child, if any. If there are any questions about how to respond to the summons, seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

III. If the document is a court order, consults with his or her supervisor to determine if the department can or should comply with the order. If there are questions about whether the department can legally comply or should comply, seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

IV. If the document is a court order directed to a child in the legal custody of the department, consults with his or her supervisor and provides a copy of the order to the child’s attorney, if any. If there are any questions about how to respond to the order, seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

V. If the response time is less than 24 hours or is otherwise unreasonable, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG if the response time for an order or summons is less than 24 hours or is otherwise unreasonable.

VI. If the summons or court order is from an out-of-state court, notifies his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

4. Responding to Subpoenas and Court Orders to Disclose Records or to Testify in Civil Cases or Administrative Proceedings

Information held by the department regarding a child or family is confidential under a number of state and federal laws. Even if a subpoena or court order requests testimony and does not seek the disclosure of records, testimony about confidential records is protected by the public officer privilege. To protect the confidentiality of information about a child or family, the Department must seek assistance from an AAG whenever a subpoena or court order in a civil case or administrative proceeding requires the department to disclose information that is confidential.

Procedure

The employee named in the subpoena, the caseworker, or the employee designated to review records requests:

I. Reviews the subpoena or court order to determine what records are being requested.

II. Determines whether the department has the records (this includes determining whether the records are at any department location, including central office, at an offsite storage location, or stored on someone’s computer). If there are questions about whether the department has custody or control over the requested records, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

A. If the department does not have the requested records, contacts the attorney that issued the subpoena and explains that the department does not have the records. Telephone contact with an attorney should be followed with a letter confirming the conversation. NOTE: Notifying an attorney that the department does not have records does not relieve the department of its responsibility to comply with a subpoena to appear and testify. If the attorney does not withdraw the subpoena, the employee should consult with his or her supervisor and seek approval to consult with an AAG.

B. If a court order requires disclosure of records that the department does not have, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

III. Reviews the records requested in the subpoena to determine what kinds of records are being sought (i.e.; CPS records, drug and alcohol records, medical records, juvenile court records), whether the department has a written authorization that permits it to disclose the requested records, and whether the department may legally comply with the subpoena or court order and provide the records. Even if the subpoena is for testimony only, department records should be reviewed to determine if questions might be asked about confidential information.

IV. Notifies his or her supervisor about any court order requiring the testimony of a department employee or the disclosure of a department record.

V. Notifies his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG if:

A. A subpoena requires testimony at a deposition.

B. A subpoena or court order requires a response in less than 24 hours or is otherwise unreasonable.

C. A subpoena or court order is from an out-of-state court.

VI. If the department is legally required to comply with the subpoena or court order, discloses the records pursuant to the subpoena or court order and keeps a copy of the records that are disclosed for the file. If the employee has any question about whether the department can or should comply with the subpoena or court order.
order, the employee should consult with his or her supervisor and seek approval to consult with an AAG. If the disclosure includes protected health information, the disclosure must be logged on the ODHS 2097.

VII. If the department has the discretion to disclose the records and decides that it is appropriate to exercise that discretion in this case, discloses the records pursuant to the subpoena or court order, keeps a copy of the records that are disclosed for the file, and documents in the file the reasons why the department has determined that it is appropriate to exercise its discretion.

VIII. If the department may not legally comply with the subpoena or court order or determines that it is not appropriate to exercise its discretion in this case, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

IX. If the department is legally required to comply with the subpoena or court order but it would be harmful to a child if records were disclosed to certain persons, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

X. If the department may provide some of the records requested but may not provide all the records or may provide records if certain information in the records is redacted, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

5. Responding to Subpoenas and Court Orders Requiring Testimony or the Disclosure of Department Records in Criminal Cases

Based on local practice and case law regarding the disclosure of department records in criminal cases, parties may seek department records for purposes of an in camera inspection by the court.

Procedure

The caseworker or the employee designated to review records requests:

I. Notifies his or her supervisor that a court order was received for in camera review of department records.

II. Reviews the court order to determine the records that must be disclosed.

III. Determines whether the department has the records (this includes determining whether the records are at any department location, including central office, at an offsite storage location, or stored on someone’s computer). If there are questions about whether the department has custody or control over the requested records, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

IV. If the department does not have the records, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

V. Reviews the records to be provided for in camera review to determine what kinds of records are being sought (i.e., CPS records, drug and alcohol records, medical records, juvenile court records).

VI. If the court order seeks drug and alcohol records, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG. The court order must contain specific findings to permit the release of drug and alcohol records under federal law.
VII. If the court order does not require the disclosure of drug and alcohol records or the department does not have drug and alcohol records, provides the records to the court by making a complete copy of the records, certifying that the copy is a true and complete copy of the department’s file, sealing the records and the certification in a manila envelope, attaching the court order to the outside of the envelope with a cover sheet (a copy of a cover sheet is included in the appendix), and delivering the documents to the court. If protected health information was disclosed, the employee logs the disclosure on the ODHS 2097.

VIII. If the court order requires the disclosure of drug and alcohol records, consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

IX. Consults with his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG if disclosure of the records to certain persons would be harmful to a child.

X. Notifies his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG if the order is from an out-of-state court.

XI. Notifies his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG if the order requires a response within 24 hours or is otherwise unreasonable.

Responding to Subpoenas Requiring the Department to Disclose Records to the Court for In Camera Review

Procedure

The caseworker or the employee designated to review records requests:

I. If the subpoena is accompanied by a court order to produce the records to the court for an in camera review, follows the procedures above for court orders for in camera review.

II. If the subpoena is not accompanied by a court order to produce the records to the court for an in camera review, consult with his or her supervisor and seek approval to consult with an AAG. Drug and alcohol records and protected health information may not be disclosed without a court order or a written authorization.

III. If the subpoena demands a response within 24 hours or is otherwise unreasonable, notifies his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

IV. If the subpoena is from out-of-state, notifies his or her supervisor and seeks approval to consult with an AAG.

Responding to Subpoenas for Testimony or Disclosure of Records in a Criminal Case

Procedure

If a subpoena does not request in camera review by the court, the employee named in the subpoena, the caseworker, or the employee designated to review records requests:

I. Determines if the court has conducted an in camera review of department records and, if so, whether records were released to the parties pursuant to the court’s in camera review. If records were already released pursuant to an in camera review and the subpoena requests testimony only, the employee should consult with his or her supervisor. The employee can testify as to matters that the court has disclosed pursuant to its in camera review. If there are any questions, the employee and the supervisor should consult with an AAG.
II. If the court has not conducted an in camera review of the records or the subpoena seeks records in addition to records that were released pursuant to an in camera review, follows the procedures for responding to subpoenas in civil cases.

III. If the subpoena requests testimony before the grand jury, contacts the deputy district attorney that issued the subpoena to discuss the scope of the testimony. If the caseworker or employee has any concerns about the testimony after contacting the deputy district attorney, the employee consults with his or her supervisor.

6. Information to Provide to the Department of Justice

Because of the often short timeframe within which to respond to subpoenas, summonses, and court orders, an assistant attorney general should be consulted as soon as possible and must be provided with specific information during the initial consultation.

Procedure

Once a supervisor has approved consultation with an AAG, the caseworker, the employee to whom the summons, subpoena, or court order is directed, or the employee designated to review records requests:

I. Contacts the AAG assigned to the local branch. If possible, this contact should be made by the ODHS paralegal.

II. Provides the AAG with copies of the court order, summons, or subpoena and any written authorizations to disclose records; notifies the AAG of the date the document was received and how the document was received (i.e., hand-delivery, by certified mail, by fax); identifies the type of documents that are requested by the subpoena or court order (drug and alcohol records, CPS records, etc.); and, if possible, provides the AAG with copies of any documents requested.

III. Consultation with an AAG on a predisposition/jurisdiction must be approved by the CAF assistant administrator and the assistant attorney in charge for the branch AAG.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Review any orders served on the caseworker.

II. Review any court orders for department records.

III. Review any non-juvenile court orders for department records, the testimony of a department employee, or the presence of a child in the legal custody of the department.

IV. Consult with the caseworker about the disclosure of department records, the testimony of a department employee, or other questions involving summonses, subpoenas, or court orders.

V. Give approval to consult with an AAG on issues involving the confidentiality of department records; the legal sufficiency of a subpoena, summons, or court order; a subpoena, summons, or court order issued in an out-of-state case; the timeline for a response to a subpoena, summons, or court order; or the need to protect a child in the legal custody of the department.

VI. Assist the caseworker in preparing to testify in court.

_Drug and alcohol information regarding a parent cannot be disclosed without a court order or an authorization from_ the parent permitting the department to disclose the records to the court and the parties to the juvenile court case. Under federal law, a court order authorizing the disclosure of drug and alcohol records must contain specific findings. The disclosure of protected health information must be required by law or made pursuant to a written authorization. The caseworker must log the disclosure of protected health information on the ODHS 2097. Refer to ODHS Child Welfare Policies I-A.3.1 and I-A.3.2; Section 1.A.4.c, Disclosure/Discovery, of this chapter; and Chapter I: Section 5, Confidentiality, for more information on the confidentiality of department records.

If the subpoena or court order requires disclosure of “all ODHS records” relating to a specific person and is not specifically directed to Child Welfare, the employee reviewing the subpoena or court order should contact Central Office for assistance. The subpoena may demand production of records held by other ODHS programs, such as Self-Sufficiency.

If a document contains both information that is subject to a subpoena or court order and information that is not subject, and the information that is subject to the subpoena or court order can legally be provided, the document must be redacted before it can be disclosed. The document should be redacted to remove information that is not subject to disclosure. The person responding to the subpoena or court order should note in a cover sheet the general information that was redacted (i.e., information regarding a third party). If the document cannot be redacted, a supervisor should be consulted.

Section 2: Legal and Other Fathers
Legal and Other Fathers

A. Overview

Identifying legal relationships to a child is an important task for the caseworker. The caseworker must identify the child’s father and his legal relationship to the child. It is extremely important for the caseworker to identify the child’s father and the father’s legal status when beginning to work with the family for a number of reasons:

I. Oregon Revised Statute lists the parents, including the legal father and some putative (alleged, biological) fathers of the child, as parties to the juvenile court case.

II. As a parent, the father has certain legal rights to participation in the court process.

III. The legal father may have relatives who can be a resource to the child.

IV. Policy I-AB.4, CPS Assessment directs the worker to contact and interview the father as part of the CPS assessment process.

V. The father’s parental protective capacity is assessed during the Protective Capacity Assessment.

VI. Policy I-A.4.3, Identifying Legally Recognized Parental Relationships, directs the caseworker to identify all persons who have a legally recognized parental relationship to a child in substitute care at the time the caseworker files the petition.

VII. It is best casework practice and the law to include the father and his family in planning for the child. The caseworker cannot do a thorough safety assessment without including the father.

B. Who is a Father?

The legal father of a child is defined as:

I. The man who has established his parental rights to a child in one of the following ways:

   A. The man who was married to the child’s mother at the time of the child’s birth and is presumed to be the child’s legal father even if he is not the biological father. This presumption can be challenged.

   B. The child’s biological father who established legal paternity by marrying the child’s mother after the child’s birth.

   C. The biological father who, with the child’s mother, filed a voluntary acknowledgement of paternity with the Oregon Center for Health Statistics (Vital Statistics).

   D. The biological father whose legal paternity has been established by filiations proceeding.

   E. The father whose legal paternity has been established by some other judicial order, including adoption of the child.

   F. If the child was born in a state other than Oregon, legal paternity may have been established by other means according to the laws of that state (e.g., common-law marriage).

   G. In Indian Child Welfare cases, a man who is the father under applicable tribal law.
The putative father of a child is defined as:

I. A Stanley putative father is a party to the juvenile court case and is the biological father of a child who has never legally established paternity as outlined above, but who has assumed or attempted to assume the responsibilities normally associated with parenthood (e.g., has lived with the child, financially supported the child, established significant psychological ties to the child) and has legal rights to the child.

II. A Pagan putative father who is an alleged biological father who has not assumed or attempted to assume parental responsibilities.

III. An “other” putative father includes a man who is the biological father and who has had or has attempted to have some contact and attempted to provide some for the child, or a named biological father of a child placed immediately in foster care, or a man claiming or alleged to be the biological father and paternity is being addressed in court.

See Appendix 9.2 for the chart Fathers at a Glance and Search and Notice Requirements for additional information regarding fathers. This tool is also available at the ODHS website: http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/training/caf/paternity_tools/

Procedure

I. Complete the form CF 418 with the mother of the child at the start of working with the family. This form, called the Father’s Questionnaire, provides information to confirm the father’s status or to determine if he is a father with legal rights to the child.

II. Identify the legal status of the named father of a child by naming him on the petition if legal or Stanley, describe how he is the legal or putative father, and document this status in a case note in FACIS. Do not name a man on the petition if you are unsure of his legal status.

III. Consult with your supervisor or an AAG (with your supervisor’s approval) if you have questions regarding the legal status of a father, including the possibility of having two legal fathers for a child.

There are many resources to help you find information regarding a putative or legal father. Child Welfare screens accessed through FACIS and IIS, Birth Browse, Division of Child Support (DCS) screens and Self Sufficiency Program (SSP) screens may be used. Check with your CMC for assistance if you do not know how to access those screens. Remember to document your search results in the case notes section in FACIS.

The State Recovery Central Unit (SRCU), a unit within DCS, can assist caseworkers in identifying if and how paternity has been established. Contact SRCU to inquire about the status of establishment proceedings when DCS has an open case. Provide updated information to DCS to assist in their efforts to establish paternity. Find their contact information on the ODHS paternity tools website: http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/training/caf/paternity_tools/ at State Recovery Central Unit (SRCU).

The caseworker uses Form CF 5600-Child Welfare Parentage Testing and Division of Child Support
Notification to notify SRCU about a paternity issue.

Procedure

I. Obtain supervisor approval for ODHS to facilitate parentage testing through LabCorp (Box 3).

II. Complete case information fields (Box 1) and fax a copy of the CF 5600 to LabCorp, DCS and central office using the numbers provided on the form (Boxes 2 & 3).

III. Notify DCS any time paternity is addressed as an issue in a juvenile court proceeding (Box 2).

IV. Forward to DCS a Voluntary Acknowledgement of Paternity or a certified copy of an order establishing or dis-establishing paternity (Box 2).

C. During the CPS Assessment

The CPS worker completing a CPS assessment identifies and contacts the father with rights to a child. The father with rights is interviewed by the CPS caseworker to gather information relevant to determining child safety. The father is entitled to receive Pamphlet 1536, regarding the CPS process; the assessment disposition; and Pamphlet 9027 regarding notice if the child is placed in foster care. The caseworker receives an exception for some notification in cases of domestic violence but must provide notice to the father with rights if the child is placed out of the home and the juvenile court is involved with the child.

Procedure

The caseworker will:

I. Locate the father when it has been determined the named father is a father with rights.

II. Ask the child’s mother and other maternal and paternal relatives to assist in locating the father.

III. Initiate an Absent Parent Search in open cases if the father’s whereabouts are unknown. Initiate this search by the 60th day of any open case with court involvement. See Chapter II: Screening and Assessment sections on Identifying Legal Parents and Absent Parent Search for the detailed procedures to follow when searching for the father.

IV. Provide notice to and include the father who has rights in case planning. A legal father or a Stanley father is a party to any court action taken on behalf of a child. The father has the right to notice of hearings; copies of petitions, answers, motions and other papers; request counsel be appointed to represent him; call witnesses, cross-examine witnesses and participate in hearings; appeal; and request a hearing.

V. Determine how a father has established paternity or is considered a legal party and document that information in a case note in FACIS.

VI. The Indian Child Welfare Act applies if the named father of a child is a member of or eligible for membership in a federally recognized tribe and the named father acknowledges he is the father consistent with tribal law. This father is considered the legal father even if he has not legally established paternity through the state of Oregon. He is a father with rights. Provide active efforts to the family and discuss with the father ways to establish legal paternity. This includes providing information about the local Division of Child Support office, including the address and phone number. Contact the DCS State Recovery Central Unit for assistance.

VII. List a legal father and a Stanley father on any dependency petition filed and provide notice of the hearing to this father.

VIII. Provide information to the court regarding the status of the legal father and how he was established as the legal father. Provide this information either orally to the judge or in a court report.

IX. Assist a Stanley putative father who has not established paternity but has assumed or attempted to assume parental responsibility for the child to establish legal paternity. Provide information about the local Division of Child Support, including the address and phone number or contact DCS State Recovery Central Unit for assistance.

X. Treat the Stanley father as a parent in case practice; however, his relatives will not be considered as relatives to the child unless he establishes legal paternity.

XI. Include the Stanley father in a dependency petition filed with the juvenile court, as the juvenile court recognizes this Stanley putative father as a father with rights in the juvenile dependency matter with the same rights as listed above for a legal father.

XII. The caseworker is not obligated to contact a father who fits the definition of a Pagan father, as this father has not assumed or attempted to assume parental responsibility, does not have a legally recognized relationship with the child and has no rights in the juvenile court dependency case. If a Pagan father contacts you, consult with your supervisor about his potential legal status and including the father in case planning.

XIII. Consult with your supervisor and an AAG (with supervisor approval) regarding the legal status of an “Other” type of father if you are unsure of his standing.

XIV. If a Stanley father is not present at the time of the initiation of a court proceeding, write the Stanley putative father a letter using the same local procedure as you would to notify a legal father.

XV. Send notification in the form of a “Randolph Jones” letter to the “Other” category of putative fathers, including named father of an infant placed in protective custody from the hospital following the child’s birth. See Chapter V: Adoption, Determination of Legal Parties for more information regarding this letter. See Appendix 2.2 for an example of a “Randolph Jones” letter. The caseworker is not obligated to provide the putative father of a child with additional notice if he does not respond to the “Randolph Jones” letter within the time frames outlined in the letter. If this father contacts you after the timelines, consult with your supervisor about his potential legal status and including this father in case planning.

See Appendix 9.2 for the chart Fathers at a Glance and Search and Notice Requirements for additional information regarding fathers. This tool is also available at the ODHS website: http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/training/caf/paternity.tools/

D. When to Consult

I. Review the putative father’s status with your supervisor to verify the father’s status if you are unsure of a father’s status.
II. Consult with Central Office program consultants, a paralegal or the general counsel assistant attorney general (AAG) if there continues to be questions about a father’s status between you and your supervisor. Uncertainty may exist when a father has had some contact with the child but has not had a significant relationship with the child.

III. Consult with your supervisor and the general counsel AAG for assistance when it is possible there are two fathers with a legally recognized relationship to the child.

IV. Consult with your supervisor on fathers who fall between the category of “Stanley” and “Pagan” fathers to insure consistency of practice within the department.

V. Consult with your supervisor if a question regarding paternity arises in a case and consult with the general counsel AAG when a hearing regarding paternity may be needed. ORS 419B.395 gives the juvenile court authority to address issues of paternity when there is no legal father or there is a legal father but his paternity is in dispute.

VI. Contact and consult with the Division of Child Support/State Recovery Central Unit on issues regarding paternity using the CF 5600 form.

VII. Contact the legal assistance AAG and the legal assistance specialist on paternity questions if pursuing termination of parental rights. See Chapter V: Adoptions for a more detailed description of this procedure.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consults with a caseworker regarding the paternity status of fathers and reviews the Father’s Questionnaire to confirm fathers with rights of participation.

II. Consults with the caseworker and the Central Office program consultants, paralegals and the general counsel AAG about any questionable status of a named father of a child.

III. The supervisor consults with the caseworker to ensure appropriate partnering with DCS/ SRCU occurs, including approval of funds for paternity testing.

The Adoption and Safe Families Act

The Adoption and Safe Families Act stresses the need to include parents, other family members and community support people in safety planning, developing increased parental protective capacity and planning for reunification of the child with a parent. ASFA stresses the need for Family Meetings as a tool to the caseworker in developing the Child Welfare Case plan that meets the safety, permanency and attachment needs of the child. The Family Engagement Meeting (FEM) is used, in part, to discuss the ASFA timelines with families. The Family Engagement Facilitator (FEF), or if a FEF is not available, the caseworker, schedules a Family Engagement Meeting to be held between the 30th to 60th day of the child's placement in out-of-home care or the identification of safety threats on a cooperative in-home case.

I. In consultation with the parent, family members and others, the caseworker develops an alternate or concurrent permanent plan for the child should the parent be unable to address the safety threats and diminished parental protective capacities to safely parent the child.

II. The caseworker considers exceptions to the mandate to file a petition for termination of the parent’s rights if:
   A. The child is being cared for by a relative.
   B. There is a compelling reason that is in the best interests of the child not to file a termination of parental rights petition.
   C. Child Welfare has not provided the family with services Child Welfare has determined are necessary for the safe return of the child to the parent.
   D. Another permanent plan is better suited to meet the health and safety needs of the child.

Reasonable and Active Efforts

The federal Adoption and Safe Families Act (ASFA) and Oregon law require Child Welfare caseworkers to make efforts to prevent the need to remove a child from his or her home prior to placing the child in protective custody, to return the child to a parent, and to achieve permanency for a child who cannot be returned to his or her home. The efforts must be reasonable if the child is not an Indian child. If the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) applies, efforts to provide rehabilitative or remedial services to the Indian family prior to removing an Indian child and efforts to return the child to his or her home must be active. This section describes the concept of reasonable and active efforts.

Reasonable Efforts
Reasonable efforts are not specifically defined by law. Reasonable efforts include providing appropriate services to assist the parents in adjusting their circumstances or conditions to allow the child to either remain in the home or to be returned to the home. What is reasonable depends on the circumstances of each individual case. The safety assessment and safety analysis can assist the caseworker in determining what efforts are reasonable in a particular case by:

I. Identifying the specific safety threats to a child.

II. Determining how the child is vulnerable to those safety threats.

III. Determining what behavioral, emotional, and cognitive characteristics of the parent make the parent unable to protect the child from the safety threats.

IV. Determining what needs to change to enhance the parent’s ability to keep the child safe and to minimize or eliminate the safety threat.

V. Determining the assistance that Child Welfare can provide to minimize or eliminate the safety threat and to enhance the parent’s ability to keep the child safe.

Reasonable efforts must be made to prevent or eliminate the need to remove a child from the home, to make it possible for the child to safely return home and, if the case plan is something other than to reunify the family, to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanent plan and to take the steps necessary to finalize the permanent placement.

When a CPS worker is assessing a report of child abuse or neglect, during the investigation he or she may find that a safety threat exists, a child is vulnerable, but a parent can and will protect the child with referrals to community services. Reasonable efforts to prevent or eliminate the need to remove the child from the home might include:

I. Making a referral to the program or service designed to enhance the parent’s ability to protect the child and to eliminate or minimize the safety threat.

II. Asking the parent to sign a release of information for the program or service so the caseworker can communicate with the service provider.

III. Contacting the service provider to assess the parent’s participation in the program or service and whether the parent has made changes necessary to enhance the parent’s ability to protect the child or to eliminate or minimize the safety threat. The caseworker must document the successful changes, and if appropriate, close the assessment.

If the child is removed from the home despite these efforts, the efforts must be documented in the Protective Custody Report (the requirements for the Protective Custody Report are discussed in Section 1.A.2. of this chapter).

If a child is removed from the home and a juvenile court case is initiated, Child Welfare must document the reasonable efforts made to make it possible for the child to safely return home, unless certain circumstances are present and the court has found that Child Welfare is not required to make efforts to reunify the family. (See “Disposition Hearing,” Section 1.A.4.e. of this chapter for more information on circumstances that might relieve Child Welfare of the requirement to make reasonable efforts to reunify.) The efforts that should be provided in a specific case depend on the circumstances of the case. The efforts must include appropriate services to allow the parent the opportunity to adjust the parent’s circumstances, conduct, or conditions to make it possible for the child to safely return home within a reasonable time and must bear a rational relationship to the jurisdictional findings that brought the child within the court’s jurisdiction. ODHS must describe the efforts made to make it possible for the child to safely return home at the shelter hearing, disposition hearing, Citizen Review Board review of the case, permanency hearing, and in any court reports that must be filed under ORS 419B.440. (Information on the requirements for particular hearings is located in Section 1.A.4. of this chapter. Information about required court reports can be found in Section 1.A.5 of this chapter.)

Efforts that Child Welfare might have made in a particular case include, but are not limited to the following:

I. Safety threats to the child were identified.
II. A Protective Capacity Assessment was conducted that identified the specific behavioral, cognitive and emotional characteristics that make the parent unable to protect the child.
III. Conditions for return home were identified, which are the specific behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that must exist within a child’s home before a child can safely return and remain in the home.
IV. A Family Engagement Meeting was held with parents, family members, and safety service providers to develop and support the ongoing safety plan for the child.
V. All persons with a legal relationship to the child were identified.
VI. If applicable, a blood test to determine paternity of an alleged biological father was arranged.
VII. A search for an absent parent was conducted and the parent was contacted.
VIII. Inquiry was made regarding possible Indian heritage of the child.
IX. A search for the child’s relatives was conducted.
X. The child’s relatives and, if applicable, persons with a caregiver relationship with the child were identified and contacted to determine their willingness to be a placement resource for the child.
XI. Action Agreements were developed with each parent.
XII. A visitation plan was developed between the child and the parents and visits were facilitated and supervised by Child Welfare (describe dates of visits and any additional support, training, or advice provided during the visit).
XIII. A visitation plan was developed between the child and his or her siblings.
XIV. The parent was referred to appropriate services to assist the parent in adjusting the circumstances that endangered the child, to enhance the parent’s ability to protect the child, and to eliminate or minimize the safety threats to the child, which may include:
   B. Domestic violence treatment.
   C. A mental health assessment and treatment.
   D. Parenting classes.
   E. Individual counseling.
F. Family counseling.
G. A psychosexual evaluation and treatment.
H. A psychological evaluation.
I. Any other services recommended by service providers.

XV. Evaluations were reviewed and follow-up contacts were made with evaluators to determine treatment and services necessary to assist the parent in enhancing the parent’s ability to protect the child, minimizing or eliminating safety threats to the child, and adjusting the parent’s circumstances to make it possible for the child to safely return home.

XVI. Contacts were made with service providers to determine the parent’s progress in enhancing the parent’s ability to protect the child, minimizing or eliminating the safety threats to the child, and meeting the conditions for return home.

XVII. Face-to-face contact with the child, the parent and the foster care provider was made at least monthly (list dates of contact).

XVIII. The child’s safety in his or her current placement was assessed at each face-to-face contact with the child.

XIX. Health and school information was obtained regarding the child.

XX. Services were provided to the child (describe the services).

XXI. Health information was obtained regarding a parent.

A description of the efforts made should include dates of contacts and meetings. Depending on local court procedure, the caseworker may want to include documentation of the efforts made by Child Welfare, such as: Action Agreements, any evaluations, case notes detailing contact with the parent and service providers, visit notes, and inquiries made to tribes to determine if the ICWA applies to the child and responses received from tribes.

Once the case plan for a child is changed from reunification, the caseworker must make reasonable efforts to place the child in accordance with the permanency plan and to take the steps necessary to finalize the permanency plan. Possible plans include:

I. Adoption.

II. Guardianship.

III. Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement, which might include Permanent Foster/Kinship Care.

Reasonable efforts to achieve the alternate or concurrent permanency plan are clearly outlined in each plan’s administrative rule. In addition to the rule, a useful guide is found in Appendix 3.1 titled “Reasonable Efforts Principles and Expectations.” This guide was developed between ODHS and the Oregon Citizen Review Board and assists caseworkers and CRB members in considering reasonable efforts to finalize the permanent plan when the plan is other than reunification.

Active Efforts

Active efforts are not specifically defined by law. Active efforts include providing appropriate remedial services... and rehabilitative programs designed to assist the parents or Indian custodians in adjusting their circumstances or conditions to prevent the break-up of the Indian family. Whether efforts are active will depend on the circumstances of each case. Active efforts are efforts above and beyond what is reasonable in a particular case and should be culturally appropriate. The caseworker should involve extended family members, tribal social service programs, other tribal organizations, and tribal community therapy practices in determining the appropriate case plan for an Indian family.

Both ICWA and Oregon law require Child Welfare to make active efforts to provide remedial or rehabilitative services to the Indian family prior to removal of an Indian child. These services must be tried before the removal of an Indian child. As part of making active efforts to provide remedial or rehabilitative services, when the CPS caseworker knows or has reason to know that a child is or may be an Indian child, the CPS caseworker:

I. Immediately contacts the child’s tribe to give verbal notification of Child Welfare involvement with the family.

II. Discusses the family situation with the tribal social worker or tribal representative of the family’s tribe and documents the conversation in case notes.

III. Verifies the child’s tribal membership.

IV. Asks the tribe for assistance in identifying culturally appropriate resources to assist the parent or Indian custodian in adjusting his or her behavior, conditions or circumstances to enhance the parent or Indian custodian’s ability to keep the child safe and to minimize or eliminate safety threats to the child.

V. Helps arrange for the parent or Indian custodian to access culturally appropriate services identified by the caseworker and the tribe.

VI. Contacts family members and other tribal resources for assistance in planning for the child’s safety needs and providing assistance to the family.

VII. Provides culturally appropriate services to all household members who have a caretaker role with the child.

VIII. Arranges Family Engagement Meetings to involve the parents, Indian custodians, and extended family members in case planning.

If the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) applies to the child and the child is removed through a protective action, the caseworker will need to describe the active efforts made to provide remedial or rehabilitative services to the Indian family and why those services were unsuccessful in preventing the need to remove the child in the Protective Custody Report and at the shelter hearing. See Section 1.A.4.a of this chapter for more information about the shelter hearing.

Child Welfare must make active efforts to eliminate the need for continued out-of-home placement for the child. The efforts made by Child Welfare will be reviewed at the shelter hearing, the disposition hearing, the Citizen Review Board review of the case, the permanency hearing, and any review hearings conducted by the juvenile court. Reports to the court must include a description of the active efforts made by Child Welfare. For more information about the specific hearings, see Section 1.A.4. of this chapter. For more information about court reports, see Section 1.A.5. of this chapter.

A description of active efforts to make it possible for the child to safely return home might include, but is not limited to information showing:

I. The placement preferences of the ICWA were followed.
II. Safety threats to the child were identified, taking into account the prevailing societal and cultural conditions and way of life of the child’s tribe.

III. A Protective Capacity Assessment was conducted that identified the specific behavioral, cognitive and emotional characteristics that make the parent unable to protect the child, taking into account the prevailing societal and cultural conditions and way of life of the child’s tribe.

IV. Conditions for return home were identified, which are the specific behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that must exist within a child’s home before a child can safely return and remain in the home.

V. A Family Engagement Meeting was held with the parents, family members, tribal social worker, and safety service providers to develop the ongoing safety plan for the child.

VI. All persons with a legal relationship to the child were identified.

VII. If applicable, a blood test to determine paternity of an alleged biological father was arranged.

VIII. A search for an absent parent was conducted and the parent was contacted.

IX. A search for the child’s relatives was conducted.

X. The child’s relatives and, if applicable, persons with a caregiver relationship with the child were identified and contacted to determine their willingness to be a placement or a supportive resource for the child.

XI. Action agreements were developed with each parent.

XII. A visitation plan was developed between the child and the parents and visits were facilitated and supervised by Child Welfare (describe dates of visits and any additional support, training or assistance provided during the visit).

XIII. A visitation plan was developed between the child and his or her siblings.

XIV. Parents were assisted in accessing culturally appropriate services, identified by the tribal social worker and the caseworker, including:
   B. Domestic violence treatment.
   C. A mental health assessment and treatment.
   D. Parenting classes.
   E. Individual counseling.
   F. Family counseling.
   G. A psychosexual evaluation and treatment.
   H. A psychological evaluation.
   I. Other services as recommended by the tribe and community resources.

XV. Evaluations were reviewed and follow-up contacts were made with evaluators to determine treatment and services necessary to assist the parent in enhancing the parent’s ability to protect the child, minimizing safety threats to the child, and adjusting the parent’s circumstances to make it possible for the child to safely return home.

XVI. Contacts were made with service providers to determine the parent’s progress in enhancing the parent’s ability to protect the child, minimizing or eliminating the safety threats to the child, and meeting the conditions for return home.

XVII. Regular contact was made with the tribal social worker regarding the case plan.

XVIII. Face-to-face contact with the child, the parent and the foster care provider was made at least monthly (list dates of contact).

XIX. The child’s safety in his or her current placement was assessed at each face-to-face contact with the child.

XX. Health and school information was obtained regarding the child.

XXI. Services were provided to the child (describe the services).

XXII. Health information was obtained regarding a parent.

A description of the efforts made should include dates of contacts and meetings. The caseworker should describe in detail the efforts made to assist the parents with appropriate services. While making a referral to a service might be reasonable, additional efforts to engage the parent might be necessary to demonstrate an active effort. Depending on local court procedure, the caseworker may want to include documentation of the efforts made by Child Welfare, such as: Action Agreements; any evaluations; case notes detailing contact with the tribal social worker, the parent, and service providers; and visit notes.

Once the case plan for a child is changed from reunification, the caseworker makes active efforts to achieve another permanency plan. Possible plans include:

I. Adoption, although many tribes do not agree with termination of parental rights.

II. Guardianship.

III. Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement, which may include Permanent Foster/Kinship Care.

A useful guide is found at Appendix 3.2 titled Active Efforts Principles and Expectations. This guide was developed by the nine Oregon tribes, ODHS, and the Oregon Citizen Review Board, and assists caseworkers, tribal social workers, and CRB members in considering active efforts.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consults with the caseworker to ensure the worker is providing reasonable efforts in working with families and appropriately describes those efforts in court reports.

II. In consultation with the ICWA liaison in the district, ensures the caseworker carrying an ICWA case is actively communicating with the tribal social worker or tribal representative and complying with the ICWA.

III. Reviews the Child Welfare Case plan of the worker paying particular attention to services being provided to the family.

Section 4: Citizen Review Board
Working with the courts and external partners

Citizen Review Board

The 1985 Oregon Legislature created citizen review boards (CRB or board) to assist the courts. CRBs review substitute care cases to ensure permanency and examine the appropriateness of placements.

Each board has three to five members. Members know about and are interested in foster care and child welfare. They represent various socioeconomic and ethnic groups in the area served.

The presiding judge (or designee) of each circuit court recommends members for the CRB to the Oregon Supreme Court. The chief justice appoints the members. Each member participates in 16 hours of orientation training and an additional eight hours of training annually.

Boards review case plans for children in substitute care, including children who are under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court. They also review cases of children who are placed voluntarily through a Voluntary Custody Agreement or Voluntary Placement Agreement. Each board member must keep confidential the information reviewed by the board and its actions and recommendations.

Board reviews occur:

I. No more than six months from the date the child was placed in substitute care and every six months thereafter

II. Until the child is no longer in substitute care

III. Until the child is no longer within the juvenile court’s jurisdiction, or

IV. Until an adoption proceeding is final.

The juvenile court may relieve the board of its responsibility to review a case if a full judicial review has occurred within 60 days prior to the next scheduled board review. The caseworker reviews local practice before asking the court to relieve the CRB of its first review.

The State of Oregon Judicial Department, Citizen Review Board and ODHS have signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU). A copy of the MOU is in Chapter 9: Interagency and Intergovernmental Agreements. The agreement acknowledges the importance of effective and efficient service delivery to the children and families of Oregon. Both departments agree the MOU supports this goal.

After each review, the CRB provides the caseworker, court and other interested parties with findings and recommendations that address:

I. Reasonable efforts to avoid placement and reunify the family

II. Continued need for appropriate placement

III. Compliance with the case plan

IV. Progress toward alleviating need for placement
V. A tentative date for return home or adoption, if applicable, and

VI. Other solutions or alternatives.

If the caseworker asks the court to relieve the CRB of its review, the caseworker must still complete the case plan to comply with federal and state requirements. The caseworker provides the completed plan to the juvenile court as part of the ODHS Court Report.

Procedure

Before a CRB review, the caseworker or the CRB coordinator:

I. Receives a Request for Case Information notifying them of an upcoming review within approximately 45 days.

II. Compiles applicable documents, scans them, along with the completed Request for Case Information, and sends an electronic copy to the CRB at least 21 days prior to the review.

The caseworker asks interested parties to participate, including the:

I. Mother

II. Father

III. Foster care provider

IV. Attorneys for the parties

V. CASA (if one is appointed)

VI. Significant relatives

VII. Adopting parent (if the child is in a designated adoptive placement)

VIII. Child’s tribe (if applicable), and

IX. Child (if developmentally appropriate).

The caseworker notifies the CRB:

I. If an interpreter is needed, and

II. Of any special circumstances, such as a “no contact” order or cultural considerations of the parent.

For a Child Welfare Case plan or a Family Support Service Case plan, the caseworker:

I. Documents information about their work with the child and family

II. Provides information about child safety, permanency and well-being, and

III. Updates the parent’s or child’s progress.

IV. Is notified of the time of the CRB review 15 days prior to the review

V. Notifies the adoption worker of the date and time of the review if the case is an adoption case so the adoption worker may attend the CRB review, and

VI. Reviews prior CRB recommendations to determine whether ODHS has carried out the board’s recommendations.

During CRB review of a Child Welfare Case plan, the caseworker discusses:

I. Safety threats

II. Safety analysis

III. Indian Child Welfare Act eligibility

IV. Legal basis for jurisdiction

V. Ongoing safety plan

VI. Current action agreement

VII. Reasonable or active efforts made by Child Welfare to prevent placement

VIII. Reasonable or active efforts made by Child Welfare to reunify the family

IX. Visitation plan

X. Progress on relative search

XI. Appropriateness of the current placement

XII. Parent’s progress in meeting conditions for return and achieving the expected outcomes, and XIII. Permanency planning.

During CRB review of a Family Support Services Case plan, the caseworker discusses:

I. Service goals developed with the parents

II. Type and reason for substitute care

III. Visitation plan,

IV. Indian Child Welfare eligibility, and

V. Conditions under which ODHS will close the case.

VI. The caseworker describes the child, child’s needs, and the services the child and family are receiving, and

VII. Addresses how ODHS is implementing the board’s prior recommendations or the reasons why ODHS has not implemented the recommendations.

During a CRB review, the board focuses on whether:

I. Proper notice of the review was given to parents and guardians
II. ODHS made reasonable or active efforts prior to placement to prevent or eliminate the need to remove the child from the child’s home

III. ODHS made reasonable or active efforts to provide services for the child to safely return home, if the case plan is return to parent

IV. ODHS made reasonable efforts to place the child with relatives or persons known to the child in a timely manner, or active efforts, if ICWA applies

V. ODHS completed steps necessary to finalize the concurrent plan, if the case plan is something other than return to parent

VI. ODHS is in compliance with the case plan and court orders

VII. Parents are engaged with the case plan and court orders

VIII. Parents have made sufficient progress for the child to safely return home

IX. Out-of-home placement is still necessary

X. Current placement is the most appropriate and least restrictive

XI. Progress has been made to alleviate the need for placement

XII. Progress has been made on the concurrent plan

XIII. ODHS expects the child to return home, be placed in a guardianship or be placed for adoption, and the likely date, and

XIV. Other problems, solutions, or alternatives have been explored.

After a CRB review, the caseworker:

I. Within 21 days of the review, receives written CRB findings and recommendations.

II. Immediately reviews the findings and recommendations and consults with their supervisor if the caseworker disagrees with one of the findings or if the CRB found that ODHS did not make reasonable or active efforts.

III. Within 10 days of receiving written findings and recommendations, requests a hearing, with the assistance of the assistant attorney general assigned to the local office, if ODHS wishes to challenge any CRB finding or recommendation.

IV. Within 17 days, notifies the CRB in writing if ODHS does not intend to implement the recommendations of the board.

Role of the supervisor

I. Reviews and approves the completed case plan prior to submission to the CRB.

II. Consults with the caseworker when the worker disagrees with the findings or recommendations of a CRB, or when the CRB finds no reasonable or active efforts and ensures timelines for a response are met. Discusses with the caseworker that if there is a dispute over any CRB findings or recommendations, a court hearing is needed to resolve the dispute.

Guidance and FAQs:

Out of Home Care Assessments (OHCA) and Closed at Screening (CAS) Reports in Citizen Review Board (CRB) packets

Senate Bill 243 and related legislation now require OHCA and CAS reports pertaining to the child(ren) under review be included in CRB packets. Although this legislation includes information pertaining to assessments conducted by OTIS, there is no current mechanism for ODHS employees outside of OTIS to access those assessments. The field will be updated when a resolution is reached.

The Request for Case Information (blue sheet) from the CRB has been updated to indicate the inclusion of the following materials:

I. Any OHC CAS or Assessment completed since the last full judicial review

Where to locate assessments and reports and what to print:

Reminders:

I. All the assessments and reports must be redacted

II. Only print the assessments and reports since the last full judicial review

III. Be sure to uncheck the date-restricted box when looking for assessments and reports

IV. Only print approved pieces of work, not pending work

CAS Report

These reports are located under the foster parent’s name in OR-Kids in the CASE tab. Be sure to look under both foster parent’s names if there is more than one. When located, expand the icon’s dropdown. If there is an icon for Screening Reports (CAS), click on the icon, and look at the report dates to determine if any CAS reports occurred since the last full judicial review. If so, print those reports to include in the CRB packet.

OHC Assessments completed by ODHS

These assessments are located under the foster parent’s name in OR-Kids in the CASE tab. Be sure to look under both foster parent’s names if there is more than one. When located, expand the icon’s dropdown. If there is a Case icon, look at them to determine if any assessments occurred since the last full judicial review. If so, print those assessments to include in the CRB packet.

Note: The board has also been given the following instruction by ODHS: Board members should not attempt to gather information during a CRB review to assess the quality of an OHCA assessment.

FAQs

Q: Will caseworkers be asked about OHCA and CASs at the CRB review?

A: Yes and no. Yes, the CRB reviewers will be asking workers about approved OHCA that have occurred since the last full judicial review. They will not be asking about pending OHCA or CASs. The CRB has been partnering closely with ODHS on this process. The reviewers have been given guidance to consider the following questions regarding OHCA before the review:

- Does the child need additional supports?
- Do previous reports and assessments raise any red flags?

They have been given guidance to ask the following questions at the review (if there has been an OHCA):

- Ask the child’s attorney, CASA, and parent(s) if they were notified of the OHCA. If not, they will recommend ODHS notify those parties following the review.
- Ask the ODHS worker if there is a placement support plan (CW 1267) in place. If there is a placement support plan in place, they will ask for a broad summary of the plan and if the plan has been implemented.
- Ask the CRB attendees if they think the child needs any additional supports.

Q: Why does the CRB want this information?

A: The assessments are an important part of the case file. The CRB’s job is to make findings about ODHS meeting the child’s needs. Reviewers, therefore, need to know about all experiences the child has during the review period, including whether anyone has alleged the child has been abused, and how ODHS assessed safety. They will not be making findings directly regarding the OHCA.

Q: Is there policy that supports ODHS notifying parents about OHCA?

A: Yes, ORS 419B.015(3)(a) states that when a report alleging a child or ward in substitute care may have been subjected to abuse is received by ODHS, ODHS shall notify the attorney for the child or ward, the child’s or ward’s court-appointed special advocate, the parents of the child or ward and any attorney representing a parent of the child or ward that a report has been received, unless the caseworker has documented supervisor approval of an exception under ORS 419B.035(3)(d).
ODHS values and is committed to using trauma-informed practice. It is extremely important that parents whose children are in the custody of ODHS be informed when there has been a concern about those providing care for their child, regardless of whether that concern has been substantiated. We are partners with parents and share the same goal of safe and timely reunification. Transparency is paramount to successful engagement, respectful communication, and timely permanency.

Q: How do we prepare for a CRB where this topic may be talked about?

A: As stated above, trauma-informed practice would support preparing everyone for the CRB and all topics that will be discussed. OHCAs can be upsetting for both parents and foster parents; therefore, it is best practice to let them know this topic will be discussed to avoid surprises at the review. Listening to parents and foster parents’ questions and concerns ahead of the review is paramount to understanding how they may react to discussing this topic at the CRB. When parents and foster parents feel heard by their caseworkers, the chance of a supportive and productive discussion increases.

It is also helpful to give the CRB reviewers information that this may or will be a difficult topic, and they need to be prepared for parents and foster parents to be emotional. Caseworkers have skills to support families and foster parents through difficult conversations; nevertheless, they should expect the support of all the review team members.

Working with the courts and external partners

Section 5: CASA: Court Appointed Special Advocate
CASA: Court Appointed Special Advocate

In every court case under ORS 419B, the court is required to appoint a court appointed special advocate. The court appointed special advocate (CASA) is a party to the proceeding and has specific duties to perform:

I. The CASA is an advocate for the child and ensures all relevant facts are brought before the court.

II. The CASA investigates all relevant information about the case.

III. The CASA facilitates and negotiates to ensure that the court, ODHS/CWP and the child’s attorney, if appointed, fulfill their obligations to the child in a timely fashion.

IV. The CASA monitors all court orders to ensure compliance and brings to the court’s attention any change in circumstances that requires a modification of the court’s orders.

Child Welfare must permit the CASA to inspect and copy records related to the child involved in the case. Records related to other persons and not the child may be protected by other laws and may not be disclosed to the CASA. Records reviewed by the CASA are confidential under ORS 419A.255. The CASA appointment remains in effect until the court vacates the appointment or until the petition is dismissed.

TIP: Each ODHS/Child Welfare district has a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with the CASA program in its district. Although some differences may appear in different memorandums, the basic agreements are similar across the state. Each memorandum outlines the roles and responsibilities of the CASA and CASA supervisor as well as the Child Welfare caseworker and supervisor. In each memorandum, there is a protocol for resolving conflicts. There is also a state memorandum of understanding with the CASA program which is found in Chapter IX: Interagency and Intergovernmental Agreements.

The Memorandum of Understanding outlines ways for the caseworker and CASA to resolve disputes that may arise. This includes the caseworker and CASA first talking openly about the issue. If this discussion does not resolve the issue, then the CASA supervisor and the caseworker’s supervisor are contacted for assistance. If an issue remains, the Child Welfare program manager and the CASA executive director are notified and may participate in resolving the problem.

Procedure

To work co-operatively with the CASA, the caseworker:

I. Reads and follows the memorandum of understanding between the local CASA program and the ODHS Child Welfare district office.

II. Recognizes the party status of the CASA and provides the CASA with copies of information in the Child Welfare case file relating to the child and any other information in the file the caseworker is legally permitted to disclose to the CASA, including the location of the child, pertinent information about the child, and contact information about the family.

III. Provides the CASA with copies of correspondence to the court and materials subject to disclosure.

IV. Notifies the CASA of upcoming hearings, family meetings, staffings, changes in the child’s placement, and any cancellations or changes to upcoming hearings, meetings or staffings.
V. Talks with the parents, guardians and substitute caregivers regarding the CASA’s role and responsibilities and the CASA’s right to contact the child on a monthly basis. These contacts may occur in the child’s home, the substitute caregiver’s home or the adoptive placement. The CASA may have private conversations with the child, but the CASA will always be within ear and eyesight of another adult.

VI. Makes an appointment to meet with the CASA as soon as the CASA is appointed.

VII. Exchanges contact information with the CASA and preferred modes of communication (i.e., telephone call, e-mail).

VIII. Reviews the case with the CASA, including the case history, the safety plan, the conditions for return and expected outcomes, the permanency plan, and the concurrent plan, making sure not to disclose information that cannot legally be shared with the CASA.

IX. Discusses how the CASA and caseworker can work together to achieve safety, permanency and well being for the child.

X. Returns a communication from a CASA within 48 hours.

XI. Shares the caseworker’s court reports with the CASA and receives the CASA court report prior to the court hearing according to local court practice.

XII. Notifies the CASA of any report alleging that a child in substitute care may have been subjected to abuse or neglect, within 3 days of the report being received by Child Welfare. The name, address, and identifying information of the person that made the report may not be disclosed with the notification.

XIII. Shares with the CASA Child Welfare’s determination of a CPS assessment involving an allegation of abuse or neglect in the foster home of the child within 10 days of the determination.

XIV. Notifies the CASA of the following: ODHS/Child Welfare staffings, provider staffings and family meetings relevant to the child; sibling planning conferences; current caretaker committee meetings; and adoption committee meetings. The CASA has the right to participate in these meetings at differing levels as defined by administrative rule. See Chapter V: Adoption and Guardianship for specifics regarding CASA participation in sibling planning, current caretaker committee and adoption committee meetings.

See Chapter V: Adoption and Guardianship for specifics regarding the procedure for CASA review of adoption home studies.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Provides each caseworker with a copy of the district’s memorandum of understanding between ODHS/Child Welfare and the CASA program and ensures the caseworker has read and understands the memorandum.

II. Ensures that the caseworker notifies the CASA of any new allegations of abuse and neglect regarding the child and of Child Welfare’s determination of a CPS assessment involving a child’s foster home within the required timelines.

III. Assists the caseworker in resolving a conflict or dispute between the caseworker and the CASA, including seeking assistance from the program manager when necessary.

Section 6: Service providers and community partners
Service providers and community partners

A. Overview

Service providers and community partners are essential allies in keeping Oregon children safe. Service providers offer treatment programs to help a parent increase their protective capacity and overcome barriers that prevent them from being a safe resource for their child. In addition, they provide Child Welfare and the courts with information regarding a parent’s attendance and progress in treatment. Service providers also help children heal after suffering abuse and neglect.

Community partners assist families by providing options and opportunities for children and parents to develop safe and healthy relationships. Community partners assist Child Welfare by providing information about a family to help caseworkers and the courts make informed decisions about the family.

B. Confidentiality

Much of the information about an individual family in a Child Welfare case file is confidential under state and federal law. The caseworker must protect family information and ensure that service providers and community partners also keep the information confidential.

When working with community partners and service providers, the caseworker will:

I. Obtain a signed authorization from the parent prior to discussing confidential information with a service provider or community partner. (ODHS Form 3010), must be properly completed by the caseworker and signed by the parent to authorize Child Welfare to share information with a service provider or community partner. By law, domestic violence agencies cannot honor mutual releases and must follow their own release of information process.

II. Obtain a signed authorization from the parent allowing Child Welfare to disclose information provided to Child Welfare by a service provider or community partner to the court, all parties to the juvenile court proceeding and their attorneys, and the Citizen Review Board.

III. Remind all community partners and service providers to keep confidential the information disclosed by the caseworker or discussed at any:
   A. Family Engagement Meeting (FEM),
   B. Family Decision Meeting, or
   C. Youth Decision Meeting,

See Chapter 1, Section 4 for more detailed information about confidentiality.

C. Team players

Service providers and community partners are important team members supporting the family and partnering with Child Welfare. By obtaining releases of information, service providers may give valuable information to the caseworker about the parent’s attendance and progress in treatment, and provide updates about the parent’s increased protective capacity. In regard to domestic violence, this is relevant to services for batterers, who are the sources of harm, rather than for the adult victims of domestic violence.
It is important for the caseworker to:

I. Work with the parents to identify any people in the community who have knowledge of the parent and can contribute to the Protective Capacity Assessment.

II. Invite the service providers and any community partners identified by the parent to:
   A. Family Engagement Meetings, and
   B. Family Decision Meetings.

III. Consult with the family about inviting (to the above meetings) other service providers and community partners who may have valuable information and can help identify the needs of the child and parent.

IV. List service providers and community partners in the ODHS electronic information system, including names, addresses and phone numbers.

V. Document phone conversations with service providers and community partners in case notes in the ODHS electronic information system.

Domestic Violence (DV) Co-located Advocate Program

I. Local Child Welfare will meet regularly with the domestic violence agency to plan for the program, implement it effectively and evaluate its success, resolving issues as they arise.

II. Local Child Welfare will designate a primary contact for the DV co-located advocates. This person will orient the DV co-located advocate, educate them about ODHS policies and procedures, answer questions and resolve issues as they arise.

III. New staff should be introduced to the co-located advocate as soon as possible after being hired.

IV. Co-located advocates should be included in staff meetings.

V. Local Child Welfare will make every effort to provide private meeting space where DV co-located advocates can meet confidentially with victims.

VI. Local Child Welfare will create a referral process that best reflects local business practices. Domestic violence victims may be identified and referred by screeners and supervisors during the case assignment process, or may be identified and referred by caseworkers from their existing caseloads. Referrals can come from a variety of sources in Child Welfare, including protective services supervisors, protective services workers, permanency supervisors, permanency workers, and Family Meeting facilitators. The earlier in the case, the better.

VII. During weekly case reviews, focus on the batterer with the relevant community partners and co-located advocate.

Role of the supervisor

I. Ensure caseworkers know confidentiality rules and laws, particularly those related to providing information to community partners and service providers.
II. Encourage caseworkers to gain information about local service providers and community partners.

III. Encourage caseworkers to develop professional working relationships with service providers and community partners who are working with Child Welfare families.

IV. Ensure caseworkers document partner and provider information in the ODHS electronic information system.
Chapter 9
Working With The Courts and External Partners
Section 7: Other Legal Matters
Other Legal Matters

A. Emancipation of a Minor

The caseworker rarely encounters instances when a minor requests emancipation. Since the process of emancipation is a legal process, if a youth requests information regarding the process of emancipation, you:

I. Refer the youth to their attorney to discuss the legal process.

II. Consult with your supervisor about the youth’s request to consider whether the request is in the child’s best interest.

III. Consult with the youth about the feasibility of the plan for emancipation.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consult with the caseworker regarding the best plan for the youth.

Legal Reference

I. ORS 419B.550

B. Criteria for Legal Review by Department of Justice General Counsel

A caseworker can access assistant attorney general (AAG) counsel for questions related to legal issues. Assistant attorney general and paralegal support have been initiated to relieve caseworkers from legal responsibilities, allowing more time to work directly with children and families.

Department of Justice (DOJ) general counsel attorneys advise and consult on pre-jurisdictional matters on specific issues, but do not attend hearings except with DOJ and ODHS Central Office approval. These attorneys do not consult on termination of parental rights cases.

The following are the criteria for general counsel legal review of cases:

I. One-hundred percent legal review

   A. Disagreement of parties: Parties disagree about any law, policy, rule or uniform law and the disagreement keeps the case from moving forward.

   B. Problems with permanency plans: If no one else can facilitate the implementation, if another party opposes or offers a plan that puts a child at risk, or if there are significant legal issues that prevent implementation of the permanency plan.

   C. Contested post-jurisdictional review hearings or permanency hearings.

   D. Contested certification and licensing actions.

II. Discretionary legal review

   A. Transition plan to return to parent and the child is under six years old: Where a child in foster care is under six and the plan is to return the child home to the parent when the jurisdictional basis is parental substance abuse, mental illness, domestic violence or other serious family stressor.

B. Visitation/intervention/reasonable efforts issues: If these issues threaten child safety or prevent the case from moving forward.

C. Certification/licensing/adoption issues: Complex legal or factual issues involving contested matters of certification, licensing and adoption.

D. Alleged agency problems: Allegations of agency misconduct, liability or issues about the scope of agency authority. This may include restricted cases, high profile cases, complex cases or tort claims.

E. ODHS records or information: If ODHS records or information are subpoenaed or otherwise ordered or requested and ODHS is unable to determine whether the disclosure or testimony is permitted by federal, state or administrative law.

Cases not meeting the above criteria may still be referred to an assistant attorney general at your request with the approval of the Child Welfare program manager and ODHS Central Office.

Procedures

When faced with an unresolved legal issue, you:

I. Consult with your supervisor to request assistant attorney general consultation.

II. Meet and consult with the paralegal initially, where available, to provide specific case file information regarding the legal issue. If paralegal services are not available, provide case file information directly to the assistant attorney general.

III. Meet with the assistant attorney general to consult on the legal issue.

IV. Follow the recommendations of the assistant attorney general after consultation to resolve the legal issue.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consult with the caseworker to discuss the legal issue and approve assistant attorney general consultation.

II. Accompany caseworker to consultation with assistant attorney general.

III. Support the caseworker in following the assistant attorney general's recommendations.

C. Intervenor Status

Persons who have emotional ties that create a child-parent relationship may qualify for standing in the juvenile court process initiated by Child Welfare on behalf of the child. Because formally establishing this relationship with the court is a legal process, you must:

I. Advise the person to seek legal counsel about their rights to the proceedings, and

II. Consult with your supervisor and the assistant attorney general to prepare for the hearing should the person file a Motion to Intervene.

If a person files a Motion to Intervene and the juvenile court grants the Motion, the person becomes a party to the case.
As a party, the intervenor may request the court place the child with the intervenor and may request visitation. Other rights the intervenor has are outlined in ORS 419B.875 Parties.

Once the juvenile court has allowed a person intervenor status, you:

I. Meet with the intervenor to assess their suitability if they are requesting the child be placed in their custody.

II. Develop a visitation schedule if the intervenor is requesting visitation with the child, within reasonable guidelines set by the child’s service plan and the court’s order.

III. Consult with your supervisor about any concerns you have about the intervenor’s status and participation in the Child Welfare case plan.

_TIP: Remember relatives of a Stanley putative father are not considered legal relatives in Child Welfare Administrative Rule._

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consult with the caseworker regarding intervenor status and requirements listed in rules and statutes.

II. Authorize AAG assistance in legal matters concerning an intervenor.

D. Rights of Grandparents

When you determine there is a present or impending danger and a protective action or safety plan is initiated, you assess relatives, including grandparents, as participants in safety management or as a placement resource for the child. You also consider other family members, including grandparents, as a part of services and activities related to the Child Welfare case plan, which manages child safety.

ODHS is required to make diligent efforts to identify and obtain contact information for a child or young adult’s grandparents, when a child or young adult is in ODHS custody. Furthermore, ODHS is required to give grandparents (meaning the legal parent of a child or young adult’s legal parent, as defined in ORS 109.119) notice of every juvenile dependency court hearing regarding their grandchild from the point of shelter hearing forward, unless 1) they have been present at court and have already been notified of the date and time of hearing by the court, or 2) the court has relieved ODHS of the responsibility to provide such notice, after making a finding of ‘good cause.’ Child Welfare recognizes the importance of preserving the family ties and relationships of children in our legal custody.

Procedure

To help preserve these relationships and meet statutorily required obligations (419B.875), you will:
I. Diligently search for grandparents and obtain their contact information.

II. Notify grandparents (those who are the legal parent of the child or young adult’s legal parent, as defined in ORS 109.119) of each juvenile dependency court hearing regarding a child or young adult in ODHS custody, from the point of the shelter hearing forward, (whenever the grandparents’ contact information and identity are known, unless 1) they have been present at court and have already been notified of the date and time of the hearing by the court, or 2) the court has relieved ODHS of the responsibility to provide such notice, after making a finding of ‘good cause.’

III. Give grandparents who express an interest in the child information about the child’s background and recommendations about the child’s future. (Note: for this and below bullet points, ‘grandparents’ may also include the legal parent of a putative father who has demonstrated a direct and significant commitment to the child by assuming or attempting to assume responsibilities normally associated with parenthood).

IV. Discuss visitation and communication with the child within reasonable guidelines set by the child’s service plan and the court’s order.

V. Discuss placement of the child with the grandparents if the grandparents want to be a resource and are able to adequately provide safety for the child.

VI. Refer to Chapter 5, Sections 2 and 3 for additional procedures when working with a child’s relatives, including grandparents.

Grandparents who have established a child-parent relationship with a child may qualify for standing in the juvenile court process initiated by Child Welfare on behalf of a child. If you learn this relationship may exist, you:

I. Refer the grandparents to seek legal advice about their rights to the proceedings regarding their grandchild.

II. Consult with your supervisor and the AAG should the grandparents file a Motion to Intervene to prepare for the hearing on the Motion.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Consult with the caseworker regarding rules and statutes related to grandparents.

II. Approve consultation time with the AAG to discuss intervention by the grandparents.

IV. ORS 419B.116 Intervention; caregiver relationship
E. Approval Process for Legal Change of a Minor’s Name Outside of the Adoption Process or Change of a Minor’s Sex Designation

Legal changes of this significance should be carefully considered. Adoption provides an established process for making legal name changes, and we want to ensure that legal name changes outside of the adoption process and legal changes of sex designation also follow a thoughtful process. To that end, we have established a process for these changes that incorporates the expertise and firsthand knowledge of casework staff, the support of supervisors and final approval by the local Program Manager.

Prequalifying Considerations:

- ODHS must have guardianship of a child (0-17 years of age) before it is appropriate for ODHS to act regarding significant legal matters on behalf of a child, and legal changes of name or sex designation are among these.
- ODHS does not take direct action to effect a legal change of name or sex designation for young adults (18 years of age and over) even if ODHS does have guardianship of them. ODHS can, of course, support young adults through the process. Young adults may seek assistance from their attorney or CASA.

Note: If these legal changes are being requested by a transgender youth, please also see Chapter 5, Section 41: “Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity and Expression” for additional information and direction.

How to Support Young Adults During These Changes

- The following are ways ODHS can support the young adult:
  - Do have respectful conversations to ensure the young adult is making an informed decision and understands the significance of the change.
  - Do offer to meet with the young adult and young adult’s attorney to discuss the ramifications.
  - Do consider the benefit of the young adult meeting with a counselor to discuss the change and offer to help arrange counseling if the young adult is interested and counseling is not in place.
  - Do not complete the paperwork on behalf of the young adult. Do encourage the young adult’s attorney to assist with completing the forms and guiding them through the legal process.
  - Do consider filing a motion for waiver of fees on behalf of the young adult, similar to the agency’s request when seeking a name change for a child. The motion, affidavit and order for fee waiver should be drafted and filed by the AAG on behalf of the agency as the young adult would not be in a position to seek a fee waiver without ODHS, unless the young adult’s attorney is willing to draft and file the pleadings.

How Parents Can Make Vital Records Changes for Their Child(ren)

Parents may want to legally change their child’s vital records themselves but may not know how to go about it. ODHS can refer parents to their assigned attorneys and can also provide them with this link to the Public Health Division’s webpage showing how to make vital records changes: https://www.oregon.gov/oha/PH/BIRTHDEATHCERTIFICATES/CHANGEVITALRECORDS/Pages/LegalAmendVR.aspx#birth
This link is provided here only so that ODHS can share it with parents who want to make changes to the vital records of their children themselves. When ODHS will be taking direct action to change the vital records of a child, the procedure below is followed.

Procedure

- When seeking approval for legal changes of name or sex designation of a child (0-17 years of age), you must:

  - Consult with your supervisor to determine whether to request Program Manager approval for the change.

  - Consider the following in preparation for completing the Request for Legal Change of Name or Sex Designation (de2706) form:

    - Has DOJ been consulted about the change?

    - Has the permanency consultant been included in this planning?

    - What is the child’s ability to understand the impact of the change?

    - Has the caseworker met with the child and explained the implications of the change? If not, has another person done so and who is that person?

    - Do the parents support this change, and do they retain their parental rights?

    - Have the child’s attorney, therapist, Tribe, CASA been notified of the change?

    - Will the child’s attorney carry out the legal change?

    - Why is the change in the best interests of the child?

    - How long has the child been in care?

    - What is the age of the child and how long has the child been in the custody of ODHS?

    - How would making the change benefit the child and the child’s case plan or how would not making the change negatively impact the child and the child’s case plan?

    - What is the permanency plan and the status of achieving the plan?

    - For name changes, does the child desire the change? If yes, how do we know? If no, why is the change being pursued and who is pursing the change?

    - For name changes, will the child be taking the last name of a provider, relative or other person known to the child? If yes, what’s the position of that person regarding the name change?

    - For name changes, why does ODHS support making a legal name change rather than an unofficial name change?

    - Be certain to consult with the Tribe when the child is affiliated with a Tribe and document efforts to consult and responses from the Tribe.

    - Email the completed form to Program Manager and supervisor.

    - Respond to any requests for additional information.

    - Document the response from the Program Manager in a case note to provide case file documentation of the decision.

    - Upload the completed request form, with approval section complete if approved, into the OR-Kids File Cabinet.

- If the change is approved, move forward with efforts to effect the change or notify those concerned if the change is not approved.

Role of the Supervisor

- Consult with the caseworker and determine whether to support the request to the Program Manager for approval of the proposed change.

- Consult with the Program Manager regarding the request before authorizing the caseworker to proceed.

- Ensure the caseworker completes the request process.

- Authorize the worker to contact DOJ for assistance, following approval, if the child’s attorney is unable or unwilling to proceed with the change process.

Appendix 9.1: Disclosure to LEA When Individuals Have an Arrest Warrant Disclosure to LEA When Individuals Have an Arrest Warrant

Two state laws including administrative rule apply to disclosure of Child Welfare (CW) information to a Law Enforcement Agency (LEA) when an individual (e.g. parent or a youth) has an arrest warrant.

ORS 659A.212(1) requires public employees to notify either their immediate supervisor or supervisor’s designee, if the employee reasonably believes that an individual receiving services from the state is subject to a felony or misdemeanor warrant for arrest. The statute then requires the supervisor or designated agency to contact and notify the Oregon State Police about the individual who has a warrant.

ORS 409.225, which mirrors federal law, prohibits ODHS from disclosing or using the contents of any CW records that contain information about an individual receiving services for purposes other than those directly connected with the administration of child welfare laws unless required or authorized by statutes addressing juvenile court or CPS records. Oregon administrative rule, OAR 413-010-0065, authorizes a manager or manager’s designee to disclose to LEA an individual’s current address when LEA provides the name and social security number of the individual and the officer satisfactorily demonstrates that the individual is a fugitive felon, the location or apprehension of the felon is within the officer’s duties and the request by LEA is made in line with those duties.

How do these apparently conflicting laws and rule apply to CW practice?

Because federal law supersedes state law, CW is not authorized to initiate a conversation with LEA to disclose information on an individual unless ODHS determines such disclosure is directly tied to the administration of child welfare laws. A CW worker or supervisor might do this, for example, if LEA were investigating or the District Attorney’s office were prosecuting a parent for child sexual abuse and such actions were necessary to protect a child in CW custody.

For individuals who have an arrest warrants, only a CW supervisor or designee can and should disclose the individual’s current address when LEA initiates a request with CW per OAR 413-010-0065 as described above. Not doing so might risk violating the law on obstruction of justice. Internally, CW staff must also notify a supervisor or supervisor’s designee once staff learns an individual has an arrest warrant, however, unless disclosure is directly tied to the administration of child welfare laws, the CW staff, supervisor or supervisor’s designee is not authorized to initiate disclosure of that information to LEA.

Is Child Welfare obligated to notify and/or inform LEA that a parent who has an active warrant is visiting and when they are visiting?

The short answer is “no.” If LEA is the one initiating the request, however, there may be circumstances when CW would be authorized to disclose information about a scheduled visit, such as, for example, when a parent’s “current address” could be interpreted to mean their current whereabouts if the parent is visiting at the time the request is made. Given the complexity of interpreting state and federal statutes, it is highly recommended local CW offices consult with their assigned AAG on a case-by-case basis when LEA requests information about a parent.

In general, CW staff should not interfere when law enforcement is arresting or making plans to arrest an individual. This includes not warning the individual in advance. While LEA decides how and when to make the arrest, it is not considered interference for CW staff to provide suggestions to LEA on how best to minimize trauma to the child as well as to the other individuals involved, including the individual who has the outstanding warrant.

Appendix 9.4: Reasonable efforts principles and expectations
Oregon Citizen Review Board - Judicial Department and State of Oregon’s Department of Human Services

Reasonable efforts principles and expectations

In implementation and finalization of the permanent plan, when the plan is other than reunification.

I. Definitions*

Reasonable: logical; rational; sensible; not extreme or excessive

Effort: conscious exertion of energy or serious attempt (to produce a result or accomplish a goal).

Permanency Plan Goal: i.e. Achieve Adoption; Arrange Guardianship or Legal Custody; Achieve and Maintain Permanent Foster Care; Independence and Emancipation; Other Planned Permanent Living Arrangement.

Plan: the resource services and steps needed to finalize the identified action.

Expectation: expected activities necessary to implement the plan and finalize the permanency goal in a timely manner.

*Definitions are for the purpose of this document only.

II. Creation and purpose of this document

This document is a mutually agreed upon guideline for determining a reasonable efforts finding related to implementation and finalization of a permanent plan other than reunification. It was developed jointly by the State of Oregon’s Department of Human Services and the Oregon Judicial Department’s Citizen Review Board. State and Federal Law requires reasonable efforts be made to implement and finalize the permanent plan whenever children are in substitute care. ORS 419B.476; 42 USC § 671(a)(15)(C). This document is to be used as a tool for training and guidance for child welfare field staff and Citizen Review Board members. Application of these principles and expectations depends on the specific facts of the case, needs of the child and family, and the relationship between the services provided and implementation of

III. Application

The Reasonable Efforts Principles and Expectations outlined in this document apply to the federal requirement for the child welfare agency to make reasonable efforts to place the child in a timely manner and complete the steps necessary to finalize the permanent plan, when the plan is other than reunification. 42 USC § 671(a)(15)(C). This Reasonable Efforts finding shall be based on the permanent plan in effect for the period under review, not a concurrent plan. Application of these principles and expectations depends on the specific facts of the case, needs of the child and family, and the relationship between the services provided and implementation of
Only the services and activities that affect the permanent plan will be evaluated in making the reasonable efforts determination. The adequacy of services will be judged by whether ODHS appropriately addresses the steps necessary to complete the permanent plan and place the child in a timely manner. While some services may be a good idea and some are very important, the reasonable efforts finding is determined based only on the actual services necessary to finalize the permanent plan.

IV. Principles

A. Children need safety, permanency, and well being.

B. Continual effort and a sense of urgency toward finalization of the permanency goal should be evident throughout the life of the case.

C. The appropriateness of the permanency goal will continually be evaluated in relation to the safety, permanency, well being, and attachment of the child.

D. When implementing a permanency plan, focus should include the child’s educational, physical, health, and emotional needs.

E. Reasonable efforts must be made throughout the entire review period. Findings will be based on the timeliness and appropriateness of the efforts made. This reasonable efforts finding must be made for any part of a review period in which the goal was other than reunification.

F. The reasonable efforts finding is made on the documented efforts made by ODHS and is not based on the actions and/or timeliness of another person or organization.

G. Reasonable efforts to implement and finalize the permanent plan requires the case plan to specify the child’s permanency goal and the actions/services that ODHS has provided in order to achieve the permanency goal. Federal and state laws specify that “in making such reasonable efforts, the child’s health and safety shall be the paramount concern.” (ODHS Policy I-E.3.6) ODHS must provide written documentation of the efforts made to provide such necessary services. These efforts must be timely.

V. Permanency Goals (as stated on ODHS form CF305-IIS code sheet)

A. Permanency Plans/Goals for Substitute Care

Achieve adoption: Use this goal when the child is in substitute care and the child cannot be safely placed with or returned to a parent and the designated review body has approved an adoption plan. This goal is appropriate when: 1) The Legal Assistance Specialist has given the worker approval to submit a Legal Assistance Referral; 2) The child is in an officially approved legal risk placement; and/or 3) The child is legally free for adoption and efforts are underway to locate an adoptive home. (ODHS/CAF Policy I-F.2)

- Not all steps below are necessary in every adoption case, nor do they necessarily occur in any sequential manner.
- Don’t wait for “legally free” status to begin/take other steps towards achieving adoption.
Expectations:

I. Legally Freeing (ODHS/CAF Policy I-F.3)
   A. Complete and submit Legal Assistant Referral Packet (LAR) within 30 days of approval.
   B. File TPR Petition within 30 days (ODHS/CAF Policy I-F.3.2) or secure the Relinquishments (ODHS/CAF Policy I-F.3.)

II. Recruitment /Selection
   A. Fully explore any relative with whom the child has a relationship, the current caregivers, or other adults with whom the child has a significant relationship or bond.
   B. Complete child summary packet (ODHS/CAF Policy I-F.3.)
   C. Write and submit the Recruitment Bulletin (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.1.2.)
   D. Convene Sibling planning committee (ODHS/CAF Policy I-F.6/OAR 413-110-0110 to 413-110-0140.)
   E. Complete the Adoption Home Study (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.1.3/OAR 413-120-0190 to 413-120-0240.)
   F. Complete the Committee process (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.1.5/OAR 413-120-0000 to 413-120-0080.)

III. Designation
   A. Submit all documents listed on Designation of Placement for the Purpose of Adoption Policy to CAF Adoptions Unit (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.1.9.)
   B. CAF Adoption Unit issues Designation letter (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.1.9.)
   C. After a child is placed in a legal risk or a designated adoptive placement, complete and submit Putative Father Affidavit (ODHS/CAF Policy I-A.4.3.)

IV. Placement & Supervision
   A. Determination of Adoption Assistance (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.3.1/OAR 413-130-0000 to 413-130-0130.)
   B. Develop and implement Transition plan (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.1.5/OAR 413-120-0000 to 413-120-0080.)
   C. Supervise placement until finalization (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.1.10/OAR 413-120-0800 to 413-120-0830.)

V. Finalization (ODHS/CAF Policy I-G.1.12/OAR 413-120-0100 to 413-120-0115)
   A. Request finalization.
   B. CAF Adoptions Unit issues consent.
   C. Complete and submit affidavit, if applicable, in support of adoption.

ARRANGE GUARDIANSHIP OR LEGAL CUSTODY: Use this goal when the ODHS designated review body has determined or is likely to determine that the child cannot be safely placed with or returned to a parent and adoption is not in the best interest of the child and either:

I. A significant child-parent relationship already exists between the child and a prospective guardian or legal custodian and that person shows interest in assuming legal responsibility for raising the child; or

II. The plan is for a relative(s) to assume legal guardianship or custody of the child.

Expectations:
I. Discuss the plan of guardianship and the various options available to achieve guardianship with the prospective guardian(s). Discuss the plan with the child, child’s attorney, the CASA, and the parent(s) to determine agreement.

II. Staff the prospective guardianship plan with the appropriate SDA committee.

III. Discuss financial considerations and determine if the guardianship is to be subsidized. If so, complete a guardianship assistance application and sign a guardianship assistance agreement. (ODHS/CAF Policy I-E.3.6.2/OAR 413-070-0900 to 413-070-0975.)

IV. Determine how the legal process of finalizing the guardianship will proceed and complete the necessary steps.

B. Planned permanent living arrangement plans/goals

ACHIEVE AND MAINTAIN PERMANENT FOSTER CARE: Use this goal when a relative provider or a foster care provider, paid or unpaid, is specifically named or it is anticipated that they will be named as the permanent caretaker in a court order. The permanent caretaker must agree to raise the child to the age of majority. Permanency goals of return home, adoption or guardianship must be ruled out and documented before this goal can be used. Explain why these goals were ruled out. (ODHS/CAF Policy I-E.3.6.1/OAR 413-070-0700 to 413-070-0750)

Expectations:

I. Identify a resource.

II. Review the requirements, benefits and approval process for permanent foster care with the foster parent(s), and with the child separately.

III. Discuss and give written notification to the legal parent(s).

IV. Discuss permanent foster care with the child’s attorney and CASA.

V. Obtain approval by the permanent foster care review committee.

VI. Develop and obtain a signed agreement between ODHS, the foster parent(s), and the foster child.

VII. Request a court hearing to review and approve the permanent plan and name the permanent foster care parent(s) in a court order.

VIII. Provide any services necessary to support and maintain the placement.

Once Permanent Foster Care is established, face to face contact is every 90 days. (ODHS/CAF Policy I-E.3)

INDEPENDENCE AND EMANCIPATION: Use this goal for a child 16 or older if all other permanency goals have been determined to be inappropriate, a child enrolled in the Department’s Independent Living Subsidy Program (SIND) or a child in the Independent Living Program (YILP and ILPC). Goal justification by documentation is required. (ODHS/CAF Policy I-B.2.3.5/OAR 413-030-0400 to 413-030-0455)

Expectations:

I. Make a referral for independent living services.
II. Complete an independent living assessment.

III. Develop and implement a plan based on the assessment.

OTHER PLANNED PERMANENT LIVING ARRANGEMENT: Use this goal for planned permanent living arrangements other than Achieve and Maintain Permanent Foster Care, Independence and Emancipation.

_______ Goal justification by documentation is required.

_______ Outline steps to achieve a more permanent plan for the child.

Practice options may include:

I. Outline a plan for developing a relationship between the child and adults who can provide continued support to the child.

II. Develop support structures for the child.

III. Document how the child’s special needs are being met.

IV. There is no current policy in regard to PPLA. CRB and ODHS will collaborate to develop policy to identify steps toward achieving permanency. An example would be children in residential care.

Appendix 9.5: Active efforts principles and expectations
Oregon Tribes and Oregon Citizen Review Board — Judicial Department and Department of Human Services

Active efforts principles and expectations

I. Creation and purpose of this document

This document was developed in consultation with the federally recognized Tribes of Oregon by the Department of Human Services (ODHS) and the Citizen Review Board (CRB). The Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) mandates that ODHS make active efforts to provide remedial and rehabilitative services to the family before the removal of an Indian child from his or her parent or Indian custodian, except to prevent imminent damage or harm to the child and to reunify an Indian child with his or her parent or Indian custodian. (1) ODHS, the Judicial Department and Oregon’s nine recognized Tribes came together to create this tool to implement the active efforts mandate of the ICWA. We seek to better serve Indian children and their families through improved collaboration between the State of Oregon and the Tribes.

The following guidelines are offered for use by courts, ODHS staff and local CRBs in evaluating whether active efforts have been made in ICWA cases.

Both ICWA and Oregon law require that any party seeking to remove an Indian child from his or her home must establish that remedial or rehabilitative services were provided to the family to avoid removal of the child. (2) This means that ODHS must make active efforts to provide services subsequent to a CPS investigation and before a decision is made to place an Indian child out of the home. (3) This does not supersede the need for emergency removal to prevent imminent physical damage or harm to a child. (4) Case records should document factual evidence that the conduct or condition of the parent(s) and/or custodian will result in serious physical or emotional harm to the child, and that efforts were made to counsel and change the parent’s harmful behavior and these efforts did not work. (5) The services offered must demonstrate that prior to petitioning the Court for removal of an Indian child, active efforts were made to alleviate the need for removing the child. While active efforts to provide services to prevent the removal of an Indian child are required in all eligible cases, this document directly applies to the active efforts requirement to provide services to allow a child to safely return home AFTER they have been placed in substitute care. Nothing in this document is meant to imply that ODHS is not also required to make active efforts prior to the placement of an Indian child.

The Adoption and Safe Families Act (ASFA) does not supersede the Indian Child Welfare Act. The ICWA has not been modified, limited, or diminished by the ASFA. States are still required to comply with the mandates of the ICWA and ASFA.

The document is to be used as a training tool and a guideline for agency staff, courts and review board members to use in making active efforts findings. This document should not be read as a definition of active

1: 25 USC § 1911 (d); 25 USC § 1922. 2: 25 USC § 1911 (d); ORS 419B.50(2); 419B185(1)(d); ORS 419B.340. 3: OAR 413-070-0160. 4: 25 USC § 1922; OAR 413-070-0140. 5: OAR 413-070-0190
II. Goals

Every effort made with an Indian child and family will be measured against these goals:

A. Commitment to the requirements and the spirit of the Indian Child Welfare Act;

B. Early contact with and active engagement of the child’s tribe. Active efforts does not require or imply agreement on case issues but does create an expectation that the agency and tribes will work closely together in an atmosphere of mutual respect and honesty to achieve understanding;

C. A more vigorous and higher level of effort than those that typically constitute reasonable efforts--Casework which goes beyond
   1. referring for services to arranging services and helping families engage in those services
   2. managing a case to proactively engaging in diligent casework activity
   3. meeting the minimum requirements set by policy to creatively meeting the needs of children and families;

D. Using methods and providing services that are culturally appropriate.

III. Application

The Active Efforts Principles and Expectations outlined in this document apply to the federal and state requirements that ODHS must make active efforts to “make it possible for the child to safely return home” in each case determined to be ICWA eligible. If it is yet to be determined by a tribe whether a child is eligible for membership, according to Oregon law, when a court conducts a hearing, the court shall inquire whether a child is an Indian child subject to the Indian Child Welfare Act .(6) If the court knows or has reason to know that an Indian child is involved, the court shall enter an order requiring ODHS to notify the Indian child’s tribe of the pending proceedings and of the tribe’s right to intervene and shall enter an order that the case be treated as an Indian Child Welfare Act case until such time as the court determines that the case is not an Indian Child Welfare Act case. The court’s determination that a case is or is not an Indian Child Welfare case will be based on information provided by a Tribe.(7)

Only the services and activities that affect the reunification plan are the services/activities to be evaluated in determining whether active efforts have been made. The adequacy of services will be judged by their appropriateness in addressing the needs that caused the child(ren) to be removed from the home.

This active efforts standard applies to the ODHS obligation to provide reunification services to the eligible Indian child and his or her parents or Indian custodians. Oregon law requires that allegations be filed in regard to all legal parents and guardians before the court can assume jurisdiction.(8) The ICWA requires ODHS to provide services and make efforts with biological parents or Indian custodians.

In addition, since the federal and state law mandate that ODHS must make active efforts “to make it possible for the child to safely return home,” services will be made available to all other household members who will be in a caretaker role with the child, whether they have custodial or parental rights or not, since this is the “home” to which the child will be returned.
Chapter 9 • Appendix 9.5: Active efforts principles and expectations

IV. Principles

A. The cornerstone of active efforts is active and early participation and consultation with the child’s tribe in all case planning decisions. (9) Each tribe has its own expectations for active efforts. The facts of each case dictate the level of active efforts required.

B. ODHS should inquire about the applicability of the Indian Child Welfare Act immediately upon a child being taken into protective custody. (10) These efforts must be documented. If the information is not available at that time, on-going inquiries need to be made as the case progresses and more information becomes available.

C. Active efforts cannot be excused under state law definitions for aggravated circumstances or extreme conduct. (11) The health and safety of the child are of paramount concern in every case. (12) In some cases, the return of the child to the biological parent or Indian custodian may result in serious physical or emotional damage to the child. (13) However, every case must receive active efforts, which should include at a minimum, a diligent assessment of the reasons for removal of the child, the risk for further harm of the child, and the ability of the parent or Indian custodian to safely care for the child. Consultation with the Indian child’s tribe is critical to determining what and how active efforts should be provided. (14)

D. Active efforts determinations apply to the entire time period covered by the CRB or court review. ODHS is obligated to make active efforts throughout the review period or until the plan changes to something other than return to parent. Findings will be made based on the timeliness and appropriateness of the services offered. This active efforts finding may be made for any part of a review period in which the goal is Return to Parent. (15)

E. In all ICWA cases, prior to the adjudication of the petition, ODHS is obligated to provide active efforts to offer services to make it possible for the child to safely return home. (16) The parents’ or Indian custodians’ obligation to participate begins when the court makes a finding on the allegations of abuse/neglect and takes jurisdiction. For example, if an adjudication of a petition is delayed because a criminal matter is pending, ODHS has the obligation to offer services to the parents or Indian custodians even though the parents or Indian custodians may choose not to engage in services. When parents or Indian custodians agree to participate in services prior to adjudication of the petition, an active efforts finding will be based on the services provided. When the parents or Indian custodians refuse to participate prior to adjudication, the active efforts finding will be based on the offer of services. Consultation with the Tribe is important in these circumstances. Efforts to engage the child’s tribe should be documented.

F. If ODHS has made the effort to provide a service and another person or entity has not fulfilled their responsibility to provide the services, the active efforts finding should be made based on ODHS’s effort to provide the service in a more creative manner. For example, if ODHS has referred a parent or Indian custodian to parent training and a waiting list has kept the parents or Indian custodian out of the class, ODHS, in spite of the failure of the other person or entity, should make active efforts to find another class, contract with a provider to make the service available, or use some other effective method to make the service available to the parents or Indian custodian.

G. Utilizing Family Decision models (FDM), or other culturally relevant approaches, for case planning creates unique family specific service plans. These plans often specify certain tasks to be done by family members. If those tasks directly affect the reunification and a family member has not completed the task, ODHS will actively assist and support the family in completing the task and document all efforts to do so.

H. Given that a child’s health and safety are the paramount concerns, ODHS has an obligation, in consultation with the child’s tribe, to offer relevant services to all members of the household who will have responsibility to provide care for the child even if the person does not have legal rights to the child. If any household member refuses to participate in services offered the active efforts finding will be made on the offer of services. The child’s tribe should be kept informed of the status of the case on an on-going basis regardless of whether the child’s tribe chooses to intervene or not.

I. In making active efforts to reunify families, if services needed are not readily accessible, ODHS will make active efforts to develop, modify, and coordinate services that will address the conditions and circumstances that are the bases for juvenile court jurisdiction. Access to cultural and tribal services, and frequent face-to-face contact between the worker and the child and family needs to occur.

J. Documentation of all casework activity is important. While this document specifically mentions documentation in certain areas, the best course of action is to document all casework done to achieve a positive active efforts finding.

V. Expectations

There are required steps that must be taken to determine whether or not a child is Indian as defined under the ICWA when in protective custody. Workers must follow the procedures outlined in OAR 413-070-0160 & OAR 413-070-170 and document such steps, in an expeditious manner. Proper notification to the child’s Tribe is required and must be documented. The caseworker is expected to maintain on-going and frequent contact with the child’s tribe.

The following is a list of expected activities in the first six months of a typical case. An effort has been made to place the activities in chronological order beginning with expectations/activities that occur at or before placement and progressing through the 30-day and 60 day points in the life of the case. Some activities are on going. This format is intended for the convenience of the reader only.

A. All legal parties must be identified early in the case. Petitions shall include allegations in regard to all persons having parental or custodial rights to the child. Case plans shall bear a rational relationship to the jurisdictional findings of the court and shall be designed to resolve the issues that prompted the court to take jurisdiction and remove the child from the parents’ or Indian custodian’s home. (17)

14: OAR 413-070-0160(2). 15: ORS 419A.116(2); ORS 419B476(3). 16: ORS 419B.185; 419B.340(1).
B. A ODHS Form 1270 shall be completed by all persons with custodial or parental rights to a child. Relatives shall also be asked about Indian ancestry if one or both parents are unavailable or unwilling to provide the needed information.(18) If any indication of Indian ancestry is made, a diligent search for the child’s tribal affiliation shall be done immediately. If a specific tribe has been named, the child’s tribe should be contacted within 24 hours. Document efforts made to contact the child’s tribe(s).

C. In order to retain an Indian child in foster care, the court must make a determination supported by clear and convincing evidence, including the testimony of an expert witness, or witnesses, that the continued custody of the Indian child by the parent or Indian custodian is likely to result in serious emotional or physical injury to the child.(19) A higher standard of proof is also required at termination of parental rights hearings.(20) The child’s tribe should be consulted as to the selection of the expert witness. If the child’s tribe does not respond, efforts to engage the child’s tribe should be documented.

D. Absent parent searches shall be conducted and documented in a timely manner, beginning as soon after placement as possible.

E. All tribal or ICWA placement preferences shall be followed unless documented good cause to the contrary exists.(21) Every effort shall be made to locate relatives and to support utilization of relative placements. Consultation with the child’s tribe is critical but does not, in and of itself, meet the requirements for a diligent search. Efforts should be clearly documented in the case record.

F. Assessments and services need to be provided in the clients’ primary language.

G. ODHS shall consider the use of a family decision meetings in each case in which a child is placed in substitute care.(22) When ODHS determines that the use of a family decision meeting is appropriate the meeting shall be held, whenever possible, before the child has been in substitute care for 60 days. (23) The child’s tribe should be engaged in this process by receiving notice and by being consulted to determine other potential invitees to the FDM. If ODHS elects not to conduct a family decision making meeting, the reasons for that decision shall be clearly documented in the written case plan of the child.(24) If a meeting is held, ODHS shall incorporate the family plan developed at the family decision making meeting into the ODHS case plan for the child to the extent that the family plan protects the child, builds on family strengths and is focused on achieving permanency for the child within a reasonable time.(25) If the family plan is not incorporated into the ODHS case plan for the child, the worker shall document the reasons in the case plan.(26)

H. Initial service plans and visitation plans should be developed in conjunction with the tribe. The initial service plans shall be written within 60 days of the placement and should include a written visitation plan.(27) Frequent contact among the child, parents, and siblings is imperative to maintain cultural and family ties; unless there is a safety risk or threat of harm to the child.

I. A service agreement or letter of expectation should be done in consultation with the child’s tribe in every ICWA case. Consultation with the child’s tribe and the tribe’s recommendations for services should be documented in the case plan. Simply mailing the service agreement or a copy of the letter of expectation to the child’s tribe will not be considered as active efforts; unless the child’s tribe has not responded to diligent requests. Service referrals should be made immediately upon the entry of the court order or upon parents’ agreement with the service agreement, whichever comes first. In order to achieve active efforts, workers should actively engage with families to help them connect to the services, including but not limited to, providing transportation to those services. Services must be culturally appropriate. Mere referrals to, and monetary expenditures for, services will not constitute an active efforts finding. The worker should check and document the status of service participation and progress and notify the child’s tribe regularly.

J. A culturally appropriate assessment of the child’s treatment needs should be done within 60 days of the placement. ODHS shall consult with the child’s tribe in selecting the assessment resource is critical to ensure a culturally appropriate assessment. The case plan should include clear documentation of any assessment conducted by ODHS.

K. The worker shall make and document efforts to expedite receipt of assessment results. After consulting with the child’s tribe, referrals to culturally appropriate services recommended by assessments and evaluations should be made, in best practice, as soon as possible. As with services to parents outlined in section "V.I," workers shall actively engage the child in the services.

L. In all child welfare cases managed by ODHS, at a minimum the worker shall have face-to-face contact with the family, the child and the provider in accordance with ODHS policy. However, in ICWA cases, because active efforts involves intensive engagement with Indian children and their parents and/or Indian custodians, more frequent contact above and beyond the policy requirements is expected. Documentation of the contacts is required by policy.

Chapter 10: Eligibility

Section 1: Targeted Case Management (TCM)
Targeted Case Management (TCM)

Overview and Introduction

Targeted Case Management (TCM) is a Title XIX (Medicaid) program (OAR 413-050-0600 to 0670). The program provides federal matching funds to states that provide qualifying case management services to their clients. TCM eligibility does not determine or affect the services provided to children, young adults, and families.

TCM services are activities performed by the caseworker to assist a child or young adult in obtaining necessary medical, social, educational, counseling, or other services. TCM claims can only be made for activities that link the child or young adult to a resource that meets an identified need for medical, social, educational, counseling, or other services.

Caseworkers provide case management services daily. By recording the TCM activity in a format that meets federal billing and documentation requirements, we qualify to receive reimbursement for a significant portion of the cost of providing these services.

TCM Eligibility Criteria

Caseworkers provide case management services to all clients on their caseloads. This does not mean, however, that all activities for all clients are eligible for a TCM claim. To be eligible for TCM funded activities, clients under the responsibility of the Child Welfare (CW) division of the Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS) or the Oregon Youth Authority (OYA) must meet the following criteria (as specified in the Medicaid State Plan Amendment (SPA)):

- Not Title IV-E eligible;
- Under age 21;
- Medicaid eligible and enrolled in Oregon’s Medicaid;
- Citizen or legal permanent resident;
- Reside in the state of Oregon;
- In substitute care. This includes children and young adults in shelter care, foster care, group homes, residential treatment centers, subsidized independent living, and paid relative placements; and
- Living in an in-home setting and receiving services from CW.*

*Note that although our State Plan criteria includes claiming TCMs for children and young adults in an in-home setting, CW claims Title IV-E funds for this population, which makes them ineligible based on the first criteria.

Clients who are NOT eligible for TCM services include:

- Those who are IV-E eligible (note that CW claims Title IV-E funds for children or young adults in in-home settings);
• Age 21 and over;
• Not Medicaid eligible and not enrolled in the Medicaid Management Information System (MMIS);
• Non-citizens;
• Living outside the state of Oregon;
• Those receiving services prior to an open case;
• Clients residing in Institutions for Mental Disease and Public Institutions as defined in 42 CFR 435.1010. Residing in a Public Institution refers to an individual who is admitted to reside and receive treatment or services in a Public Institution, provided they are appropriate to their requirements; and
• Clients who are in both an Aging and People with Disabilities (APD) or Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (ODDS) developmental disabilities (DD) paid placement and enrolled in APD/DD medical.

NOTE: APD/DD Services completes TCMs for children and young adults in an APD/DD Placement. If CW inadvertently completes a TCM and APD/DD has also completed a TCM, one will be denied, so we won’t incorrectly claim federal funding.

TCM Certification

All caseworkers and staff documenting TCMs must complete TCM certification training. The TCM training includes:

- Completing the computer-based training (CBT) located in Workday: ODHS-CW -Targeted Case Management (TCM) for Caseworkers; and
- Connecting with the Federal Revenue Specialist (FRS) or another designated person in your local office for additional training.

Upon completion of training, the caseworker or staff documenting TCMs will:

- Contact the Office Manager to request that they enter your TCM certification into the OR-Kids Maintain Worker page, effective on the date training was completed.
- Contact the FRS or branch designated TCM coordinator for ongoing assistance as needed.

OR-Kids will not allow a TCM activity to be recorded or verified by an “uncertified” caseworker or other staff member or for a date prior to their TCM certification date.

Documenting TCM Activities

TCM services are activities performed by the caseworker to assist a client with obtaining necessary medical, social, educational, counseling, or other services. TCM activities must link the child or young adult to a resource that meets an identified need for services. Caseworkers are responsible for documenting these activities and entering TCM claims, provided they have a TCM certification date prior to the date of the TCM activity. When workload makes this difficult, a Federal Revenue Specialist or Social Service Assistant/Case Aide may create the TCM activity based on a case note if the listed worker conducting the activity is the caseworker. TCMs must be verified by the caseworker who conducted the activity, or their supervisor, regardless of who helped enter the claim information on the case.

Entering a TCM

To enter a TCM, the worker launches the TCM module directly from the case note within the OR-Kids case. The module provides a list of participants that are eligible for a TCM on the date that the activity was completed and a list of acceptable TCM activities. The caseworker or staff selects the category and activity from the drop-down menus. A full list with definitions and more information about resources, categories, and activities is available in the TCM Resources, Categories, and Activities section of this chapter. The caseworker or staff then enters a narrative to support that selection.

Text from the case note can be copied and pasted directly into the TCM narrative. The TCM narrative must include:

- Date of service
- Name of provider/person providing the service
- Nature, extent, or units of services
- Place of service delivery
- The first name and person ID of the child or young adult is required but the TCM and case note pages capture this information, so it does not need to be entered into the case note pages.

NOTE: The TCM module includes functionality to automatically copy the same narrative from one child or young adult’s TCM claim to others on the case if you are claiming for multiple case participants.

Verifying a TCM

If the person entering the TCM is the caseworker who conducted the activity, they can immediately verify and create the TCM from within the TCM module.

A supervisor may also enter and verify TCMs on behalf of a caseworker if that worker is no longer available to enter and/or verify it themselves.

If the person entering the TCM is not the caseworker who conducted the activity or their supervisor, they can create the TCM which will add it to the case under the TCM expando. Saved TCMs that have not been verified show up with a status of “Unverified”. Then the caseworker or supervisor will need to navigate to the pending, unverified TCM to review and verify it.

- To verify the TCM, the caseworker or their supervisor will review the pending TCM, mark the “TCM Activity Verified” check box, and click Save.
- TCMs that are verified and saved appear under the TCM expando on the case with the child or young adult’s name, date of service, and the status “Ready to Submit”.
- Verified TCMs are automatically submitted to MMIS during the batch process.

TCMs and Random Moment Sample Survey
If the caseworker documents a TCM activity on the Random Moment Sample Survey (RMSS), they must also document the same TCM activity for the same date they reported it in RMSS. This is done using the same process as described above for entering TCMs. If a TCM has already been documented and submitted for the child or young adult in the same month, the RMSS TCM will also need to be documented as a case note and the TCM checkbox must be marked to help identify the activity. Auditors look for (and expect to find) a match of the RMSS hit in the TCM documentation for that child or young adult.

Important Considerations for TCMs

- Only one TCM claim can be verified and submitted per child or young adult per month for reimbursement.
- A child or young adult must be Title XIX eligible and enrolled in Medicaid to qualify for federal reimbursement. MMIS checks the Title XIX status after a claim is submitted.
- To be able to document a TCM, the date of the activity must fall on or after the worker’s TCM Certification Date.
- Activities provided by the caseworker must be for linking the child or young adult with the appropriate resource to qualify as a TCM activity.
- Providing a service is not the same as linking and is not eligible for Targeted Case Management reimbursement. For example, arranging for transportation of a child or young adult to a therapy appointment is a TCM activity. Driving the child or young adult to the therapist’s office is not a TCM activity.
- If a child or young adult does not meet the TCM eligibility criteria on the date of the activity, the TCM module will display an error message letting you know why a TCM claim cannot be saved or submitted. If you believe the child or young adult should be eligible, review the case information including the child or young adult’s address, age, and IV-E status for the specific date of the activity. A child or young adult may be eligible on another day of the same month. Contact the FRS or designated TCM person at your local office for assistance if needed.
- Sometimes a claim will be denied by MMIS after submission. Review the TCM Claims and MMIS section of this manual for more information and contact the Federal Revenue Specialist for assistance if needed.

Managing TCMs

OR-Kids provides search functionality under the Utility menu to assist the worker in locating and managing their TCMs. To find a list of TCMs needing to be verified, the caseworker will:

- Log into OR-Kids
- Select the Utility menu on the OR-Kids desktop
- Select the TCM Search menu item
- Select the Worker tab
- Enter the dates you want to search
- Select “Unverified” from the Billing Status drop-down
• Select the Search button for a list of TCMs that meet your criteria

• The TCM search can be conducted using the child or young adult’s name or by the caseworker name. For a caseworker looking for unverified TCMs, use the Worker tab on the TCM search page. Enter the caseworker’s last name and first name, or worker ID. Deselecting the “Sounds Like” checkbox narrows your search. Click the Search button.

• Click the radio button next to the correct worker displayed and select the Continue button.

• Back on the TCM search page, leave the date range blank and change the billing status selection to Unverified, and click Search. OR-Kids will display all unverified TCMs for that caseworker.

• OR-Kids will display a list of the caseworkers’ TCMs that need to be reviewed and verified.

• Click the edit hyperlink to open the TCM and click the TCM Activity Verified check box, and then save.

• Saving will change the TCM claim status to “Ready to Submit”. The TCM claim will automatically be sent to MMIS during one of the overnight batches.

The caseworker will be returned to the list of unverified TCMs to repeat the process, as needed.

NOTE: Your options for searching TCMs includes: All, Denied, Expired, Ineligible, Paid, Ready to Submit, Submitted, Unverified, Void and Void Submitted.

Voiding a TCM

There may be times when a TCM needs to be voided. A common example is when a caseworker needs to close a case immediately and the TCM has not been verified, which prevents case closure.

The caseworker or staff member who created the TCM may void it. Here are the steps:

• Click on the case file expando

• Click on the TCM expando

• Click on the TCM hyperlink that you want to void

• Go to the options drop-down box (bottom left corner)

• Select the drop-down box

• Select “Void”

• Select “Go”

• Select “Close”

• Refresh the case to verify that the TCM has been voided

TCM Resources, Categories, and Activities

Resources
A resource is defined as an individual or organization that acts to provide medical, social, educational, counseling, or other services needed by a child or young adult. Characteristics of a TCM resource may be:

- Public or private.

- Formal or informal. For example:
  - Neighbors
  - Family friends
  - Volunteer programs
  - Recreational services
  - Church/religious organizations

- Fulfilling the child or young adult’s specific necessities, such as:
  - Job training
  - Employment
  - Medical/dental care
  - Educational assistance
  - Financial assistance

- Addressing the needs of an abused/neglected child or young adult or a child or young adult from a dysfunctional family. Such services may include, but are not limited to:
  - Counseling services
  - Drug and alcohol services
  - Support groups
  - Child or young adult/parent interaction groups
  - Psychological evaluations

- Providing community support services to the child or young adult, including but not limited to:
  - Child or young adult/parent aide
  - Interpreter
  - Recreational activities
  - Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA)
  - Big Brother/Big Sister
  - Tutor
  - Visiting nurse

NOTE: The child or young adult’s legal parent cannot be identified as a resource because CW is required by federal law to make reasonable efforts to return a child or young adult home after being placed in substitute care and is reimbursed under the Title IV-E funding program for those activities. We cannot “double bill” Title IV-E and Title XIX (TCM) for the same set of activities. Therefore, any activities that are related to reuniting the child or young adult and family cannot be billed as a TCM activity and the “family” cannot be considered a “resource.” (We face significant audit consequences if we bill activities to TCM that properly belong under the Title IV-E umbrella of services.) Extended family members (aunts, uncles, grandparents, etc.) often act as a resource for a child or young adult and can be identified as a “resource” for TCM purposes. They may provide placement, day care, respite care and other assistance for the child(ren) or young adult(s).

TCM Service Categories

The description of each TCM service category below is from our federally approved Medicaid State Implementation Plan. Following each definition is a brief clarifying statement of the service as it relates specifically to a phase in the TCM process. Each of these service categories can be thought of as a phase in the linkage between the child or young adult and the resource needed. These phases are not sequential. They can happen at any time and in any order in the linkage (TCM) process.

TCM Service Category: Assessment & Evaluation Related Services

Description: At assessment and evaluation, the caseworker makes preliminary decisions about needed medical, social, educational, or other services. Service activities may include contacting parent(s) to gather family information, referring the child or young adult to developmental evaluation, and requesting the child or young adult’s medical records.

TCM Service Category: Counseling/Treatment Related Services

Description: The caseworker identifies counseling and/or treatment services needed. Service activities may include consulting with the supervisor to reassess the plan, contacting the child or young adult to discuss counseling, or arranging transportation for counseling.

TCM Service Category: Medical/Dental Related Services

Description: The caseworker will link the child or young adult with appropriate medical and dental related services. Service activities may include consulting with hospital staff regarding a child or young adult’s progress, contacting the caretaker regarding dental needs, or requesting the child or young adult’s medical records.

TCM Service Category: Permanency and Adoption Related Services

Description: The caseworker will work with the child or young adult and other interested parties to develop a case plan to obtain permanency. Service activities may include contacting the caretaker regarding permanency options, consulting with the AG’s office, or attending the sibling staffing.

TCM Service Category: Placement Activities

Description: The caseworker will coordinate placement activities necessary to provide the most appropriate placement for the client. Service activities may include consulting with the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC) program for the child or young adult’s transition, contacting a relative to gather family information, or reviewing the child or young adult’s special needs with a provider.

TCM Service Category: School/Education Related Services

Description: The caseworker will identify school and education needs and coordinate parents, providers, teachers, and other interested parties to connect the child or young adult with the needed services that are the most appropriate. Service activities may include consulting with the school regarding behavioral and emotional issues, contacting the child or young adult for progress in the Independent Living Program (ILP), or consulting with a speech therapist.

TCM Service Category: Miscellaneous Services

Description: The caseworker will connect the child or young adult with other services identified that are needed and appropriate for the child or young adult. Service activities may include consulting with the tribe to reassess the safety plan, contacting the caretaker and the child or young adult to reassess the safety plan, or contacting the child or young adult regarding maintaining a job.

TCM Service Activities

TCM activities are the specific tasks a caseworker performs to link the TCM child or young adult with the resources needed. There are approximately 14 to 22 service activities in OR-Kids for each service category.

TCM Claims and MMIS

After a TCM claim is verified and saved, it is sent to MMIS in a nightly batch and the status will change to “Submitted”. MMIS processes the claims and adds a diagnosis code. This system also looks for duplicate entry of TCMs from CW and other agencies to prevent paying twice for the same client in the same month. MMIS returns a batch with payment status every Monday, updating TCMs to either “Paid” or “Denied” status in OR-Kids. However, any given TCM may take a month or more for MMIS processing.

How to View TCM Status in MMIS

- Login to MMIS
- Select Claims and Search
- Enter the client’s Prime Number into Recipient ID field
- Select Search
- Sort by date – look for date Occurred in the FDOS field. TCMs show up as a Professional NPI Claim. Select between the two fields.
- The claim will be listed as Paid or Denied or Adjusted/Voided
- If it was denied, select the Error code to view the denial reason
