Chapter 1
Introduction
Section 1: Purpose
Purpose

The Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS), Office of Child Welfare (CW) Programs provides guidance in this manual for all ODHS CW professionals. This manual contains best practices for working with families, providers and colleagues. Be sure to apply these best practices to arrive at positive outcomes for Oregon children and their families.

The purpose of this manual, in child welfare service delivery in Oregon, is to:

I. Increase the standard, and
II. Improve consistency.

It does not supersede federal or state administrative rules or laws.

Comprehensive direction is in this manual for caseworkers to know:

I. What a child safety assessments entails, and
II. How to monitor and intervene throughout the life of a case.

The manual is in chapters as listed in the table of contents. Each chapter consists of:

I. Procedures (what and how to do the job),
II. Tip boxes, and
III. Exhibits.

Oregon Child Welfare works with those we describe as children, teenagers and youth. Nevertheless, the term in the manual for all these categories is the word “child.”

Tip

Throughout this manual, CW attempts to answer what and how.

WHAT: More often than not, the “what” outlines requirements in administrative rule (law).

Introduction

Section 2: Vision, Mission and Values
Vision, Mission and Values

Vision

Department of Human Services (ODHS)
Safety, health and independence for all Oregonians.

Office of Child Welfare Programs (OCWP)
Every child and family have a safe and positive environment in which to live and develop.

Mission

ODHS
To help Oregonians in their own communities achieve well-being and independence through opportunities that protect, empower, respect choice and preserve dignity.

OCWP
Improve family capacity to be self-sustaining while creating a safe and permanent living environment for children.

Values

ODHS
Below are the seven Core Values that provide the foundation for how we interact with our clients and coworkers:

I. Integrity
II. Innovation
III. Respect
IV. Service Equity
V. Responsibility
VI. Stewardship
VII. Professionalism

OCWP
Oregon’s child welfare practices focus on each child’s individualized needs for safety, permanency and well-being. The following four core values are the foundation for OCWP’s policies, procedures and practices and guide service delivery to our children, youth, families and communities:

I. Integrity
II. Innovation
III. Respect
IV. Service Equity

Introduction

Section 3: Oregon safety intervention model
Oregon safety intervention model

The Oregon safety intervention model is an overarching process that assesses and manages safety from screening through case closure.

The safety intervention model includes all actions and decisions required throughout the life of a case to:

I. Ensure an unsafe child is protected,

II. Support and encourage the parent(s) to take responsibility for the child’s protection whenever possible,

III. Reconfirm the child’s safety at home or in out-of-home care, and

IV. Establish a safe, permanent home for the unsafe child.

Section 4: Reporting Sensitive Issues
Reporting Sensitive Issues

This procedure outlines:

I. What a sensitive issue is.

II. Sensitive issue identification and reporting process.

The purpose of reporting sensitive issues is to:

I. Bring highly concerning issues to the attention of Central Office when there is no other established process to do so.

II. Identify issues that require a Critical Incident Response Team (CIRT).

III. Prepare for potential inquiries, including from the public or media.

Procedure

I. What is a Sensitive Issue?

“Sensitive issue” means a situation that is:

A. Highly concerning,

B. May pose a potential liability or,

C. Is of emerging public or media interest.

There is some discretion in what a Child Welfare professional determines to be a “sensitive issue”. A sensitive issue report may be completed when Child Welfare professionals in the local office determine a situation may require Central Office review or support. Situations that are always sensitive issues are categorized below and include the following:

A. Child or young adult fatality that comes to the attention of Child Welfare. This includes:
   1. The death of a child alleged to be the result of abuse.
   2. Any death of a child when the deceased child, the deceased child’s siblings or a member of the deceased child’s household was ever the subject of a closed at screening or CPS assessment. This includes a child on an open CPS assessment, open case, receiving in-home services (child protective services or family support services) or in substitute care, and it also includes a child not currently involved with Child Welfare and who may only have Child Welfare history from a very long time ago. The death may or may not be suspicious for abuse, as this includes circumstances when a child dies from a genetic disorder, illness, or accident.
   3. The death of a young adult in the custody of ODHS, in substitute care, or receiving services from Child Welfare.

Note: When the sensitive issue involves the death of a child or young adult refer to the Child Fatality Protocol.

B. A serious physical injury or near fatality of a child or young adult that comes to the attention of Child Welfare.
This includes a child or young adult who is the subject of a new CPS assessment or is a child or young adult on an open CPS assessment, open case, receiving in-home services (child protective services or family support services) or in substitute care when the child or young adult requires medical attention/intervention due to the severity of the injury. A “suspicious physical injury” under Karly’s Law, although requiring medical attention, is different and often is not a serious physical injury. Use the following definitions, from the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, below to distinguish between an injury and a serious physical injury or near fatality:

1. A serious physical injury refers to physical injury which involves substantial risk of death, extreme physical pain, severe and obvious disfigurement, or protracted loss or impairment of the function of a body part, limb, organ, or mental faculty. Protracted loss refers to serious physical injuries that run the risk of prolonged recovery periods, reduced quality of life, and in some cases run the risk of death.

2. Near fatality refers to an act that places the child in serious condition or critical condition as determined by a medical professional.

Note: Contact the child safety consultant assigned to the local office for additional guidance.

C. Allegations involving a resource family. This includes:

2. Allegations of abuse against a resource parent or in the home of a resource parent.

D. Media attention.

1. This includes a situation involving or likely to involve the public, the legislature, or any type of media such as books, magazines, newspaper, television, radio, internet, social media, and gaming.

2. This is specific to media attention that brings attention to Child Welfare. This does not include each time a parent or child is identified in the media when there is no attention to Child Welfare. For example, when a child is recognized for their accomplishments on a sports team this would not be a sensitive issue unless the child was also identified as being in foster care.

E. An additional category of “other” is included for issues that happen less frequently. This includes:

1. Legal actions, such as court orders or potential lawsuits.

2. The death of an adult receiving services on an open CPS assessment or open Child Welfare case.

3. Any significant client concern, such as when you anticipate a client will contact Central Office (advance notice is helpful).

4. Any issue determined by the local office to require Central Office review and support that does not fit in one of the categories described above.

A sensitive issue does not include:

A. Abuse allegations by an ODHS employee when none of the categories described above apply. ODHS policy requires these issues be reported to Human Resources (HR). When the situation involving the ODHS employee falls within one of the sensitive issue categories a sensitive issue report then the sensitive issue report process must be followed.
B. Threats or other security concerns made to ODHS employees or facilities. Security threats must be reported using the threat incident notification system (TINS).

II. Sensitive Issue Identification and Reporting Process

A. Child Welfare professionals or volunteers who become aware of a situation that meets the definition of a sensitive issue must:
   1. Immediately notify a supervisor.
   2. Immediately notify the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline (ORCAH) if the sensitive issue involves:
      ■ A new report of abuse; or
      ■ The death of a child or young adult.

Note: Child Welfare professionals or volunteers may become aware of a sensitive issue through:
   • A phone call
   • An email
   • In person contact
   • A written document, such as a closed at screening or a letter.

B. The supervisor or designee must immediately notify local office leadership as determined by the local office program manager.

C. There are two types of sensitive issue reports:
   1. The sensitive issue report, DHS 0150a, is used for all categories of sensitive issues except when the only applicable category is an allegation involving a resource family.
   2. When the only applicable category of sensitive issue is an allegation involving a resource family, then use the Resource Family Sensitive Issue Report, DHS 0150b.

Note: When the sensitive issue includes an allegation involving a resource family and another category, such as media attention or child fatality, then use the sensitive issue report, DHS 0150a and complete section 3 of the Resource Family Sensitive Issue Report, DHS 0150b.

D. Responsibility for completing the sensitive issue report is as follows:
   1. ORCAH, or the Office of Training, Investigation and Safety if applicable, is responsible for completing initial sensitive issue reports when there is a child or young adult fatality – this includes when more than one category of sensitive issue applies, such as when a fatality is likely to result in media attention.
   2. The local office program manager or designee is responsible for completing all other initial and follow up sensitive issue reports.

E. Completing the Sensitive Issue Report
   1. The Sensitive Issue Reports, DHS 0150a and DHS 0150b, specific to allegations involving resource families, can be found on the ODHS forms server.
   2. Complete all applicable fields in the applicable form, making sure to:
      ■ Check whether you are completing an initial or follow up report.
Include any relevant links, such as to an article.

If there is a related screening report, attach a copy.

Include a brief description of the issue. For example:

- ACLJ news is reporting on an incident of alleged abuse by a resource family. The resource family was videotaped yelling at and striking a five-year-old child placed in their care. Currently no children are placed in this home.
- Parent receiving services on an open CPS assessment died by suicide. Children remain in the home with other parent. Support being provided to family by extended family and Child Welfare.
- Four-month-old infant in intensive care with injuries alleged to be non-accidental. Family was receiving services until six weeks ago. Sibling with grandparent as part of protective action.
- If the issue involves an ODHS employee, include the employee name, agency and position.

When completing the ODHS involvement section, “at time of incident” refers to the date the event took place. This may be a series of behaviors or events and not a singular behavior or event, in which case consider the earliest date in determining how to complete the section.

F. Emailing the Sensitive Issue Report. Email the Sensitive Issue Report as follows:

1. Attach the sensitive issue report, screening report form if applicable, and other relevant documents, such as a police report.

2. Modify the recipients prior to sending the email if:
   - There are confidentiality issues due to the content of the sensitive issue report.
   - The sensitive issue involves an ODHS employee. In this circumstance, regardless of what other sensitive issue categories may apply, send the sensitive issue report to the distribution list created specifically for employee reports in the Outlook address book: Employee.SensitiveIssue@dhsoha.state.or.us
   - Notification by another means is indicated to ensure a more trauma aware approach.

3. Send the sensitive issue report, DHS 0150a, to the Child Welfare Sensitive Issue Distribution List using the email group CW-Sensitive Issue Report Distribution in the Outlook address book (unless the issue involves an ODHS employee, then send to Employee.SensitiveIssue@dhsoha.state.or.us).

4. Send the Resource Family Sensitive Issue Report, DHS 0150b, to the Foster Care Program using the email: ResourceFamily.SensitiveIssue@dhsoha.state.or.us in the Outlook address book (unless the issue involves an ODHS employee, then send to Employee.SensitiveIssue@dhsoha.state.or.us).

5. Copy the following Child Welfare professionals on the email:
   - All applicable program managers. Consider what Child Welfare local offices are impacted by the issue.
■ All applicable district managers. Consider what districts are impacted by the issue.
■ Other relevant Child Welfare professionals.
■ Child safety consultant, permanency consultant and foster care coordinator assigned to the district when applicable.

6. Email subject line.
■ For the Sensitive Issue Report, DHS 0150a, the subject line should read “Sensitive Issue Report:”. After the colon, identify the category or categories of sensitive issue. Categories include:
  • Child or young adult fatality
  • Serious physical injury/near fatality
  • Allegation involving a resource family
  • Media attention
  • Other, if none of these categories apply.
■ For the Resource Family Sensitive Issue Report, DHS 150b, the subject line should read “Resource Family Sensitive Issue Report:”. After the colon identify the district where the resource family is certified.

G. Sensitive issue updates.
1. If there is an open CPS assessment related to the sensitive issue, at a minimum the program manager or designee must complete and email an update to the sensitive issue report or Resource Family Sensitive Issue Report when the CPS assessment is complete.
2. Provide follow-up information when determined necessary or requested.

H. Sensitive Issue Reports are the responsibility of all recipients to review and determine next steps, if any, the tracking of Sensitive Issue Reports will occur as follows:
2. Foster Care Program tracks reports of allegations involving a resource family.
3. Communications Office tracks reports involving media attention.
4. ODHS Legal Unit tracks reports involving legal actions.

I. A Child Welfare professional with a trauma aware approach and trained in Critical Incident Stress Management provides information to leadership in the local office impacted by the sensitive issue to:
1. Acknowledge the circumstances
2. Identify support needs
3. Offer supportive resources
4. Coordinate a support plan if requested

J. Sensitive issue recipients must notify others as needed.

K. ODHS Director or designee must review sensitive issue reports involving child fatalities and assign a CIRT as outlined in administrative rule.

L. ODHS leadership will request a case review or action steps as determined necessary.
Chapter 1

Introduction

Section 5: Confidentiality
Confidentiality

Confidentiality is presumed. All information that identifies an individual client is confidential. The Department may not release or disclose client information, except:

I. As specifically authorized by the client in writing,

II. By federal law,

III. State statute,

IV. Administrative rule, or

V. As ordered by a court.

Confidentiality policies apply to:

I. Child Welfare permanent and temporary employees,

II. Volunteers and contractors of any Child Welfare program who either:
   A. Work at a ODHS site, or
   B. Have access to any:
      1. ODHS database,
      2. Case management software, or
      3. The Outlook email system for the state.

Note:

Get the information you need. If you believe an outside agency, organization or business is incorrectly citing confidentiality laws as a reason to withhold information you need, you may contact the ODHS Privacy Office or your privacy coordinator for help.

Procedure

I. General
   A. Many laws apply to the information that exists in a child welfare file. Information from or documents within a child welfare file can rarely be shared in their entirety.
   B. Use form MSC 2090, Notice of Privacy Practices to let clients know how ODHS may use or disclose their information.
   C. Get a signed authorization, MSC 3010, from the client if there is any question that a release of information is required. Honor and respect the choice and dignity of your client. Do not view this as an obstruction to providing services.
   D. In every way in which information is shared, with or without an authorization, inside or outside of ODHS, take steps to verify the identity of the person receiving the information.
II. Maintaining client records
   A. Keep client records in the normal working areas of a ODHS Child Welfare office.
   B. When not in use, keep client records and information secure.
   C. Stamp copies of information from client records "Confidential" before releasing.
   D. If you mail confidential material, send it “certified” and “registered.”
   E. Retrieve and destroy copies of client information used for ad hoc consultations.

III. Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information – MSC 3010
   A. A client gives written authorization for release of information by completing form MSC 3010, Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information.
   B. Completing the MSC 3010:
      1. Complete this form in person with the client, whenever possible. Doing so helps with:
         - Discussion,
         - Case planning, and
         - To ensure the client understands the form before signing.

         Answer any questions the client has about the 3010. Also, explain the client’s right to request limitations on disclosure of their information.

      2. Use only one record holder per form. The form must include the signature of the individual on the form.

      3. List the specific purpose for which information will be disclosed. Do not disclose information beyond the purpose listed on the MSC 3010.

IV. What if the client refuses to sign the authorization?
   A. Talk to the client to find out what specific objections they have to the release and why. Explain to them, if necessary, how they will benefit. Also explain why it is helpful to the department to be able to receive and share certain information about them.

   B. If the client still does not want to authorize disclosure of their information, explain to the client that is their right. However, you will be requesting a court hearing for help in making that determination.

V. Revocations (or cancellations) of authorizations
   A. Treat a valid revocation the same as a client who refuses to sign an authorization.

   B. Process the revocation in this way:
      1. Write the method and date of the cancellation on the authorization form.

      2. Add the current date (if different from the cancellation date).

      3. Initial the cancellation entry, and

      4. Place the authorization form in the client file.
VI. Requests to restrict use or disclosure of client information

A. Use the MSC 2095, Restriction of Use and Disclosures form, for a client who requests a restriction on use or disclosure of their information.

B. ODHS is not obligated to agree to a restriction. If necessary, seek the court’s help to make this decision.

C. When denying a client’s request, complete the bottom portion of the MSC 2095. Send a copy of the MSC 2095 to the privacy representative.

VII. Use of information within ODHS

Definition: “Program use” refers to:

A. Sharing of client information within the Child Welfare program, or

B. Sharing of information between program staff and ODHS administrative staff that support or oversee the program.

An example of the above is the exchange of information between a caseworker and Central Office Child Welfare staff.

C. Program use of information is permitted without a written authorization from the client.

Definition: “Cross-program use” refers to:

A. Sharing of information about a child welfare client with another ODHS or Oregon Health Authority (OHA) program.

Examples of the above are Self Sufficiency (SS), Health Systems Division (HSD) or Vocational Rehabilitation (VR).

B. Sharing of client information without their authorization is permitted in the following situations.

1. When necessary for the administration of Child Welfare programs,

2. For a mandatory report of child abuse, or

3. When Child Welfare is:
   - A member of the local county multi-disciplinary child abuse team as defined in statute, and
   - The information is necessary for the prevention, investigation and treatment of child abuse.

For all situations outside of the above, you must get an authorization to share information.

Exception: Cross-program use of the following records require written authorization:

A. Health,

B. Substance abuse,

C. Mental health, and

D. Vocational rehabilitation.

In addition, the use of the records is limited to program areas named on the authorization.
VIII. Further disclosure (redisclosure) of information

Definition: Further disclosure means any use or disclosure of information obtained under an authorization form with:

A. Any program in ODHS, or
B. Person or entity outside ODHS not listed on the authorization form, or
C. For any purpose not listed on the authorization form.
D. If information received by the department is confidential or privileged under state or federal law, do not make a further disclosure to another person or entity unless:
   1. The client gives written authorization for disclosure of that information, or
   2. Another exception applies as listed in Section I.
E. If no exception applies, before further disclosure of information, have the client fill out, sign and date an authorization for release of information form (MSC 3010) for that disclosure.
F. Do not share medical records obtained from a third party for cross-program purposes. Also, do not redisclose these records to another person or entity outside ODHS. Exceptions are:
   1. You have permission under the original authorization,
   2. Another exception applies, or
   3. You get a new authorization that covers the redisclosure.

IX. Situations in which a written authorization is not required

Here are some examples:

A. Disclosures necessary to prevent, investigate, or treat child abuse or neglect (do not use this exception to disclose HIV or A&D treatment information.)

B. Disclosures to the Department of Justice (DOJ), law enforcement officers and district attorneys' offices needing information for child abuse assessments, criminal investigations, civil and criminal proceedings connected with administering the agency's Child Welfare programs.

C. Disclosures to members of a child protection team or consultants assessing whether abuse occurred and determining appropriate treatment for the child and family.

D. Disclosure to the public, if a child in the legal custody of ODHS is:
   1. Abducted or missing, and
   2. Is in danger of harm or a threat to others.

Also, if the disclosure is limited to information necessary to:

1. Identify,
2. Locate, or
3. Apprehend the child

Include the child's:

1. Name,
2. Description, or
3. That the child may pose a threat to the public or himself or herself.

E. Disclosure of information when ODHS believes, in good faith:
   1. The disclosure is necessary to prevent or lessen a serious and imminent threat to the health or safety of a person or the public, and
   2. The report is to a person reasonably able to prevent or lessen the threat, including the target of the threat.

As an example, if ODHS believes a person is suicidal, ODHS can release information without authorization to a mental health provider.

Other examples include:

F. If Child Welfare has information that, in your judgment, indicates a clear and immediate danger to another person or the public, Child Welfare must disclose the information to the appropriate authority and the person or entity that is in danger from the child.

G. Disclosure of health or treatment information is being released for the purposes of treatment, payment or health care operations.

H. Information about a specific client released to that client or the client’s personal representative.

I. Disclosure of information to conduct any investigation, prosecution, or criminal or civil proceeding in connection with administering ODHS programs.

J. Disclosure of information for any legally authorized audit or review by a governmental entity in relation to administering ODHS programs, including the Office of Children's Advocate (Governor’s Advocacy Office).

K. Disclosure to DOJ for legal advice.

L. Disclosure of information needed to provide emergency medical treatment, including A&D or mental health treatment.

M. Disclosure when ODHS has a court order signed by a judge. A subpoena is not a court order.

N. Disclosure to DOJ Support Enforcement, to locate children or absent parents, and to establish support for children in substitute care.

O. Disclosure to report suspected child abuse. If necessary, substance abuse treatment information may only be shared within Child Welfare to make an initial report of suspected abuse of a child. Mental health records are not required to be part of mandatory child abuse reporting.

X. Disclosure in common situations

The following provides some examples of common situations:

A. State and federal agencies.
   1. Subject to the minimum necessary standard, client information may be disclosed without a written authorization to state and federal agencies that provide administrative support or oversight to the ODHS program whose information is being disclosed.
B. Alcohol and drug (A&D) and mental health (MH) providers, managed care plans and medical providers.
   1. No authorization is required to provide sufficient information for a referral on behalf of a client.
   2. No authorization is required to provide information necessary for payment activities, including billing and collection.
   3. Obtain an authorization to share substance abuse and HIV information for purposes of treatment. An authorization is not required to share other information for treatment purposes.
   4. Obtain an authorization to receive or provide information for purposes other than treatment, referral or payment.

C. School officials.
   1. An authorization is required to disclose information protected by confidentiality laws such as health, treatment and domestic violence.
   2. No authorization is required to disclose child welfare information if that disclosure is necessary to provide services to the child or family.

D. Meetings with the client with others present such as child safety, family decision and community partner meetings.
   1. Inform the client as soon as possible about the identity of all people in the room and their purpose in being there.
   2. Have a client sign an authorization that lists each person or entity represented in the room and allows the sharing of information for case planning and resolution.

E. Law enforcement.
   1. No authorization is required for mandatory child abuse reports and resulting investigations to make records available (except HIV status and substance abuse treatment information) in any state for a subsequent investigation of child abuse to:
      - Any law enforcement agency, or
      - A child abuse registry.

F. Research.
   1. Obtain approval from the designated Child Welfare manager to approve research requests for the specific person or organization and their research subject before providing access to department records for research purposes.
   2. Do not allow individuals with access to records for research purposes to make a copy of the record.

XI. Requirement to track certain disclosures
A. Use the MSC 2097 form (Disclosures of Protected Health Information) for any disclosures of protected health information (PHI).
B. Log on the MSC 2097 the following disclosures of personal health information:
   1. In response to mandatory child abuse reporting laws to an entity authorized by law to receive such a report.
2. Ordered to be disclosed pursuant to a court order in a court case or other legal proceeding. Include a copy of the court order with the accounting of the disclosure.

3. Provided to law enforcement officials pursuant to a court order. Include a copy of the court order with the accounting of the disclosure.

4. Provided by ODHS staff to avert a serious threat to the health or safety of the person or others.

5. Disclosed for a public record request.

XII. Withholding and redaction of client records

A. Review client records for redaction before access or disclosure.

B. Copy the original record, remove information (black out with permanent marker, use redaction software about other individuals and the other information to be withheld and make a copy of the redacted record to be released.

C. Unless the information is being submitted for an in-camera review, redact the following information:
   1. Names, Social Security numbers, dates of birth, addresses and phone numbers of all third parties.
   2. All medical, mental health, substance abuse and vocational rehabilitation records of anyone other than the individual.
   3. Any records relating to domestic violence

D. If information requested is being withheld, provide a general description of the document or information withheld (e.g., psychotherapy notes of Dr. Jones, June 2003).

XIII. Access by and disclosure to clients, representatives and family members

A. Client access to their own information

Policy
A client who is aged 18 or older or legally emancipated has a right to access most of their records. They will not have access to:
   1. Mandatory reporting party information,
   2. Information that would result in harm to the client or others,
   3. Identifying information about confidential informants,
   4. Criminal investigatory material,
   5. Materials related to pending litigation,
   6. Psychotherapy notes, if a court order prohibits disclosure,
   7. Adoption files,
   8. Mental health records of third parties, and
   9. Other public records law exceptions.

ODHS may require:
1. Reasonable time to prepare records for client review at the local office or disclosure by mail, and
2. A preset appointment time, if a client wants to review their records in person.

Procedure

1. Use the MSC 2093 Access to Records Request form if a client, or personal representative of the client (who has written authorization) requests access to a client case record.
2. The manager or designee shall supervise access to records. The manager or designee must approve in writing the disclosure of client information in each of the following situations:
   - ODHS currently is the child’s legal custodian or guardian, or ODHS was the child’s legal custodian or guardian when ODHS authorized services.
   - ODHS currently is serving the child through an Interstate Compact or other interstate agreement.
   - The child is or was evaluated or provided services as part of a ODHS assessment following a protective service report, regardless of the child’s legal status at the time.
3. A staff person must be present while the client or authorized representative has access to original documents from the case record.
4. If ODHS denies access to health or treatment information because of a good faith belief that disclosure could harm the client or another person, the decision to deny must:
   - Be made by a licensed health care professional or other designated staff, and
   - ODHS must make a review of this denial available to the client. If the client wishes to have a review of the denial, the review must be by a licensed health care professional who was not involved in the original decision. See Client Privacy Rights Policy AS-100-02.
5. Do not permit a person with authorization to review client records to review the complete case file if it contains confidential information about other persons. This includes, but not limited to:
   - Other clients,
   - Ex spouses,
   - Battering partners,
   - Housemates, and
   - Half siblings

The exception is if the other person, in the list above, provides written consent that meets the requirements in policy.

6. You may release the below third-party records to a client or other appropriate person (which includes foster parents) when Child Welfare initiated them for the stated purpose of case planning:
   - Family interaction.
   - Psychological and psychiatric evaluations or exams.

When you have:
A written authorization release from the third-party, and Determined that release of information is in the child’s best interest.

7. Approval of the manager or designee is required if a recipient of Child Welfare records seeks to redisclose these records to another agency or organization. Approval of redisclosure may require written client authorization or verification that an exception to the authorization requirement applies.

B. Family members
   1. Upon the request of the parent or legal guardian of a child under age 18, determine whether any of the following grounds for denial are applicable:
      - The child objects,
      - Disclosure would be contrary to the best interests of any child, or
      - Disclosure could be harmful to the person caring for the child, including foster parents.
   2. Obtain informed written consent from the child if the child is aged 14 or older before release of mental health or substance abuse information to a parent or guardian.
   3. Obtain informed written consent from the child if the child is aged 15 or older before release of general medical information to a parent or guardian.
   4. Obtain informed written consent from a child of any age before release of any information about sexually transmitted diseases or birth control to a parent or guardian.

C. Guardians
   1. Provide a guardian with the same access to the client file as the client in areas the guardian has authority. If unclear, ask to see the order of court appointment.
   2. No authorization is required for subject matter and information over which the guardian has authority. A guardian with full powers would have access to the entire file if the client has such access.

D. Attorneys and CASA
   1. No authorization is required for attorneys of record in any juvenile court proceeding for the child, child’s parent or child’s guardian.
   2. No authorization is required for a court-appointed special advocate (CASA) in any juvenile court proceeding.

XIV. Protecting the identity of child abuse reporters
   A. Protect the name, phone number, address and any other identifying information of any person making a report of child abuse.
   B. Do not disclose a report, record or findings of an assessment of child abuse until the assessment is completed.
   C. Child Welfare determines when the protective service assessment is completed. The district attorney determines when a criminal investigation is completed.
   D. Remove the identity and identifying information of the person(s) making a report of suspected child abuse before releasing records.

E. Disclose the name, address or other identifying information to a law enforcement officer or district attorney to complete an investigation report of child abuse.

XV. Disclosure of alcohol and drug treatment information is greatly restricted

Policy

Federal laws about the sharing of alcohol and drug treatment information sets those records apart from others in how ODHS staff handle them. A client has the right to authorize use and disclosure of A&D treatment information to:

A. ODHS, or
B. A specific program within ODHS, such as Child Welfare or Self-Sufficiency, or
C. A specific person (name or title).

A&D treatment information may only be used for the specific purpose listed on the MSC 3010. A client has the right to informed consent when filling out the MSC 3010. Federal laws prohibit redisclosure of A&D treatment information without the specific authorization of the client.

Procedure

A. Inform the client they may authorize the use of A&D treatment information to ODHS or may limit disclosure to a specific program such as to the Office of Child Welfare Programs.

B. Honor the client’s control of their A&D treatment information, even if ODHS pays for the A&D evaluations or treatment.

C. You must get a client authorization before you share protected A&D treatment information. Do so, even in response to a request from any of the following:
   1. Assistant attorney general,
   2. Local district attorney, or
   3. Other legal representatives who are legal parties to child welfare cases. This includes:
      - When part of the preparation of “reasonable efforts” documentation, and
      - When meeting with legal representatives to formulate and review potential language for allegations that may be heard in court proceedings.

D. Refer a requestor of protected A&D treatment information to the federal law regarding A&D information (www.access.gpo.gov/nara/cfr/waisidx_04/42cfr2_04.html) and advise them a court order or a signed MSC 3010 is required.

E. During a hearing, ask the judge to issue a court order to allow release of protected A&D information if the judge concludes it is:
   1. Essential to child safety, and
   2. Necessary for accurate presentation of safety risks, or
   3. Formation of allegation language for formal petition.
XVI. Domestic Violence

Policy

ODHS Child Welfare cannot disclose records and reports compiled under the child abuse reporting law if the sole purpose of the disclosure is to:

A. Provide services to, or
B. Protect an adult domestic violence victim.

Any disclosure must be linked to:

A. Protecting the best interests of the affected child, and
B. Necessary for either ODHS to administer its Child Welfare services, or
C. For assessing, preventing or treating child abuse, or
D. Protecting children from child abuse.

Procedure

A. Be mindful of safety issues for clients who are in domestic violence situations. If there is any likelihood an abuser may access the file, proceed with caution.

B. Before obtaining signed consent, discuss with the adult victim what information may be shared and what might happen with that information, including what could be included in a court document the perpetrator may access. Explain the victim’s confidentiality rights and the limits to those rights. Safety concerns may take precedent over confidentiality.

C. Obtain signed release of information consent forms that specify to whom the information will be released and the type of information.

D. Restricted case designation should be used when cases involve an ODHS Child Welfare or ODHS Self-Sufficiency employee or contractor as an alleged perpetrator or participant. In addition, restricted case designation should be used when allegations of abuse, domestic violence, serious misconduct involve an ODHS volunteer, representatives of the Legislature, or political figures as alleged perpetrators. For further information see the OR-Kids Business Guide.

E. Follow legal and narrative guidelines to protect address confidentiality in case narratives and court documents. Inform victims what information will be included in the case file and what will be part of the court record the perpetrator may access.

F. Based on the facts of the case and CPS worker’s professional opinion, the worker may invite the advocate to the initial assessment to measure, prevent or treat child abuse.

XVII. HIV and AIDS

A. Comply with ORS 433.045(3) and do not reveal to any person or agency that a client is HIV positive without a written client authorization. On the MSC 3010 form, the authorization must specifically identify HIV test results in Section B and be initialed in the correct box below Section B.

B. Obtain written consent of the HIV positive or a court order before disclosing HIV information when planning a court hearing or in open court.
C. Take extra steps to hold HIV test results in strict confidence to avoid casual or inappropriate disclosure of information.

D. Maintain information on a client's HIV status in a locked file separate from the case.

E. Within Child Welfare, inform only those directly involved in case planning and who have a need to know, that a child or an adult who has a significant role in the child's plan, has AIDS or is HIV positive. Determine who has a need to know through a staffing.

F. Advise all persons who have access to the medical information of their duty to safeguard and keep the information in strict confidence.

XVIII. Foster care – information going to foster parents

A. Provide foster families with enough information to ensure effective care for physical or mental health needs.

B. If a foster parent is responsible for providing services, the foster parents may have access to client information required for case planning or to support casework.

XIX. Adoption and adoption assistance cases

Policy

Adoption records are confidential. Finalized adoption records are sealed and can only be opened as described in ORS 109.425 and ORS 109.500 or by court order. Identifying information from adoption files may be given to:

A. An adult adoptee, or

B. An adult genetic sibling (aged 21 or older), and

C. A birth parent when they have met the legal requirements of:
   1. The Voluntary Adoption Registry in ORS 109.425 to 109.507, and
   2. OAR 413-120.

D. Disclosure of these records is permitted by court order or to:
   1. An adult adoptee, or
   2. An adult genetic sibling, and
   3. A birth parent when they have met the legal requirements of the Voluntary Adoption Registry in ORS 109.425 to 109.507.

Records and information obtained or created by Child Welfare to determine eligibility or make payment for adoption assistance are confidential.

Procedure

A. The adoption manager or designee may approve the release of non identifying information to the child or the adoptive parents or their designee to provide information about the child's early history or familial history.

B. Do not disclose or release identifying information to anyone about the birth parents of a child who is placed for adoption. This includes any information that will link the child to the birth family or the birth family to the child.

C. Do not reveal the whereabouts or new identity of a child to anyone seeking information about the child by their birth name, except as otherwise provided by law.

D. Do not disclose information about adoptive placements.

E. Do not use or disclose information obtained or created by Child Welfare to determine eligibility or make payment for adoption assistance except those directly connected with the administration of the adoption assistance program.

F. Only the Central Office adoption staff will have access to files with information about adoption assistance.

XX. Criminal records, law enforcement records, police reports

A. A police report on a closed child abuse investigation becomes a part of the Child Welfare file. Only ODHS (not law enforcement) has the authority to release a police report connected to a closed child abuse investigation.

B. Information from a police report on a closed child abuse investigation is kept in the case file and may be released to all parties connected to a Child Welfare case.

C. A police report on a closed investigation of an adult can only be released by law enforcement or with law enforcement’s approval.

D. Information reports from the Law Enforcement Data System (LEDS) are for review only and are never to be placed into a Child Welfare file.

E. Do not disclose the record of an arrest or the report of a crime when there is a clear need to delay disclosure for a specific investigation. This includes a need to protect someone who made the complaint or the victim.

F. Do not disclose criminal investigatory material and information that would identify confidential informants. Disclosure requires authorization from both law enforcement and the branch manager or designee.

XXI. Juvenile court documents in Child Welfare files

Definition: The juvenile court legal file includes the summons, the petition and all papers in pleadings, motions, orders of the court and other items filed with the court.

Policy

The following information in the file of the juvenile court is not confidential and must be disclosed upon request:

A. Name and date of birth of the child,

B. Basis for the juvenile court’s authority over the child, and

C. Date, time and place of any juvenile court proceeding in which the child is involved.

Procedure
A. Determine if the information is considered confidential.
B. Determine if the requestor is a permitted recipient of the information.

XXII. Subpoenas and Court Orders

Policy

A subpoena is not a court order. A judge signs a court order. An attorney signs a subpoena. The Department must comply with a court order to provide testimony or documents unless the Department is able to persuade a judge to amend or rescind the order. The Department must file written objections in response to a subpoena within 10 days or less or appear in court to present objections (or convince the attorney to drop the subpoena). A subpoena alone does not require testimony or release of documents. If the time to object to a subpoena is not waived, there must either be a court order or a valid written authorization from the client for the Department to release documents or provide testimony.

A. Follow or legally dispose of court orders and subpoenas originating in Oregon.
B. Date stamp any subpoena, summons or other order received in a Child Welfare office. Immediately deliver to the designated person who reviews and decides needed follow-up.
C. Respond to orders within the allotted time.
D. Report all orders, including juvenile orders for access to Child Welfare client records, to the supervisor.
E. Notify a supervisor when you receive a summons or subpoena in non-juvenile civil matters or criminal proceedings,
F. Notify the court immediately when the time to respond to a court appearance is less than 24 hours or otherwise is unreasonable (e.g., travel distance or other major scheduling problems), and ask to reschedule. Contact your AAG if the scheduling problem cannot be resolved.
G. Contact the AAG immediately if served with notice to appear and give a deposition.
H. When the case worker is subpoenaed to appear before a judge, at least one of the following must be true to testify or release client information in a judicial proceeding:
   1. The proceedings are directly connected with administering a Child Welfare case, or
   2. A judge directs you to provide the information.
I. If a subpoena directs the case record or you to provide documents or appear in a deposition, an attorney's office or in an administrative hearing where a judge will not be present:
   1. Contact the AAG and fax a copy of the subpoena to the AAG. Check the client file to see if the client has signed an authorization to release information to the attorney and fax any releases that may apply. Note that a release in the file may not cover the scope or purpose of the request.
   2. The Department may file written objections or seek to quash the subpoena. If only documents are requested, do not provide them without a court order or valid written, client authorization or specific direction from the AAG.
   3. If a subpoena for your testimony is not quashed, the person subpoenaed should appear as directed by the AAG.
J. Immediately talk to a supervisor if a worker or the case record is subpoenaed for a grand jury and:
1. The proceedings are not directly connected to administering the department’s programs, or
2. The client has not given written authorization for the release of specific information.

K. Notify a supervisor and contact an AAG when:
1. Served with a motion and order to show cause why the person should not be held in contempt of the court.
2. An order or subpoena appears to conflict with the rules or the best interest of a client.
3. Questions of child rights, confidentiality, proper service or court authority arise.
4. Asked to provide records to attorneys which contain information harmful to a child if the attorney released it to their client. The AAG or district attorney determines whether to request a protective order restricting the attorney from further releasing the information.

L. When required to testify or present records, which are confidential or exempt from disclosure, consult with your supervisor to determine the need for a consultation with the AAG.

Role of the Supervisor

I. Inform employees about the duty to preserve the confidentiality and privacy of client information consistent with law and policy.

II. Verify employees are familiar with ODHS privacy policies and Child Welfare confidentiality policies and procedures, and employees attend required training sessions on these topics.

III. Evaluate whether to approve the release of investigatory information compiled for criminal law purposes.

IV. Evaluate whether AAG consultation is necessary in the handling of subpoenas or other legal motions.

V. Evaluate releases of information to the elected officials and media, in consultation with Central Office staff.

TIP:
You can process an oral alcohol and drug (A&D) treatment information revocation. For all other information, the revocation request must be in writing.

TIP:
You may never release any information about a Child Welfare case to a member of the media or an elected office (or their office) without supervisory approval and notification of the ODHS Communication Office. Supervisory and administrative staff, not individual caseworkers, handle disclosures about Child Welfare cases outside the agency.
Chapter 1

Introduction

Section 6: Cultural Competency
I. Definition: ODHS defines “Cultural competence” as the process by which individuals and systems respond respectfully and effectively to people of all:
   A. Cultures,
   B. Languages,
   C. Classes,
   D. Races,
   E. Ethnic backgrounds,
   F. Disabilities,
   G. Religions,
   H. Genders,
   I. Sexual orientation, and
   J. Other diversity factors in a manner that:
      1. Recognizes,
      2. Affirms, and
      3. Values the worth of:
         ■ Individuals,
         ■ Families, and
         ■ Communities, and protects and preserves the dignity of each.

Operationally defined, it is the integration and transformation of knowledge about individuals and groups of people into:
   A. Specific standards,
   B. Policies,
   C. Practices, and
   D. Attitudes used in appropriate cultural settings.

The purpose of this is to increase the quality of services, thereby producing better outcomes.

To be culturally competent requires more than having knowledge of certain cultural groups. It is the ability to:
   A. Understand cultural differences,
   B. Recognize one’s own potential biases, and
   C. Transcend differences to work productively with people whose cultural context is different from one’s own.

II. Application of cultural competence to casework practice

   A culturally competent Child Welfare professional can use information about a client’s culture and respectfully:
A. Work with families,
B. Develop a helping relationship,
C. Formulate a case plan, and
D. Offer culturally sensitive services.

If you do not understand the meaning of a cultural behavior, miscommunication and misinterpretation may occur. One can inadvertently offend a family if the social rules of the culture are not known. The disrespect communicated by lack of adherence to the culture’s social rules can interfere with a relationship.

III. Developing culturally competent helping relationships

When you work with families from cultures different from your own, there are important principles to consider. These principals ensure the services CW provides are helpful and appropriate. It is important for you to examine your own attitudes and belief system. Know that those may affect your decisions and practice. If you understand your own culture and personal biases it will help you to understand cross-cultural issues. It is vital for you to view situations without assumptions, judgments and expectations. As a caseworker, you need to be able to approach and interact with family members in culturally appropriate ways. Also, to respect the cultural practices and values of the families with whom they interact.

All people share common basic needs. However, there are differences in how people of various cultures meet and place priority on those needs. Differences can be as important as similarities. A behavior or interaction may be different than what you may be familiar or comfortable with. However, it doesn’t mean that it is less correct.

There are specific actions and behaviors you can practice that support culturally competent exchanges. They include:

A. Do not assume you know which family member you should speak to first. That varies from culture to culture. If you make a mistake in whom it should be, it may interfere with the information you receive. Find out which family member(s) you should address first. For some cultures, it is important to know and address that family member and get their approval. If you ignore this, it could result in your being alienated. Also, it could possibly communicate unintended arrogance on your part. For example, in some cultures, the female is responsible for interaction with you. The male, who is dominant, sits, listens and observes. In this example, you would address the female, However, she may continue to glance at her husband to figure out his opinion of the conversation. One approach of how to handle this is to request direction from the family.

B. Ask the clients how they would like you to address them. Ask about this early in the interview. Clients may perceive you as disrespectful and impolite if you refer to yourself and them by first names. You may introduce yourself as follows: “Hello, Mr. or Ms. ______; I am first name, last name.” Do not assume you know the ethnic identity of a person. Ask the client or family members how they identify themselves culturally or ethnically. People from the same ethnic group may identify themselves differently. For example, the below terms have individual meaning and importance for people of similar cultural and ethnic backgrounds:

1. Hispanic
2. Latino or Latina
3. Chicano or Chicana
4. Mexican, Mexican National and Mexican-American

C. Be aware of your body position. Also, think about the amount of distance between you and your client. You will need to determine an appropriate distance.

D. Be aware of touch. In some cultures, strangers do not touch each other. This can include a handshake. Some cultures recognize a firm and strong handshake as a sign of respect. However, other cultures (e.g., Native American) respect a soft handshake. Some cultures perceive a firm handshake as a sign of aggression or uncouthness. Other cultures do not believe in any physical contact in public. This makes a handshake an unwelcome greeting.

E. Know that your client may perceive eye contact differently than you expect. In some cultures, eye contact is an indication a connection has been made. This may be to them how a relationship forms. In these cultures, a lack of eye contact is a lack of trust or indicates dishonesty. In other cultures, direct eye contact is a lack of respect or arrogance. Be aware of and examine your perceptions about eye contact.

F. Graciously accept or know how to tactfully decline an offer of food or refreshments. In many cultures, the custom is to offer food and refreshments to others. This often takes place before any formal conversation. If you need to decline, make sure you do so in a respectful way. If you have diet restrictions, talking about them can be a tactful way to decline. If the food or refreshment doesn’t look good to you, keep your thoughts to yourself. Also, avoid facial expressions that suggest disapproval.

IV. Family members’ skills, strengths and dysfunction within a cultural context

Identifying strengths suggests underlying values. Family strengths within a cultural context must be appreciated. If one values individuality and self-assertion, then the ability to take charge would be considered a strength. In cultures that highly value group harmony, the ability to negotiate and come to consensus would be considered a strength. In a group where only certain members of the family make the major decisions, the ability to gracefully accept the decision without protest may be considered a strength. A trait must be measured by its efficacy within a specific cultural context.

What may not appear to a Child Welfare professional as a strength in a particular situation may be considerable within the family’s cultural context. Unless the child welfare professional recognizes this, a behavior may be a lack of adaptability and general dysfunction. In fact, it may indicate the person has adapted well within her subculture, even though her behavior may be problematic. Such assessments are complicated by what appear to be the benefits of assimilating into the larger culture. For example, a Child Welfare professional may want to explain the advantages of individuality and self-reliance to survive in our competitive, technological and economic environment. The Child Welfare professional must realize, however, that a family’s feet may simultaneously be in more than one culture and must accept the family’s right and need to behave accordingly.

Dysfunction also must be viewed within a cultural context. Dysfunction literally means something does not work in a situation. Dysfunctional behavior refers to behavior that creates and maintains problems rather than solving them.

For a family member to feel a trait or an attribute is a skill, it must be something valued by the culture. You may not recognize a family’s strength or skill unless you assess it in context. For example, a family may feed a child a diet of beans and rice. This is a resourceful way to provide maximum nutrition and avoid hunger on a very limited budget. Out of context, a person may view the trait as laziness or unwillingness to prepare creative and well-balanced meals.

Being culturally competent also requires knowing the issues associated with acculturation and assimilation, as well as being aware of how individuals may differ along these dimensions. In all cases, determine the extent to which the guidelines are true for the current family. Do not assume these conditions are true simply because the family is a member of a specific ethnic group. You must avoid stereotyping.

Summary

No Child Welfare professional can ever know all that is relevant about every cultural group. Interaction with families is itself a learning process; as is the process of becoming culturally competent. Keys to cultural competence are:

A. Respect for differences,
B. Curiosity about learning to understand another’s point of view,
C. Skill in observation and other indirect and direct ways of learning, and
D. Willingness to consider and incorporate differences in interactions with others.

Introduction

Section 7: Rights
I. Client Rights

Clients involved with ODHS Child Welfare are entitled to certain rights. It is your responsibility to inform the client of their rights when it is decided that services will be provided. Clients are entitled to the following:

A. To apply for any service provided by ODHS Child Welfare,
B. To receive courteous and fair treatment by ODHS staff,
C. To refuse services that have not been ordered by a court, or requested by the client
D. To nondiscriminatory treatment regardless of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, age, citizenship, political affiliation, language, marital status and disability.
E. Persons with a disability are entitled to receive material in alternate format (large print, computer disc, Braille, audio tape or oral presentation).
F. To have communication held in confidence except:
   1. When the client has signed a release of information that authorizes the disclosure to specific organizations,
   2. When communication with other parties is necessary to administer ODHS programs,
   3. When you are directed to testify in a civil or criminal court about the client, or
   4. When in your judgment a child presents a specific and immediate danger to another person or the public.

II. Language Interpretation

Friends and family (including children) may not be used for interpretation. When there is need of an interpretation or translation service, call one of the services (see appendix) to see if they can do the interpretation or translation.

   A. If the needed service is a translation, the worker faxes a CF 0010A to the translation agency.
   B. If the needed service is interpretation, the worker arranges with the agency the days and times, etc.

III. Rights of Foster Parent

ODHS values the importance of foster parents in the lives of children. Foster parents need to be an integral part of planning for the child and should be included in the child’s team.

Role of the caseworker:

When a child is placed in a foster home, you will need to provide information to the foster parent about the child. This can be done on the CF261 Placement Information form, Residential Care Referral or other form to provide (at minimum) the following information:

A. Child’s legal name, date of birth, name of child’s parent(s), reason why the child is being placed into substitute care, legal status of child, religious and cultural preferences.
B. Who may have contact with child, the visitation and family contact plan.
C. Any known medical needs, medications and allergies, any mental health concerns or needs, immunization records, health insurance information and family physician, if known.
D. Educational information for the child, current school, grade, teacher(s) name. Information that may contribute or prevent the child from attending the same school or re-enroll in a neighborhood school.

E. Case plan for the child and anticipated timeline for providing the substitute care service.

F. The assigned caseworker’s name and telephone number, and an after-hours emergency phone number.

You will need to notify the foster parent of court hearings, CRBs and treatment reviews for the child. Keep the foster parent aware of the legal status of the case.

Value the foster parent’s significant knowledge about the child since they live with the child day-to-day. Support and communicate with the foster parent on a frequent basis.

Role of the supervisor:

The supervisor emphasizes the importance of foster parents to casework staff. The supervisor’s number is to be given to foster parents to contact if they have any concerns they feel are not the caseworker.

IV. Rights of Relatives

ODHS recognizes the importance of preserving the family ties and relationships of children in the legal custody of ODHS. Relatives are important to a child’s sense of identity and belonging. Relatives who express an interest in a child have a right to provide information about the child’s background and make recommendations for the child’s future. Relatives have a right to communicate and visit with a child in ODHS legal custody within reasonable guidelines as set by the child’s service plan and by the court.

ODHS will consider placement with relatives in preference to persons the child does not know if there is reason to believe the child’s relatives will be able to provide appropriate care, stability and security for the child.

Role of the caseworker:

A. Work with relatives of the child to gather information about the child,

B. Seek out placement resources, and

C. Determine if it is in the best interest of the child to visit with their relatives.

Role of the supervisor:

Ongoing case consultation.

V. Rights of Individuals with Disabilities

ODHS Child Welfare is required to adhere to the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. This includes following non-discrimination policies, ensuring equal access and opportunity to services and providing reasonable modifications to services and procedures at all times while working with individuals with disabilities.

Child Welfare recognizes that Disability is diverse. Individuals with disabilities must be treated on a case-by-case basis consistent with the facts and objective evidence of their particular circumstances. Individuals and cases involving individuals with disabilities must not be evaluated on the basis of stereotypes, bias, or discrimination.
Individuals with disabilities must be afforded meaningful access to all Child Welfare administered programs to the same extent as individuals who do not have disabilities. In order to provide meaningful opportunity, Child Welfare may be required to make reasonable modifications in its typical program delivery, design and procedures. Individuals with disabilities must not be held to a different standard than individuals who do not have a disability. Extra barriers or processes must not be required for individuals with disabilities that are not placed on persons without disabilities. Some common examples include:

- CPS assessments or cases involving individuals with disabilities should not be kept open longer than those that do not involve an individual with disabilities once safety has been determined.
- Individuals with disabilities should not be assumed to be unsafe or incapable because they use accommodations or supports to perform tasks differently from individuals without disabilities.
- Existing supports the individual with disabilities uses, or could make use of, must be considered when evaluating the individuals functioning, abilities, and protective capacities.

Who is an Individual with a Disability?

This section applies to all individuals involved in the Child Welfare program including, but not limited to parents or caregivers, children, foster providers, and adoptive placements.

A qualified individual with a disability is any person who:

- Has a physical or mental impairment which substantially limits one or more of such person's major life activities;
- Has a record of such an impairment; or
- Is regarded as having such an impairment.

The ADA and Section 504 also protects family members or others associated with an individual with a disability. For example, an adult parent without a disability caring for a child with a disability must be accommodated so they are not penalized or do not suffer negative consequences for engaging in the necessary caretaking needs for a child with a disability.

What is a Major Life Activity?

Major life activities are those functions that are important to most people’s daily lives. This includes impairments that are episodic (come and go) or in remission but would substantially limit a major life activity when active.

Examples of major life activities include but are not limited to:

- Caring for one’s self
- Walking
- Seeing
- Hearing
- Speaking
- Eating
- Breathing
- Working
- Going to school
- Performing manual tasks
- Learning

Major life activities also include major bodily functions such as immune system functions, normal cell growth, digestive, bowel, bladder, neurological, brain, respiratory, circulatory, endocrine, and reproductive functions.

Once known, reported, or regarded as having a disability, the individual may request reasonable modifications in order to allow for participation in Child Welfare programs and services.

Many physical and mental disabilities that may interfere with an individual’s ability to participate in programs administered by Child Welfare may not be readily apparent without disclosure by an individual or an individual assessment. Some examples may include seizure conditions or mental health diagnoses.

Reasonable Modifications in Programs and Services, Removal of Barriers, and Auxiliary Aids and Services

ODHS must provide reasonable modifications to afford a qualified individual with a disability an equal opportunity to participate in, and receive the benefits of available services, programs, or activities. Through initial communication or ongoing engagement with an individual, the caseworker may offer support or assistance in the form of reasonable modifications. Reasonable modifications include but are not limited to:

- Modification of programs, deadlines, rules, policies, and practices.
- Removal of architectural, communication, or transportation barriers.
- Provision of auxiliary aids and services necessary for a person with a disability to obtain public services.
- Access to supports to allow meaningful participation in programs and services.
- Consideration of supports the individual with a disability already utilizes.

All disability related barriers or limitations and all reasonable and necessary modifications must be noted in the electronic case file in a location easily identified by any ODHS staff that accesses the file. This is to ensure modifications will be provided in all instances, including when cases are transferred, or the assigned worker is unavailable. This information must be reported when the individual or case is referred to another ODHS entity or staff person.

When an individual has provided a signed release of information, information about disabilities and reasonable modifications, this information must be shared by the caseworker when a referral is made to another agency or entity and modifications will be needed to ensure the client can access services from that agency or entity. If the other agency or entity is unable to make the necessary modifications for their services. The caseworker must assist with coordinating these requests and shall document if any modification request is unable to be met by the outside agency or entity without ODHS assistance.

Reasonable Modification Examples

The lists below are examples of reasonable modifications and are not all-inclusive.

General examples of reasonable modifications may include:

- Giving a person more time to meet deadlines or requirements, or to engage in time-limited activities, when possible.

- Allowing a person to do an activity in another place, manner, or timeframe.
- Assisting a person in an activity or class, or ensuring the person receives information in a way that is accessible to them.
- Allowing a relative, friend, or support person to assist a person in an activity or program.
- Allowing a modification or additional supports in a class or program to allow the person to meaningfully participate.
- Allowing a person to get treatment or services before requiring a person to do an activity.

Specific examples of reasonable modifications include:

- Assisting a person in filling out an application.
- Assisting a person in getting documentation.
- Allowing for home visits or telephone contacts rather than in-office meetings, when possible.
- Rescheduling appointments for documented disability related reasons, when possible.
- Allowing a relative, friend, or support person to accompany and assist the person at an appointment, at meetings with ODHS caseworker, at court or other legal hearings, etc. with a signed release of information.
- Allowing additional time to get documents, attend training or complete services.
- Allowing relatives, friends, or support persons to receive copies of important notices or information, with a signed release of information.
- Providing support services to assist a person in participating in services or programs, such as trainings or class activities.
- Allowing for settings that are accessible to persons with mobility impairments.
- Allowing a different training or provider that can accomplish the same goals in a more accessible or appropriate manner for the individual.

Auxiliary Aids and Services

Auxiliary aids and services include, but are not limited to, qualified language or sign language interpreters, written material, translated material, note pad and pen, note-takers, materials in alternative formats (including Braille, large print, audio tape, CD, email, etc.) and video relay or TTY services for persons who are deaf or hard of hearing. Information about how to obtain alternative formats may be found in the Language Access Services Guide Page 12 for ASL, Video Relay Services and Page 13 for requesting alternate format through ODHS/OHA Publications. If you have additional questions reach out to the ADA Coordinator.

Notification of Right to Request Reasonable Modifications

If an individual discloses a disability, or if the worker feels a modification may be necessary for participation, the worker will inform the individual it is their right to request a reasonable modification. If an individual does not disclose a disability upon initial contact, ODHS staff, should ask individuals if they need assistance due to a disability in the form of a modification and provide examples of what assistance may look like. The caseworker will be responsible to follow up with the individual who requested the modification. If no disability is reported, no disability is otherwise obvious, no modification is requested, or a modification is refused,
ODHS may not be responsible for providing a modification.

Child Welfare staff are expected to inform individuals that disclosure of disability information is voluntary, and the information may be shared pursuant to the administration of the Child Welfare program. While all requested modifications will be considered on a case by case basis, Child Welfare is only required to provide extra help or services or modify procedures to accommodate a disability of any individual when the disability is disclosed or known. In instances when the disability may be obvious, the caseworker should inquire about whether or not the individual needs a reasonable modification.

Examples:

A. An individual may request a change in time of group meetings for which there is no alternative time. There is no obligation by the worker to identify an alternative option for the group meeting, until or unless the individual later reports the need for the change is for a disability. However, it would be best practice to inquire about the reason for such a request to identify any needed modifications, disability related or not, which may offer other alternative opportunities for attending a similar meeting.

B. An individual may request to have a relative, friend, or support person present during meetings and to assist with communication, information processing or retention. Unless there are safety reasons to deny the specific relative, friend, or support person to accompany the individual, this should be permitted as best practice, whether there is a reported disability or not, if a release of information has been signed.

Identifying Necessary Modifications

When a potential disability has been reported and the disability is unknown, the individual must be offered an in-depth assessment by a qualified professional to identify the nature and impact of the disability and need for the level of modification. Child Welfare staff will provide assistance with scheduling these appointments, which may include, but are not limited to, mental health assessments and medical specialists, occupational therapists, or others, depending on the potential disability.

Individuals who choose not to be screened or assessed cannot suffer any consequences for that choice and any reasonable modifications requests for these individuals must still be honored, unless Child Welfare staff can demonstrate that making the modifications would fundamentally alter the nature of the service, program, or activity.

Any time an obvious barrier to successful program participation exists the caseworker will provide additional assistance, even if a disability has not been diagnosed. If documentation of a disability is required for a modification, assist the individual with obtaining the documentation when possible by scheduling appointments or providing additional reminders to attend if needed.

Many individuals with disabilities and/or their caregivers face multiple barriers and require interventions by a multiplicity of agencies and programs, ODHS will take necessary steps to ensure their disability is not a barrier to service delivery and coordination.

Each Child Welfare district office is responsible for identifying local available resources and ensuring all staff with public contact are aware of the resources available that may be offered to an individual with disabilities, together with local referral protocols and procedures. The date, time, and specifics of all referrals and assistance provided by ODHS must be recorded as a case note in the individual’s case file.
Worker Responsibilities

Discuss individualized needs and requests for modifications at initial contact with case participants and again whenever there appears to be a barrier to a specific service or program, including ongoing communication. A request for modification is any verbal or nonverbal communication a reasonable person would interpret as a request for help, or a statement that a program requirement is difficult for the person to accomplish, because of an actual or potential disability.

Any individual who has a disability or is associated with an individual with a disability is not required to use specific words or phrases such as “reasonable modifications”, “ADA”, or “disability” to prompt a worker’s obligation to document, consider, and provide a reasonable modification.

ODHS workers, in consultation with their supervisor, are responsible for arranging for the modification to be fulfilled, when needed. If the worker is unable to accommodate an individual’s disability, the worker must request the assistance of their program consultant and/or the ADA coordinator. Reasonable modification requests must be fulfilled, or an alternative modification offered, and those modifications provided as soon as possible if accepted. This means in a reasonable time based on the modification being requested and in time to prevent an individual from being denied an equal and meaningful opportunity to participate in and benefit from the ODHS administered programs.

Workers may not deny a request for modification or provide a modification different than the modification requested without consulting their supervisor, program manager and the ADA coordinator.

If a request for a modification is denied or a different modification is approved other than the one requested, the worker must inform the client in writing (orally as needed) about the action taken on the request for modification, the reasons for the action taken, and the rights to file a complaint in accordance with the ADA. The notice shall include contact information for the Governor’s Advocacy Office. This decision, reasons, and information about the notice must be documented in the case file as a case note.
Chapter 1
Introduction

Section 8: Client complaints and reports of discrimination
I. Client complaints
   A. Effective Feb. 1, 2006, the Children, Adults and Families Division adopted the Department of Human Services procedure on Filing a Client Complaint or Report of Discrimination, DSH-010-005-01.
   B. This procedure is available at www.ODHS.state.or.us/policy/admin/exec/010_005_01.htm.
   C. This procedure replaces all previous policies and procedures dealing with client complaints or grievances, either informal or formal.

II. Nondiscrimination on the basis of disability for programs, services and activities.
   A. Effective Feb. 1, 2006, the Children, Adults and Families Division adopted the Department of Human Services procedure on Nondiscrimination on the Basis of Disability for Programs, Services and Activities, ODHS-010-005.

III. Contested case hearings

A contested case hearing is an administrative legal proceeding. It is like a courtroom trial, although usually somewhat less formal. At the hearing information is gathered to determine if the department properly made a prior decision. An impartial administrative law judge:

   A. Conducts the hearing,
   B. Examines the evidence, and
   C. Issues a written order to:
      1. Affirm,
      2. Modify, or
      3. Reverse the department’s previous decision.

Contested case hearings can cover a variety of child welfare subjects. They may relate to:

   A. Adoption assistance*
   B. Foster care†
   C. Guardianship assistance‡
   D. Criminal history,§
   E. Child caring agency licensing, and
   F. Contractor overpayments.||

ODHS-designated assistant attorneys general represent Child Welfare in contested case hearings.

Any time a hearing is requested:

   A. Do something! The request for hearing is the first step of a sometimes long, (sometimes not so long) legal proceeding.* The proceeding may have tight, fixed time constraints for:
      1. Processing requests
      2. Filing documents
3. Assembling case files
4. Setting hearings and so forth.

Failure to move the request through the system quickly may forever harm the legal position of the department, the client, or both.

A. Tell your immediate supervisor when you receive a request for a contested case hearing.
B. Immediately contact the Central Office manager for the program in which the hearing has been requested.
C. Cooperate with the assistant attorney general (AAG) or an assistant when preparing the case.

Do not put a hearing request aside to deal with it later. Deal with it now!

Everything action to the client is potentially important to the hearing. Once the contested case ball is rolling, it all gets a lot more important. Be very careful to:

A. Save everything in both the paper file and the electronic file. The AAG will not be able to make good decisions in the case if information is missing. Do not conceal evidence.
B. Organize both the paper file and the electronic file. Organized files help you when you are interviewed by the AAG, participating in a deposition or testifying in the hearing.

Use of eSignatures

Employees Use of eSignatures

Employees may use eSignatures via Adobe or the Surface Pro stylus to sign documents such as the Authorization for Disclosure (MSC 3010), court reports, letters and case planning documents. Note: If a court report or other document is eFiled, employees will type “s/” on the signature line then type their names following the forward slash. Also, documents that must be notarized may not be eSigned.

Client and Resource Family Use of eSignature

Employees may have clients or resource families eSign documents in the worker’s presence using the worker’s Surface Pro stylus. Note: Documents that must be notarized may not be eSigned.

Remote Use of eSignatures With Clients and Resource Families.

While the preferred practice is to have eSignatures completed in the presence of the employee, clients or resource families may eSign remotely if reasonable steps are taken to ensure the identity of the person providing the eSignature and the accuracy and completeness of the document. When obtaining a signature from a client or resource family remotely take the following steps:

- Confirm the preferred email address of the client or resource family;
- Prior to sending the document requiring signature, send an email and request a reply to confirm receipt by the intended signer;
- Verbally describe the document, its purpose, how to complete it and provide an opportunity for questions;
- Prepare the document:
  - Complete most of the information the signer is not required to complete before emailing it to reduce the chance of needing to correct errors;
  - In addition to the signature line and places where we ask the signer to add information or initials (e.g. authorizing release of mental health and drug and alcohol treatment information on the MSC 3010), consider leaving the DOB for the signer to fill in to indicate the intended person is completing and signing;
  - Highlight the fields you want the signer to complete;
  - In the case of the MSC 3010 being eSigned by a client, Cc the client’s attorney;
- Once in receipt of the completed and eSigned document review it to ensure it is accurately completed, the date of birth if requested is correct and the eSignature reflects the name of the intended recipient;
- Take one of the following two steps to further confirm the intended recipient signed the document:
  - Contact the intended recipient directly to confirm they signed the document; or
  - Send a confirmation email acknowledging receipt of the document and invite them to contact the employee with any questions.

See Appendix 1.1: Remote eSigning by Smart Phone for a guide to using email and smart phones to eSign documents remotely.
Chapter 1

Appendix 1.1: Remote eSigning by Smart Phone
Remote eSigning by Smart Phone

This is a guide to demonstrate how to prepare a document for signature and the steps the recipient must follow to complete the document, eSign and return via email using a smart phone. The example below is specific to a request for a person to complete the Authorization for Disclosure (MSC 3010).

Note: Documents that must be notarized can’t be signed remotely and documents that will be eFiled are “signed” by typing “s/Firstname Lastname.”

Step 1- Fill out the Authorization for Disclosure (MSC 3010) with the person’s name, person’s provider information (or other information sharing entity) and ODHS contact information. Consider leaving the DOB for the signer to fill in to increase the likelihood the intended person is completing and signing the form. Be sure to indicate what specific information should be disclosed, if there is a time limit to obtain information, the purpose of the exchange and whether information will be mutually exchanged.

Step 2- Click the “Printer icon” or “Print” tab

Step 3- Click drop down tab next to “Printer” -> Seen below in Step 4

Step 4- Click "Microsoft Print to PDF"

Step 5- Click “Print” Note: The document will not actually print, but it will save as an editable PDF. Save to your desktop

Step 6- Open the saved authorization that you saved to your desktop

Step 7- Click “Fill and Sign” to add “x” marks and/or highlight text to indicate where you want the person to complete, initial or sign. Be sure to indicate you want the person to initial the “Mental Health” and “Drug & Alcohol Treatment” sections.

Step 8- Click “Save” and it will save all your changes

Step 9- Email MSC 3010 to the person following the steps laid out in Chapter 1 – Section 9: Use of eSignatures, Remote Use of eSignatures With Clients and Resource Families.

What the Person Will Receive:

There is a pen in the right corner, person taps the pen. They will be able to move the document in and out or up and down by using 2 fingers to expand on the screen of the smart phone.

Once the person taps on the pen in the right corner, they can choose the color and size of font they want to use.

Person then initials and signs the document using their finger to sign on their phone screen.

Click “Done” and it will prompt signer to “Reply all” it will then be emailed to all parties included in the original email.

Fatality Protocol

Definitions

Abuse: Refer to the Identifying and Selecting Abuse Types section of this procedure for the definition of abuse and guidance on how to interpret and apply the definition.

Caregiver: A caregiver means a guardian, legal custodian, or other person acting in loco parentis, who exercises significant authority over and responsibility for a child or young adult. A caregiver is an adult who has primary and/or daily responsibility for the supervision, care and protection of a child. This can include parents, stepparents, adoptive parents, relatives, companions of the child’s parent/caregiver, or any adult who is judged to have and continues to have direct responsibility for a child’s supervision, care and protection.

Child: "Child" means a person who: (a) Is a person under 18 years of age; or (b) Is under 21 years of age and residing in or receiving care or services at a child-caring agency or proctor foster home.

Child care: Child care means the care and supervision of a child, on a regular basis, unaccompanied by their parent or guardian, in a place other than the child’s own home, with or without compensation.

(a) A Registered Family Child Care Home, which is the residence of a provider who has a current Family Child Care Registration at that address and who provides care in the family living quarters.

(b) A Certified Family Child Care Home, which is a child care facility located in a building constructed as a single-family dwelling that has certification to care for a maximum of 16 children at any one time.

(c) A Certified Child Care Center, which is certified to care for 13 or more children, or a facility that is certified to care for twelve or fewer children and located in a building constructed as other than a single-family dwelling.

(d) A Regulated Subsidy Provider, which is a child care provider that is exempt from Office of Child Care licensing and that receives subsidy payments for child care on behalf of clients of the Department.

(e) Other facilities that are operating as a Registered Family Care Home, Certified Family Child Care Home, Certified Child Care Center, or Regulated Subsidy Provider without a license when a license is required by the Office of Child Care.

Child-caring agency: is defined in ORS 418.205 and:

(a) Means any private school, private agency, private organization or county program providing:

- Day treatment for children with emotional disturbances;
- Adoption placement services;
- Residential care including, but not limited to, foster care or residential treatment for children;
- Residential care in combination with academic education and therapeutic care, including, but not limited to treatment for emotional, behavioral or mental health disturbances;
- Outdoor youth programs; or
- Other similar care or services for children

(b) Includes the following:

- A shelter-care home that is not a foster home subject to ORS 418.625 to 418.645;
- An independent residence facility as described in ORS 418.475;
- A private residential boarding school; and
- A child-caring facility as described in ORS 418.950.

(c) Child-caring agency does not include:

- Residential facilities or foster care homes certified or licensed by the Department under ORS 443.400 to 443.455, 443.830 and 443.835 for children receiving developmental disability services.
- Any private agency or organization facilitating the provision of respite services for parents pursuant to a properly executed power of attorney under ORS 109.056. For purposes of this paragraph, "respite services" means the voluntary assumption of short-term care and control of a minor child without compensation or reimbursement of expenses for the purposes of providing a parent in crisis with relief from the demands of ongoing care of the parent’s child;
- A youth job development organization as defined in ORS 344.415;
- A shelter-care home that is a foster home subject to ORS 418.625 to 418.645; or
- A foster home subject to ORS 418.625 to 418.645.
- A facility that exclusively serves individuals 18 years of age and older; or a facility that primarily serves both adults and children but requires that any child must be accompanied at all times by at least one custodial parent or guardian.
Child Protective Services (CPS): "Child protective services" (CPS) means a specialized social service program that Child Welfare provides on behalf of children or, when applicable, young adults who may be unsafe after a report of abuse is received.

Circumstances Surrounding the Maltreatment: Information concerned with what was going on when the maltreatment occurred. This information assists in addressing why maltreatment happened in a family.

Clinical Supervision: Clinical supervision is individualized to explore employee strengths, biases and ethical dilemmas with attention toward social inequalities such as race, gender bias, poverty, oppression and use of authoritative power. Clinical supervision enhances clarity, confidence and competency in staff members while achieving the safety and wellbeing of children and families and focusing on engagement and inclusion of family voice.

Collateral Contacts: Collateral contacts are individuals whom Child Welfare may contact regarding an allegation of abuse. Collateral contacts are typically used at screening when:

- There is insufficient information to make a screening decision and there are individuals who can provide first-hand information necessary to determine the appropriate Child Welfare response.
- The reporting party does not have the information necessary to locate the family and the information meets the criteria to assign.

CPS Assessment: "CPS assessment" means an investigation into a report of abuse pursuant to ORS 419B.020 or ORS 418.258 that includes activities and interventions to identify and analyze safety threats, determine if there is reasonable cause to believe abuse occurred, and assure safety through protective action plans, initial safety plans, or ongoing safety planning.

CPS Supervisor: An employee of Child Welfare trained in child protective services and designated as a supervisor.

CPS Worker: An employee of Child Welfare who has completed the mandatory Child Welfare training for CPS workers.

Department: The Oregon Department of Human Services.

Designated Medical Professional: As described in ORS 418.747(9), a physician, physician assistant, or nurse practitioner who has been designated by the local multi-disciplinary team and trained to conduct child abuse medical assessments (as defined in ORS 418.782), and who is — or who may designate another physician, physician assistant, or nurse practitioner who is — regularly available to conduct these medical assessments.

Diligence: Diligence refers to conscientiousness apparent in all aspects of intervention with respect to thoroughness, timeliness, availability, and responsiveness.

Domestic Violence: A pattern of coercive behavior, which can include physical, sexual, economic, and emotional abuse that an individual uses against a past or current intimate partner to gain power and control in a relationship.

Duplicate Information: A report received that describes the same incident, incident date, alleged victim, alleged perpetrator, and allegation(s).

Educational Provider:
• A school district, as defined in ORS 332.002
• The Oregon School for the Deaf
• An educational program under the Youth Corrections Education Program
• A public charter school, as defined in ORS 338.005
• An education service district, as defined in ORS 334.003
• Any state operated program that provides educational services to kindergarten through grade 12 students
• A private school

Extent of Maltreatment: Information concerned with maltreatment and the immediate physical and psychological effects it has on a child. The extent considers what is occurring or has occurred and what the results are (e.g., hitting, injuries, or trauma).

Family Support Services: Calls are made to the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline to request placement, request independent living services, request post legal adoption and guardianship services, or request for voluntary services. These categories of services are referred to as Family Support Services (FSS) and may be referred for an FSS assessment.

Former Foster Child: A person under 21 years of age who was in substitute care at or after 16 years of age, including substitute care provided by federally recognized tribes, and had been in substitute care for at least 180 cumulative days after 14 years of age.

Guardian: An individual who has been granted guardianship of a child or young adult through a judgment of the court.

Harm: Any kind of impairment, damage, detriment, or injury to an alleged victim’s physical, sexual, psychological, cognitive, or behavioral development or functioning. "Harm" is the result of abuse and may vary from mild to severe.

Health Care Provider: A health care provider is a licensed independent practitioner involved in the care and delivery of infants, including:

- A physician as defined in ORS 677.010;
- A nurse practitioner, including nurse-midwives, certified under ORS 678.375 and authorized to write prescriptions under ORS 678.390; or
- A naturopathic physician licensed under ORS Chapter 685.

Household: The “household” is an association of persons who live in the same home or dwelling and may be related by blood, adoption, or marriage or may be unrelated persons residing in the same home or dwelling as the child.

ICWA: Indian Child Welfare Act

Incident: A single occurrence of a behavior, condition or circumstance reported to a screener which, if true, could constitute abuse, present danger or impending danger.

Indian Child: Any unmarried person who is under age 18 and either:
• Is a member or citizen of an Indian tribe; or

• Is eligible for membership or citizenship in an Indian tribe and is the biological child of a member or citizen of an Indian tribe.

Initial Contact: The first face-to-face contact between a CPS worker and a family. The "initial contact" includes face-to-face contact with the alleged victim, their siblings, parent or caregiver, and any children and adults living in the home; accessing the home environment; and gathering sufficient information on the family conditions and functioning to determine if present danger safety threats or impending danger safety threats exist.

LEDS: Law Enforcement Data System, the computerized criminal history information system maintained by the Oregon State Police.

LEDS Notice: A written statement hand-delivered to the subject individual or sent via U.S. mail to their last known address informing the subject individual of subsections (a) and (b) of this section. "LEDS notice" does not imply consent or permission of the subject individual.

• Child Welfare may conduct, or has already conducted, criminal records checks.

• The subject individual has the right to obtain a copy of their LEDS record and challenge the accuracy of the information in the record through the Oregon State Police procedures outlined in OAR 257-010-0035.

LEDS Representative: The staff person in Child Welfare who has been designated under OAR 257-015-0050(5) and who has completed the training required by the Oregon State Police to train other employees to be LEDS users.

LEDS Operator: A staff person in the local Child Welfare office who has been trained by a LEDS representative and has been certified by the Oregon State Police to access LEDS information.

Medication Assisted Treatment (MAT): Medication assisted treatment is the use of FDA-approved medications, in combination with counseling and behavioral therapies, to provide a “whole-patient” approach to the treatment of substance use disorders.

Multi-disciplinary team (MDT): A county child abuse investigative team as defined in ORS 418.747.

ODDS: The Office of Developmental Disabilities Services within the Department.

ODDS Licensed Group Home: A 24-hour residential program and setting for children and adults with intellectual or developmental disabilities.

ODG: ORCAH Documentation Guide

Ongoing Services: The system of intervention that comprises additional assessments, activities, practices, and decisions that are intended to serve unsafe children; ensure unsafe children are protected; and restore caregivers to their protective roles. The Protective Capacity Assessment and On-Going Protective Capacity Assessments are the components in the intervention system that address the required changes and facilitate restoring caregivers to their protective role.

OR-Kids: Oregon’s Child Welfare electronic information system

OTIS: The Office of Training, Investigations and Safety within the Department’s Shared Services.
OYA: Oregon Youth Authority

Parent: The biological or adoptive mother or the legal father of the child. A legal father is a man who has adopted the child or whose paternity has been established or declared under ORS 109.070, ORS 416.400 to 416.465, or by a juvenile court. In cases involving an Indian child under the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA), "parent" means any biological parent of an Indian child, or any Indian who has lawfully adopted an Indian child, including adoptions under tribal law or custom or a father whose paternity has been acknowledged or established under tribal law, recognized in accordance with tribal custom, or openly proclaimed to the court, by the man, the Indian child’s family, the Department of Human Services or an adoption agency. "Parent" also includes a putative father who has demonstrated a direct and significant commitment to the child by assuming or attempting to assume responsibilities normally associated with parenthood, unless a court finds that the putative father is not the legal father.

Participant: A person listed in the screening report who has an identified role in the family or situation. Includes legal parents, household members, adult children residing in the home, alleged child victim, other children in the home, alleged perpetrator, and caregivers who reside outside the family home.

Plan of Care: A written plan for a substance affected infant and the infant’s family, focused on meeting health needs and substance disorder treatment needs and developed in collaboration with the family, the healthcare provider, community agencies and Child Welfare when appropriate.

Pre-Adoptive Family: An individual or individuals who:

- Has been selected to be a child’s adoptive family; and
- Is in the process of legalizing the relationship to the child through the judgment of the court.

Proctor Foster Home: A foster home certified by a child-caring agency that is not subject to ORS 418.625 to 418.470.

Protective Custody: Custody authorized by ORS 419B.150.

Racial disproportionality: The underrepresentation or overrepresentation of a racial or ethnic group at a particular decision point, event, or circumstance, in comparison to the group’s percentage in the total population. American Indian and African American children are affected by disproportionality in Oregon.

Reasonable Suspicion: A reasonable belief, given all of the circumstances, based upon specific and describable facts, that the suspicious physical injury may be the result of abuse. Explanation: The belief must be subjectively and objectively reasonable. The circumstances that may give rise to a reasonable belief may include, but not be limited to, observations, interviews, experience, and training. The fact that there are possible non-abuse explanations for the injury does not negate reasonable suspicion.

Report: Information provided to a screener in which the screener must document and determine whether the information constitutes a behavior, condition or circumstance that places a child at risk or constitutes an allegation(s) of abuse as defined in ORS 419B.005 or, when applicable, ORS 418.257.

Reporter: An individual who makes a report.

Response Timelines: This refers to the time frame to initiate the CPS assessment and is determined by the reported family behaviors, conditions and circumstances that represent within 24-hour, within 10-business days response or within 72-hour.
Safe: Children are considered safe when there are no Present or Impending Danger safety threats, or the caregivers’ Protective Capacities control existing safety threats.

School Administrator: The principal, vice principal, assistant principal, or any other person performing the duties of a principal, vice principal, or assistant principal at a school, as defined in the Teacher Standards and Practices Commission (TSPC) OAR 584-005-0005.

Screener: A Child Welfare employee with training required to receive information and requests at the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline and assess the information and requests to determine Child Welfare’s response.

Screening: Screening is the process of determining Child Welfare’s response to information and requests received by the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline.

Screening Supervisor: An employee of Child Welfare whose primary responsibility is to oversee the work of a screener and ensure compliance with rules and consistency in the practice of screening.

Severe Harm: Means a significant or acute injury to an alleged victim’s physical, sexual, psychological, cognitive, or behavioral development or functioning; immobilizing impairment, or life-threatening damage.

Sex Trafficking: The recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or soliciting of a person under the age of 18 for the purpose of a commercial sex act or the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, or obtaining of a person over the age of 18 using force, fraud, or coercion for the purpose of a commercial sex act.

Substance: Any legal or illegal drug with potential for misuse, including any controlled substance as defined by ORS 475.005, prescription medications, over-the-counter medications, or alcoholic beverages.

Substance Exposed Infant: An infant, regardless of whether abuse is suspected, for whom prenatal substance exposure is indicated at birth and subsequent assessment by a health care provider identifies signs of substance withdrawal, a Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder diagnosis, or detectable physical, developmental, cognitive, or emotional delay or harm that is associated with prenatal substance exposure. Prenatal substance exposure is determined by a positive toxicology screen from the infant or the mother at delivery or credible information the mother had an active untreated substance use disorder, during the pregnancy or at the time of birth.

Substantial impairment: A significant impact on the child’s ability to function as they typically function. This may include degradation on measures of cognitive ability, such as the ability to think critically or problem solve, as well as notable changes in the child’s ability to regulate emotions, and/or engage in social relationships. Substantial impairment refers to degree, not duration.

Substitute Care: The out-of-home placement of a child or young adult who is in the legal or physical custody and care of Child Welfare.

Suspicious Physical Injury: As defined in ORS 419B.023 includes, but is not limited to:

(a) Burns or scalds;

(b) Extensive bruising or abrasions on any part of the body;

(c) Bruising, swelling, or abrasions on the head, neck, or face;

(d) Fractures of any bone in a child under the age of three;
(e) Multiple fractures in a child of any age;
(f) Dislocations, soft tissue swelling, or moderate to severe cuts;
(g) Loss of the ability to walk or move normally according to the child’s developmental ability;
(h) Unconsciousness or difficulty maintaining consciousness;
(i) Multiple injuries of different types;
(j) Injuries causing serious or protracted disfigurement or loss or impairment of the function of any bodily organ; or
(k) Any other injury that threatens the physical well-being of the child.

Teacher: Means (as defined in TSPC OAR 584-005-0005) a licensed or registered employee in a public school or charter school, or employed by an education service district, who has direct responsibility for instruction, coordination of educational programs, or supervision or evaluation of teachers; and who is compensated for services from public funds.

Third Party Abuse: Abuse by a person who is not the alleged victim’s parent/caregiver, guardian or other member of the alleged victim’s household, and who is not responsible for the alleged victim’s care, custody, and control.

Under the influence: the state of a person who is currently feeling and exhibiting being under the effect of a substance. Vision, judgement, reaction time, talking, walking, ability to recognize harmful environment or people, ability to physically move to protect a child from an impending situation can be reduced under the influence of drugs.

Vulnerable Child or Young Adult: A child or, when applicable, a young adult who is unable to protect themselves. This includes a child or young adult who is dependent on others for sustenance and protection. A “vulnerable child or young adult” is defenseless, exposed to behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that they are powerless to manage, and is susceptible and accessible to a threatening parent/caregiver. Vulnerability is judged according to physical and emotional development, ability to communicate needs, mobility, size, and dependence.

Young Adult: A person aged 18 through 20 years.

Definitions of Abuse Types in Screening

This portion of procedure provides definitions of each abuse type and serves as a guide to aid consistent and accurate decision making by screeners when identifying a report of abuse through selection of abuse types.

All information received at the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline is evaluated to identify if it is a report of abuse by evaluating the most fitting abuse type or types. This evaluation is a critical component of the screening assessment and is a necessary step prior to determining the Child Welfare response.

Because there are two definitions of abuse in Oregon, it is essential screeners understand both sets of definitions and who they apply to. The first definition of abuse, subject to ORS 419B.005, applies to all children. A “child” in Oregon is any person under the age of 18. A “child” also includes a person 18, 19, or 20 years old living in or receiving services from a child-caring agency or proctor foster home. This definition includes mental injury, neglect, physical abuse, sexual abuse or sexual exploitation, and threat of harm. While the statute does not use the exact language used in the rule and in the procedure, these types of abuse as defined below incorporate all the behaviors that are considered abuse in Oregon statute.

The second definition of abuse, subject to ORS 418.257, applies to a person under the age of 21, but only when that person is living in or receiving services from a facility or home licensed or certified by the Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS). This definition of abuse is critical in ensuring children and young adults in these settings are receiving quality care. Sometimes these children and young adults are referred to as being “in care.”

Facilities or homes licensed or certified by the ODHS include:

- Child-caring agencies;
- Proctor foster homes;
- Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (ODDS) licensed group homes; and
- Resource homes certified by Child Welfare or the Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (these may include relative caregivers).

This second definition includes abandonment, financial exploitation, involuntary seclusion, neglect, physical abuse, sexual abuse or sexual exploitation, verbal abuse or wrongful use of restraint (chemical and physical). Refer to the table above for guidance on which abuse definitions to apply.

When evaluating the abuse definitions to identify and select abuse types, screeners must do so while considering the impact of culture within family systems and family practices. All information is considered within the context of culture. It is essential for screeners to develop specialized knowledge and understanding that is inclusive of, but not limited to, the history, traditions, values, family systems such as race and ethnicity; immigration and refugee status; tribal groups; religion and spirituality; sexual orientation; gender identity or expression; social class; and mental or physical abilities of various cultural groups. These factors influence information gathering and require intentional inquiry and consideration. Screeners must acknowledge, respect, and honor the diversity of families. Simultaneously, screeners must operate with the understanding that CPS is obliged to protect children from cultural practices that fall under the definitions of abuse.

The following is divided by abuse definition and then types of abuse that fall under that definition. Remember, when applying the definitions of abuse, the screener is not tasked with meeting the burdens of proof when determining whether to assign. Rather, the screener considers if the reported information were true would it be an allegation of abuse.

Below are the abuse types applied when determining if information received is a report of abuse.

Neglect

Neglect is the negligent treatment of a child, including but not limited to the failure to provide adequate food, clothing, shelter, supervision, protection, or medical care that is likely to endanger the child’s health or welfare.

Neglect can occur in a single circumstance, or over a period of time (circumstantial vs chronic neglect). Circumstantial neglect can be an action or a passive inaction—other words, an act or omission. Chronic neglect is a persistent pattern of family functioning in which the parent/caregiver does not sustain or meet the basic needs of a child, resulting in an accumulation of harm that can have long-term negative effects on the child.

Failure to provide for child’s basic needs

The child’s basic needs are unmet to the extent that their daily activities are or will be severely impacted, they develop or suffer worsening injury or illness, and/or their physical health and development are impacted.

- The child is not provided with the necessary food to sustain physical health and development. The simple absence of food in the home does not, in and of itself, rise to the level of neglect. Reports of “no food” need to be thoroughly assessed for availability, frequency, duration, other contributing factors, or other means of sustenance (e.g., eating at school, with family) before deciding that lack of food is creating or likely to soon create a significant threat to child safety.

- The child’s basic needs for clothing and/or hygiene are unmet to the extent that the child’s daily activities recurrently are or will be severely impacted without intervention, and/or to the extent that the child to develop or suffer a worsening of injury or illness.

- The child’s living conditions are unsanitary and/or contain hazards that either have or likely will lead to a child’s injury or illness if not resolved and the parent/caregiver has not attempted to resolve the conditions. Consider the age and developmental status of the child and to what extent the specific living conditions pose a danger to the child. Examples may include but are not limited to:
  - Housing that is an acute fire hazard or has been condemned;
  - Exposed heaters that a young/vulnerable child has access to and could be easily burned;
  - Significant gas fumes that have been affecting the child;
  - Unsafe electrical wiring that could result in fire or shock;
  - Human, or animal excrement; or Accessible hazardous chemicals.

Lack of supervision

The parent/caregiver does not provide and/or arrange for supervision appropriate to the child’s age, cognitive ability, and physical condition. Consider the abilities of the person left responsible for the child AND the child’s age and developmental status.

Lack of protection

The parent/caregiver is unable or unwilling to protect the child from abuse or exploitation caused by the acts of another person. A lack of protection occurs when the parent/caregiver does not intervene or remove the child from a situation where that child is being abused by another person, despite knowledge or reasonable expectation of knowledge that the child is being harmed. Examples include but are not limited to the following.

- Parent/caregiver leaving a child with a person they know or reasonable should know has physically injured a child previously.
- Parent/caregiver leaving a child with a person with active or uncontrolled substance misuse or substance use disorder, including situations in which the child is in a car driven by someone other than the parent who is under the influence of drugs or alcohol.
- Parent/caregiver Involves a child in the commission of a crime (stealing, drug purchase or selling) directly or by indifference. Exposure of a child to criminal activities should include information of adverse impact on the child.

Note: If there is an allegation of abuse directly related to domestic violence, the alleged perpetrator is the parent/caregiver who is committing DV. The adult subjected to domestic violence should not be identified as an alleged perpetrator of child abuse with an allegation of lack of protection.

Medical neglect

The delay, refusal, or failure of the parent/caregiver to seek, obtain, and/or maintain necessary medical, dental, or mental health care when person responsible knows, or should reasonably be expected to know, that such actions may have an adverse impact on the child. Failure to provide the child with immunizations or routine well-child medical appointments does not constitute medical neglect in and of itself. Medical neglect may include but is not limited to the following.

- Frequently missed appointments, therapies, or other necessary medical and/or mental health treatments that cause or likely will cause a worsening of an illness or injury to the child.
- The person responsible took child out of or terminated treatment against medical advice, and their removal is likely to cause the child harm or have a negative impact on the child.
- Withholding or failing to obtain or maintain medically necessary treatment for a child with life-threatening, acute, or chronic medical or mental health conditions.
- Withholding medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

Access or exposure to a harmful substance
A parent/caregiver has knowingly, intentionally, or negligently exposed the child to a harmful or controlled substance that has or will likely impact that child’s health or life. Examples include but are not limited to the following:

- Allowing or encouraging the child’s use drugs and/or alcohol. By law, a parent/caregiver cannot allow access to controlled substances unless prescribed by a physician or under the direction of a physician.
- Intentionally or negligently allowing access to cannabis edibles, or other products containing THC, particularly those that are enticing to children (gummies, brownies, chocolate, sodas, etc.)
- Exposing a child to high concentration of THC through secondhand smoke directly blown into child’s face or active smoking in the presence of a child in a small, enclosed space.
- Exposing child to an environment that is toxic or hazardous due to illicit drug production or use (e.g., methamphetamine, fentanyl).
- A child resides in or is exposed to a residence where the purpose is the use, sale, and/or manufacturing of illegal substances.

Child selling

The parent/caregiver buys, sells, barters, trades, or offers to buy or sell the legal or physical custody of a person under 18 years of age.

Abandonment

The parent/caregiver willfully abandons a child without making adequate arrangements for the child’s basic needs or continuing care.

Abandonment may be indicated by but is not limited to:

- Parent/caregiver is leaving the child or has left the child in the care of another for an indeterminate length of time or significantly longer than the planned length of time, and the current person (non-parent/caregiver) who is providing care seeks to discontinue care.
- Parent/caregiver kicked the child out of the home or refuses the child entry to the home AND has not provided a safe alternative.
- Parent/caregiver establishes another residence without the child and does not make appropriate arrangements for the child’s care and custody and there are severe impacts to the child.
- Child is being discharged from a facility, and the parent/caregiver refuses to accept the child back into the home. The parents have failed to cooperate or identify an alternative placement to provide care/custody and there are no systemic barriers to locating an alternative placement for the child.
- Parent/caregiver is unknown or unlocatable by the child and others involved in the current care of the child.

Child/Young Adult in care: Neglect

Select these items only for a child in a Child Welfare–certified foster home; this includes children or young adults living with relative caregivers. The person alleged to be responsible for the behaviors described is typically a resource parent but may be another certified care provider.

Neglect of a child in care is the failure to provide the child or young adult with care, supervision, or services necessary to maintain the physical and mental health. This specifically includes the resource parent not following through with an expectation in the case plan, treatment plan, and/or supervision plan, such as:

- Missed therapy or medical appointments; or
- Noncompliance with the visitation plan.

Neglect also means the failure to make a reasonable effort to protect a child in care from abuse.

Child/Young Adult in care: Abandonment

Select these items only for a child in a Child Welfare–certified foster home; this includes children or young adults living with relative caregivers. The person alleged to be responsible for the behaviors described is typically a resource parent but may be another certified care provider.

Abandonment includes “desertion or willful forsaking of a child in care or young adult or withdrawal or neglect of duties and obligations owed a child or young adult by a home certified by Child Welfare, a caregiver or other person” (ORS 413-015-0115). When considering abandonment as an abuse type, also consider Neglect: Supervision. Neglect may be more appropriate if there is some indication that the alleged perpetrator intended to return.

Child/Young Adult in care: Financial exploitation

Select these items only for a child in a Child Welfare–certified foster home; this includes children or young adults living with relative caregivers. The person alleged to be responsible for the behaviors described is typically a resource parent but may be another certified care provider.

Financial exploitation includes the following:

- The wrongful taking of the assets, funds, or property belonging to or intended for the use of a child or young adult in care, including misuse of the child or young adult’s social security number. A child or young adult’s assets, funds, or property may include tribal trust funds, SSI, employment income, etc.

- Conveying a threat, directly or indirectly, to wrongfully take or appropriate the child or young adult’s moneys or property, which results in the child being intimidated, distressed, or fearful and the child or young adult’s reasonable belief that the threat will be carried out.

- Misappropriating, misusing, or transferring without authorization any moneys from any account held jointly or singly by a child or young adult in care.

- Failing to use the income or assets of a child or young adult in care effectively for the support and maintenance of the child or young adult.

Appropriate limits on the child or young adult in care to access to their assets, funds, or property may include the following.

- Age- or developmentally appropriate withholding, or stated consequences that include withholding, of assets, funds, or property that belong to the child or young adult in care for the purpose of discipline or behavior
Taking a child or young adult’s phone away and restricting access to electronics are both examples of temporarily withholding access to their property, which can be reasonable discipline. Consider the child’s age, development, and behavior when evaluating the reasonableness, as well as how this may impact planned communication with the child or young adult’s support/treatment team and family.

Teaching the child or young adult financial skills, such as saving or budgeting, by limiting immediate access to funds or setting up dedicated saving for future use by the child or young adult.

Physical Abuse

Physical Abuse is any assault of a child and any physical injury to a child which has been caused by other than accidental means, that results in harm, including any injury which appears to be at variance with the explanation given for the injury. Physical abuse may also include injury that is a result of discipline or punishment.

In some circumstances, an allegation of physical abuse does not result in a visible injury. This includes circumstances where there was never a visible injury, circumstances where the severity of the action was likely to have resulted in a physical injury, but one is not visible, and circumstances when there was a visible injury that has since healed.

Alleged perpetrator intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly caused or reasonably could have caused physical injury.

Alleged perpetrator regardless of expressed intention, inflicted a physical injury on the child. Include allegations of corporal punishment that result in the following examples of injuries, as well as dangerous behavior toward or near the child that shows reckless disregard for the child. Examples of alleged perpetrator behavior include but are not limited to the following:

- Corporal punishment in which the child is injured;
- Shaking an infant or toddler;
- Shoving, pushing, or slamming a child into a wall, the ground, or other solid surface or object;
- Interfering with the child’s breathing (e.g., choking, strangling, smothering);
- Electric shock; or
- Forced ingestion of dangerous substances.

In addition, consider:

- Child’s age, development, and vulnerability;
- Location of the injury; and
- Severity of injury.

The child’s injuries may be internal or external. Injuries may include but are not limited to:

- Burns or scalds;
• Bruising,
• Swelling,
• Cuts, or abrasions;
• Oral injuries;
• Punctures or bite marks;
• Fractures, sprains/strains, or dislocations;
• Internal injuries;
• Head injuries; or
• Loss of consciousness.

Injuries may be on various parts of the body and in various stages of healing.

_Injury that is unexplained or at variance with given explanation_

A physical injury to a child, consistent with the definition above, is not explained or the explanation given is not plausible or consistent with the injury, and the injury itself suggests that it is non-accidental. Injuries may be new or in different stages of healing. When the person who caused the injury is unknown, include all injuries that a medical professional describes as consistent with abuse.

_Torture or cruel treatment of child_

Torture or cruel treatment includes actions toward the child that exhibit intentional or reckless disregard for the child’s health and well-being. The alleged perpetrator is deliberately and/or systematically inflicts unusual, bizarre, brutal, or cruel treatment and/or severe physical pain on the child. This may be a one-time act or a pattern of actions. Examples include the following:

• Locking child in cage, closet, or confined space;
• Use of restraints not intended for human use (e.g., duct tape, chains);
• Kneeling on stones, holding index cards between fingers with arms extended, maintaining a position until pain is felt; or
• Actively and intentionally withholding or restricting the child’s access to basic needs such as food, clean drinking water, clothing, shelter, toilet, and hygiene facilities to the extent that the child endures pain, illness, or injury.

_Medical Abuse_

Medical child abuse occurs when a child receives unnecessary and harmful medical care at the instigation of a parent or caregiver.

_Child/Young Adult in care: Physical Abuse or willful infliction of physical pain_
Select these items only for a child in a Child Welfare–certified foster home; this includes children or young adults living with relative caregivers. The person alleged to be responsible for the behaviors described is typically a resource parent but may be another certified care provider.

The use of physical punishment or discipline that induces pain or discomfort and potentially compounds the child or young adult’s trauma experience. Willful infliction of physical pain does not need to result in an injury or if it does, the injury does not need to be visible. Consider discipline in the context of current development or that involves physical contact or physical action on the part of the child or young adult. This may include but is not limited to the following:

- Flicking;
- Pulling Ears;
- Pinching;
- Sitting in one position without relief; or
- Running laps.

Also select for any non-accidental physical injury to a child or young adult in care inflicted by the resource parent or other member of the resource household, or that appears to conflict with the explanation given the injury. Physical abuse also includes the willful infliction of physical pain or injury upon a child or young adult.

Child/Young Adult in care: Involuntary Seclusion

Select these items only for a child in a Child Welfare–certified foster home; this includes children or young adults living with relative caregivers. The person alleged to be responsible for the behaviors described is typically a resource parent but may be another certified care provider.

Involuntary seclusion means confinement of a child or young adult in care alone in a setting from which the child or young adult is physically prevented from leaving by any means. Involuntary seclusion is abuse when used as a form of discipline, punishment, retaliation, or for the convenience of the resource parent.

Child/Young Adult in care: Wrongful use of restraint

Select these items only for a child in a Child Welfare–certified foster home; this includes children or young adults living with relative caregivers. The person alleged to be responsible for the behaviors described is typically a resource parent but may be another certified care provider.

Child Welfare–certified resource home may not place a child or young adult in care in a restraint. “Restraint” means the physical restriction of a child or young adult’s actions or movements by holding the child or young adult or through the use of pressure, chemicals, or mechanical implements.

Wrongful use of restraint is described in ORS 418.519 to 418.521.

Sexual Abuse or Sexual Exploitation

Sexual abuse includes rape, sodomy, unlawful sexual penetration, incest, fondling or voyeurism, any sexual contact with a child; touching of the sexual or other intimate parts of a child; or causing a child to touch the sexual or other intimate parts of the other person for the purpose of arousing or gratifying the sexual desire of either party.
Sexual abuse also includes contributing to the sexual delinquency of a child and any other conduct that allows, employs, authorizes, permits, induces, or encourages a child to engage in the performing for people to observe or the photographing, filming, tape recording, or other exhibition which, in whole or in part, depicts sexually explicit conduct or contact or sexual abuse involving a child or rape of a child.

Sexual contact

Any sexual contact with a child by alleged perpetrator, including touching of the sexual or other intimate parts of a child or causing a child to touch the sexual or other intimate parts of the other person with a body part or an object.

Sexual contact includes but is not limited to the following:

- Rape, sodomy, unlawful sexual penetration, incest, fondling, voyeurism;
- Any sexual physical contact between the child and the alleged perpetrator, whether directed, coerced, encouraged, allowed, forced, etc.; or
- For age-typical versus abusive sexual behaviors, see the appendix.

Physical or behavioral indicators consistent with sexual abuse

Basis exists for concern that a child has been sexually abused. Indicators include but are not limited to the following:

- The child has initiated or participated in sexual actions with any individual that are outside the realm of age and developmentally appropriate behavior. Consider the child’s age, developmental status, and any power or age differential between alleged perpetrator and alleged victim when assessing this item.
- A child presents with a sexually transmitted infection, symptoms of a sexually transmitted infection and/or other injuries to the genital or anal area that are unexplained, including when the child is pre-adolescent or unable to consent to sexual activity.

Exposure to sexually explicit conduct or materials

The alleged perpetrator knowingly permits or provides a child access to pornographic or harmful sexual material or to witness sexual acts. This includes engaging in sexually explicit communication with the child, sending a child or requesting a child send sexually explicit photos or videos.

Sexual exploitation

Sexual exploitation includes but is not limited to the following:

- Engaging a child in sexually explicit communication including soliciting or sending explicit images for personal or financial benefit
- Forcing, encouraging, coercing, or permitting a child to solicit or engage in the act of sexual behavior or the production of child pornography.
- Inappropriately looking at a child’s genitalia (or vice versa) for the purpose of sexual arousal or gratification of either person or forcing a child to watch sexual acts.

Sex trafficking
The recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or soliciting of a child for the purpose of a commercial sex act. This includes the exchange of something of value, which may be money, food, drugs, and shelter.

Child/Young Adult in care: Sexual harassment or coercive conduct

Select these items only for a child in a Child Welfare–certified foster home; this includes children or young adults living with relative caregivers. The person alleged to be responsible for the behaviors described is typically a resource parent but may be another certified care provider.

For a child or young adult care, select any of the sexual abuse or exploitation items defined above apply. In addition, select for reports of a child in care who experienced:

- Sexual harassment or inappropriate exposure to sexually explicit material or language; or
- Any sexual contact between the child or young adult in care and their resource parent or other person in the home, achieved through force, trickery, threat, or coercion.

For a young adult in care, sex trafficking is defined as the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, or obtaining of a person over the age of 18 using force, fraud, or coercion for the purpose of a commercial sex act.

If the sexual contact occurred between a child/young adult in care and another child/young adult in care, consider an allegation of neglect by the resource parent.

Mental Injury

Mental injury to a child is an observable and substantial impairment of the child’s mental or psychological ability to function caused by cruelty to the child, with due regard to the culture of the child. Mental injury, including cruel or unconscionable acts or statements made, threatened to be made, or permitted to be made by the parent or caregiver that has a direct effect on the child.

Parent/caregiver actions have led to or create conditions that are consistent with substantial impairment of the child’s psychological, cognitive, emotional, or social well-being and ability to function.

For an allegation to meet the definition of mental injury at screening, there need only be a reasonable cause to believe that the parent/caregiver’s behavior is, intentionally or unintentionally, the cause of the child’s impaired functioning.

The parent/caregiver’s actions include but are not limited to the following:

- Isolating, rejecting and/or degrading the child.
- Victimizing the child by means of psychologically cruel, unusual, or excessive discipline.
- Harm or threatened harm to child, family members or others including homicide.
- Harm or threatened harm to animals.
- Threats of self-harm, including suicide.
- Statements of disregard for child’s safety and well-being, including statements that the child should leave home, life would be easier without the child, or encouraging the child’s acts of self-harm.
• Consistently blaming, berating, belittling, targeting, or shaming the child.

• Exposure to other brutal or intimidating actions or statements.

The child’s impairment may be observed as extreme behaviors (e.g., overly compliant or demanding, extremely passive or aggressive, hyper-social or isolating). Such extremes are best understood in the context of the child’s baseline behavior or, if baseline behavior is not known, developmental norms. Extreme behaviors may include but are not limited to the following:

• Fire setting, self-harm, suicidal ideation, harming animals.

• Developmental regression (e.g., sudden incontinence, verbal child becomes nonverbal).

• Child expresses credible fear that they will experience any abuse.

• Child may isolate themself, be preoccupied with their body, or become withdrawn or shut down.

• Child may become hyper-compliant, and intensely focused on seeking approval through over achievement in school, at home or in other settings.

Child/Young Adult in care: Verbal abuse

Select this item only for a child or young adult identified as living in a Child Welfare–certified resource home; this includes children or young adults living with relative caregivers. The person alleged to be responsible for the behaviors described below is typically a resource parent but may be another certified care provider.

The resource parent threatened severe harm, either physical or emotional, to a child or young adult in care, using:

• Derogatory or inappropriate names, insults, verbal assaults, profanity or ridicule; or

• Harassment, coercion, threats, humiliation, or mental cruelty.

The language was directed at the child or young adult in care, either directly or indirectly, AND contains an explicit or implicit/implied threat to the child or young adult in care. The harm threatened must be so severe that it would result in an acute or significant injury to the child’s functioning. The child responds with a belief of the threat, a fear of it occurring, or another emotional reaction in response to the belief that the resource parent will physically or emotionally harm them. When considering verbal abuse, also consider “Child/Young Adult in care: Neglect.”

Verbal abuse does not include age-appropriate discipline that may involve the threat to withhold privileges. Using profanity in the presence of but not directed toward the child or young adult is not verbal abuse.

Threat of Harm

Threat of harm to a child means subjecting a child to a substantial risk of harm to the child’s health or welfare.

Threat of harm is reserved for use at screening when the reported information does not identify another abuse type. When the abuse to the primary victim results in harm, a threat of harm to other children in the home should not be assumed but must be considered.

Physical abuse
Based on the alleged perpetrator’s reported actions, there is a real and plausible threat to the child’s physical safety. This includes but is not limited to the following.

- Alleged perpetrator’s violence towards others in the presence of the child or violent outbursts in the presence of the child; or
- Parent/caregiver driving while intoxicated with children in the vehicle when no injury to the child occurred. If child was injured due to parent/caregiver driving while intoxicated, consider an allegation of Physical Abuse: Parent/caregiver intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly caused or reasonably could have caused physical injury.

Sexual abuse or exploitation

Based on alleged perpetrator’s reported actions, there is a real and plausible threat that the child will be the victim of sexual abuse or exploitation, specifically including grooming behaviors. Grooming refers to the behaviors sex offenders engage in prior to, during, and following sexually abusive and exploitive incidents. Grooming involves techniques that are geared to determine which children or families are the most vulnerable to abuse, facilitates the development of an intimate/caretaking relationship with the child and/or family, and then gradually moves into a process of sexualizing and exploiting the relationship with the child. While grooming is taking place with the child, the offender is usually engaging in grooming behavior with other adults to undermine the child’s credibility and interfere with possible avenues of protection.

When “Threat of Harm: Sexual abuse or exploitation” has previously been assessed, a new report for this allegation does not require assessment unless new information indicates an assessment is required. Examples include but are not limited to:

- New child in the home;
- New incident of sexual offending; or
- Change in household composition.

Do not select this item if a report is received that a person is a sex offender (verified by history), but there is no information about the offender having unsupervised contact with or living with children.

Neglect

There are no injuries or circumstances to support that another abuse type has occurred or is occurring but based on the parent/caregiver’s failure to act, there is a real, and plausible threat to child safety.

Consider “Threat of Harm: Neglect” when the information in the report indicates that there is behavior, condition, or circumstance that poses a real and plausible threat to child safety in that the child is likely to experience neglect (see neglect definition). Examples include:

- A parent/caregiver has current or recent child welfare involvement as an alleged perpetrator of a founded/substantiated neglect allegation that resulted in the child/ren remaining placed outside of their care due to the circumstances not being ameliorated.
- A parent/caregiver’s substance use is unmanaged, or substance use disorder is untreated, leading to recent or current behavior that poses a threat to the child’s safety or welfare or that could do so, in consideration of the vulnerability of the child. This may include circumstances in which an infant or birthing parent tests positive for substances at birth or the infant experiences withdrawal symptoms at birth.

Domestic Violence

Oregon Child Welfare defines in Oregon Administrative rule (OAR) 413-015-0115 as “a pattern of coercive behavior, which can include physical, sexual, economic, and emotional abuse, that an individual uses against a past or current intimate partner to gain power and control in a relationship.”

In making a decision to select “Threat of Harm: Domestic Violence”, consider more than whether the child witnessed or was in the same room as the domestic violence; consider whether there is a real and plausible threat to the child. The fact that the child was in the same room may increase the likelihood of negative consequences for the child, but a review of all the factors and the child’s overall exposure to the violence is necessary. Indicators of power and control includes isolation, intimidation, threats of homicide or suicide, stalking, weapons, violence increasing in frequency or severity, and other types of abuse. These may be single incidents that resulted in injury to or arrest of a parent/caregiver or involved the use of a weapon, or there may be a pattern of behavior that would be of lesser concern if it was a single incident.

This pattern of behavior may continue after the end of a relationship or when the partners no longer live together. The alleged perpetrator’s actions often directly involve, target, and impact any children in the family.

If a child has been injured as a result of domestic violence also consider a physical abuse allegation.
Chapter 2
Screening
Section 2: General Overview and Purpose
General Overview and Purpose

Oregon Child Protective Services (CPS) follows a systematic safety intervention model for identifying and managing safety threats. Within that safety intervention model the screening assessment serves as the first assessment directed at determining who is served based upon Oregon Revised Statute. The safety intervention process formally begins with screening.

The Oregon Child Abuse Hotline maintains primary responsibility for screening six different types of calls:

- Potential reports of abuse;
- Requests for assistance from Child Welfare that fall under Family Support Services;
- Notifications to Child Welfare;
- Information involving a setting screened and investigated by OTIS;
- Information involving an open CPS assessment, open Child Welfare case or a Child Welfare certified resource home; and
- Requests for other types of community resource information or referrals.

In Oregon, all six types of calls are received by the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline twenty-four (24) hours a day, and seven (7) days a week.

On all reports and requests received, regardless of the reporter’s intent, screeners identify and respond to information revealing allegations.

Screening Objectives

The following are critical objectives in the screening process for each type of call received:

Potential Abuse Reports:

- To determine if the reported concerns, if true, meet the criteria to assign the report for CPS assessment or close at screening.
- To determine an appropriate CPS response timeline.
- To cross report all reports of abuse to law enforcement.
- To complete other appropriate notifications to external agencies.

Requests for Information, Referrals, or Family Support Services:

- To provide information to callers about other agencies and/or community resources that are of assistance.
- To assign for FSS assessment any requests for Family Support Services which include placement of a child, custody of a child, Independent Living Program services, post legal adoption services, post guardianship services, in response to a court order placing the child or young adult in ODHS care and custody, and voluntary services.

Screening Philosophy and Approach

When interacting with callers, screeners employ skills that empower, support and enable them to disclose and elaborate on essential information about potential abuse and/or service-related needs. The screener demonstrates interpersonal skills that result in a focused exploration of each caller’s concerns and knowledge that is pertinent to screening processes and decisions. These skills are demonstrated by the conscious use of techniques that prompt, guide, and manage the caller’s needs and expectations.

Screening is not a passive endeavor with respect to information collection. The skill in engaging callers in the screening process is most evident when screeners demonstrate a calm demeanor and deliberation that assures callers that they and their message are the most important thing to the screener at that time. Screeners should practice from the perspective that calling and asking for help or asking for someone to intervene in the lives of children and families may be difficult. Some callers may view the interaction with the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline as a matter of business related to their profession and as a legal mandate. Some individuals call because of deep concern and fear for a child/family. Regardless of the reason or rationale for calling, screeners must be sensitive to the feeling’s callers may be experiencing and should demonstrate that through respectful, empathetic interactions and dialogue.

Overall, the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline employs a family system, a family-centered approach for interaction with the reporter. This approach is utilized by the screener during the screening assessment to guide reporters who know the family (even if in a limited way) to consider and value known information that places their concern within the context of the family in general. The expectation for the screener is not to focus on what the reporter believes, but instead focus on beginning a process of developing an understanding about circumstances within the context of the family system. When conducting the screening assessment and interacting with a reporter, consider the following:

- The screener should be highly responsive and attentive to the reporter.
- It is important to be well-informed and precise when providing information to callers and reporters.
- If information is not known from a report made in writing (i.e., fax or email), a screener should follow up with reporter when information is needed to make a screening decision.
- Information gathering should concentrate on what must be known to achieve the screening decision and response timeline.
- All interviews with reporters should be structured and conducted the same way.
- The reporter should be viewed as the primary source of information for decision making.
- It is the responsibility of the screener and screening supervisor to determine whether a report is appropriate for a CPS Assessment.
- The reporter has the burden of responsibility for providing information that meets the screening criteria.
- The screener has the burden of responsibility for eliciting information from a reporter that adequately informs the screening decision.
Overview of the Screening Assessment Process: The screening information collection process generally occurs in the following manner:

- Screeners gather sufficient information including family demographic, the extent of maltreatment, and the circumstances surrounding the maltreatment.
- Information gathered is entered into the ORCAH Documentation Guide.
- Screeners review Child Welfare history.
- Screeners make screening and response timeline decisions using the Structured Decision Making Tool.
- The burden for meeting the eligibility screening criteria rests predominately with the reporter. It is crucial that screeners are well equipped to conduct a screening interview that will “guide” reporters and have the best chance to elicit necessary information that can be used to make an effective screening decision.
- If the screener determines the information received does not constitute a screening report, supervisor consultation is required.
- If the screener determines a report is not assigned for CPS assessment, it must be determined if the report will be closed at screening and/or whether the family will be provided community resource information or referrals.
- If the screener determines the information does not meet the criteria for assignment or for a closed at screening report but does contain information regarding case management, the screener must document a case note.

Basic Call Handling

Regardless of the type of call received at screening, there are basic call handling expectations for screeners. It is expected that screeners must do the following to address callers’ most immediate needs:

- When a screener receives information that any person requires immediate attention for their health and safety, the screener must immediately call 911. This means that the screener must call 911 on ANY report, when the report indicates any person is seriously injured and not receiving help already.
- Access interpretive services when the reporter does not speak English or speaks limited English. These services may include staff identified as bilingual resources or the phone interpreters. The Office of Equity and Multicultural Services Language Services icon on each screener’s desktop can be accessed to identify telephone interpreter resources.

Determining Call Type
Screeners are readily able to assess the type of call being received by the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline after doing brief introductions and soliciting information from callers regarding the call purpose.

Reports of Abuse

Potential reports of abuse also referred to as CPS Information: The Oregon Child Abuse Hotline receives calls from individuals who are calling to share information about potential abuse. Potential abuse reports are received when a caller expresses concern that a child or young adult, is being, or may have been, abused. Screeners gather information from these reporters, assess the information collected, and make an initial determination about CPS intervention.

A report of abuse is assigned for CPS assessment when the information received meets the criteria to assign. For potential abuse reports, the screening process is standardized to maximize the efficient, consistent collection of relevant information from the reporter.

In Oregon, there are two definitions of abuse. To identify whether information is CPS related information, screeners must understand when each definition of abuse applies and to whom each applies.

The first definition of abuse is found in ORS 419B.005 and applies to all children. A “child” in Oregon includes not only any person under the age of 18, but also include a person 18-20 years old who resides in or is receiving services from a child-caring agency or proctor foster home. The definition primarily includes neglect, physical abuse, sexual abuse, mental injury, and threat of harm.

The second definition is found in ORS 418.257(1) and applies to a person under the age of 21, but only when that person is living in or receiving services from a facility or home licensed or certified by the state. These may include a child caring agency, a proctor foster home, an ODDS licensed group home, or a home certified by Child Welfare or the Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (these may include licensed relative caregivers). This definition of abuse primarily includes neglect, physical abuse, sexual abuse, verbal abuse, involuntary seclusion, wrongful use of restraint, financial exploitation, and abandonment.

The Oregon Child Abuse Hotline is charged with Child Welfare screening responsibilities for abuse reports statewide. Screeners must process all reports of alleged abuse regardless of where the abuse may have occurred, or citizenship status (i.e., immigrant detention, refugee status, juvenile detention).

Family Support Services

Requests for assistance from Child Welfare that fall under Family Support Services

In addition to receiving potential abuse reports, the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline receives calls from individuals requesting service-related information and/or referrals. Information that is related to Family Support Services is not a report of alleged abuse and does not include information that a child is unsafe.

A parent, guardian, adoptive parent, or former foster child may call to request Family Support Services. In order to qualify for supportive services, the individual and family will meet certain criteria. Screeners are not responsible for determining whether the request qualifies for supportive services. Instead, screeners determine if the family or individual meets the criteria for assignment of an FSS referral. It is the role of the local office to determine if the family meets eligibility criteria for a family support services case, which they determine through a Family Support Services Assessment.
Screeners must collect, document and forward information to the local office in the county where the primary custodial parent resides, and a caseworker will complete a Family Support Services assessment to determine eligibility for services. If the request is for Independent Living Program services, information will then be forwarded to the county where the former foster child resides.

When a request is made for Family Support Services and there is an open CPS assessment the screener must make efforts to confirm whether the safety determination has been made and the child(ren) is safe. If the CPS assessment is open and safety threats are identified, the Family Support Services report will be closed at screening as services will be offered to the family for safety management.

When a request is made for Family Support Services and there is no open CPS assessment and the screener determines the family or individual does not meet criteria for the assignment of an FSS referral or someone other than the family or child/young adult is requesting the Family Support Service, the report must be submitted for deletion.

There are various types of Family Support Service categories including placement, Independent Living Programs, Post Legal Adoption and Guardianship Service, Pre-adjudicated delinquent child or young adult ordered into the care and custody of ODHS, and voluntary services. The following provides detail about each type of Family Support Services and what information should be gathered. For every type, the screener should:

- Obtain the names, ages and relationship of the children or young adults living in the household or requesting services.
- Obtain the names of the parent or guardians.
- Obtain the addresses for the child or young adult and the parent, including current whereabouts if different.
- Gather and record information about the family. This will assist the assigned caseworker to adequately prepare for their approach with the family.
- Inquire as to whether the child or young adult may have Native American or Alaskan Native ancestry.

Request for Voluntary Placement: Information falls within this category when a parent or guardian requests out-of-home placement of their child solely to obtain services for an emotional, behavioral or mental disorder, or developmental or physical disability of the child. In these instances, the screener must:

- Gather and record information specific to how the child’s diagnosis or disability impacts them in their daily functioning. Include dates of treatment if known, and efforts the family has made to remediate the situation.
- Create a screening report form that identifies “Family Support Services” as the category type and “Placement” as the category type.

The Parent or Guardian Requests Child Welfare Take Legal Custody of Their Minor Child: Information falls within this category when a parent or guardian request Child Welfare take temporary legal custody of their minor child. In these instances, the screener will create a screening report that identifies “Family Support Services” as the referral type and “Placement” as the category type.

The Court has Ordered a Pre-Adjudicated Delinquent into the Care of Child Welfare: Information falls within this category when a court orders a pre-adjudicated delinquent minor into the care and custody of Child Welfare. In these instances, the screener must:
Gather and record information specific to the child’s behavior and reason for legal involvement.

Receipt of the court order is not required in order to assign the report.

Create a screening report that identifies “Family Support Services” as the referral type and “Court Ordered Referral” as the category type.

A Potential Former Foster Child/Young Adult who Requests Independent Living Program (ILP) Services:

Information falls within this category when a former foster child or young adult is eligible for ILP services, is not a participant on an open case, and requests to enroll in the program. Given that ILP services are Federally funded, a child or young adult exiting substitute care in any state is eligible for ILP services. Screeners use trauma informed communication skills to talk the child or young adult through the choice to share the information with a screener and write a 307A or self-refer to the ILP programs. Eligible former foster children under age 18 must have a FSS-ILP case to access services and are not eligible to self-refer.

If someone other than the child or young adult is requesting services on their behalf (former caseworker, ILP program employee, etc.) document the request in the screening report 307A and gather the contact information for the child or young adult. An attempt should be made to confirm the request with the child or young adult and document these efforts. If unable to confirm, continue with assignment of the FSS request.

In order to be eligible for ILP services:

- The child or young adult must have been in a state or tribal Child Welfare placement at the age of 14 and spent at least 180 days (six months) in substitute care after the age of 13. The 180 days is cumulative and does not have to be consecutive.

- These children or young adults may return to Child Welfare at any time prior to their 24th birthday to request ILP services.

- Verify the substitute care placement information as described above when a child or young adult existed substitute care in Oregon. If the child or young adult was in substitute care in another state, collect dates of care from child or young adult. (Time on "runaway" counts as time in substitute care if the child or young adult ran away from their substitute care provider.)

Screeners must inform the young adult/former foster child (age 18-23 years) that there are two ways they can access ILP services:

I. Call ORCAH and request a FSS-ILP Case for Voluntary ILP Services.

Eligible child or young adult who is age 18 through 20 (up to 21st birthday) may open an FSS-ILP case if they want additional support provided by the assignment of a caseworker through ODHS. In some situations, exceptions exist for those older than age 21.

II. Self-Referral to a local ILP office

Eligible child or young adult ages 18 to 23 do not need to have an open FSS-ILP case to access ILP Services. If they do not want a caseworker assigned, and just need ILP supports (including resources, Chafee Housing, Chafee Educational Training Voucher, discretionary funds, skill building, etc.) they can call their local ILP office and request to open a case. The ILP referral comes directly to the Youth Transitions Team with no need to...
When a screener writes a 307A to be assigned to the local office, a screener must:

- Inquire about the specific services requested and the circumstances surrounding the request.
- Create a screening report form that identifies “Family Support Services” as the referral type and “Independent Living Program” as the category type.
- Consult with the Case Naming/Linking Guide to determine case name.

Request for Post Legal Adoption and Post Guardianship Services: Information falls within this category when a family requests post legal adoption or post guardianship services, if the adoption or guardianship occurred through Oregon Child Welfare and the family currently resides in Oregon. Adoption assistance or guardianship assistance is not a requirement for receipt of services, but it is important for the screener to document if the family is currently receiving these services to allow for services and benefits to be coordinated. In these instances, the screener must:

- Inquire about the nature of the request for services and other services the family is using to address the child’s needs.
- Gather and record information about the child’s needs and family situation. This will assist the assigned caseworker to adequately prepare for their approach with the family.
- Verify the family is currently receiving either adoption assistance or guardianship assistance from Child Welfare.
  - Searching OR-Kids and locating the provider record of the family. A placement for the child will be present on the record. The ending reason for the placement will be guardianship.
  - The child’s resource care placement and exit from resource care will also show on the child’s biological family case, or if the child was legally freed but not placed in an adoption before being placed in a guardianship on a pre-adoptive case.
- Create a screening report form that identifies “Family Support Services” as the referral type and “Post Adoption or Post Guardianship” as the category type.
  - For post guardianship cases, open the case under the biological family’s case number unless the child has been legally freed, and the last placement was on a pre-adoptive case. Then open the case on the pre-adoptive case.
  - For post adoption cases, open the case under a new case number, and list the adoptive parents as the parent in the case.
- Include in the referral whether the family is receiving guardianship or adoption assistance from Child Welfare. If assistance is open to Central Office, document in the screening referral that the assigned worker must notify the Adoption Assistance or Guardianship Assistance Coordinator in Central Office if the child enters care with Child Welfare, as the subsidy and eligibility determination process will need to be coordinated between the local and central offices. It is critical that this documentation occur.

Request for Voluntary Services: Information falls within this category when a parent requests assistance with a child in the home, and all the following criteria apply:
• Other community resources have been used and determined to be ineffective.

• Members of the extended family and other responsible adults who are well known to the child have been explored or used and determined to be unsafe, unavailable, unwilling or ineffective as support for the family.

• The parent is temporarily or will be temporarily unable to fulfill parental responsibilities due to a diagnosed medical condition or a mental health diagnosis.

• The parent’s inability to fulfill parental responsibilities are temporary, immediate and will be alleviated with short-term services, or short-term services will transition the family to community services.

• Inquire about the nature of the request for services and other services the family is using to address the child’s needs.

• When a local office requests voluntary services on behalf of a former client, and the information does not meet the criteria above, screener must staff with a supervisor to determine assignment.

• Create a screening report form that identifies “Family Support Services” as the referral type and “Request for Voluntary Services” as the services type.

Office of Training, Investigation and Safety (OTIS) Reports

Screeners will receive calls and immediately forward information to OTIS for additional screening when the information involves the following settings regardless of the type of information shared, even when the information is not an allegation of abuse. For reports that are the responsibility of OTIS to screen, the screener does not determine if the information meets the criteria to maintain in OR-Kids, to assign, or to close at screening. Contacting collaterals, researching history, cross reporting and other notifications are the responsibility of OTIS. The one exception is if the day and time the report is pended falls outside business hours and the information indicates a child or young adult is unsafe, the screener must report to law enforcement immediately. Information the OTIS is responsible for includes:

- Child care
- Child-caring agency:
  - Any private school, private agency, private organization or county program providing:
  - Day treatment for children with emotional disturbances;
  - Adoption placement services;
  - Residential care including, but not limited to, foster care or residential treatment for children;
  - Residential care in combination with academic education and therapeutic care, including, but not limited to treatment for emotional, behavioral or mental health disturbances;
  - Outdoor youth programs;
  - Other similar care or services for children;
  - A shelter-care home that is not a foster home subject to ORS 418.625 to 418.645;
  - An independent residence facility as described in ORS 418.475;
  - A private residential boarding school; and
• A child-caring facility as described in ORS 418.950.
• ODDS licensed group home;
• ODDS licensed host home
• ODDS certified foster home
• OYA certified foster home
• Proctor foster home

When the screener receives information involving third party abuse that is not the responsibility of Child Welfare under OAR 413-015-0211 (C), the screener must immediately forward the information to the OTIS and notify the OTIS the information was forwarded.

Information collection for reports that are the responsibility of the OTIS:
Information the OTIS is responsible for must be pended to OTIS for additional screening and assignment determination.

The screener will accept the report and gather information including all of the following:

• Demographics
• Extent of the maltreatment
• Circumstances surrounding the maltreatment
• Witness information
• Facility contact information if applicable; and
• Current contact information for alleged victim including address and phone number.

When the report involves an educational setting or provider screeners will ask the reporter the following:

• What is the supervision plan for the children?
• Were prior incidents known to the provider?
• If the family was previously contacted, how did they respond to the concern?

Documentation of reports that are the responsibility of the OTIS:

• Report participants only include alleged victim(s), alleged perpetrator and mandatory reporter. Only one 307A is required regarding an incident of abuse, even when multiple children or young adults are alleged victims.
• When incidents are spread over time with multiple children or young adults, additional 307A’s will be generated for each incident.
• When the alleged perpetrator of suspected abuse is unknown, this will require separate 307A’s when there is more than one alleged victim.
• If a companion report for which Child Welfare is responsible was considered, document the rationale in the Explain text box. For example, “A companion report was considered regarding neglect of the child by father, however there was insufficient information to generate a report.”

Once the reported information is documented, the screener will immediately pend the report to the designated OTIS screener (refer to Third Party and OTIS Guide within ORCAH OWL) and send an email to OTIS including an attached 307A PDF informing them a screening report has been assigned to OTIS workload.

Subject line of this email must include “New report, Screening ID#”

Example: New report, #1245234, OTIS Email: OTIS.Screening@ODHSoha.state.or.us

Notification to CCA

Similar to how a certifier on a Dept. Certified Resource Home is notified of a report by ORCAH, the same is true for the OTIS certifier/licensor. When alleged abuse by a child to another child, for which Child Welfare is responsible, occurs in a Child Caring Agency, the completed 307A must be emailed to CCA.reports@dhsoha.state.or.us. This communication is required for reports assigned or closed at screening.

OTIS will complete all notifications and cross reporting.

Companion Reports:

There may be times a report is the responsibility of both Child Welfare and the OTIS. If information provided by the reporter indicates possible CPS familial concerns in addition to concerns about a report for which the OTIS is responsible, these will be addressed by Child Welfare in a separate report sometimes referred to as a companion report. The screener must determine if the familial concerns meet criteria for response or closed at screening.

When there is a report that is the responsibility of Child Welfare, document the name and case number of the companion familial report in the Explain narrative box of the report prior to pending to the OTIS. In these instances, the screener creates a report for Child Welfare and a report for the OTIS indicating on each report that a companion report was generated. This helps foster communication between both agencies. Examples of companion reports include:

- Allegation of abuse in a proctor foster home and the allegations involve a child placed in the home and the child of the proctor foster parent.

- Reported allegation of a child toward another child with response determined by Child Welfare, and a report of neglect by the CCA with response determined by OTIS.

- A report of atypical sexual behavior between two young children while at school when their aid left them unsupervised; and one of the children discloses abuse by a parent.

Unknown Perpetrator:

When the alleged perpetrator of suspected abuse is unknown, the 307A will be generated under the child or young adult’s familial case. This will require separate 307A’s when there is more than one alleged victim.

Child Care Reports
Child Welfare will collect, and document information related to abuse of a child in a child care (formerly day care) setting. When a report is received regarding the following types of child care programs, and there is an allegation against the facility, an employee or other caregiver, the screener must pend the report to OTIS for further screening. The following programs are child care settings:

- A Registered Family Child Care Home may have up to 10 children, with only two children under 24 months old in care. This number includes the provider’s own children under 24 months.
- A Certified Family Child Care Home is located in a building constructed as a single-family dwelling, and may have up to 16 children, with the ratio and ages of children dependent on the number of qualified caregivers.
- A Certified Child Care Center may care for 13 or more children, or a facility that is certified to care for twelve or fewer children and located in a building constructed as other than a single-family dwelling.
- Regulated Subsidy Provider is a child care provider that is exempt from Office of Child Care licensing and that receives subsidy payments for child care on behalf of clients of the Department.
- Other facilities that are operating as a Registered Family Care Home, Certified Family Child Care Home, Certified Child Care Center, or Regulated Subsidy Provider without a certification or registration when a certification or registration is required by the Office of Child Care.

Screeners must complete the following activities when creating a screening report form in OR-Kids on a new or existing child care provider.

- The ORCAH screener will accept the report, gather information, and immediately document the information in the OR-Kids screening summary within a new screening report form.
- Include the child or young adult’s current whereabouts and contact information.
- Document the child or young adult’s legal parents, address and contact information when known.

When a child care provider has their own children, the screener must determine whether a separate familial report will be documented. Child Welfare is responsible for assessing familial allegations when they meet criteria for response. To assist with communication between OTIS and CPS, the screener must document the name and case number of the companion familial report in the Explain narrative box of the child care report prior to pending to OTIS.

Case Note Documentation

Information involving an open CPS assessment, open Child Welfare case or a Child Welfare certified resource home:

Case management information refers to any information that is not a report of abuse and is connected to an open CPS assessment, open case or a Child Welfare certified resource home. Common examples of case related information about insufficient safety plans and notification of a missing child. The screener does not determine what information is necessary to share; rather, they share all information known. A decision not to document information gathered must be made in consultation with a screening supervisor or designee.

When case information is received at screening, notifications to workers and supervisors on open cases must only be sent when the OR-Kids Assignment is either Assessment, Permanency or Certification and the current open role is Primary, Secondary or Supervisor.

Case Note of Duplicate Report when there is an open CPS assessment or case:

Documenting a brief case note ensures the information has been received and ORCAH has determined the information to be duplicative. When a screener evaluates the report, they are ensuring that all allegations have been captured in the current assessment. If additional allegations are needed, then this requires a new 307A report. Notification of this case note must be emailed to the worker and supervisor.

Requests for Community Resource/Referrals

Requests for other types of community resource information or referrals:

The Oregon Child Abuse Hotline may also receive calls that are not abuse reports, requests for Family Support Services, or case related information. Commonly, these calls are requests for information or referrals. For these calls, the information relayed is not related to alleged abuse and does not include information that a child is unsafe.

Upon receiving a call requesting community resource and referral information, screeners may direct callers to find local community resources or child care providers, either by providing direct information, time permitting, or by guiding the caller to these resources:

- 211Info: A private, community-based nonprofit organization that empowers Oregon and Southwest Washington communities by helping people identify, navigate, and connect with local resources they need.
  - Dial 211 toll free; or
  - Text their zip code to 898211; or
  - Email to help@211info.org

- FindHelp.org: A website that connects individuals and families to support, financial assistance, food pantries, medical care and other free or reduced cost help.
  - Findhelp.org

At times, the screener will provide the information and referral, and at other times, the screener will connect the caller to a service to provide the information and referral.

Staff Roles and Responsibilities in Screening

Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff involved in screening execute critical responsibilities in screening activities. The following information details the roles and responsibilities of staff at the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline.

Screener: The screener is required to:

- Receive, document, and assess information and potential abuse reports from the community according to procedure.
- Determine whether information is required to be documented in a 307A.
- Assign response timelines to reports based on the up to 24 Hour, up to 72 Hour and up to 10-business day response timeline.
• Forward reports and other information to CPS staff for response according to procedure.

• Provide verbal information about CPS activities to community partners who are legally entitled to receive it. Use ORS 419B.035 to guide the disclosure of CPS information. This does not include sharing drug and alcohol treatment records.

• Provide documented rationale for screening decisions.

• Consult with a supervisor on reports that involve:
  • Child fatalities;
  • Allegations of abuse, domestic violence, and serious misconduct by ODHS volunteers, representatives of the Legislature or political figures; or

• Reports that involve ODHS/OYA employees or contractors as an alleged perpetrator Consult with a supervisor prior to a decision not to document information received.

• Complete all screening reports no later than 10 hours from the date and time the report was received.

Screening Supervisor: Supervision is the cornerstone and essential source of quality control related to all screening assessments and decision making that is a part of the safety intervention system. Supervisory consultation occurring during screening provides guidance about information sufficiency, follow-up information collection, assessment of information, application of the Structured Decision Making tool to determine if there is an allegation of abuse that meets screening criteria and if so to determine the correct response.

The screener may consult with a screening supervisor at any point during the screening process. If the screener’s assigned supervisor is unavailable, the screener will consult with either a designee of the supervisor or another screening supervisor.

The screening supervisor reviews and approves or disapproves screening decisions made by screeners who seek supervisor consultation. The screening supervisor reviews the written documentation of the screener and conducts requested supervision verbally if additional information is required or clarification is needed. The screening supervisor is required to:

• Through verbal or written request of the screener, provide coaching toward required screening activities and decision making. Those requests may include any circumstance but must include:
  • All reports involving a child fatality.
  • All reports identified under the restricted case criteria.
  • All reports that involve employees or individuals well known to the agency.
  • Any decision to not document information received.

• Review all reports submitted for closed at screening no later than 10 Days from the date and time the report was received.

• Provide general oversight to ensure an efficient and orderly screening process.

• Act as a resource to screeners as they receive and assess reports.
• Review random selection of calls received by screeners to assess performance.

• Meet with assigned staff and provide clinical supervision to address performance, provide coaching, and ensure fidelity to screening practice. Clinical supervision is a planned, collaborative process between supervisors and screeners that promotes critical thinking and self-reflection. Minimum clinical supervision requirements include:
  • Screeners with under two years of experience as an SSS1 must receive clinical supervision once a week. This can include group supervision.
  • Screeners with over two years of experience as an SSS1 must receive clinical supervision once a month.
  • These are minimums and therefore additional clinical supervision needs can be determined by the supervisor.

• Monitor cross reports for compliance.

• Review management screening data and other reports to evaluate areas for potential performance and quality improvement initiatives.

• Conduct monthly call reviews for individual screeners and provide feedback in clinical supervision.

• When a screener requests consultation on a potential restricted case or sensitive issue, a screening supervisor must take the following steps:
  • Document in OR-Kids why access to the case record is being restricted and document the reason for restricting access including the names of the individuals and relationships.
  • Consult the “ORCAH and ODHS Employee Restricted Cases” or “Restricted Cases and Conflict of Interest” Protocols on the OWL.

When consulting with a screener on the decision to assign or close at screening, a screening supervisor should:

• Review the documentation in the screening report form. If the information is not yet documented, ask the screener to document and then ask for consultation.

• Utilize screening tools to coach the screener toward criteria-based screening decision.

If the determination is clear to the supervisor, the supervisor should coach the screener to facilitate their learning. Sometimes the screener has more information than what is documented, so it is important to ask questions to ensure all the information gathered is indeed being considered. If the determination is not clear at the onset, the answers to questions posed to the screener may provide enough information.

When a screener consults because a tribe, LEA, or OTIS requests assistance from CPS with an investigation of abuse, then a screening supervisor must determine whether to assign. In making this determination, the supervisor should consider if the information alleges abuse and what the role of the CPS worker would be in the investigation.

Program Managers: Program managers are required to:

• Provide general oversight to the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline to ensure that it operates efficiently, in compliance with rules and procedures, and according to standards of good practice.
• Staff all reports involving a child fatality.
• Gather and provide screening statistical information to executive management.
• Meet individually with screening supervisors and provide clinical supervision.
• Conduct weekly supervisor meetings to communicate critical information; discuss any personnel situations; and review policy, procedure, practice, and program functioning.
• Receive and forward to the executive management and Human Resources all screening reports alleging an employee is the alleged perpetrator.
• Identify performance issues within the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline, develop improvement initiatives as relevant, and inform executive management in a timely manner.
• Review management reports to evaluate areas for potential performance and quality improvement initiatives. Recommend initiatives as needed.
• Resolve any disagreement arising at lower administrative levels.
• Document all activities and decisions according to procedures.
• Utilize data and performance management tools to facilitate learning and establish management practice standards.

Reporting Sources

Reports of potential abuse fall into the following three types of reporting sources:

• Voluntary Reporters. Voluntary reporters may report suspected abuse and include but are not limited to family members, concerned citizens, and neighbors.

• Mandatory Reporters. Mandatory reporters are public or private officials who are required by law to report suspected abuse. Mandatory reporters include but are not limited to teachers, doctors, and state employees. For a full list see ORS 419B.005.

• Anonymous Reporters. Anonymous reporters are individuals sharing information related to potential reports of abuse are not obligated to share their identities with screeners. Screeners gather the same information from the anonymous reporter as from any other reporter, and encourage the reporter to provide identifying information, as required by OAR 413-015-0205(1)(b). Before accepting a report from an anonymous source, the screener will inform the reporting party that every effort will be made to protect the identity of the reporting party if the identifying information is shared. When a reporter identifies as a mandatory reporter and still declines to share their identity, it is important to explain to the reporter that they can make the report and remain anonymous, but an anonymous report does not fulfill the mandatory reporting obligation as the report cannot be verified.

The decision of the reporter to decline to share their identity does not invalidate the information reported. Screeners must capture identifying information such as name or relationship to the family when shared during the screening interview despite the reporter’s preference to be anonymous. This information cannot be “unknown” at this point. If the screener identifies the phone number the reporter is calling from, this information must not be documented. Phone numbers can be shared by more than one individual, and using the phone number as a reference can compromise reporter identity and safety.

Privileged Information

Privileged Information—Reporting Parties: Exceptions to the mandatory reporting requirement include a psychiatrist, psychologist, member of the clergy, attorney or guardian ad litem appointed under ORS 419B.231. They are not required to report such information communicated by a person if the communication is privileged under ORS 40.225 to 40.295 or 419B.234. An attorney is not required to make a report under this section by reason of information communicated to the attorney in the course of representing a client if disclosure of the information would be detrimental to the client.

If the caller is asking for information about their reporting obligations as a mandated reporter, screeners may refer the caller to the relevant statute which is ORS 419B.010.

Screeners should not provide advice or direction to callers about their obligations or requirements related to mandatory reporting requirements.

Information to be Shared with Reporters

Screeners must share specific information with all reporting sources. The information to be shared creates a better understanding for reporters about child welfare processes and encourages future reporting. The screener must relay the following information to every reporter:

- That the identity of the reporter will not be disclosed unless disclosure is to a law enforcement agency (LEA) for purposes of investigating the report; unless disclosure is required because the reporter may need to testify as a witness in court; or unless the court orders Child Welfare staff to disclose the identity of the reporter.

- That anyone making a report of abuse in good faith, who has reasonable grounds to make the report, is immune from liability in respect to making the report and the contents of the report.

Further, ORS requires that reporters are told whether contact will be made with the family, whether abuse occurred and whether services will be provided.

- When a screener determines a report must be assigned, the screener must notify the reporter that if contact information is provided, efforts will be made by the CPS worker to inform the reporter at a later date if contact with the alleged victim was made, if abuse occurred, and if services will be provided.

- When a screener determines a report must be closed at screening, the screener must notify the reporter of the following:
  - Contact with the alleged victim will not be made
  - An abuse determination will not be made
  - Whether services will be provided

- If the screening decision is not known at the time the call is complete, let the reporter know diligent efforts will be made to notify the reporter once known if contact information is provided.

- Screeners must also inform mandatory reporters that they should consider maintaining a record of their report.
to document their compliance with ORS 419B.010 and 419B.015.

Lastly, the screener must provide the screening report number and screener name to the reporter within the call or via the No Reply Email. The allows the reporter to have identifying information as reference.
Chapter 2
Screening

Section 3: Screening Process and Practice
Screening Process for Information Received at the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline

While there is overlap in the overall philosophy and approach to information collection, potential reports of abuse are handled by screeners differently than those calls that are related to Family Support Services requests or information and referral calls. It is expected that the screener deliberates on what has been revealed during the screening interview and the information collection process, and based on that deliberation, screeners will make critical decisions about the children and families to be served by Oregon’s child welfare system. As part of the process for assessing information, it is expected that screeners have a depth of understanding about child safety.

Knowledge of Safety Intervention Concepts: The screener possesses knowledge of and considers safety intervention concepts as the foundation for conducting screening information collection and decision-making. Child safety is the primary driver of decision-making and intervention approaches applied throughout the Child Welfare system. The screener recognizes the importance of knowing and using essential safety concepts to perform effective practice and screening decision-making. The essential concepts applied during screening assessment are:

- Gather sufficient information to determine if there is an allegation of abuse
- Determine allegation type(s)
- Determine if information meets criteria to be assigned
- If report meets the criteria for assignment, determine response timeline

Thorough Documentation and Justification of Screening Decisions: The screener thoroughly documents reported information, identifies specific decisions, and provides a rationale for screening decisions. Screening documentation is the framework for CPS intervention into family life based on concerns for child safety. Screening documentation is sufficient when all information that can be known and is relevant is gathered from the reporter and clearly and fully recorded.

The standard for screening documentation is the same regardless of the screening decision (i.e., assigned for CPS assessment or closed at screening).

Timeline for Response: The screener collects and assesses information in order to recommend a justifiable response to a report, based on safety concepts and allegation definitions. Response Timelines refers to the designated times that face-to-face initial contact is made by the CPS worker as a result of information within a report that suggests a child’s safety is threatened. The face-to-face initial contact is required for the alleged victims, their siblings, and any other children living in the home.

Reporter Assessment

Screeners are part of the equation for understanding what has been reported and initiating the safety decision-making process. Once screeners have collected the information provided by the callers, they will assess the information in order to make critical decisions about next steps.

For the purpose of screening, the screener must evaluate the relationship between the caller and depth of information the caller may have regarding the child of concern. At times reporters have limited information that is more incident based. Other times reporters have significant knowledge about the adults, children, and how different factors influence safety. The screening interview for these situations will vary greatly depending upon the screeners analysis of what the reporter is “likely to know” or “could reasonably know” based on their relationship with the family and how long they have known them.

Screener Engages the Reporter: The screener communicates and behaves in ways that engages the reporter interpersonally in the information sharing and collection exchange. Screeners employ a customer-centered approach for interaction with everyone who reports a concern for abuse. The customer-centered approach incorporates the following essential principles:

- Respect
-Courtesy
- Prompt Response
- Support and Encouragement
- Professionalism
- Enabling and Promoting Participation
- Providing Direction
- Providing Necessary Information

The screening interview is different than a CPS interview. It combines skills that encourage reporters to fully reveal what they know about the alleged abuse. The intention of engaging reporters in the process is directed at ensuring that reporters understand what screeners are concerned with; to assure reporters about the rightness of their reporting; to provide support when reporters are upset and emotional; and to motivate reporters to reveal all the pertinent information they have that is related to alleged abuse and danger.

Engagement in screening is also different from the engagement process that occurs in CPS intervention because it is typically confined to a single, short interchange. The screener’s intention is to raise the comfort level of the reporter, express reassurance and support, give reporters necessary information and guidance to participate, and to create what can be felt by reporters as a “customer-friendly” service experience.

Engaging communication and behavior include:

- Treating the reporter’s concern with the utmost importance.
- Assuring the reporter that they are doing the right thing by reporting.
- Recognizing that the reporter’s message deserves careful listening and consideration.
- Recognizing that the reporter is a highly valued source of information.
- Assuring the reporter that their opinion matters.
- Understanding that the reporter is the catalyst for launching the CPS assessment of abuse.
Screening Assessment Information Collection: Effective screening depends on successfully gathering sufficient and relevant information to the screening decision and determination of response timelines. To the extent that a reporter knows and can report relevant and sufficient information, the screener attempts to collect it.

Screening Assessment Interview Process: The Screening Assessment Interview Process is a procedure used by the screener to structure and guide the reporter through the information collection process. The use of the process and ORCAH Documentation Guide among all screeners promotes a consistent professional approach to information collection that emphasizes reporter respect and diligent inquiry.

Interviewing Skills: There are thirteen (13) interviewing techniques that are fundamental to effective interviewing skill during the screening assessment interview. These techniques (open/indirect questions, closed questions, concreteness, partializing, paraphrasing, verbal cuing and encouraging, reflective listening, normalization and universalization, refocusing, exploration, affirming, and summarization) are used to build rapport and engage the reporter in the information collection process, to facilitate specific information collection, to increase the depth and breadth of information collected, and to focus the interview.

Reporter Engagement and Rapport Building

As screeners complete the screening interview, they work to understand the reporter’s motivation for calling. Screeners will also be working to engage reporters and to build rapport, both of which will facilitate information collection and open dialogue.

Reporter Assessment and Relationship to Potential Subjects of the Report: Screeners will engage with reporters who have both extensive and limited relationships with the families and children they are sharing information about.

Many reporters do not know the family and are aware of only a specific event or a series of similar events. Conversely, other reporters may be close family, friends, or have spent significant time interacting with and/or serving the family/children in question. These reporters include any person who has personal knowledge based on a reasonable period of time to have been exposed (somewhat extensively) to individual and family history, family life, daily routines, and individual and family functioning. This includes relatives, friends, neighbors, coworkers, professionals, community associations (such as church members), etc.

For all reporters, the screening interview should begin with screeners working to identify the nature of the reporter’s relationship to the alleged victim, alleged perpetrator, family and their motivation for calling. This assessment allows screeners to determine how far the overall inquiry should go and the depth of information the reporter may or may not have about the family. This information, in addition to when the reporter last had contact with the child and their source of the information, must be documented in the Reporter section of the Participants page of the screening report. The context of the reporter’s knowledge is essential for the screeners report and allows the reader to understand how the information is known.

In general, once it is determined that a reporter has limited information, screeners can be selective about delving into the assessment functioning questions. However, it is crucial that documentation indicate consideration of what the reporter could reasonably know and screening efforts to inquire about those areas based on that consideration.

Reporter responses to a screener’s questions, guide the next phase of the interview and to rule in or out the kinds of information the reporter may be able to share.
The screener will seek clarification, explore for details and specifics, reconcile conflicts in what is reported, confirm the specifics of alleged facts, identify additional sources of information, and evaluate the motivation of the reporting party.

Law Enforcement Reporting Parties: When the reporting party is a law enforcement officer, the screener will include the following questions in the interview:

- Are they requesting immediate CPS assistance?
- What is the associated incident or report number?

Reporter Engagement and Rapport Building: The early phases of conversation with reporters and the success of the overall screening process will largely be driven by a screener’s ability to engage reporters and to build rapport with reporters.

While personal style is encouraged and acknowledged as a significant influence on interpersonal dynamics, core techniques exist that provide the necessary skill to accomplish effective screening assessments.

Engaging communication and behavior that prevail during the screening process include:

- Beginning where the reporter is in terms of their need to express their concern on their terms;
- Reassuring the reporter that their concern is valued;
- Dealing with reporters respectfully regardless of their status or circumstances;
- Demonstrating non-judgmental communication; and
- Explaining to reporters and reassuring them that what they report, and their identity, remains confidential.

Requesting Mandatory Reporter’s Date of Birth

It is our goal to capture accurate and relevant information. In doing so, we must ask each mandatory reporter for their date of birth to provide accurate data collection and reduce duplication of mandatory reporter records.

If a mandatory reporter does not provide their date of birth, the screener accepts their decision and does not document their refusal in the screening report.

Trauma Informed Reporter Engagement

ODHS is committed to engaging all staff, reporters, and families on the presumption that they have experienced trauma. Individual trauma results from an event, series of events, or set of circumstances experienced by an individual as physically or emotionally harmful or life-threatening. These events have lasting negative effects on the individual’s functioning and mental, physical, social, emotional, or spiritual well-being. In screening, it is essential to use a trauma informed approach that is inclusive of all people, especially populations that have experienced historical and racial trauma. Elements of this engagement seeks to balance competence with kindness:

- Realize the widespread impact of trauma and understand the potential pathways for recovery;
- Recognize the signs and symptoms of trauma in families and reporters;
• Respond by fully integrating knowledge about trauma in screening practices;
• Seek to actively Resist re-traumatization.

Screeners have an active role in understanding, empathizing, and interviewing in a trauma-informed interaction with the reporter. A positive customer service interaction is helpful, demonstrated expertise, attentiveness, respect, and timeliness. Being trauma-informed in part means having patience with the reporter, knowing that anywhere between 50-70% of adults in the United States have experienced trauma. The process of reporting can trigger emotional, behavioral, physical and cognitive impacts.

Another element of trauma-informed recognizing disproportionality in the Child Welfare and other systems. This is especially true for African American and Native American people who are over-reported to Child Welfare.

Interview/Questioning Techniques

The screener applies a neutral approach to the interviewing process. This means that the screener’s efforts to understand what is being reported about a family and the incidents are objective rather than subjective. There is no intention to seek positive or negative information from the reporter. The screener’s intention is to interview in ways that focus, confirm, clarify, reconcile, elaborate, and corroborate the contents of the report. Screeners should use the following questioning techniques when engaging reporters in the interview process.

Open Ended Questions

Screeners should typically begin each new line of questioning and/or transition in topic with an open-ended question. Open questions help to remove screeners from the responsibility for “carrying” the interview by establishing a conversational quality to the interaction. Open questions are questions that cannot be answered “yes” or “no” or in just a few words. Open questions encourage the reporter to elaborate with a wider range of responses. Open-ended questions typically begin with words such as what, where, how, and why.

Indirect questions can occur within the interview in forms that are not really questions, such as, “Tell me about how you came to know this about their relationship,” or “I’m wondering how Paul will feel about a CPS worker coming to his house.” Although not appearing as a question, the effect is the same.

Closed Ended Questions

Closed questions should be used to restrict or narrow the focus of a reporter’s response. Closed questions should be used purposefully when precise detail and great clarity is needed from the reporter, such as demographic information. During the screening interview, closed questions may be used more frequently when there is a need for interview and time management; when the reporter is a concrete thinker and communicator; when the reporter is having difficulty expressing themselves; and when screeners want to verify information and restate that information in the form of yes/no questions.

This skill is used to clarify vague or unknown terms and information. Screeners may need to qualify information from the family in concrete terms, or the caller may need the screener to clarify information for them. Screeners do not assume a “common understanding” of terms/information and recognize that meaning may be different between people or family systems. When slang, or words not immediately known or understood are used, screeners always follow up to find out what the term or phrase means to the caller.
Paraphrasing

The primary intent of paraphrasing during the screening interview is to facilitate the clarification of reporter statements, opinions, judgments, and concerns.

Paraphrasing may involve selecting and using the reporter’s own key words. This enables screeners to better judge what is heard from a reporter and if it is accurate. Beyond reusing the reporter’s language and personal word choice, it is important to note that paraphrasing is not simply stating back to the reporter their comments verbatim.

Paraphrasing involves formulating the essential message that the reporter is conveying and then stating that message back in the screener’s own words or “laced” with the reporter’s language and wording.

When using this technique, screeners should make sure to confirm the accuracy of their statement by concluding the paraphrase with a simple question such as, “Is that correct?” or “Does that sound accurate?”

Verbal Cuing and Encouraging

This technique serves to keep reporters talking about a particular topic, issue, or concern. Encouraging may be as simple as using a slight verbal cue or prompt such as, “Uh-huh,” “I see,” “Go on,” and/or “Then what?”. Encouraging may also involve using precisely chosen key words or key phrases stated by the reporter in order to get the person to elaborate further, such as, “Angry?”, “Not the first time?”, and/or “Always happens?”.

Reflective Listening

Reflective listening statements involve interpreting what a reporter believes, thinks, feels, perceives, and understands about what they are stating with respect to the alleged abuse, and then stating and offering an interpretation back to the reporter.

In the screening interview, without the benefit of seeing the reporter, the interpretation of what the reporter is communicating is based on their verbal responses and quality of the responses (e.g., tone, emphasis, emotion, inflection, etc.). As a technique and mental process, reflective listening statements begin with listening to what is being communicated by the reporter and then processing the information and speculating on the meaning of what the reporter has stated, and then “reflecting” the meaning back to the reporter in the form of a statement. A statement is used rather than a question because a statement is more likely to produce reporter elaboration, and further, a statement influences the reporter to reveal the accuracy of their perceptions or feelings.

Normalization and Universalization

Use of these skills conveys understanding, empathy and respect. Normalization points out that other people experience similar thoughts and feelings in similar situations or circumstances. Universalization reflects on what other groups of people have done or experienced.

Refocusing

The screening interview often requires the screener to guide how the reporter is providing information. The technique of refocusing and suppression is concerned with keeping the information collection process on track. In a supportive manner, the screener accepts what the reporter is saying, indicates the need to not pursue the subject or point immediately, but to set it aside. The suppressing of information provision may occur because the information is not relevant, or the information is relevant, but it is the wrong time to go into detail about it. The screener refocuses the reporter to return to discussing or revealing more information about an issue.

Exploration

Exploration depicts an action of digging deeper and uncovering more information to better understand. Fundamentally, that is how the technique of exploration operates: When screeners encounter provocative pertinent information, or alternatively, vague information that appears to hold significant value to decision-making, screeners explore to fully understand all dimensions and elements that the reporter can provide. Sometimes screeners may use exploring, which can be employed as repetitive questions of similar content, to confirm the believability of what is being reported.

Exploration is very focused. Screeners should not allow the conversation to drift into other reporter statements or initiate questions related to different areas of inquiry.

Affirming

Affirmation reassures the reporter that they took the appropriate action to report, and that the reporter’s concern is relevant for screening. In specific exchanges, it confirms that what is being reported is believable and understandable. Screeners may assert things such as, “You were absolutely right to call;” and/or “I believe what you experienced was difficult.” Affirming provides support and encouragement to the reporter to continue to participate, to elaborate, and to gain confidence in the action they have taken.

In the process of affirming reporters, screeners must avoid making judgements about the family or individuals involved with the potential report abuse. Screeners should also avoid making judgements about future actions or decision-making that will occur as part of the child welfare service continuum.

Summarizing

Summarizing is a technique that can be used during the screening interview intermittently to ensure the screener’s understanding and to “check” with the reporter about whether screeners are tracking the conversation accurately. Summarizing should always be used in the closing stage of the screening interview process. The specificity of the summary is up to screeners to determine. For example, for reporters who are confused, emotional, or highly concrete, screeners may want to go into more detail in the summary.

The summary is introduced exactly as that; screeners might say: “I want to stop here for a minute, if you don’t mind, and go over what I think we’ve been talking about.” Then screeners can proceed, reiterating what the reporter has stated, how screeners clarified it, and where common agreement results.

Stages of the Interview

A well-structured screening interview and related processes result in obtaining sufficient information from reporters, are more efficient, and help to process the screening interview in a timely manner.

The screening assessment interview consists of three stages: Introductory Stage, Exploratory Stage, and Closing Stage. Within these stages are steps that provide more direction to the screener for conducting the interview, completing documentation, and processing the report.
Introduction

The Introductory Stage of the screening interview is focused on gathering a general orientation to the reporter and the information they want to share. Screeners must complete the following:

- Complete Introductions with the Reporter: Introductory processes are intended to provide a general orientation to the reporter regarding the screening process. The screener should complete the following initial activities:
  - Complete introductions (screener and reporter);
  - Gather reporter identifying information and phone number;
  - Confirm the reason for the call, and confirm the reporter is concerned about potential abuse;
  - Obtain information regarding family composition and demographics (identify family members, third party perpetrators and their roles and relation to each other);
  - Briefly explain the screening process;
  - Provide notifications to reporters related to reporter identity and confidentiality, anonymity, and the need to maintain a record of the report, if the caller is a mandated reporter.

During the Introduction, it is important to be aware of the time associated with gathering demographic information in these beginning stages. Screeners should be aware that basic demographic information needs to be collected during the screening interview and time must be taken to gather complete and accurate information. Complete demographic information includes the following:

- Name and age of alleged victim, their ethnicity, language spoken, and whether they have any American Indian or Alaska Native ancestry; and
- Name and age of all children living in the household; and
- Names of the parents, caregivers, or guardians; and
- Name of the alleged perpetrator or perpetrators and their relationship to the child; and
- Address and current whereabouts of all of the above persons, as well as information about how to locate the child, the parent/caregiver, and the alleged perpetrator; and
- Any additional relevant information about family members or contacts.

The screener will also determine, if possible, and document the Hispanic origin of the child/family. The screener will indicate that the client is of Hispanic origin if the client is a Mexican, Puerto Rican, Cuban, Central or South American person, or person of other Spanish cultural origin regardless of race. Whether or not a person is Hispanic, or Latino is determined by how they the person defines themselves. In the case of a young child, parent/caregivers determine the Hispanic origin of the child.

- Relationship: The screener will determine and document the relationship of every participant as they relate to one another.
- Whereabouts: The screener will make diligent efforts to determine and document the whereabouts of every identified family member.

- Military status: When the screener knows a family member has or is serving in the armed services, the screener should document the family member’s military status. This may include an individual who is, or has at one time been, on active duty, in the Reserve, or in the National Guard.

- Worker safety concerns: The screener will explore and identify with the reporter any concerns regarding child welfare staff personal safety, i.e., extensive violent criminal history, access to weapons, previous threats to ODHS staff, threatening animals at residence, etc. This is a critically important screener function, as it directly impacts the safety of staff. Screeners must exercise diligence in gathering sufficient information to ensure worker safety:
  - If worker safety concerns are identified, the screener must check the box that can be selected on the decision page of the screening report that alerts to a worker safety issue. A summary of the safety related concerns will be documented.
  - An example could include the identification of pets within a household. Screeners would then determine if the animals may be aggressive, properly restrained, etc.

- Accessibility concerns: The screener will collect any information related to difficulty the child welfare staff may encounter in gaining access to the family (e.g., gate code, complex names, and directions to the home). The screener may also work to determine if there is reason to believe that the family is about to flee (i.e., caregivers overtly reject CPS intervention or refuse access to the child, and/or the child’s whereabouts cannot be ascertained.

Allow Reporter to Share Information Unimpeded: Provide reporters a clear opportunity to tell their story. If something is shared that is not clear, you should seek clarification, but encourage the reporter to continue sharing their concerns. The screener should begin by being open and nondirective in initially collecting information from the reporter, and then proceed to being more specific and focused based on what the reporter reveals.

Example questions or prompts include the following:

- Why don’t we begin with you telling me about your concerns?
- Tell me what your concerns are about the family.
- I may have a question if I’m not clear on something you say, but for now, I would just like you to have an opportunity to share what you know about the family.

Many reporters feel a sense of immediacy about sharing what they know when they make a call to Child Welfare. Allowing information to be shared without unnecessary interruptions enables reporters to relay their concerns, and they will likely become more focused as the interview proceeds. It also allows screeners to get a broad understanding of what is being reported, which will help determine what further specific information will be needed by the conclusion of the interview in order to make decisions.

Respond to the Reporter’s Emotional Reactions: The emotional reaction of reporters is another issue of immediacy that screeners must be aware of and respond to as needed. If reporters are anxious, angry, or afraid, screeners should not dismiss their feelings and emotions by proceeding with the interview as though their reactions are not relevant to information collection. Screeners should recognize that the reporter is the primary source of information for screening. decision-making. A highly charged or highly emotional reporter may not be as able to provide clear and detailed information. Effective interviewing requires screeners to correctly read the emotions of the reporter and respond so that the reporter can fully participate.

Often, reporters just need to have their emotions validated or feel as though their concerns are being heard before they can move into the Exploratory Stage. A reporter’s expression of emotion during the interview can also reveal significant information about the identified family as well as the referral source.

Determine Appropriateness of the Report: Prior to proceeding with the Exploratory Stage of the screening assessment, it is important to consider whether the reporter is providing information that legitimately concerns abuse. By the conclusion of the Introduction Stage, the screener should have a sense about the appropriateness of the report.

The basic demographic information should have revealed whether the reporter knows the name of the family and where the family resides, or where the child is located. By this point, reporters will have discussed why they are calling and will have shared the concerns about a family situation and the basis for that knowledge. The vast majority of reporters calling believe that they are making a report of abuse. It is the screener’s responsibility to discern whether the information provided by a reporter up to this point indicates that abuse or danger is a possibility. It is crucial that screeners do not make premature conclusions regarding the appropriateness of a report. It could be that a report is appropriate, but a reporter has not fully articulated their concern yet.

At this point in the interview, screeners should consider the following:

- If it is at all unclear that a report is appropriate for the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline, it is the responsibility of the screener to seek more detailed information from a reporter during the Exploratory Stage to definitively make a screening decision.

- If a screener receives information that the report is likely the responsibility of the Office of Training, Investigations, and Safety (OTIS), they must proceed to the Exploratory and Closing Stages of the interview to collect sufficient information and provide the reporter with required information.

- If a report is obviously not abuse related, or the “reporter” is really seeking information or resources, then a screener may choose to conclude the screening assessment interview and proceed in providing information requested or inform the reporter as to why the information does not meet the requirements for child welfare intervention.

Exploratory

In the Exploratory Stage of the screening interview, screeners should initiate and move to a more structured, guided interview process. Screeners must complete the following:

- Assist the Reporter in Focusing Their Attention: Based on what the reporter shared during the Introduction Stage, screeners should now be focused on filling in the gaps regarding what is known and what is not known. Screeners should seek specific information and details about indications abuse and information about family member functioning.

- Collect Thorough and Detailed Information Based on the extent and circumstances of the abuse: During the Exploratory Stage, it is important for screeners to ask questions and be cued into reporter information that informs screening decisions, primarily the decisions related to report assignment and priority response.
The interview questions must focus on gathering information specific to the alleged abuse and relevant information about the vulnerabilities of the child(ren) to inform the screening decision and response timelines.

While it is possible that reporters may not be able to provide you with sufficient information, screeners are required to pursue the information available and that will help to provide a comprehensive understanding of family dynamics for use in screening decision-making.

Pertinent information that should be collected and documented during the Exploratory Stage in the ORCAH Documentation Guide includes:

Extent of Alleged Abuse

Documentation related to the extent of abuse is critical for screening decision-making because it sets the framework for whether what is alleged meets the definition of abuse and requires a CPS response. Further, the detail provides clarity regarding the condition of the child and whether the abuse or negative conditions threatening child safety are isolated or ongoing. The following information will allow you to clearly articulate the extent of the abuse:

- What is the allegation being reported?
- Which child(ren) are being allegedly abused?
- Who is responsible for the alleged abuse?
- Where did the alleged abuse occur (geographic location)?
- When did the alleged abuse occur?
- What is the likely or known impact to the child(ren) due to the alleged abuse?
- What is the condition of the child(ren) at the time of the report?
- Are there physical signs of injury present on the child such as injuries on parts of the body that are not typical? Injuries to the back, neck, ears, buttocks or genitals are more likely to be associated with abuse.
- Is the child currently receiving medical care due to the alleged abuse or does the reporter believe the child needs medical care?
- Has the child attempted suicide, present with suicidal ideation or displayed behaviors that self-injure?

To answer these questions and sufficiently document the extent of abuse, the screener may use the following additional questions or prompts:

- Can you tell me in detail the concerns you have regarding abuse or the child’s safety?
- Can you clarify why you think that the child is being abused?
- Who is responsible for what is happening?
- Tell me about how the child is doing now.
- What has the child said about what is happening?
• Do you know when the incident occurred?
• Did the child have an injury? Describe size, location, color. Is the child in pain or have impact on mobility?
• How long has the child been in this condition?
• Is it your impression that the injury/condition is serious?

Circumstances Surrounding the Alleged Abuse:

Information regarding the circumstances surrounding the alleged abuse is important for determining if abuse or negative conditions threatening child safety are in the process of occurring, isolated, or constant. Again, thorough and detailed information helps screeners determine whether there are indications of Present or Impending Danger.

Information gathered for this domain is sufficient when it can describe the overall conditions that raise to the level of safety concerns, to include pervasiveness, how long they have occurred, what factors contribute, and the level of self-awareness of the caregivers to what they may contribute to the concerns. Sufficiency of this domain is impacted by the reporter’s extent of knowledge, which is directly correlated to the reporter’s degree of involvement/familiarity with the conditions surrounding the alleged abuse.

By the conclusion of the screening interview, screeners should be able to document the circumstances surrounding the abuse and should be able to craft narrative that is responsive to the questions that are detailed below:

• What led up to the incident/family condition?
• How often does this occur?
• Are safety concerns pervasive (widespread/occurring across multiple situations)?
• How long has this been going on?
• To what level has this been occurring? How has it impacted the child over time?
• What is/was caregiver’s reaction?
• What are the other family members in the home reaction(s)?
• What explanation did the caregivers provide?
• What is the caregiver’s accessibility to the child?
• Are there weapons in the home?
• Is/was the abuse intentional or impulsive?
• Does anyone in the home express fear?
• Was there any substance usage going on at the time of the incident? How often does that occur?
• Is there current or historical mental health concerns for report participants?
• Do you know if there is any violence in the home or history of power and control dynamics?
• Who is the child with now?

• Are there cultural belief or considerations impacting the report of alleged abuse?

• Do any of the report participants have criminal history or engagement with law enforcement?

Additional family-centered screening questions regarding the circumstances surrounding the abuse may include:

• Has there ever been a time when you did not have these concerns for the family?

• What else can you tell me that will help me get a more balanced picture of this family?

• Does the family call on others to help solve problems?

• Do they have support from family or friends?

• What do you think is the cause of the reported concern?

Documentation related to the circumstances surrounding the abuse qualifies the alleged abuse by placing it in a context or situation that (1) precedes or leads to the alleged abuse, or (2) exists while the alleged abuse is occurring. By documenting surrounding circumstances separately from the alleged abuse, screeners establish a greater indication of how serious the abuse might be. In other words, the circumstances that accompany the abuse are important and are significant in and of themselves and qualify how serious the abuse is.

Additional information relevant to screening decision and assignment response timelines: Child Vulnerability

Information regarding child vulnerability informs if a child may be unsafe, regardless of their age. Child vulnerability can be determined by asking questions about a child’s behaviors, emotional well-being, resiliency, socialization, sexual and physical health and development.

When considering child vulnerability, these warning signs are helpful to consider:

• Injuries for which the child has no explanation or a reason that isn’t logical

• Medical, dental, vision or mental health needs that appear to go unaddressed

• Poor height or weight growth when there is no identified medical cause

• A child who has a sexually transmitted infection

• Behavioral signs or statements made by the child

• Regularly runs away from home

• The appearance of extreme fatigue on a regular basis

• A pattern of stealing food or complaining of hunger

• A child who cries, cowers or otherwise indicates that they do not feel safe in the presence of a parent or caregiver

• Losing skills already developed, including incontinence when potty-training has been well established
• Statements about being unsupervised before they can safely care for themselves
• Statements they fear their parent or caregiver or don’t want to go home
• Asking others to supply necessities
• Direct statements about experiencing abuse
• Behavioral signs or statements made by the parent or caregiver
• Disregard for the child’s feelings, needs or emotions
• Seeing the child as entirely bad, evil, or worthless
• Describing the child in sexual terms or implying that the child may provoke sexual contact from others
• Expecting the child to behave in ways unrealistic for their abilities or development
• Seeming to purposely isolate the child, including removing them from school or other activities
• Offering conflicting, unconvincing or no explanation for injuries or events

Information gathered about child vulnerability is sufficient when it can describe if and how the child is susceptible to the overall abuse conditions. By the conclusion of the screening interview, screeners should be able to document the child vulnerabilities and should be able to craft a narrative that is responsive to the questions that are detailed below:

• What can you tell me about the child? How would you describe them?
• How does the child communicate or express their needs?
• How does the child relate to the caregivers in the home?
• Does the child have any special needs or diagnosis? Are they receiving any services?
• Does the child appear healthy?
• Does the child have any mental health needs?
• Is the child on medication or actively being seen by physical or mental health professionals?
• Do you know how the child does in school academically? Behaviorally?
• Is the child involved in any other activities outside the home?
• Are there changes in the child’s behavior?
• Does the child have friends?

Child vulnerability should be a focus of both information collection and the corresponding documentation. Vulnerabilities must be qualified by the age and development of each child. It is important that screeners know and consider child development as they interview a reporter and again when documenting the information received.

The Closing Stage:
The closing stage of the screening interview is focused on ensuring that all the gaps and discrepancies in information collection have been noted and, when possible, discussed and addressed. Screeners must complete the following:

- Inform the reporter of the next steps that Child Welfare will take, specifically about whether the information will be documented, and the outcome of the report.
  - When a screener determines a report will be assigned, the screener must notify the reporter that if contact information is provided, efforts will be made by the CPS worker to inform the reporter at a later date if contact with the alleged victim was made, if abuse occurred, and if services will be provided.
  - When a screener determines a report will be closed at screening, the screener must notify the reporter of the following:
    - Contact with the alleged victim will not be made;
    - An abuse determination will not be made; and
    - Whether services will be provided.

- Seek to understand how the family might react to Child Welfare intervention

- Ensure that all essential information has been collected from the reporter: Prior to concluding the interview, make sure that all gaps in demographic information have been addressed and noted. If necessary, return to seeking necessary identifying information regarding all the individuals named in the report. Ensure that all demographic and family composition information has been obtained. Allow the reporter another opportunity to consider any remaining information that they feel is important to share that may have not yet been revealed during the Exploratory Stage of the interview.

- Images Provided by the Reporter: Images of alleged abuse are accepted by screeners as a part of the report. Images must be documented in the report along with a written description of each image including but not limited to the following:
  - The individuals in the image
  - Who took the picture or image?
  - Where did the reporter get the image?

If the reporter indicates there are pornographic images, screeners must not accept the images. The caller can be directly connected to a live CyberTipline call taker at 1-800-843-5678. The CyberTipline is operated through the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children (NCMEC). This tip line is a resource for law enforcement agencies that can assist LEA in determining the appropriate LEA response. If there are jurisdiction questions, and/or the offense was facilitated through the internet, the CyberTipline will refer the information to the responsible Internet Crimes Against Children (ICAC) task force. The Oregon Department of Justice (DOJ) operates the Oregon ICAC task force. If the caller is unwilling to contact the CyberTipline, ORCAH staff can also make contact through the above number or at www.cybertipline.com.

Screening Decision-Making

As screeners conclude the screening interview, they then must make two critical decisions regarding the information they have received and whether it requires further child welfare intervention. Screeners are required to assess and analyze the information provided to them during the screening interview and to make two critical decisions regarding further child welfare intervention:

- Screening Decision: The screener must determine if the reported concerns include an allegation of abuse and meet the criteria to assign for CPS assessment or close at screening.

- Response Timeline Decision: The screener must then determine the timing of the CPS response if a report of alleged abuse is assigned.

To make these decisions, screeners must apply a set of criteria to the information that has been collected.

Assign or Close at Screening: How to Make the Screening Decision

When completing the screening assessment, the screener must consider all the information gathered at screening to determine whether the totality of the information meets the criteria to assign or close at screening. Sufficient information gathered includes:

- The extent of the alleged abuse
- The circumstances surrounding the alleged abuse
- Child vulnerabilities
- Child Welfare history on individuals in the family, household and report
- When information is received regarding an open assessment or open case, contact with the current caseworker or supervisor
- Collateral source
- If relevant, criminal history

Collateral Contact

The screener may only make efforts to gather additional information from collateral contacts and law enforcement when there is insufficient information to assign the report for CPS assessment and:

- The information gathered from the reporter is concerning; and
- The collateral contact or law enforcement data is likely to supplement the report with sufficient information to make the screening decision.

- Sources of collateral contact could include law enforcement, school, medical provider or others who may have direct knowledge of the child or circumstances.

Additional Information Regarding the Same Allegations

If more than one report is received on the same family referring to the same incident, occurring on the same date, regarding the same alleged perpetrator and victim, and the same allegation type, Child Welfare considers these to be a single report. These reports are enhancements to a report already received or assigned for an assessment. The reporting party is providing additional information such as exact address, spelling of names, or new collateral contact; similar reports are considered a single report.

When a screener receives duplicate information:

- Same alleged victim,
- Same alleged perpetrator,
- Same allegation of abuse, and
- Same incident dates on an open CPS assessment, the screener must:
  - Inform the reporter that a new screening report will not be documented because the information already has been received.
  - Provide the reporter with the assigned caseworker’s name and telephone number.
  - Provide contact information about the reporter and any information received to the assigned caseworker and the supervisor.

Information on an open CPS assessment or open Child Welfare case.

- When a screener receives information that constitutes a new report of abuse as defined in OAR 413-015 or a closed at screening on an open CPS assessment, the screener must:
  - Document the information in the ORCAH Documentation Guide.
  - Notify the assigned CPS worker and their supervisor of all new information received, on the same day it is received, and document the notification in the screening report.

When a screener receives information on a family that has an open case and the information is not required to be documented in a screening report, the screener must:

- Notify each assigned caseworker and their respective supervisors of all new information received.
- Document this notification in OR-Kids case notes, omitting the reporter information in the case note.
- Complete notification no later than the end of the screener’s workday.
- The exception to completing a notification is when the case is identified on the Case search page as being open to a worker for Post-Guardianship or Post-Adoption assistance. The case and services are open only for the purpose of service provision, not because casework is being managed.

Considerations for New Reports On an Open CPS Assessment or Case

When a Child Welfare CPS assessment or case is open, the screener must attempt to contact the assigned worker as this presents a unique opportunity to gather relevant and essential information. This can assist the screener in determining whether a new allegation exists on an open CPS assessment or case. This can reduce the necessity for a new report and enhance information sharing between programs. What to consider when deciding a report is a new allegation of abuse:
• Is there an impact to the child or young adult by this new information?

• Have we assessed prior or are currently assessing?

• Is the assessment or case open for the same type of abuse being reported today? If so, is this a continuing condition of the current allegations of abuse?
  • Consider that this may not be a new allegation.

• Is this a new incident of abuse?
  • Did it happen in a different way?
  • Did it happen outside the time frame of the last allegations (60 days)?
  • Is there a different perpetrator?
  • Is there a different victim?
    • If yes, consider a new allegation

• If we have a safety plan in place (Always Review Most Recent Safety Plan), review report for safety plan related information:
  • A parent is continuing a pattern of behavior that relates to the current safety threat.
  • A parent has not followed the guidelines of a safety plan and a new incident has occurred.
  • A safety service provider is not providing the safety service they agreed to provide.
  • If the report indicates that the safety plan is insufficient and there is no immediate or direct impact on the child, consider that this may not be a new allegation of abuse.

• Is this a duplicate report?
  • Same victim
  • Same perpetrator
  • Same time/date
  • Same allegation
    • Then this is not a new incident of abuse.

Outreach to Caseworker by Screener

Screeners must attempt contact with the assigned caseworker by the department’s instant message system, followed by an email to the assigned worker and their supervisor when there is an open CPS assessment or open Child Welfare case. Contact will be attempted regardless of the date or time of the receipt of the report. If the caseworker is not responding, the screener must attempt to contact the caseworker’s supervisor. The goal of this communication is to ensure details of circumstances are captured related to the overall report of abuse and determine if the worker is already aware of the situation and if there is a new allegation of abuse. Document these efforts at the end of the circumstances surrounding the alleged abuse section of the report in the report summary.

Timing considerations:

• Screeners should allow up to three hours for the caseworker to respond before completing the report.
But, if caseworkers or supervisors do not respond within the three hours, complete the report without the caseworker information.

- If the report meets the criteria to assign for a within a 24 hour response and the caseworker or supervisor is not available, the screener will proceed immediately with the assignment and not wait for caseworker response.

- When the screening decision is undetermined because there is incomplete information, and it is believed the worker may have additional details to help support the screening decision, an extension for the purpose of caseworker contact, with supervisor approval, is appropriate. When an extension is granted by a supervisor, this must be documented in the screening decision narrative and include the name of the supervisor and the date and time of the approval.

Documenting contact attempts:

Screener efforts to contact and speak with the caseworker or supervisor must be documented in the Report Summary. Screeners should use the following language based on the outcome of their contact attempts:

- If the screener reaches the caseworker: “Contacted caseworker [caseworker name]. Information gathered is included in narrative.”

- If the caseworker does not respond to the screener contact attempt within the time allowed: “Attempted contact with caseworker [caseworker name] but was unsuccessful at reaching them.”

Gathering information from caseworker:

The questions screeners ask the current caseworker or supervisor will depend on many factors. Screeners should consider what information is needed to inform the screening decision and attempt to gather additional information. They should also take into consideration the role of the caseworker (e.g., CPS, Permanency, etc.), length of time the caseworker has been involved with the family.

Questions to consider asking:

- After reviewing OR-Kids for safety plan information:
  - Is there an up to date safety plan or protective action plan already in place?
  - Is the reported information an indication of an insufficient plan?

- What is known about the child and adult participants that may not yet be documented in OR-Kids? (Focus questions to the caseworker on the areas where the reporter offered little information.)

- Is the parent demonstrating a new behavior or parenting practices that impacts child safety?

- If the information provided by the reporter is concerning for abuse, what information has the caseworker gathered that might inform a report about child safety?

- If the report involves a resource parent or safety service provider as alleged perpetrator, what information does the caseworker have about those persons responsibility for the child’s care, supervision, and/or safety of the child that could inform the screening decision?

- Where are the children right now and where will they be in the next 24 hours?
• Do any of the family members have American Indian or Alaskan Native heritage? If yes, does the caseworker know which tribe(s) or Alaskan corporation(s)?

• What is the preferred language of communication for the family members?

• Are there cultural considerations the screener should incorporate into the screening report?

This list is not intended to be an exhaustive list of questions to consider. Nor is the list intended to indicate that the questions are required. Screeners will analyze the information gathered from the reporter and through the OR-Kids history search to determine what information is still needed to make a screening decision or to better explain the circumstances of the report.

Child Welfare History Review

The purpose of history review is to inform the screener as to whether the concerns have been previously reported (a duplicate report), whether the concerns have already been assessed, and to understand patterns and how they relate to current abuse. When the screener clearly identifies a 24 hour response timeline during the call, review of history is limited to the verification that the same report is not currently being assessed. Overall, historical information searching in OR-Kids should be limited to when it will be relevant and necessary for current decision making and the reporter doesn’t have sufficient information. If the information is unknown by the reporter, and the screener has sufficient information to make a screening decision, no further research is needed.

• The screener must determine if the new information has already been documented and/or assessed through review of the Prior Involvement tab in OR-Kids.

• If additional information is needed to make a screening decision or a response timeline decision, the screener must review past closed at screening reports and/or the most recent CPS assessment.

• If it is an open case/open CPS assessment, determine if the allegations are currently being assessed or are the basis for the current open case.

• If the research reveals an "unable to locate" disposition that has not been assessed, the screener must reference that assessment, the date the assessment was completed, and those allegations not able to be assessed in the current report summary.

Inter-State Assignment Considerations and Guidance

ORCAH often receives reports regarding children whose “residence” is not clearly understood. Parents may have shared custody or visitation that occurs in both states. Thinking of these situations, asking the questions below can help us better understand Oregon’s role in safety intervention and what characteristics tip the assignment decision point. When we identify an alleged victim as an Oregon Child, an allegation of abuse and perpetrator that is a parent, caregiver, household member or is a person who has access to the child and the parent/caregiver is unable or unwilling to protect, our rule requires an assessment. This is a guide and is not all encompassing or exclusionary.

Questions to assist in decision making:

• Is custody established in Oregon?
  • If custody is established in Oregon and the child lives in Oregon at least half of the time, consider them an Oregon child.
• What does visitation look like?
  • If the child visits a parent/caregiver in Oregon for any significant period of time, and the abuse occurred in Oregon, consider them an Oregon child. Screener shall contact the other state’s hotline to make a report, determine their screening decision and collaborate when necessary to ensure sufficient safety decision.

• Does a parent receive Self Sufficiency benefits in Oregon on the behalf of the child?
  • Consider them an Oregon Child.

• Where does the child attend school (if school aged)?
  • If in Oregon, consider them an Oregon Child. Who provides primary care for the child? Food, clothing, transportation, making meals, discipline?
    • If that parent/caregiver is doing this in Oregon, consider them an Oregon child.

• Is the physical custodian in another state aware, protective and willing to engage?
  • If yes, they may not be an Oregon Child.

• Is the person who has physical custody able to intervene legally to protect the child?
  • If that person is in Oregon, consider them an Oregon Child.

• If there was a recent change in physical custody or emergency custody order outside of Oregon? What is the plan for the child ongoing?
  • If the plan is to return to Oregon (school, benefits continue) consider them an Oregon Child.
  • If the plan is to stay in the other state, they may not be an Oregon Child.

• Where did the alleged abuse occur?
  • If abuse occurred in another state, contact that hotline to make a report and determine their screening decision. If the other state is assigning, and sufficient child safety decisions are made without further coordination, Oregon does do not need to duplicate the assessment. If a child is unsafe in Oregon, consult with Child Safety Program manager on how to proceed.
  • If the child is a resident of both Oregon and another state, and the other state is responding, the report can be closed at screening.

Consideration: Consider an extension to understand fully the screening decision of the corresponding state when allegations may be applicable in both states. However, do not delay a screening decision or wait for the other state’s screening disposition if not necessary.

Making the Screening Decision

Once the screener has gathered, documented, and reviewed the screening information in the ORCAH Documentation Guide, the screener applies the Structured Decision Making tool to the information to determine the screening decision. It is at this point the screener considers the information in the context of the criteria to assign and the criteria to close at screening.
Oregon’s Child Welfare Structured Decision Making system was developed to use at screening with the objectives of making an accurate screening decision, addressing safety through choosing the applicable response timeline and considering unique factors in each report. The SDM tool is used in conjunction with the ORCAH Document Guide to guide screeners through decision making process with each report of abuse. The guide begins with pre-screening decision making considerations and ushers the screener through the assignment criteria and response timelines.

Assignment Criteria: The screener must assign the report for CPS assessment if the information received constitutes a report of abuse as defined in OAR 413-015-0115(1)(a) of a child; and the information indicates:

- The alleged perpetrator is a legal parent of the alleged victim;
- The alleged perpetrator resides in the same household as the alleged victim;
- The information reported does not meet the first two criteria of this section and is the responsibility of Child Welfare and the alleged perpetrator is:
  - A spouse, former spouse, significant other or former significant other to the child’s parent/caregiver;
  - A significant other to any household member, including the alleged victim;
  - A relative with a close personal relationship and frequent/regular contact with the household;
  - Another child;
  - A sex trafficker; or
  - A person whose access and relationship to the alleged victim cannot be clearly determined.

  Note: There may be additional circumstances that arise, that do not fall under the above criteria that must be assigned. If unclear, the screener should consult a screening supervisor.

- The information received constitutes a report of abuse of a child as defined in OAR 413-015-0115(1)(a) or a report of abuse of a child or young adult as defined in OAR 413-015-0115(1)(b); and involves a home certified by Child Welfare.

- The screener determines the current report would be the fourth or greater consecutive report closed at screening regarding the same child or household and there is at least one child in the home who is less than five years of age, unless an exception has been approved by the CPS program manager or designee; or

- A tribe, LEA, or OTIS requests assistance from CPS with an investigation of abuse, and a screening supervisor agrees that assistance from CPS is appropriate.

Response Timeline Decision-Making Criteria:

Response timeline refers to the time required for CPS staff to make direct face-to-face contact with the child who is the alleged victim of a report of abuse.

Once the screening decision is made, determining the urgency of a CPS Assessment response is the second fundamental safety decision of the screening assessment. The criteria for determining how quickly CPS must respond to a report that is assigned for CPS Assessment is based on the application of information in the abuse report to the Structured Decision Making tool. The three types of response timelines are as follows.

- Within 24 hours response
Within 24 Hours Response Timeline

Reports identified as within a 24 hour response timeline will contain information that indicates:

Failure to respond within 24 hours could result in death of or severe injury to child.

Considering age and developmental status of the child, any abuse allegations, and presence or absence of protective adults, there is concern that the situation is currently unsafe/harmful or will deteriorate to unsafe/harmful if response takes longer than within 24 hours. This includes reports of a suspicious child death when there are other children in the home and allegations are being assigned for the other children in the home.

Child of any age requires urgent medical or mental health evaluation or care for injury, pain, or illness.

This includes parent/caregiver refusal to treat diagnosed medical conditions that require prescribed regimens to ensure safety and allegations include concern that regimens are not being followed, behavior that could have resulted in serious injury that is not immediately visible (e.g., blows to the head, kicks or punches to the stomach or groin, shaking a child under 3), suicidal threats or attempts by child or alleged perpetrator, or other behavior dangerous to self or others.

Child or reporter expresses fear that child will experience harm if the response does not occur within the next 24 hours.

Child is exhibiting behavioral indicators of fear, and this fear is attributable to any allegation of abuse; and/or the reporter provides credible evidence of a threat to the child’s safety if response takes longer than within 24 hours.

Children express fear through different, sometimes contradictory, behaviors. These may include the following:

- Kicking, screaming, biting, spitting, throwing things, etc.
- Shaking, quivering, crying uncontrollably.
- Running away/hiding/trying to escape the predicted dismissal or departure time.
- Zoning out, emotionally distancing from others.
- Hypervigilance/exaggerated response to doors opening, phones ringing, cars approaching.
- Physically distancing self from others. Finding a space to hide (e.g., under table/desk/bed where visual and auditory input are decreased) and avoiding being touched or making eye contact.
- Covering ears, closing eyes, and tucking arms and legs in as much as possible.
- Seeking protection behind an adult, under the adult’s desk, or in the corner of an adult’s office/home.

Fear of parental response to or discipline of a child due to poor grades or behavior must reach the level of concern for child safety. Consider age and developmental status of the child, historical parental response to the child, and concerns or incidents of any abuse.

Tribal partner, law enforcement or OTIS requests immediate assistance.
A law enforcement agency or tribal partner has requested that a caseworker respond immediately to assess a child’s safety.

Family may leave their current location and/or caseworkers may not be able to locate or access the child if the response does not occur within the next 24 hours.

There is concern that the family may flee, the child may become inaccessible, or caseworkers will be unable to locate the family. Examples include but are not limited to the following.

- Home address is unknown and parent/caregiver and/or child is currently at school, hospital, police station, or other known location.
- The parent/caregiver and/or child threaten to flee or have a history of fleeing from Child Protective Services (CPS) or police.

There is a sexual or physical abuse allegation, AND there is reason to believe the alleged perpetrator will have access to the child if the response does not occur within the next 24 hours or the alleged perpetrator is unknown.

The current allegation involves physical or sexual abuse, and there is reason to believe that the alleged perpetrator will have access to the child if the response is not within 24 hours, or the alleged perpetrator is unknown.

Child is currently in an unsafe, unsanitary, or hazardous setting or will be if the response does not occur within the next 24 hours.

There is reason to believe that the situation will likely deteriorate and become unsafe or harmful to the child without a 24-hour response. Consider the child’s age, development, vulnerabilities, any health-related conditions, pattern of recent unsafe or harmful circumstances, and presence or absence of other responsible adults.

Child has a current injury due to alleged abuse.

Reports that include a description of current injury require a response within 24 hours to ensure the caseworker can accurately assess whether Karly’s Law applies.

If the report does not indicate information as presented above then the screener must consider a 10 Business Day response timeline.

Within 10 Business Day Response Timeline

Reports identified as within a 10 Business Day Response Timeline contain information that indicates:

The alleged perpetrator is deceased.

The alleged perpetrator is deceased, and the reported abuse is related to the alleged perpetrator’s death.

Alleged perpetrator is not a parent, legal guardian, or Child Welfare–certified resource parent and has no current contact with the child.

Report of abuse involves a child currently in resource care disclosing past abuse in their family of origin, and no children are currently in the care of the alleged perpetrator.
Report of abuse involves a child currently living with their family of origin disclosing past abuse in resource care, the resource home is closed, and the resource parent does not currently provide care to children.

Report of abuse involves a child disclosing past abuse by a parent/caregiver, and the parent/caregiver has no contact with the child; or there are no current concerns, and the parent/caregiver is not an alleged perpetrator on an open case or assessment.

Report of child fatality with no other children in the home.

Select if the child fatality is determined to be the result of abuse or considered suspicious.

Within Seventy-Two (72) Hours Response Timeline

If the report does not indicate a within 24 hour response timeline or within 10 Business Day response timeline then the screener must assign the report as a within 72 hour response timeline.

Closed at Screening Criteria

If the screener determines the report is required to be documented in a screening report and not referred for CPS assessment, this is a decision to close at screening. When information is closed at screening, it means no additional CPS intervention will occur, and the screening process is complete.

The screener must close the report at screening when:

- The information does not constitute a report of abuse and the screener determines that the information describes behaviors, conditions or circumstances that pose a risk to a child; or
- It is a report of historical abuse, the screener determines that the alleged perpetrator is deceased, and the death of the alleged perpetrator is unrelated to the report of abuse
- It is a report is of abuse and the information indicates the alleged abuse occurred in another country and the alleged perpetrator is located in another country
- The alleged perpetrator is a child and resides in another state
- The child resides in another state
- The child is a resident of both Oregon and another state, and the other state is responding; or
- The screener receives any of the following notifications and the screener determines the information reported would not be assigned:
  - Notification of an expectant mother with no children in the home and the past or current behaviors, conditions or circumstances may endanger a newborn child.
  - When a screener completes a closed at screening related to an expectant mother, the screener may consider sending a hospital alert letter if the expectant mother is on an open CPS assessment or open Child Welfare case. Considerations include:
• A request by the Child Welfare office where the assessment or case are open.
• The level of potential harm identified by the report details

• When sending a hospital alert letter:
  • Include information to identify the pregnant individual;
  • State that the pregnant individual’s newborn may be subjected to abuse and in particular threatened harm to a child, which means subjecting to a severe risk of harm to child’s health or welfare; and

• Notification from a caseworker that a child or young adult is identified as a sex trafficking victim.

• Notification that a child is identified as a substance affected infant and the report does not meet criteria for assignment

For reports received regarding a child or young adult residing outside of Oregon, the screener must close the report at screening and forward to the appropriate jurisdiction.

Documenting the Screening Decision

When documenting the screening decision, the screener explains in the screening Explain text box in OR-Kids the justification for the decision. When the decision to assign requires supervisory consultation, note this by selecting the “Consulting Supervisor” radio button.

For every report, include the allegation, the alleged victim, the alleged perpetrator and their relationship to the children, and the reasoning for the decision to either assign or close at screening. The justification for the decision should be descriptive yet concise. The justification is not a restatement of the screening summary and should include summarized information about the safety concern and timeline for response that are in alignment with the Structured Decision Making tool.

Screening Report Sufficiency

This section provides guidance surrounding the key components needed to clearly understand the family situation and the reason a report was documented. ORCAH’s goals of safety, consistency and customer service are translated through the high-quality documentation each screener narrates. Sufficiency in documentation supports future readers in identifying potential safety issues and managing child safety in the community.

Report Language

How the information is documented matters. Word choice and effort to clarify agency-specific terminology improves the likelihood that the report recipient will understand what is being communicated. Screeners should:

• Be mindful that terminology may impact the reader
• Use non-offensive language
• Use appropriate grammar and punctuation
• Check for spelling, especially names
• Spell out names rather than using acronyms or abbreviations
• Use trauma-informed language
• Use person first language
• Use positively framed information about individuals
• Use names throughout the narrative
• Ensure the reporter identity is not implied in narratives
• Use name and pronouns appropriate to the gender identity of participants in the report. This may differ from the legal name or gender identification on a birth certificate. When that is the case, you document the legal name in the report and use the name and pronouns identified by the participant throughout the rest of the report.
  • For example: John Doe now identifies as Jill Doe and uses she/her pronouns.

Format

Readers often have limited time to review and internalize the information provided in the screening report. The information needs to be organized in such a way that the critical details can quickly be gleaned. The report format should meet the following standards:

• Narrative is clear and concise
• The report is easy to read and quickly understood
• Narratives are typed in paragraph form, not bulleted points
• Topics are separated into paragraphs

Sequence

The sequence of information in the report matters in meeting the sufficiency standard. Readers may become confused if they cannot follow the chronological context. Poor sequencing leads to the reader needing to review the report multiple times to identify the salient points.

The sequence can also be thought of as a chronology of events. The report should provide an overview of the current incident as well as what happened before and after, if known. The reader should easily be able to identify what happened when. The flow of the narrative should allow the reader to answer questions they may have as they read through the narrative.

Document Questions Asked and What is Unknown as Well as Known

Many times, what is unknown is as informative as what is known. Screeners collect both through their conversation with the reporter. The reader is alerted to the gaps in a reporter’s knowledge when screeners clearly articulate in the narrative that a question was asked, and the reporter had no (or limited) information to provide. If the question is not documented, the reader is left wondering if the screener included that question as part of the screening assessment.

Demographics
The demographic information helps to set the stage for the report narrative, defining who is involved, and provides a description of the participants and information about their current location. Please consult the ORCAH Screening Order of Operation for system searches to determine the need for and sequencing of external searches within Accurint, OVERS, eCourt or DHR. The Order of Operations infographic is located on the ORCAH OWL. Demographics must include if known:

- Participants names including each member of the household and their date of birth or approximate age
- Relationships of the participants to one another (including specific details about who is a legal parent if known)
- Roles each participant fills in this report (e.g., Case Name, Alleged Victim, etc.)
- Contact information for the participants, including address and phone number
- Relevant scheduling information to explain participant location (e.g. work schedules, school schedules, parenting plans, visitation schedules or child care information, etc.)
- Preferred language for each participant including information about participants’ race, ethnicity, and cultural heritage
- Participant’s gender and pronouns
- Current location of each child alleged victim
- Information concerning the military status of the parent or guardian of the child who is the subject of the report

Extent of Alleged Abuse

The Extent narrative provides the synopsis of the behaviors, conditions or circumstances that result in the requirement to document concerns or allegations of abuse of a child. The narrative in the Extent domain should answer the questions of who, what, where, when and how. The reader should be clear about any injuries a child victim sustained as well as if those injuries are still present at the time of report. Any alleged victims and perpetrators should be clearly named for easy identification. If a child victim made a disclosure regarding the abuse, that would be included in the Extent domain. The narrative should include discussion of how the incident or ongoing conditions negatively impact or could reasonably impact the child victim(s).

Circumstances Surrounding Alleged Abuse

The Circumstances narrative should be clearly differentiated from the Extent. The Circumstances narrative provides context to better understand the information in the Extent narrative. The Circumstances surrounding alleged abuse should answer the question ‘why?’ Circumstances may include a variety of detail depending on the knowledge of the reporter and what information is needed to better explain the Extent. These details may include:

- Events that led up to the reported concern
- What happened at the conclusion of an incident, or what has happened since?
- Descriptions of family dynamics
• Discussion of power and control issues
• Prior incidents and history
• Relevant criminal history (i.e. information from eCourt)
• Identifying patterns of behavior (has this happened in the past?)
• Frequency of events or behaviors if patterns are identified
• Previous concerns observed by the reporter
• Adult functioning
• Other adult vulnerabilities
• Behavioral descriptors of adult and child behaviors
• Triggers – for the alleged perpetrator(s) or alleged victim(s)
• Any support systems available to the parents or caregivers
• Parents’ or caregivers’ protectiveness and response to abuse, current or historic • Parenting practices in general
• Disciplinary practices
• Discussion of level of access by the alleged perpetrator(s) to the alleged victim(s)
• Child Vulnerabilities
• Information provided by the current caseworker for reports on open cases or open assessments

The context of a report is critical to ensure the reader understands the whole story. The context for the abuse allegation is mostly captured in the Circumstances narrative. The context provides a snapshot of the family or household. It prepares the reader, providing clues about how to approach the participants if they will be interviewing anyone involved. The screener can expand on the context by providing clear detail about what the reporter said, including quotations where appropriate. The context helps to answer the reader’s questions as they move through the report, clarifying patterns of behavior and connections between the participants. It also ensures clarity about why allegations were or were not included and why timelines on assigned reports were selected.

Child Welfare History Review Documentation

As a part of the screening decision, the screener reviews and analyzes history to determine patterns of behavior or identify duplicate reports. The Child Welfare History review documentation is included as a sub-section of the Circumstances narrative. A summary is included in Circumstances Surrounding the Abuse and describes the dispositions of relevant prior screening reports (i.e. Founded or Unfounded), who were the alleged perpetrators and victims in related reports and a description of how the reports relate to the reporter information for the current incident or circumstances.
History review documentation examples:

- “OR-Kids review indicates this report has not been reported or assessed. There are four reports in the past two years relating to neglect due to parental substance abuse.”
- “OR-Kids review indicates the information has not been assessed. There is a prior founded CPS assessment for sexual abuse however due to the recent incident of sexual abuse this new report requires assessment.”
- “History dating back to 2011 relating to mental injury and neglect of Chris. He was placed in resource care from 2013-2015 and then reunified with mother.”
- “The current concerns of threat of harm for domestic violence have not been previously assessed. There was a prior report indicating concerns about violence however no indication of power and control or injuries were reported.”

Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA)/Oregon Indian Child Welfare Act (ORICWA)

The Indian Child Welfare Act is a restorative act intended to address historic efforts to separate native children from their families and communities. Child Welfare has a responsibility to gather and document American Indian and Alaskan ancestry. The reader should clearly understand if the reporter knew of such heritage for the participants when the screening interview was conducted. Additionally, the screener should document any notification Child Welfare previously received about such heritage. This information is located through a search of OR-Kids: reviewing previous Screening Reports, the File Cabinet for form 1270, a case note criteria search and the Tribal Contact Search page where applicable. The screener should assist the reader by documenting whether the child or family may have heritage, whether a Tribe is named, and if ODHS has previous knowledge of ancestry.

Screening Decision

The screening decision is not a restatement of the Extent. The reader should clearly understand which allegation(s) has been identified in the Structured Decision Making tool. The identified alleged perpetrators and victims must also be clearly identified in the documentation of the screening decision. It should describe how the report meets the standard for the allegations selected (or does not meet that standard in the case of closed at screening reports). It should also support the selection of contact timelines when a report meets requirements for assessment.

Reporter Information

Reporter information is essential to understanding the context of the report for those readers provided with the reporter information. The narrative must include:

- The reporter connection or relationship to the participants
- Reporter contact information
- The reporter’s last known contact with the child(ren)
- How the reporter became aware of the information (i.e. personal observation or report from a 3rd party)
• The reporter’s motivation for calling the day they are reporting (e.g. calling because they are a mandated reporter, because they are concerned for the child, or for another reason)

• The reporter’s date of birth.

Report Summary

After reviewing the report details, the reader should be clear who else was alerted to the report concerns or allegations. The notifications to law enforcement and other agencies should be clearly called out. The reader should be alerted to notification to current caseworkers and their supervisors for reports on open cases or assessments within the decision narratives. Lastly, the readers should be notified of special considerations such as worker safety concerns, need for interpreters, possible sex trafficking or other circumstances that would require a case to be restricted.

Final Notes

The Screening Report is a complex document, requiring a high level of skill to sufficiently capture information gathered from the reporter and through research of historical documents. Screeners can greatly enhance the abilities of Child Protective Services workers, law enforcement and other community members who monitor and maintain child safety by following the sufficiency standards noted in this document. The future reader benefits greatly from how information is captured in the screening report. Meeting the sufficiency standard is one of the ways the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline provides safety, consistency and customer service to reporters and families in Oregon.

Consultation with the Screening Supervisor

Screeners must consult with a screening supervisor when, after considering all the information, it is unclear whether the criteria to assign or close at screening apply, including when it is unclear if there is a report of abuse. Screeners must also consult with a screening supervisor when the information does not meet the criteria to assign or close at screening and the screener determines the information should be deleted because it is not related to abuse, safety or risk factors associated with abuse.

When a screener has reasonable cause to believe the alleged perpetrator is an employee of any program, office, or division of the Oregon Department of Human Services or OYA, the screener must consult with a screening supervisor. In addition, any report of a child fatality must be staffed with a supervisor.

Documentation of the consultation occurs when the screener utilizes the “Consultation Made with Supervisor” radio box on the Decision tab of the 307A and enters the name of the supervisor.

Screening Extension

A screening supervisor may grant a one-time extension to the deadline described above, not to exceed 24 hours from the date and time the report was received. An extension is used only when there is insufficient information to determine a screening decision. When enough information exists to conclude a decision, an extension is not needed and should not be attempted.

Screeners should balance the information collected from reporters with the need to contact collateral sources. If the reporter has provided enough information to make a screening decision, there is no need for screeners to make additional collateral contacts, and they should conclude their screening processes without doing so. At the time collateral information is received, a screening decision must be made.

The screener must document in the Extension text box the date and time the collateral information was received. When information is not received within the allowed timeline of 24 hours, a screening decision is still required.

Supervisor Review of Closed at Screening Reports

For all reports submitted for Closed at Screening, the screening supervisor or designee must review the screening report within 10 Days from the date and time the report was received by the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline. The supervisor must ensure the following information is included and considered:

- Has reporter been notified of screening decision?
- Are all participants included? This would include all household members, legal parents, alleged victims, and alleged perpetrators.
- Does the address entered in ORKIDS match what is in the narrative?
- Is the narrative clear, concise, accurate and grammatically correct?
- Is sufficient information gathered across applicable domains?
- Are appropriate collaterals used? Do the allegations coincide with the description in the narrative?
- Does the screening decision include the following: Alleged victim, alleged perpetrator, abuse type, and clearly describes the screening decision?
- If an open case, is it documented that email notification was sent to the worker and supervisor? Any other relevant participants?
- Have all required notifications been documented?
- Verify the Cross-Report Notification box on the Decision tab reflects the date/time/method/jurisdiction of the notification.

If all the above criteria are met, then the screening supervisor must approve the screening report. When additional information is necessary, clarification required, or coaching needed, the supervisor will communicate feedback to the screener.

Documentation Requirements

Basic demographic information that was collected must be accurately documented in OR-Kids. This information will support the screener in decision-making and will be transition to CPS staff upon report assignment. Screeners document the following detailed client information.

Basic Demographics:

Basic child/individual demographics will be documented in OR-Kids. This information includes the following:

- Name and age of alleged victim;
• Name and age of all children living in the household;

• Names of the parents, caregivers, or guardians;

• Name of the alleged perpetrator(s) and their relationship to the child;

• Address and current whereabouts of all of the above persons, as well as information about how to locate the child, the parent/caregiver, and the alleged perpetrator(s); and

• Any additional relevant information about family members or contacts.

Primary Language:

Language spoken by the child/family served and that they use to convey and understand information. This includes information about the child’s primary language, how the school communicates with the family, are the children heritage language learners and in what language written information is provided to the family. The screener must document the following in OR-Kids:

• Limited English proficient status for any family member that is unable to fully understand English, either spoken or written.

• The primary language of each family member.

Race and Ethnicity:

The screener must document the race and ethnicity of the child/family. Screeners must also document Hispanic origin, if known. The screener will indicate that the client is of Hispanic origin if the client is a Mexican, Puerto Rican, Cuban, Central or South American person, or person of other Spanish cultural origin regardless of race.

• Screener must document “Unable to determine” in OR-Kids if the reporter is unable or unwilling to identify the child’s Hispanic origin. The responses will be documented accurately in OR-Kids.

• Screeners must document American Indian or Alaskan Native ancestry, if the screener knows or has reason to know that the child is an Indian child.

Relationship:

The screener must document the relationship of every participant as they relate to one another.

Whereabouts:

The screener must document the whereabouts of every identified family member.

• Where the child is currently located.

Military Status:

The screener will document the military status of family members if this information is known by the reporter.

Reporter Information:
Reporter information including contact information, relationship to the family of concern, motivation and date of last contact with the child.

Extent and Circumstances:

Description of the extent and circumstances of the report.

Creating the Screening Report and Determining Participants

Screeners must complete the following activities when creating a screening report form in OR-Kids on a new or existing case.

- Determine if there is a basis for creating a record or adding to an existing record on an individual. There is a basis if the screener needs to:
  - Document a report of abuse. This includes reports of abuse that must be closed at screening and reports that must be referred for CPS assessment.
  - Document reports that meet the other criteria to close at screening.
  - Document a request for family support services. This includes requests for:
    - Placement;
    - Independent Living Programs;
    - Post Legal Adoption and Post Guardianship Services; or
    - Voluntary Services.

Search for the alleged victim child, young adult, parent/caregiver, legal guardian, and household members to determine if a record already exists.

Include the following as report participants:

- The children and young adults,
- Persons who have a legally recognized parental relationship or guardianship of each child,
- The alleged perpetrators, and
- Related or unrelated individuals that live in the household as part of the family unit.
- Immediate family members of each child who reside in their household(s).

A person record will be created when partially identifying information is known about the individual (partial name, DOB, address, phone, etc.)

Do not include the following as participants:

- Adult siblings residing outside the household are not required participants.
- Renters within the home who do not have any relation to the family and who do not cohabitate in common spaces.
• Individuals who live on the property or have their own entrance will not be included as a participant unless they have a role in the family.

• Individuals who are deceased, unless they are the alleged perpetrator or the alleged victim.

Use of names should be as follows:

• Legal names should be used for all report participants, and all known aliases must be documented.

• Participants will not be created for individuals whose names are truly unknown, and the naming represents a role such as “Unknown Father.”

• An unborn child may be created as a participant using “Unborn” as the first name, when inclusion of the unborn child is vital for recording case information, such as a closed at screening. An unborn child must not be created if there is another child residing in the home. Once known, “Unborn” should be replaced with the child’s name.

• A child placed for adoption retains their birth name until the adoption is finalized.

Through the review of the participants, the screener must determine if a Child Welfare case exists or if a new case should be created. A thorough search will decrease the likelihood of a duplicate report or case and ultimately ensure any individual history that could pose a risk to a child is reviewed and analyzed.

Screeners must utilize the Case Naming/Linking Guide to make decisions about whether an existing or new case should be used. This tool is a guide for consistency, and not every family situation will fall within the tool parameters. Screeners must review information from the reporter, searches within DHR-DMV, OVERS and Accurint to determine the primary residence of the child. The screener should consider:

• If the child is a participant on an open assessment or case and there are plans/services open for the child, consider this the case name for the new report.

• If the child is a participant on more than one case, determine which case has the current open legal plan or services.

• Consult with the assigned caseworker

• In situations where it is unclear the screener will consult with their supervisor and utilize professional discretion.

Unidentified Family

In some situations, the reporter and the screener may not be able to identify the child, young adult, or family who is the subject of the report. When an address or location is known, and the information meets the criteria to assign, the report must be assigned.

• The screener must create a PDF of their incomplete 307A and attach it to an assignment email to the office with jurisdiction. The subject line must include “CPS 24-hour response: unknown family.”

• When the identifying information is learned through the CPS contact, CPS must communicate identifying information in an email to the screener and screening supervisor to include the date of the report and the screening report number as reference.

- If no response is received by CPS after 2 business days, the screener must email the CPS supervisor to request the identifying information and cc: the screening supervisor and CPS worker if known.

Child or Young Adult as the Case Name

There may be instances when the use of the parent or caregiver name is not appropriate, and the use of the child’s name is required. Screeners should use the following guidance in the use of the child’s name for case name in the following situations:

- Both legal parent/caregivers are unknown (i.e., an abandoned child);
- A former foster child requests Independent Living Program services and is 18 years old or older;
- A child is the parent/caregiver of an alleged victim (minor parent/caregiver);
- There is dissolution of a legally finalized adoption, and the adoptive parent/caregivers are no longer legal parent/caregivers to the child; or
- Parental rights on both parents have been terminated and released.

Reports of Abuse Involving a Child Welfare Certified Foster Home

Screeners document reports of abuse involving Child Welfare certified foster homes.

Screeners must complete the following activities when creating a screening report form in OR-Kids on a new or existing provider/facility.

- Accept the report, gather information, and immediately document the information in the ORCAH Documentation Guide.
- Determine if there are substitute care and familial allegations.
  - When the resource provider has their own children, consider whether a companion report should be created to capture familial allegations. Any familial allegation must only be captured on the familial report.
  - Children of the resource provider must not be retrieved as participants on the foster care report
  - When no familial allegations exist for the provider’s own children, no companion report should be created.
- Documentation in the narrative should also include each child’s caseworker’s name (as applicable), the name of the certifier, as well as the certification supervisor.
- The child or young adult’s current whereabouts and contact information.
- For household settings, case participants should also include:
  - The providers; and
  - Other foster children;
• The alleged perpetrator(s); and
• Related or unrelated adults that live in the household as part of the family unit; and
• Alleged victims that do not reside in the home but are cared for in the home environment. This does not include all children who attend the facility, only those who are alleged to be victims.

Assigning Reports to the Local Office

Once a decision has been made to assign a report, the screener must determine the correct local office to refer the report. Tools such as reporter information, child welfare history, ACCURINT, DHR-DMV and GIS assist with this determination. The screener must refer all reports to a local Child Welfare office as follows:

• The county within the address where the alleged victim resides, is responsible for completing the CPS assessment.

• When the alleged abuse occurred in a foster home or day care, the screener must assign to the address where the alleged abuse occurred, and that local office is responsible for completing the CPS assessment.

• When the alleged victim is placed in a Behavioral Rehabilitation Service or other residential program, the screener must refer the CPS assessment to the local office where the familial case is currently open.

• If the parent of a child in ODHS custody is placed in a residential treatment facility and the parent has a new baby, the county with the open case must assess and plan for that new baby with the assistance of the county in which the residential treatment program is located.

• Any exception to the above must be made in consultation with the Child Welfare program manager in the affected local office.

Assignment Notification

When a within 24 hour response timeline is indicated and is an urgent child safety issue that requires immediate attention (life-threatening immediate needs of the child or when law enforcement is requesting immediate support due to the urgent needs of the child) by a CPS worker please following these instructions:

• During business hours 8am to 5 pm Monday through Friday, instant message a CPS supervisor for the local office/district and/or

• Call a CPS supervisor for the local office/district.

• For after hours notifications contact on call/after-hours number.

Assignment notification takes place via email notification to the ODHS-CW-CPS group in the county or district located in GIS and includes PDF copies of the 307A and Cross Report Cover Sheet. The Subject line of the email is uniform and references the CPS case, the timeline for response, and the case number (CPS, 72 hr. response, #123456). In the case of a Family Support Services request, the Subject line must indicate FSS and the case number and include the PDF copy of the report.

When there are special circumstances for the local office to be aware of, these must also be noted in the Subject line. These include:
• OHC: Out of home (or substitute care) assessment

• ICWA: When the Indian Child Welfare Act may apply.

• Sensitive: If the report involves a participant or situation that requires sensitivity.

• Worker Safety Issue: When the information provided indicates there may be a concern related to weapons, prior threats by a participant toward ODHS representatives, dangerous animals, etc.
Chapter 2
Screening

Section 4: Cross Reporting
Cross Reporting to Law Enforcement

Child Welfare and law enforcement agencies are required to notify one another when a report of abuse is received. This process is called cross reporting, and the notification is called a cross report. Law enforcement agency requirements regarding cross reporting to Child Welfare and the time frames associated are found in OAR 413-015-0300 through 0310.

The screener must identify the law enforcement agency as the reporter and complete the screening process on cross reported information from the law enforcement agency in the same way all other reports are processed and will determine Child Welfare response.

The following procedure explains required information for Child Welfare cross reports and the required time frames for completing cross reports. Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff are responsible for making the cross report.

Decision making regarding cross reporting to specific law enforcement agencies will occur utilizing the following guidance:

• Cross report to a law enforcement agency in the county where the alleged abuse occurred, unless the county where the alleged abuse occurred is unknown;

• Cross report to the law enforcement agency in the county where the alleged victim resides. If the county where the alleged victim resides is unknown;

• Cross report to the law enforcement agency in the county where the reporter contacted the alleged victim or the alleged perpetrator.

Information to Include

Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff must take the following steps to fulfill cross reporting requirements to law enforcement agencies.

The cross report must include the following information:

• The name of and contact information for the confidential reporter;

• The names, ages, and addresses of the child;

• The names and addresses of the child’s parent or caregiver;

• The circumstances surrounding the abuse and extent of the abuse, any evidence of previous abuse, the explanation given for the abuse, and where the abuse occurred;

• The identity and whereabouts of the alleged perpetrator;

• Any other information provided by the person making the report that would be helpful in establishing the cause of the abuse and the identity and whereabouts of the alleged perpetrator.

Timelines
Timelines for Cross Reporting: The Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff must cross report to a law enforcement agency immediately when the screener determines that a report of alleged abuse requires a “within 24 hours” response by Child Welfare. This includes, but is not limited to, any reports of:

- Moderate to severe physical abuse;
- Visible injuries to a child;
- Sexual abuse; or
- Suspicious or unexpected death of a child.

Cross reports must occur by phone or electronic transmission. All other reports of abuse, including reports assigned for CPS assessment and closed at screening, must be cross reported no later than from the date and time the report was received, unless an extension was approved by a supervisor.

Cover Sheet

Cover Sheet Utilization: In order for a law enforcement agency to quickly and easily prioritize reports and respond accordingly, all written cross reports from Child Welfare must include cover sheet. The following information must be included on the cover sheet:

- Date and time the cross report is made;
- How the cross report is made;
- Whether additional cross reports occurred, and if so, to which agencies;
- Name and number of the screener or designee making the cross report;
- If the report was assigned or not assigned;
- Cross reporting time frame;
- Whether the report is an original or follow up cross report; and
- Date of the original cross report, if it is a follow-up cross report.

Cross Reporting Supplemental Information

Cross Reporting Supplemental Information: Screeners may receive information not previously cross reported but related to a report of abuse involving the same victim and the same alleged perpetrator previously cross reported.

If the information relates to the same incident of abuse, Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff must make a supplemental cross report of the additional information to each law enforcement agency that received the prior cross report. Supplemental information determined to be critical, given the information in the original report, will be cross reported immediately. All other supplemental information must be cross reported within a time frame that ensures the receipt of the information no later than 10 days after the information was received.

Documentation and Verification Requirements
Documentation and Verification Requirements: Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff cross reports a report of abuse on the same day the report is received. Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff must document in OR-Kids the following information:

- The date the cross report is made to law enforcement;
- To which law enforcement agency, the cross report is made; and
- The method of the cross report.

Copies of the cover sheet for the cross report must be maintained in the case record. If there is no case record, the information is only documented in the OR-Kids screening report form 307A.

If the cross report is faxed, Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff must attach the fax transmittal sheet to each cover sheet and add to the electronic file.

External Notification Requirements

The Oregon Child Abuse Hotline staff must complete the following external notifications:

Law Enforcement;

- When information is received from a caseworker that a child or young adult on an open CPS assessment or a child or young adult on an open Child Welfare case is identified as a sex trafficking victim.
- Immediately when information gathered indicates a current suspicious physical injury.
- Immediately when a crime is suspected to have occurred even if unrelated to a report of abuse:
  - To a child or young adult living in a home certified by Child Welfare or
  - At a home certified by Child Welfare.

Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (ODDS);

- The screener must notify ODDS when a report involves a child or young adult receiving services from ODDS.

Indian Tribes;

- The screener must notify the tribe when the screener knows or has reason to know that the child is an Indian child. A copy of the report must be sent to the tribe within 24 hours of completion of the screening report and after information related to the reporter’s identity is removed.

The Reporter;

- Diligent efforts must be made to contact the reporter if contact information was provided:
  - When a screener determines a report will be assigned, the screener must notify the reporter that efforts will be made by the CPS worker to inform the reporter at a later date if contact with the alleged victim was made, if abuse occurred, and if services will be provided.
  - When a screener determines a report will be closed at screening, the screener must notify the reporter of the following:
    - Contact with the alleged victim will not be made;
• An abuse determination will not be made; and
• Whether services will be provided.

Community Mental Health Program, Community Developmental Disabilities Program, or Adult Protective Services;

• The screener must make a report to the Community Mental Health Program, Community Developmental Disabilities Program, or the local Adult Protective Service office when the screener has reasonable cause to believe:
  • That any person 18 years of age or older with a mental illness, a developmental disability, or a physical disability, or any person 65 years of age or older, with whom the screener comes into contact has suffered abuse; or
  • That any person with whom the screener comes into contact has abused a person 18 years of age or older with a mental illness, developmental disability, or physical disability, or any person 65 years of age or older.
Chapter 2
Screening

Section 5: Special Circumstances at Screening
Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA)/Oregon Indian Child Welfare Act (ORICWA) and the Role of the Screener

Screeners play a vital role in identifying tribal children and families to ensure they are protected under the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA). In 1978 Congress passed the Indian Child Welfare Act based on "an alarmingly high percentage of Indian families being broken through removal, often unwarranted, of tribal children." Court systems and child welfare departments who contributed to the removals then placed tribal children in non-Indian foster or resource homes and institutions away from tribal communities. Oregon enacted the Oregon Indian Child Welfare Act in 2021. ICWA and ORICWA serve as an opportunity to keep tribal kids safe, remain in their community, and stay connected to culture. ICWA/ORICWA also:

- Affords tribes rights and opportunities to be involved and determine the future of their tribal children
- Establishes minimum standards applied in state child custody proceedings i.e. tribal placement preferences, active efforts
- Acknowledges and integrates tribal social and cultural practices/customs when working with tribal children and families

As a screener, every call could be an opportunity to collect critical information that helps our ODHS caseworkers connect a child and family to their tribe where the Indian Child Welfare Act can come into play. When ICWA/ORICWA is activated the probability of keeping tribal families together, in their community, and connected to culture increases. It is through the efforts of the screener, ICWA/ORICWA can be upheld and fulfill its purpose, preserve and protect tribal children and families. Below is the process on how screeners can ensure this happens.

Inquiry & Engagement

One of the most critical first steps is to inquire whether the child is an Indian child that includes asking about both biological parents of the child as well as the biological relatives. If the reporter identifies the child has Native/tribal ancestry and can confirm membership or enrollment or are eligible for membership this information must be documented in the 307A.

Determining if ICWA applies begins by asking about Native Ancestry

- Do you know if the family has American Indian/Alaskan Native ancestry?
- Do you know if the family has Native American ancestry?
- Do you know if the family is Tribally affiliated?

If a family or reporter asks why we are requesting ancestry information;

- Response – If eligible, ICWA helps protects from unwarranted removals that emphasizes keeping children in their tribal community and connected to their tribal culture. ICWA also provides the opportunity for tribal nations to be involved

If family or reporter indicates the child or family has affiliation but not member/enrolled or eligible; (Note in OR-Kids 307A the potential eligibility for tribal enrollment and name of the tribe)
• Response – ORCAH will complete a notification to the named tribe.

• Native American and Alaska Native must be researched within OR-Kids when the family has a prior case.

• Seeking information under the Legal tab and Case File tab will alert the screener to whether a form 1270 was completed and if there was a tribal search conducted.

• When a tribal search has been formerly conducted, the results could indicate No tribal affiliation or Yes to enrollment. In either scenario, a new notification to a named tribe must be made at screening, even when the tribe previously indicated No tribal enrollment.

  • Enrollment eligibility can change and therefore any new report received at ORCAH requires a new notification.

Documentation

The screener must document within the 307A the response of the reporter and the results of the OR-Kids search.

Use of OR-Kids Radio Buttons

Screeners must document what the reporter described about the child’s ancestry and whether information was located in the Or-Kids File Cabinet, Case Notes, Tribal Contact Search, and Person Management pages.

The screener will indicate YES when:

• The reporter identifies Native American/Alaskan Native ancestry and names a tribe, or

• When a previous ICWA 1270 form was completed which named a tribe, regardless of whether a search was conducted

• If a search was conducted previously and the tribe indicated the child wasn’t eligible for enrollment at that time

The screener will indicate UNKNOWN when:

• The reporter isn’t aware of tribal history and there is no information known from OR-Kids.

A selection of NO will not be made, as heritage may not be known to the reporter or through a search of OR-Kids.

Notification to Tribes

When a tribe is named by the reporter or learned of through OR-Kids search a notification must be completed. ORCAH staff must send a copy of the confidential screening report to the tribe(s) within 24 hours after the screening decision is complete. If a screener is unsure as to whether the tribe is federally recognized, a search of the Bureau of Indian Affairs designated ICWA agent list web site (ORCAH OWL, Required Notifications) is required. When an ancestral group or non-specific federally recognized tribe has been named (ex: “Cherokee”, “Chocktaw”) no notification is required. Screeners should only document within their screening decision and insert a Notification when one or more federally recognized tribes are named.

Screeners and screening supervisors must refer to the ICWA protocol located on the ORCAH OWL site when determining whether ODHS Child Welfare is responsible for the assessment of an allegation. Burns Paiute Tribe (BPT) and Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs (CTWS) have exclusive jurisdiction over Tribal families that are domiciled on their lands (they live on the reservation). ODHS CW does not have automatic authority or jurisdiction to assess abuse if the family is domiciled on the reservation. ODHS CW may gain authorization to assess a family on BPT or CTWS reservation if the tribe provides authority and permission.

When a report is assigned to CPS for assessment the screener must include in the Subject line of the email notification “ICWA” to alert the local office and the Regional ICWA Specialist (RIS) of a possible or confirmed ICWA case.

Restricted Case Records and Conflicts of Interest

If information in a case record meets the restricted case criteria then access to the information must be restricted. For further information see the OR-Kids Business Guide. Restricted case criteria include:

- Cases subject of lawsuits, allegations of agency misconduct, liability, or issues about the scope of agency authority. This may include high profile cases, complex cases, or tort claims.

- Child fatalities, near fatalities, and cases subject of CIRTs.

- Allegations of abuse, domestic violence, serious misconduct by ODHS volunteers, representatives of the Legislature, or political figures.

- Cases which involve an ODHS Child Welfare or ODHS Self-Sufficiency employee or contractor as an alleged perpetrator or participant.

- Tribal cases that are open to IV-E.

In addition, the screener and supervisor must complete a Sensitive Issue Report (CF 150) when a ODHS employee is involved in misconduct, there may be media attention, or for other reasons related to conflict of interest.

When the report involves an ORCAH employee or a family personally known or related to the screener, the screener should ask the reporter to be placed on hold, and supervisory consultation should occur. Reports involving ORCAH employees may only be screened by an ORCAH supervisor. The screening decision must be made by the Child Safety Program Manager. If report is regarding a ODHS employee, the screener should handle this information with sensitivity and staff with a supervisor.

- In OR-Kids, the employee’s existing Person Record number should be retrieved as a participant. The Person Record can be located in Search function in OR-Kids. The screener will update the Person Management page on that record by selecting the ODHS Employee checkbox.

- Reports about ODHS employees require screening supervisor consultation. If the report results in an assignment it requires branch notification/staffing using the sensitive employee assignment list (SEAL) which is accessed through the ORCAH Sensitive Cases Protocol.

If the local office has designated a case as “Sensitive” within OR-Kids, however it does not meet the criteria for a “Restricted” case, the screener will refrain from analyzing the local office decision and proceed with steps associated with a “Restricted” case assignment.

Screening Reports on Children in Legal Guardianships
When an assigned report of abuse or request for services assessment is required for a child in legal guardianship -and- the Alleged Perpetrator or person requesting Family Support Services is a legal Guardian, a duplicate report must be created, called the Familial Report for Eligibility.

A Familial Report for Eligibility must be created when:

- Child is in a legal subsidized Guardianship, legal unsubsidized Guardianship, or a legal Probate Guardianship, and either;
  - The Guardian(s) request Family Support; or
  - There is a report of abuse and the Guardian or someone in the Guardian’s household is the alleged perpetrator of abuse.

When a duplicate Screening Report is required, use the Business Process Guide for Youth in Legal Guardianship to determine to which case the Familial Report for Eligibility should be linked. This allows all placements, services, safety planning, and eligibility findings for the child(ren) in the Guardianship to be documented on the child(ren)’s applicable bio-familial case.

When the alleged perpetrator of abuse, or the person requesting services is NOT the guardian or someone in the guardian’s household, refer to the Case Naming/Linking Guide, as no duplicate report is needed.

If the Screening Report includes biological or adopted children of the Guardian, services for those children will continue to be documented under the Guardian case.

Child Fatality

Screeners play an important role in ensuring that Child Welfare complies with federal and state laws and regulations pertaining to the reporting of child fatalities. Thorough screening of a report of a child fatality is important for: (1) ensuring safety of surviving siblings (2) trauma informed notifications (3) child fatality prevention and (4) state and federal reporting. A child fatality refers to a fatality of any child when:

- The fatality is alleged to be the result of abuse; or

- The deceased child, the deceased child’s sibling or a member of the deceased child’s household was the subject of a report regardless of:
  - The date of the report; or
  - The screening decision to close at screening or assign.

Screeners must consult with a screening supervisor on every report of a child fatality. The purpose for consultation is to ensure screeners are supported through secondary trauma, to ensure communication with the local office is managed with sensitivity, and to determine next steps for documentation and notification. The Screening Fatality Protocol must be consulted when a report of a child fatality is received at ORCAH.

Information Collection

All fatality reports require the screener to inquire of the reporter:

- Is abuse suspected and if so, why?
• Description of environment and circumstances.

• Description of what law enforcement found leading up to and after the death

• If reporter states there are “no signs of abuse” ask the reporter what they mean by that statement and follow up with questions that elicit descriptors.

• Is there a detective assigned?

• Are there other children in the home or within the family?
  • Ages of other children in the home
  • Where are the other children in the home now?
  • Were surviving siblings at home at the time of death or during the incident leading to the death?

• What is the current capacity or availability of the caregiver to continue providing care to surviving children?
  • Are supports available to assist the family?
  • What is the current family functioning compared to the care needs of surviving children?

• Did Emergency Medical Services, Medical Examiner and/or law enforcement respond?

• If the completed suicide occurred outside the family home (school, friend’s home), had the parent discussed or informed responsible others about the child/young adults mental health and safety needs if known?

• Did the child/young adult identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, intersexual or two spirited and was unsupported or rejected by their parent/caregivers due to their gender/sexual identity?

Questions to consider on sleep-related infant fatalities (children 12 months and under):

• Did the reporter observe the location the child was put to sleep or sleeping?

• What kind of sleep surface was the infant put to sleep on?
  • If a bed, what was the mattress type? (Such as waterbed or memory foam)
  • Was the surface a crib, pack-n-play, swing, car seat, bassinet, floor, air mattress or couch?
  • What did the sleep surface look like (pillows, bumpers, stuffed animals, comforters, blankets, clothing, toys, etc.)?

• Who put the baby to sleep?

• How was the baby put to sleep (on back, front, side)?

• If co-sleeping is referenced, clarify if the reporter means bed-sharing or room sharing.
  • Bed-sharing refers to sharing the same sleep surface whether a bed, couch, floor or other surface.
  • Room sharing refers to same room but different sleep surface.

• If the baby was bed-sharing, who else was with the baby? Include adults, children and pets.

• If the baby was room sharing, who else was sleeping in the same room?
• What was the baby wearing?

• What was the temperature in the room?

• What was the timeframe from when baby was put to sleep and when found?

• Did the baby have any preexisting medical issues/concerns?

• Had the child been given/had any medication prior to their death?

• When is the autopsy scheduled? Who is the contact person for follow up for results?

• Was there any evidence of substance use? (i.e. Empty bottles/cans, pipes, or other paraphernalia)
  • Do the parents take any medications?
  • Is there smoking in the home and if so, by whom and where does this occur?
  • Did parents appear under the influence?
  • If there is evidence of substance use, were the parents asked about it or did they provide information about their use?

• Were the parents/caregivers asked about exhaustion or any circumstance that may have impacted their sleep (why/why not)?

Question to consider on child/young adult suicide:

• Where did it occur?

• Was anyone at the location at the time?

• Where were the other family members?

• How long had it been since the child/young adult was last seen by someone?

• What was the method of suicide?

• Did the child/young adult have access to lethal means such as guns or medications?

• Gun? The presence of unsecured firearm, by itself, is not an allegation of neglect. We must consider all the other factors and the vulnerability of the child. Use the following questions to understand the family condition and whether neglect criteria are met.
  • Who owned the weapon?
  • Who was responsible for the storage and accessibility?
  • Where and how was the weapon and/or ammunition stored?
  • Examples: Guns safe, trigger lock, loaded, unloaded, in an easily accessible place or was it difficult to find or hidden
  • What was the family’s understanding of gun safety?

• Overdose?
• Where did the overdose occur?
• Where were the family members at the time of the overdose?
• How long had it been since the child/young adult had been last seen by someone?
• Does the child/young adult have siblings that may be using substances?
• Had the child/young adult shared information about their substance use with others?
• What was the substance suspected to cause the overdose?
• What was the method for which the substance was administered?
• How did the child/young obtain the substance or who provided the substance to the child?
• Was the child using substances with others immediately prior to the overdose?
• What is the parent’s understanding of and/or response to their child’s substance use?
• Was the child engaged in treatment for mental health or substance use?
• Where was the substance kept and was it locked or secured?

• Asphyxiation?
  • What was the method?
  • What did the family know/understand about the child/young adult’s mental health?
  • What statements may have been made by the child/young adult to friends, family, educational providers, medical/mental health providers?
  • What was the parent’s understanding of their child’s suicidality?
  • What was the parent’s response to the known suicidality?
  • If there was some level suicidality known, was there a safety plan or supervision plan recommended?

• Did the child/young adult have current or historical mental health or a substance use disorder?
• Was the child/young adult engaged in services or have a mental health provider?
  • What services?
  • What was the parent’s level of engagement in the services?

• Did the child/young adult have a history of past suicide attempts, regardless of the proximity to the current report?
• Are there known social media accounts the child/young adult has and has anyone reviewed the accounts and postings?
• Was there any version of a suicide note such as a goodbye or explanation in a social media post, note, letter, journal entry or diary?
• Was there a recent initiation or change in medication (psychotropic or otherwise) or treatment regimen?
• Did the child/young adult have access to lethal means?

Documentation Requirements
The screener must complete a screening report form and determine the response as follows:

- When the child fatality is alleged to be the result of abuse the screener must:
  - Complete a screening report form; and
  - Assign the report for CPS assessment; or
  - Close the report at screening when the incident alleged to result in or contribute to the child fatality was previously reported and assigned for CPS assessment, unless the CPS assessment is closed, and the details are substantively different from the prior report.

- When the child fatality is not alleged to be the result of abuse, the screener must:
  - Complete a screening report form; and
  - Determine whether to close at screening or assign for CPS assessment based on the criteria outlined in OAR 413-015-0211.

- When additional allegations are identified that relate to the circumstances of the fatality, the surviving siblings or other children in the household, the screener must:
  - Complete a screening report form; and
  - Determine whether to close at screening or assign based on the criteria outlined in OAR 413-015-0211.

When the circumstances described above do not apply, the information does not meet the criteria to close at screening and the information is not the responsibility of the Office of Training, Investigation and Safety (OTIS), then the information must not be documented in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

Notification

When a report or notification of a child fatality is received by a screener, ORCAH staff must:

- Immediately complete a Sensitive Issue Report (Form CF150) when the report is the responsibility of Child Welfare.
- Identify fatality and the screening decision in the subject line of the email and attach a copy of the screening report form.
- When the screener receives child fatality information that is the responsibility of the OTIS, the screener must immediately forward the information to the OTIS and it is the responsibility of the OTIS to complete a Sensitive Issue Report.

When a report of a child fatality is received, specific notifications are required. The ORCAH supervisor must complete the Sensitive Child Welfare Issue Report immediately, regardless of whether the report is closed at screening or assigned for assessment.

Responding to Reports Involving Suicide

Safety is the first priority when a screener identifies that information gathered is concerning for suicide. If a screener suspects that a reporter is actively suicidal or there is an immediate need for emergency services, it may be necessary for the screener to contact 911 and ask for assistance. Screeners must immediately obtain information about the reporter’s whereabouts. While keeping the reporter on the phone, the screen can reach out to a supervisor or other available staff member to assist with calling 911 and requesting assistance for the reporter while the screener maintains their connection to the reporter.

Oregon has adopted the Question, Persuade, and Refer technique of suicide intervention. This strategy aims to decrease the number of suicides completed in Oregon. Screeners are encouraged to ask the reporter if they are thinking about suicide or if the person about whom they are calling is thinking about suicide. If the reporter identifies suicide as risk, and it is not an emergency, screeners can provide reporters with a referral number for county mental health services located in the Geographic Information System (GIS) or Lines for Life Suicide Hotline at 1-800-273-8255 or text HOME to 741741.

Domestic Violence

Screeners must screen for domestic violence in all reports of abuse and not just those in which domestic violence is the presenting issue.

Screeners must review the information presented for issues of power and control, isolation, intimidation, threats of homicide or suicide, stalking, weapons, violence increasing in frequency or severity, as well as other types of abuse.

DV Screening Questions

The following questions can be adapted to fit your interviewing style.

Start with open-ended questions and then ask follow-up questions that are more direct and specific:

- Who is in the household? How are they related to each other?
- Tell me about the relationship between the adults.
- Is anyone in the family afraid of or intimidated by another family member?
- Who makes the rules for the family? How are they enforced?
- Tell me if anyone in the family has been hurt.
- Has any adult hurt or threatened to hurt another adult in the home? If yes, “Who did what, to whom?”
- Has a child said that one of their caregivers hurt or threatened the other? If yes, “Who did what, to whom?”
- Have the police ever been called to the house? If yes, tell me about that.
- How many times? Was anyone arrested?

If the reporter reveals information about DV, move into the more specific questions in the next section.

Screening questions when there are domestic violence allegations:

- Describe what makes you concerned about the situation. Has the violence changed or increased over time? How often does it happen?
• Tell me about any recent injuries or accidents.

• If the police are or were involved, what happened?

• Do you know if anyone has made any threats? If so, who made the threat and what was it?

• Has anyone threatened to hurt or kill any family members, including pets.

• Has anyone threatened suicide?

• Most people think of weapons as guns or knives, but other objects can be used to hurt someone.

• Has anyone used a weapon to threaten or harm someone in the family? If yes, describe what, if any, weapons are in the house.

• Has any family member stalked (harassed, followed, tracked, menaced) another family member? Has anyone taken a family member as a hostage? If yes, tell me about that.

• Has the abusive partner threatened to leave with the children? If so, tell me about that.

• Tell me about any family members using drugs or alcohol.

• Describe any effects of the domestic violence on the children.

• Who is primarily caring for the children now?

• Who is protecting the children now? What are they doing?

• Describe any contacts the survivor has with family members or community members.

• Tell me about any assistance the survivor has tried to access.

• Describe any assistance that has been given by people or agencies (e.g., family members, friends, churches or social service agencies).
  • Tell me what you think will happen if we contact the family. Do you think the family will be safe?
  • if we contact them? Will the worker be safe?
  • Are there language or cultural barriers we need to know about?
  • Where is the abusive partner? Is there a time the abusive partner is not at home?

Children are vulnerable in domestic violence cases in a variety of ways including but not limited to:

• Being held during a physical assault;

• Being unable to leave the situation;

• Intervening to protect the alleged adult victim;

• Not having their basic needs met;
• Being threatened and terrorized; and
• Experiencing symptoms of trauma.

Indications of Coercive Control

In calls with possible domestic violence, assessing adult behavior will help us identify patterns of coercive control and help us determine who is the predominant aggressor. Consider identifying domestic violence when a report identifies single incident that indicates:

• Access to or use of weapons, especially guns
• Threats to harm, especially homicide or suicide
• Threats to kidnap children
• Isolated survivor
• Controlling freedom of movement
• Interfering with call for help (taking or destroying phone)
• Emotional abuse, yelling/name calling
• Vulnerable survivor (addicted, mentally ill, undocumented, LGBTQ+, person who is blind, deaf, or disabled, etc.)
• Assault of survivor, including strangulation, shoving, slapping, spitting, hitting – consider severity (increasing frequency and/or severity raises the level of danger)
• Violation of restraining order, no-contact order, or parole

Consider identifying domestic violence when a report that identifies a pattern based on information from one or more sources including current and past relationships may include anything noted in the single incident list above and:

• Evidence of multiple incidents or types of controlling behavior
• Threats to defame or other threats meant to coerce/control
• Isolation from friends or family; from work, school, church, clubs; taking/disabling the car, moving family away
• Emotional abuse, like gas-lighting, deceiving; demeaning in public; using religious beliefs
• Sexual harassment, like accusations of infidelity, demeaning sexual comments in public, sexual humiliation
• Financial control, like putting someone on an allowance, or financial abuse, like denying basic needs
• Undermining parenting
• Coercing or taking advantage of a substance use disorder or mental illness; interfering with recovery
• Violent or abusive toward others – strangers, gangs, police

In determining assignment for CPS assessment, the screener does not look just at whether the child “witnessed” or was in the same room as the domestic violence. Each young person has a unique response to trauma and toxic stress, from resilience to serious impairment of their daily functioning. In screening reports, regardless of their age, children are often described to have “witnessed” DV. The term “witness” can unintentionally imply a passive role and minimize the significant impacts of DV on child and family functioning. Due to the pervasive nature of domestic violence, a child does not have to be present to experience the impact of the power and control dynamic in their family.

The fact that the child was in the same room may increase the likelihood of negative consequences for the child, but a review of all the factors and the child’s overall exposure to the violence is necessary.

The alleged batterer may be in jail or may have a current no-contact order. That might provide immediate safety but does not guarantee safety in the future. No-contact orders may be lifted or short-term. Batterers frequently are released from jail after a short stay.

Questions to ask reporters about access may include:

- Is the alleged perpetrator a legal parent/caregiver?
- Will the alleged perpetrator have continued access to the child?
- What safety plan does the non-offending parent/caregiver have in place?

A report involving children who are exposed to domestic violence should be assigned for CPS assessment if the report alleges that the domestic violence is current or that the alleged perpetrator has a history of domestic violence and that:

- The child has been injured or is likely to be injured during the violence (e.g., being held during violence, physically restrained from leaving, child is intervening, etc.);
- The alleged perpetrator does not allow the non-offending parent/caregiver or children access to basic needs that affect their health or safety;
- The alleged perpetrator has killed, severely harmed, or is making a believable threat to do so to anyone in the family, including extended family members and pets;
- The child’s ability to function on a daily basis is substantially impaired;
- Weapons were used or threatened to be used;
- The alleged perpetrator has made believable threats of kidnapping, hostage taking, suicide or homicide; or
- The violence resulted in serious injury to the non-offending parent/caregiver (including, but not limited to, broken bones, internal bleeding or injury, extensive bruising or lacerations, poisoning, suffocating, strangling, shooting or severe malnourishment).

Other factors to consider in conjunction with the above include:

- Victims are isolated with little support.
- Violence is increasing in either frequency or severity.
- There is interaction with other risk factors including substance abuse or mental illness.
- Previous referrals to child protective services or LEA with the same or other child or adult victims.
• Previous convictions for crimes against persons or serious drug offenses.

• Stalking behaviors.

• Violations of restraining orders.

• Lack of other community responses or resources.

Cannabis

In screening, assessing cannabis use means sorting the potential safety issues ranging from behaviors of a parent impacted by their own use to ascertaining the accessibility of cannabis edibles or other products that may be ingested by children.

It is legal in Oregon to grow, possess and use cannabis – for people 21 and over. A parent may NOT give their child cannabis. Cannabis is different in this way from alcohol. A physician can approve medical cannabis, also known as tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), for a child – but a parent cannot serve as their child’s physician. Products have varying amounts of THC. No product containing THC should be given to minors unless authorized through a physician in the form of medical marijuana.

While cannabis products are legal for adults, the agricultural and preparation processes can be dangerous to children. Unlawful exposure to the unlawful manufacturing of a cannabinoid extract subjects a child to a severe risk of harm to the child’s health or safety. Cannabinoid extracts are products with a much higher concentration of THC. The process for creating them has dangerous steps that can result in fires and explosions. While the retail sale of cannabis extracts is legal in Oregon, it is illegal for any individual to manufacture them on their own due to these dangers.

Our focus is always on what is happening to a child. Cannabis questions need to be focused on the likelihood of, or observable conditions related to, child impact. We need to understand what happens to the user to best understand how their use may affect a child. It is additionally useful to understand the impact of a child’s exposure to the drug and ingestion of it.

Impact on Adults

Having a substance use disorder (SUD) is not a crime and a parent with a substance use disorder is not automatically a perpetrator of child abuse or neglect. However, a SUD may affect their ability to function effectively in a parental role. Ineffective or inconsistent parenting can be due to the following:

• Physical or mental impairments caused by alcohol or other drugs

• Reduced capacity to respond to a child’s cues and needs

• Difficulties regulating emotions and controlling anger and impulsivity

• Disruptions in healthy parent-child attachment

• Spending limited funds on alcohol and drugs rather than food or other household needs

• Spending time seeking out, manufacturing, or using alcohol or other drugs
• Incarceration, which can result in inadequate or inappropriate supervision for children
• Estrangement from family and other social supports

Short term physical effects of cannabis:
• Enhanced sensory perception and euphoria followed by drowsiness/relaxation;
• Slowed reaction time;
• Problems with balance and coordination;
• Increased heart rate and appetite;
• Problems with learning and memory;
• Anxiety.

Cannabis Edibles:

Edible cannabis products can be extremely dangerous to children as they are often items children eat often and in great quantity such as cookies, candy, gummy bears, candy bars, brownies. There is a large variation in the THC content. Child access to edibles is essential to understand at screening.

CBD - (CBD = cannabidiol, the second most prevalent of the active ingredients of cannabis)

• There is no legal restriction and no concern about CBD products – so long as there is no THC in them. Because there is no psychoactive effect a parent can administer CBD and Hemp products to their child.

• While CBD alone has no psychoactive effects that causes consideration for child safety, there are parents that choose to use it for circumstances that typically require far more extensive medical interventions. The safety issue can then be a parent over-relying on an unproven product and not providing a proper medical response for their child.

• If there is a medical/safety concern related to the parental administration of CBD on a child, ODHS Child Welfare should be relying on physicians to make that determination and articulate the concern. At times physicians will “wish” or “recommend” that a parent/patient they work with would use more well established and researched products than CBD. This does not create a child safety issue ODHS can quantify.

CBD Question to ask during the screening interview:

Questions are not limited to the following:

• Why is CBD is being administered to a child?

• Was a physician was involved in that decision?

• Does the child have a medical or mental health condition that needs more extensive medical or mental health intervention?

General questions to ask during the screening interview:
Questions are not limited to the following:

Regarding parents/caregivers:

- What type of cannabis products are used?
- How often do they take cannabis and what for?
- Why is it being used?
- When is it being used?
- What is the effect on the person using (behavioral descriptors)?
- Does cannabis use affect supervision? How?
- Where is it stored? Are their access concerns for children?

Regarding Children:

- Are there child health concerns the parent/caregiver thinks cannabis can help?
- Has a doctor authorized use for a child?
- What is the effect of the cannabis on the child? Rely on behavioral descriptors.

Safe Sleep and Cannabis

- Cannabis use by a parent is directly contradictory to creating a safe sleep environment. Cannabis’ ability to assist with quick and deep sleep impacts responsiveness to an infant’s needs. Safe sleep cannot exist when a parent is both under the influence of substances and bed-sharing with an infant.
- Parenting an infant makes you tired – but using cannabis can make a parent unresponsive and therefore a danger to their own child. This can include a lack of awareness of causing suffocation or being unable to hear the child.

Substance Exposed Infant

The Comprehensive Addiction and Recovery Act of 2016 (CARA), added requirements for states through the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) to focus on the impacts of substance use on infants and their families.

The purpose is for early identification and intervention by providing support and services to families needing help with substance use disorders.

Specifically, the law requires:

- Health care providers to notify Child Welfare when an infant is born affected by substances.
- Plans of care to be developed for such infants to address the health and substance use disorder treatment needs of the infant and the infant’ s family.
- Service referrals to be made for any services identified in the plan of care.
In addition to the information typically gathered at screening, the screener should ask questions specific to substance use when the reporter identifies an infant exposed to or affected by substances, or a report of an expectant individual using substances. It is critical that reporters provide as much information regarding concerning issues/behaviors, risk factors, and positive supports that were observed during the interaction with the family.

Specific substance use and infant care questions include the following:

- Whether the reporter suspects abuse or is only making a notification of a substance exposed infant.
- The nature and extent of the effects of substance exposure on the infant, if any.
- The infant’s medical condition and any current or ongoing health care needs, including an extended hospital stay prior to discharge, specific medical procedures, medication, specialized equipment, or the need for more frequent monitoring.
- Whether and when the infant’s mother had prenatal care.
- The name of the infant and the mother’s health care provider.
- The nature and extent of the mother’s current drug or alcohol use and that of the father and other caregivers.
- The nature and extent of any history of mental illness, intimate partner violence, or cognitive limitations.
- Whether the mother is receiving medication assisted treatment.
- The nature and extent of the impact of the use on the parent’s ability to provide proper care and attention to the infant.
- The extent to which the parent/caregivers are responsive to the infant's needs and are bonding with the infant (response to infant’s crying, eye contact, and other observations).
- Parent/caregivers' protective capacity.
- Parent/caregivers' level of cooperation with any referrals for services, such as substance use disorder treatment, if indicated, or assistance in care of the infant.
- Parenting skills demonstrated in the health care setting.
- The anticipated discharge date and plan for discharge.
- What family and social support systems are available to the family.

When a substance exposed infant is identified and the reporter is not a health care provider, the screener should ask the reporter for the name of the health care provider who identified the substance exposed infant. When the report is not a report of abuse, it is possible a hospital social worker, for example, may make the report for the health care provider.

If the report is of a pregnant individual, with no other children in the home, gathering information on adult functioning and potential caregiver strengths may assist the screener if a report is made at the time of delivery.

- Current substance use (specific substance(s) used, frequency, intensity, duration and amount of use).
• History of substance use (e.g., periods of abstinence).
• History of or refusal to enter substance use disorder treatment.
• Results of prior substance use disorder treatment.
• Current prenatal care and name of physician or obstetric care provider.
• History or current presence of domestic violence.
• Previous history of serious mental health disorder and/or postpartum mood disorder.
• Environmental factors, including exposure to toxic chemicals (e.g., drug manufacturing).
• Support available to the expectant mother.

Plan of Care

When a child is identified as a substance exposed infant, the screener must ask and document if a plan of care has been developed and whether service referrals were made for the infant or the infant’s family. This information will be documented in the screening report form utilizing the radio button selections.

If the reporter is unfamiliar with what a plan of care is, refer the reporter to the ODHS/OHA forms server and specifically to the OHA 1394 Plan of Care for a plan of care template and instructions, including background information about plans of care. If a plan of care has been developed, ask for a copy or for information about the plan and referred services.

Documentation

Screening Documentation: When a screener receives a notification that a child is identified as a substance exposed infant, whether the report is assigned or closed at screening, the screener must:

• Ask the reporter whether a plan of care has been developed. Remember, a plan of care may be a part of a discharge plan or even incorporated in the substance use disorder treatment prior to the birth. Many providers will be unfamiliar with the plan of care and sending the link to the plan of care form and instructions will help educate Oregon health care providers.
• Ask the reporter whether the substance exposed infant and family were referred to any services identified in the plan of care.
• Document the responses to those two inquires in OR-Kids.
• Identify the child as a substance exposed infant in OR-Kids

Identifying substance exposed infants will allow Child Welfare to track and report related data. It also is a way to identify children (and families) who may need additional support and services. In addition to narrating the identification of a child as a substance exposed infant in the screening summary, the identification should also be documented on the child’s person page.

Remember, When the infant or mother test positive for substances at birth, the infant is substance exposed, but may or may not be affected by the exposure. Only select the box when a health care provider indicates the substances affected the infant.

Child/Young Adult Parent as an Alleged Perpetrator

When a screener receives information related to a minor parent as an alleged perpetrator:

- The screener will gather information to determine if there is a report of abuse with the minor parent as an alleged victim.

- If the screener determines there is a report of abuse regarding the child of the minor parent with the minor parent as an alleged perpetrator and another report with the minor parent as an alleged victim, the screener must document the information in the following manner:

- The allegation with the minor parent as an alleged perpetrator must be documented with the mother or father of the alleged victim as the case name (the mother or father being a minor does not preclude them from being the case name), and the allegation with the minor parent as an alleged victim must be documented with the mother or father of the minor parent as the case name.

Missing or Runaway Child or Young Adult on Open CPS Assessments or Child Welfare Case

When a screener receives a report of a missing child or young adult on an open CPS assessment or open Child Welfare case, the screener must:

- Inform the reporter if the child or young adult is in substitute care and the reporter is the foster parent/caretaker, they must report information about the missing child or young adult to law enforcement and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

- Notify the assigned caseworker, the assigned certifier, and their respective supervisors of all information received.

- Document the information received and the notifications made in OR-Kid's case notes.

Emancipated Minor Considerations

Legal emancipation does not relieve ODHS of its duty to investigate a report of child abuse involving a child, as defined by ORS 419B.005. A decree of emancipation gives a child or young adult certain rights as an adult, such as the right to contract, to establish a residence, to sue and be sued, and also to be recognized as an adult in a criminal court. It terminates the parent child relationship to the extent that there would no longer be child support or support enforcement, but it does not legally sever the parent child relationship in the way that a judgment terminating parental rights severs that relationship.

Requests for Records or Information on an Open Child Welfare Case
Screeners may receive requests from the community for information concerning specific cases and active or completed CPS assessments. The Department of Human Services may make reports and records compiled under the provisions of ORS 419B.010 to 419B.050 available to any person, administrative hearings officer, court, agency, organization or other entity when the department determines that such disclosure is necessary to administer its child welfare services and is in the best interests of the affected child, or that such disclosure is necessary to investigate, prevent or treat child abuse and neglect, to protect children from abuse and neglect. ORCAH personnel must staff these requests with a manager prior to disclosure. Both ORS and Child Welfare rules require that the confidentiality of children and families receiving CPS services be protected. The family’s right to confidentiality will, however, be balanced with Child Welfare’s responsibility for the safety of children.

All Child Welfare staff are obligated to protect the confidentiality of children and families. ORCAH must not release information about children and families known to Child Welfare, except as follows:

- Requests for Information from Physicians, Police, District Attorney’s Office, and Child Welfare Staff: Screeners receive telephone requests from persons listed below for information concerning families involved with Child Welfare. This procedure applies only to:
  - A physician, if they are calling about a child that they believe has been abused.
  - A district attorney who requires the information in connection with an investigation or prosecution of the abuse.
  - A law enforcement officer who requires the information in connection with an investigation or prosecution of the abuse.
  - Child Welfare staff when the information requested is relevant to the staff member’s professional responsibility.

The screener will provide the requestor the email RecReq.ORChildHot@ODHSoha.state.or.us and inform the requestor that the ORCAH paralegal will respond to their request.

Requests for Information from Public Child Welfare Agency from Another State: When the screener receives telephone requests for information concerning families involved with Child Welfare from a public child welfare agency from another state, the screener will ask that the request be emailed to RecReq.ORChildHot@ODHSoha.state.or.us on the child welfare agency’s letterhead.

The screeners will ask that the written request include a brief statement specifying the information needed and the reason that the child welfare agency needs the information. The ORCAH paralegal provide the requested information by telephone, email, or by return fax within 24 hours of receipt of the request when there is an emergent need for the information.

Requests for Information from All Others: When the screeners receive requests from others concerning families who are, or have been, involved with child welfare, the screeners must inform the caller that they cannot confirm or deny that there is any CPS involvement. The screeners must immediately email the name and telephone number of the caller to the caseworker or CPS worker, and their supervisor, responsible or most recently responsible for the case/CPS assessment using the subject line of: “Request for Information on (Case Name and Case Number).”

Individuals may have a right to access their own information documented by Child Welfare. When ORCAH receives a request from a client requesting their own records, the screener will refer the caller to the website: https://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/Pages/RecordRequests.aspx.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 1: CPS assessment procedures
Overview

Oregon’s practice model clearly outlines duties of Child Welfare workers to ensure child — or, if applicable, young adult — safety through the life of the case. The CPS assessment is crucial to identify:

I. Present danger safety threats, and
II. Impending danger safety threats.

Also, the CPS assessment is necessary to assure child safety through:

I. Protective action plans,
II. Initial safety plans, or
III. Ongoing safety plans.

The CPS assessment is more than simply fact-finding. It is a way to establish rapport with family members and engage them in the safety intervention process. Child safety is the primary focus of any CPS assessment. Effective family engagement enhances the quality of the CPS assessment.

All CPS assessments have many of the same parts. This includes that you:

I. Make initial contact within the assigned response timeline.
II. Make face-to-face contact with:
   A. The alleged victim;
   B. Siblings;
   C. Parent or caregiver;
   D. Other children and adults living in the home; and
   E. The alleged perpetrator
III. Observe and assess the home environments, including the sleep environments of any infant in the home.
IV. Gather safety-related information through interviews and observations.
V. Determine if there is a present danger safety threat.
VI. Determine if there is an impending danger safety threat (apply the safety threshold criteria).
VII. Develop a protective action plan when it is determined the child is unsafe due to a present danger safety threat.
VIII. Develop an initial safety plan when a child is determined to be unsafe due to an impending danger safety threat.
IX. Develop an ongoing safety plan when a child is determined to be unsafe from an impending danger safety threat at the conclusion of the CPS assessment.
X. Determine whether the initial safety plan or ongoing safety plan is the least intrusive plan sufficient to manage child safety (identify how the safety threat occurs and apply the in-home safety plan criteria).
XI. Develop conditions for return when an out-of-home ongoing safety plan is established.

XII. Determine whether a family has moderate to high needs when a child is determined to be safe.

XIII. Offer and refer a family with moderate to high needs to relevant community services if the family accepts and services are available.

XIV. Determine if there is reasonable cause to believe that abuse occurred.

Tip

A CPS assessment must be completed by a Child Welfare employee whose current position is:

» CPS worker

» CPS supervisor, or

» Meets the definition of CPS worker.

CPS supervisor and CPS worker are defined in OAR 413-015-0115.

Please see “Special considerations for CPS assessment” for specific information about:

I. Referrals on an open case.

II. CPS assessment when there is a child fatality.

III. Determination of Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) status.

IV. Determination of refugee status.

V. Arranging for an interpreter or translation.

VI. Cultural considerations.

VII. Taking photographs during the CPS assessment.

VIII. Obtaining medical examinations during the CPS assessment.

IX. Obtaining psychological and psychiatric evaluations during the CPS assessment.

X. Determining when these types of assessments need to be completed for children in substitute care:

A. Medical

B. Dental

C. Mental health

XI. Children with special needs and the CPS assessment.

XII. Substance use and misuse.

XIII. Domestic violence.
Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 2: CPS assessment response timelines
CPS assessment response timelines

The timeline for Child Welfare’s response refers to the time frame to initiate the CPS assessment and is determined by the urgency of the report. Urgency is determined by reported family behaviors, conditions and circumstances that represent a present or impending danger.

Every CPS assessment is assigned one of the following response timelines at screening, and the CPS worker must make an initial contact within the assigned response timeline. It is understood that even after significant efforts, the CPS worker may not be able to accomplish this. It is important that the CPS worker document all such attempts to make contact.

I. The possible response timelines assigned include:

A. Within 24 hours response: For reports in which there is identified present danger, the CPS response time will be within and no later than 24 hours from the date and time the report was received at the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline.

B. Within 72 hours response: For reports in which there is identified impending danger, the CPS response time will be within and no later than 72 hours from the date and time the report was received at the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline.

C. Within 10 business days response: For reports in which there is no indication of present or impending danger. Examples may include when only historical abuse is alleged, caregivers responsible for the alleged abuse no longer reside in the household, or the children have moved from the household where the alleged abuse occurred, and there are no other children in the home. An additional example includes households in which a child fatality has occurred, and no other children reside in, nor frequent the home.

A. Within 24 hours

Once the within 24 hours timeline is assigned, the CPS worker must decide how soon, within the 24 hours, to respond. This decision is based on assessment/identification of present danger. Consider what is occurring right now, the location of the child, access to dangerous people, and the preferred approach to initiating the contact.

When responding within 24 hours, it is recommended a CPS worker break down that response even further to respond in 0-2 hours or 2-24 hours based on the behavior, conditions, or circumstances.

The following examples are intended to help the worker determine which reported situations indicate a 0-2 hour response and which indicate a 0-24 hour response.

Within 0-2 hours

I. Reports containing any of the following factors should be considered emergency reports requiring a plan for intervention and safety within 0-2 hours:

A. Serious physical injuries that create a substantial risk of death, disfigurement or impairment. Serious injuries include fractures, subdural hematoma, dislocation, sprains, internal injuries and burns.

B. Current non-accidental injury to the head or face of any child such as welts, bruises, lacerations and abrasions.

C. Current allegations of sexual abuse, where the alleged perpetrator has access to the victim.

D. A young child or a child with disabilities or other special needs is currently left unsupervised and/or inadequately supervised for any period of time or left in the care of an inappropriate caregiver to the extent that the child’s immediate needs go unnoticed or unmet.

E. Abuse or neglect such as failure to thrive, malnutrition, poisoning or ingestion of/exposure to noxious substance in which the child’s safety is immediately threatened.

F. Serious illness or life-threatening medical conditions for which the parent is unwilling or unable to obtain medical advice or treatment.

G. Cruel, unconscionable, intimidating or terrorizing acts or statements (e.g., deliberate threats to the child’s life, or intimidating acts with firearms or animals).

H. Situation compromises child’s safety and may reflect a real and immediate potential for harm (e.g., domestic violence where there is an immediate risk of substantial harm to child, grossly inappropriate discipline, or access of an alleged perpetrator who has seriously harmed or abused a child in the past).

I. No protective caregiver available.

J. Police request immediate response.

II. Some things to keep in mind regarding a 0-2 hour time response:

A. The harm reasonably can lead to severe injury, disability, severe trauma or death.

B. 0-2 hour response is for family behaviors, conditions or circumstances that threaten a child’s safety right now.

Within 2-24 hours

I. Examples of information indicating a recommended response between 2-24 hours are:

A. Reports of prior abuse to children four years of age or younger (injuries need not be visible).

B. Current non-accidental injury to any child such as welts, bruises, lacerations and abrasions. If the injuries are to the head, neck, or face, it would most likely fall into the 0-2 hour response timeframe.

C. Abuse such as failure to thrive, ingestion of, or exposure to, noxious substances, drug exposed infants, failure to provide adequate food to meet nutritional needs, failure to provide clothing consistent with climatic conditions, and failure to provide medical care. Exceptions would be if the report alleges that the condition is immediately life threatening.

D. Reports of unsanitary living conditions where very young children are present. Conditions include feces on the floor that young children could crawl in or put in their mouth, or moldy food accessible to them.

E. Reports of domestic violence and the alleged batterer still has access.

F. Access to a child by a person who has seriously harmed or abused a child in the past, the individual has experienced a prior termination of parental rights, or is a previously convicted, sex offender.

G. Allegations of caregiver substance abuse that inhibits caretaking abilities but may not be occurring at the time of the report.
Exceptions

I. Exceptions related to complying with this safety-related 0-24 hour timeline could include specific compelling circumstances such as:

A. Law enforcement assistance is necessary because the information indicates a crime may have been committed or worker safety is in question and no law enforcement assistance is immediately available.

B. Due to the child’s location, access within the timeline is not possible (e.g., roads are closed due to extreme weather or the child is on an out-of-state field trip).

C. Needed time and demand for planning logistics of the intervention (e.g., child needs to be interviewed separately from the parents and already has left school). When a child is reported as being in a safe place (e.g., school or hospital), the judgment about the time of the response must take into account the location of the safe place, how long the child will be there, access others have to the child’s location, and a plan to keep the child safe until CPS can respond.

B. Within 72 hours

Once the “within 72 hours” response timeline is assigned, the CPS worker decides how soon within the 72 hours to respond based on an assessment/identification of impending danger. Take into account the best approach to make contact with the family and consider scheduling a visit when appropriate. If mail is the only means to arrange a visit, a letter should be sent quickly to allow time to receive a response and make contact within the 72 hours.

Tip

The timeframe for Child Welfare’s response begins when the screener receives the report. The date and time on the screening form starts the timeline for response, NOT when the CPS worker receives the referral.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 3: Assessment activities
Assessment activities

The required CPS assessment activities are outlined below. The activities are described in a logical order. However, the order in which they occur is set by specific circumstances in a given case. A comprehensive CPS assessment thoroughly documents information relating to the six areas:

I. Extent of maltreatment;

II. Circumstances surrounding the maltreatment;

III. Child functioning;

IV. Adult functioning;

V. Parenting practices; and

VI. Disciplinary practices.

The focus of the CPS assessment is child and, when applicable, young adult, safety. By effectively engaging families and community partners in the assessment process, you can gather enough information about the six domains to determine if there is impending danger.

Exception to completing a CPS assessment:

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0409, the only exception to completing a CPS assessment is when a CPS worker, in consultation with a CPS supervisor or designee, determines prior to the initial contact that the referral does not require a CPS assessment because one of the following:

I. The referral was opened in error. This is a determination the referral was mistakenly opened.

II. There is no longer an allegation of abuse. You received information after being assigned the referral. That information, in combination with the corresponding screening report no longer constitutes a report of abuse as defined in ORS 419B.005 or, when applicable, Oregon Laws 2017, chapter 733. This exception may be used only when you and the CPS supervisor, or designee, determine the information:

   A. Is not from the alleged perpetrator;

   B. Relates directly to and specifically negates all allegations in the screening report; and

   C. Is considered because of:

      1. The objectivity of the individual providing the information, and

      2. The quality of the information.

Tip

Once contact of any kind has been made with a parent, child or household member this exception is not permitted, and a CPS assessment must be completed unless the parent, child or household member is the reporting party.

Exception to completing all CPS assessment activities:

The only exception to completing all requirements of a CPS assessment is when all the following apply:
I. You have gathered sufficient information to:
   A. Make a safety determination, and
   B. The alleged victim is safe.

II. You have gathered sufficient information to make a disposition and the disposition is “unfounded,” and

III. The criteria in an “Exception to completing CPS assessment activities” procedure (above) is met.

You must document any exceptions granted under this rule in OR-Kids. You must also explain the basis for the exception.

New Information on an Open CPS Assessment

When a CPS worker receives notification from a screener that a closed at screening or new referral was created on an open CPS assessment, the CPS worker must:

   I. Review the new information, in consultation with the CPS supervisor, on the same day the CPS worker received notification of the new information.

   II. Link a new referral to an open assessment only when the date the new referral was assigned is within 60 calendar days of the date the open assessment was assigned.

   III. Create a new assessment when a new referral was assigned more than 60 calendar days from the date the open assessment was assigned.

A. Prior to initial contact: Actions to take

You should complete the following prior to initial contact or as soon after initial contact as you can.

1. Review records

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0415, you must thoroughly review:

   I. Documentation in the referral.

   II. Paper and electronic records maintained by Child Welfare for historical information on the family and the child that may be useful to complete the CPS assessment.

   III. Available Self Sufficiency records.

   IV. Make diligent efforts to contact another state’s child welfare agency to obtain records, if any, when you have information that the family lived in another state.

Procedure

Review all the documents to identify information related to:

   I. Present danger safety threats or impending danger safety threats;

   II. History of, or a pattern of, abuse;
III. Child and family support systems and protective capacity;

IV. Information related to any of the six domains; and

V. Worker safety.

ORS 419B.050 allows health care providers to furnish medical records of the child, including psychological and psychiatric records, without the consent of the parent, to law enforcement or Child Welfare when conducting an assessment of child abuse. Additionally, the Federal Family Educational and Privacy Rights Act (20 USC § 1232g) and OAR 413-105-0000 to 413-105-0090, Educational Services for a Child or Young Adult in Substitute Care, provide guidance on working with educators and schools.

2. Address prior allegations not assessed because Child Welfare was not able to locate the family.

In the current assessment, you must address any allegations not previously assessed because Child Welfare could not locate the family. You must:

I. Discuss the unassessed allegations during the interviews;

II. Consider all information about prior unassessed allegations when determining child safety; and

III. Document consideration of prior unassessed allegations in:

   A. Interviews,

   B. Observations, and

   C. Dispositional findings.

3. Contact collateral sources

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0415, you must contact collateral sources that can clarify or supplement the information in the referral and in records already reviewed.

Collateral sources must include the assigned Self Sufficiency worker (if any) and may include:

I. Individuals who have regular contact with the child;

II. Teachers;

III. Doctors or others who evaluated or maintained records on the child;

IV. People who are in an established personal or professional relationship with the parent or caregiver and who can judge the quality and nature of the parent or caregiver behavior and functioning; and

V. People who have records or information about the parent or caregiver because of their involvement with, or exposure to, the parent or caregiver.

You must:

I. Gather information from collateral sources throughout the CPS assessment.
II. Protect the identity of collateral sources, to the extent possible.

III. Consult with the district attorney or the assistant attorney general to obtain a court order for records from collateral sources, if the source is unwilling to share information with Child Welfare.

4. Consult with a CPS supervisor

Procedure

You must consult with a CPS supervisor or designee:

I. If you have reasonable cause to believe the alleged perpetrator is an employee of any program, office, or division of the Department of Human Services (ODHS) or Oregon Youth Authority (OYA).

II. When a referral involves a home certified by Child Welfare, Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (ODDS) or OYA.

III. When a referral involves allegations that abuse occurred in a proctor foster home:
   A. CPS is responsible for completing CPS assessments in proctor foster homes that involve the child or young adult of the proctor foster parent.
   B. The Office of Training, Investigations and Safety (OTIS) investigates when an allegation involves a child or young adult placed in a proctor foster home.

IV. When a referral involves allegations that abuse occurred in a child care:
   A. CPS is responsible for completing CPS assessments when an allegation involves the child of the child care provider
   B. The OTIS investigates when an allegation involves a child receiving services in a child care.

   (III. and IV. above means that sometimes both CPS and OTIS are responding. When both CPS and OTIS respond, it is important to collaborate.)

V. When you receive notification on an open CPS assessment that:
   A. It was closed at screening, or
   B. A new referral was created.

VI. Prior to a decision to place a child in protective custody, unless it will delay the safety intervention. If it will, consult with your supervisor after the placement.

VII. Prior to initiating court action, unless it will delay the safety intervention. If it will, consult with your supervisor after you initiate the court action.

VIII. When the referral involves a child fatality.

IX. When you make a disposition in a:
   A. Complicated situation or case, or
   B. Sensitive situation or a restricted case.

X. When closing an assessment with the disposition of “unable to locate.”
XI. Prior to developing an initial safety plan in a home certified by:
   A. Child Welfare,
   B. ODDS, or
   C. OYA.

   This includes in the home of a relative caregiver.

Subject to the discretion of the CPS supervisor, consult with a CPS supervisor or designee at key points during the assessment, such as:

   I. Before making initial contact with the family.
   II. When a referral indicates potential danger to the worker.

5. Contact and work with other entities

OAR 413-015-0415 outlines when you may need to work with representatives of other entities to:

   I. Gather and analyze safety related information;
   II. Develop a sufficient protective action plan;
   III. Initial safety plan, or ongoing safety plan; and
   IV. To complete the CPS assessment.

The following are the entities you must contact, gather information from and work with:

   A. Office of Training, Investigations, and Safety (OTIS). You must notify and coordinate with the OTIS when your report involves an allegation in one of the settings the OTIS investigates, as listed in OAR 413-015-0215). See Appendix 3.15 for information pertaining to tandem investigations.

   B. Office of Child Care (OCC). You must notify and coordinate with the Compliance Unit of the Office of Child Care when a report you are investigating involves a child care, as required by ORS 419B.020(1). This coordination includes providing updates throughout the CPS assessment as you gather new information. It may also include a joint response to the home or center. CPS information may be shared with OCC, unless the information is protected health information like drug treatment records. Drug treatment records include drug and alcohol assessments. See Appendix 3.15 for information pertaining to tandem investigations.

   C. Oregon Youth Authority (OYA). You must notify OYA when the allegation involves:
      1. An OYA certified foster home, or
      2. A child or young adult in the custody of OYA.

   Specific terms used by OYA that may be helpful to know:
      3. “Youth offender” is the term for the child or young adult served by OYA.
      4. “Juvenile Probation and Parole Officer” (JPPO).

   D. Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (ODDS). You must notify and coordinate with ODDS when a report involves:

1. A home certified by ODDS, or
2. A child or young adult receiving services from ODDS.

V. Community mental health program, community developmental disabilities program or Adult Protective Services. You must make a report to the community mental health program, community developmental disabilities program, or the local adult protective services office when you have reasonable cause to believe:

A. That any person whom you encounter has suffered abuse who is:
   1. Age 18 years or older with a mental illness;
   2. Age 18 years or older with a developmental disability or a physical disability; or
   3. Age 65 years or older.

B. That any person whom you encounter has abused a person who is:
   1. Age 18 years or older with a mental illness;
   2. Age 18 years or older with a developmental disability or a physical disability; or
   3. Age 65 years or older.

When determining whether to contact any of the below, call 855-503-SAFE, select “adult,” and enter the ZIP code where the young adult or adult resides:

A. Community mental health program;
B. Community developmental disabilities program; or
C. Adult Protective Services.

855-503-SAFE will connect you with a ODHS employee who can help you identify who you need to contact and how to contact them.

VI. Indian tribes. If you know or have reason to know that the child is an Indian child, you must give notice within 24 hours to the Indian child’s tribe that a CPS assessment is being conducted. The exception is if the screener documented completion of notification in the referral.

VII. Probation and parole. You must contact probation and parole when the allegation involves:

A. A parent or caregiver, or
B. Alleged perpetrator who is supervised by probation or parole.

VIII. Law enforcement. If the screener did not cross report, you must contact one or more law enforcement agencies in accordance with the protocols of the local multidisciplinary team (MDT) agreement and in accordance with cross reporting rules, OAR 413-015-0300 to OAR 413-015-0310. When there is a joint response that involves a CPS worker and law enforcement agency (LEA) staff, the CPS worker is still responsible for all activities necessary to complete a CPS assessment. There is a duty summary in OAR 413-015-0400. You must, in consultation with a CPS supervisor, determine whether to coordinate assessment activities with LEA in these situations:
A. Presence of danger. When you have information that indicates the child is unsafe right now.

B. Family cooperation. When you have information that the family may not allow you to observe the alleged victim or other children in the home.

C. Protective custody. When you have information that a child may need to be placed in protective custody for the child’s safety.

D. Child interview. When you and the LEA officer must each interview a child, it is preferable to coordinate the interviews to reduce the number of interactions with the child.

E. Worker safety. When you have information that indicates the family behaviors, conditions, or circumstances may pose a danger to you.

F. Crime committed. When you suspect or receive a report that a crime may have been committed.

IX. Public or private schools.

A. The CPS worker may request school records, including documents and other materials which the education provider must immediately provide as described in SB 155(2019).

B. The CPS worker may interview the alleged victim or potential witness at school when you believe it will be the best environment to assure safety when making contact. There are ORS 419B.045 requirements for CPS investigations that you conduct on school premises. Requirements are specific to an interview of an alleged victim. They do not apply to the interview of a child or young adult who is an alleged perpetrator. You must do following:

1. Notify the school administrator that a CPS assessment must be conducted. If the school administrator is a subject of the CPS assessment, then notification is not required.

2. At the school:
   - Report to the school office;
   - Provide identification;
   - Inform school personnel of the CPS assessment; and
   - Provide the name of the alleged victim or potential witness to interview.

3. Request information from school personnel about disabilities of the alleged victim, if any, prior to an interview with the alleged victim.

4. Interview the alleged victim or potential witness out of the presence of other people. An exception is if you believe the presence of a school employee or other person would facilitate the interview. You may believe a school employee does not need to be present. However, if one insists on being present during the interview, you may confer with the CPS supervisor to help handle the situation.

5. Discuss further actions with the alleged victim at the end of the interview.

6. Inform school personnel when the interview has been completed.

7. Inform school personnel if the alleged victim is taken into protective custody.

8. Inform school personnel that you will notify parents of the interview.

9. Contact the CPS supervisor if school officials refuse to allow the assessment to take place on Multidisciplinary teams (MDTs). Department district managers must develop interagency agreements about assessment of abuse, as necessary, with local MDTs. Requirements for MDT protocols are set out in ORS 418.747.

You may, as appropriate, notify or consult with other ODHS programs or other agencies. This includes, but is not limited to, Vocational Rehabilitation and Animal Control.

6. Plan what to take

Procedure

Prepare to bring all materials you are likely to need when you conduct the assessment. You can prepare these materials in what is often known as a “go out packet.” This packet of information may include:

I. The screening report (307A) or CPS Assessment (307B) (having the names and address are essential)

II. Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Individual Information (MSC 3010)

III. “What you Need to Know About a CPS Assessment” pamphlet (ODHS 1536).

IV. Notice of Oregon Criminal Record Check (ODHS 9004)

V. Cooperative Services Application (CF 0304B)

Resource materials

I. Father’s Questionnaire (CW 0418)

II. ICWA form (CW 1270)

III. Safe Sleep Materials
   A. Safe Sleep Checklist (ODHS 2362)
   B. “Safe Sleep” brochure (OHA 8213 - English, Spanish, Arabic, Vietnamese, Simplified Chinese, Russian)
   C. What does a safe sleep environment look like? (English)
   D. Variety of parent or caregiver resources for African American families, American Indian/Alaska Native families, Spanish speaking families, grandparents and general outreach (Safe to Sleep)

IV. Certification packet

V. Protective Custody Notice or Protective Custody Summons

VI. Court Appointed Attorney form

VII. Relative Search Information (CW 0449)

VIII. Placement Information form (CW 0261)

IX. Domestic violence resource information
X. Local Alcohol and Drug Treatment resource information

XI. Protective Action Plan Form (ODHS 1534)

XII. Initial Safety Plan (CW 1149)

XIII. Additional equipment
   A. Car seats
   B. Camera
   C. Cellphone
   D. Pen or pencil and paper
   E. Ruler Scale to measure injuries

7. Anticipate interventions

Procedure

When possible, consider scheduling the family ahead of time, the exception being if the report indicates the child is in danger right now. You can contact the family via phone, email, or by mail. However, be sure to have the first face-to-face contact within the assigned timeline.

Regardless if you schedule or announce the initial contact, decisions about child safety are informed by gathering safety related information. You must be prepared to:

I. Identify present danger safety threats;

II. Impending danger safety threats; and

III. Act if either are identified.

IV. If you identify a present or impending danger safety threat, you must implement a plan to manage safety for the child. Safety services must meet the individual child safety needs and unique family behaviors, conditions and circumstances. Services are based on a comprehensive understanding of how the threat to child safety is operating in the family. Safety services are different than services that focus on treatment or change. A safety service provider will interrupt the behavior that causes the unsafe family condition. For example:

   A. If the family agrees to go to a domestic violence shelter, this is considered a safety service. However, general domestic violence assessment and counseling are not.

   B. A mental health evaluation or substance abuse evaluation further informs the assessment. Nevertheless, it does not in any way control or manage safety threats.

   C. Immediate access to daycare can be a safety service, if it removes the child from the unsafe behavior, condition, or circumstance.

A sufficient protective action plan or safety plan immediately interrupts the behavior causing the unsafe situation. In addition, it contains the following elements:

I. Clearly controls the identified present or impending danger.
II. Has an immediate effect.

III. Uses actions, people, and resources immediately accessible and available.

IV. Contains safety services and actions only (not change-based or case plan services).

V. Safety service providers were assessed to be suitable and reliable through a due diligence approach. It is not based on promises from parent or caregivers.

VI. Includes detail on the oversight processes by ODHS, how the plan will be monitored.

VII. Involves the child’s parent or caregiver.

VIII. Involves the child’s tribe as a resource.

IX. When a plan includes a parent or caregiver, who is the alleged perpetrator, consenting to leave the family home without their children or have their children leave the family home without them, the CPS worker must, in consultation with a supervisor, file a petition alleging the child is within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court pursuant to ORS 419B.100 within 10 calendar days of the date the parent or caregiver or their children leave the home if the plan is still necessary to assure child safety and will continue to be necessary for the immediate future.

8. Plan for worker safety

Every CPS case has the potential for unexpected confrontation, due to the involuntary nature of CPS assessments. The first step to ensure your safety is to evaluate the situation before the initial contact. Effective engagement skills are also vital to de-escalate situations and engage the family in difficult conversations.

Procedure

I. To effectively evaluate your safety, consider the following questions:
   A. Is there a history of domestic violence?
   B. Does the referral indicate the possibility of a family member with a mental illness that results in violent or unpredictable behavior?
   C. Are there firearms or other weapons noted in the referral?
   D. Is someone in the home using drugs or is likely to be currently intoxicated, high on drugs, or selling drugs?
   E. Is the family’s geographic location extremely isolated or dangerous?
   F. Are there multiple complaints involving the family?
   G. Is the home visit scheduled after normal working hours?
   H. Are the subjects violent or hostile?
   I. Does the information note life-threatening or serious injuries to the children?
   J. Is it likely the children will be removed from the family situation on this visit?
   K. Does the housing situation or neighborhood increase concerns for staff personal safety?
L. Does the family have pets that are potentially dangerous?

II. Precautions for worker safety:
   A. Have access by telephone to a supervisor or designated staff person for consultation.
   B. Always inform the supervisor or other agency personnel of your interview or visitation schedule and approximate return time when there is contact with the family.
   C. Closely observe each person in and around the area. Watch for signs that may indicate any potential for personal violence.
   D. Follow your instincts. Any time you feel frightened or unsafe, you should assess the immediate situation. Take whatever action is necessary to obtain protection.
   E. Avoid dangerous or unfamiliar areas at night.
   F. Learn the safest route to the family’s home.
   G. Be sure the car is in good working order. Park it in a way that allows a quick exit.
   H. Carry a cellphone and charged battery.
   I. Whenever possible, plan to make initial contacts with another staff person or law enforcement officer when appropriate.

B. Preparing for the initial contact:
What to think about

Prepare to gather safety-related information through interviews and observation.

I. Based on the information you gather at screening, plan each assessment with consideration of:
   A. Where the interviews will take place.
   B. When the interviews will be.
   C. How many interviews likely there will be a need for.
   D. How long each interview likely will last.
   E. What questions likely will be asked.
   F. Whether you should notify other agencies to take part in the interviews.
   G. Where are the other people you need to interview likely to be? For instance, if a parent works the night shift, they may be home sleeping at noon.
   H. Whether there are any infants in the home whose sleep environments you will need to assess, the information will you will need to provide the family regarding safe sleep recommendations, and how you can obtain a safe sleep surface (crib, bassinet, or pack-n-play) if needed.
Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 4: Initial contact with the family
Initial contact with the family

Procedure

Family engagement is a critical skill that workers must employ. Effective family engagement helps the family participate in the assessment of child safety in their home. It often enables families to implement changes necessary to ensure continued child safety. Refer to the Family Engagement tool for detailed descriptions and tips about effective family engagement during a CPS assessment.

In all CPS assessments, you must gather information and facts necessary to ensure child or, when applicable, young adult, safety. Through interviews and observation, you will assess and analyze information in the following six domains:

I. Extent of the abuse;
II. Circumstances surrounding the abuse;
III. Child functioning;
IV. Adult functioning;
V. Parenting practices; and
VI. Disciplinary practices.

Interviews: Interview each person in a way that:

I. Considers their privacy,
II. Considers their safety, and
III. Ensures effective communication.

Information from one interview will assist in the next. When domestic violence is alleged:

I. If the adult victim is not an alleged abuser, consider an interview with the alleged adult victim first.
II. Ask questions about domestic violence in separate interviews only.
III. You must, to the extent possible, do the following during the interview (a more complete list of requirements is outlined in OAR 413-015-0422):

   A. Show your ID to the family at the start of the interview. Give your business card or other document with your name and work telephone number to the parents and caregivers.
   B. Clearly state the reason for the interview. Provide statutory authority to assess reports of abuse. Also, explain the alleged abuse.
   C. Allow the parent or caregiver to respond to each allegation.
   D. Obtain names of persons from the parents and caregivers who can provide more information to determining child safety and completing the CPS assessment.
E. Ask the parents and caregivers to sign an authorization to release information to enable Child Welfare to obtain confidential information from:
   1. Physicians;
   2. Mental health providers;
   3. School employees; or
   4. Other service or treatment providers.

F. Collaborate with the family to gather the six domains to assess child safety. Please see appendix 3.1, Safety related information collection.

A. Contact and interview children

OAR 413-015-0420 outlines the requirement to have face-to-face contact with and interview:

I. Alleged victim,

II. Their siblings, and

III. Other children living in the home.

If the allegation is against a foster parent, the CPS worker must remember that having face-to-face contact with the other children in the home also includes the biological and adopted children of the foster parents.

The purpose is to gather information:

I. About possible abuse,

II. About functioning and vulnerability, and

III. To assess the children’s immediate safety.

If it is not possible at the initial contact to make a face-to-face contact with and interview the siblings or other children living in the home, you must:

I. Document why contact was not made, and

II. Do this as soon as possible.

Sometimes a child is not verbal and, therefore, cannot be interviewed. However, you are still required to observe that child.

I. Notify the parents of the intent to interview a child, unless doing so could compromise the child’s safety.

II. In an assessment where you consult with a supervisor and determine a risk to child safety if you contact the family prior to an interview with the child, you must:

A. Make diligent efforts to contact the child at:

   1. Home,
   2. School,
3. Day care, or
4. Any place you believe the child may be.

Diligent efforts include attempts to locate through collateral contacts any other locations the child may be. Collateral contacts might include:

- Other family members
- Neighbors, friends or professionals who have had recent contact with the family.

Review other ODHS program files, if accessible, such as Self Sufficiency.

Child Support screens also would be valuable to seek for address information.

If you are unsuccessful, you must document in the assessment activities section of OR-Kids all attempts to contact the child and the dates.

III. If you contact the child at home and the parent or caregiver is not present:

A. Consult with a CPS supervisor and seek assistance from LEA if the referral indicates there is reasonable cause to believe that:
   1. The child’s health or safety is endangered by conditions of the dwelling, or
   2. The child is inadequately supervised, and
   3. There is an immediate need to evaluate the child’s health and safety.

B. Wait until the parent is present in the home to complete a child interview there, if there is not reasonable cause to believe that:
   1. The child’s health or safety is endangered by the conditions of the dwelling, and
   2. The child is adequately supervised.

IV. When you are denied access to the child or to the child’s residence:

A. If the referral indicates the child may be unsafe, request assistance from LEA to assess the situation. Also, take the child into protective custody if needed.

B. If the referral indicates the child is presently safe, you must consider these actions:
   1. Attempt to contact other persons who may have relevant information about the referral.
   2. Persist in attempts to gain cooperation from the family or caregivers. This depends on the known child safety information.
   3. Seek LEA assistance.
   4. Consult with the:
      - CPS supervisor
      - District attorney
      - Assistant attorney general, or
      - County juvenile department to discuss possible juvenile court action.

   5. Seeking a protective custody order from the juvenile court.
V. Notify the parents or caregivers the same day you interview a child. In some cases, parents may not be present at the time of the initial attempt to contact. You are still required to make contact. If same-day notice could make a child or adult victim unsafe, a CPS supervisor may approve an extension for one day to allow a planned notice less likely to compromise safety. Supervisory approval and justification for the approval must be documented.

VI. When indicated, conduct interviews in a manner that ensures privacy for the child. This includes a location where the child can speak without being heard or seen by others during the interview.

A. You may interview children independent of their parents or caregivers, if:
   1. The parent or caregiver is the alleged perpetrator, or
   2. The presence of the parent or caregiver might impede the interview.

B. When appropriate, work with the parent or caregiver to determine how the interview is set up. Where will it occur? Who will be present? When will it happen?

VII. Allow a child who is the victim of a person crime, as defined in ORS 147.425 and is at least 15 years old at the time of the abuse, to have a personal representative present during an interview. If you believe the personal representative would compromise the CPS assessment, you may prohibit them from being present during the interview.

VIII. Observe all the child’s injuries or signs of neglect. You may need to remove a child’s clothing to make adequate observations. In that event, you:

A. Must use discretion and make the child as comfortable as possible.

B. Must seek parental consent and assistance, when possible and appropriate.

C. Must consider requesting a worker or other support person, who is the same gender as the child, be present as a witness and provide comfort for the child.

IX. You may observe injuries to the anal or genital region if:

A. The alleged victim is not school-aged, and

B. The injury can be observed without touching the genital region.

Photographs of the anal or genital region may only be taken by medical personnel.

X. You must facilitate examination by a medical professional if:

A. The alleged abuse involves injury to the genitalia of any aged child.

B. There is reported or disclosed injury to the genitalia of a school-aged child.

C. You observe a child who has suffered a suspicious physical injury and you are certain or reasonably suspect the injury is or may be the result of abuse.

XI. In the event you observe a suspicious physical injury on a child and you are certain or reasonably suspect the injury is or may be the result of abuse and the parent will not allow the injury to be photographed or a medical assessment to be conducted, consult with a CPS supervisor to determine whether it is necessary to take protective custody of the child. If necessary, to comply with the requirements, the child may be taken into protective custody for the time required to take the photographs (or cause the photographs to be taken) and obtain a medical assessment.

XII. If there is an infant in the home, the CPS worker must observe and assess the sleep environment of the infant at each home visit, as outlined in part D. below.

B. Contact and interview adults

OAR 413-015-0420 outlines the requirement to have face-to-face contact with and interview:

I. Non-offending parent or caregiver, and

II. All adults living in the home.

The purpose is to:

I. Find out what the non-offending parent or caregiver and other adults living in the home know about the alleged abuse;

II. Gather safety related information, which includes parent and caregiver functioning; and

III. Gather information to determine if the parent or caregiver can protect the alleged victim.

If it is not possible at the initial contact to make face-to-face contact with and interview the non-offending parent or caregiver and other adults living in the home, you must:

I. Document why the contact was not made, and

II. Do this as soon as possible.

Whenever practicable, interview both parents and caregivers in person, as follows:

I. Interview each person in a manner that:
   A. Considers each person’s privacy and safety, and assures effective communication.

   How you interview depends on the information you need. You may need to interview parents or caregivers individually or together.

II. Ask questions about domestic violence in separate interviews only.

III. Give all adults living in the home a written notice that Child Welfare may conduct a criminal records check on them.

IV. Provide each parent or caregiver the “What you need to know about a Child Protective Services Assessment” pamphlet. This includes information about:
   A. The CPS assessment process,
   B. The court process, and
   C. The rights of the parent and caregiver.

V. Interview the non-custodial legal parent during the CPS assessment. This is not required during the initial contact. However, you should consider it. This is because the non-custodial parent may have essential information or be a placement resource. To fully understand the family condition, you must understand what each parent’s involvement is. It is critical to obtain information about:

A. Parenting practices,
B. Disciplinary practices, and
C. Adult functioning for all parents regardless of their custodial status.

VI. If the interview with the non-custodial legal parent could make a child or adult unsafe, a CPS supervisor may approve an exception to the interview requirement. This can be based on documentation that supports this conclusion.

C. Contact and interview alleged perpetrator

OAR 413-015-0420 outlines the requirement to have face-to-face contact with and interview the alleged perpetrator.

You must make face-to-face contact with and interview the alleged perpetrator during the initial contact when they are:

I. The child’s custodial parent;
II. Caregiver;
III. Any person living in the home; or
IV. Present in the home when the CPS worker makes contact.

The purpose of this interview is to:

V. Evaluate the alleged perpetrator’s reaction to:
   A. Allegations of abuse, and
   B. The child and their condition.

VI. Gather more information about the alleged perpetrator and the family in relation to the safety of the child.

When the alleged perpetrator is a minor parent, the purpose is also to determine if they are an alleged victim of abuse.

If the alleged perpetrator is not any of the below, then you must interview the alleged perpetrator but may complete the interview during the course of the CPS assessment:

I. Parent;
II. Caregiver;
III. An adult living in the home; or
IV. Not present in the home when you make contact.

It is permissible to interview the alleged perpetrator later in the CPS assessment under the following conditions:

I. If it is not possible to interview the alleged perpetrator during the initial contact due to a criminal investigation,
II. If you are unable to coordinate with LEA within the timelines for initial contact.

Any decision not to interview the alleged perpetrator during initial contact must be approved by a CPS supervisor. Also, you must document both the approval and the reason.

Prior to meeting with the alleged perpetrator, consult with a CPS supervisor if an interview with the alleged perpetrator could make a child or adult unsafe. Discuss how to reduce risk or address safety concerns.

When meeting with the alleged perpetrator, regardless of the perpetrator being a parent or caregiver, you must:

I. Coordinate interviews of the alleged perpetrator with LEA when they are conducting an investigation.

II. Provide the alleged perpetrator with a written notice that a Law Enforcement Data System (LEDS) check may be conducted on them.

III. Inquire about the employment status of the alleged perpetrator. If you have reasonable cause to believe the alleged perpetrator is an employee of ODHS or OYA, you must notify a CPS supervisor. The CPS supervisor must confirm the person’s employee status by contacting a Central Office Field Services representative. If the CPS supervisor determines the alleged perpetrator is an employee of ODHS or OYA, they must notify the ODHS Office of Human Resources:
   A. At the time of the assessment, and
   B. At the time the assessment is reviewed, as required in administrative rule.

The CPS supervisor must document the notifications in OR-Kids. A CPS supervisor must then be assigned to complete the assessment.

IV. When interviewing the alleged perpetrator who is the parent or caregiver, the CPS worker must provide the parent or caregiver with the “What you need to know about a Child Protective Services Assessment” pamphlet. This includes written information about:
   A. The CPS assessment process
   B. The court process, and
   C. The rights of the parent and caregiver.

D. Assess the Home Environment

Procedure:

You must observe the alleged victim, parent or caregiver, and the home environment. When the alleged victim resides in more than one home environment, you must observe both home environments. You must observe all home environments when the child resides in more than one home. For example, a child may spend half their time with one parent in one home and half their time with another parent in another home. In that case, you must observe both home environments to assure safe living arrangements.

While the CPS worker must observe the sleep space for every child in the home, due to infants dying of sleep related deaths that may be preventable, the following are additional requirements that are specific to an infant.

The CPS worker must observe and assess the following:
I. The condition of the child’s living space, including where the child sleeps.

II. The sleep environment of any infant in the home. To do this, the CPS worker must:

A. Inquire about the sleep practices the family uses any time the infant is laid down to sleep for nap time or night time anywhere. Does the family know how the infant is laid down to sleep when at child care or with a babysitter or relative?

B. Provide education on safe sleep recommendations. Provide both written information and a verbal explanation.
   - Written information may include the “Safe Sleep for Babies” brochure (OHA 8213) or other written resources depending on the needs, the languages used, and the learning styles of the parent or caregiver. Brochures demonstrating rather than describing safe sleep may be preferable to some families.
   - Consider the family’s culture or heritage when providing information. There are brochures available for focused outreach to different cultures or populations, like African American, American Indian or Alaska Native, or even grandparents.
   - Acknowledge familial and culture preferences and incorporate if safely possible.

C. Support the family in problem solving to reduce risk. Check with the family’s support network or local organizations to obtain a safe sleep surface (crib, bassinet, pack-n-play). Request funds to pay for a safe sleep surface if one is not available through other resources or create a sleep plan with the family.

D. At each subsequent home visit assess the sleeping conditions and engage the parents or caregivers on how to reduce the risks of unsafe sleep situations. Consider including other community partners in these conversations with the family, such as experts on substance use disorders, safe sleep or infant health, or culturally specific providers or experts. Consider connecting the family with providers they trust and who would have credibility on the topic, such as their pediatrician.

E. At any time information is gathered or observed that supports the infant is unsafe, intervene. The level of intervention is dependent on the specific circumstances.

F. Document your observations of the sleep environment, information gathered from the parent or caregiver on their sleep practices, whether written information on safe sleep was provided and any efforts to reduce risk. Include the parent or caregiver reasons for their practices, for example a Native family using traditional child rearing practices such as a baby board. (See Resource Materials in Chapter 3, Section 3)

The information gathered must be documented using the Safe Sleep Environment Checklist (ODHS 2362) at first in-home contact with the family and any subsequent in-home contacts when there is a change in sleep practices. The completed checklist must be uploaded into the OR-Kids file cabinet under Case Management. When there is no change in sleep practices, document this information in the case note already created for the face-to-face contact.

III. The physical status of the home, such as:

A. Sanitation (e.g., feces or rotten food).

B. Hazards or dangerous living conditions. Examples:
   - Inadequate heat in the winter.
• Faulty wiring.
• Lack of barriers on stairs, porches, and windows.
• Standing water that poses danger of drowning.
• Scalding water.
• Broken windows.

C. Signs of:
• Excessive alcohol use,
• Use of illicit drugs, or
• Accessible drugs and alcohol

D. Inadequate food, or lack of access to food and water.
E. Weapons.
F. Chemicals.
G. Traffic in and out of the home.
H. Climate of the neighborhood; this includes:
• Level of violence or support,
• Accessibility of transportation, telephones, or other methods of communication.

IV. The physical condition of the alleged victim (includes any observable effects of abuse).

V. The emotional state of the alleged victim; this includes:
   A. Mannerisms.
   B. Signs of fear.
   C. Developmental status.

VI. The reactions of the parents or caregivers to the concerns.

VII. The emotional and behavioral status of the parents or caregivers during the interview process.

VIII. The interactions between family members; this includes verbal and body language.

An exception to observing the home environment is if the parent and child live in a residential substance abuse program or domestic violence shelter. Then, you do not need to observe the program or shelter’s physical environment.

Documentation

I. You must document the dates of attempts and successful contacts in OR-Kids. If it was not possible during the initial contact for you to successfully complete a required contact, you must:
   A. Document why contact was not made, and
   B. Complete the face-to-face contact and interview as soon as possible.

II. Interviews and observations made at initial contact that pertain to the six domains must be documented in OR-
Kids. This information is critical to understand family behaviors, conditions, and circumstances.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 5: Determine the safety threat
Determine the safety threat

The definitions for the following terms are in OAR 413-015-0115:

I. “Present danger safety threat,” and

II. “Impending danger safety threat.”

There is also an outline of requirements to determine the presence of either.

Present danger safety threat means an immediate, significant, and clearly observable family behavior, condition or circumstance occurring in the present tense, already endangering or threatening to endanger a child or, when applicable, young adult. The family behavior, condition, or circumstance is happening now, and it is currently in the process of actively placing a child or, when applicable, young adult in peril.

Impending danger safety threat means a family behavior, condition, or circumstance that meets all five safety threshold criteria. When it is occurring, this type of threat is not immediate, obvious, or occurring at the onset of the CPS intervention. This threat is identified and understood more fully by evaluating and understanding individual and family functioning.

Procedure

In the context of the CPS assessment, there are specific factors to consider when determining the presence of a present danger safety threat or impending danger safety threat.

I. During the initial contact and, in general, during the CPS assessment, you must determine, based on the information obtained at that time, if there is:
   A. A present danger safety threat, or
   B. Impending danger safety threat.

II. A present danger safety threat is present when the danger is:
   A. Immediate,
   B. Significant, and
   C. Clearly observable.

III. An impending danger safety threat is present when the family behaviors, conditions and circumstances result in all five of the safety threshold criteria being met.

Note: Oregon’s 16 specific impending danger safety threats are listed below. These should be used to inform the presence of an impending danger safety threat.

Safety threshold criteria are used to determine the presence of an impending danger safety threat.

I. Review all the safety related information gathered. Apply the safety threshold criteria to each identified threat in the family to determine whether a threat has crossed the threshold. All five criteria must be present for the impending danger safety threat to be active. You must consider these safety threshold criteria in the context of the specific impending danger safety threat:

A. Vulnerable child or young adult (when applicable): Vulnerability refers to a child’s capacity for self-protection. A vulnerable child is:

1. Defenseless;
2. Exposed to behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that they are powerless to manage; and
3. Susceptible and accessible to a threatening parent or caregiver.

Vulnerability is judged according to:

1. Physical and emotional development;
2. Ability to communicate needs;
3. Mobility;
4. Size; and
5. Dependence.

Can the child protect themselves? You must consider any power differential between:

1. Child and adults;
2. Special needs; and
3. Trauma induced vulnerability regardless of age.

B. Imminent: Imminent means the threat is likely to occur in the near to immediate future if not controlled by external methods. Imminence is not something that may occur in six months or a year. Also, it is based on a clear understanding of the family condition.

C. Out of Control: A family behavior, condition, or circumstance than can affect safety of a child or, when applicable, young adult, is:

1. Unrestrained;
2. Unmanaged;
3. Without limits or monitoring; or
4. Not subject to influence or manipulation within the control of the family, resulting in an unpredictable and chaotic family environment.

5. There is no adult in the home that can:

   - Stop,
   - Prevent, or
   - Otherwise control the family condition or threat.

This does not refer to the caretaker looking or acting out of control. It refers to the family condition that cannot be controlled.

D. Observable: You can describe, in specific behavioral ways, the family condition that makes the child or young adult unsafe. What are the behaviors, attitudes, and circumstances occurring in the family that create the threat?

E. Severity: May include:
   1. Serious physical injury.
   2. Significant pain and suffering.
   3. Disability.
   4. Terror or extreme fear.
   5. Impairment or death.

We are not concerned with the severity of the maltreatment, incident, or reported event, but the likelihood that the threat(s), if left unchecked, will likely result in the near to immediate future in severe effects to a vulnerable child or young adult’s:
   1. Physical;
   2. Sexual;
   3. Psychological;
   4. Cognitive or behavioral development; or
   5. Functioning.

As you continue the CPS assessment and learn additional information, each of the criteria must be reconsidered. The identification of an impending danger safety threat is a fluid process.

At any time during the course of the CPS assessment:
   1. A determination can be made, or
   2. A present danger threat can be identified.

You and a CPS supervisor may have determined during the course of the assessment there is no present or impending danger safety threat. However, if:
   1. You observe family behaviors, conditions, or circumstances occur now, and
   2. Over the next year without intervention, are likely to have a negative impact on a child’s:
      ■ Physical;
      ■ Sexual;
      ■ Psychological;
      ■ Cognitive; or
      ■ Behavioral development or functioning.
   3. The potential negative impact is not judged to be severe. Then, the CPS supervisor, you and the family may determine that the family condition meets the definition of moderate to high needs.

Intervention is not required for the child to be safe. However, it is reasonable to determine that short-term targeted services can reduce or eliminate the likelihood the negative impact will occur.
A. Present danger safety threats

As defined in OAR 413-015-0115, present danger safety threat means an immediate, significant and clearly observable family behavior, condition, or circumstance occurring in the present tense, already endangering or threatening to endanger a child or, when applicable, a young adult. The family behavior, condition, or circumstance is happening now, and it is currently in the process of actively placing a child, or when applicable, a young adult, in peril.

A present danger safety threat requires an immediate CPS intervention, called a Protective Action Plan.

I. Requirements for a Protective Action Plan. When developing a protective action plan, the CPS worker must ensure all requirements in OAR 413-015-0432, Develop Safety Plans, are met and that the protective action plan:

A. Manages present danger safety threats;
B. Is in place before the CPS worker leaves the home;
C. Does not remain in place longer than 10 calendar days; and
D. Does not remain in place after the CPS assessment is complete.

When a plan includes a parent or caregiver who is the alleged perpetrator consenting to leave the family home without their children or have their children leave the family home without them, the CPS worker must, in consultation with a supervisor, file a petition alleging the child is within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court pursuant to ORS 419B.100 within 10 calendar days of the date the parent or caregiver or their children leave the home if the plan is still necessary to ensure child safety and will continue to be necessary for the immediate future.

Present danger is the easiest to detect because it is totally transparent and happening right in front of you, or the behavior, conditions, or circumstances are such that the harm could occur at any second.

Present danger safety threats include, but are not limited to, the following (remember references to a child also refer to young adults where applicable):

I. Hitting, beating, severely depriving now;
II. Injuries to the face and head;
III. Premeditated abuse or neglect;
IV. Life-threatening living arrangements;
V. Bizarre cruelty toward a child;
VI. Bizarre or extreme viewpoint of a child;
VII. Vulnerable children who are unsupervised or alone now;
VIII. Child extremely afraid of home situation;
IX. Child needing immediate medical care; or
X. Caregiver unable to provide basic care.
Determine if a present danger safety threat exists by applying the three present danger criteria:

I. Immediate: This means what is happening is happening right before your eyes. The child is in the midst of danger. The threatening family:
   A. Behavior,
   B. Condition, or
   C. Circumstance is in operation.

II. Significant: Refers to a family behavior, condition, or circumstance. This means that the nature of what is out of control and an immediate threat to a child is:
   A. Onerous;
   B. Vivid;
   C. Impressive; and
   D. Notable.

   The family behavior, condition, or circumstance exists as a dominant matter that must be dealt with.

III. Clearly observable: Present danger family behaviors, conditions, or circumstances are totally transparent. You see and experience them. There is no guesswork. The rule of thumb is:
   A. If you must interpret what is happening, it is likely not present danger.

   If, after consultation with a supervisor, all three present danger criteria are met, a Protective Action Plan is required.

B. Impending danger safety threats

As defined in OAR 413-015-0115, impending danger safety threat means a family behavior, condition, or circumstance that meets all five safety threshold criteria. A threat to a child that is not:

I. Immediate,

II. Obvious, or

III. Occurring at the onset of the CPS intervention.

This threat is identified and understood more fully by evaluating and understanding individual and family functioning. Impending danger is a state of danger in which any of the following are out of control in the family:

I. Behaviors,

II. Conditions,

III. Attitudes,
IV. Motives,

V. Emotions, or

VI. Circumstances.

While the danger may not be currently active, it can be anticipated to cause severe harm to a child at any time.

Impending danger safety threats often are not obvious. They may not be occurring at the onset of CPS intervention or in a present context. However, they may be identified and understood more fully upon a comprehensive assessment and evaluation of individual and family functioning. Without safety intervention, impending danger safety threats could reasonably lead to severe harm.

When evaluating impending danger safety threats, it is important to remember:

I. During the assessment process, family members are often reluctant to:
   A. Reveal their true selves, or
   B. Disclose what is happening within the family.

II. If something is not happening in front of you, such as a present danger safety threat, it will take time and effort to understand individual and family dynamics.

III. By conducting a thorough CPS assessment, impending danger safety threats can be exposed and understood.

Impending danger safety threats are delineated into 16 categories. During the assessment, identify whether one or more, or none, of these threats exist within the family. If there is an impending danger safety threat, develop an initial safety plan.

The following are Oregon’s 16 impending danger safety threats:

I. The family situation is such that no adult in the home is routinely performing parenting duties and responsibilities that ensure a child’s safety.

Examples include, but are not limited to:
   A. Parent or caregiver has a physical disability, mental disability, or incapacitation that renders them unable and unavailable to provide basic care for the children.
   B. Parent or caregiver is or has been absent from the home for lengthy periods of time, and no other adults are available to provide basic care.
   C. Parents or caregivers abandoned the children.
   D. Parent or caregiver arranged care by an adult, but:
      1. Their whereabouts are unknown, or
      2. They have not returned according to plan, and
      3. Their current caregiver is asking for relief.
   E. Parent or caregiver is or will be incarcerated. This will leave the children without a responsible adult to provide care.
F. Parent or caregiver does not respond to or ignores a child’s basic needs.

G. Parent or caregiver allows the child, without the necessary supervision, to:
   1. Wander in and out of the home, or
   2. Through the neighborhood.

H. Parent or caregiver ignores, or does not provide necessary, protective supervision and basic care appropriate to the age and capacity of a child.

I. Parent or caregiver is unavailable to provide necessary protective supervision and basic care because of physical illness or incapacity.

J. Parent or caregiver allows other adults to improperly influence (drugs, alcohol, abusive behavior) the child. Also, the parent or caregiver is present or approves.

K. Child has been abandoned or left with someone who does not know the parent or caregiver.

L. Parent or caregiver has left the child with someone and not returned as planned.

M. Parent or caregiver:
   1. Did not express plans to return,
   2. Has been gone longer than expected, or
   3. Has been gone beyond what normally would be acceptable.

N. No one knows the identity of the parent or caregiver.

O. The unexplained absence of the parent or caregiver exceeds a few days.

II. One or both parents’ or caregivers’ behavior is violent, and/or they are acting (behaving) dangerously.

Examples include but are not limited to:

A. Violence includes:
   1. Hitting;
   2. Beating or physically assaulting a:
      ■ Child,
      ■ Spouse, or
      ■ Other family member.

B. Violence includes acting dangerously toward a child or others.
   This includes:
   1. Throwing things;
   2. Brandishing weapons;
   3. Aggressively intimidating; and
   4. Terrorizing.
   This also includes making believable threats of homicide or suicide.

C. Family violence involves physical and verbal assault on a parent, caregiver or member of the child’s household in the presence of a child; the child witnesses the activity; and the child demonstrates an observable, significant effect.

D. Family violence occurs, and a child has:
   1. Been assaulted, or
   2. Attempted to intervene.

E. Family violence occurs, and a child could be inadvertently harmed even though the child may not be the actual target of the violence.

F. Parent or caregiver behavior outside the home (e.g., drugs, violence, aggressiveness, hostility) creates an environment within the home that threatens child safety (e.g., drug labs, gangs, drive-by shootings).

G. Due to the controlling behavior of the batterer, the basic needs of the child are unmet.

III. One or both parents’ or caregivers’ behavior is impulsive, or they will not/cannot control their behavior.

Examples include but are not limited to:

A. Parent or caregiver is unable to perform:
   1. Basic care,
   2. Duties, or
   3. Fulfill essential protective duties.

B. Parent or caregiver is seriously depressed and unable to:
   1. Control emotions, or
   2. Behaviors.

C. Parent or caregiver is:
   1. Chemically dependent, and
   2. Unable to control the effects of the dependency.

D. A substance abuse problem renders the parent or primary caregiver incapable of routinely or consistently attending to the basic needs of the child.

E. Parent or caregiver makes impulsive decisions and plans that leave the children in precarious situations. Examples are: unsupervised or supervised by an unreliable parent or caregiver.

F. Parent or caregiver spends money impulsively, resulting in a lack of necessities.

G. Parent or caregiver is emotionally immobilized (chronically or situational) and cannot control behavior.

H. Parent or caregiver has addictive patterns or behaviors (e.g., addiction to substances, gambling, or computers) that are uncontrolled. The parent or caregiver leaves the children in unsafe situations (e.g., failure to supervise or provide other basic care).

I. Parent or caregiver is delusional or experiencing hallucinations.

J. Parent or caregiver cannot or will not control sexual offending behavior.

K. Parent or caregiver is seriously depressed and functionally unable to meet the basic needs of the child.
IV. Parents’ or caregivers’ perceptions of a child are extremely negative.

Examples include but are not limited to:

A. Child is perceived to be:
   1. Evil,
   2. Demon-possessed,
   3. Deformed, or
   4. Deficient.

B. Child has taken on the same identity as someone the parent or caregiver hates and is fearful of or hostile toward. Also, the parent or caregiver transfers feelings and perceptions of the person to the child.

C. Child is considered to be punishing or torturing the parent or caregiver.

D. One parent or caregiver is jealous of the child and believes the child is a detriment or threat to the parents’ or primary caregivers’ relationship. In addition, they believe the child stands in the way of their best interests.

E. Parent or caregiver sees the child as an undesirable extension of self and views the child with some sense of purging or punishing.

F. Parent or caregiver sees the child as responsible and accountable for their problems. Blames the child; or perceives, behaves, or acts out toward the child based on a lack of reality or appropriateness because of their own needs or issues.

V. A family situation or behavior is such that the family does not have or use resources necessary to ensure a child’s safety.

Examples include but are not limited to:

A. Family has insufficient food, clothing, or shelter, affecting child safety.

B. Family finances are insufficient to support needs (e.g., medical care) that, if unmet, are likely to result in severe harm.

C. Parents or caregivers lack life management skills to properly use resources when they are available.

D. Family is routinely using their resources for things (e.g., drugs) other than their basic care and support. In so doing, this leaves them without their basic needs being adequately met.

E. Child’s basic needs exceed normal expectations due to unusual conditions (e.g., disabled child). In addition, the family is unable to adequately address the needs.

VI. One or both parents’ or caregivers’ attitudes, emotions, and behavior are such that they are threatening to severely harm a child or are fearful they will abuse or neglect the child and/or request placement.

Examples include but are not limited to:

A. Parent or caregiver use specific threatening terms. This includes:
1. Identifying how they will harm the child, or
2. What sort of harm they intend to inflict.

B. Parent or caregiver threats are:
   1. Plausible,
   2. Believable, or
   3. May be related to specific provocative child behavior.

C. Parent or caregiver state they will maltreat.

D. Parent or caregiver describes conditions and situations that stimulate them to think about maltreating.

E. Parent or caregiver talks about being worried about, fearful of, or preoccupied with maltreating the child.

F. Parent or caregiver identifies things the child does that aggravate or annoy them in ways that make them want to attack the child.

G. Parent or caregiver describes disciplinary incidents that have become out of control.

H. Parent or caregiver are:
   1. Distressed or “at the end of their rope,” and
   2. Asking for some relief in either specific (e.g., “take the child”) or general (e.g., “please help me before something awful happens”) terms.

I. One parent or caregiver is expressing concerns about what the other parent or caregiver is capable of or may be doing.

VII. One or both parents’ or caregivers’ attitudes or emotions are such that they intend(ed) to seriously hurt the child.

Examples include but are not limited to:

A. The incident was planned or had an element of premeditation. Also, there is no remorse.

B. The nature of the incident or use of an instrument reasonably can be assumed to heighten the level of pain or injury (e.g., cigarette burns). Also, there is no remorse.

C. The motivation of the parent or caregiver to teach or discipline seems secondary to inflicting pain or injury. Also, there is no remorse.

D. Parent or caregiver can reasonably be assumed to have some awareness of what the result would be prior to the incident. Also, there is no remorse.

E. The actions of the parent or caregiver were not impulsive; there was sufficient time and deliberation to ensure that the actions hurt the child. Also, there is no remorse.

F. Parent or caregiver does not acknowledge any guilt or wrongdoing. Also, there was intent to hurt the child.

G. Parent or caregiver intended to hurt the child. Also, they show no empathy for the pain or trauma the child experienced.

H. Parent or caregiver may:
1. Feel justified,
2. Express that the child deserved it, and
3. Express they intended to hurt the child.

VIII. A situation, attitudes, and/or behavior is such that one or both parents or caregivers lack parenting knowledge, skills, and motivation necessary to ensure a child’s safety.

Examples include, but are not limited to:

A. The intellectual capacities affect judgment or knowledge in ways that prevent the provision of adequate basic care.

B. Young or intellectually limited parents or primary caregivers that have little or no knowledge of a child’s needs and capacity.

C. The expectations of the parent or caregiver for the child far exceed the child’s capacity. In so doing, it places the child in unsafe situations.

D. Parent or caregiver does not know what basic care is or how to provide it (e.g., how to feed or diaper; how to protect or supervise according to the child’s age).

E. The parenting skills of the parent or caregiver are exceeded by a child’s special needs and demands in ways that affect safety.

F. The knowledge and skills of the parent or caregiver are adequate for some children’s ages and development. However, they are not adequate for others (e.g., able to care for an infant, but cannot control a toddler).

G. Parent or caregiver does not want to be a parent. Also, does not perform the role, particularly in terms of basic needs.

H. Parent or caregiver is averse to parenting and does not provide basic needs.

I. Parent or caregiver avoids parenting and basic care responsibilities.

J. Parent or caregiver allows others to parent or provide care to the child without concern for the other person’s ability or capacity (whether known or unknown).

K. Parent or caregiver does not know or does not apply basic safety measures (e.g., keeping medications, sharp objects, or household cleaners out of reach of small children).

L. Parent or caregiver places their own needs above the needs of the child, thus affecting the children’s safety.

M. Parent or caregiver does not believe the child’s disclosure of abuse or neglect, even when there is a mass of evidence. In addition, this affects the children’s safety.

IX. Parents’ or caregivers’ attitudes and behavior result in overtly rejecting CPS intervention, refusing access to a child, and/or there is some indication the caregivers will flee.

Examples include, but are not limited to:

A. Parent or caregiver avoids talking with CPS or refuses to allow CPS access to the home.

B. Parent or caregiver:
1. Manipulates to avoid any contact with CPS;
2. Makes excuses for not participating;
3. Misses appointments; and
4. Goes through various means and methods to avoid CPS involvement and any access to a child.

C. Parent or caregiver avoids allowing CPS to see or speak with the child; does not inform CPS where the child is located.

D. Family is highly transient.

E. Family has little tangible attachments (e.g., job, home, property, extended family).

F. Parent or caregiver is evasive, manipulative, suspicious.

G. There is precedence for avoidance and flight.

H. There are or will be civil or criminal complications the family wants to avoid.

I. There are other circumstances prompting flight (e.g., warrants, false identities uncovered, criminal convictions, financial indebtedness).

X. Parents’ or caregivers’ attitude, behavior or perception result in the refusal and/or failure to meet a child’s exceptional needs that affect their safety.

Examples include but are not limited to:

A. Child has a physical or mental condition that, if untreated, would result in severe harm.

B. Parent or caregiver does not recognize the condition.

C. Parent or caregiver views the condition as less serious than it is.

D. Parent or caregiver refuses to obtain treatment for the child who:
   1. Threatens suicide,
   2. Attempts suicide, or
   3. Appears to be having suicidal thoughts.

E. Child is so withdrawn that basic needs are not being met.

F. Parent or caregiver refuses to address the condition for religious or other reasons.

G. Parent or caregiver lacks the capacity to fully understand the condition or the safety threat.

H. Parent or caregiver expectations for the child are totally unrealistic in view of the child’s condition.

I. Parent or caregiver allows the child to live or be placed in situations in which harm is increased by the child’s condition.

XI. The family situation is such that living arrangements seriously endanger the child’s physical health.

Examples include but are not limited to:

A. The family home is being used for methamphetamine production. Products and materials used in the production of methamphetamine are being stored and are accessible within the home.

B. Housing is:
1. Unsanitary.
2. Filthy.
3. Infested.
4. A health hazard.
C. The house’s physical structure is decaying/falling down.
D. Wiring and plumbing in the house are substandard, exposed.
E. Furnishings or appliances are hazardous.
F. Heating, fireplaces, or stoves are hazardous and accessible.
G. There are natural or man-made hazards located close to the home.
H. The home has easily accessible open windows or balconies in upper stories.
I. Occupants in the home present a specific threat to a child’s safety:
   1. Activity within the home, or
   2. Traffic in and out of the home.
J. People abusing substances, high and under the influence of substances (particularly those that can result in violent, sexual or aggressive behavior):
   1. Are routinely in the home,
   2. Party in the home, or
   3. Have frequent access to the home while under the influence.
K. People are frequenting the home to sell drugs or who are involved in other criminal behavior that might:
   1. Be directly threatening to a child’s safety, or
   2. Attract people who are a threat to a child’s safety.

XII. The situation is such that a child has serious physical injuries or serious physical symptoms from abuse or neglect.

Examples include but are not limited to:
A. Child has severe injuries.
B. Child has multiple or different kinds of injuries (e.g., burns and bruises).
C. Child has injuries to head or face.
D. Injuries appear to:
   1. Be premeditated.
   2. Have occurred because of an attack, assault or out-of-control reactions (e.g., serious bruising across a child’s back as if beaten in an out-of-control disciplinary act).
E. Injuries appear associated with the use of an instrument that exaggerates method of discipline (e.g., coat hanger, extension cord, kitchen utensil).
F. Child has physical symptoms from abuse or neglect that require immediate medical treatment.
G. Child has physical symptoms from abuse or neglect that require continual medical treatment.
H. Child appears to be suffering from failure to thrive.
I. Child is malnourished.

XIII. The situation is such that a child shows serious emotional symptoms and/or lacks behavioral control that result in provoking dangerous reactions in caregivers or caregivers.

Examples include but are not limited to:
A. Child threatens suicide, attempts suicide, or appears to be having suicidal thoughts.
B. Child’s emotional state is such that immediate mental health or medical care is needed.
C. Child is capable of and likely to self-mutilate.
D. Child is so withdrawn that basic needs are not being met.

XIV. The situation is such that a child is fearful of the home situation or people within the home.

Examples include but are not limited to:
A. Child demonstrates emotional or physical responses indicating fear of the living situation or of people within the home (e.g., crying, inability to focus, nervousness, withdrawal).
B. Child expresses fear and describes people and circumstances that are reasonably threatening.
C. Child recounts previous experiences that form the basis for fear.
D. Child’s fearful response escalates at the mention of home, people, or circumstances associated with reported incidents.
E. Child describes personal threats that seem reasonable and believable.

XV. Because of perception, attitude, or emotion, parents or caregivers cannot, will not, or do not explain a child’s injuries or threatening family conditions.

Examples include but are not limited to:
A. Parent or caregiver acknowledges the presence of injuries or conditions but say they do not know how they occurred.
B. Parent or caregiver express concern for the child’s condition but are unable to explain it.
C. Parent or caregiver appears to be totally competent and appropriate, except for:
   1. Physical or sexual abuse,
   2. Lack of an explanation, or
   3. An explanation that makes no sense.
D. Parent or caregivers accept the presence of injuries and conditions. However, they do not explain them or seem concerned.
E. Sexual abuse has occurred in which:
   1. The child discloses;
   2. Family circumstances, including opportunity, may or may not be consistent with sexual abuse;
and

3. The parent or primary caregiver denies the abuse, blames the child, or offers no explanation or an explanation that is unbelievable.

F. “Battered Child Syndrome” case circumstances are present, and the parent or primary caregivers appear to be competent. However, the child’s symptoms do not match the parent or primary caregivers’ appearance, and there is no explanation for the child’s symptoms.

G. Parent and caregiver explanations are not plausible.

H. Facts observed by Child Welfare staff or supported by other professionals that relate to the incident, injury, or conditions contradict the parent or primary caregiver.

I. History and circumstantial information are incongruent with the explanation of the injuries and conditions from the parent or primary caregiver.

XVI. One or both parents or caregivers has a child out of his/her care due to child abuse or neglect or has lost a child due to termination of parental rights.

Please refer to appendix 3.4, The Oregon Safety Threat Guide

Tip

If you must interpret the family condition, it is probably not present danger. A present danger safety threat will be obvious to even a lay-observer.

Refer to appendix 3.2, Present Danger Threats, and appendix 3.3, Present Danger Assessment.

Section 6: Identify the impending danger safety threat
Identify the impending danger safety threat

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0428, when you determine an impending danger safety threat is present, you must identify how it occurs in the family. This way you can determine the level of safety intervention that is required to ensure safety. You must use the information you gather to determine:

I. Who. Who is creating or allowing the threat?

II. What. What are they doing or not doing?

III. To whom. Which children are affected?

IV. When. Specific times during the day or week (if any) that require special attention due to how these occur:
   A. Family behaviors,
   B. Conditions, or
   C. Circumstances.

V. Precipitants or family conditions. What contributes to the threat?

VI. Frequency. How often does the precipitant, family condition, or threat occur?

VII. Duration. How long has the family condition been occurring? and VIII. Persistent. How pervasive is the family condition or threat?

You must document how each impending danger safety threat is occurring in OR-Kids.

Section 7: Safety Planning
Safety planning

Develop Safety Plans

I. When a present danger safety threat or impending danger safety threat is identified, a CPS worker must put a safety plan in place to manage the threat. There are three types of safety plans: the protective action plan that manages present danger safety threats; and the initial safety plan and the ongoing safety plan, which manage impending danger safety threats.

II. Shared requirements for a protective action plan, initial safety plan, or ongoing safety plan:

   A. When developing a protective action plan, initial safety plan, or ongoing safety plan, the CPS worker must:
      1. Ensure the plan focuses on and controls the identified present danger safety threat or impending danger safety threat;
      2. Not use a parent or caregiver who is the alleged perpetrator of physical abuse, sexual abuse, or domestic violence to provide protection or any other adult who was aware of the threats to child safety and did not protect;
      3. Include safety service providers that have been confirmed to be suitable to provide safety for the child (refer to OAR 413-015-1200 through 1230, Assessment of an Individual as a Safety Service Provider);
      4. Involve the child’s parent or caregiver;
      5. Involve the child’s tribe as a resource and comply with OAR chapter 413, division 115 when the CPS worker knows or has reason to know that the child is an Indian child; and
      6. Ensure it has been approved by a Child Welfare supervisor.

   B. The protective action plan, initial safety plan, or ongoing safety plan, whether in home or out of home, must:
      1. Be a written document between the parent or caregiver and Child Welfare;
      2. Provide a detailed description of the present danger safety threat or impending danger safety threat;
      3. Describe how identified present danger safety threats or impending danger safety threats will be managed, including:
         - If impending danger safety threats will be managed in home, an explanation of how the in-home criteria were met;
         - If impending danger safety threats will be managed out of home, an explanation of how the in-home criteria were not met; and
         - How the plan will be monitored.
      4. Identify the safety service providers and the safety services necessary to implement the plan; and
5. Establish the time commitments and availability of those involved in the plan.

C. The CPS worker must determine whether the impending danger safety threat will be managed with an in-home or out-of-home initial safety plan or ongoing safety plan by determining how the impending danger safety threat is occurring and applying the in-home safety plan criteria.

1. The CPS worker must understand how the impending danger safety threat is occurring as required in OAR 413-015-0428, Identify How the Impending Danger Safety Threat is Occurring, and use the information about how the impending danger safety threat is occurring to develop the least intrusive plan that can manage the identified impending danger safety threat occurring within the particular family.

2. An in-home initial safety plan or in-home ongoing safety plan is required when all of the following in-home safety plan criteria are met:
   - There is a home-like setting where the parent and child live.
   - The home has no barriers to allow safety service providers access and activities to occur.
   - At least one parent is willing to cooperate with the plan.
   - The necessary safety activities and resources are available to implement the plan.

3. An out-of-home initial safety plan or out-of-home ongoing safety plan is required when any of the in-home safety plan criteria are not met.

4. A protective action plan, initial safety plan, or ongoing safety plan may be a combination of in-home and out-of-home in order to ensure the least intrusive intervention.

5. The CPS worker must make modifications to the protective action plan, initial safety plan, or ongoing safety plan, as necessary, to continue to control the identified present danger safety threats or impending danger safety threats.

6. When assessing an allegation of sexual abuse, if a plan includes a parent or caregiver who is the alleged perpetrator consenting to leave the family home, the CPS worker must notify the local district attorney responsible for the MDT in the county where the child resides that a plan of this type has been developed, pursuant to ORS 418.800. The notice must:
   - Be in writing, and
   - Be provided within three business days of the date the parent or caregiver leaves the family home.

D. When a plan includes a parent or caregiver who is the alleged perpetrator consenting to leave the family home without their children or have their children leave the family home without them, the CPS worker must, in consultation with a supervisor, file a petition alleging the child is within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court pursuant to ORS 419B.100 within 10 calendar days of the date the parent or caregiver or their children leave the home if the plan is still necessary to ensure child safety and will continue to be necessary for the immediate future. A CPS supervisor and Child Welfare program manager may jointly approve a one-time extension to continue the plan described in this section for up to an additional 30 days when the criteria outlined below in Parent Who is Alleged Perpetrator Agrees... to Leave or Have Child Leave the Family Home “Safety Planning” procedure are met.

III. Additional Requirements for a Protective Action Plan below.

IV. Additional Requirements for an Initial Safety Plan below.

V. Additional Requirements for an Ongoing Safety Plan below.

VI. Documentation. The CPS worker must provide a detailed description of the protective action plan, initial safety plan, or ongoing safety plan developed to manage the present danger safety threat or impending danger safety threat. Documentation must be completed in the Child Welfare electronic information system within five business days following the identification of the threat and must include:

A. All requirements as outlined below:
   1. A detailed description of the present danger safety threat or impending danger safety threat;
   2. How the identified present danger safety threats or impending danger safety threats will be managed, including:
      ■ If impending danger safety threats will be managed in-home, an explanation of how the in-home criteria were met;
      ■ If impending danger safety threats will be managed out-of-home, an explanation of how the in-home criteria were not met; and
      ■ How the plan will be monitored.
   3. The safety service providers and the safety services necessary to implement the plan; and
   4. The time commitments and availability of those involved in the plan.

B. A summary of the parents' and caregivers' agreement to and acceptance of the plan; and

C. The date the plan was reviewed by a supervisor and the name of the supervisor who reviewed it.

Additional Requirements to Develop a Protective Action Plan

I. If the CPS worker determines the child is unsafe due to a present danger safety threat, the CPS worker must immediately initiate a protective action plan. This usually occurs during the initial contact, but it must occur at any time during the CPS assessment if it is determined that the child is unsafe due to present danger. The purpose of the protective action plan is to ensure that children are safe while CPS intervention continues and a fuller understanding of the family behaviors, conditions, and circumstances is obtained. A protective action plan occurs the same day that it is determined the child is unsafe and provides a child with responsible adult supervision and care.

II. Requirements for a Protective Action Plan. When developing a protective action plan, the CPS worker must ensure all requirements in OAR 413-015-0432, Develop Safety Plans, are met and that the protective action plan:
   A. Manages present danger safety threats;
   B. Is in place before the CPS worker leaves the home;
Additional Requirements to Develop an Initial Safety Plan

I. If the CPS worker determines the child is unsafe due to an impending danger safety threat, the CPS worker must develop and document an initial safety plan. The purpose of the initial safety plan is to ensure that children are safe while CPS intervention continues and a fuller understanding of the family behaviors, conditions, or circumstances is obtained.

II. Requirements for an initial safety plan. When developing an initial safety plan, the CPS worker must ensure all requirements in OAR 413-015-0432, Develop Safety Plans, are met and that the initial safety plan:
   A. Manages impending danger safety threats; and
   B. Does not continue or remain in place after the CPS assessment is complete.

Additional Requirements to Develop an Ongoing Safety Plan

I. At the completion of the CPS assessment when the CPS worker determines, through an analysis of the safety related information, that a child is unsafe, the CPS worker and permanency worker must develop and document an ongoing safety plan unless completing a CPS assessment involving a home certified by Child Welfare, ODDS, or OYA. The purpose of the ongoing safety plan is to control the impending danger safety threats as they are uniquely occurring within a particular family.

II. Requirements for an Ongoing Safety Plan. When developing an ongoing safety plan, the CPS worker and permanency worker must assure all requirements in OAR 413-015-0432, Develop Safety Plans, are met and:
   A. Use a Family Engagement Meeting unless a supervisor approved an exception;
   B. Include conditions for return when an out-of-home ongoing safety plan is developed; and
   C. Re-evaluate the initial safety plan, if one is in place, to determine if it is appropriate and sufficient as an ongoing safety plan and re-confirm all commitments with all safety service providers identified in the initial safety plan if it is to become an ongoing safety plan.

Parent Who is Alleged Perpetrator Agrees to Leave or Have Child Leave the Family Home

When developing a safety plan, whether a protective action, initial safety plan or ongoing safety plan, having a parent who is the alleged perpetrator, or their child leave the family home (separating a parent and child) is a serious action that should only be done when there is no other way to ensure the safety of the child.

Parents have a right to due process and to be represented by an attorney. Children also have rights and benefit from attorney representation. Involving the courts in planning for child safety ensures these rights are intact and brings multiple perspectives to the planning. As a result, a decision not to involve the court must be made with careful consideration.

There are times when a safety plan can be put in place that addresses child safety by separating a parent who is the alleged perpetrator of child abuse and their child and, at the same time, leaves the parent with custody of, and decision-making authority over, their child.

This procedure is specific to the use of a safety plan that manages child safety by separating a parent who is the alleged perpetrator and their child in the absence of court intervention. Either a parent agreed to separate:

- At the onset of the CPS assessment as part of a protective action when present danger is identified or as part of an initial safety plan when impending danger is identified, or
- During a CPS assessment as part of any kind of safety plan in the context of a cooperative agreement.

In situations when a parent, who is the alleged perpetrator, agrees to leave or have their child leave the family home as part of a safety plan and the parent retains custody of their child (no court involvement) there are intentionally strict requirements in place to make sure such a plan is warranted and, if warranted, time limited. Any plan separating a parent who is the alleged perpetrator from a child in the absence of court intervention is limited to 10 calendar days with the possibility of a one-time up to 30 calendar day extension.

Just because a parent agrees to cooperate with a safety plan that separates them from their child, does not mean court intervention is not indicated.

When separating a parent, who is the alleged perpetrator, and their child, the CPS worker must first, and continually, consider if the safety intervention should include filing a petition in juvenile court. There are many situations where at initial contact a petition should be filed and other situations where during the CPS assessment the need for court intervention becomes evident based on information gathered, or observations made. Regardless of timing, a petition should be filed when:

- The in-home safety plan criteria will not be met or are unlikely to be met while the time limited safety plan is in place. Change that requires longer term safety management intervention by Child Welfare should be overseen by the court.
- A parent is not in agreement with the safety plan. With awareness of the parent and child rights, the CPS worker listens for and responds to a parent who, directly or indirectly, communicates they do not support the safety plan and are asking not to be separated from their child. The CPS worker must determine whether the child is safe if the safety plan is no longer in place and the parent and child are reunited. If the child is unsafe without the safety plan the CPS worker must file a petition in juvenile court.

When considering whether to work cooperatively with the family or file a petition, the CPS worker should ask themselves:

- What is going to change in the limited time the plan is in place?

If what is likely to change is that the in-home criteria will be met, then that is a reasonable use of such an intrusive plan in the absence of court intervention. There are circumstances when the change is imminent, or information gathered supports the change will occur in a defined amount of time. A few such examples include:

- The family is on the wait list for housing and the new housing will be available and the move complete within the month.
• A parent is on the waiting for bed in a substance use disorder residential treatment program. The parent will be able to be in the program with their child either upon admission or after the blackout period. The bed will be available within the next 14 days.

• A familial support will be moving to Oregon to live with the family, but it will take three weeks until they arrive. Their presence in the home manages the safety threat.

• Mom is in jail and the safety threat does not involve mom’s care. She is released in 30 days.

• The safety service that once in place will result in the in-home safety plan criteria being met is a provider, but the provider can’t begin providing services for two weeks.

• Now that the child is safe (assume safety plan in place), what will you, the CPS worker, use those days for?

If what you will use the days for is to quickly gather enough information to determine if there is an impending danger safety threat and it is realistic to accomplish this quickly then that is a reasonable use of such an intrusive plan.

If what you will use the days for is to be creative and explore with the family solutions to meeting the in-home safety plan criteria, including identifying and approving safety service providers that is a reasonable use of such an intrusive plan. It is understood it can take some time to explore the natural family supports such as extended family, churches or other organizations the family is affiliated with, friends, co-workers and neighbors. If a family does not have many, or any, natural supports it can also take time to identify community supports, make referrals and have the providers initiate contact.

Remember all safety plans should be developed with the parent. Explain to the parent the following to make sure the parent is making an informed decision about the separation of them from their child and understands the impacts of court involvement versus working cooperatively with Child Welfare:

• The benefits of involving the court

• The parent can end the plan at any time

• If the plan is ended and the child is determined to be unsafe, the CPS worker must file a petition in juvenile court

• The safety plan, if it separates a parent who is the alleged perpetrator from their child, may only be in place for up to 10 calendar days and while a one-time extension of 30 calendar days can be requested, it would only be approved if the parent continues to support the safety plan and signs a new safety plan.

• Why the separation is necessary and what needs to change to have the parent and child in the same home again.

• What visitation will look like

Separating a parent and child as part of a safety plan does not necessarily mean there should be no contact. Consider the level of contact, if any, that can occur and not compromise the safety of the child. Frequently, a plan that allows for no contact is an unnecessary level of intervention. Consider:

• Frequency of contact
• Duration of contact
• Whether a combination in-home and out-of-home safety plan possible
• Level of supervision
• Type of contact, such as phone, email, text, FaceTime/Skype, in person

Even when the child will remain with one parent or a relative, attachment and trauma impacts for the child and parent must be considered and efforts made to minimize the impacts.

Whenever safety allows, engage the parent who is being separated from the child in the transition of the child from their daily physical care. Include them in the plan for the well-being of the child. Ask if the parent or child has or would like photographs to take, blankets, or other reminders of home and family. Promote attachment by letting the parent know when they will be able to talk to or see the child next. Continue regular communication with the parent about the child’s activities and well-being. Be creative in finding ways to meet the trauma needs of the family.

Timelines specific to separating a parent and child during a CPS assessment:

Any safety plan, protective action, initial safety plan or ongoing safety plan, separating a parent, who is the alleged perpetrator, from a child in the absence of court intervention is limited to 10 calendar days with the possibility of a one-time 30 calendar day extension.

When a CPS worker puts in place a protective action or initial safety plan that separates the parent, who is the alleged perpetrator, and child the CPS worker complies with the timelines as follows:

• At any time and no later than the 10th day, if there is enough information to determine there is no present or impending danger then the CPS worker completes the CPS assessment without opening a case.

• If by the 10th day there continues to be insufficient information to determine if there is or is not present or impending danger and more time is needed then file a petition in juvenile court.

• If present danger still exists on the 10th day, the CPS worker then files a petition.

• If impending danger is identified the CPS worker determines how the threat or threats are occurring and determines if the in-home criteria can be met.
  • If in-home criteria are met, the CPS worker puts an initial safety plan in place that manages child safety with the parent in the home, opens the case for services and prepares the case for transfer.
  • If in-home criteria are met some of the days determine if a combination in-home and out-of-home safety plan can be developed. Consider the following:
    • Possibly children can be home during the weekdays and nights because the safety service providers are available to monitor safety threats, however there are no safety service providers available on the weekends so children cannot remain in home.
    • Is there an alternative place the children can stay? Possibly a Safe Families host family, with relatives or friends.
    • If the combination safety plan is a temporary plan with in-home criteria being met in the next 30 days, then consider requesting a 30 day extension and ask the parents to sign a cooperative agreement.

• If in-home criteria not met, is there a resource to do a temporary out-of-home safety plan? If all information gathered suggests this would be a temporary plan with in-home criteria being met in the next 30 days, then consider requesting a 30 day extension and ask the parents to sign a cooperative agreement.

When a CPS worker requests to extend the separation of parent and child for up to 30 additional days this extension must be approved jointly by a program manager and a CPS supervisor.

The program manager and CPS supervisor may only approve the up to 30 day extension after confirming the following:

• The information supports the in-home safety plan criteria that is not met will likely be met within 30 days.
• If it is an out-of-home plan, that the circumstances do not allow for a combination plan.
• The parents signed a new safety plan indicating support of the extension.
• The safety plan manages child safety.
• The visitation plan is as open as it can be given the safety threat and the safety service providers.
• All safety services providers are determined to be suitable.
• Parents have been informed of the option of court intervention.
• The plan will not be in place beyond the completion of the CPS assessment.

Active information gathering and case planning must occur while children are out of the home. This is true whether they are out of the home full time or part time. The CPS caseworker should be actively working with the parents in order to meet the in-home criteria so reunification can occur. A cooperative agreement should only be considered when the changes needing to be made to meet the in-home criteria are realistically achieved before the end of the safety plan extension and never to exceed the duration of the CPS assessment.
Comprehensive assessment

You must complete the CPS comprehensive assessment after you:

I. Complete the initial contacts, and

II. Ensure the child’s or young adult’s immediate safety, if necessary, through the:
   A. Protective action plan, or
   B. Initial safety plan.

Procedure

I. You should consult other providers when there is a specific client condition or behavior that requires additional professional assessment. For example:
   A. The child exhibits undiagnosed physical health concerns or the child’s behaviors or emotions do not appear to be age-appropriate. Examples are:
      1. Hyperactivity;
      2. Excessive sadness and withdrawal;
      3. Chronic nightmares;
      4. Bed wetting; or
      5. Aggressive behavior at home or at school.
   B. The parent exhibits behaviors or emotions that do not appear to be controlled. Examples are:
      1. Violent outbursts;
      2. Extreme lethargy;
      3. Depression; or
      4. Frequent mood swings.
   C. The child or parent has a chemical dependency.

II. In this context, other sources may include:
   A. Medical personnel may assess and respond to the medical needs of a child or parent and possibly document the nature and extent of abuse.
   B. Mental health personnel may assess the effects of any alleged abuse and help determine the validity of specific allegations. They may also evaluate the parent or caregiver’s mental health status and its effect on the safety of the child.
   C. Alcohol and other drug specialists may evaluate parental or caregiver substance use or misuse and its impact on the safety of the child.
   D. Domestic violence experts may assist to examine the safety of the child in cases where partner abuse and child abuse coexist. These professionals may also help in safety planning.
E. Multidisciplinary teams may be used to help CPS analyze the information for proof of abuse and the assessment of risk and safety.

F. Designated medical professional (DMP) must be consulted per ORS 419B.022-024. In cases where there is suspicion that injuries are caused by abuse, they must be addressed in the coordinated comprehensive way required by Karly’s Law.

G. Local or regional CAICs (Child Advocacy and Intervention Centers) are frequently used by workers and law enforcement to conduct forensic interviews of children who are suspected victims of abuse. Often, medical evaluations are conducted as well, and critical information is gathered during the evaluation processes.

III. If the assessment identifies the need for specific evaluation, the referral should specify the following:

A. The reason for referral. Include specific areas for assessment as they relate to the present or impending danger safety threats.

B. The parents’ knowledge about the referral and their response.

C. The timeframe in which the evaluation must occur. Also, when the agency will need a report back from the provider.

D. The purpose and objectives of the evaluation. Examples are the parents’ level of alcohol use and its effects on their ability to parent.

E. The specific questions the CPS worker wants answered to assist in decision-making.

IV. Another source of information is the LEDS information on the alleged perpetrator and adults who live in and frequent the home. If the individuals were provided with notice (LEDS notice, ODHS 9004), you may request a LEDS check. This information should be considered when you:

A. Assess child safety, and

B. Determine that behavior revealed by criminal history is inconsistent with providing care or having access to children.

V. If you identify abuse while you conduct a CPS assessment, it is reasonable to address the new abuse in the open CPS assessment, if:

A. This occurs within 60 days of the original report;

B. Involves the same or similar circumstances as in the original report;

C. Involves perpetrators and victims who live in the household currently being assessed; or

D. The new abuse or new abuse details are not believed to be a crime.

When you address an allegation of abuse identified after the initial contact:

I. Ensure you address the new abuse in the same manner all reports are required to be addressed in a comprehensive CPS assessment.

When all the criteria above are not met, the CPS worker must report the new allegation to a screener. Even when all the criteria are met, if the CPS worker or supervisor believe the new abuse requires a screening report, a report to a screener should be made.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 9: Determine the Disposition of the CPS Assessment
Determine the Disposition of the CPS Assessment

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0440:

I. The CPS worker must determine a disposition for all CPS assessments completed by Child Welfare as required by ORS 419B.026 (1).

II. Requirement to determine disposition of the CPS assessment: You must determine if there is reasonable cause to believe that abuse occurred and explain the basis for that determination. The requirements to determine dispositions are in OAR 413-015-1005, The CPS Assessment Dispositions.

III. Documentation: You must document that determination and explain the basis for the determination in the disposition narrative section of OR-Kids prior to completing the CPS assessment.

IV. When a disposition is founded and the victim is 3 years old or younger, you must refer the child to early intervention using the form CPS to Early Intervention Referral (ODHS 323). Obtaining a release of information is recommended as it engages the parent or guardian in the process and keeps them informed, however, a release of information is not required.

Procedure

You must base the determination for a disposition on state laws, administrative rule, and the information gathered. The standard for determining CPS assessment dispositions is reasonable cause to believe, and the possible determinations are:

I. “Founded” means “substantiated,” which means there is reasonable cause to believe the abuse occurred.

II. “Unfounded” means “unsubstantiated,” which means there is no evidence the abuse occurred.

III. “Unable to determine” means “inconclusive,” which means there is some indication the abuse occurred. However, there is insufficient evidence to conclude that there is reasonable cause to believe that abuse occurred. The “unable to determine” disposition may be used only in the following circumstances:
   A. After extensive efforts have been made, you are unable to locate the family; or
   B. After completing an assessment that complies with Child Welfare’s rules, one of the following applies:
      1. The alleged victim is:
         ■ Unable or unwilling to provide consistent information, and
         ■ There is insufficient information to support a founded or substantiated or unfounded or unsubstantiated determination.
      2. Information:
         ■ Conflicts or is inconsistent from collateral contacts or family, and
         ■ Is insufficient to support a founded or substantiated or unfounded or unsubstantiated determination.

To determine CPS assessment dispositions:
I. Definitions of abuse as defined in OAR 413-015-1015 (1) apply to all allegations of abuse of a child.

II. Definitions of abuse as defined in OAR 413-015-1015 (1) and (2) both apply when determining the CPS assessment disposition of a child living in a home certified by Child Welfare, unless the home is the child’s family home where the child lives with their parent or caregiver, in which case, only OAR 413-015-1015 (1) applies.

III. When determining the disposition of a young adult living in a home certified by Child Welfare, only the definition of abuse as defined in OAR 413-015-1015 (2) applies unless the home is the young adult’s family home where the young adult lives with their parent or caregiver, in which case, no CPS assessment disposition is determined.

IV. Abuse does not include reasonable discipline unless the discipline results in one of the conditions described in OAR 413-015-1015 (1) and (2).

Abuse of a child, for determining the CPS assessment disposition, includes, among others, the following behavior, conditions, and circumstances:

I. Abandonment. This includes parental behavior that shows an intent to permanently give up all rights and claims to the child.

II. Child selling. This includes selling of a child that consists of:
   A. Buying,
   B. Selling,
   C. Bartering,
   D. Trading, or
   E. Offering to buy or sell the legal or physical custody of a child.

III. Mental injury (psychological maltreatment). This includes cruel or unconscionable acts or statements made, threatened to be made, or permitted to be made by the parent or caregiver that has a direct effect on the child. The parent or caregiver’s behavior, intentional or unintentional, must be related to the observable and substantial impairment of the child’s:
   A. Psychological,
   B. Cognitive,
   C. Emotional, or
   D. Social well-being and functioning.

IV. Neglect. This includes failure, through action or omission, to provide and maintain adequate:
   A. Food,
   B. Clothing,
   C. Shelter,
   D. Medical care,
   E. Supervision,
F. Protection, or

G. Nurturing.

Chronic neglect is a persistent pattern of family functioning in which the parent or caregiver does not sustain or meet the basic needs of a child. This neglect results in an accumulation of harm that can have long-term effects on the child’s overall:

A. Physical,
B. Mental, or
C. Emotional development.

Neglect includes each of the following:

A. Physical neglect, which includes each of the following:
   1. Failure to provide for the child’s basic physical needs. This includes adequate:
      ■ Shelter,
      ■ Food, and ■ Clothing.
   2. Letting a child enter or remain in or on premises where methamphetamines are manufactured.
   3. Unlawful exposure of a child to a substance that subjects a child to severe harm to the child’s health or safety. When you make a determination of physical neglect based on severe harm to the child’s health due to unlawful exposure to a substance, this determination must be consistent with medical findings.

B. Medical neglect is a refusal or failure to seek, obtain, or maintain necessary medical, dental, or mental health care. Medical neglect includes withholding medically indicated treatment from infants who have disabilities and life-threatening conditions. However, failure to provide the child with immunizations or routine well-child care alone does not constitute medical neglect. When you make a determination of medical neglect, this determination must be consistent with medical findings.

V. Lack of supervision and protection. This includes failure to provide supervision and protection appropriate to the child’s age, mental ability, and physical condition.

VI. Desertion. This includes when the parent or caregiver:
   A. Leaves the child with another person and fails to reclaim the child;
   B. Fails to provide information about their whereabouts;
   C. Provides false information about their whereabouts; or
   D. Fails to establish a legal guardian or custodian for the child.

VII. Psychological neglect. This includes serious inattention to the child’s need for:
   A. Affection,
   B. Support,
C. Nurturing, or
D. Emotional development.

The parent or caregiver behavior must be related to the observable and severe harm of the child’s:
E. Psychological,
F. Cognitive,
G. Emotional, or
H. Social well-being and functioning.

VIII. Physical abuse. This includes an injury to a child inflicted or allowed to be inflicted by non-accidental means that results in harm. Physical abuse may include injury that could not reasonably be the result of the explanation given. Physical abuse may also include injury that is a result of discipline or punishment. Examples of injuries that may result from physical abuse include:
A. Head injuries;
B. Bruises, cuts, lacerations;
C. Internal injuries;
D. Burns or scalds;
E. Injuries to bone, muscle, cartilage, and ligaments;
F. Poisoning;
G. Electrical shock; or
H. Death.

IX. Sexual abuse. This includes:
A. A person’s use or attempted use of a child for the:
   1. Person’s own sexual gratification;
   2. Sexual gratification of another person; or
   3. Sexual gratification of the child.

   Sexual abuse includes:
   1. Incest,
   2. Rape,
   3. Sodomy,
   4. Sexual penetration,
   5. Fondling, and
   6. Voyeurism.

B. Sexual exploitation. This includes the use of a child in a sexually explicit way for personal gain. For example: to make money; in exchange for food stamps or drugs; or to gain status. Sexual exploitation also includes using children in prostitution or using children to create pornography.
C. Sex trafficking is defined in rule. It means:
   1. Recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or solicitation of a person under age 18 for the purpose of a commercial sex act, or
   2. Recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, or obtaining of a person over age 18 using force, fraud, or coercion for the purpose of a commercial sex act.

Threat of harm includes all activities, conditions, and circumstances that place the child at threat of severe harm of physical abuse, sexual abuse, neglect, mental injury, or other child abuse or neglect.

Abuse of a child or young adult when the child or young adult lives in a home certified by Child Welfare includes, among others, the following behavior, conditions, and circumstances, unless the home is the child or young adult’s family home where the child or young adult lives with their parent or caregiver:

X. Abandonment. This includes:
   A. Desertion or willful forsaking of a child or young adult; or
   B. Withdrawal or neglect of duties and obligations owed a child or young adult by:
      1. A home certified by Child Welfare;
      2. A caregiver; or
      3. Other person.

Considerations that relate to abandonment:

- Only a person in a caregiving role can abandon a child or young adult.
- Abandonment is leaving the child or young adult with no plan to resume care.
- Abandonment is a very specific act.
- When you consider abandonment as an abuse type, also consider neglect.
- Does abandonment include when a foster parent drops a child in care at the ODHS office, without notice, and states that they are unable to care for the child any longer? Generally, no. Consider how the drop off looks. What was the responsibility of the state agency?
- An example of abandonment includes a foster parent who drops a child off at some person’s home. Also, they never return when they move from Oregon without notification to the caseworker, certifier, or the person.
- If a child is missing, and a provider fails to make any efforts to look for or report a missing child, this is not abandonment. However, it should be considered under neglect.

XI. Financial exploitation.
   A. Financial exploitation includes:
      1. Wrongfully taking assets, funds, or property that belong to or are intended for the use of a child or young adult.
      2. Alarming a child or young adult by conveying a threat to wrongfully take or appropriate money or property of the child or young adult if the child would reasonably believe the threat conveyed would be carried out.

3. Misappropriation, misuse, or transfer of any money without authorization from any account held jointly or singly by a child or young adult.

4. Failure to use the income or assets of a child or young adult effectively for the support and maintenance of the child or young adult.

B. Financial exploitation does not include age-appropriate discipline that may involve the threat to withhold, or the withholding of, privileges.

Considerations that relate to financial exploitation:

A. Property of the child or young adult refers to items brought into the home by the child or young adult and those items purchased for that child or young adult. This includes clothes, phone, hairbrush, books, toiletries, etc.

B. Wrongfully means unjust or illegal.

C. How a caregiver should use the assets, funds or property of a child or young adult is outlined in certification standards. The certifier should be consulted if there are questions about certification standards.

D. To alarm in this context is to communicate directly or indirectly intent to use a child’s or young adult’s money or property in a manner that is unjust or illegal and that results in the child or young adult being intimidated or fearful.

E. Authorization refers to permission being granted by the child or young adult’s parent or guardian. For a child or young adult receiving ODDS services, permission may be granted by the child’s or young adult’s Individual Service Plan team.

F. Monies paid to the caregiver for the care and support of the child or young adult must be used for this purpose.

G. Monies and assets of the child or young adult are not to be used for the caregiver’s personal gain.

H. The expectation is that monies are spent and assets utilized in a manner consistent with the standards, rules, and regulations applicable to the caregiver. The certifier should be consulted if there are questions about certification standards.

I. Developmentally or age appropriate withholding of, or threats to withhold, money or belongings is not abuse. Appropriate withholding of property assumes the caregiver does not damage or otherwise intentionally change the condition of the property.

J. Taking a child’s or young adult’s phone away and restricting access to electronics are both examples of temporary suspension of privileges that can be very reasonable discipline. However, the child’s or young adult’s age, development and behavior must be considered when evaluating the reasonableness.

K. An example of financial exploitation would include when a child does not have clothing that fits despite the foster parent having been given a clothing voucher. The foster parent used the voucher to buy clothes for their own child’s or their own use.
XII. Involuntary seclusion: Involuntary seclusion means confinement of a child or young adult alone in a room from which the child or young adult is physically prevented from leaving. Involuntary seclusion includes:

A. Involuntary seclusion of a child or young adult for the convenience of a:
   1. Child-caring agency, proctor foster home;
   2. ODDS licensed group home or home certified by ODDS;
   3. Home certified by Child Welfare; or

B. Involuntary seclusion of a child or young adult to discipline the child or young adult.

C. Involuntary seclusion does not include age-appropriate discipline, including but not limited to, a time-out.

Considerations that relate to involuntary seclusion:

A. Involuntary seclusion includes locking a child or young adult in a room or area inside or outside the residence.

B. Depending on the child’s or young adult’s age or development, a shut door in the absence of a lock may still prevent the child or young adult from leaving.

C. There are many ways, besides a lock or a closed door, to prevent a child or young adult from leaving a space that could also be considered involuntary seclusion.

D. Use of a baby gate to prevent or protect a child from accessing unsafe or unmonitored areas (such as stairs that are around a corner) is not seclusion. Proper use of a baby gate would include the caregiver hearing and seeing a child.

E. Therapeutic use of a seclusion or isolation room is not automatically involuntary seclusion, but the intent or justification needs to be considered.

F. The reasonableness of any discipline method must consider the child’s or young adult’s age, development, and behavior.

G. When considering involuntary seclusion as an abuse type, also consider neglect.

XIII. Neglect. This includes:

A. Failure to provide care, supervision, or services necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of a child or young adult; or

B. Failure to make a reasonable effort to protect a child or young adult from abuse by:
   1. Child-caring agency, proctor foster home;
   2. ODDS licensed group home or home certified by ODDS;
   3. Home certified by Child Welfare;
   4. Caregiver; or
   5. Other person.
Considerations that relate to neglect:

A. One or more missed appointments would rarely be considered neglect.

B. Were the appointments (or other failures) critical to maintaining the physical and mental health of the child or young adult? What was the appointment for, and what were the consequences for the child or young adult as a direct result of missing the appointment? Also, why was the appointment missed? Finally, as the legal guardian, what was the caseworker’s responsibility in getting the child or young adult to the appointment?

C. This failure may include a failure to report suspected abuse of a child or young adult. Consider whether the failure did or was likely to result in additional abuse.

D. What was the effect or likely effect on the child or young adult as a result of the caregiver’s action or inaction?

E. This failure also may include not providing the level of supervision necessary for a child or young adult that requires considering the age, development, behaviors, and emotional state of a child or young adult.

F. What did the case plan, treatment plan, or supervision plan entail, and was the caregiver involved in the creation of the plan or was the caregiver instructed about those plans and expectations?

G. It is important to understand the high-risk behaviors of a child or young adult (for example, sexual offending, drug use, or gang affiliation) and how they may place another child or young adult at risk to ensure adequate supervision and protection. Adequate supervision and protection of children or young adults who have sexually offended is critical for the safety of all children and young adults in care. This includes the offending child or young adult.

XIV. Physical abuse. This includes:

A. Any physical injury to a child or young adult caused by other than accidental means or that appears to conflict with the explanation given of the injury;

B. Willful infliction of physical pain or injury upon a child or young adult.

Considerations that relate to physical abuse:

A. The injury does not have to be visible.

B. The purpose of the act is deliberate and for the intent to cause pain.

C. A caregiver may cause pain, but was it the purpose of the act or a secondary consequence of the act? An example could be administering a shot to a diabetic child; the shot caused pain, but the intent was to give medication.

D. Did the caregiver use physical means to manage the child’s or young adult’s behavior?

E. Did the caregiver intend to cause an injury or intend to cause pain? Even if the caregiver does not acknowledge intent, is it reasonably assumed the behavior of the caregiver would result in injury or pain?

F. Did the caregiver have a reasonable reaction or startled response to something surprising that unintentionally results in injury or pain to the child or young adult?

G. When a caregiver’s actions are consistent with intent to protect the child, young adult, or someone else or even for their own protection, it may not be willful infliction of pain.

H. When considering disposition related to an injury that conflicts with the explanation provided, consider whether the injury was likely to have been intentionally inflicted.

XV. Sexual abuse. This includes:

A. A person’s use or attempted use of a child or young adult for the:
   1. Person’s own sexual gratification;
   2. Sexual gratification of another person; or
   3. Sexual gratification of the child or young adult.

Sexual abuse includes:

4. Incest,
5. Rape,
6. Sodomy,
7. Sexual penetration,
8. Fondling, and

B. Sexual exploitation, which includes the use of a child or young adult in a sexually explicit way for personal gain. For example, to make money, in exchange for food stamps or drugs, or to gain status. Sexual exploitation also includes using children or young adults in prostitution or to create pornography.

C. Sex trafficking: “Sex trafficking” is defined in rule. It means:
   1. Recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or soliciting of a person under age 18 for the purpose of a commercial sex act, or
   2. Recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, or obtaining of a person over age 18 using force, fraud, or coercion for the purpose of a commercial sex act.

XVI. Verbal abuse:

A. Verbal abuse includes the threat of severe harm, either physical or emotional, to a child or young adult by use of:
   1. Derogatory or inappropriate names, insults, verbal assaults, profanity, or ridicule, or.
   2. Harassment, coercion, threats, compelling or deterring conduct by threats, humiliation, mental cruelty, or inappropriate sexual comments.

B. Verbal abuse does not include age-appropriate discipline. – That may involve the threat to withhold privileges.
Considerations that relate to verbal abuse:

A. All threats that constitute verbal abuse, regardless of use of profanity and insults, must threaten severe physical or emotional harm (refer to the definition of severe harm.)

B. What was the context? If a joke, while it may be inappropriate, if the child or young adult received it as a joke, it is not a threat.

C. Did the child or young adult experience the words as threatening?

D. Did the child or young adult experience anguish, distress, or fear?

E. When considering verbal abuse as an abuse type, also consider mental injury and neglect.

Wrongful use of a physical or chemical restraint of a child or young adult, excludes an act of restraint prescribed by a physician licensed under ORS chapter 677. Also, any treatment activities consistent with an approved treatment plan or used in connection with a court order.

A. “Physical restraint” means the act of restricting a child or young adult’s voluntary movement as an emergency measure to manage and protect the child or young adult or others from injury when no alternate actions are sufficient to manage the child or young adult’s behavior. “Physical restraint” does not include temporarily holding a child or young adult to assist them or assure their safety, such as preventing a child or young adult from running onto a busy street.

B. “Chemical restraint” means the administration of medication for the management of uncontrolled behavior. “Chemical restraint” is different from the use of medication for treatment of symptoms of severe emotional disturbances or disorders.

Considerations that relate to physical restraint:

A. Only a caregiver trained to use a physical restraint should be doing so, per the rules, contracts and regulations.

B. Despite the expectation that only caregivers trained in use of a physical restraint do so, someone untrained in physical restraint may be in a position where they put hands on a child or young adult to restrain them. When this occurs, it may be reasonable if the child or young adult or others were believed to be at imminent risk of harm.

C. When a physician has prescribed the restraint, the behavior prescribed is not abuse. Follow up with the physician if the prescribed behavior is inappropriate.

D. Did the method for restraining the child or young adult demonstrate good judgment and was it safely implemented?

E. Was a non-physical intervention considered? Did the caregiver consider contacting police or taking other measures to diffuse the situation?

F. What was the justification for using a restraint? What was the behavior made it necessary for the restraint? What was the potential outcome if the restraint did not occur?

G. If the child or young adult receives services from ODDS and has a positive behavior support plan, consider and review that plan.
Considerations that relate to chemical restraint:

- A caregiver may not use chemicals or substances to manage or control a child’s or young adult’s behavior in the absence of a doctor’s direction.
- What was the reason for the medication to be administered? The reason for the medication to be provided should not be for the benefit of the caregiver.
- Would giving a child or young adult a Benadryl (not for a cold or with doctor’s instructions) to make them drowsy so they calm down, be a “wrongful” use of a chemical restraint? Yes
- Giving a child or young adult a Tylenol to treat a headache is not the use of a chemical restraint. –Its use is not to manage uncontrolled behavior.

It is important to state the specific type of abuse, the relationship and name of the perpetrator and victim, as well as the dispositional finding itself. You then must explain how you came to the conclusion you did. Provide as much detail as possible. It is important to include interviews with:

I. Children,
II. Alleged perpetrator,
III. Non-offending parent,
IV. Police report information, and
V. Advocacy center reports when appropriate.

You will need to provide this type of detail on all dispositional findings. For example:

I. To determine whether neglect occurred directly related to lack of supervision, consider the following:
   A. The child’s:
      1. Physical condition and mental abilities,
      2. Coping capacity,
      3. Maturity,
      4. Competence,
      5. Knowledge about how to respond to an emergency, and
      6. Feelings about being alone.
   B. Type and degree of indirect adult supervision. For example, is there an adult checking in on the child?
   C. The length of time and frequency which the child is left alone. Is the child being left alone all day, every day? Are they left alone all night?
   D. The safety of the child’s environment. For example, the safety of the neighborhood, access to a telephone, and safety of the home.

Once you consider the above issues, document the consideration of those issues and how that lead to your finding.

Similar documentation should occur on each allegation type.

Special note on threat of harm cases: It is important to document the potential effect to the child’s:
I. Physical,
II. Sexual,
III. Psychological,
IV. Cognitive, or
V. Behavioral state.

Also, show how the perpetrator’s past circumstances can be tied to a current threat of harm. It is not enough to state there was prior founded or substantiated for sexual abuse, therefore there is a founded or substantiated threat of harm. You need to document how consideration of circumstances that surround the perpetrator’s past sex abuse places the current children at threat of harm.

Documentation

Prior to completion, in the disposition narrative section of the assessment you must:

- I. Document the disposition, and
- II. Explain the basis for the disposition.

You must detail and specify the conditions and circumstances that resulted in the dispositional finding in the documentation.

When you document the type of abuse, you must specify which definition of abuse applies.

Be specific whether it is a type of abuse of a child as defined in 413-015-1015 (1) or a type of abuse of a child in a Child Welfare certified foster home as defined in 413-015-1015 (2) or both.

When explaining the basis for the disposition the CPS worker:

- Includes the basics:
  - Perpetrator’s name and their relationship to the victim
  - Victim's name
  - Abuse type (Neglect, Sexual Abuse, Physical Abuse, Threat of Harm)
    - Do NOT include the abuse description. For example, neglect is the abuse type, lack of supervision and protection is the description. Similarly, threat of harm is the abuse type and threat of harm: sexual abuse includes the description.
    - When you document the type of abuse, you must specify which definition of abuse applies. Be specific whether it is a type of abuse of a child as defined in 413-015-1015 (1) or a type of abuse of a child in a Child Welfare certified foster home as defined in 413-015-1015 (2) or both.
  - Supports the finding with facts
    - What information gathered supports the disposition selected. There is always more than a disclosure. What details were corroborated? What adds credibility?
    - Includes the facts that do and do not support the conclusion and why that information did or did not have more weight than the other information

- Names sources. From whom (Dr. Smith) or where (police report #02-12345), did you learn the information?
- Avoids opinion, judgment and gut feeling. Rather than drawing a conclusion such as saying a child is fearful describe the behaviors such as child was shaking and started to cry when told they would be seeing their mother.

- Includes impact, or likely impact, to the child
- Is specific to each child
  - Uses the rule, but no need to quote the rule. Review the definitions of unfounded, founded and unable to determine as well as the definitions of the abuse types. All of these definitions can be found in the “CPS Assessment Dispositions” rule. If making a finding of Threat of harm, review the definition of “severe” in Introduction to CPS Rules.” Rather than quoting the rule, document the justification by providing the information gathered in the CPS assessment in a manner that is consistent with the definitions.
  - For CPS assessments where a child has died, clearly states if the death was the result of abuse.

Tip

When making the disposition decision, it is important to answer the question, “Is there sufficient information and documentation to support this being abuse?” Even in referrals that lack reasonable cause to believe abuse occurred (unfounded or unsubstantiated, or unable to determine, or inconclusive dispositions), documentation of information is important. – The content of reports eventually may show a pattern of abuse.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 10: Early Intervention Referrals
Early Intervention Referrals

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0440 when a disposition is founded or substantiated for abuse, you must refer all victims age 3 or under to early intervention.

Procedure

The CPS to Early Intervention Referral Form (CF 323) must be used to make the referral. Obtaining a release of information is recommended as engages the parent or guardian in the process and keeps them informed, however, a release of information is not required.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 11: Make child safety decision and determine whether to open a case
Make child safety decision and determine whether to open a case

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0445, you must determine if the child is safe or unsafe at the conclusion of the CPS assessment after:

I. All the necessary information is gathered for the CPS assessment, and
II. The disposition has been determined.

To make a child safety decision at the conclusion of a CPS assessment, you must again determine if an impending danger safety threat is present as outlined in OAR 413-015-0425.

I. You must conclude the child is unsafe, when at the conclusion of the CPS assessment you determine:
   A. One or more impending danger safety threats are present; and
   B. This includes a previously identified impending danger safety threat that has not been eliminated.

When you conclude that the child is unsafe at the conclusion of the CPS assessment, you must:

I. Determine how the impending danger safety threat is occurring to support the development of an ongoing safety plan as outlined in OAR 413-015-0428;
II. Develop an ongoing safety plan as outlined in OAR 413-015-0450;
III. Complete the CPS assessment; and
IV. Open a case.

V. You must conclude the child is safe, when at the conclusion of the CPS assessment you determine:
   A. No present or impending danger safety threats are present; and
   B. This includes any that were identified previously were eliminated.

When you conclude the child is safe at the conclusion of the CPS assessment, you must:

I. Dismiss the protective action plan or initial safety plan if one is in place; and
II. Determine if the family has moderate to high needs unless completing a CPS assessment involving the home certified by Child Welfare, ODDS, or OYA.
III. When you determine the family does not have moderate to high needs, you must complete and close the CPS assessment.
IV. When you determine the family does have moderate to high needs, you must:
   A. Offer the family referrals to relevant services as available.
   B. If the family accepts the offer, the CPS worker must refer the family to relevant services as available;
and

C. Complete and close the CPS assessment.

V. You must document in OR-Kids the child safety decision. This includes:

A. If the child is safe and the assessment will be closed, or the child is unsafe and the case will be opened; and

B. If the child is safe:
   1. Whether the family was determined to have moderate to high needs and the basis for the determination; and
   2. If applicable, whether the family accepted the offer for service referrals.

C. The basis for the determination of whether the child is safe or unsafe.

Procedure

At the conclusion of the assessment, make one of the following child safety decisions based on information gathered:

I. The child is safe, but the family has moderate to high needs.
   A. When you identify that the child is safe and the family has moderate to high needs, offer the family referrals. These services should be:
      1. Relevant (directly related to the needs);
      2. Non-contracted (ODHS does not pay for); and
      3. Available (accessible to the family).
   B. If the family accepts the offer for non-contracted service referrals, make the referrals and help the family to connect with the service.
   C. All cases where the children are safe and the family has moderate to high needs must be closed.

II. The child is safe, and the family does not have moderate to high needs.
   A. Please refer to the Chapter 3 section on moderate to high needs.

III. The child is unsafe.
   A. The CPS worker will develop an ongoing safety plan.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 12: Determine moderate to high needs
Determine moderate to high needs

As defined in OAR 413-015-0115, moderate to high needs means:

I. Observable family behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that are occurring now; and

II. Over the next year without intervention, are likely to have a negative impact on a child’s:
   A. Physical,
   B. Sexual,
   C. Psychological,
   D. Cognitive, or
   E. Behavioral development or functioning.

The potential negative impact is not judged to be severe. Intervention is not required for the child to be safe. However, it is reasonable to determine that short-term targeted services can reduce or eliminate the likelihood the negative impact will occur.

Procedure

At the conclusion of the CPS assessment, you and your CPS supervisor may have determined there is no impending danger safety threat. However, the family, the CPS worker, and the supervisor may determine moderate to high needs exist within the family condition if:

I. Observable family behaviors, conditions, or circumstances are occurring now; and

II. Over the next year without intervention, are likely to have a negative impact on a child’s:
   A. Physical,
   B. Sexual,
   C. Psychological,
   D. Cognitive, or
   E. Behavioral development or functioning; and

III. The potential negative impact is not judged to be severe.

When it is determined that a family has moderate to high needs, refer to Chapter 3 section 11, Make Child Safety Decision and Determine Whether to Open a Case, for next steps.

Documentation

The CPS worker must document the moderate to high needs determination in OR-Kids.
Protective Custody

OAR 413-015-0455 outlines the CPS worker authority and responsibility as it relates to protective custody. Protective custody is when a child is removed from the legal and physical care of their parents. Depending on the circumstances a CPS worker can either take a child into protective custody with a protective custody order or without. When possible, a protective custody order should be obtained prior to removing a child.

Before we talk about how to take a child into protective custody, it is important to first talk about why. It is a very serious decision to remove a child from their parents. As such Oregon law is specific about when this action can be taken. The reasons for taking a child into protective custody are different depending on whether there is a protective custody order.

A child may be taken into protective custody with a protective custody order when removal of the child from their parents is necessary and the least restrictive means available to:

- Protect the child from abuse;
- Prevent the child from inflicting harm on self or others;
- Ensure the child remains within the reach of the juvenile court to protect the child from abuse or to prevent the child from inflicting harm on self or others; or
- Prevent imminent physical damage or harm to the child, if there is reason to know the child is an Indian child.

When taking protective custody of a child with a protective custody order, there are two ways to go about getting the order.

I. Completing a declaration in support of a request for a protective custody and presenting the declaration to a judge. The declaration provides information describing the reasons protective custody is necessary and why protective custody is in the best interest of the child. The court will then review the Declaration and determine whether there is sufficient information to support the order.

II. Filing a petition with the juvenile court and scheduling a shelter hearing. At the shelter hearing the CPS worker, or their representation on Child Welfare’s behalf, may request protective custody of a child.

In either case, if a judge grants the request then a protective custody order will be signed by the judge and provided to the CPS worker. The CPS worker now has the permission from the court to remove the child.

When taking protective custody of a child without a protective custody order the CPS worker has determined the child’s safety would be compromised in the time it took to obtain a protective custody order and there is reasonable cause to believe that:

- There is imminent threat of severe harm to the child;
- The child poses an imminent threat of severe harm to self or others;
- There is an imminent threat the child’s parent or guardian will cause the child to be beyond the reach of the juvenile court before the court can order the child to be taken into protective custody; or
- The child is an Indian child, and taking protective custody is necessary to prevent imminent physical damage or harm to the child.
• You have observed a child who has suffered a suspicious physical injury and you know or have a reasonable suspicion the injury is or may be the result of abuse, protective custody can be taken without a court order only for the amount of time necessary to ensure photographs are taken immediately and a medical assessment is conducted within 48 hours.

Before taking a child into protective custody to photograph or examine a suspicious injury, the CPS worker should consider exploring different ways to ensure these requirements are met. For example, was the parent invited to be present when photographs are taken and to see the photographs once taken. Make efforts to increase the parents' comfort with the photographs or medical exam.

If you identify any of the circumstances above, contact a CPS supervisor before taking further action, unless doing so will compromise safety of the child in which case make contact with a CPS supervisor afterward.

Remember, if there is no reason to believe the child is going to be unsafe before a protective custody order can be obtained, then complete a declaration or schedule a shelter hearing. The CPS worker should consider the following when determining if leaving to obtain a protective custody order could compromise the safety of the child:

• Whether the circumstances are such that the child is likely to suffer an acute or significant injury to their physical, sexual or psychological functioning or life-threatening damage.

• The distance to the local office and the court from the location of the child.

• The amount of time to drive back and forth to the office, the court and back to the home.

• If there is support at the local office to assist with the process and if so, whether there is cellular reception to collaborate with staff.

Additional Required Steps

Whenever you do take a child into protective custody with or without a court order, you must write a Protective Custody Report and promptly file that report with the court the day the child was taken into custody or no later than the morning of the next business day (ORS 419B.171). A Protective Custody Report is required even if the child is released to a parent or other responsible person before a Shelter Hearing.

If the child is not released to a parent or other responsible person, but is retained in protective custody, a Shelter Hearing must be scheduled to occur within 24 hours (excluding weekends and judicial holidays or court order) (ORS 419B.183).

Also, when a child is taken into protective custody or juvenile court intervention is necessary to ensure the child and family receive appropriate services, you must arrange for a juvenile court petition to be filed (ORS 419B.809).

Placing a Child into Protective Custody

When you go to place the child into protective custody (with or without the order), it is important to evaluate the current circumstances and your surroundings to determine the safest course of action. Law enforcement should be present whenever possible to ensure everyone’s safety. If the child has been severely harmed or there is a threat of severe harm happening in the present, you do not have to wait for law enforcement. However, you may not take the child into protective custody without law enforcement assistance if:

• There is any resistance (for example, physically holding the child and refusing to let go, blocking exits, physically blocking access to the child);

- There is threatened resistance; (for example, threatening to harm themselves, threatening to use weapons, or threatening violence if you take the child) or
- It creates a substantial risk of physical injury to any person.

Trauma informed engagement is essential when taking protective custody, not only for the child, but for the parents and caregivers as well. Placing a child into protective custody can create trauma for all persons involved.

Whenever safety allows, engage the parent/caregiver in the transition of the child from their care. Include them in the plan for the well-being of the child. Find out what comforts the child, what the child likes to eat, what are the child’s interests, and what the bedtime routines are. Ask if the child could take photographs, blankets, or other reminders of home and family. Promote attachment by letting the parent/caregiver know when they will be able to talk to or see the child next. Be creative in finding ways to meet the trauma needs of the family.

For more information about requirements and considerations for placements, see Chapter 5 Section 2: Placement Services Generally in the procedure manual.
Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 15: Reasonable and Active Efforts
Reasonable and Active Efforts

To meet the reasonable efforts requirement, Oregon’s practice model uses the:

I. Comprehensive child safety assessment; and

II. Safety planning process.

The reasonable efforts requirement is consistent to ensure the least intrusive intervention used to ensure child safety.

I. CPS performs reasonable efforts to prevent out-of-home placement. Conducting comprehensive safety assessments and continuing safety planning requirements ensures that CPS meets the reasonable efforts requirement. The rigorous application of these standards is sufficient to comply with:

   A. Reasonable efforts expectations and requirements; and
   B. Justifies seeking court authority to place a child out of their home as part of the ongoing safety plan.

II. Active efforts are actions required of the state to care for an Indian child. These efforts are mandated under the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA), see OAR 413-115-0060. While active efforts are undefined in ICWA, these efforts are more intense than the legal term “reasonable efforts.” Active efforts apply to:

   A. The provision of remedial and rehabilitative services to the family prior to the removal of an Indian child from their parent or Indian custodian; or
   B. An intensive effort to reunify an Indian child with their parent or Indian custodian.

Each tribe determines what actions are indicated for the specific family that are:

   A. More intensive;
   B. Family involved; and
   C. Culturally appropriate.

The court makes findings if active efforts were met. However, the tribe largely, if not completely, determines this.
Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 16: Identifying Legal Parents
Identifying legal parents

Procedure

Immediately after a child is taken into protective custody, you or a designee must make diligent efforts to identify:

I. Legal parents, and

II. Putative fathers.

To take steps to determine and establish legal paternity, make these efforts:

I. Record information about putative and legal fathers on form CF418, “Father Questionnaire. File the form in the case record.

III. Order the child’s birth certificate. Then, determine if a father is named or if the certificate has been amended.

IV. If there is a putative father, help him contact the State Recovery Central Unit in DCS.

V. Obtain copies of marriage certificate or divorce decrees, as applicable.

VI. Determine if DNA tests should be pursued. This may be an option through DCS or by use of system of care funds.

Tip

Self Sufficiency and Division of Child Support screens are viewer access only. They may not be printed or filed in case files.

Absent parent search

ODHS must give parents and guardians with legal standing notice of dependency proceedings that may limit or terminate parental rights. When filing a petition, ODHS shall give the parents notice of the child’s placement and offered services. This will help to determine if the parents are resources for placement. If it is not known where the parents are, ODHS must conduct reasonably diligent searches for them to give them notice of the juvenile court proceedings. A “reasonably or duly diligent search” is a systematic investigation that extends to:

I. People who, in the ordinary course of events, would be likely to receive news of or from the absent parent, and

II. Places where information likely would be obtained.

A reasonably diligent search pursues and exhausts all reasonable, not conceivable, avenues of inquiry.

The Oregon Juvenile Court Dependency Procedures prescribes the mechanics of giving parents notice of juvenile court cases by serving them with a summons and the petition. A search must be made in good faith. An inadequate search can hurt a dependent child if it causes the reversal of a judicial decision or judgment the child and family thought was final and permanent. Good searches enhance stability and certainty in child dependency matters.

Support staff may conduct searches. However, it is the responsibility of the caseworker to ensure the search is complete.

Procedure

You must:

I. Read the family’s child welfare files. Look for:
   A. Birth certificates or birth data;
   B. Names;
   C. Social Security numbers;
   D. Last known addresses; and
   E. Names of people who may have current information (relatives, employers, professionals who have worked with the family).

II. Within 30 days of placement, get and review the birth certificate for a child in temporary custody of ODHS. The birth certificate may include names of previously unknown legal parents. Otherwise, confirm who may establish paternity.

III. Take notes. Make a list of all relevant pieces of information, places, and people likely to provide information about the parent. Each potential source, linked by place or relationship to the parent, is a reasonable avenue of inquiry.

IV. Use all relevant and available file material and results of interviews.

V. Contact known relatives, friends, and coworkers of the parent. Include the parent’s last known address and last place of work.

VI. Follow up reasonable avenues of inquiry. Ask each contact for the parent’s current and last known addresses.

VII. Review other ODHS program files if accessible. Examples are Self Sufficiency and Division of Child Support screens.

VIII. If you cannot verify information through the above sources, access the Federal Parent Locator Service (FPLS) through the Division of Child Support. FPLS can be used to help locate and identify people who have or may have parental rights to a child. Send a letter that requests to locate the parent, signed by the authorized requester, to:

   Division of Child Support
   Locate Branch Manager
   3200 Lancaster Drive NE
   Salem, Oregon 97305

   Send a copy of the letter to:
IX. When available, include in your request:
   A. Social Security number of the parent;
   B. Name of the parent;
   C. Name of the child in care; and
   D. Case number.

X. Information that may be made available through FPLS includes:
   A. Social security number;
   B. Address or location;
   C. Employer’s name;
   D. Employer’s address; and
   E. Employment wages, benefits or other income.

Do not request the Division of Child Support to search for a parent to notify the parent their child is in state care.

Tip

When you search for a parent who is the perpetrator of domestic violence against the other adult parent (victim):

- Inform the victim that the attempt to locate the other parent is being made.
- Make a safety plan with the adult victim when appropriate. However, the search still needs to be made.
Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 17: Visitation
Visitation

Ensure the parent or caregiver maintains contact and interaction with the child fitting to the circumstances when there is any kind of out-of-home placement in the:

I. Protective action plan;
II. Initial safety plan; or
III. Ongoing safety plan.

If an out-of-home ongoing safety plan is developed, you must arrange for visitation between the child and their family. You must refer to Visits and Other Types of Child and Family Contact, OAR 413-070-0800 through 0880.
Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 18: Notifications
Notifications

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0470 you must:

I. Notify the reporter (if they provided Child Welfare with contact information), unless Child Welfare determines that disclosure is not permitted under ORS 419B.035, of:
   A. Whether contact was made;
   B. Whether Child Welfare determined that abuse occurred; and
   C. Whether services will be provided.

You must complete and document the notification prior to completion of the CPS assessment.

II. Verbally notify the following about all CPS assessment dispositions and whether Child Welfare will provide services as a result of the assessment:
   A. Parents of child or, when applicable, young adult;
   B. Non-custodial legal parent; and
   C. Caregivers.

CPS assessment dispositions include:
   D. Unfounded or unsubstantiated;
   E. Unable to determine or inconclusive; or
   F. Founded or substantiated.

When the child's parent is the perpetrator, the notice described in the next paragraph also must be provided. If notification may make any individual unsafe, a CPS supervisor may authorize an exception to the requirement to provide notification based on documentation supporting that conclusion. This notice must be documented within five business days of supervisory approval of the CPS assessment.

III. Give perpetrators written notice of founded or substantiated dispositions review process as outlined in Child Welfare Policy Notice and Review of CPS Founded Dispositions, OAR 413-010-0700 through 0750. If the perpetrator is an employee of the Department or OYA see Chapter 3, Section 28 for disposition notifications. If the notice could make any individual unsafe, the CPS supervisor may grant an exception to the requirement to provide notice to the perpetrator based on documentation that supports this conclusion. You must document the notification within five business days of supervisory approval of the CPS assessment.

IV. Give the Teacher Standards and Practices Commission (TSPC) notice of a completed CPS assessment when the alleged perpetrator is a:
   A. Teacher; or
   B. School administrator (each are defined in OAR 413-015-0115).

Regardless of the disposition, a copy of the CPS assessment must be sent to TSPC. Remove the reporter’s identity and other confidential information on the copy before you send it. This notice must be documented within five business days of supervisory approval of the CPS assessment.

V. Give the Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (ODDS) notice of a completed CPS assessment when it involves an ODDS certified home. Regardless of the disposition, a copy of the completed CPS assessment must be sent to ODDS. Remove the reporter’s identity and other confidential information on the copy before you send it.

VI. Give Oregon Youth Authority (OYA) notice of a completed CPS assessment if it involves an OYA certified home. Regardless of the disposition, a copy of the completed CPS assessment must be sent to OYA. Remove the reporter’s identity and other confidential information on the copy before you send it.

VII. Give Disability Rights Oregon notice of a completed CPS assessment when the report of abuse involves a child with a disability and was alleged to have occurred:
   A. At a school, or
   B. In an educational setting.

Regardless of the disposition, a copy of the completed CPS assessment must be sent to Disability Rights Oregon. Remove the reporter’s identity and other confidential information on the copy before you send it.

VIII. Notify law enforcement right away when a crime is suspected to have occurred even if unrelated to a report of abuse:
   A. At one of the following or to a child or young adult living or receiving services from a:
      1. Child-caring agency;
      2. Proctor foster home;
      3. ODDS licensed group home; or
      4. Home certified by Child Welfare, ODDS, or OYA.

Documentation

You must document the notifications as described above in OR-Kids. The documentation must include:

I. Who gave the notification;
II. To whom notification was given;
III. The date notification was given; and
IV. That notifications have been attempted or made within the timelines outlined in each paragraph above.

Procedure

Complete the required notifications related to a CPS assessment disposition to:

I. Reporters,
II. Parents, or
III. Caregivers

Also, notify them if there is no disposition, as well.

Notifications to TSPC, ODDS and OYA

It is important that the ODDS or OYA certifier has the safety related information to inform the certification decisions. TSPC needs the information to inform decisions about school teachers and administrators. The decisions made by these entities directly relate to child safety. Sharing information may prevent future child abuse.

Consular notifications – Vienna Convention

Overview

Sometimes, an action for appointment of a guardian or trustee is filed on behalf of a child that is a foreign national. When that happens, the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations (1963), a multi-lateral international treaty, requires notification be given to the consulate for the child’s country. Oregon law carries out the treaty by requiring notification to the consulate of a foreign national child in the following situations:

I. A petition or motion to implement under ORS 109.119 seeking custody of or guardianship of a child;

II. A petition to appoint a fiduciary for the child or the entry of a protective order under ORS chapter 125;

III. A petition alleging that a child is within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court under ORS chapter 419B; and

IV. A motion to implement a plan other than return to parent under ORS Chapter 419B for a ward of the juvenile court.

Whenever ODHS files a petition alleging a child who is a foreign national is within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, ODHS is required to:

I. Serve a copy of the petition on the consulate for the child’s country, and

II. Document that service.

This is required even if the parents of the child do not want ODHS to notify the consulate.

Caseworker’s responsibilities

Determine the citizenship of the child and their parent

When a child is placed into substitute care and a petition is filed, you must attempt to determine if the child is a U.S. citizen. To accomplish this, you should do the following:

I. Ask the child’s parents or relatives if the child is:

   A. A U.S. citizen;

   B. A citizen of another country; or
C. A citizen of both the United States and another country.

II. Gather as much information about the child’s nationality as possible from the child’s parents and other relatives. This includes:
   A. When and where the child was born;
   B. Location of the other family members; and
   C. Last known addresses of the:
      1. Child;
      2. Child’s parents; and
      3. Family members.

III. Use form CF449, Relative Contact Information Memo, to identify parents and other relatives. Also, document their contact information outside of the United States.

Based on the information obtained above, determine if the child is a U.S. citizen.

What if the child is not a U.S. citizen?

You should complete the following steps if you have reason to believe that the child:

I. Is not a U.S. citizen, and

II. Has been placed on a voluntary basis into substitute care, but

III. ODHS has not filed a petition alleging that the child is within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

Notify the consulate of the child’s country that the child has been placed into substitute care. This notification can be done via fax or letter (See Appendix 3.7 - Consulate Notifications via Fax).

Access the web page for the foreign consular offices in the United States. Determine the fax number and address of the consulate office you need to notify. Also find out the title of the consular officer.

I. Keep a copy of the notification in the ODHS file. If you fax information to a consular office, keep the transmittal for your file as evidence of official notification. Also send a copy of the notification to the Office of Equity and Multicultural Services (OEMS).

II. If you have questions or need clarification on what the notification materials should include, contact the following:

   A. Office of Equity and Multicultural Services, 503-945-5700.

If you determine that:

I. The child is not a U.S. citizen, and

II. ODHS has filed a petition alleging that the child is within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

Then, you must complete the following steps:

I. Serve a copy of the petition on the consulate of the child’s country. Service may be made by:

   A. Hand delivery,
Chapter 3 • Section 18: Notifications

II. Document that service was completed. This may be done by having the consulate complete a written acknowledgment of service. Otherwise, you may have the person who made the service complete an affidavit that explains to whom a copy of the petition was served. The affidavit needs to be signed in front of a notary and notarized. If the document was served by fax, the printed confirmation receipt generated by the fax machine must be attached to the affidavit.

III. Send the written acknowledgment or affidavit that documents completed service, with a copy of the petition attached, to the court for filing. A copy of this proof of service must also be sent to the legal parties to the juvenile court proceeding.

IV. A copy of the proof of service should be:

A. Kept in the ODHS file, and

B. Sent to Office of Equity and Multicultural Services.

What if the child is a U.S. citizen?

If you determine that the child is a U.S. citizen and not a foreign national, then ODHS is not legally required to provide notification to the consulate of the child’s country. However, per an agreement between Oregon’s ODHS and the Consulate General of Mexico of Portland, Oregon, ODHS will provide notification to the Mexican Consulate’s Office for children who are:

I. Dual citizens of Mexico, or

II. A biological minor of a Mexican national.

The notification process is slightly different. Prior to sending the notification form to the Mexican Consulate’s office, you must have an Authorization to Share Information form (3010) signed by one of the parents. This allows you to share information with the consulate on behalf of their children. Otherwise, you must have a court order that allows you to share information with the consular office for purposes of planning for the child.

Role of the supervisor

I. Review all cases in your unit that have children placed in substitute care to ensure that the appropriate consulate was notified if any of the child or their parent(s):

A. Were born in another country, or

B. Have citizenship in another country.

II. Provide case consultation to caseworkers about consulate notification, if needed.

Assessment

Section 19: CPS assessment documentation
CPS Assessment Documentation

Procedure

You must record assessment activities and information gathered during the assessment process. Oregon Administrative Rule provides specific requirements and procedures for making findings and documenting information such as:

I. Present danger safety threats and impending danger safety threats that have been identified;
II. The capacity of parents or caregivers to protect;
III. The safety plan components; and
IV. The identity of relatives willing to contribute to the safety plan and cultural considerations.

You must complete the CPS assessment for review within 60 days of the day the information alleging abuse is received by the screener. This includes OR-Kids input and electronic submission. The Child Welfare program manager may approve a one-time extension of an additional 30 days for completion of the CPS assessment if:

I. It has been confirmed that critical information is still needed; and
II. The ability to obtain critical information is beyond your reasonable control.

Completion of the assessment must not interfere with the development of the initial case plan. The initial case plan must occur within 60 days as required in OAR 413-040-0010 when Child Welfare is granted temporary custody of the child during the CPS assessment. You should make efforts to complete the CPS assessment when there is sufficient information to do so. The timeline to complete the CPS assessment should not interfere with a permanency plan. To ensure timely development of the initial case plan, on cases where Child Welfare is granted temporary custody of the child in the course of the CPS assessment, no extension to complete the CPS assessment is allowed.
Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 20: The Role of The Supervisor
The Role of The Supervisor

Procedures

I. The CPS supervisor ensures that child, or when applicable young adult, safety is the focus of all assessment activity. To achieve that expectation, the CPS supervisor should:

   A. Review and discuss with the worker all safety decisions. This includes, but is not limited to, decisions to leave a child in the home, to remove a child from the home, and plans for reunification.

   B. Review the worker’s documentation, and meet with the worker to analyze the information. Ensure that documentation adequately describes activities to achieve child safety and to make dispositional findings regarding child abuse.

   C. Be aware of and consider worker strengths, vulnerabilities, and experiences.

   D. Provide constructive feedback and recommend training whenever needs are identified.

II. During the course of completing a CPS assessment, the CPS supervisor must consult with the CPS worker in the following situations, most of which are outlined in OAR 413-015-0415:

   A. When a CPS worker has reasonable cause to believe that an alleged perpetrator is an employee of any program, office, or division of ODHS or OYA. A CPS supervisor or designee must review and approve a completed CPS assessment within five working days of the electronic submission of the assessment by the CPS worker. After the assessment is reviewed by a CPS supervisor, if the alleged perpetrator is an employee of ODHS or OYA, the CPS supervisor must inform the ODHS Office of Human Resources of the disposition.

   If the disposition is founded, the CPS supervisor also informs the ODHS Office of Human Resources of the type of abuse. The CPS supervisor must document the notification in OR-Kids.

   B. When a CPS worker contacts a child at home, the parent or caregiver is not present, and the referral indicates there may be immediate danger to the child’s health or safety.

   C. When a CPS worker contacts a child at home, the parent or caregiver is not present, the child is inadequately supervised, and there is an immediate need to evaluate the child’s health and safety.

   D. When a CPS worker believes a school employee does not need to be present during a child interview, but the school employee insists.

   E. If school officials refuse to allow the child interview to take place on school property.

   F. When a referral involves the home certified by Child Welfare, ODDS, or OYA.

   G. When a referral involves allegations that abuse occurred in a proctor foster home.

   H. When a CPS worker receives notification from a screener that a closed at screening or new referral was created on an open CPS assessment.

   I. Prior to a CPS worker placing a child in protective custody or after placement if consultation before placement will delay the safety intervention.

   J. Prior to a CPS worker initiating court action or after initiating court action if consultation before will delay the safety intervention.
K. Prior to a CPS worker developing an initial safety plan with a home certified by Child Welfare
L. When the referral involves a child fatality.
M. When a CPS worker is making a disposition in a complicated or sensitive situation or case.
N. When a CPS worker is closing an assessment with the disposition of unable to locate.

III. When working with families where the Indian Child Welfare Act applies, the CPS supervisor:
   A. Reviews compliance with the worker to ensure the tribe has been given formal notice and the worker is in frequent contact with the tribal social worker.
   B. Assists the worker in making sure the Indian child, if placed out of his or her home, was placed following the placement preferences of the ICWA.
   C. Ensures the worker is providing culturally appropriate services to the family.

IV. When working with children or parents born in another country or noncitizens, the CPS supervisor:
   A. Reviews all cases in the unit that have children placed in substitute care to ensure that, when applicable, the appropriate consulate was notified if any of the children or children’s parent(s) were born in another country or have citizenship in another country.
   B. Provides case consultation to caseworkers regarding consulate notification.

V. In regard to completing absent parent searches, the CPS supervisor must:
   A. Routinely check the status of searches for timeliness and accuracy.
   B. Ensure a reasonable and diligent search to find available legal parents or involved putative fathers.
   C. Consult with the appropriate program consultant to determine whether to make a search for a putative father if there are questions about how to proceed.

Granting extensions and exceptions

I. During the course of completing a CPS assessment, the CPS supervisor may grant the following extensions or exceptions:
   A. An extension of the timeframe for the notification to the parent or caregiver that a child has been interviewed may be granted if earlier notification will compromise child safety. The CPS worker must notify the parents or caregivers the same day the interview occurred. If the same-day notification could make a child or adult unsafe, the CPS supervisor may authorize an extension for one day to allow a planned notification that is less likely to compromise safety.
   B. An exception to the requirement to interview non-custodial legal parents if the interview, based on written documentation, may make a child or adult victim unsafe.
   C. An exception to the requirement to notify parents, including non-custodial legal parents, and caregivers of the CPS assessment disposition if, based on written documentation, the notification may make a child or adult victim unsafe.

Supervisory approvals
I. A supervisor must approve the protective action plan, the initial safety plan and ongoing safety plan. A supervisor immediately advises a caseworker developing a protective action plan, initial safety plan, or ongoing safety plan when one is submitted for approval and does not meet one or more of the requirements.

II. The CPS supervisor must review and approve a completed assessment within five working days of the electronic submission of the assessment by the CPS worker. The local child welfare offices have the discretion to appoint a designee to fulfill the requirement of entering the supervisor’s electronic verification of review and approval into OR-Kids.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 21: Special Considerations and Requirements for CPS Assessment
Special considerations and requirements for CPS assessment

A. Referral on an open case

Procedure

I. When receiving a new CPS referral on an open case, you should:
   A. Meet with the assigned caseworker or their supervisor to gain an understanding of past or chronic concerns.
   B. Contact the family together with the permanency worker whenever feasible and beneficial to the assessment.
   C. Review the ongoing safety plan to understand the impending danger safety threats addressed through ongoing case management.

II. If, after evaluating the information:
   A. It appears there is a violation of a current safety plan, but
   B. It does not constitute an allegation of abuse or neglect, you should:
      1. Consult with the CPS supervisor to determine if the referral should be closed without a CPS assessment. In this situation, you should document in OR-Kids that the referral was opened in error.
      2. You or the CPS supervisor must inform the permanency worker who will handle the violation through ongoing case management.

B. CPS assessment when there is a child fatality

Procedure

Child protective services assessments that involve a child fatality are complex and sensitive. It is important to be aware of and address the impact on the caseworker. Due to the challenging nature of these referrals, assignment to an experienced CPS worker should be considered whenever possible.

I. While each fatality case is different and creates varying assessment needs, in general, your role is to:
   A. Refer to the Child Welfare fatality protocol.
   B. Protect the surviving siblings.
   C. Determine whether there is a need for medical intervention.
   D. Determine whether abuse occurred.
   E. Determine whether there are additional CPS allegations that need assessment about the conditions and circumstances that surround the fatality. (The screener already may have identified all relevant additional allegations.)
F. Provide information and make referrals for crisis intervention and counseling as appropriate.

G. Complete an assessment for:
   1. Possible filing of a dependency and petition, and
   2. Follow-up services for surviving siblings or other children in the home.

H. Notify the Child Safety consultant.

II. A fatality staffing must be completed:
   A. Within three business days of the receipt of a report that the fatality may be the result of abuse, or
   B. When the deceased child, the deceased child’s siblings or a member of the deceased child’s household was the subject of a report.
      1. This is regardless of the report being closed at screening or assigned.

Refer to Fatality Protocol for more information.

III. Your role and the role of the law enforcement officer are different. When there is a joint CPS and law enforcement agency (LEA) response and the roles appear to be in conflict, you should consult with a CPS supervisor. Child Welfare may determine that a fatality is founded for abuse, even if there is no LEA determination that a crime has occurred.

IV. If the LEA investigation and a medical examiner determine that the child fatality clearly was the result of abuse, and if there are:
   A. No siblings to the deceased child; and
   B. No other children in the home where the fatality occurred, you:
      1. May complete the CPS assessment without face-to-face contact with the parents or caregivers.

      Note: Only in a child fatality, when there are no siblings and no other children in the home, may you make a disposition without the required face-to-face contacts.

   C. The CPS worker must, if these circumstances apply and no contact was made:
      - Complete the CPS assessment; and
      - Document a founded disposition based on the LEA investigation, medical examiner’s report, and any additional information gathered during the CPS assessment.

   D. The CPS worker must notify the below of the CPS founded disposition:
      1. Reporter;
      2. Deceased child’s parents;
      3. Non-custodial legal parent;
      4. Caregivers; and
      5. Perpetrators.

All medical examiner and LEA reports of any fatality must be forwarded to the CPS consultant for the district when you receive them.
C. Determine and respond to ICWA status

For children identified as having American Indian or Alaska Native ancestry, early tribal notification and exploration of extended family and tribal resources help ensure safety and permanency that is:

I. Culturally appropriate; and

II. Complies with the requirements of the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA).

Procedure

I. When Child Welfare receives screening information, the screener must inquire whether the child is an Indian child. If the screener receives information that the child may be an Indian child, and the tribe is named, the screener must send a copy of the screening report to the tribe within 24 hours after the screening decision is complete.

You must inquire whether the child is an Indian child and must work with:

A. The child’s parents or Indian custodian; and

B. Any available extended family member, if the parents or Indian custodian are not available, to gather detailed information about:
   - Tribal membership or enrollment;
   - Whether the child is a ward of a tribal court; and
   - The child or their parents’ or Indian custodian’s domicile.

1. Ensure completion of a form CF1270, Verification of ICWA Eligibility, to assist in determining ICWA eligibility.

2. Contact the child’s tribe when an Indian child is the subject of a CPS assessment. Federally recognized tribes must be notified within 24 hours after information alleging abuse or neglect is received by Child Welfare.

3. If the Indian child is enrolled or eligible for enrollment in a federally recognized tribe or Alaskan village, notify the child’s tribe, if the child may be placed in protective custody.

4. If you have questions about the involvement of a tribe or the ICWA status of a child, consult with:
   - The local Department ICWA liaison;
   - A supervisor; or
   - The ICWA manager.

5. Make a diligent attempt to address the following when determining the placement resource:
   - Contact with the appropriate representative from the child’s tribe;
   - Search for relative resources;
   - Search for Oregon Indian foster home availability;
   - Contact other Indian tribes and other Indian organizations with available placement resources; and Extended family to the sixth degree of consanguinity.

Unless the Indian child’s tribe has established a different order of preference, comply with the ICWA placement preference, which is as follows:

I. Placement with a member of Indian child’s extended family;

II. Placement with a foster family that is licensed, approved or specified by the Indian child’s tribe;

III. Placement with an Indian foster home licensed or approved by an authorized non-Indian licensing authority; or

IV. Placement with an institution for children approved by an Indian tribe or operated by an Indian organization that has a program suitable to meet the Indian child’s needs.

Note: Both ICWA and Oregon law require any party seeking to remove an Indian child from their home to establish remedial or rehabilitative services to the family to avoid removal of the child. Active efforts must begin when Child Welfare has reason to know the child may be an Indian child, and there is a possibility the Indian child might be removed from the home of the parents or Indian custodian. This does not supersede:

A. The need for emergency removal to prevent imminent physical danger or harm to a child; and

B. When a protective action plan or initial safety plan that involves the child remaining in the home cannot be made.

Case records should document factual evidence that:

A. The conduct or condition of the parent or caregiver will result in severe physical or emotional harm to the child; and

B. That efforts were made to improve the parent’s or caregiver’s harmful behavior, and these efforts did not work.

Services offered must demonstrate active efforts made to alleviate the need to remove the child prior to a petition to the court for removal of an Indian child.

D. Determine and respond to refugee status

Procedure

During a CPS assessment, you must consider whether the child is a refugee child. Under ORS 418.925, a “refugee child” is a “person under 18 years of age who has entered the United States and is unwilling or unable to return to the person’s country because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular group or political opinion, or whose parents entered the United States within the preceding 10 years and are or were unwilling or unable to return to their country because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular group or political opinion.”

You must ask about the child’s or parents’:

I. Country of origin;

II. Length of time the child or parents have been in the United States;
III. Reasons why the child or parents came to the United States; and

IV. Ethnic and cultural information relevant to the child’s status as a refugee.

You do not have to make a legal determination that the child and parent are refugees. However, if the child or the parents indicate they are refugees, then you must proceed as if they are. Do so, until or unless it is known that they are not refugees.

I. You may not take a refugee child into protective custody unless, in addition to the other requirements for taking a child into custody, you determine that:

A. Removal is necessary to prevent imminent serious emotional or physical harm to the child; and

B. Reasonable efforts to alleviate the harm through remedial or preventive services:
   1. Do not alleviate the harm;
   2. Have failed; or
   3. Are not practical in an emergency.

C. Unless it is a voluntary placement, no refugee child may remain in placement more than five days unless there has been a judicial determination, supported by clear and convincing evidence that:
   1. Preventive or remedial services provided by ODHS have failed to alleviate the need for removal; and
   2. Return to the home will likely result in psychological or physical damage to the child.

D. When a refugee child is placed in care, the juvenile court petition must include, in addition to the information required by ORS 419B.809, the following:
   1. A specific and detailed account of the circumstances that led ODHS to conclude that the child was in imminent danger of serious emotional or physical harm;
   2. Specific actions ODHS has taken or is taking to alleviate the need for removal;
   3. Assurance that ODHS has complied with placement preferences listed in ORS 418.937; and
   4. Assurance that ODHS is making or has made diligent efforts to locate and give notice to all affected refugee family members and to the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee that the petition has been filed.

II. Unless it is a voluntary placement, no refugee child shall remain in placement more than five days unless there has been a judicial determination that the above two criteria are met. You must address the following when determining the placement resource:

A. Consider the child’s culture and tradition.

B. Follow the statutory mandate for placement preference as follows:
   1. Natural parents
   2. Extended family member;
   3. Members from the same cultural heritage; and
4. People with knowledge and appreciation of the child’s cultural heritage.

C. You may determine that an exception to the placement preference is warranted when the placement is inappropriate or inconsistent with the best interests of the child if:

1. The placement presents threats to the child’s safety;
2. Extreme medical, physical, or psychological needs of the child cannot be met in the placement;
3. The informed request from either the child’s biological or legal parents not to use a placement, if the request is consistent with stability, security, and the individual needs of the child; or
4. When a juvenile court petition is filed, and a refugee child is placed in care, you must staff the case with the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC). You must contact the International Case Consultant to arrange a time for the staffing.

In preparation for the staffing, you must:

- Invite the CPS supervisor to the staffing; and
- Be prepared to discuss:
  1. Reasons for the CPS referral;
  2. Information indicating that family members are refugees; and
  3. Their country of origin.

Tip: The RCWAC will provide information about the culture of the family and how that may affect the parent’s understanding of child welfare issues. They may have recommendations about culturally appropriate placement or service resources. Informed by the committee, you will find, seek out and use culturally appropriate placements and services for the children and parents.

E. Obtain interpreters and translation

You must obtain the services of a competent interpreter and document translation service for families that have limited or no means of communicating in or reading English. This includes hearing impaired families. Do not use children and other relatives for this purpose. Refer to the Language Services page of the Office of Equity and Multicultural Services.

F. Cultural considerations during the CPS assessment

With every family assessment, a person’s history and culture will affect certain areas. Effective engagement with the family is critical to understanding family functioning and cultural considerations.

Use the following questions as a guide to understand cultural difference as part of the assessment.

I. What is the purpose and function of the nuclear family?

II. What roles do males and females play in the family?

III. Does religion play a role in this family? If so:

   A. What role does religion play?
B. How do these beliefs influence child-rearing practices?

IV. What is the meaning, identity, and involvement of the larger homogeneous group (e.g., tribe, race, nationality)?

V. What family rituals, traditions, or behaviors exist?

VI. What is the usual role of children in the family?

VII. What is the perception of the role of children in society?

VIII. What types of discipline does the family consider to be appropriate?

IX. Who is usually responsible for child care?

X. What are the family’s attitudes or beliefs regarding health care?

XI. What are the family’s sexual attitudes and values?

XII. How are cultural beliefs incorporated into family functioning?

XIII. How does the family maintain its cultural beliefs?

XIV. Who is assigned authority and power for decision-making?

XV. What tasks are assigned based on traditional roles in the family?

XVI. How do family members express and receive affection?

XVII. How do they relate to closeness and distance?

XVIII. What are the communication styles of the family?

XIX. How does the family solve problems?

XX. How do family members usually deal with conflict?
   A. Is anger an acceptable emotion?
   B. Do members yell and scream or withdraw from conflict situations?

A culturally sensitive CPS assessment recognizes parenting practices and family structures vary as a result of ethnic, community, and familial differences. This diversity can result in different but safe and adequate care for children within the parameters of the law. The CPS assessment process must:

I. Acknowledge, respect, and honor the diversity of families; and

II. Build upon the strengths and reinforce the family unit whenever possible.

G. Taking photographs during the CPS assessment

Procedure

I. During the CPS assessment, you must take photographs and document, as necessary:
   A. Child abuse (for example injuries, harm, condition of the environment or dangerous objects within reach);
B. The observable nature of any present danger safety threat; and
C. Any impending danger safety threat.

This should always be done in the most respectful manner possible. Families may feel defensive when there is a need to take photographs. Effective engagement is key to easing the family’s concerns.

II. In the event you observe a suspicious physical injury on a child and you are certain or reasonably suspect the injury is or may be the result of abuse, you must immediately photograph or cause the photographs to be taken. If after attempts to engage the family have been exhausted and the family will not consent to the photographs being taken, immediately consult with a CPS supervisor to determine whether it is necessary to take protective custody of the child. If necessary, to comply with the requirement, the child may be taken into protective custody for the time required to ensure the photographs are taken.

III. Regardless of whether the child has previously been photographed or assessed during the current or a past CPS assessment, new photographs must be taken:
   A. During the assessment of a new allegation of abuse; and
   B. Each time, during an assessment, an injury is observed that was not previously observed by you.

IV. Photographs of the anal or genital region may be taken only by medical personnel. You must facilitate an examination by a medical professional if the alleged abuse involves:
   A. Injury to the genitalia of any age child; or
   B. Reported or disclosed injury to the genitalia of a school-aged child

V. Ensure the photographs taken during the course of the CPS assessment are:
   A. Processed in a timely manner; and
   B. Stored in the client record in an envelope that is labeled and dated. In addition, stored electronically in OR-Kids.
   C. Labeled with the:
      1. Case name;
      2. Child’s name;
      3. Date taken;
      4. Date filed in the ODHS record.
   D. Provided to the designated medical professional within 48 hours, or by the end of the next business day (whichever comes later) if the injuries are suspicious and you know or reasonably believe they are or may be the result of abuse, and made available to each member of the county’s multidisciplinary team at the first meeting when the child’s case is staffed.

H. Obtaining medical examinations during the CPS assessment

You should secure a medical examination of the child and obtain the child’s medical history when necessary during the CPS assessment to:
I. Ensure child safety;
II. Determine treatment needs;
III. Reassure the child and family; or
IV. Assist in analyzing safety related information.

Procedure

You must proceed in the following situations as described below. You must consult with a CPS supervisor as soon as possible, but not at the expense of delaying medical treatment.

I. When you observe a child who has suffered suspicious physical injury as defined in ORS 419B.023 and the person is certain or has a reasonable suspicion that the injury is or may be the result of abuse, the person must, in accordance with the protocols and procedures of the county multi-disciplinary team, ensure that:

A. A designated medical professional (DMP) conducts a medical assessment:
   1. Within 48 hours of the observation of the suspicious physical injury; or
   2. Sooner if dictated by the child’s medical needs; or:
      ■ If, after reasonable efforts to locate a DMP, and one is not available to conduct a medical assessment within 48 hours, then, an available:
         (1) Physician;
         (2) Physician assistant; or
         (3) Nurse practitioner conducts a medical assessment.

   Note: You are required to document in OR-Kids the efforts to locate the DMP when an available physician, physician assistant, or nurse practitioner is used.

   3. If a timely medical assessment cannot be assured, immediately consult with a CPS supervisor to determine whether it is necessary to take protective custody of the child. If necessary, to comply with the requirement, the child may be taken into protective custody for the time required to ensure the medical assessment is conducted.

II. When there are indications of severe physical trauma to the child, you must arrange to transport the child to a medical facility. This includes calling 911 when the trauma is acute. You also must arrange for medical examination of a child for mild or moderate physical trauma.

III. To arrange for the medical examination of a child, you must do the following, unless completing the action would delay medical treatment for the child:

A. Discuss with the parent or caregiver the need for medical evaluation or treatment.
B. Ask the parent or caregiver to take the child to a medical facility for medical evaluation or treatment. This should always be the first option to seek treatment for a child. Medical care can be a traumatic event for children, so parental presence is encouraged whenever it does not pose a threat to the child’s safety.
C. Request that the parent sign a form MSC 3010, Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Health Information.
D. Contact an LEA immediately and seek a juvenile court order to obtain protective custody of the child to obtain a medical evaluation or treatment when:
   1. The parent or caregiver refuses to obtain needed medical examination or treatment;
   2. The parent or caregiver may flee with the child or young adult; or
   3. Delaying medical evaluation or treatment could result in severe harm to the child.

E. When there is an indication of a life-threatening condition, or of a deteriorating condition that may become life threatening, you must seek medical care and consultation immediately.

F. When there is reason to believe a child has been exposed to dangerous chemicals such as those found in a chemical drug lab, you must arrange to have the child tested for chemical exposure as soon as possible. It cannot be later than 24 hours of learning of the exposure.

G. When a report of suspected medical neglect of an infant with a disability and with life-threatening conditions is referred for CPS assessment, you must comply with OAR 413-030-0600 through 0650.

H. When it is medically indicated to subject a child in the custody of ODHS to HIV testing, you must comply with OAR 413-040-0400 through 0450.

I. A child may have a personal representative present during a medical examination who is:
   1. The victim of a person crime as defined in ORS 147.425; and
   2. At least 15 years of age at the time of the abuse.

   If you believe that a personal representative would compromise the CPS assessment, you may prohibit a personal representative from being present during the medical examination.

J. When you are making a determination of medical neglect, you must consult with a health care professional.

Trauma informed engagement is essential when working with families, especially when children have injuries. Consider ways in which to help the child feel more comfortable that will not compromise the CPS assessment. Whenever safety allows, engage the parents or caregivers in the process. If a parent or caregiver is not an option, consider who else may be appropriate to accompany the child during the medical evaluation. Find out what comforts the child and consider what could be taken with child to help the child feel safe. Be creative in finding ways to meet the trauma needs of the child and family.

I. Obtaining psychological and psychiatric evaluations during the CPS assessment

Procedure

   I. When during the CPS assessment, you must make a referral for a psychological or psychiatric evaluation by a mental health professional when you identify a specific condition or behavior that requires additional professional evaluation of a parent; caregiver, child or young adult, to:
      1. Assure safety;
      2. Determine treatment needs; or
3. Assist in analyzing safety-related information.

Examples include:

A. Unusual or bizarre forms of punishment;
B. Mental illness;
C. Suicidal ideation;
D. Homicidal ideation; or
E. Unusual or bizarre child or parental behavior indicative of emotional problems.

II. You must obtain consent of the parent or caregiver prior to making a referral for a psychological or psychiatric evaluation of the parent, caregiver or child, unless the evaluation is court ordered.

J. When medical assessments, dental assessments and mental health assessments need to be completed for children in substitute care

Procedure

I. Each child placed in substitute care must receive the following:

A. An intake nursing assessment by a ODHS contracted nurse, shortly after entering care;
B. A comprehensive health assessment by the child’s primary healthcare provider, within 30 calendar days of entering care;
C. A dental assessment for children age 1 and older, within 30 calendar days of entering care;
D. A Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths (CANS) screening, within 60 calendar days of entering care;
E. A mental health assessment for children age 3 and older, within 60 calendar days of entering care; and
F. An early intervention screening for children ages 0-2, within 60 calendar days of entering care.

II. You must ensure that the child receives all:

A. Assessments and screenings described above;
B. Treatment and services recommended in the required assessments and screenings that are covered by either:
   1. The Oregon Health Plan; or
   2. The child’s private insurance.

K. Children with special needs and the CPS assessment

Children with special needs include those with:
I. Physical;
II. Intellectual;
III. Developmental;
IV. Emotional; or
V. Mental disabilities.

Procedure

I. When a child has special needs, you should determine if the child has a Developmental Disability (DD) worker. If not, consider making a referral or referring the family to other community services relevant to the child’s needs. These referrals can be made regardless of the decision to open a case for Child Welfare services. If the child has a DD worker, coordinate with that person on the interview and assessment of child abuse or neglect.

II. When working with a child with specialized needs, view the child as an individual. A child with a disability has a condition(s) that impacts them in some way daily. Consider the following issues when working with the family to plan useful interventions:

A. Does the child have a diagnosis or conditions? If so, describe them.

B. How are the following areas impacted?

1. Communication – How does this child best communicate: Verbally, visually, through a communication board, drawing, or are photos useful? Frequently, receptive (receiving) skills are higher than expressive skills. Therefore, it is important to consult with someone who knows the child’s skill levels.

2. Mobility – What are the child’s mobility capabilities? What is the level of freedom of movement? Is the child able to fight back physically, run away, or escape?

3. Dependency – Lifelong dependency may cause a child to be trusting and less likely to question care or requests. The child may have become accustomed to others providing personal care, therapies, or some type of assistance. Also, those people being in a position of authority. The child may confuse exploitation with appropriate care.

4. Compliance – Children who require specialized care or supervision often are rewarded for being compliant. Assertiveness or self-advocacy may not be encouraged. Be aware that sexual interest and development for children in the mild and moderate ranges of developmental disabilities occurs at about the same time as typical peers. Lack of skills in protecting oneself from sexual abuse may place the child at risk.

5. Cognition – It may be difficult for a child to identify or understand a situation in a way that represents what has happened. The challenge may involve processing or language, or the child may not understand the nature of the situation. For example, a child requiring personal care may have difficulty identifying exploitive touch.

6. Isolation – The circle of friends and acquaintances may be limited and activity driven. Thus, it may limit the opportunity for the child to have people in whom to confide. If a child has been victimized by someone familiar, there may be fear of retaliation. If the child has few contacts, even the loss of someone who may have harmed them can be frightening.
7. Behavior control – Behavior is a means of communication. Some behavior controls are psychotropic medication, isolation from others, or the use of other types of restraints. If there are concerns or doubts about behavioral controls, gather more information about the intent or purpose of the used procedure from the psychiatrist, family, others who know the child, and a Child Welfare supervisor.

8. Credibility – Sometimes symptoms of abuse and the disability overlap and may be overlooked. For instance, a child may be on medications that impact the child’s affect. As a result, when the child is communicating, their behavior and the way they are relating the incident may seem incongruent. Consequently, it can lead the interviewer to doubt the child’s credibility. Sometimes the child may have some self-injurious behaviors that cause abrasions, so signs of abuse may not be evaluated as non-accidental trauma.

L. Substance use

Substance use and misuse are often significant issues for most family members involved in Child Welfare services. Parents who misuse substances are less likely to be able to function effectively in a parental role.

Procedure

I. In every response, you must consider alcohol or drug involvement as part of the CPS assessment. By observing the environment and people in the home, important indicators of alcohol or drug use may become apparent.

II. In addition, when the use of substances is known and established, it is common and expected that any person will deny the excess use of alcohol, and any use of illegal drugs, on a routine basis and minimize:
   A. The amount of their use; and
   B. The negative effect of their use.

III. People who misuse substances are generally poor reporters of their use history. Also, they are generally inaccurate about the effect of that use on others.

IV. Workers who display annoyance or frustration upon hearing inaccurate or incomplete answers about substance use only increase the likelihood of more denial. Staying neutral and using engagement skills will increase the amount and accuracy of alcohol and drug information.

You should check for the following indicators of alcohol and drug involvement:

A. A report of substance use is included in the referral.
B. Paraphernalia is found in the home.
C. The home or parent or caregiver may smell of alcohol, marijuana, or other drugs.
D. A child reports alcohol or other drug use by a parent, caregiver, or other adults in the home.
E. A parent or caregiver appears to be actively under the influence of alcohol or drugs.
F. A parent shows signs of addiction.
G. A parent admits to substance misuse.
H. A parent shows or reports experiencing physical effects of addiction or being under the influence, including withdrawal.

I. Observe people who frequent the home. Actions of the parent’s friends or associates can indicate their behaviors and practices.

J. Ask about their substance use to screen for alcohol or drug abuse.

V. When you suspect or have clear evidence of drug use by parents, assess how alcohol or drug use affects the parent or caregiver’s:

   A. Ability to make sound judgments about the safety of the child; and

   B. Behaviors that may present a threat to child safety and impact the ability to provide protection.

      1. Document this information in the assessment narrative.
      2. Refer clients to an appropriate alcohol and drug (A&D) treatment program for a formal evaluation of their alcohol and drug use and a recommended course of action.

VI. Offer a urinalysis (UA) test to the client as an option to verify their claim of no drug involvement. The following is the drug testing protocol for Child Welfare staff:

   A. If a client volunteers or is court ordered to participate in drug testing, you or the addiction recovery team in the individual local child welfare offices will assist the client in locating a professional drug testing process (e.g., contracted alcohol and drug treatment providers, hospitals, community programs).

   B. You may not be involved in the collection, observation or transportation of a client’s drug test for laboratory testing. Results of drug tests can impact critical child welfare and court decisions. Participating in the processing of drug testing creates a conflict of interest.

   C. You cannot deny a client services because the client declines voluntary drug testing. This includes frequency or length of child visits. If the client demonstrates behavior that is immediately dangerous to the child, visitation can be interrupted.

   D. In consultation with your supervisor, you will determine and inform the client of potential outcomes:

      1. The effect of participating or refusing to participate in drug testing; and
      2. The effect of drug use on case decisions.

   E. The use of drug testing should be limited to those cases in which substance misuse issues appear evident, but not as routine screening for all clients.

   F. Limitations in drug testing:

      1. Drug tests are either voluntary or court ordered. You have no authority to require or coerce the client to participate in drug testing.
      2. Drug test results are a snapshot in time of a client’s use. They should not be used as the sole indicator of progress, relapse, or protective capacity.

   VII. Always consult with the trained A&D staff within your local office when working with clients who have issues of substance misuse. Different drugs have different effects. Consulting with A&D staff will allow you to make informed decisions about issues from placement to removal. It will also help you develop strategies to assist clients in being successful.

VIII. Once clients enter A&D treatment, it is essential to partner with treatment staff to:

A. Obtain the most current information about the client’s progress; and

B. Offer information that may increase the client’s ability to succeed in treatment.

You need to ensure clients sign the necessary authorizations to allow for an exchange of information. Collaboration between A&D treatment and Child Welfare is important to both client success and child safety. Federal law (42 CFR Part II) requires very specific and restrictive procedures about the information in alcohol and drug treatment records.

M. Domestic violence

Procedures

Domestic violence perpetrators can create situations that result in child abuse. Responding to domestic violence requires a specialized approach. This is because our intervention can increase danger to the family.

Critical note:
The dynamics of domestic violence are based on the batterer’s maintaining power and control over their partner. Challenges to that power and control, including a CPS assessment, may increase the likelihood of escalating violence. The risk of being seriously harmed or killed may increase when an adult victim stands up to or leaves the batterer. Given this dynamic, plan your assessment carefully when domestic violence is known to be an issue. Always consider that the assessment may increase the risk to the child and the adult victim.

For an excerpt of the guidelines focused on interviewing, see the manual, Quick Reference Guide: Working with Domestic Violence, http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/policy/childwelfare/manual_1/i-ab4att6.pdf

I. In conducting a comprehensive CPS assessment, always assess for domestic violence, whether or not it is part of the initial report. Further identify other family issues and their interplay with domestic violence (e.g., substance abuse and domestic violence, which are often both present in the families assessed by Child Welfare).

Some indicators might be:

A. A report of domestic violence is included in the referral.

B. There is a history of domestic violence related crimes or restraining orders against either parent by any party.

C. Either parent uses controlling or blaming language.

D. Either parent exhibits controlling or coercive behavior.

E. Home shows signs of damage or unusual efforts at restraint or isolation.

F. Physical injuries to a parent.
G. A child reports that a parent, caregiver, or other adult in the home uses assaultive and/or coercive tactics.
H. A parent admits to using a pattern of assaultive or coercive tactics.
I. A parent discloses that their partner uses a pattern of assaultive or coercive tactics against them.
J. Indications that a parent has experienced a traumatic incident or incidents.

II. There are situations in which there are allegations of domestic violence against both parents. Domestic violence victims may fight back and be charged with assault. Look beyond the initial incident to assess the dynamics in the family and to determine which party is the predominant aggressor. Assess for patterns of power and control in allegations of domestic violence that appear to be mutual violence or where the adult victim has been arrested. Specifically look for the following:

III. Are injuries defensive wounds (bite marks, scratches etc.)?
   A. Who is afraid of the other?
   B. What was the intent and level of the violence (was it self-defense or to punish or retaliate)?
   C. Who is effectively exerting control over the other?
   D. What is the impact of the violence?
   E. Who has historically been the dominant aggressor regardless of who the first aggressor was in the current incident?

It is important to remember that it is common for the adult victim to claim responsibility for the violence.

IV. When you suspect domestic violence:
   A. Interview the adult victim first, and alone, if possible.
   B. Ask questions about domestic violence in separate interviews only.
   C. Always inform the victim of CW actions so that safety plans can be made accordingly.
   D. Consult with the victim whenever possible on CW actions to ascertain their assessment of the safety risk CW actions might pose and to empower the victim.
   E. Assess patterns of assaultive or coercive tactics by the dominant aggressor.
   F. Identify actions taken by the dominant aggressor to harm the child.
   G. Identify the adverse impact of the perpetrator’s behavior on the child.
   H. Partner with the non-offending parent. Identify the full spectrum of their efforts to promote the safety and well-being of the child.

V. Document assessment information using clear language. Do not lump batterer and victim together.
   A. Avoid phrases like: “Couple engages in violence,” “Parents have a history of domestic violence,” or “Parents both deny the violence.”
   B. Be precise and descriptive: Avoid euphemisms or vague terms like “argued” if what you mean is “hit.”
   C. Describe the pattern; e.g., “Father has engaged in an escalating pattern of physical violence and intimidation that involved multiple incidents of physical assault, threats to kill the mother and her... children.”

D. Affirm the batterer’s role in harming the children through his actions; e.g., “These behaviors have isolated the mother from her support system, the children from relatives, and led to them moving school systems and residences twice in the past year (as a result of evictions.)”

E. Avoid blaming the victim for the batterer’s violence and abusive behavior. Do not use phrases like: “Dysfunctional” family; mother “allows” or “enables” the violence; mother “failed to protect” the children.

F. Use language that focuses on the batterer’s role in creating harm or risk to the children; e.g., “Despite the mother’s efforts to protect the children, the batterer is creating conditions injurious and harmful to the children.”

VI. Refer people determined to be domestic violence offenders to a batterer intervention program that meets the state standards (see OAR chapter 137).

VII. Do not refer them to anger management.

VIII. Never refer families to joint services like couples counseling.

IX. You can consult with the trained domestic violence advocates within your local office when working with domestic violence cases. Any services these advocates provide for victims are voluntary.

X. Services for victims should be voluntary whenever they are related to the domestic violence.

XI. Once a parent enters batterer intervention, it is essential that you continue to partner with the intervention program and any other community partners holding the domestic violence offender accountable. Follow-up routinely with the domestic violence offender to make sure that they understand and are complying with all restrictions or commitments. At these contacts, reinforce appropriate messages and make it clear that all partners are working together.

For example, explain or reinforce any protective order provisions in place or echo information covered in the batterer intervention group. Ensure that domestic violence offenders have signed the necessary authorizations to allow for information exchange. Collaboration between community partners and Child Welfare is important to both parent success and child safety.

Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 23: Family engagement
Family engagement

Child safety is what we do; family engagement is how we do it. Oregon recognizes that families are experts on their own families. Therefore, they need to be included in all aspects of decision making. Families are treated with respect and genuineness through the collaborative and partnering process of engagement. The intent of family engagement is to assist families in keeping their children safe and thriving in their communities.

Family engagement depends on a clear understanding and application of these core principles:

I. Everyone desires respect.

II. Everyone needs to be heard and understood.

III. Everyone has strengths.

IV. Judgments can wait.

V. Partners share power.

VI. Partnership is a process.

Engagement is a professional helping process. It occurs over time and proceeds developmentally. The phases can be defined as follows:

I. Pre-engagement involves knowing your own strengths, challenges, and biases.

II. Active engagement is the steps we take to empower families.

III. Reaching mutual understanding is how we exchange information to decide how we can partner together.

IV. Acting is partnering with the family when child safety would not be jeopardized.

V. The decision to continue to engage is that of the family. It is often affected by the relationship built with the worker.

Family engagement can be enhanced and demonstrated through key practice skill sets. These skill sets offer an opportunity to:

I. Allow dialogue for clinical supervision;

II. Practice and refine these skills daily with families; and

III. Create an avenue for dialogue and continuous improvement among and between community partners.
Practice skill sets

Ten practices have been defined. All are equally important to successful family engagement.

Engaging

I. Engaging is the ongoing ability to establish and sustain a genuinely supportive relationship with the family while:
   A. Developing a partnership;
   B. Establishing healthy boundaries; and
   C. Maintaining contact as mutually negotiated.

Assessing

I. Gathering information about reported concerns and the needs of the family;
II. Evaluating the relevance of that information;
III. Identifying family strengths; and
IV. Community resources that may be applied to address any safety concerns and needs.

Partnering

I. Respectful and meaningful collaboration with families to achieve shared goals.

Planning

I. Setting goals;
II. Developing strategies;
III. Outlining tasks and schedules to accomplish the goals derived from the:
   A. Engaging,
   B. Assessing, and
   C. Partnering process.

Evaluating

I. Monitoring outcomes of plans and services to determine if the desired goals are being achieved. In addition, if it is not, using the information to reconsider:
   A. Goals and strategies developed in the planning phase; or
   B. Services and resources identified in the implementation stage.

Implementing
I. Identifying and applying the most effective and culturally appropriate plans, services, resources, and processes to meet the goals established in the planning stage.

Advocating

I. Recognizing individual or group needs;

II. Providing intervention on behalf of a client or client group;

III. Communicating with decision-makers; and

IV. Initiating actions to secure or enhance a needed service, resource, or entitlement.

Communicating

I. Effectively sending and receiving information within the appropriate cultural context. Methods include:
   A. Verbal;
   B. Nonverbal;
   C. Electronic; and
   D. Written communication.

Demonstrating cultural diversity and competence

I. Interacting with families without making assumptions;

II. Respecting and learning from the unique characteristics and strengths of the family while acknowledging and honoring the diversity within and across cultures; and

III. Applying these skills to the partnership with the family and the options made available to them.

Collaborating

I. Establishing and maintaining mutually beneficial and well-defined relationships with community partners to achieve the goals of safety, permanence, and well-being for children and families.
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 24: Report of Abuse In a Home Certified by Child Welfare
Chapter 3 • Section 24: Report of Abuse In a Home Certified by Child Welfare

Report of Abuse In a Home Certified by Child Welfare

When information is received involving a home certified by Child Welfare, this section describes the additional procedures required for:

I. Screeners,

II. CPS workers,

III. Permanency workers,

IV. Child Welfare (CW) certifiers, and

V. Supervisors.

There are times when Child Welfare will receive information alleging abuse occurred or is occurring in a home certified by Child Welfare. When this happens, there are specific activities that are required for screeners, CPS caseworkers, permanency case workers, Child Welfare certifiers, and supervisors in addition to following Child Welfare administrative rules related to screening, CPS assessment, certification, and case management. The additional requirements are outlined in Child Welfare OAR 413-015-0601 through 0608, Child Welfare Responsibilities When a Report Involves a Home Certified by Child Welfare, and further described in this procedure.

These extra responsibilities apply when:

I. The current or past abuse is alleged to have occurred in a home certified by Child Welfare (even if the alleged victim no longer lives in that home).

II. The alleged perpetrator resides in or frequents the certified home (even if the alleged perpetrator is not a caregiver).

III. The alleged abuse occurred while the child or young adult was under the care and supervision of a certified foster or relative caregiver (even if the reported incident occurred outside the actual house).

These extra responsibilities do not apply when a child or young adult discloses historical familial abuse while residing in a certified home.
A. Screening Procedures

I. The screener must:

A. Follow screening administrative rules and procedure (see OAR 413-015-0200 through 0225) and Chapter 3. When there is an allegation of abuse in a home certified by Child Welfare, the screener is responsible for all the requirements in the screening rule in addition to completing the requirements outlined in this section, which reflect OAR 413-015-0604.

B. Determine Child Welfare’s response. To decide if the report will be closed at screening or assigned, the screener needs to decide if the information reported meets the definition of abuse. There are two definitions of abuse. Therefore, the screener needs to know which definition or definitions to apply.

1. The definition of abuse in OAR 413-015-0115(1)(a) applies to children. This includes all children in foster care and the provider’s own children.

2. The definition of abuse in OAR 413-015-0115(1)(b) applies to children and young adults placed in homes certified by Child Welfare, not to the provider’s own children or young adults.

C. Notify the following staff of all information received and Child Welfare’s response to the information:

1. The assigned caseworker for each child or young adult placed in the home;
2. Each assigned caseworker’s supervisor; and
3. The assigned certifier and the certifier’s supervisor.

II. If it is determined that the information received will be closed at screening, the screener must:

A. Document the information in OR-Kids provider case notes.

B. Notify the below that the information was closed at screening:

1. Caseworkers for each child or young adult placed in the home and those caseworker’s supervisors; and

B. Information That Does Not Require a CPS Assessment

Once a screening decision has been made that the information will not be assigned for CPS assessment, the following additional procedures apply:

Assigned Worker

The responsibilities of the assigned worker, which include required notifications, are outlined in OAR 413-080-0051 Monthly Contact and Monitoring Child Safety Rules and described below. If a permanency worker has not yet been assigned, the CPS worker is responsible for completing these requirements.

Procedure

I. Review information received from the screener with a supervisor on the same notification is received.
II. Determine what steps must be made to address the information in the closed at screening.

   A. If the information is about a child or young adult on your caseload, consider:
      1. The child’s or young adult’s vulnerabilities; and
      2. Their individual needs to assess how the information affects the child or young adult.

   B. If the information is about another child or young adult in the home, Assess if the information poses any concerns, both safety and well-being, for the child or young adult on your caseload, given their vulnerabilities and individual needs.

CW Certifier

Procedure

I. When a certifier receives information, which is information only (does not require a CPS assessment, and is not a closed at screening), the certifier must:

   A. Look at the information; and

   B. Identify any potential certification issues, training, or support needed.

   C. Follow up as appropriate to ensure the safety of the certified family’s home environment.

   This is critical communication because certifiers make decisions about the adequacy of homes certified by CW.

II. When the certifier is notified by a screener that information regarding one of the certifier’s homes was closed at screening, the certifier must:

   A. Assess the information and determine whether the information may be:
      1. A certification concern;
      2. A violation of certification standards; or
      3. An indication that the certified family may need additional support.

   B. Assess whether to consider any certification action should be, such as:
      1. Initiating a placement support plan;
      2. Invoking inactive referral status; or
      3. Making the decision to send a notice of intent to revoke the certificate of approval.

   Ways of doing this can include:
      1. Talking to caseworkers;
      2. Discussing with the foster parent;
      3. Reading the screener’s notes; and
      4. Discussing with the screener.

III. Staff the case with certification supervisor.

IV. Determine if additional actions are necessary to ensure the safety of the environment in the certified home.
V. Arrange a home visit if a certification action will support the family toward mitigating concerns.

A. If additional supports would ensure the safety of the environment, implement a placement support plan. Remember that a placement support plan should:
   1. Be time limited;
   2. Contain specific actions or services in which the certified family will participate; and
   3. Contain any actions Child Welfare will take or services it will provide to support the family in ensuring child and young adult safety. (See section 5, D of this chapter.)

B. Consider placing the certified family on inactive referral status, if it is important to maintain the stability of the home with the children and young adults currently placed in the home. In determining if inactive referral status is appropriate, assess whether doing so:
   1. Will stabilize the family, and
   2. Will strengthen the family’s ability to provide for the safety, health, and well-being of children and young adults placed in the home.

Be honest and forthright in your discussions with the family.

C. Determine if a placement support plan or inactive referral status will provide enough support for the family to maintain certification standards. If not, initiate the revocation process. You will determine this from:
   1. The information received by the screener, and
   2. Your ongoing assessment of the certified family’s ability to maintain safety and well-being of the children and young adults placed in the home. (See section 10 of chapter 8.)

D. To place a family on inactive referral status in Child Welfare’s information system, the certificate of approval must be placed “on hold.” To access the on hold function:
   1. Go to the certification window,
   2. Go to the options drop down menu, and
   3. Select the additional certification actions.
      ■ At the additional certification actions window:
         (1) Choose place on hold as the action.
         (2) Complete the other fields as appropriate.
   4. Once all fields are completed:
      ■ Go to the options drop down menu,
      ■ Select approval, and
      ■ Send for approval.

The Supervisor’s Role

Certification Supervisor

I. Consult with the certifier regarding any necessary certification actions.
Permanency Supervisor

I. Ensure information reported regarding a young adult (anyone over 18 years old) is shared with APD or law enforcement as appropriate.

II. Ensure notification of a report of abuse to appropriate individuals.

C. Information That Requires a CPS Assessment

Once there is a screening decision that there will be an assigned CPS assessment, the following additional procedures apply:

One of the most important factors in completing an assessment in a home certified by Child Welfare is clear communication among staff. Responsibility for ensuring a safe environment for a child or young adult in the home and contacting the certified family is shared by the:

I. CPS caseworker,

II. Permanency caseworker, and

III. Child Welfare certifier.

Because all these staff play a role, it is essential that cross communication and collaboration occur.

CPS worker

Procedure

1. Initial Staffing

The CPS worker must convene a staffing before making initial contact. The exception is if timing of the staffing will compromise child safety. Consult with your supervisor to determine if this is the case.

I. For each child in the home, invite the:
   A. Assigned Child Welfare certifier, or certification supervisor, and
   B. Caseworker (or their supervisor).

II. Consider inviting the:
   A. Child Welfare Program Manager,
   B. CPS consultant, and
   C. Foster care coordinator.

Considerations for inviting the above individuals include:
   A. The nature of the referral,
   B. Whether the case will likely be high profile or receive media attention, or
   C. If a serious injury to a child has occurred.

III. At the staffing, discuss:
A. The nature of the referral.
B. Coordination of the response to the referral. For example, the presence of a permanency caseworker who has an established relationship with a child or young adult may be helpful in making them more comfortable during the CPS worker’s interview. Therefore, the two caseworkers could arrange an interview where they are both present.
C. Any previous CPS assessments that involve the home or individuals who live in the home.
D. Information known by staff who have worked with the family and any other information known by Child Welfare. For example, special needs of any children placed in the home or previous certification concerns.

2. Notifications

Note: These requirements may need to be completed by the CPS worker if the case has not yet transferred to a permanency worker.

I. When a report is received on an open case alleging abuse (including third-party abuse) in a home certified by CW, the assigned caseworker for the child or young adult must make notifications within three business days.

The responsibilities of the assigned worker, including required notifications, are outlined in Monthly Contact and Monitoring Child Safety, OAR 413-080-0051.

It may be necessary to make other notifications to those involved in the case plan. Examples of others may include the child’s therapist or sibling. If the child is in therapy, it would be appropriate for the therapist to have information about any new events that surround the child. Also, if a child is having regular visitation with a verbal sibling, it is likely that the allegation will be discussed. Providing the information in a manner that reduces fear and answers questions may be helpful.

II. Use the CF 988 Notification of Child Abuse form as the template to provide written notice. This is to be used both when information is:

   A. Closed at screening, and
   B. Referred for a CPS assessment.

III. When an allegation involves the provider’s child, still complete the notifications to Child Welfare staff and hold meetings as required. Notification to legal parties is not necessary (unless there is a threat of harm allegation against a foster child), as the provider’s child is not part of an open case.

I.

3. During the CPS assessment the CPS worker must:

I. Follow Child Welfare administrative rule regarding completion of a CPS assessment. This includes the CPS Assessment Dispositions, OAR 413-015-1005 through 1015. When there is an allegation of abuse in a home certified by Child Welfare the CPS worker is responsible for:

   A. All requirements in the CPS assessment rule;
   B. CPS Assessment Disposition rule; and
II. If a child or young adult placed in the home is an alleged victim, give the certified family II. Pamphlet 1537, What You Need to Know about a Child Protective Service Assessment, Foster Care.

III. If a child of the certified family is an alleged victim, give the family Pamphlet 1536, What You Need to Know about a Child Protective Service Assessment. The child may be:
   A. A biological child,
   B. An adopted child, or
   C. Other child living in the home, not placed by Child Welfare.

IV. If both a child or young adult placed in the home and another child in the home are alleged victims, give the family both pamphlets. A child may be:
   A. A biological child,
   B. An adopted child, or
   C. Other child living in the home not placed by Child Welfare.

V. Before conducting an interview with a child or young adult, the CPS worker must inform a child or young adult not in the custody of ODHS or OYA that they may have any of these people present:
   1. Parent,
   2. Caregiver, or
   3. Attorney.

VI. Notify and interview the parent or caregiver of any child or young adult residing in a home certified by Child Welfare but not in the legal custody of Child Welfare or OYA. Also, gain permission to interview the child or young adult. If there is a denial of permission to interview, but interviews are needed to complete the assessment:
   A. Consult with a supervisor, and
   B. Seek the assistance of a district attorney or assistant attorney general.

VII. Ensure additional screening forms are generated as appropriate, if during the course of the CPS assessment it is determined that additional children or young adults are:
   A. At a threat of harm, or
   B. Are victims of abuse.

VIII. Consult with your supervisor before making the decision to remove any child or young adult from the home.

IX. Provide ongoing information on the status of the CPS assessment to the:
   A. Assigned Child Welfare certifier, and
   B. Caseworkers of each child placed in the home.

   The status of the assessment may influence what the caseworker or certifier is required to do.

X. Document the basis for the determination. State whether there is reasonable cause to believe that abuse occurred as outlined in CPS Assessment Dispositions, OAR 413-015-1005 through 1015.
XI. Complete the CPS Assessment in OR-Kids, including the selection of a safety threat when appropriate. Even if children or young adults were removed from the home, select the appropriate safety threats to document the existence of those threats in the foster home. The safety decision will conclude that children are safe, and a parent or caregiver can and will protect the child from the safety threat. The parent or caregiver in this situation may be Child Welfare.

CW Certifier

Procedure

I. A certifier must act if they are notified that a report of abuse involves a certified family and has been referred for a CPS assessment. Within one business day after the CPS worker has made initial contact, the certifier must give the family the following information:

   A. That the certifier is available to answer questions related to certification. However, that they are not able to discuss the specifics of the CPS assessment. For instance, the certified family may want clarification on what the assessment means to their certification or whether children will be removed from their home.

   B. That the certified family is immediately placed on inactive referral status.

   C. That the certified family has the option of having a consulting foster parent or relative caregiver available for support during the assessment. They must provide:

      1. The names of foster parents and relative caregivers who have agreed to be consulting foster parents.

II. Also, within one business day, the certifier must:

   A. Document in the OR-Kids provider notes that:

      1. A CPS assessment has been initiated, and

      2. The family is on inactive referral status.

   B. Notify all staff responsible for placing children or young adults in homes certified by CW that no additional children or young adults may be placed in the home.

III. The certifier must provide the family written notification to the certified family within 14 days that their home has been placed on inactive referral status. (This is true any time Child Welfare initiates inactive referral status.)

   A. Explain in the letter what inactive referral status means. Also, explain that anytime there is a CPS assessment, a family is placed on inactive referral status.

   B. File the letter in the certification file, section 1, under certification actions.

IV. The certifier must provide information regarding the family to:

   A. The CPS worker, and

   B. Caseworkers of children or young adults in the home.

The Supervisor’s Role
CPS supervisor

I. Ensure that staffing occurs in a timely manner.

II. Attend the staffing (or assign a designee) or ensure the CPS worker is in attendance.

III. Determine whether the below should be invited to the staffing:
   A. Child Welfare program manager,
   B. CPS Consultant, and
   C. Foster Care Coordinator.

IV. Ensure that all required notifications to the certified family have occurred in a timely manner.

Permanency Supervisor

I. Attend the staffing (or assign a designee) or ensure the permanency worker is in attendance.

II. Staff the case with the permanency worker as appropriate.

Certification Supervisor

I. Attend the staffing (or assign a designee) or ensure the certifier is in attendance.

II. Staff the case with the certifier as appropriate.

D. Conclusion of the CPS Assessment

CPS Worker

Procedure

The CPS worker must convene a staffing within five business days of completing the CPS assessment. They must invite the:

I. CPS supervisor;

II. Child Welfare certifier or certification supervisor; and

III. Caseworker for each child or young adult placed in the home; or

IV. Supervisor for each caseworker.

Even if they are not invited, it is good practice to notify the:

I. Supervisor for the certifier, and

II. Supervisor for each child or young adult’s caseworker.

III. During the staffing:
A. Share information gathered during the CPS assessment process, including the disposition.

B. Determine who needs to be notified of the disposition of the CPS assessment. Also, determine which staff will provide notification.

C. Discuss certification actions that have been taken, will be taken, and whether any additional actions are appropriate.

   1. This is a general discussion of possible certification actions that may need to occur.

Permanency Worker

Note: These requirements may need to be completed by the CPS worker if the case has not yet transferred to a permanency worker.

Procedure

I. When the disposition involves a child or young adult in the care and custody of Child Welfare, the assigned caseworker must, within 10 days of the determination of the disposition, make required notifications. The responsibilities of the assigned permanency worker, including required notifications, are outlined in Monthly Contact and Monitoring Child Safety, OAR 413-080-0051.

CW Certifier

Procedure

The certifier must do the following within five days of the staffing at the end of the CPS assessment:

I. Staff the case with the supervisor and review all information gathered during the CPS assessment.

II. Determine whether any additional contact with the certified family is appropriate. Also, whether any certification actions should be taken. This is a follow-up to the staffing that occurred with other Child Welfare staff. During this meeting, discuss the specifics of what was decided at the staffing. For example:

   A. Details of a placement support plan, or
   B. Documenting specific facts for a notice of intent to revoke a certificate of approval.

III. Discuss the need for any specific training. For example, should the certified family attend:

   A. Behavior management training, or
   B. Training on parenting a child with an attachment disorder?

Discuss the certified family’s:

   A. Willingness to attend trainings, and
   B. Ability to use the information gained at the training.

IV. Discuss the need for respite care. Does the certified family have natural supports to give them needed breaks? Is a respite resource needed?

V. Discuss the need for additional contact to provide support for the certified family and to verify safety in the
A. If the determination is made to seek revocation of the certified family’s certificate of approval, see section 10 of this chapter, Certification Actions.

B. If the determination is that inactive referral status should continue, summarize the below in a letter:
   1. Outcome of the CPS assessment, and
   2. Reasons for continuing inactive referral status.

Deliver to certified family within 10 days of receiving the completed CPS assessment. File the letter in the certification file, section 1 under certification actions.

C. Get management approval from the program manager on the CF 117 if the decision is made to continue certification and if the CPS assessment was:
   1. Founded or substantiated, or
   2. Unable to determine or inconclusive.

Be clear in the documentation how, despite the issues in the CPS assessment, the certified family:
   1. Can meet the safety and well-being needs of a child or young adult placed in the home.
   2. Maintain conditions in the home that provide safety, health, and well-being for the child or young adult.

D. If no certification actions will be taken, send written notification to the certified family that the inactive referral status is no longer in effect. File a copy of the letter in the certification file, section 1, under certification actions. Also notify the appropriate staff that the family is no longer on inactive referral status. This may be the case if the assessment disposition was unfounded or unsubstantiated and the assessment and the staffing did not reveal any certification concerns.

VI. Document the results of this staffing in OR-Kids provider notes and in the certification file.

E. Final Action

CPS Worker and The Child Welfare Certifier Must:

The final action in this process is for the CPS caseworker (or supervisor) and the CW certifier (or supervisor) to request a meeting with the certified family within 10 days of the completion of the CPS assessment. At the meeting, you will explain the disposition and any certification actions that will be taken. The intent of this meeting is to provide closure for the certified family. Be honest with the family about concerns Child Welfare has and why Child Welfare made the decisions it has.

When the decision is to continue certification, the certified family may need assistance to address concerns and feelings about the assessment process. Provide additional contact. This includes telephone contact to the family. If the family has not been working with a foster parent mentor, provide the family with information about support groups or an experienced foster parent to support the family.

The Supervisor’s Role

CPS supervisor
I. Ensure that the staffing occurs.

II. Determine whether the below should be invited to the staffing:
   A. Child Welfare program manager,
   B. CPS consultant, and
   C. Foster care coordinator

Permanency Supervisor

I. Ensure that the required legal parties receive notification of the disposition.

Certification Supervisor

I. Discuss with the certifier the appropriate certification actions that need to occur. Ensure appropriate follow-through on all actions.

F. CW Foster Home Review Committee

I. Each district is responsible for the development of a local protocol to ensure that there is a formal review structure for foster homes certified by Child Welfare when the following occurs:
   A. An issue of concern,
   B. Allegations, or
   C. Rule violations.

This review provides a foundation for an increase in communication among staff as well as the consistency of a multidisciplinary review. It is intended to assist in documentation and coordination of follow-up action by Child Welfare.

II. The local structure includes a regularly scheduled time a minimum of two times per month in which the committee meets. The purpose of having a regular scheduled time is to minimize the workload of coordinating a review committee among multiple individuals and to provide time for a more proactive review of foster homes. The structure allows for a staff person to:
   A. Request a review of a foster home,
   B. Prepare any materials that need to be presented, and
   C. Provide them to the review team prior to the committee.

This schedule is not intended to replace current administrative rule requirements and timelines pertaining to Child Protective Services.

The local structure includes:
   A. A review process that is not incident based but considers prior issues, concerns, and allegations that have been reviewed.
   B. A process to gather and provide review materials to committee members prior to the committee. Therefore, a comprehensive review may occur.
C. The standing members of the Foster Home Review Committee, the certifier for the foster home, and caseworkers who have children placed in the foster home being reviewed.

D. A person assigned to:
   1. Take notes or minutes of the review committee;
   2. To document action items and assignments from the review; and
   3. Disseminate these notes or minutes to the members of the committee.

E. Documentation of the review committee notes for the individual family kept in the OR-Kids Provider record.

F. A process by which the foster home being reviewed receives a written notice from the branch as to:
   1. The purpose of the staffing, and
   2. Any follow-up action they need to be aware of by the committee, after they have been notified verbally.

III. To ensure objectivity in the review process, these reviews require the inclusion of individuals who have no relationship to the:

   A. Foster family;
   B. Child welfare staff responsible for the foster home’s certification; or
   C. Foster children in the family’s care.

Staff involved with the foster homes are necessary participants in the review. However, they are not the sole participants in the review committee.

IV. Standing committee members include:

   A. Child Welfare program manager or designee;
   B. CPS or screening supervisor or designee;
   C. Certification supervisor or designee
   D. Person assigned for notes or minutes and documentation of review; and
   E. People involved with the foster home under review, the certifier and caseworkers.

Others who may be considered:

I. Culturally appropriate representation. Tribal worker or other representative should be invited if the foster home or foster child in the home has special cultural considerations.

II. Social service assistant. When people have information to share or action that will require followup.

III. Foster parent representative. A certified foster parent who can provide input on the review who is not involved in the actual case being reviewed and does not have a personal relationship with the foster parent. The Child Welfare program manager should select this person. It should not be someone who assumes the role due to other responsibilities in local associations or support groups.

IV. Program consultants. Central Office consultants, Foster Care, CPS, Adoption, Residential Treatment, Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC), or Field Administration may be used in complex cases, cases reviewed previously, or when the district or branch requires additional review participants.

Tip

Suggestions for how to complete this meeting:

Standing meeting:

» Consider having the staffing via telephone when staff are in different offices.

Examples of when a delay in response time will compromise child or young adult safety include:

- Family (including alleged perpetrator and alleged victim) is due to leave town within a few hours either permanently (to move or flee) or temporarily (vacation).
- It is near the end of the school day and the alleged perpetrator is aware of the report being made. There is potential for the perpetrator to coach the child if the interview does not occur before the child’s release from school.
Chapter 3
Assessment
Section 25: Substance Affected Infant
Substance affected infant

A. Introduction

The federal government passed the Comprehensive Addiction and Recovery Act of 2016 (CARA). CARA added requirements for states through the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) to focus on the effect of substance misuse on infants and their families.

The purpose is early identification and intervention by provision of support and services to families that need help with substance use disorders.

Specifically, the law requires:

I. Health care providers to notify Child Welfare when an infant is born affected by substances.

II. Plans of care to be developed for such infants to address the health and substance use disorder treatment needs of the infant and their family.

III. Service referrals to be made for any services identified in the plan of care.

Maternal drug and alcohol use during pregnancy have been associated with:

I. Premature birth;

II. Still birth;

III. Low birth weight;

IV. Slowed growth;

V. Sudden Infant Death Syndrome; and

VI. A variety of physical, emotional, behavioral, and cognitive problems.

How and whether prenatal substance exposure affects the infant depends on several factors, including the frequency, timing, and type of substances used. Substance affected infants are likely to require health care and related services of a type or amount beyond that required by children generally. Therefore, it follows that these infants and their families could benefit from support and services.

When providing support and services to families where substance use is identified, it is important to use a multi-disciplinary approach draws on trauma-informed professional expertise across agencies. This includes:

I. Medical providers;

II. Public health, such as home visiting nurses;

III. Chemical dependency programs;

IV. Social services

V. Mental health; and
VI. Early intervention services.

B. Definitions

I. Health care provider means a licensed independent practitioner involved in the care and delivery of infants. This includes:
   A. A physician, as defined in ORS 677.010;
   B. A nurse practitioner, that includes nurse-midwives, certified under ORS 678.375 and authorized to write prescriptions under ORS 678.390; or
   C. A naturopathic physician licensed under ORS chapter 685.

II. Medication assisted treatment (MAT) means use of FDA-approved medications, in combination with counseling and behavioral therapies, to provide a “whole-patient” approach to the treatment of substance use disorders.

III. Plan of care means a written plan for a substance affected infant and the infant’s family. The plan focuses on meeting health needs and substance disorder treatment needs and developed in collaboration with the:
   A. Family;
   B. Healthcare provider;
   C. Community agencies; and
   D. Child Welfare, when appropriate.

IV. Substance means any legal or illegal drug with potential for misuse. This includes:
   A. Any controlled substance as defined by ORS 475.005;
   B. Prescription medications;
   C. Over-the-counter medications; or
   D. Alcoholic beverages.

Substance does not include:
   E. Tobacco;
   F. Medication assisted treatment; or
   G. Drugs used in a manner prescribed.

V. Substance affected infant means an infant, regardless of whether abuse is suspected, for whom prenatal substance exposure is indicated at birth, and subsequent assessment by a health care provider identifies signs of substance withdrawal, a Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder diagnosis, or detectable physical, developmental, cognitive, or emotional delay or harm that is associated with prenatal substance exposure.

Prenatal substance exposure is determined by:

I. A positive toxicology screen from the infant or the mother at delivery, or
II. Credible information the mother had an active untreated substance use disorder during the pregnancy or at the time of birth.

C. Assessment activities

1. Gather Information from family and collateral contacts

In addition to the information typically gathered during the CPS assessment, you should ask questions specific to substance use when the report identifies an infant exposed to or affected by substances.

Procedure

When a report identifies a substance exposed or substance affected infant, in addition to the information typically gathered, you should ask questions specific to substance use and infant care, such as:

I. The nature and extent of the effects of substance exposure on the infant, if any.

II. The infant’s medical condition and any current or ongoing health care needs. This includes:
   A. An extended hospital stay prior to discharge;
   B. Specific medical procedures, medication, specialized equipment; or
   C. The need for more frequent monitoring.

III. Whether and when the infant’s mother had prenatal care.

IV. The name of the infant and the mother’s health care provider.

V. The nature and extent of the mother’s current drug or alcohol use and that of the father and other caregivers:
   A. Current substance use (specific substance(s) used, frequency, intensity, duration and amount of use);
   B. History of substance use (e.g., periods of abstinence);
   C. History of or refusal to enter substance use disorder treatment; and
   D. Results of prior substance use disorder treatment.

VI. The nature and extent of any history of:
   A. Mental illness,
   B. Intimate partner violence, or
   C. Cognitive limitations.

VII. Whether the mother is receiving medication assisted treatment.

VIII. The nature and extent of the impact of the use on the mother’s ability to provide proper care and attention to the infant.

IX. The extent to which the parents are responsive to the infant’s needs and are bonding with the infant (response to infant’s crying, eye contact, and other observations).

X. Parents’ protective capacity.

XI. Parents’ level of cooperation with any referrals for services, such as substance use disorder treatment if indicated, or assistance in care of the infant.

XII. Parenting skills demonstrated in the health care setting.

XIII. The anticipated discharge date and plan for discharge.

XIV. What family and social support system is available to the family.

XV. Child welfare history.

XVI. The nature and extent of the alleged abusive behavior or circumstances (determine the presence and immediacy of concerning issues).

2. Plan of care

When a child is identified as a substance affected infant, you must reach out to the health care provider, hospital social worker, or others engaged with the family and determine if a plan of care has been developed and whether service referrals were made for the infant or the infant’s family.

You must ensure a plan of care is developed, and service referrals identified in the plan for the infant and the infant’s family have been made.

Procedure

I. What does a Plan of Safe Care include? The Plan of Safe Care includes the following:
   A. The physical health, substance use disorder treatment needs, general functioning, development, safety, and any special care needs of the infant who may be having physical effects or withdrawal symptoms from prenatal exposure;
   B. The physical, social, and emotional health and substance use disorder treatment needs of the parents or caregivers; and
   C. Services and supports to improve the parent or caregiver’s capacity to nurture and care for the infant.

II. Who may be involved in a Plan of Safe Care? The development of the Plan of Safe Care involves input from the mother, father and other caregivers and uses a multidisciplinary team approach to provide coordinated and complete care. The team may include:
   A. Child welfare;
   B. Medical;
   C. Substance misuse disorder treatment;
   D. Mental health;
   E. Early childhood intervention;
   F. Home visitors;
   G. Public health;
   H. Tribe; or
   I. Others, as appropriate.
In most cases, the health care provider will be leading the development of the plan of care. However, remember it is developed in collaboration with:

A. Family;
B. Other social service agencies; and
C. When Child Welfare is involved:
   1. The CPS worker; or
   2. Permanency worker.

If the health care provider or other service providers are not taking the lead, it is then important for you to do so. When a substance affected infant is identified on an open CPS assessment, a plan of care must be developed and service referrals made.

If you are taking the lead on the development of the plan, you may use the OHA 1394 Plan of Care. If preferable, you can incorporate the elements of the plan into the protective action, initial safety plan or ongoing safety plan. This depends on which element fits best where and what plans are pertinent to the specific family. When a plan of care has been developed or another person is taking the lead, ask for a copy or for information about the plan and referred services.

3. Identify the child as a substance affected infant in OR-Kids

Identifying substance affected infants will allow Child Welfare to track and report related data. It also is a way to identify children (and families) who may need additional support and services.

Procedure

If not completed at screening, click on the person hyperlink, then click on the characteristics tab. In the top section titled Substance Use, there are two boxes, “Drug Addicted at Birth” and “Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder.” While drug addicted at birth is an incorrect term, please select this box to indicate the child is a substance affected infant (a change request has been submitted to change the title of the box).
Remember, when the infant or mother test positive for substances at birth, the infant is substance exposed. However, the infant may or may not be affected by the exposure. Only select the box when a healthcare provider indicates the substances affected the infant.

D. Engaging clients struggling with a substance use disorder

People with a substance use disorder are victims of their disease. Working with them can be a challenge. People struggling with a substance use disorder tend to blame problems on those around them. They may go to great lengths to deny their addiction is the reason for their current situation. Most people with a substance use disorder believe they have no problems and that others do not understand their situation. An important aspect of substance use disorder denial is the ability to:

I. Excuse,
II. Rationalize,
III. Minimize,
IV. Lie, or
V. Blame others for their behavior.

In addition, a pregnant woman may fear she will lose her infant if she acknowledges her substance use.

By the nature of the illness, people with substance use disorders are not able to control use by practicing self-control. They use denial to maintain using substances. Until a person receives treatment for their substance use, they may not be willing or open to changing their behavior. They may suffer many consequences because of their use. They may be forced to go to treatment through family or court intervention before they are willing to acknowledge they have a problem and need help to remain free from using substances.

You need to have patience and understanding of the multiple facets of this chronic disease when working with people with this disorder. Believing in a person’s ability to change and wanting a sober life is imperative. Once a person with a substance use disorder receives treatment and remains sober, they will no longer need addictive defenses. When they view themselves in a positive way, their behavior will also change in that direction. You can aid in this change by:

I. Acknowledging and building on a person’s successes,

II. Offering support,

III. Being non-judgmental, and

IV. Treating each contact as an opportunity for growth.*

Section 26 : Exception to Completing All CPS Assessment Requirements
Exception to Completing All CPS Assessment Requirements

Introduction

The Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS) Office of Child Welfare Programs is committed to responding to reports of child abuse in a manner that focuses, first and foremost, on safety. With safety in mind, Oregon Child Welfare, after researching practices and outcomes in other states and seeking the assistance of national experts, does not require completion of all CPS assessment requirements in limited situations.

Shortening the CPS assessment process in situations where further assessment is not warranted will allow for a CPS worker to focus on the families and situations that require a more in-depth safety intervention. Whether conducting an abbreviated or a comprehensive CPS assessment will depend on the level of intervention necessary for children to have the best outcomes possible.

This procedure outlines the limited circumstances where a CPS worker does not complete all CPS assessment requirements. Such a CPS assessment is referred to as an “abbreviated CPS assessment”.

Prior to Contact

Remember, there is a current exception to completing a CPS assessment prior to contact described in OAR 413-015-0409(1). The abbreviated CPS assessment procedure is only used if contact has already been made.

Procedure

An abbreviated CPS assessment can only be approved in certain circumstances. After making contact and gathering information, a CPS worker who believes their CPS assessment could be abbreviated should consider the criteria listed below and request a staffing with their CPS supervisor and CPS Consultant or their local office program manager.

At that staffing, the requirements outlined in OAR 413-015-0409(2) are reviewed and an exception to completing all CPS assessment requirements outlined in OAR 413-015-0400 through 0485 can only be approved when all of the following apply:

- The CPS worker has gathered enough information to make a safety determination, and the alleged victim is safe;
- The CPS worker has gathered enough information to make a disposition as required by OAR 413-015-1015 and the disposition is unfounded; and
- The local office program manager or a Child Safety consultant and the CPS supervisor jointly approve and confirm the following criteria apply:
  - A. No present or impending danger was identified at any time during the CPS assessment;
  - B. No children in the home are less than five years old;
  - C. No children in the home have been the subject of two or more assigned CPS assessments within the last 12 months regardless of disposition (this includes the current CPS assessment);
D. No children in the home have a verifiable, significant mental health diagnosis, developmental, medical or behavioral disability resulting in high vulnerability;

E. There are no prior reports of domestic violence involving the family or caregivers within the last 12 months (if during the review of Child Welfare records, including the current report, there are prior reports of domestic violence, including restraining orders, domestic violence grants, law enforcement reports, or relevant child welfare history, the information should be documented and reviewed when considering whether an abbreviated CPS assessment is appropriate);

F. No household member or caregiver has a founded disposition against them; and

G. The report does not involve a home certified by Child Welfare, ODDS or OYA, or an ODHS employee.

Requesting an Exception if Criteria are Not Met

In limited circumstances, the central office Child Safety Program Manager or designee may approve an exception to completing all CPS requirements when the criteria outlined in A-G above are not met.

To request an exception to completing all the CPS requirements, the CPS worker must first complete the required staffing with a CPS supervisor and local program manager or Child Safety consultant. Once local approval for requesting the exception is received, a request for an exception must be sent to the central Office Child Safety Program Manager.

Before making the request for an exception when all criteria are not met, the CPS worker must complete the CPS assessment (307B) with all the information available (see Documentation Requirements section below). The CPS assessment (307B) must be launched and converted to or printed as a PDF, then attached to an email addressed to: Abbrev Assess Requests. The CPS worker, CPS supervisor, local office program manager, and local Child Safety consultant must be cc’d in the request for the exception.

The email should clearly identify which of the criteria (A-G above) is not met and why an exception to completing all CPS requirements is being requested. An exception will only be approved if sufficient information was gathered to support the child safety decision and disposition.

Limits to the Exceptions

If an exception to completing all CPS assessment requirements is approved, the exception does not apply to the following rule requirements:

- Thorough review of records as required in OAR 413-015-0415 and described in Chapter 3, Section 3 in the Child Welfare Procedure Manual.

- Actions required to comply with ICWA and the Refugee Act as noted in OAR 413-015-0415, including inquiry, tribal notifications, and considerations.

- Actions required when there is an infant in the household:
  - Gather sleep related information through interviews:
    - Inquire about the sleep practices the family uses anytime the infant is laid down to sleep;
    - Engage and educate the family on safe sleep practices; and
    - Support the family in problem solving to reduce sleep related risk.
Chapter 3 • Section 26: Exception to Completing All CPS Assessment Requirements

1. Gather sleep related information through observation and assessment of the sleep environment(s) for any infant (OAR 413-015-0422).

2. Notifications to:
   - Parents/caregivers of the report;
   - Parents/caregivers of child interviews as required by OAR 413-015-0420;
   - Parents/caregivers and the alleged perpetrator of the CPS assessment disposition as required by OAR 413-015-0470;
   - Indian tribes if the CPS worker knows or has reason to know the child is an Indian child; and
   - The reporter, unless it is determined that disclosure is not permitted under ORS 419B.035.

3. The CPS assessment must be approved by a CPS supervisor within 20 days of the first contact with the parent/caregiver or child.

Documentation Requirements for an Abbreviated CPS Assessment

The CPS worker must document the following in OR-Kids:

1. All information gathered.
   - Information about functioning and other domains specific to report participants may be documented in the “Extent of Maltreatment” and “Circumstances Surrounding the Maltreatment” tabs.
   - Information gathered from eCourts, OJIN and LEDS and its analysis to support the child safety decision prior to the conclusion of the CPS assessment.

2. All CPS assessment requirements (per current procedure) including but not limited to contacts, review of records, inquiries, notifications, and management approvals.
   - When there is an infant in the home, document observations of the sleep environment, any information gathered on sleep practices, whether written information on safe sleep was provided, and any efforts to reduce risk. Complete the Safe Sleep Checklist (ODHS 2362) and upload it into the OR-Kids filing cabinet under Case Management (OAR 413-080-0054; Chapter 3, Section 4 of the Child Welfare Procedure Manual.)
   - A case note for any exception granted under the rule, the basis for the exception, who approved the exception, and when.
   - The unfounded CPS assessment disposition and the basis for the determination as required by OAR 413-015-0440 and described in Chapter 3, Section 9 of the Child Welfare Procedure Manual).
Chapter 3
Assessment

Section 27: CPS Assessment and Founded CPS Disposition
Review for Department Employees
Purpose

The Department is charged with the responsibility of protecting abused and neglected children and providing services to assure their safety. Every Department employee, regardless of position, is required by law to report any instances of abuse. Department employees must be exemplary in their own behaviors with children in order for the Department to be credible with families, partners, and the communities within which they work. Therefore, all Department employees must maintain a record free of founded abuse as a perpetrator as a condition of initial and continued employment.

Due to the potential impacts to employment, CPS assessments involving employees require some additional steps, considerations, and notifications which are outlined in this procedure.

In this procedure, the term employee will mean “an employee of the Oregon Department of Human Services,” unless otherwise noted. Department employees include employees of Child Welfare, Self-Sufficiency, Aging and People with Disabilities, Vocational Rehab, and Developmental Disabilities staff.

Tip: An individual’s status as an employee can be determined using the search function in Workday online. If the individual is an employee for the State of Oregon, Workday will display the employee’s name, position, unit, location, and in which department or agency the employee works. ‘ODHS’ will be listed for Department employees.

Assignment

Before the CPS assessment is assigned, several actions have already occurred at the screening level when an employee is identified as a participant in a report:

- The case was designated as a restricted case in the Child Welfare electronic information system;
- Consideration was given to where the CPS assessment was assigned to allow for sufficient professional and personal distance to ensure there is no perceived conflict of interest or favoritism associated with familiarity using the following guidelines:
  - If the CPS assessment involves a Child Welfare employee, the CPS assessment should be assigned to a district where the Child Welfare employee does not work or reside.
  - If the CPS assessment involves a non-Child Welfare employee, the CPS assessment should be assigned to a local office where the non-Child Welfare employee does not work. For example, if Child Welfare and Self Sufficiency share a building, then a CPS assessment involving the Self Sufficiency employee should be assigned to a different local office.
  - A notice of a restricted case assignment was sent to the Program Manager and local office receiving the assignment and a copy of that notice was sent to the ODHS Office of Human Resources.

When the report is assigned to the local office, the Program Manager of that office determines who will complete the CPS assessment using the following considerations:

- CPS assessments involving a Child Welfare employee must be completed by a CPS supervisor or a supervisor and a CPS worker.
- CPS assessments involving a non-Child Welfare employee can be completed by a CPS worker under close supervision of a supervisor.

IMPORTANT NOTE: If at any point during a CPS assessment the CPS worker has reasonable cause to believe an alleged perpetrator is an employee of ODHS or the Oregon Youth Authority (OYA), the CPS worker will notify a CPS supervisor as required in OAR 413-015-0415. The CPS supervisor must confirm the person’s employee status (see TIP above). If the CPS supervisor determines the alleged perpetrator is an employee of ODHS or OYA, the CPS supervisor must notify the ODHS Office of Human Resources and document that notification in the electronic case record. If the alleged perpetrator is an employee of Child Welfare or works in the same local office where the report was assigned, a CPS supervisor must contact a supervisor at the hotline to have the CPS assessment reassigned.

(Rev. 08/01/2022)

Sensitive Issue Report

A Child Welfare Sensitive Issue Report (ODHS 0150), also known as an SIR, must be completed by the assigned local office immediately upon receipt of the CPS assessment involving an employee as a participant and emailed to CW-Employee Sensitive Issue Report Distribution, which is a limited access email box. The Program Manager determines which supervisor or designee will complete the report. This report is a brief description of the information known at the beginning of the CPS assessment and is emailed to the distribution list identified on the form. The SIR can be updated and resubmitted at any point as information changes, however, the SIR must be updated and emailed again at the conclusion of the CPS assessment. (See Chapter 1, Section 4 of the procedure manual for more information about the Sensitive Issue Report process.)

Human Resources

The ODHS Office of Human Resources (HR) is involved in CPS assessments involving employees because it may impact their employment. As such, HR is notified and takes the following actions when the CPS assessment is assigned:

- If an employee is notified they have been identified as an alleged perpetrator in a CPS assessment, they must notify the Office of Human Resources within five calendar days (OAR 407-007-0420). Form MSC 0292, available in the forms directory online, can be used for this purpose.

- HR contacts the supervisor of the employee to notify the district of the allegation or potential involvement in the report. If the alleged perpetrator is an Oregon Youth Authority (OYA) employee, HR notifies OYA’s Office of Human Resources.

- HR provides direction on the decision as to whether an employee identified as the alleged perpetrator is reassigned duties and/or a work station pending the CPS assessment and/or the final review by a Central Office Founded Disposition Review Team.

CPS Assessments

The rules and procedures in place for conducting CPS assessments also apply to CPS assessments involving employees. There are no exceptions to completing the CPS assessment activities when an employee is involved.

Relevant information gathered during the CPS assessment must be provided to the employee’s Program Manager and District Manager at any point during the CPS assessment.

CPS Assessments Involving Employees Whose Homes Are Certified by Child Welfare

The rules and procedures in place for conducting a CPS assessment when a report involves a home certified by Child Welfare apply as well.
Welfare (OAR 413-015-0601 through 413-015-0608 and Chapter 3, Section 24) also apply to employees whose homes are certified by Child Welfare. Additionally, see Chapter 8, Section 11: Conflict of Interest in the procedure manual for information about what to do when there are concerns about an employee’s ability to be a substitute care or respite provider and what does or does not need to be reported to HR.

Required Notifications

- The employee must be verbally notified within 24 hours by the supervisor assigned to conduct or oversee the CPS assessment when the disposition has been determined to be unfounded or unable to be determined.

- Notifications at the conclusion of the CPS assessment, as required in OAR 413-015-0470(1)(a-b, d-g), must be completed and documented by the supervisor assigned to conduct the CPS assessment as applicable.

- After the CPS assessment has been reviewed and approved by a program manager or district manager who has been trained in CPS assessments and dispositions, the approving manager must notify HR of the disposition by sending an email to their assigned Human Resources Analyst (HRA). (Click here for HRA assignments.) If the disposition is founded, the approving manager must specify the type of abuse and attach a pdf version of the approved CPS assessment to that email. This notification must be documented in the Child Welfare electronic information system (OAR 413-015-0475(4)).

- As indicated previously in the Sensitive Issue Reports section above, at the conclusion of the CPS assessment, the SIR must be updated by the supervisor assigned to conduct the CPS assessment or their designee and emailed to CW-Employee Sensitive Issue Report Distribution.

- The approving manager must provide the employee identified as a perpetrator written notice of a founded disposition using ODHS form 0319, Notice of Child Protective Services Founded Disposition.

  - The notice must include:
    - The case number and date of the completed CPS assessment;
    - The full name of the individual identified as the perpetrator of abuse as recorded in the CPS assessment;
    - The type of abuse and a brief and informative description of why the CPS assessment was founded;
    - A statement that the review procedure will automatically occur unless the employee requests in writing that a review of the founded not be conducted;
    - The date*, time, location, and name of the Child Welfare Program or District Manager with whom the employee will meet for the purpose of clarifying or discussing the reasons for the founded disposition (*no more than 14 business days after the CPS assessment is completed);
    - A statement that the employee, if they believe the founded disposition is not accurate, may provide written information they would like considered in the Central Office Founded Disposition Review at the meeting noted above.

  - The notice must be delivered as follows:
    - By certified mail, restricted delivery, with a return receipt requested to the last known address of the employee; or
    - By hand delivery to the employee. If hand delivered, the notice must be addressed to the perpetrator and a copy of the notice must be signed and dated by the perpetrator to acknowledge receipt, signed by the person delivering the notice, and filed in the child welfare case file.

- A copy of the notice and proof of receipt must be filed in the Child Welfare electronic information system.
- If the notification could make a child or adult unsafe, consult with the Child Safety Program Manager about safety planning with the adult survivor for when the notification is made.

Meeting with a Child Welfare Manager

A Child Welfare Program or District Manager (not in the direct chain of supervision of the employee and commonly the Program or District Manager in the local office where the CPS assessment was conducted) must be identified to meet with the employee identified as the perpetrator of abuse at the conclusion of the CPS assessment to clarify and discuss the reasons for the founded disposition. This meeting should be held no more than 14 business days after the CPS assessment is completed.

The employee may decline attending the meeting in writing. If this occurs, the Child Welfare Program Manager or District Manager responsible for conducting the meeting must document the date, time, and manner in which the employee declined the meeting in the Child Welfare’s electronic case record. The employee’s written statement declining to attend the meeting must be saved in the Child Welfare’s electronic case record.

If the employee does not confirm or attend the meeting, the Child Welfare Program Manager or District Manager responsible for conducting the meeting must document the date and time of the scheduled meeting and note the employee did not attend the meeting in the Department’s electronic case record.

The employee may have a union steward, attorney, or support person attend this meeting. This meeting is specific to the CPS assessment and disposition and not for employment or personnel discussions. Any discussions about employment or personnel discussions must be directed to Human Resources.

During the meeting, the Child Welfare Program or District Manager will:

- Clarify the reasons for the founded disposition;
- Receive any additional written material to support the reasons why the disposition is in error from the employee.

Unless the employee has requested in writing that a review of the founded disposition not occur, immediately following this meeting, the Child Welfare Program or District Manager responsible for conducting the meeting, or their designee will forward the CPS assessment information and all documents used to support the founded disposition to the Child Safety Program Manager and cc HR.

The following template should be utilized in the email request:

- Subject: Employee Founded Review Request
  - Employee’s name:
  - Employee’s position:
  - Employee’s local office:
  - Employee’s district:
• Employee’s supervisor:
• The name of the supervisor who completed the CPS assessment:
• The name of the manager who approved the CPS assessment
• Dates the CPS assessment was reported and completed:
• Date the Notice of Founded Disposition was provided to the employee:
• Date the employee responded, accepted, or refused appointment with the Program Manager:
• If refused, what was the reason?
• Date of the Program Manager’s meeting with the employee:
• How was the meeting conducted if not in person?
• Written summary of the Program Manager’s contacts with the employee:

Attachments to include (pdf format if possible):

• The completed CPS assessment;
• Any documents, records, reports, evaluations, photographs, media, etc. used to determine the disposition; and
• Any relevant materials submitted on behalf of the employee.

Pending Related Actions

A pending related action, such as a related civil, criminal, juvenile, or administrative proceeding, in which the allegations of abuse are at issue, will not be grounds to delay or pend either the review of the founded abuse disposition or any resulting disciplinary action.

Central Office Employee Founded Disposition Review

The Central Office Employee Founded Disposition Review Committee includes two Child Welfare management or executive service employees selected by the Child Safety Program Manager or designee who make a recommendation(s) to the Child Safety Program Manager or designee regarding the founded disposition. No person on the review committee may have been directly involved in the CPS assessment resulting in the founded disposition.

The review committee will consider all relevant information provided for the review including:

• Relevant information or materials contained in the Child Welfare case file, including:
  • The CPS assessment and disposition;
  • The screening information;
  • The CPS assessment information and narrative;
  • Related police reports, medical reports, or other documentation gathered during the CPS assessment; and
  • The information provided by the employee during the Child Welfare manager meeting.

The review committee will not:
• Re-interview the victim(s);
• Interview or meet with the employee;
• Interview or meet with others associated with the employee or others mentioned in the CPS assessment; or
• Conduct a field CPS assessment of the allegation of child abuse.

The review is based on current Child Welfare practice and definitions of child abuse. Procedural rules in place at the time the CPS assessment was completed must also be considered. When reviewing the founded disposition, the committee will also consider:

• Whether there is reasonable cause to believe child abuse occurred;
• Whether there is reasonable cause to believe the employee is responsible for the child abuse.
• Whether there is reasonable cause to believe the type of abuse is correctly identified in the CPS assessment.
• Each member of the review committee must make one of the following recommendations to the Child Safety Program Manager or designee for each founded allegation of abuse:
  • Retain the founded disposition;
  • Change the disposition to unfounded or unable to be determined; or
  • Change the type of abuse.

The Child Safety Program Manager or designee must:

• Observe the Central Office Employee Founded Disposition Review;
• Ask questions of the committee members as needed for clarification;
• Consider the committee’s recommendation(s) and the basis for the recommendation(s); and
• Make one of the following decisions for each founded allegation of abuse:
  • Retain the founded disposition;
  • Change the disposition to unfounded or unable to be determined; or
  • Change the type of abuse.

The decision and the basis for the decision made by the Child Safety Program Manager or designee must be documented and is final.

Notice of Central Office Employee Founded Disposition Review Decision

The Child Safety Program Manager or designee will prepare a written notice of their decision that includes the following information:

• The decision that the CPS disposition will be retained, changed to unfounded or unable to be determined, or changed to a different abuse type.
• A summary of the information upon which that decision was based.

The Child Safety Program Manager or designee will forward their finding(s) in writing to:

• The employee;

• The supervisor who completed the CPS assessment for filing in the electronic case record;

• The Child Welfare manager who provided the meeting with the employee; and

• The Senior Human Resource Manager.

If the decision is to change the disposition or abuse type, the Child Safety Program Manager or designee will submit the data correction change to update the electronic case record with the committee’s findings.

The Child Safety Program will maintain a comprehensive record of the Central Office Employee Founded Disposition Reviews. The record will include, at a minimum, the date of the review, case number, a copy of the materials used in the review, and the decision made by the Child Safety Program Manager or designee.

Disciplinary Action

In instances when the decision by the Central Office Employee Founded Disposition Review Committee is to retain the founded abuse disposition, the Senior Human Resource Manager will initiate an investigation to determine whether disciplinary action is justified up to and including dismissal.

Disciplinary action, where appropriate, will be taken in accordance with the relevant collective bargaining contractual provisions or statutory provisions for unrepresented employees or employees in the management service.

Appendix 3.1: Extent of maltreatment
Extent of Maltreatment

This question is concerned with maltreatment and the immediate physical and psychological effects it has on a child. It considers what is occurring or has occurred and what the results are (e.g., hitting, injuries, or trauma). Observations and interviews are used to answer this question. Collateral sources of information (doctors, teachers, relatives, friends, etc.) are useful to check information gathered.

I. Information about extent of maltreatment includes:
   A. Type and severity of maltreatment;
   B. History of the maltreatment (include prior child welfare history);
   C. Description of specific events;
   D. Description of emotional and physical symptoms;
   E. Identification of the child and maltreating caregiver;
   F. Identification of any cultural considerations around the maltreatment.

II. Describe what abuse occurred:
   A. Physical abuse: Describe injuries. Document with photographs, medical reports, LEA reports, etc.
   B. Sexual abuse: Describe child’s statements of abuse, as well as any corroborating witness accounts. Document information from advocacy centers, police reports, perpetrator statements, etc.
   C. Neglect -- inadequate food/shelter: Describe home environment and child’s condition. Photograph home environment.
   D. Medical neglect: Describe child’s condition. Document information from medical staff.

III. Describe how the child was impacted:
   A. Any lasting results of the maltreatment: Surgery, blindness, scarring, etc.
   B. Any emotional and behavioral observations: Fearful, clingy, nightmares, tantrums, suicidal, running away, etc.
   C. Child’s physical state: Hungry, dirty, medical needs, etc.

IV. Describe details about:
   A. Severity: Pattern or progression of abuse.
   B. History: Similar prior incidents, both related to the affected children, as well as history regarding the perpetrator with other families.

V. Identify victims and perpetrators:
   A. Name who the maltreating person is. Consider if there is more than one perpetrator.
   B. Name the affected child or children.

VI. Circumstances Surrounding the Maltreatment

This question addresses what was going on when the maltreatment occurred. This question is concerned with understanding why maltreatment happened in this particular family.

Information about circumstances surrounding the maltreatment includes:

A. The duration of the maltreatment: Multi-generational abuse? Recent stress event?
B. Caregiver intent concerning the maltreatment.
C. Caregiver explanation for the maltreatment and family conditions.
D. Caregiver acknowledgment and attitude about the maltreatment.
E. Other problems occurring in association with the maltreatment; consider substance use or mental disturbance, etc.

VII. Describe the intention of maltreatment:

A. What was parents’ intention?
B. Does parent acknowledge maltreatment?
C. Was the parent impaired (e.g., substance abuse, mental health) or otherwise out of control when this happened?
D. What was the situation that preceded to or led up to the maltreatment?
E. What is his/her attitude about what happened?
F. Does he/she believe it was maltreatment?

VIII. Describe other impacts:

A. Is the family isolated?
B. Is violence pervasive?
C. Is there anyone exercising power and control over any of the adults in the home? Did this impact the maltreatment?

IX. Child Functioning

This question is concerned with a child’s general behavior, emotions, temperament and physical capacity. It addresses how a child is from day to day rather than focusing on points in time, and it must consider a child’s developmental level. The child’s functioning should also address changes observed due to the maltreatment.

Information about child functioning includes:

A. Capacity for attachment
B. General mood and functioning
C. Intellectual functioning
D. Communication ability
E. Social skills
F. Ability to express emotion
G. Physical and mental health
H. Functioning within cultural norms
I. Developmental disability
J. Medical condition
K. Peer relations
L. School performance
M. Independence
N. Motor skills
O. Behavior

Describe child functioning:
P. Describe your own observations of the child’s mood, temperament, behavior.
Q. Utilize collaterals to inform about the child’s functioning, both currently and prior to recent involvement when the family wasn’t amid a child welfare crisis.
R. If the child is seeing a therapist or is school-aged, be sure to include those sources of information.

X. Adult Functioning

This question is concerned with how the adults/caregivers in the family feel, think and act daily. The question focuses on adult functioning separate from parenting. Be clear: The way adults manage their day-to-day lives impacts their children.

Information about adult functioning includes:
A. Communication and social skills
B. Coping and stress management
C. Self control
D. Problem solving
E. Judgment and decision making
F. Independence
G. Home and financial management
H. Employment
I. Domestic violence: Consider if anyone is exercising power and control over any of the adults in the home.
J. Citizenship and community involvement
K. Rationality
L. Self care and self preservation
M. Substance use
N. Mental health
O. Physical health and capacity
P. Functioning within cultural norms

Describe adult functioning:

Q. What’s their day-to-day life like?
R. How do they make decisions? Do they talk with anyone about decisions? Do they have family/friend supports?
S. Employment: How do they earn money? Have they always worked? When’s the last time they had a job?
T. How is their health?
U. How their day-to-day life is managed? Is it chaotic?
V. What is their judgment or decision-making ability?
W. Are they employed? Do they have financial management?
X. Are they rational?
Y. Are they open or defensive?
Z. Do they have emotional control? If not, what seems to be getting in the way (substances, mental health, abuse/trauma)?

XI. Disciplinary Practices

This question is concerned with the manner in which caregivers approach discipline and child guidance. Discipline is considered in the broader context of socialization — teaching and guiding the child. This question is broken out from parenting generally because this aspect of family life is highly related to both risk of maltreatment and threats to child safety. Answer this both from the child’s perspective and from the parents’. Note discrepancies.

Information about disciplinary practices includes:

A. Disciplinary methods
B. Concept and purpose of discipline
C. Context in which discipline occurs
D. Cultural practices

Describe disciplinary practices:

E. What does the child feel is the purpose of discipline? (I.e., does it keep the child’s behavior managed; is it to cause pain so they will learn; is it to teach them respect?)
F. What does the parent feel is the purpose of discipline? (I.e., is it to keep the child’s behavior managed; is it to cause pain so they will learn; is it to teach them respect?)
G. What is the parent’s emotional state when disciplining?
H. What does the parent understand about their child’s need for safety and protection?
I. What does the parent understand about how their discipline impacts the child?
J. What is the parent’s perception of their child? Is it accurate?
K. What are the parent’s expectations of the child? Are they realistic?

XII. Parenting Practices

This question explores the general nature and approach to parenting as well as the parents’ satisfaction with being a parent. Some parents have little knowledge of child rearing practices. Other parents may know what is considered “appropriate” parenting but choose their method based on how they were raised, how their partner does it, etc.

Information about parenting practices includes:

A. Reasons for being a caregiver
B. Satisfaction in being a caregiver
C. Caregiver knowledge and skill in parenting and child development
D. Caregiver expectations and empathy for a child
E. Decision making in parenting practices
F. Parenting style
G. History of parenting behavior
H. Protectiveness
  I. Difference in how the parent thinks and feels about each child

Describe parenting practices. Can they detail:

J. Why they became a parent.
K. Whether they like being a parent.
L. How much time they spend with each child.
M. Expectations for each child.
N. What they like to do with each child.
O. What each child does best.
P. What they like about each child.
Q. What they don’t like about each child.
R. What works best for each child when he/she is sad, angry, or frustrated.

Appendix 3.2: Present danger threats
Present Danger Threats

From Action for Child Protection Curriculum

Maltreatment

I. Maltreating now: The parents’ mistreatment of the child is occurring right now. The maltreatment will typically be physical, verbal, or sexual in nature. Neglect that is chronic may be occurring in the present sense but does not necessarily meet the criterion of danger.

II. Multiple injuries: Although it is acceptable to consider this as injuries on different parts of the body, as in bruises to the arms and lower legs, its intent is more accurately related to different kinds of injuries, as in a serious burn and bruising to the arms.

A. Face/head: This includes bruises, cuts, abrasions, swelling, or any physical manifestation alleged to have occurred as a result of parental treatment of the child.

B. Serious injury: Typically, this would include bone breaks, deep lacerations, burns, malnutrition, etc.

III. Premeditated: There must be clear information that what has been alleged is associated with and a result of a deliberate, preconceived plan or thinking that the parent is responsible for and which preceded the maltreatment event.

IV. Several victims: This refers to the identification of more than one child who currently is being maltreated. There is no historical context here. Additionally, one must keep in mind that several victims in chronic neglect situations who are not at danger precludes the selection of this influence.

V. History of reports: This influence requires no qualification about the nature of the previous reports, as in whether they were minor or serious. Concern is assumed and accepted when a family has a history of reports. This present danger influence should always be considered in relation to other influences when considering response time or emergency custody matters.

Life Threatening

I. Living arrangements: This is based on specific information that indicates a child’s living situation is an immediate threat to his/her safety. This would include the most serious health circumstances: buildings capable of falling in, exposure to elements in bitter weather, fire hazards, electrical wiring exposed, guns/knives available, etc.

Unexplained

I. Injuries: This refers to a serious injury that parents and others cannot or will not explain.

II. Bizarre cruelty: This qualifies the maltreatment that has been alleged and usually will require an interpretation, such as locking up children, torture, exaggerated emotional abuse, etc.

Accessible to
I. Maltreater: This is another influence that must be considered in concert with other present danger influences when judging response or emergency safety. It refers to a situation, such as only caretaker, significant amounts of caretaking time, isolation from others, etc. This influence can be used to indicate current accessibility as well as anticipated accessibility in the near future, such as when the child goes home from school.

Child

I. Parent’s viewpoint of child is bizarre: This is an extreme, not just a negative, attitude toward the child. It is consistent with the level of seeing the child as demon possessed.

II. Child is unsupervised or alone for extended periods: Although this could involve an older child, to be present danger it is more likely to be a younger child. The time of day, of course, is important, as is the length of time the child has been unsupervised. This only applies if the child is truly without care, not someone is caring for the child and complaining that the mom is supposed to be but isn’t present. Keep in mind the present time concept here. If the child was unsupervised last night but is not alone now, it is not a present danger influence.

III. Child is 0 to 6: Like some of the others, this influence should be considered in relationship to other present danger influences such as alone.

IV. Child is unable to protect self: This is like the influence above generally but will also include children who are older but may possess some incapacity.

V. Child is fearful/anxious: This does not refer to generalized fear or anxiety. Children who are described as being obviously afraid of: their present circumstance, the home situation, or a person because of a concern of personal threat would fit this influence. Available information may be from actual communication or emotional/physical manifestation from the child’s perception of their situation.

VI. Child needs medical attention: To be a present danger influence, the medical care required must be significant enough that its absence could seriously affect the child’s health and well-being. In other words, if children are not being given routine medical care, it would not constitute a present danger situation. It should have an emergent quality.

Parent

I. Parents are unable to perform parental responsibilities: This only refers to those parental duties and responsibilities consistent with basic care or assuring safety. This is not associated with whether parents are effective parents generally but whether their inability to provide basic duties leaves the child in a threatened state.

II. Bizarre behaviors: This requires interpretation. Unpredictable, incoherent, weird, outrageous, or totally inappropriate behaviors fit this influence.

III. Parents described as dangerous: Dangerous parents may be behaving in bizarre ways; however, this is intended to capture a more specific type of behavior. Information would be considered present danger here when parents are described as physically/verbally imposing and threatening, brandishing weapons, known to be dangerous and aggressive, currently behaving in attacking or aggressive ways, etc.
IV. Parent: This influence may include aspects of the two preceding influences.

V. Out-of-control: However, this allows for capturing emotional, upset, or depressed people who cannot focus themselves or manage their behavior in ways to properly perform their parental responsibilities. Their actions or lack of actions may not be directed at the children but may affect them in dangerous ways.

VI. Parent intoxicated: Applying the present time context, this refers to a parent who is drunk now or is consistently drunk all the time. The state of the parent’s condition is more important than the use of a substance (drinking compared to drunk).

VII. Caregivers overtly reject intervention: This threat refers to situations where a caregiver refuses to see or speak with child welfare staff and/or to let child welfare staff see the child; is openly hostile or physically aggressive toward child welfare staff; refuses access to the home; hides child or refuses access to child.

Family

I. Family isolated: This is a dependent influence as many others are. In other words, this influence must be considered in relationship to other influences when assessing or deciding about response or emergency protection. This refers to both geographic and social isolation.

II. Spouse abuse present: This considers family situations in which the alleged child maltreatment is accompanied by spouse abuse. For example, a child is being mistreated and acknowledges that a parent is also being mistreated, thus suggesting a violent situation which is generalized among members. Concern is heightened if both abuses are presented as occurring during the same time and more concerning if that same time is now.

III. Family will flee: This may require some interpretation. Transient families, homes that are not established, families with limited possessions, etc. are included.

IV. Family hides child: This should be thought of in both overt and covert terms. For example, a child being physically restrained within the home or parents who avoid allowing others to have personal contact with their child can be considered. This may include passing a child around to other adults, relatives, or different homes.

Other

I. Services inaccessible or unavailable: This is an influence that becomes present danger when considered in relation to other influences that demand access to services. For instance, a child who has a routine need for a particular kind of medical service which is a life threatening need and the service is inaccessible; a present danger circumstance may be apparent.

Oregon Safety Threats Guide

Impending Danger Threats

This guide has been modified from the Action for Child Protection Guide.

This guide identifies and explains the 15 universal safety threats and includes a 16th safety threat added in the Oregon Child Welfare Safety Model. Remember that safety threats present in the form of behavior, conditions, or circumstances. Examples within this reference guide refer to impending danger. Regarding any family behavior, condition, or circumstance being considered as a safety threat, remember that the safety threshold criteria must always apply.

The family situation is such that no adult in the home is routinely performing parenting duties and responsibilities that ensure child safety.

This refers only to adults (not children) in a caregiving role. Duties and responsibilities related to the provision of food, clothing, shelter, and supervision are to be considered at such a basic level that the absence of these basic provisions directly affect the safety of a child. This includes situations in which parents'/caregivers' whereabouts are unknown. The parent’s/caregiver’s whereabouts are unknown while the CPS initial assessment is being completed, and this is affecting child safety. This safety threat applies when a child’s parent or caregiver is present and available but does not provide supervision or basic care. The failure to provide supervision and basic care may be due to avoidance of protective care and duties or physical incapacity. In such instances, this safety threat is considered if no other parent/caregiver issues coexist with the lack of supervision like substance use or mental health. Compare this threat to the safety threat concerned with impulsiveness and lack of self-control.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

The parent or caregiver who normally is responsible for protecting the child is absent, likely to be absent or is incapacitated in some way or becomes incapacitated and is not available. Nothing within the family can compensate for the condition of the parent or caregiver which meets the out-of-control criterion. An unexplained absence of parents/caregivers is a situation that is out of control. Without explanation, the children have been abandoned and are totally subject to the whims of life and others. They are totally without parent or caregiver protection. Nothing can control the absence of the parents or caregivers.

Duties and responsibilities are at a critical level that, if not addressed, represent a specific danger or threat posed to a vulnerable child. The lack of meeting these basic duties and responsibilities could result in a child being seriously injured, kidnapped, seriously ill, or even dying. Regarding absent parents/caregivers and in the absence of a family network that imposes itself, vulnerable children left without parents or caregivers will suffer serious effects.

That the severe effects could occur in the now or in the near future is based on understanding what circumstances are associated with the parent’s or caregiver’s absence or incapacity, the home condition, and the lack of other adult supervisory supports. The absence of parents or caregivers meets the imminence criteria. The threat is immediate.

This threat includes both behaviors and emotions as illustrated in the following examples:

I. Parent’s/caregiver’s physical or mental disability/incapacitation renders the person unable and unavailable to provide basic care for the children.

II. Parent/caregiver is or has been absent from the home for lengthy periods of time, and no other adults are available to provide basic care.

III. Parents/caregivers have abandoned the children.

IV. Parents arranged care by an adult, but the parents'/primary caregivers' whereabouts are unknown or they have not returned according to plan, and the current caregiver is asking for relief.

V. Parent/caregiver is or will be incarcerated, thereby leaving the children without a responsible adult to provide care.

VI. Parent/caregiver does not respond to or ignores a child’s basic needs.

VII. Parent/caregiver allows child to wander in and out of the home or through the neighborhood without the necessary supervision.

VIII. Parent/caregiver ignores/does not provide necessary, protective supervision and basic care appropriate to the age and capacity of a child.

IX. Parent/caregiver is unavailable to provide necessary, protective supervision and basic care because of physical illness or incapacity.

X. Parent/caregiver allows other adults to improperly influence (drugs, alcohol, abusive behavior) the child, and the parent/caregiver is present or approves.

XI. Child has been abandoned or left with someone who does not know the parent/caregiver.

XII. Parent/caregiver has left the child with someone and not returned as planned.

XIII. Parent/caregiver did not express plans to return, or the parent/caregiver has been gone longer than expected or what would be normally acceptable.

XIV. No one knows the parent’s/caregiver’s identity.

XV. Parents'/caregivers’ unexplained absence exceeds a few days.

One or both parents’ or caregivers’ behavior is violent and/or they are acting (behaving) dangerously.

Violence refers to aggression, fighting, brutality, cruelty and hostility. It may be immediately observable, regularly active or generally potentially active. When seen in an intimate partner relationship, the violence is generally part of a pattern of power and control that one partner exerts over the other.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

To be out of control, the violence must be active. It moves beyond being angry or upset, particularly related to a specific event. The violence is representative of the person’s state of mind and is likely pervasive in terms of the way the person feels and acts. There is nothing within the family or household that can counteract the violence.

The active aspect of this behavior could easily result in aggression toward family members and children, specifically, who may be targets or bystanders. Vulnerable children are those who cannot self-protect, who cannot get out of the way, and who have no adult who is able to protect them and/or may intervene in the violence. These children could experience severe physical or emotional effects from the violence. The severe effects could include serious physical injury, terror, or death.

The judgment about imminence is based on sufficient understanding of the dynamics and patterns of violent behavior. It is conclusive that the violence and likely harmful effects could or will occur soon to the extent that the violence:

I. Is a pervasive aspect of a person’s character or a family dynamic.
II. May or may not be predictable.
III. Has a standing history or there is a recent severe incident.

This threat includes behaviors as illustrated in the following examples:

I. Violence includes hitting, beating, physically assaulting a child, spouse, or other family member.
II. Violence includes acting dangerously toward a child or others, including throwing things, brandishing weapons, aggressively intimidating, and terrorizing. This includes making believable threats of homicide or suicide.
III. Family violence involves physical and verbal assault on a parent, caregiver or member of the child’s household, in the presence of a child; the child witnesses the activity, and the child demonstrates an observable, significant effect.
IV. Family violence occurs and a child has been assaulted or attempted to intervene.
V. Family violence occurs and a child could be inadvertently harmed even though the child may not be the actual target of the violence.
VI. Parent/caregiver whose behavior outside of the home (e.g., drugs, violence, aggressiveness, hostility) creates an environment within the home that threatens child safety (e.g., drug labs, gangs, drive-by shootings).
VII. Due to the batterer’s controlling behavior, the child’s basic needs are unmet.

One or both parents’ or caregivers’ behavior is impulsive, or they will not/cannot control their behavior.

This threat is concerned with self-control. It is concerned with a person’s ability to postpone; to set aside needs; to plan; to be dependable; to avoid destructive behavior; to use good judgment; to not act on impulses; to exert energy and action; to inhibit; to manage emotions; and so on. This is concerned with self-control as it relates to child safety and protecting children. So, it is the lack of parent or caregiver self-control that places vulnerable children in jeopardy. This threat also includes parents or caregivers who are incapacitated or not controlling their behavior because of mental health or substance abuse. This safety threat is different than the first safety threat concerned with no adult in the home to routinely provide supervision and protection. That safety threat is based on consistent neglectful parent or caregiver behavior; this safety threat is tied specifically to a caregiver’s spontaneous reactions or failure to control their behavior.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

This threat is self-evident as related to meeting the out-of-control criterion. Beyond what is mentioned in the definition, this includes parents or caregivers who cannot control their emotions, resulting in sudden explosive temper outbursts; spontaneous uncontrolled reactions; loss of control during high stress or at specific times, such as while punishing a child. Typically, application of the out-of-control criterion may lead to observations of behavior, but clearly, much of self-control issues rest in emotional areas. Emotionally disturbed parents or caregivers may be out of touch with reality or so depressed that they represent a danger to their child or are unable to perform protective duties. Finally, those who use substances may have become sufficiently dependent that they have lost their ability for self-control in areas concerned with protection.

Severity should be considered from two perspectives. The lack of self-control is significant. That means that it has moved well beyond the person’s capacity to manage it regardless of self-awareness, and the lack of control is concerned with serious matters as compared to, say, the lack of self-control to exercise. The effects of the threat could result in severe effects as parents or caregivers lash out at children, fail to supervise children, leave children alone, or leave children in the care of irresponsible others.

A presently evident and standing problem of poor impulse control or lack of self-control establishes the basis for imminence. Because the lack of self-control is severe, the examples of it should be clear and add to the certainty one can have about severe effects probably occurring in the near future.

This includes behaviors, other than aggression or emotion, that affect child safety as illustrated in the following examples:

I. Parent/caregiver is unable to perform basic care, duties, fulfill essential protective duties.

II. Parent/caregiver is seriously depressed and unable to control emotions or behaviors.

III. Parent/caregiver is chemically dependent and unable to control the dependency’s effects.

IV. A substance abuse problem renders the parents/primary caregivers incapable of routinely/consistently attending to the children’s basic needs.

V. Parent/caregiver makes impulsive decisions and plans that leave the children in precarious situations (e.g., unsupervised, supervised by an unreliable parent or caregiver).

VI. Parent/caregiver spends money impulsively, resulting in a lack of basic necessities.

VII. Parent/caregiver is emotionally immobilized (chronically or situationally) and cannot control behavior.

VIII. Parent/caregiver has addictive patterns or behaviors (e.g., addiction to substances, gambling, or computers) that are uncontrolled and leave the children in unsafe situations (e.g., failure to supervise or provide other basic care).

IX. Parent/caregiver is delusional and/or experiencing hallucinations.

X. Parent/caregiver cannot or will not control sexual offending behavior.

XI. Parent/caregiver is seriously depressed and functionally unable to meet the children’s basic needs.

Parents’ or Caregivers’ perceptions of a child are extremely negative.

“Extremely” is meant to suggest a perception that is so negative that, when present, it creates child safety concerns. In order for this threat to be checked, these types of perceptions must be present and the perceptions must be inaccurate.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

This refers to exaggerated perceptions. It is out of control because the point of view of the child is so extreme and out of touch with reality that it compels the parent or caregiver to react to or avoid the child. The perception of the child is totally unreasonable. No one in or outside the family has much influence on altering the parent’s or caregiver’s perception or explaining it away to the parent or caregiver. It is out of control.

The extreme negative perception fuels the parent’s or caregiver’s emotions and could escalate the level of response toward the child. The extreme perception may provide justification to the parent or caregiver for acting out or ignoring the child. Severe effects could occur with a vulnerable child, such as serious physical injury, extreme neglect related to medical and basic care, failure to thrive, etc.

The extreme perception is in place, not in the process of development. It is pervasive concerning all aspects of the child’s existence. It is constant and immediate in the sense of the very presence of the child in the household or in the presence of the parent or caregiver. Anything occurring in association with the standing perception could trigger the parent or caregiver to react aggressively or totally withdraw at any time and, certainly, it can be expected within the near future.

This threat is illustrated by the following examples:

I. Child is perceived to be evil, demon-possessed, deformed or deficient.

II. Child has taken on the same identity as someone the parent/caregiver hates and is fearful of or hostile toward, and the parent/caregiver transfers feelings and perceptions of the person to the child.

III. Child is considered to be punishing or torturing the parent/caregiver.

IV. One parent/caregiver is jealous of the child and believes the child is a detriment or threat to the parents’/primary caregivers’ relationship and stands in the way of their best interests.

V. Parent/caregiver sees child as an undesirable extension of self and views child with some sense of purging or punishing.

VI. Parent/caregiver sees the child as responsible and accountable for the parent/caregiver’s problems; blames the child; perceives, behaves, acts out toward the child based on a lack of reality or appropriateness because of their own needs or issues.

A family situation or behavior is such that the family does not have or use resources necessary to ensure a child's safety.

“Basic needs” refers to the family’s lack of:

I. Minimal resources to provide shelter, food, and clothing; or

II. The capacity to use resources if they were available.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria
There could be two things out of control here. There are not sufficient resources to meet the safety needs of the child. There is nothing within the family’s reach to address and control the absence of needed protective resources. The second question of control is concerned with the parent or caregiver’s lack of control related to either impulses about use of resources or problem solving concerning with use of resources.

The lack of resources must be so acute that their absence could have a severe effect right away. The absence of these basic resources could cause serious injury, serious medical or physical health problems, starvation, or serious malnutrition.

Imminence is judged by context. What context exists today concerning the lack of resources? If extreme weather conditions or sustained absence of food define the context, then the certainty of severe effects occurring soon is evident. This certainty is influenced by the specific characteristics of a vulnerable child (e.g., infant, ill, fragile, etc.).

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Family has insufficient food, clothing, or shelter affecting child safety.

II. Family finances are insufficient to support needs (e.g., medical care) that, if unmet, could result in a threat to child safety.

III. Parents/caregivers lack life management skills to properly use resources when they are available.

IV. Family is routinely using their resources for things (e.g., drugs) other than their basic care and support, thereby leaving them without their basic needs being adequately met.

V. Child’s basic needs exceed normal expectations because of unusual conditions (e.g., disabled child), and the family is unable to adequately address the needs.

One or both parents'/caregivers’ attitudes, emotions, and behavior are such that they are threatening to severely harm a child or are fearful they will abuse or neglect the child and/or request placement.

This refers to parents or caregivers who are directing threats to hurt a child. Their emotions and intentions are hostile, menacing and sufficiently believable to conclude grave concern for a child’s safety. This also refers to parents or caregivers who express anxiety and dread about their ability to control their emotions and reactions toward their child. This expression represents a “call for help.”

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

Out of control is consistent with conditions within the home having progressed to a critical point. The level of aggravation, intolerance, or dread as experienced by the parent or caregiver is serious and high. This is no passing thing the parent or caregiver is feeling. The parent or caregiver is or feels out of control. The parent or caregiver is either afraid of what he or she might do or is beyond self-limits and forbearance. A request for placement is extreme evidence with respect to a parent or caregiver’s conclusion that the child can only be safe if he or she is away from the parent or caregiver.

Presumably, the parent or caregiver who is threatening to hurt a child or is admitting to an extreme concern for mistreating a child recognizes that his or her reaction could be very serious and could result in severe effects on a vulnerable child. The parent or caregiver has concluded that the child is vulnerable to experiencing severe effects.
The parent or caregiver establishes that imminence applies. The threat to severely harm, admission or expressed anxiety is sufficient to conclude that the parent or caregiver might react toward the child at any time, and it could be in the near future.

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Parents/caregivers use specific threatening terms, including even identifying how they will harm the child or what sort of harm they intend to inflict.

II. Parents’/caregivers’ threats are plausible, believable; they may be related to specific provocative child behavior.

III. Parents/caregivers state they will maltreat.

IV. Parent/caregiver describes conditions and situations that stimulate them to think about maltreating.

V. Parent/caregiver talks about being worried about, fearful of, or preoccupied with maltreating the child.

VI. Parent/caregiver identifies things that the child does that aggravate or annoy the parent/caregiver in ways that make the parent want to attack the child.

VII. Parent/caregiver describes disciplinary incidents that have become out of control.

VIII. Parents/caregivers are distressed or “at the end of their rope,” and are asking for some relief in either specific (e.g., “take the child”) or general (e.g., “please help me before something awful happens”) terms.

IX. One parent/caregiver is expressing concerns about what the other parent/caregiver is capable of or may be doing.

One or both parents’ or caregivers’ attitudes or emotions are such that they intend(ed) to seriously hurt the child.

This refers to parents or caregivers who anticipate acting in a way that will result in pain and suffering. “Intended” suggests that before or during the time the child was mistreated, the parents’/primary caregivers’ conscious purpose was to hurt the child. This threat must be distinguished from an incident in which the parent/caregiver meant to discipline or punish the child and the child was inadvertently hurt. “Seriously” refers to an intention to cause the child to suffer. This is more about a child’s pain than any expectation to teach a child.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

This safety threat seems to contradict the criterion “out of control.” People who “plan” to hurt someone are under control. However, it is important to remember that “out of control” also includes the question of whether there is anything or anyone in the household or family that can control the safety threat. In order to meet this criterion, a judgment must be made that:

I. The acts were intentional;

II. The objective was to cause pain and suffering; and

III. Nothing or no one in the household could stop the behavior.

Parents or caregivers who intend to hurt their children can be considered to behave and have attitudes that are extreme or severe. Furthermore, the whole point of this safety threat is pain and suffering, which is consistent with the definition of severe effects.

While it is likely that often this safety threat is associated with punishment and that a judgment about imminence could be tied to that context, it seems reasonable to conclude that parents or caregivers who hold such heinous feelings toward a child could act on those at any time – soon.

This threat includes both behaviors and emotions as illustrated in the following examples:

I. The incident was planned or had an element of premeditation, and there is no remorse.

II. The nature of the incident or use of an instrument can be reasonably assumed to heighten the level of pain or injury (e.g., cigarette burns), and there is no remorse.

III. Parent’s/caregiver’s motivation to teach or discipline seems secondary to inflicting pain and/or injury, and there is no remorse.

IV. Parent/caregiver can reasonably be assumed to have had some awareness of what the result would be prior to the incident and there is no remorse.

V. Parent’s/caregiver’s actions were not impulsive, there was sufficient time and deliberation to assure that the actions hurt the child, and there is no remorse.

VI. Parent/caregiver does not acknowledge any guilt or wrongdoing, and there was intent to hurt the child.

VII. Parent/caregiver intended to hurt the child and shows no empathy for the pain or trauma the child has experienced.

VIII. Parent/caregiver may feel justified; they may express that the child deserved it, and they intended to hurt the child.

A situation, attitudes and/or behavior is such that one or both parents or caregivers lack parenting knowledge, skills, and motivation necessary to ensure a child’s safety.

This refers to basic parenting that directly affects a child’s safety. It includes parents/primary caregivers lacking the basic knowledge or skills that prevent them from meeting the child’s basic needs or the lack of motivation resulting in the parents/primary caregivers abdicating their role to meet basic needs or failing to adequately perform the parental role to meet the child’s basic needs. This inability and/or unwillingness to meet basic needs creates child safety concerns.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

When is this family condition out of control? Parents or caregivers who do not know and understand how to provide the most basic care such as feeding infants, hygiene care, or immediate supervision. The lack of knowledge is out of control because it must be consistent with capacity problems such as serious ignorance, retardation, social deprivation, and so forth. Skill, on the other hand, must be considered differently than knowledge. People can know things but not be performing or just don’t perform. The lack of aptitude must be clear. The basis for ineptness may vary. Parents or caregivers may be hampered by cognitive, social, or emotional influences. Motivation is yet another matter. People may be very capable and may have plenty of pertinent knowledge but simply don’t care or can’t generate sufficient energy to act. Remember, any of these are out of control by virtue of the behavior of the parent or caregiver and the absence of any controls internal to the family.

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Parent’s/caregiver’s intellectual capacities affect judgment and/or knowledge in ways that prevent the provision of adequate basic care.

II. Young or intellectually limited parents/primary caregivers have little or no knowledge of a child’s needs and capacity.

III. Parent’s/caregiver’s expectations of the child far exceed the child’s capacity, thereby placing the child in unsafe situations.

IV. Parent/caregiver does not know what basic care is or how to provide it (e.g., how to feed or diaper, how to protect or supervise according to the child’s age).

V. Parents’/caregivers’ parenting skills are exceeded by a child’s special needs and demands in ways that affect safety.

VI. Parent’s/caregiver’s knowledge and skills are adequate for some children’s ages and development, but not for others (e.g., able to care for an infant, but cannot control a toddler).

VII. Parent/caregiver does not want to be a parent and does not perform the role, particularly in terms of basic needs.

VIII. Parent/caregiver is averse to parenting and does not provide basic needs.

IX. Parent/caregiver avoids parenting and basic care responsibilities.

X. Parent/caregiver allows others to parent or provide care to the child without concern for the other person’s ability or capacity (whether known or unknown).

XI. Parent/caregiver does not know or does not apply basic safety measures (e.g., keeping medications, sharp objects, or household cleaners out of reach of small children).

XII. Parents/caregivers place their own needs above the children’s needs, thereby affecting the children’s safety.

XIII. Parents/caregivers do not believe the children’s disclosure of abuse/neglect even when there is a preponderance of evidence, and this affects the children’s safety.

Parents’ or caregivers’ attitudes and behavior result in overtly rejecting CPS intervention, refusing access to a child, and/or there is some indication that the caregivers will flee.

This threat is selected if the facts suggest that the family is acting in such a way in order to hide the child from CPS. Attempts to avoid CPS access to a child can include overtly rejecting all attempts by CPS to enter the home, see a child, and conduct routine initial assessment information collection. The key to parents or caregivers rejecting CPS involvement is the term “overt.” The rejection is far more than a failure to cooperate, open anger or hostility about CPS involvement or other signs of general resistance or reluctance. Rejecting CPS intervention must be blatant to meet the safety threshold criteria. This safety threat applies also when there are indications that a family will change residences, leave the jurisdiction, or refuse access to the child. In all instances when a family is avoiding any intervention by CPS, the current status of the child or the potential consequences for the child must be considered severe and immediate.

Application of the Safety Threshold

Like other safety threats, it appears when people do things deliberately that they are under control. Certainly overt rejection of CPS or an attempt to flee must be considered a deliberate act to prevent CPS from having access to a child; it is a planned-out intention to hide a child. People who solve their problems by such behavior can be considered to be out-of-control and desperate. Furthermore, parents or caregivers who need to keep secret what is happening in their family represent people who are out of control. Certainly, families who are transient for purpose of keeping things secret do not possess within their ranks anything that serves to control such behavior. Overt rejection of CPS could be an expression of a parent’s/caregiver’s rights; however, until access to the child can be gained through legal means, the conclusion about the rejection representing a safety threat remains the same.

Judging severity is speculative with respect to this safety threat. An assumption prevails concerned with a conservative point of view that parents or caregivers who overtly reject CPS intervention as defined here or who might flee are doing so for some critical reason. It is consistent with a “worst case scenario” perspective. A child might already be seriously hurt or may be in serious danger.

Imminence is obvious. Fleeing can happen immediately. The van could be packed and the family gone by this evening. People who flee are desperate and act very impulsively. Overt rejection of intervention immediately results in no access to a child and to the opportunity to determine if a child is safe.

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Parents/caregivers avoid talking with CPS or refuse to allow CPS access to the home.

II. Parents/caregivers manipulate in order to avoid any contact with CPS; make excuses for not participating; miss appointments; go through various means and methods to avoid CPS involvement and any access to a child.

III. Parents/caregivers avoid allowing CPS to see or speak with a child or do not inform CPS where the child is located.

IV. Family is highly transient.

V. Family has little tangible attachments (e.g., job, home, property, extended family).

VI. Parent/caregiver is evasive, manipulative, suspicious.

VII. There is precedence for avoidance and flight.

VIII. There are or will be civil or criminal complications that the family wants to avoid.

IX. There are other circumstances prompting flight (e.g., warrants, false identities uncovered, criminal convictions, financial indebtedness).

Parents’ or Caregivers’ attitude, behavior, or perception result in the refusal and/or failure to meet a child’s exceptional needs that affect his/her safety.
“Exceptional” refers to specific child conditions (e.g., developmental disability, blindness, physical disability, special medical needs), which are either organic or naturally induced as opposed to induced by parents or caregivers. The key here is that the parents/caregivers, by not addressing the child’s exceptional needs, will not or cannot meet the child’s basic safety needs.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

The parent’s or caregiver’s ability and/or attitude are what is out of control. If you can’t do something, you have no control over the task. If you do not want to do something and therefore do not do it, but you are the principal person who must do the task, then no control exists either. If you are not doing what is required to ensure the exceptional needs are being met daily, then nothing within the family is ensuring control.

This does not refer to parents or caregivers who do not do very well at meeting a child’s needs. This refers to specific deficiencies in parenting that must occur and are required for the “exceptional” child to be safe. The status of the child helps to clarify the potential for severe effects. Clearly, “exceptional” includes physical and mental characteristics that result in a child being highly vulnerable and unable to protect or fend for him or herself.

The needs of the child are acute, require immediate and constant attention. The attention and care is specific and can be related to severe results when left unattended. Imminence is obvious. Severe effects could be immediate to soon.

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Child has a physical or mental condition that, if untreated, is a safety threat.

II. Parent/caregiver does not recognize the condition.

III. Parent/caregiver views the condition as less serious than it is.

IV. Parent/caregiver refuses to obtain treatment for the child who threatens suicide, attempts suicide, or appears to be having suicidal thoughts.

V. Child is so withdrawn that basic needs are not being met.

VI. Parent/caregiver refuses to address the condition for religious or other reasons.

VII. Parent/caregiver lacks the capacity to fully understand the condition or the safety threat.

VIII. Parent’s/caregiver’s expectations of the child are totally unrealistic in view of the child’s condition.

IX. Parent/caregiver allows the child to live or be placed in situations in which harm is increased by virtue of the child’s condition.

The family situation is such that living arrangements seriously endanger the child’s physical health.

This threat refers to conditions in the home that are immediately life threatening or seriously endangering a child’s physical health (e.g., people discharging firearms without regard to who might be harmed or the lack of hygiene is so dramatic as to cause or potentially cause serious illness). Physical health includes serious injuries that could occur because of the condition of the living arrangement.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria
To be out of control, this safety threat does not include situations that are not in some state of deterioration. The threat to a child's safety and immediate health is obvious. There is nothing within the family network that can alter the conditions that prevail in the environment.

The living arrangements are at the end of the continuum for deplorable and immediate danger. Vulnerable children who live in such conditions could become deathly sick, experience extreme injury, or acquire life threatening or severe medical conditions.

Remaining in the environment could result in severe injuries and health repercussions today, this evening, or in the next few days.

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. The family home is being used for methamphetamine production; products and materials used in the production of methamphetamine are being stored and are accessible within the home.

II. Housing is unsanitary, filthy, infested, a health hazard.

III. The house’s physical structure is decaying, falling down.

IV. Wiring and plumbing in the house are substandard, exposed.

V. Furnishings or appliances are hazardous.

VI. Heating, fireplaces, stoves, are hazardous and accessible.

VII. There are natural or man-made hazards located close to the home.

VIII. The home has easily accessible open windows or balconies in upper stories.

IX. Occupants in the home, activity within the home, or traffic in and out of the home present a specific threat to a child’s safety.

X. People abusing substances, high, under the influence of substances particularly that can result in violent, sexual or aggressive behavior are routinely in the home, party in the home or have frequent access to the home while under the influence.

XI. People frequent the home in order to sell drugs or who are involved in other criminal behavior that might be directly threatening to a child’s safety or might attract people who are a threat to a child’s safety.

The situation is such that a child has serious physical injuries or serious physical symptoms from abuse or neglect.

The key word is “serious” and suggests that the child’s condition has immediate implications for intervention (e.g., need for medical attention, extreme physical vulnerability). The presumption related to this safety threat is there is some connection, either alleged or confirmed, between the physical injuries or physical symptoms and child abuse or neglect. During the initial contacts with a child, physical injuries and physical symptoms may be obvious (as in a present danger), but insufficient information has been gathered to connect the child’s condition to abuse or neglect. However, this item remains a safety threat until such time as the abuse or neglect as the cause of the child’s condition is ruled out.
Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

Serious physical effects of abuse or neglect are out of control when they are health- or life threatening; when routine accessible medical care is questionable; and when their existence represents a symptom of unchecked aggressive, assultive caregiving behavior. No control exists within the family to care for and nurture the child respective of the physical condition.

Severe is qualified by the nature of the child’s condition and the impending results of no protection and questionable medical care and followup.

Imminence is qualified by whether the child’s condition will not improve or worsen if left unattended.

Note: Many of the examples are also consistent with present danger. The injuries identified in the examples would be apparent at first contact. These remain here in this listing to emphasize the importance of addressing serious injuries to children as a result of abuse or neglect, the need for immediate medical care, and the relationship of these kinds of concerns to other family conditions and behaviors that represent a continuing state of danger – impending danger. Some of the examples, such as failure to thrive, may not be apparent at the initial contact.

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Child has severe injuries.

II. Child has multiple/different kinds of injuries (e.g., burns and bruises).

III. Child has injuries to head or face.

IV. Injuries appear to be premeditated; injuries appear to have occurred as a result of an attack, assault or out-of-control reactions (e.g., serious bruising across a child’s back as if beaten in an out-of-control disciplinary act).

V. Injuries appear associated with the use of an instrument that exaggerates method of discipline (e.g., coat hanger, extension cord, kitchen utensil, etc.).

VI. Child has physical symptoms from abuse or neglect that require immediate medical treatment.

VII. Child has physical symptoms from abuse or neglect that require continual medical treatment.

VIII. Child appears to be suffering from failure to thrive.

IX. Child is malnourished.

The situation is such that a child shows serious emotional symptoms and/or lacks behavioral control that result in provoking dangerous reactions in parents or caregivers.

Key words are “serious” and “lack of behavioral control.” “Serious” suggests that the child’s condition has immediate implications for intervention (e.g., extreme emotional vulnerability, suicidal thoughts or actions). “Lacks behavioral control” describes the provocative child who stimulates reactions in others.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

The condition of the child is what is out of control. The child is a source of danger to him or herself. The damage has been done, and the child cannot control it. Family members cannot control the child with respect to preventing what the child may do that could result in severe effects. Additionally, caregivers and even others can be so provoked by the child’s behavior that they are not able or wanting to control their reactions against the child.

The child’s emotional and behavioral conditions are so extreme that the child is seriously disturbed and self-destructive or behaves in ways that others will be a danger to him or her. The results could be suicide, self-mutilation, being physically abused, etc.

The child’s emotion and behavior are so profound that he or she is an immediate danger to him or herself without protection. The severe effects could be immediate.

The child’s condition may or may not be a result of previous maltreatment. This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Child threatens suicide, attempts suicide, or appears to be having suicidal thoughts.

II. Child’s emotional state is such that immediate mental health/medical care is needed.

III. Child is capable of and likely to self-mutilate.

IV. Child is so withdrawn that basic needs are not being met.

The situation is such that a child is fearful of the home situation or people within the home.

“The home situation” includes specific family members and/or other conditions in the living situation. Other people in the home refers to those who either live in the home or frequent the home so often that a child daily expects that the person may be there or show up. (e.g., frequent presence of known drug users in the household).

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

Do you know when fear is out of control? Have you ever felt that way? Can you imagine a child being so afraid that his or her fear is out of control? Can you imagine a family situation in which there is nothing or no one within the family that will allay the child’s fear and assure a sense of security? To meet this criterion, the child’s fear must be obvious, extreme, and related to some perceived danger that child feels or experiences.

By trusting the level of fear that is consistent with the safety threat, it is reasonable to believe that the child’s terror is well-founded in something that is occurring in the home that is extreme with respect to terrorizing the child. It is reasonable to believe that the source of the child’s fear could result in severe effects.

Whatever is causing the child’s fear is active, currently occurring, and an immediate concern of the child. Imminence applies.

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Child demonstrates emotional and/or physical responses indicating fear of the living situation or of people within the home (e.g., crying, inability to focus, nervousness, withdrawal).

II. Child expresses fear and describes people and circumstances that are reasonably threatening.

III. Child recounts previous experiences that form the basis for fear.

IV. Child’s fearful response escalates at the mention of home, people, or circumstances associated with reported incidents.

V. Child describes personal threats that seem reasonable and believable.

Because of perception, attitude or emotion, parents or caregivers cannot, will not, or do not explain a child's injuries or threatening family conditions.

Parents/caregivers do not or are unable or unwilling to explain maltreating conditions or injuries that are consistent with the facts. An unexplained serious injury is a present danger and remains so until an explanation alters the seriousness of not knowing how the injury occurred or by whom.

Application of the Safety Threshold Criteria

You cannot control what you do not understand – what is not explained or explained adequately. A family situation in which a child is seriously injured without a reasonable explanation is a family situation that is out of control.

Typically, this safety threat occurs in connection with a serious injury, so the severity question is already answered. Research (such as that associated with the Battered Child Syndrome) supports a concern that one serious unexplained or nonaccidental injury reasonably may be followed by another.

When the cause of an injury is not known, then what might be operating could result in another injury in the near future.

Note: An unexplained injury at initial contact should be considered a present danger. If the injury remains unexplained at the conclusion of an initial assessment/investigation, the lack of an acceptable explanation must be considered an impending danger.

This threat is illustrated in the following examples:

I. Parents/caregivers acknowledge the presence of injuries and/or conditions but plead ignorant as to how they occurred.

II. Parents/caregivers express concern for the child’s condition but are unable to explain it.

III. Parents/caregivers appear to be totally competent and appropriate with the exception of:
   A. The physical or sexual abuse; and
   B. The lack of an explanation; or
   C. An explanation that makes no sense.

IV. Parents/caregivers accept the presence of injuries and conditions but do not explain them or seem concerned.

V. Sexual abuse has occurred in which:
   A. The child discloses;
   B. Family circumstances, including opportunity, may or may not be consistent with sexual abuse; and
   C. The parents/primary caregivers deny the abuse, blame the child, or offer no explanation or an explanation that is unbelievable.

VI. “Battered Child Syndrome” case circumstances are present, and the parents/primary caregivers appear to be competent, but the child’s symptoms do not match the parents/primary caregivers’ appearance, and there is no explanation for the child’s symptoms.

VII. Parents’/caregivers’ explanations are far-fetched.

VIII. Facts observed by child welfare staff and/or supported by other professionals that relate to the incident, injury, and/or conditions contradict the parents’/primary caregivers’ explanations.

IX. History and circumstantial information are incongruent with the parents’/primary caregivers’ explanation of the injuries and conditions.

X. Parents’/caregivers’ verbal expressions do not match their emotional responses, and there is not a believable explanation.

One or both parents or caregivers has a child out of his/her care due to child abuse or neglect, or has lost a child due to termination of parental rights.

*This safety threat has been added in the Oregon Child Welfare Safety Model.

This safety threat occurs in family situations in which the parent has previously abused and/or neglected a child(ren), and the behavior or conditions that resulted in that abuse or neglect were serious enough to require removal, and the behavior or condition has not been remediated. The behavior or conditions have not allowed for reunification with the child or children that were removed.

Application of the safety threshold criteria:

This situation meets the safety threshold criteria in that the severity of the behavior, condition, or circumstance is such that it requires current removal of the child(ren) or has required permanent removal of the parent’s child(ren) through relinquishment prior to termination or termination of parental rights. The situation is out of control in that the behavior, condition, or circumstance resulting in the removal of children has not changed. Exposure of a child to this severe and out-of-control behavior condition or circumstance that has not changed requires immediate intervention.

Appendix 3.5: Justifying a Parent/Caregiver can and will protect Justifying a Parent/Caregiver Can and Will Protect

A Reference Guide

The following are examples of family situations that should support the determination that a parent or caregiver can and will protect the child against threats to child safety. In some situations, more than one of these conditions would be necessary to support and confirm a parent’s/caregiver’s capacity to protect.

I. Parent/caregiver has demonstrated the ability to protect the child in the past while under similar circumstances and family conditions.

II. Parent/caregiver has made appropriate arrangements that have been confirmed to ensure the child is not left alone with the perpetrator. This may include having another adult present within the home who is aware of the protective concerns and is able to protect the child.

III. Parent/caregiver can specifically articulate a plan to protect the child, such as the parent/caregiver leaving when a situation escalates, calling the police in the event the restraining order is violated, etc.

IV. Parent/caregiver believes the child’s report of abuse or neglect and is supportive of the child.

V. Parent/caregiver who are healthy, mobile, strong OR manage/adapt to any physical barriers.

VI. Parent/caregiver does not have significant individual needs that might affect the safety of the child, such as severe depression, lack of impulse control, medical needs, etc.

VII. Parent/caregiver has asked, demands, expects the perpetrating adult to leave the household and can assure the separation is maintained effectively.

VIII. Parent/caregiver has adequate resources necessary to meet the child’s basic needs.

IX. Parent/caregiver is capable of understanding the specific threat to the child and the need to protect.

X. Parent/caregiver has adequate knowledge and skill to fulfill caregiving responsibilities and tasks. This may involve considering the parent’s/caregiver’s ability to meet any exceptional needs that the child might have.

XI. Parent/caregiver is cooperating with the caseworker’s efforts to provide services and assess the specific needs of the family.

XII. There is no precedence for the current abuse or neglect in respect to type and severity, and the parent/caregiver demonstrates appropriate concern and intolerance.

XIII. Parent/caregiver is emotionally able to carry out a plan and/or to intervene to protect the child (parent/caregiver not incapacitated by fear of the perpetrator).

XIV. Parent/caregiver has legally separated from the perpetrator and has/does demonstrate behavior to suggest he or she will not reunite until circumstance warrants or they are proceeding with divorce action.

XV. Parent/caregiver displays concern for the child and the child’s experience and is intent on emotionally protecting the child.
XVI. Parent/caregiver and child have strong bond, and parent/caregiver is clear that the number one priority is the well-being of the child.

XVII. The parent/caregiver consistently expresses belief that the perpetrator is in need of help and that he or she supports the perpetrator getting help. This is parent’s/caregiver’s point of view without being prompted by CPS.

XVIII. While the parent/caregiver may be having a difficult time believing the other person would abuse or neglect the child, the parent/caregiver describes the child as believable and trustworthy.

XIX. Parent/caregiver does not place responsibility on the child for the problems of the family.
Protective Action

(Note: This Protective Action is merely a sample of how to document a protective action as provided by the Action for Child Protection Curriculum.)

Worker Name: Tiny Workington

Case Name: Vincent, Naomi

Date: October 25, 2006

Description/explanation of safety threat:

Protective action has been taken to assure Sheila’s safety while the assessment is being completed. It has been confirmed that Sheila has a broken right arm from what appears to be a twist. She has a history of two previous breaks (arms). The parents cannot explain the injuries. Although they appear concerned, the age of the child and the seriousness of the injuries (which have been described by Dr. Simms as appearing to be nonaccidental) indicate the need for protective action until such time as more information can be gathered and the assessment can be completed.

Specifics of Protective Action, including caregiver contact that is allowed during the Protective Action:

Because the child has been injured while in the care of the parent; the parents cannot explain the injuries; and the injuries appear to be nonaccidental, an out-of-home protective action is necessary until more information can be gathered in the CPS assessment. The family identified a relative, Mrs. Green, Clara’s mother. ODHS was able to do an emergency certification, and Mrs. Green is now the temporary out-of-home care provider for Sheila. The Vincents will visit the child daily from 3 - 5 p.m. at Mrs. Green’s. Mrs. Green will take Sheila to Dr. Simms’ office for appointments that have been set. Additionally, Mrs. Green will report any incident involving the Vincents attempting to depart from the protective action.

Justification of the suitability of safety service providers:

I have spoken at length with Mrs. Green, Clara’s mother, who lives at 1325 Oak (approximately 10 miles from the Vincents). Her phone number is 333-3333. She is a retired teacher and lives alone. She has cared for Sheila from time to time and is willing to care for her 24 hours a day for up to a month. Mrs. Green communicates effectively; she is rational, calm and seems reliable. She shares CPS’s concern for the lack of explanation for injuries even though she has no explanation either. She has indicated adamantly that she can care for the child without interference from Phil or Clara. She expresses no concern about keeping Sheila safe. She is not interested in financial support. There is no CPS or criminal record on Mrs. Green, and she met the criteria for emergency certification. She is physically healthy and able. Her home is adequate. She understands this is a temporary measure.

How CPS will provide oversight of the protective action:

I will call Mrs. Green routinely and will visit her home weekly. I will attempt to visit sometimes during the time the Vincents are visiting the child. The protective action will be modified if a more intrusive action is necessary.

Provide rationale why protective action will work and is the least intrusive:

This plan will ensure Sheila’s safety given that her care will be accomplished by a responsible caretaker 24 hours a day.
Mrs. Green demonstrates sufficient strength and commitment to see the plan work. The Vincents are agreeable and cooperative. They have indicated they prefer this plan rather than Sheila being placed with strangers. They understand that this action will be in place until the assessment can be completed and it is determined if an ongoing safety plan is necessary.

Appendix 3.8: Domestic Violence and the six domains
Domestic Violence and the 6 Domains

Critical note: The dynamics of domestic violence are based on the batterer maintaining power and control over his or her partner. Challenges to that power and control, including a CPS assessment, may escalate the abuse. The risk of a batterer seriously harming or killing the adult victim and children increases when the victim tries to leave. Given this, plan your assessment carefully when domestic violence is known to be an issue. Always consider that the assessment may increase the risk to the child and adult victims.

- Interview the alleged adult victim first, whenever possible, without the alleged batterer present, and in the victim’s first language. Also, it is best to interview the alleged adult victim without the alleged batterer’s knowledge, to increase safety and get the best chance to gather relevant information. If the alleged batterer is present, do separate interviews that they cannot overhear.
- If you cannot separate the partners, focus on issues other than the domestic violence. Resistance to separate interviews with adults may be an indication of domestic violence and a batterer’s control.
- If you believe, or it becomes apparent, that an interview with an alleged batterer (or another family member) will compromise the safety of any family member, consult with a supervisor to request an exception to interviewing the alleged perpetrator in order to allow for safety planning or for the situation to become safe enough for an interview. Always listen to the alleged victim’s concerns and safety plan around those concerns if at all possible.

Identifying the predominant domestic violence batterer

There are situations in which there are allegations of domestic violence against both parents. Domestic violence victims may fight back and be charged with assault. Look beyond the initial incident to assess the family dynamics and to determine if one party is the predominant aggressor. Assess for patterns of power and control in allegations of domestic violence that appear to be mutual violence, or where you believe the adult victim has been arrested. Specifically look for:

- Are injuries defensive wounds (bite marks, scratches etc.)?
- Is one partner afraid of the other?
- What was the intent and level of the violence? (was it self-defense, retaliation, meant to punish or control)
- Who is effectively exerting control over the other? (who makes the rules, who is in charge of money, etc.)
- What is the impact of the violence?
• Who has historically been the dominant aggressor regardless of who the first aggressor was in the current incident?

It is important to remember that it is common for the alleged adult victim to claim responsibility for the violence and for the alleged batterer to be blaming.

Trauma-informed practice

It is essential for the safety of the child that we create a partnership with the alleged adult victim. They have usually been working to keep the child safe and they know the dangers. Also the stability of their relationship with the child is a significant, long-term protective factor.

We can encourage partnership by using trauma-informed practices. These practices center on creating safety first, while promoting choice, agency, connection, and collaboration. It is important to support alleged adult victims in making decisions for themselves, to acknowledge them as the experts on their own experience, and to offer them relationships that are true partnerships. It is essential to be trustworthy in offering our services and supports.

Using the current best practice of Forensic Experiential Trauma Interviewing (FETI)\(^1\), may help us gather information in ways that empower and calm people who have been traumatized, so they are able to give narratives that are more accurate, coherent, consistent, and persuasive.

If at all possible, we do not want to re-victimize anyone with our intervention. It is counter-productive. Trauma survivors have to feel safe before they will share their experiences in a meaningful way.

Trauma survivors speak more fully and freely when they feel that they are talking to someone who:

• is able to listen;
• can tolerate what they have to share;
• can really understand what they are sharing; and,
• can imagine that what they are sharing is true and valid

Body language is especially important. Distancing, skeptical or even faintly critical expressions will be detected and will shut down sharing.

Research suggests that first responders need to re-evaluate their reliance on their instincts when dealing with trauma victims. Nonverbal cues to deception are relatively nonexistent. Victims can seem upset or calm, even happy. In fact trauma victims can display the same reactions generally attributed to liars—raised blood pressure, increased heart rate, sweaty palms, etc.

\(^1\) Russell Strand, U.S. Military Police School, Chief, Behavioral Sciences Education and Training Division
In domestic violence situations we are more likely to find that people have experienced chronic trauma. This can actually change brain function. When we are in a normal, calm state our brains can handle abstract thought and do long term thinking, as we become aroused our thinking becomes concrete and focused on days or hours. This is a state we can recognize in ourselves when we respond to critical child safety reports. If we are alarmed, we become emotional and focused on hours and minutes. When we experience fear, we become reactive and think in minutes and seconds. When traumatized, we can become reflexive and lose all sense of time. Keep in mind that trauma will impact the ability of victims to form a clear and detailed narrative.

Batterers however are not traumatized or stressed out, in fact they often experience chemical changes in their brains that are rewarding. Batterers are usually using logic to go through practiced steps focused on overcoming resistance. They have a totally different brain state from the victim. So their reports are likely to be more strategic, detailed, consistent, factual, and unemotional; in other words batterers’ memories and narratives usually seem to make more sense.

Domestic Violence and the 6 Domains of OSM

The Oregon Child Welfare Department has adopted the Safe & Together™ Model\(^2\) for guiding our work when domestic violence is part of our child abuse cases. The model’s clear focus on the batterer’s behavior patterns and their connection to the harm to the child is very compatible with the Oregon Safety Model.

The Department, in rule, defines “Domestic violence” as a pattern of coercive behavior, which can include physical, sexual, economic, and emotional abuse, which an individual uses against a past or current intimate partner to gain power and control in a relationship.

The following chart outlines points of intersection between the Six Domains of the Oregon Safety Model and the Safe & Together™ Model.\(^3\) It has prompts to consider when documenting three types of cases: those with domestic violence allegations; those without current domestic violence allegations, but involving a person with a prior history of battering; and cases with no identified current or prior domestic violence.

\(^2\) The Safe and Together Model was created by David Mandel & Associates. For more information on the model, go to www.endingviolence.com.

\(^3\) The chart is adapted from the chart written by David Mandel and Associates in collaboration with the Florida Coalition Against Domestic Violence, 2014. The project was funded by Children’s Justice Act Program, administered by the Children’s Bureau, Administration on Children, Youth and Families and was sponsored by the Florida Coalition Against Domestic Violence and the State of Florida, Department of Children and Families.
OSM Domain 1: What is the extent of the maltreatment?

In domestic violence cases look for patterns of power and control used by the batterer. Be sure to identify their controlling tactics and the immediate emotional, social and physical impacts of the batterer’s use of those tactics on each child in the family.

Related to the child maltreatment, what is the batterer’s pattern of coercive control and actions taken to harm the child? (1st and 2nd Critical Components)

To ensure accurate assessment, safety planning and appropriate partnership with the family, the batterer should be identified as the sole source of the child maltreatment related to the domestic violence. Looking at the pattern of coercive control ensures that the assessment of the impact of the batterer’s behavior on the child is broader than just “Was the child physically harmed?” or “Did he or she see or hear the incident?” The batterer’s pattern often directly and/or indirectly involves, targets, and/or impacts the child.

- How has prior abuse impacted the current incident of maltreatment?
- What are the coercive tactics the alleged batterer has used against the child/ren? For example, belittling and name calling, isolation, berating or other intimidating behaviors, sexual abuse.
- How have these behaviors manifested over time? How long has this been going on? How often does it happen? Is the frequency increasing? How predictable is the maltreatment?
- Is there a reason to believe the child might intervene or is intervening to protect the non-offending parent?
- Has the batterer killed or severely harmed a family member, even an extended family member or pet?
- Has the child’s pet or other significant emotional support been threatened?
- Is the child in close proximity to aggressive or violent behavior, e.g. throwing objects near a child, beating a partner who is holding a child, etc.?
- Has the batterer taken the children or threatened to abduct or otherwise endanger the children?
- Have they threatened to remove the children from their partner’s care in any other way?
- Has the batterer used the child or child’s behavior as an excuse for abuse?
- Does the batterer use the child as a tool to manipulate their partner? How?
- Does the batterer involve the children in the abuse of their partner, e.g., family meetings, witnessing punishment, etc.? If so how?
- Has the batterer destroyed the child’s belongings?

What has been the physical and emotional impact of the batterer’s behavior on the child? (4th Critical Component).

The strongest documentation will make clear the nexus between the batterer’s behavior and its impact on the child. For example, “Because of father’s multiple physical assaults against mother, the family has been dislocated four times in the last four years. Twice the mother fled to a shelter to protect the children from more violence, once the family was evicted because of the batterer’s violence, and another time the batterer stalked the family, who had been living in safe stable housing, and forced them to move in with his family.”

A picture of the impact on the child may include assessing the following:
- How did the batterer’s behavior disrupt the child’s daily routine, e.g. arrival of the police or fleeing to shelter?
- What was the impact of any verbal statements made by the batterer before during and after any maltreatment? For example, assaults with verbal threats to kill might be more frightening.
What was the immediate adverse impact on the child’s:
- Physical well-being: ability to function, sleep, toileting, eating, etc.
- Emotional well-being: ability to regulate, non-reactive, shut down, tearful, distracted, distant, angry, aggressive, easily startled
- Social functioning: withdrawn at school or from friends, difficulty making friends, acting out at school, changes in social behaviors

- Were any of these impacts affected by previous trauma or threats?
- Did the child act to protect their siblings, pets, or others?

Do substance abuse, mental health, culture, and/or other socio-economic issues significantly impact the extent of the maltreatment? (5th Critical Component)

- Was the batterer drinking or using other drugs around any maltreatment? Did that use escalate the fear and/or the level of harm?
- Did the batterer’s experience with weapons, martial arts, military service, or gangs increase the level of fear and/or harm during any maltreatment?
- Did the batterer use race, gender, disability, immigration status, sexual orientation, etc. as a tactic of abuse during any maltreatment?

How has the batterer’s pattern of coercive control impacted the adult victim’s ability to promote the safety and well-being of the children? (1st and 3rd Critical Components)

To fully assess the impact of the batterer’s pattern on the child, there needs to be a “multiple pathways to harm” framework. The focus on the physical danger and trauma needs to be expanded to include the following question:
- How is the child being impacted by the batterer’s influence over the adult victim’s adult functioning, parenting and discipline?

What has been the full spectrum of the victim’s efforts to manage child safety and well-being? (3rd Critical Component)

Make sure you use a comprehensive lens and give victim credit for placating and day-to-day actions as protective capacities regarding the maltreatment.
- What basic care activities were being performed by the adult victim prior and during any maltreatment incidents?
- What were the adult victim’s specific strategies to minimize, reduce, and prevent any maltreatment from occurring?
- What did the adult victim do during any maltreatment to reduce the physical and emotional danger to the child?
- After incidents of maltreatment, what did the adult victim do to take care of the physical and emotional needs of the child?
Overall, how does the adult victim’s behavior buffer the child from trauma and support their healing and/or normal development? For example: “The victim engaged in age appropriate play with her child, attempted to defuse her partner’s anger and abusive behavior through avoidance of his questions, placating him by providing him with a beer and engaging him in a conversation about chores, redirecting the conversation, reminding her partner about their son's needs, preparing dinner for the family, defending her parenting and her son's participation in age appropriate play. She also role modeled resistance to abuse by standing up to his verbal abuse and actively tried to remove herself and her son from her partner's abusive behaviors but was prevented from doing so by her partner's intimidating and threatening behavior. While mother engaged in a series of efforts to shield her son from his fathers' verbal abuse, threats and intimidation, father continued to choose to expose his child to his verbal abuse, threats and intimidation of his mother. Mother's age appropriate play and efforts to shield her son from his father's abuse are clear strengths as a parent. She appears to be actively engaged in supporting her child's safety and well-being.”

In this area you need to make sure that protective efforts are contextualized to the situation and that the victim’s efforts are valued for what was possible for them to do before, during or after any maltreatment versus holding them responsible for the ultimate outcomes of the incidents, which are the sole responsibility of the batterer.

When domestic violence is not a part of the current allegation:
Other maltreatments, such as physical abuse, sexual abuse, or neglect, may be perpetrated by a caregiver who is abusive to their adult partner, and therefore part of their overall pattern of abuse. Using a lens that focuses on patterns of coercive control can expose the roots of the maltreatment. Moreover, maltreatment perpetrated by an adult domestic violence victim may be the direct or indirect result of the domestic violence. Consider what the victim’s parenting, day-to-day functioning and disciplinary strategies would be if they were free from the batterer’s coercive control.

When there is prior history of domestic violence perpetration but none currently alleged:
- Is coercive control currently occurring but not the reason for the referral?
- Is the batterer, whether in the home or not, still negatively influencing the family functioning through fear, intimidation, third party contact, or other forms of control?
Chapter 3 • Appendix 3.8: Domestic Violence and the six domains

OSM Domain 2: What are surrounding circumstances?

In domestic violence cases look for the circumstances that accompany the maltreatment, which would be the power & control that one parent is exercising over the other. Also identify how this pattern of behavior is impacting maltreatment. We want to be careful not to use this information to excuse behavior or offer inappropriate interventions. Remember that the use of a pattern of coercive and controlling behavior is a choice.

What is the batterer’s pattern of coercive control directed toward the adult partner? (1st Critical Components)

The Safe & Together™ Model offers a clear focus on the broader pattern of the batterer’s behavior, including the intent behind the abuse, the behaviors leading up to the abuse, actions and statements of responsibility for the abuse.

It is critical, for this domain, to research and document the perpetrator’s pattern of behavior in the current relationship, as well as history regarding coercive and controlling tactics used by the perpetrator in other relationships.

- Does the batterer use tactics of coercive control, sexual assault, stalking, or assaultive behaviors outside this relationship, either in another current relationship or in the past?
- Does the batterer have a history of violent and threatening behavior to others outside of the family? e.g., gang involvement, behavior toward other interveners
- Does the batterer engage in sanctioned violence as part of their work or other career? e.g. martial arts, military or police
- Do you have a full picture of similar prior incidents in this relationship?
- How has the batterer targeted the adult survivor over time? How long has this been going on? How often does it happen? Is the frequency increasing? How predictable is the coercive and controlling behavior targeting the adult survivor?
- How has prior coercive and controlling behavior impacted the current situation?
- What are the coercive tactics the alleged batterer has used? For example, belittling and name calling, unreasonable and ongoing jealousy, sexual abuse, pet abuse physically preventing their partner from leaving the house, isolating the adult victim from family and friends, controlling or sabotaging transportation, violence, etc.
- What is the potential lethality of the alleged batterer’s behavior? For example, are they extremely jealous, is the abuse escalating, are there any verbal or non-verbal threats to kill anyone or to commit suicide, do they have access to weapons, have they used strangulation, do they use stalking behaviors, are they out of work and not looking for employment, did they use violence against their partner when she was pregnant, is there a step-child in the home?

- Have they threatened the safety of family, friends, pets or others?
- Have they made any other threats?
- How does the batterer’s explanation help us understand the extent of their control and their pattern of child maltreatment?
- How does the batterer’s explanation help us understand the extent of their control and their pattern of abuse in regards to the adult victim?
- How do the circumstances of the abuse help us understand and further our assessment of the family functioning? For example, if this incident of physical violence targeted the caregiver’s contact with her family, what else can we learn about how the batterer sabotages contact with family and perhaps other outside contacts, including schools and medical providers?

Do substance abuse, mental health, culture, and/or other socio-economic issues significantly impact surrounding circumstances? (5th Critical Component)

- How does the batterer’s overall functioning affect dangerousness? For example, for a batterer who also is an alcoholic: are they more dangerous when drinking? Does abuse escalate or subside when sober?
- How has the batterer’s drinking or use of other drugs over time impacted the family functioning and levels of fear and control? For example, while a batterer may not become violent every time he drinks, the family may get scared of the potential for violence every time the batterer drinks.
- Does the batterer use violence and abuse to facilitate access to money for drugs and alcohol?
- Does the batterer use violence and control to deflect questions about the consequences of substance use?
- Does the batterer use substance abuse, victim blaming or other rationalizations as excuses for the violence?
- Is the batterer in a profession or a position in the community that would make family members more isolated, afraid to access resources, or fearful that outside involvement would escalate the situation, i.e., police, judge, child welfare staff?
- Are there cultural or socio-economic factors that may help us understand the unique tactics the batterer is using in this family and/or make the adult and child victims more vulnerable, e.g. immigration status, past criminal behavior or convictions, past child welfare history, language barriers, physical disability, cultural and religious beliefs, medical condition, criminal history, being a member of a group that has been historically discriminated against, or having a substance abuse or mental health history?

- Did the batterer use race, gender, disability, immigration status, sexual orientation, etc. as a tactic of abuse in their pattern of coercive control toward the adult partner?
- Is there an economic imbalance between the batterer and the adult victim that allows for more control?
- What aspects of the batterer’s culture, community, or family system tolerate the batterer’s abusive behavior or hold the abuser accountable for it?
- What aspects of the adult victim’s cultural, community or family system support or undermine their protective efforts?

Cultural factors may make it harder to label and identify the batterer’s overall patterns of coercive control. If a community identifies with strict norms it may be hard to see the batterer’s pattern. Similarly within the context of home schooling it may be difficult to see a wider pattern of isolation. Cultural values that allow extremely high expectations of women as parents and low ones of men as parents will make it harder to identify control e.g. “he’s not making her stay with the children. That’s what women do.” or “He’s a good dad because he’s never physically harmed them.” Cultural norms about physical discipline of children may make it harder to identify the batterer’s pattern of abuse as well.

What is the full spectrum of the victim’s efforts to manage child safety and well-being, in spite of the batterer’s pattern of coercive control? (3rd Critical Component)

- What does the adult victim do to maintain the child’s well-being and safety despite the abuse? For example,
  - making sure the house is clean before the abuser comes home; getting kids to school on time in spite of being kept up all night
- How does the adult victim’s behavior provide day-to-day stability and nurturance for the child, in spite of the climate of coercive control?

As with all assessment of protective efforts, this needs to be comprehensive and contextualized. A victim’s continuing relationship with a batterer, reluctance to call police or get a protective order does not mean she has not engaged in significant and meaningful protective efforts. For example, getting kids away, placating, keeping lines of communication open, or staying because he has threatened to hurt children if she leaves. These efforts should be validated and used as a foundation for future safety planning for the children.

When domestic violence is not part of the allegation:
- Are there indicators of the perpetration of patterns of coercive control, including actions taken to harm the child?
- If there are indicators, how are these patterns relevant to the reported maltreatment and family functioning?

When there is prior history of domestic violence perpetration but none currently alleged:
- What are the connections between the current allegation and any prior documented incidents of domestic violence?
- Is coercive control currently occurring but not immediately evident as the reason for the referral?
- Is the batterer, whether in the home or not, still negatively influencing the family functioning through fear, intimidation, third part contact, or other forms of control?
- How has the prior domestic violence perpetration affected current family functioning? For example, have the mother and child been forced to live in hiding for several years.
- After completing batterer intervention, is the batterer still using forms of coercive control that are not physical, e.g., threats, name-calling, isolation, financial manipulation, stalking.

OSM Domain 3: How does the child function on a daily basis?

In domestic violence cases look for the on-going and pervasive impacts of the batter’s use of coercive and controlling tactics within the family on the child’s overall development. After an in-depth assessment if you cannot identify significant negative impacts, look for resiliency factors and what is contributing to them. Remember to focus on their day to day life.

What has been the overall impact of the batterer’s on-going behavior pattern on the children? (4th Critical Component)
- How has child’s normal, healthy development been impacted by the batterer’s behavior pattern?
- What are the child’s feelings toward the batterer, or how have their feelings changed toward them, as result of the on-going pattern of abuse?
- Has the child’s sense of a safe and stable home environment been compromised, as a result of the batterer’s behavior?
- Have any diagnoses or concerns about the child’s behavior, mood or development factored in the potential role of the batterer’s behavior?
- Is the child rejecting or blaming the adult victim because of the batterer’s coercion or manipulation?
- Is the child avoiding or unable to participate in developmentally appropriate activities?
- Is the child over-compensating, e.g., doing extremely well in school despite barriers, being compliant, never a problem, etc.?
- Is the child aligned with the batterer, either out of fear or for advantage?
- Is the child’s ability to function on a daily basis substantially impaired by being in a constant state of fear?
- Is the child compliant, anxious, or worried about following the rules?
- Does the child think they have to take on the role of protecting their siblings or the adult victim?
- How has the child’s academic performance been impacted by the batterer’s behavior?
- Has the child’s ability to connect with family or friends been impacted by the batterer or the batterer’s behavior?
- Has the child’s treatment or treatment recommendations from medical professionals’ or therapists’ been interfered with by the batterer?

In domestic violence cases, the meaningful completion of this domain requires connecting what is known from the first two domains about the batterer’s overall pattern of coercive control with the negative impact on the children’s daily functioning. For example: “As a result of these behaviors by the batterer, the children have lost significant time in school (20 days last year), been forced to change schools once and have gone from being high performing students to being on academic probation. One of the children has been suspended for fighting at the most recent school.”

How substance abuse, mental health, culture, socio-economic issues intersect with domestic violence to impact child functioning? (5th Critical Component)

Domestic violence intersects with issues of race, class, gender, immigration status, religion, substance abuse, and mental health, among other issues. Child functioning is shaped by all these things. Some examples are:
- A gay or transgendered child whose parent is a domestic violence batterer that is homophobic and has rigid gender expectations may be targeted
- An undocumented mother partnered with a citizen or legal immigrant may be very susceptible to threats of deportation and her children may fear separation from her.
A child’s delinquency, mental health or substance abuse issues may become the identified problem instead of the batterer’s chronic domestic violence.
- In a privileged family a child may hide abuse to protect the family image.
- School officials may respond differently to a child of color acting aggressively because of their parent’s violence than a Caucasian child.
- Over-controlling behavior might be mistaken for a caring response to a child with disabilities?

<tbody>
<tr>

<tr>

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In many cases with domestic violence, the children are functioning well in some or all areas of their life. This is often the result of the adult victim’s and other people’s protective efforts. In this, as in all areas, the protective efforts need to be evaluated by a standard that values the victim’s day-to-day efforts in the context of what is reasonable given the batterer’s pattern of control.

In cases without an obvious allegation or history of domestic violence:
- Does the child display any indicators (aggressive behavior, withdrawal, trauma symptoms) of an unidentified pattern of domestic violence?
- Could a child’s academic and/or social issues be connected to frequent moves, or other potential consequences of domestic violence?

When there is prior domestic violence but none in the current referral:
- How might the batterer’s pattern still be impacting the family functioning?
- Could current or prior exposure to the batterer’s behavior explain any of the concerns related to child functioning?

OSM Domain 4: How does the adult function on a daily basis?

In cases of domestic violence look for how the batterer’s need to be in control is impacting the way they present themselves publicly and privately. Also identify how their use of controlling tactics impacts their partner’s abilities to function. Remember to focus on each parent’s day-to-day life.

What is the batterer’s overall pattern of coercive control, actions taken to harm the child, and the role of substance abuse, mental health, culture, and other socio-economic factors? (1st, 2nd and 5th Critical Components)
- How are the batterer’s choices outside social norms?
- How is the batterer’s dishonesty impacting their ability to develop sincere and meaningful relationships, both within the family and in the community?

- How might the batterer’s current or prior abusive behavior be connected to their current adult functioning:
  - Employment: Has the batterer lost a job as result of abusive behavior?
  - Social Functioning: Who is part of the batterer’s support and kinship network? Do members of their network support positive change or not? What is the history of damage to social and family relationships created by the batterer’s abusive behavior?
  - Criminal behavior: Is the domestic violence part of larger pattern of anti-social or criminal behavior? If so, does this increase risk and danger?
  - Day-to-day functioning: Are there cognitive, mental health or substance abuse concerns? If so, are they associated with increased danger?
  - Housing/homelessness: Has the domestic violence led to housing instability or homelessness? Is the batterer dependent on the adult victim or others for housing?

Racism and other forms of discrimination can increase the negative overall assessment of a batterer. For example, an overall assessment of a batterer who is poor or a person of color may be more negative than someone who comes from a higher socio-economic status or is Caucasian. Articulation of the specific behaviors related to domestic violence, makes it less likely that assessment will be biased by cultural, racial or economic stereotypes. Similarly the assessment of the adult functioning of the victim can be influenced by racism, homophobia or other forms of discrimination.

- When English is not the primary language is the overall adult functioning assessment incomplete or inappropriately negative, e.g. being confused with lower intellectual levels or poorer behavior management?
- Is the batterer playing on racial or gender stereotypes to increase their control over the adult victim?
- Are service providers overlooking coercive control issues by dismissing possible warning signs as norms within a culture?
- Is the batterer using their perception of cultural norms as an excuse?
- Are service providers and others taking an overly pathologized view of the adult victim because of racism or other forms of bias?

Practice Tip: Remember that batterer’s are often practiced liars and will use their tactics on you. For example, they can act overly appreciative, minimize, triangulate, cry, challenge your experience, try to turn the focus onto their partner, threaten, etc.
Substance abuse by the batterer and its impact on adult functioning needs to be factored into the assessment. Substance abuse is often not integrated into the overall assessment of the domestic violence because it is perceived primarily as an adult functioning issue. Here are some things to assess:

- How has the batterer used violence and control to support the substance abuse, e.g. stealing rent money to use?
- Has the focus on the substance abuse eclipsed the domestic violence?
- Do practitioners believe that the domestic violence will automatically stop being an issue if the substance abuse is addressed?
- How does recovery from substance abuse change the batterer’s pattern of coercive control? Do family members experience a greater feeling of safety and self-determination or do they feel the control is the same or worse?

Similarly, the batterer’s mental health and its impact on adult functioning must be factored into the assessment. Mental health is often not integrated into the overall assessment of domestic violence because it is perceived primarily as an adult functioning issue. Here are some things to assess:

- Has the batterer been wrongly or incompletely diagnosed with a mental health issue instead of being identified as coercive and controlling? For example, some abusers will be wrongly diagnosed as bi-polar. Or, veterans with PTSD may not be identified as coercive and controlling.
- Has the focus on the mental health eclipsed the domestic violence?
- Do practitioners believe that the domestic violence will automatically stop being an issue if the mental health concern is addressed?
- How does treatment of the mental health issue change the batterer’s pattern of coercive control? Do family members have a greater feeling of safety and self-determination or is the level of control the same or worse?

Because batterers’ patterns often continue to have impact even when they are not in the home or after a relationship ends, it is critical to assess a batterer’s adult functioning and pattern of control even if they are incarcerated, out of the home, subject to a protective order, and/or separated or divorced.

Recognizing the three dimensionality of the batterer is important when assessing this domain. The adult functioning of batterers varies widely. Some batterers appear very functional in all the other domains of their life except for their abuse towards their family, which can make the coercive control less believable to those outside the family. Other batterers may have multiple issues such as substance abuse or mental health diagnoses or wider criminal behavior.

Positive adult functioning of a batterer can have various effects on the family condition. For example, a father’s regular employment can be a source of stability and strength and at the same time it could be a mechanism for economic control and coercion. Family members can experience painful confusion and conflicting loyalties. They can also begin to see abusive behavior as normal or even a positive life choice, which is very poor role modeling.

In cases without an obvious allegation or history of domestic violence:
- Does the batterer display any indicators (such as jealousy, isolation, reluctance for separate interviews) of unidentified domestic violence?
- Does the adult victim display any indicators (aggression, withdrawal, trauma symptoms, substance abuse) of unidentified domestic violence?

In cases with prior domestic violence but none in the current referral:
- How do the batterer and family identify the batterer’s behavior change?
- Have the behaviors stopped or have they merely become less extreme?
- What has the batterer done to take responsibility and promote healing and a sense of safety in the home?
- Is the batterer’s pattern still impacting the adult victim’s functioning?
- Can any of the current concerns in adult functioning be a result of unidentified or historical domestic violence?

This provides the opportunity to look for signs and symptoms of trauma or other indicators of unidentified domestic violence victimization. Issues such as substance abuse or the apparent inability to keep a job or stable housing may be the indicators of an abusive partner. At the same time, prior victimization in one or more relationship does not automatically indicate the presence of current relationship or mental health issues for the adult victim.

What has been the overall impact of the batterer’s on-going behavior pattern on the adult victim’s daily functioning? (1st Critical Component)

One of the principal pathways to harming a child for a batterer is through their control and abuse of the child’s other parent. It is critical to contextualize the adult victim’s functioning.

From a batterer pattern-based, victim strengths-based approach, we must understand the context of coercive control when assessing an adult victim’s decision-making, self-care, self-preservation, stress management, and protective capacities in any of the domains, including adult functioning. The batterer should be held 100% accountable for the impacts of their behavior.

- How has the adult victim managed to maintain their daily functioning despite the abuse and/or violence?
- What can be documented on the batterer’s interference with the victim’s adult functioning? On the impact of trauma from the coercive control on the victim’s functioning?

- What was the victim’s adult functioning prior to violence and abuse?
- How does the victim function when the batterer’s behavior is not a factor?
- How might the batterer’s behavior (current or prior) be causing and/or exacerbating issues with the victim’s daily functioning:
  - Have the batterer’s behaviors contributed to any of the victim’s housing instability, employment issues or other financial issues? If so how?
  - Have the batterer’s behaviors caused and/or exacerbated any of the victim’s substance abuse and/or mental health issues? If so how? e.g. forcing or coercing into substance abuse, traumatizing the adult victim so that they turn to substances to cope or self-medicate, triggering childhood trauma, using previous diagnosis against them
  - Has the batterer undermined or supported the victim’s recovery or treatment efforts?
  - Have the batterer’s behaviors disrupted the victim’s support networks?

It is imperative to start this conversation about victims and adult functioning from a strengths-based, contextualized perspective. Because domestic violence results from the choices of the batterer and not the adult victim, and can impact the adult victim’s choices, the starting point needs to be that the victim may not have any adult functioning concerns except for being the target of a batterer’s abuse.

Once the victim’s strengths are identified, their functioning can be contextualized; taking into account how the batterer’s behavior has comprised adult functioning. For example, it’s important to see that an adult victim might have the skills and desire to work but not be allowed to because of the batterer’s control. Similarly, it would be important to understand when the adult victim’s depression and anxiety was related to the batterer’s behavior.

It is also important to identify issues that existed prior to the current domestic violence. For example, some adult victims have pre-existing substance abuse and/or mental health problems. This should increase our concern about the batterer as it may indicate more extreme predatory behavior, particularly if they intentionally exacerbate the adult victim’s pre-existing conditions.

OSM Domain 5: What are the parenting practices?

In domestic violence cases, the meaningful completion of this domain involves identifying and describing how the batterer’s pattern of behavior affects their own parenting and the parenting of the other caregiver.
How does the batterer support or undermine the overall safety and well-being of the child, including meeting basic needs and emotional needs? (1st, 2nd, 4th and 5th Critical Components)

Since this domain highlights a wide range of parenting strategies to address child behavioral issues and the broader role of teaching and guiding a child, it is an ideal domain for assessing and documenting the following:

- What kind of role model is the domestic violence batterer for the child?
- What role do they see themselves playing in their children’s future?

When we are asking questions to assess for these things, opportunities can arise for measuring where a parent is with regard to the stages of change. Child Welfare workers have a unique opportunity to engage batterers, since Batterer Intervention Programs report that many of their program participants are open to information about their children and more willing to examine the impact of their behavior on them than on their adult partner. Giving this key message can create an opportunity to increase safety and lay the groundwork for change.

It is also vital to see the batterer’s behavior as a parenting choice:

- What is the batterer’s overall involvement with taking care of the child’s basic needs including, feeding, bathing, and medical care? How does their controlling pattern impact their involvement?
- Has the batterer interfered with the child getting basic needs met? e.g., caused the family to lose housing, disrupt employment, interfered with transportation, medical treatment, adequate food, etc.
- How does the batterer support or hinder the child’s academic success? e.g., creates chaos when the child is trying to do homework, calls the child stupid “like their mother,” keeping them home from school because afraid of what they will disclose
- How does the batterer support or hinder the child’s social functioning? Refuse to allow child to have friends over, interfere with contact with other family members, batterer’s jealousy prevents children’s extracurricular activities
- How does the batterer’s pattern of behavior lead to the child being overly compliant or, alternatively, oppositional to either caregiver?
- How does the batterer’s parenting include manipulations that turn family members against one another? e.g., favoring one child over another, encouraging fighting, and/or scapegoating one child? It is not uncommon for a batterer to use both fear and rewards to control family members.
- Do the batterer’s needs overshadow the needs of the child? e.g., spends the family money on himself, demands that he is fed before the child
- What sort of role model is the batterer? What sort of role model do they want to be?

A gender responsive approach requires conscious attention to a male caregiver’s role in the basic parenting of the child; otherwise social expectations will often lead us to attribute the negative (or positive) impact of the male caregiver to the female caregiver. For example, in a situation where there has been domestic violence, a series of missed doctor’s appointments might not be the failure of the primary caregiver, but might be an indicator of control over transportation or other behaviors disruptive of the household functioning. Or, for a child who requires medication, we would want to know if the batterer is being supportive, negative or neutral about the child receiving medication.

The overall parenting of batterers varies widely with some common themes re-occurring: physical abuse, punishments that are inappropriate for age and developmental level, harsh discipline, inability to focus on the needs of the child over their own needs, undermining of the other person’s parenting, and interfering with the other caregiver’s relationship with the child.

However, understanding the three dimensionality of the batterer is important when assessing this domain. Some batterers are not engaged in parenting whereas others might be coaching the child’s sports team. Some are not at all invested in the child and others are highly invested. Some have not identified with a parenting role and others are strongly identified with it.

Positive parenting by a batterer can have various effects on a child. A parent’s regular involvement can be source of stability and strength for the child and at the same time it could be a source of confusion, grief and loss. For example, a child can experience confusion if the same person who takes them to sporting activities and on family outings, also abuses their other parent.

Core to the assessment of the batterer as parent is their ability to treat the other parent with respect and support their parenting and their relationship with the child.

- How does the domestic violence batterer’s behavior support or undermine the other caregiver’s parenting abilities?
- How does the batterer’s behavior pattern make meeting the child’s emotional and other needs easier or harder?
- How does the domestic violence batterer’s behavior interfere with the relationship between the other caregiver and the child?
When the adult victim seems to have parenting issues, it is important to know how the batterer’s past and present behavior influences the victim’s parenting.

- What is the influence of the batterer who is no longer in the home?
- Has the batterer turned the child against the adult victim?
- Has the batterer used the child as a spy?
- How have financial control and/or sabotage of outside relationships interfered with the adult victim’s parenting?
- What is known about the victim’s parenting prior to the batterer’s involvement in the family or when not present in the home?

A batterer’s behavior can have tremendous influence over a partner’s parenting. It may lead to more lenient parenting to compensate for the harsh parenting of the batterer or it may lead to more harsh discipline to protect the child from worse consequences from the batterer. The batterer’s control over finances may force a victim into criminal behavior to make sure the child’s basic needs are being met or the batterer’s isolation tactics may prevent him or her from using the natural respite support of relatives. It is insufficient to assess the adult victim’s parenting without assessing for the batterer’s influence over it.

How does the role of substance abuse, mental health, culture, and/or other socio-economic issues as related to the domestic violence shape parenting? (5th Critical Component)

As detailed in adult functioning above, racism, classism, and other forms of discrimination can increase the negative overall assessment of the batterer’s or the victim’s parenting. Other considerations include:

- Have any other issues eclipsed the focus on the impact of domestic violence on either caregiver’s parenting?
- Is the batterer playing on racial or gender stereotypes to impact the adult victim’s parenting?
- Is culturally or circumstantially acceptable parenting misinterpreted as inappropriate? For example, is sending children to be raised by extended family interpreted as lack of attachment and care?

In cases without an obvious allegation or history of domestic violence:

It is important to look for indicators of coercive control such as an authoritarian parenting style. A gender responsive approach suggests that another indicator of unidentified domestic violence may be the presence of a marginalized female caregiver. This may be the result of other issues, but can result from an abusive partner’s pattern of undermining the female caregiver.

What is the full spectrum of the adult victim’s efforts to promote the safety and well-being of the child? (3rd Critical Component)
- How has the adult victim parented despite the abusive pattern?
- What are the adult victim’s day to day parenting responsibilities including meeting the child’s basic care needs?
- How are we making a strengths-based assessment, in the context of parenting under duress, of the victim’s care of the child, satisfaction at being a caregiver, skill level, parenting style, and protective factors?
- Have the victim’s protective efforts been so successful that the child does not understand why the victim and batterer are no longer together?

Gender responsiveness plays a critical role here to ensure that mothers are getting full credit for all their basic care efforts as part of the assessment of their parenting. A gender responsive approach involves documenting both the heroic protective efforts of victims (protective orders, fleeing, separation and divorce, calling police) and the day-to-day efforts of nurturing, caring for and stabilizing a child who is impacted by a batterer’s behavior. This means documenting that, in spite of the batterer’s behavior, everyday things are happening, like making sure that the child is fed regularly and is medically up to date. For example, “Despite the batterer’s decision to take the family car when ordered out of the home, mother has maintained the child’s routine, including weekly doctor’s appointments, through a network of friends and family.”

OSM Domain 6: What are the disciplinary approaches?

In domestic violence cases look for how the batter’s need to be in control impacts the expectations, purpose, and meaning of discipline in the family. Also look for how their controlling tactics may impact the discipline choices of their partner.

What are the implications of the batterer’s pattern of coercive control and actions taken to harm the child on their disciplinary approach? (1st, 2nd, 3rd and 5th Critical Components)

- Does the batterer engage in rigid and harsh discipline?
- Does the batterer use discipline that is inappropriate for the ages and stage of development for the child in the home?
- How does the batterer respond to specific resistance or defiance of the child in the home?
- Does the batterer engage in physical discipline of child? Is this appropriate?

Similar to the adult functioning and parenting, in this domain, the three dimensionality of the batterer is important. The overall discipline of domestic violence batterers varies widely with some common themes re-occurring:
physical abuse, punishments that are inappropriate for age and developmental level, harsh discipline, inability to focus on the needs of the child over their own needs, undermining of the other persons parenting, and interfering with the other caregiver’s relationship with the child. Some batterers are not engaged in the disciplining of their child and others might do all of it.

Any positive healthy discipline and behavior management by the batterer must be integrated with the overall pattern of behavior. For example, some batterers marginalize their partner’s role with the child and take over all the parenting and discipline. While some of the specific behavior management techniques might be positive, the assessment would not be complete if it didn’t include the broader context of control and marginalization of the other parent.

There also can be great variability in how the batterer impacts the child through impacting the victim’s disciplinary approaches. As indicated above, one of the principal pathways to harming a child for a batterer is through their control and abuse of the child’s other parent. It is important to contextualize the adult victim’s discipline choices.

For the domestic violence victim, how might the batterer’s behavior (current or prior) be causing and/or exacerbating current disciplining issues? (1st Critical Component)

The issues here are very similar to the ones outlined in the domain related to parenting. In domestic violence cases, the meaningful completion of this domain would specifically look for ways the batterer has, through their behavior pattern, negatively shaped the disciplinary approach of the adult victim.

The adult victim’s disciplinary approaches may be shaped by the batterer’s pattern in other ways. If the victim has been traumatized, this may result in difficulties regulating emotion and impulsive behavior. Also the batterer’s pattern may result in developmental delays, aggression, difficult, or high risk behavior on the part of the child. Additionally the batterer may encourage defiant or disobedient behavior (even when not in the home.) Our assessment needs to be contextualized by the batterer’s behaviors.

How does the role of substance abuse, mental health, culture, and/or other socio-economic issues as related to the domestic violence shape discipline? (5th Critical Component)

Again, as detailed above, racism and other forms of discrimination can increase the negative overall assessment of domestic violence batterers or victims. Make sure that you take time to consider your personal biases when assessing discipline practices that may be culturally or circumstancially appropriate.

- Is the child targeted for discipline because of homophobia or other biases
- Has the batterer used substance abuse or mental health issues as an excuse for excessive, inadequate or inappropriate discipline

In cases without an obvious allegation or history of domestic violence:

- Can any of the current concerns with discipline be connected to unidentified domestic violence?

What is the full spectrum of the adult victim’s efforts to promote the safety and well-being of the child? (3rd Critical Component)

- How has the victim maintained healthy discipline despite the abuse?
- What was adult victim’s discipline in key areas prior to violence and abuse?
- How does the adult victim discipline when the batterer is not a factor in her or his decision making?
- How are we making a strengths-based, contextualized assessment of an adult victim’s disciplining and behavior management?

Similar to parental and adult functioning it is very important to start with a strengths-based approach to assessing an adult victim’s discipline and behavior management. A batterer’s behavior can have tremendous influence over a partner’s discipline and behavior management. It is insufficient to assess the adult victim’s discipline and behavior management without assessing for the batterer’s influence over it.

It is important to be able to look at the batterer’s patterns and their impact on overall family functioning to get a clear picture of the discipline and behavior management of the adult victim. For example, when the batterer’s choice to expose the child to the abuse leads to academic and behavioral issues with the child, how does this limit or shape the victim’s options to address these issues? Or, if the batterer is undercutting the victim’s efforts to set up structure and routine, how would this affect her or his behavior management?

Engaging the family
- Use strategies to build rapport and encourage conversation. Demonstrate interest in the family members, empathetic listening, and providing a clear explanation of the worker’s role and expectations.
- Avoid labeling and using terms, i.e., domestic violence, abuser, and conclusions about mental illness, even in documentation.
- Ask about other issues first before asking about domestic violence. Ask about their relationship, including positive aspects. Begin with more general questions then follow up with more specific and detailed ones.
- Ask open-ended questions about well-being to start the conversation.
- Ask about how the relationship began, what the person likes about their partner, what’s working well.
- The adult and child victims may express positive feelings toward the batterer. When asking questions about the abuse, focus on the batterer’s violence and controlling behaviors, not their personality.

Partnering with the alleged adult victim
- Immediately ask the alleged adult victim if it is safe to conduct an interview and, if not, what might be a safe way.
- Don’t let your personal biases get in the way of partnering with the victim, remember that research shows that it takes an average of seven tries to successfully leave a batterer and survivors are stalked for an average of two years after they leave.
- With regards to the domestic violence, confirm for the adult victim that you are holding the batterer responsible for the resulting child safety issues.
- Remember that you will never know the full extent of what is going on within the family. You only get the pieces they are able to tell you. Be sure to proceed with caution. There may be reasons that a victim is making decisions we don’t understand.
- Affirm that no one deserves to be abused and live in fear.
- Express concerns and ask questions about bruises or other injuries.
- Express concerns for the safety of the alleged adult victim and children.
- Explain that domestic violence may increase in frequency and/or severity.
• Identify what the alleged adult victim has done to stay safe and keep the children safe, and how well those actions have worked.
• Remember that the adult victim’s actions have been survival strategies. For example, staying with the alleged batterer may be safer than leaving.
• Recognize that because many adult victims lack access to financial resources or other housing options they may believe that it is better, especially for the children, to stay with the alleged batterer.
• Give the adult victim information about domestic violence. If you know the batterer has previous convictions, share that information with the victim.
• When we have to remove, we have to focus on our concerns for the safety of the children on the behavior of the batterer, not the victim’s choices.
• Discuss what will happen with the information gathered, including what information will be disclosed to the alleged batterer.
• Refer the adult victim to the co-located domestic violence advocate or your local program to address the immediate needs of adult and child victims.
• When ending the interview, ask the alleged adult victim about safe times and ways to make contact in the future.

Engaging the children

• Be aware a child may take responsibility for the abuse or side with the batterer. Assure them that we are looking to hear the whole story and that the violence is not their fault.
• If a child has tried to intervene reassure them that they do not have to protect their parent or stop the abuse.
• Acknowledge the batterer’s positive traits as well as asking about abusive behavior.
• Recognize that some children align with the batterer. Don’t shame them or appear one-sided, as it may make them defensive or shut them down.
• Support the ways in which the child tries to stay safer when there is a domestic violence situation occurring and discuss additional age-appropriate ways in which the child could stay safer.
• Tell the child what information you will be sharing with either parent.

Engaging the alleged batterer

• Be respectful.
• Build rapport with genuine interest, listening and clarity of roles.
• Focus on the children. Batterer’s often want to see themselves as good parents.
• Recognize their strengths and ask if there are any things about themselves that they would like to improve for the sake of their children.

Engaging without colluding
When assessing the alleged batterer’s answers, be aware of tactics commonly used by batterers to deflect attention away from themselves. Batterers will try to enlist you to collude with them against the adult victim. Tactics include:

- Presenting as the victim;
- Using statements of remorse as a way to avoid consequences;
- Using flattery or “buddy” behavior to charm;
- Describing protective actions the alleged adult victim has taken (leaving or calling police) as ways to be hurtful to the alleged batterer;
- Presenting as the more stable and calm partner and better parent;
- Denying or minimizing abuse (‘you know how women are,’ ‘it is not my fault if someone bruises easily,’ ‘I just pushed a little’);
- Blaming the adult victim for the abuse (one should know not to do that);
- Avoiding responsibility by blaming alcohol, other substances, stress, etc.;
- Alleging drug or alcohol abuse by partner;
- Alleging the partner has mental illness and/or is off medication;
- Presenting the alleged adult victim’s behavior in a negative way to get you to side with the alleged batterer.

• Batterers can be intimidating, using their size, position in the room or voices to control the interview. It is ok to use respectful limit setting to call out the behavior and redirect it.

• Batterers are not reliable sources of information about their own violent behavior or use of power and control tactics. Better sources include the alleged adult and child victims, police reports, parole and probation, court documents, and other persons or agencies known to the family.

• Don’t tell the batterer information given by the adult victim or child if other sources are available or until a safety plan is in place. Use corroborating reports such as police, neighbors, parole or probation, courts, medical.

• Delay asking specific questions that may endanger adult victim or child.
Sample Questions for DV Cases

Some of following questions have notations to indicate which domain or domains they may be particularly helpful for, but remember that any question may give useful information about any of the 6 domains.

Assessment questions for the alleged adult victim
The following are sample questions to ask the alleged adult victim. Adapt these to your style, the language the alleged adult victim uses and the situation. Many adult victims may not identify what is happening as domestic violence. Calling it “violence” during the assessment interview may inhibit the conversation. It is important, though, to label it as domestic violence and provide information on domestic violence toward the conclusion of the interview.

- Are you safe right now to talk? (always ask this in some way)
- What are you able to tell me about your relationship? (Domains 2, 4)
- What are you able to tell me about how decisions get made? (Domains 2, 4)
- How do you and your partner divide household responsibilities? (Domains 2, 4)
- What are you able to tell me about how you and your partner make decisions about money? Can you spend money when you want to? Whose name is on the accounts? (Domains 2, 4)
- What are you able to tell me about what happens when you and your partner disagree? (Domains 2, 4)
- What do you do during the day? Has your partner prevented you from going to work/school/church? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)
- Does your partner harass you or make it difficult for you to work? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)
- Who are your friends and family? How much contact do you have with them? Is your partner usually there? Has your partner prevented you from seeing friends or family? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)
- Does your partner listen in on your phone calls or otherwise monitor your communication? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)
- What are you able to tell me about what happens when your partner feels jealous or possessive? How does that feel? (Domains 2, 4)
- Does your partner call you names, insult you or scream at you? (Domains 2, 4)
- Have you ever felt afraid of your partner? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)
• Has your partner ever destroyed or thrown away belongings that have sentimental value to you? Was this done as a way to punish you or to ensure that you are following rules? (Domains 2, 4)

• Has your partner ever threatened you, your children or your family? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 1, 2, 4)

• Does your partner threaten to take your children? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 1, 2, 4)

• Does your partner threaten to take you away from your family? (Domains 2, 4)

• Does your partner ever threaten you with deportation? Is your partner making it difficult for you to get legal status? (Domains 2, 4)

• Does your partner do reckless things that scare you, like driving too fast with the children in the car? What can you tell me about that? (Domains 1, 2, 4, 5)

• Has your partner ever used force against you? Pushed? Shoved? Hit? Strangled? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 1, 2)

• If your partner has used force against you, what are you able to tell me about the worst episode? When was the most recent episode? What are you able to tell me about that? How frequently does this happen? (Domains 1, 2)

• How often do you get hurt by accident? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 1, 2)

• Most people think of weapons as guns or knives, but other objects can be used to hurt someone. Has anyone used a weapon to threaten or harm someone in the family? If yes, what are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 1, 2)

• How does your partner treat your pets? Your property? (Domains 1, 2, 4)

• How often does your partner drink or use drugs? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 1, 2, 4)

• Does your partner have recent military or police training? (Domains 2, 4)

• Have you left before? What happened when you did? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)

• Has your partner threatened suicide? (Domains 2, 4)

• What was/is the relationship between your parents? Your partner’s parents? (Domains 2, 4)

• Have you ever been forced into doing something that makes you uncomfortable? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)

• Has your partner pressured you or forced you to have sex? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)

• On a scale from 1-10, how safe do you feel? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domains 2, 4)
• If you could change one thing about your partner, what would it be? (Domains 2, 4)

Impact on the children
Additional questions to ask the non-offending parent to assess the impact of the violence on the children include the following:
• What are you able to tell me about how your partner disciplines the child, and what for? (Domains 1, 6)
• Does your partner call your children names, insult them, or yell at them? (Domains 1, 5, 6)
• Are there step-children in the home? If so, are they treated differently? (Domains 1, 5, 6)
• Is your partner able to take care of the child and keep the child safe? Does your partner make decisions that are best for the child? (Domains 1, 5)
• Describe how your partner supports your parenting? (Domains 1, 5, 6)
• What are you able to tell me about how your partner interferes with your parenting? (Domains 1, 5, 6)
• Where are the children when the fighting happens? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domain 1)
• Describe how the children respond to the abuse. Have they ever tried to stop it? Have they ever hidden in their room or left the house? (Domain 1)
• Have the children ever called anyone for help or told anyone about what is happening? (Domain 1)
• Have the children ever been hurt, either accidentally or on purpose? What are you able to tell me about that? (Domain 1)
• Have you noticed any effects on your children? (Domain 1)
• Are you concerned about any of your child’s behavior? (Domain 1, 3)
• Have you noticed changes in your child’s behavior? (Domain 1, 3)
• Does your child have trouble sleeping? (Domain 1, 3)
• Is your child getting sick more often? (Domain 1, 3)
• Describe any problems your child has in school or with friends. (Domain 1, 3)
• How often have you had to move or change the child’s school? (Domain 1, 3)
• Describe activities or groups your child is involved with. (Domain 1, 3, 5)
• Have you ever suspected that your partner may have been sexually inappropriate with your child? (Domain 1)
• If your child has visits with your partner, how has that been going? What does the child say about the visits? What happens at drop-off and pick-up times? (Domains 3, 5)
• Does your partner ask the child to pass messages to you or ask the child to report what you do during the day? (Domains 2, 5)
• How do all the things we’ve talked about today affect the way you can care for your child? (Domains 1, 5)
• On a scale from 1-10, how safe are your children? How safe do they feel? How safe do they think you are? (Domain 1)

Full spectrum of efforts to protect
It is also important to assess strengths and protective factors in the family and the strategies the alleged adult victim has used to stay safe and keep their children safe. Ask things like:
• How are you managing day to day? (Domain 4)
• How are you maintaining a regular schedule for the children? (Domains 1, 2, 5)
• Are the children in school? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• Do the children get regular meals and a routine at bedtime? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• Are the children getting regular medical and dental care? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• Describe what you try to do to keep yourself and your children safe. What has worked well? (Domains 1, 4, 5)
• Who are friends and family members you can talk to? (Domain 4)
• Has anyone been able to help you? (Domains 2, 4)
• What has worked for you in the past? (Domains 2, 4)
• Have you ever left the situation? Where did you go? What happened? (Domains 2, 4)
• How are you talking to your children about the situation? (Domains 2, 4)
• What has your partner tried in the past to stop his or her unsafe behaviors? (Domains 2, 4)
• What do you think needs to happen for you and your children to be safe? (Domains 2, 4)

Concluding the interview with the alleged adult victim (Domains 2, 4)
• What are you able to tell me about how dangerous your partner is? What do you think your partner is capable of? What is the worst-case scenario?
• How do you think your partner will react when finding out we talked to you?
• How will your partner react when finding out we talked to the children?
• How will your partner react when receiving the notice of disposition?
• What do you think will happen when I leave?

Assessment questions for the alleged batterer
The following are sample questions to ask the alleged batterer. You may want to reassess the alleged batterer that the domestic violence questions are a routine part of any family assessment. These questions can also be used to screen for domestic violence when it was not part of the allegation. Adapt these to your style and the situation. Many alleged batterers will not identify what is happening as domestic violence. Calling it “violence” during the assessment may inhibit the conversation. It is important, though, to label domestic violence behavior as domestic violence and provide information about it toward the conclusion of the interview.

• Tell me about your relationship. (Domains 2, 4)
• How do decisions get made? (Domains 2, 4)
• How do you divide household responsibilities? (Domains 2, 4, 5)
• How do you make decisions about money? Whose name is on the accounts? (Domains 2, 4)
• What types of things are children disciplined for? What happens? (Domains 2, 5, 6)
• How are you maintaining a regular schedule for the children? (Domains 2, 4, 5)
• Are the children in school? (Domains 2, 4, 5)
• Do the children get regular meals and a routine at bedtime? (Domains 2, 4, 5)
• Are the children getting regular medical and dental care? (Domains 2, 4, 5)
• What does your partner do during the day? (Domains 2, 4)
• Who are your partner’s friends or family? How often does your partner see or talk with them? (Domains 2, 4)
• If you ever feel jealous or possessive, what do you do? (Domains 2, 4)
• Do you listen in on your partner’s phone calls? (Domains 2, 4)
• What happens when you and your partner disagree? (Domains 2, 4)
• Do you call your partner names, insult or scream at them? (Domains 2, 4)
• Does your partner ever seem afraid of you? (Domains 2, 4)
• Has anyone been hurt during an argument? What happened? Was anyone pushed, shoved, hit, strangled, etc.? (Domains 1, 2)
• If so, tell me about the worst episode. What was the most recent episode? How frequently does this happen? (Domains 1, 2)
• Do you have weapons (knife, guns, etc.) in the house? Have you used them to frighten your partner? (Domains 1, 2)
• Have the children ever been frightened or hurt? How did this happen? (Domains 1, 2)
• When this happened what did you do? What did other family members do (including pets)? (Domains 1, 2)
• Has property been destroyed or damaged? (Domains 1, 2)
• Do you or your partner use alcohol or drugs? How often? (Domains 2, 4)
• Do you have recent military or law enforcement training? (Domains 1, 2, 4)
• On a scale from 1-10, how safe do you feel in your family? How safe do you think your partner feels? Your children? (Domain 2)
• What was the relationship like between your parents? (Domains 2, 4)

Impact on the children
Additional questions to ask the batterer to assess the impact of their violence on the children include:
• Have your noticed changes in your child’s behavior? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• Are you concerned about any of your child’s behavior? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• If your child visits you, how has that been going? How much time do you spend together? Who, if anyone, helps care for your child on visits? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• Does your child have trouble sleeping? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• Is your child getting sick more often? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• Describe any problems your child has in school or with friends. (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• How often have you had to move or change your child’s school? (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• Describe activities or groups your child is involved in. (Domains 1, 3, 5)
• How do you think your child sees you or feels about you? (Domains 1, 3, 4, 5)
• How does the abuse interfere with the care of your child? (Domain 1)

It is also important to assess opportunities for change and intervention. Ask:
• How would you like your child to think of you? (Domain 4)
• What do you want for your kids? (Domain 4)
• What sorts of memories do you want your children to have of their childhood? (Domain 4)
• What hopes and dreams do you have for your children? (Domain 4)
• How do you want your child to think of you when they grow up? (Domain 4)
• How would you like your child’s relationships to be in the future? (Domain 4)
• What do you think needs to change to make your child safer? (Domains 2, 4)
• What can you do to make your children safer? (Domains 2, 4)
• What have you done to stop the violence? (Domains 2, 4)
• Whom have you asked for help? (Domains 2, 4)
• What happened when you asked? (Domains 2, 4)
• Who are friends and family members you can talk to? (Domains 2, 4)

Assessment questions for the children

Talk to the child about ways to stay safe as possible. As in any child interview, start with questions to develop rapport, and use the child’s language.

Ask general questions first.
• Who lives or stays in your home (including pets)? Who visits? (Domains 1, 3)
• What things do you do with your mom? What things do you do with your dad? (Domains 3, 4)
• What’s your favorite thing about your mom? (Domains 3, 4)
• Is there anything about your mom that makes you sad, scared or worried? (Domains 1, 3)
• What’s your favorite thing about your dad? (Domains 3, 4)
• Is there anything about your dad that makes you sad, scared or worried? (Domains 1, 3)
• What are the rules in your house? Are any rules just for your mom or dad? (Domains 1, 2, 4, 5, 6)
• What happens when someone breaks the rules? (Domains 1, 2, 4, 5, 6)
• What happens when your pet breaks the rules or gets in trouble? (Domains 1, 2, 4, 5, 6)

If the child discloses violence, follow-up with clarifying questions to define terms and determine what happened.
• Does anyone hit, shove, push, or throw things? Who does that? What are you able to tell me about the last time that happened? (Domain 1)
• What are you able to tell me about what you did? What are you able to tell me about other family members or pets? (Domain 1)
• Has anyone been hurt? What are you able to tell me about who was there? What are you able to tell me about what happened next? (Follow-up with specifics about police, doctors, etc.) (Domain 1)
• How does it make you feel? (Domain 1)
  Pay particular attention when children state that the violence has had no impact on them. Sometimes children in these situations protect themselves by “appearing” immune to the violence.

• Has anyone asked you not to talk about this? (Domain 1)

• Are you worried or scared about anything? (Domain 1)

When ending the interview

• Do you have anyone you can talk to if you don’t feel safe....when you are worried....when you are hurt? (Domains 1, 3)

• Who do you talk to when you don’t feel safe/are worried/hurt? (Domains 1, 3)

• What would you like to see happen? (Domains 1, 3)

• If you could have three wishes, what would they be? (Domains 1, 3)

Talk to the child about what will happen next. Ask the child whether they have concerns about you talking to their parents. Ask the child what they think will happen when you talk to their parents. Tell the child what information you will be sharing with the adults.

Appendix 3.10: Present danger
Present Danger

Present danger is an immediate, significant and clearly observable family condition occurring in the present tense, already endangering or threatening to endanger a child. The family condition is happening now; it is currently in process of actively placing a child in peril.

Present Danger Criteria

I. Immediate

This means that what is happening in the family is happening right before your eyes. You are in the midst of the danger the child is subjected to. The threatening family condition is in operation.

II. Significant

Referring to a family condition: This means that the nature of what is out of control and immediately threatening to a child is onerous, vivid, impressive, and notable. The family condition exists as a dominant matter that must be dealt with.

III. Clearly Observable

Present danger family conditions are totally transparent. You see and experience them. There is no guesswork. One rule is: If you have to interpret what is going on, then it likely is not a present danger.

Protective Actions

A Protective Action is an instantaneous (same day), short-term, sufficient strategy that provides a child responsible adult supervision and care that controls the present danger threat while the Department expedites the assessment to gather sufficient information about the six domains to determine whether or not an impending danger exists.

Protective Action Criteria

I. Immediate Effect

A. The plan must be capable of being in operation the same day it is created.
B. Before the worker leaves the home, the Protective Action must be in motion and confirmed.
C. Supervisor must approve all Protective Actions.

II. Short Term

A. The plan is very specific, tied to particular present danger situations, and must be sufficient to manage safety/control the present danger until additional information regarding the six domains can be gathered and analyzed to determine if an Impending Danger Safety Threat exists.
B. Should last no more than 10 days. Assessment activity (gathering six domain information) should be expedited once present danger has been identified. If a Protective Action involves a child or a parent leaving the home, and either need to remain out of the home at the conclusion of the 10-day period, a petition must be filed in the juvenile court to ensure due process occurs.

III. Sufficient

A. The Protective Action must manage present danger situations.
B. Worker must confirm that it will do so.
C. CPS must verify that selected people are responsible, will be available, are trustworthy, and are capable. (ODHS verifies: Safety Service Providers are really there in the home, ready to participate now; SSPs understand the safety issue, their role, and know to contact ODHS if the plan is not working.)
D. Must confirm that caregivers are willing to cooperate with the Protective Action. Although legal action may be necessary to carry out the Protective Action, the caregivers’ ability/willingness to cooperate must still be assessed and confirmed.
E. If parents don’t agree to the Protective Action, we must bring the matter before the juvenile court.
F. If the plan includes the child residing outside his or her household, the safety of the environment where the child is to stay must be determined.

IV. Not Optional

If there is present danger, a Protective Action must be put into place.

Additional Information: Present Danger and Protective Actions:

I. We are required to enter the Protective Action in OR-Kids within five days.

II. Worker is to call supervisor to review information when determining present danger exists and to discuss the Protective Action.

   A. This is an intrusive process.
   B. Supervisor involvement increases accurate identification of present danger and ensures necessary components of the Protective Action have been adequately addressed.

III. Least Restrictive to Most Restrictive Protective Actions:

   A. A threatening person leaves the home.
   B. A responsible adult routinely monitors the home.
   C. A responsible adult is in the home periodically.
   D. A responsible adult moves into the home 24/7.
   E. The child is cared for outside the home periodically.
   F. The child lives with someone in the family network part time.
G. The child lives with someone in the family network 24/7.
H. The child is placed in foster care.
Chapter 3

Appendix 3.11: Safety threshold criteria
Safety Threshold Criteria

A threat of danger is a specific family condition, behavior, attitude, action or circumstance that threatens child safety. The danger threshold is the point at which family functioning and associated caregiver performance becomes perilous enough to be perceived as a threat or produce a threat to child safety.

For each safety threat considered, apply the five safety threshold criteria specifically to the family condition considered in that safety threat. To determine if an impending danger safety threat exists, all of the five criteria must be met:

I. Imminent
   Imminence is determined by using the available information learned to date and deciding with a reasonable degree of certainty that the threat is likely to occur in the immediate to near future if the family condition is not controlled by external methods.
   Consider: Understand when the threats occur in terms of frequency, times of day, days of the week, or when the maltreating caregiver is around the vulnerable child. These can help with determining if threats are imminent and in creating a sufficient safety plan.

II. Severity
   The likelihood that the family conditions, behaviors, attitudes, actions, and/or circumstances, if left unchecked, will result in severe harm (effects) to a vulnerable child in the near to immediate future.
   A. “Severe harm” defined:
      1. Significant or acute injury to a child’s physical, sexual, psychological, cognitive or behavioral development or functioning; immobilizing impairment; or
      2. Life threatening damage.
      3. These criteria are considered in terms of potential effect on the vulnerable child.

III. Out of control
   No responsible parent or adult in the home can stop, prevent, or otherwise control the family condition/threat. The family condition is out of the family’s control. Primary caregivers may be present in the home but incapacitated (emotionally or physically related, use of substances, etc.).

IV. Observable and specific
   You can clearly describe what is happening that makes the child unsafe (conditions, behaviors, actions, or circumstances). Danger is real, can be seen, and can be reported.
   Consider: The behavior, motive, attitude, emotion, perception, or family situation that creates the threat to safety. Describe the frequency of the threat to safety; describe the circumstances that prevail when the threat to safety is active; describe anything that stimulates or influences the threat to safety.

V. Vulnerability
   Determine what characteristics of the child result in the child being vulnerable to a specific safety threat.
A. Vulnerable child is defined as:

1. A child who is unable to protect him- or herself. This includes a child who is dependent on others for sustenance and protection. A vulnerable child is defenseless, exposed to behavior, conditions, or circumstances that he or she is powerless to manage, and is accessible and susceptible to a threatening parent or caregiver. Vulnerability is judged according to physical and emotional development, ability to communicate needs, mobility, size, and dependence.

2. Consider: The power differential between children and adults; special needs including trauma-induced vulnerability; detail how each child is or is not vulnerable to a specific safety threat.

Directions: Review six domain assessment. Using ST guide, determine which safety threat/s might be present. Use work sheet to determine if threshold is met on the safety threat/s you have identified. Use one worksheet per identified impending danger safety threat.

Appendix 3.13: Understanding how the impending danger safety threat operates in the family
Understanding How the Impending Danger Safety Threat Operates in the Family

1. Who (is creating and/or allowing the threat)?

2. What (what are they doing/not doing)?

3. To whom (which children are affected)?

4. When (what times, days of the week, etc.)?

5. Precipitants/family condition (what contributes to the threat)?

6. How often (does the precipitant/family condition/threat occur)?

7. How long (has the family condition been occurring)?

8. How persistent (is the family condition/threat)?
Chapter 3

Appendix 3.14: Criteria for an In-Home Safety Plan
Criteria For An In-Home Safety Plan

Can you answer yes to all of these questions?

- Is there a home-like setting where the parent(s) and child(ren) live?
- Are there no barriers in the home to allowing safety service providers and activities to occur?
- Is at least one parent willing to cooperate with the safety plan?
- Are the necessary safety activities and resources available to implement the plan?

If so, an in-home plan is appropriate and the least intrusive.

Appendix 3.15: Conducting Tandem Investigations
Conducting Tandem Investigations

Tandem investigations are conducted when a report assigned to a CPS worker involves a setting in which the Office of Training, Investigations, and Safety (OTIS) is responsible for investigating (OAR 413-015-0215). The purpose of a tandem investigation is to have optimum communication, coordination, and collaboration when responding to reports of child abuse involving multiple agency partners. The goals of the tandem investigation are to:

- Ensure safety of children;
- Share information;
- Make informed and timely decisions;
- Optimize the collection of direct evidence and observations;
- Minimize repetitive interviews;
- Support intervention, including legal action, as necessary to protect children and prevent unsafe children; and
- Understand each entity’s roles and responsibilities.

It is important to note that a CPS worker is still responsible for all of the activities necessary to complete a CPS assessment when conducting a tandem investigation (OAR 413-015-0415(5)).

Child Care Settings

The purpose of the tandem investigation when responding to a report involving a child care is for Early Learning Division, Office of Child Care (OCC), the OTIS, Child Welfare (CW) and Self-Sufficiency Child Care Program (SSCCP) to have optimum collaboration and communication.

Child care is defined in OAR 413-015-0115. “Involving a child care” in this section includes reports in which:

- A behavior, condition, or circumstance occurred under the care of a child care provider;
- The alleged perpetrator resides in the home where child care is provided;
- The child care is an in-home or facility setting;
- The allegations are current or past circumstances and the child care is open or closed;
- The child care is an illegal child care (a child care requiring a license that is providing services without a license whether intentionally or not); or
- A report of abuse in a child care where there is also an allegation of abuse towards the alleged perpetrator’s children, their siblings, or other child household assigned to a CPS worker.

When working a child care tandem investigation, it’s important to remember CW, the OTIS, and the OCC have different roles and purposes. Some assessment activities, interviews, and home visits will require collaboration and some may not. It will be important to plan for these together and make those determinations in advance.

Prior to Initial Contact:

- The CPS worker, OTIS investigator, and OCC investigative specialist will coordinate to conduct a staffing and determine how and when the initial contacts will be made.

- The OCC will provide a chronological report of the child care’s complaint and compliance history to the CPS worker, the OTIS investigator, and SSCCP (if applicable) prior to initial contact, whenever possible.

Initial Contact:

- Whenever possible, the CPS worker, OTIS investigator, and the OCC investigative specialist will conduct the initial contacts together.

- At the initial contact the CPS worker, OTIS investigator and the OCC investigative specialist are individually responsible for ensuring the activities outlined in their respective rules and procedures are followed.

- At the initial contact, the CPS worker or OTIS investigator is responsible for all interviews. The OCC investigative specialist should observe the child interviews when child safety and circumstances allow. The OCC investigative specialist may participate in adult interviews as determined in consultation with the CPS worker and the OTIS investigator.

- The CPS worker or the OTIS investigator is responsible for interviewing the alleged victim and any other children identified as requiring an interview. The OCC investigative specialist may observe the child interviews, but must not interview any children during the investigation without prior approval of OCC’s legal administrator or director of the Office of Child Care.

- The CPS worker is responsible for notifying the legal parents of any children interviewed as a part of their assessment as required by rule. The OTIS investigator is responsible for notifying parents of any other children interviewed as a part of their investigation.

After Initial Contact:

- The OCC investigative specialist will schedule a staffing and notify the CPS worker, OTIS investigator, required OCC personnel, and if applicable, SSCCP of the staffing.

- OTIS and SSCCP will collaborate to identify the children enrolled at the child care and determine which children are receiving CW services or SSCCP subsidy.

- The OTIS investigator will notify the caseworkers for any children enrolled in the child care and others as indicated. (Others may include the CW certifier if the in-home day care is also a certified foster home.)

- The purpose of the staffing is:
  - To review the results of the initial contact;
  - To share information regarding the child care provider (director/owner), employees, caregivers, the children enrolled in the child care, the child care setting, and, if applicable, children or adults living in the home.

- Anyone unable to attend the staffing must email a summary of the type of information that fulfills the purpose of the staffing to all parties included in the meeting invite.

Ongoing Communication and Collaboration:

- The CPS worker, OTIS investigator, OCC investigative specialist and, when applicable, SSCCP will share information gathered or observed throughout the investigation/CPS assessment with each other. OCC investigative specialists will inform OCC compliance of critical issues that arise.
• The CPS worker, OTIS investigator, and OCC investigative specialist will communicate about scheduled and unscheduled visits and make contact together when possible and indicated.

• The CPS worker and the OTIS investigator will notify the OCC investigative specialist prior to face to face interviews occurring after the initial contact and make contact together when possible and indicated.

• With the OTIS investigator’s or CPS worker’s approval, the OCC investigative specialist may conduct staff and parent interviews without the OTIS investigator if OCC requires additional information.

Conclusion of the Tandem Investigation Involving a Child Care

• When the OTIS investigation is completed, the OTIS investigator will email their report to the OCC and SSCCP, and to CW if requested. All agencies will review the investigation results and determine any next steps needed based on the results of the investigation.

• If any of the involved agencies have concerns that differing investigations results are not a result of agency authority and statute, that agency will initiate a staffing meeting with the designated leads of each agency.

• The purpose of the staffing is:
  • To share and discuss the OTIS investigation disposition, determinations of the OCC investigation and, if applicable, SSCCP and CW determinations.
  • To discuss inconsistencies and determine if there is statutory justification for the inconsistencies. When the inconsistency is not a result of statute and any participant questions the validity of the inconsistency, the issue is escalated to leadership to review and resolve.

• The tandem investigation is not complete and communication will continue until CW, the OTIS, the OCC, and, if applicable, SSCCP each reach their respective determinations.
Chapter 4
Managing Child Safety In and Out of Home

Section 1: Overview
Managing child safety in and out of home

Overview

Intervention with abused and neglected children and their families is planned, purposeful and focused on achieving child safety, permanency and well-being. Planned and purposeful intervention depends on completely understanding and assessing what contributes to the abuse. This assessment results in understanding parental protective capacity and development of a Child Welfare case plan that serves as a roadmap to the needed changes. Good case planning identifies the goals, activities and tasks leading to successful outcomes. The ongoing safety plan and permanency plan are incorporated into the case planning process.

The Child Welfare case plan is always dynamic; no plan should be static. Flexibility is critical in developing and managing case plans. When child and family needs and protective capacity change, flexibility allows the plan to change as well.

Although this manual incorporates safety considerations throughout, this chapter focuses on the caseworker’s specific responsibilities in order to manage child safety. This includes:

I. Developing and implementing the Child Welfare case plan,

II. Managing the ongoing safety plan,

III. Planning and working the permanency plan,

IV. Considering and working the concurrent permanency plan,

V. Involving the family,

VI. Involving others in activities and services designed to increase parental protective capacity and reunify the child with the parents.

Although the caseworker will sometimes work with a child’s legal guardians, this chapter will reference the adults in the family as the child’s parents.

Developing the Child Welfare case plan

The caseworker develops and uses a Child Welfare case plan to:

I. Assess the family’s protective capacities and make informed, collaborative decisions on what must change to establish a safe home for the child;

II. Provide clear and specific expected outcomes and establish priorities for changing the behaviors, conditions or circumstances that caused the abuse;

III. Identify strategies with the family that:

A. Address the effects of abuse; and

B. Change the behaviors, conditions or circumstances contributing to the safety threats.
IV. Identify and coordinate the services needed for the child to ensure safety and well-being;

V. Identify and coordinate the services needed for the parents to enhance protective capacities and support change behaviors to reduce safety threats;

VI. Track and measure a family’s progress toward achieving outcomes; and

VII. Support decision-making in the case.

The Child Welfare case plan should be clear to all participants in the case and service delivery systems.

Managing safety

Safety guides all casework practice. In every case, a fundamental goal is to protect children from harm. The Adoption and Safe Families Act (ASFA) requires assessment of the child’s safety in birth families, substitute care placements and adoptive homes. The caseworker is responsible for:

I. Monitoring the ongoing safety plan; and

II. Making appropriate changes in actions or services when parental protective capacity changes or safety threats are eliminated or no longer present.

Involving the family

Families are more likely to engage in the case-planning process when they believe the caseworker is hearing their feelings and concerns. A caseworker helps the family maintain a realistic perspective on what they can accomplish and how long it will take to do so. By involving the family, the caseworker:

I. Enhances the essential helping relationship because the caseworker hears, respects and considers the family’s feelings and concerns;

II. Facilitates the family's investment in and commitment to achieving outcomes, and participating in services and activities identified in the Child Welfare case plan;

III. Empowers parents to take the necessary action to change the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that contributed to the child being unsafe; and

IV. Ensures better communication and increases the likelihood the caseworker and the family are working toward the same outcome.

Involving others

Other family members and service providers are almost always involved with the family or will be part of the services and activities outlined in the Child Welfare case plan. When working with others, the caseworker needs to address issues related to parental consent and confidentiality. For detailed information regarding confidentiality, see Chapter 1.

In every case, Child Welfare has the responsibility to decide the overall focus of intervention and whether the child and family are getting the services they need and making the changes necessary to achieve safety, permanency, and child well-being. The caseworker should always work in partnership with the family and consider family voice, culture, norms, history, and structure.
Chapter 4
Managing child safety in and out of home
Section 2: Introduction
Introduction to managing child safety in and out of home

Whenever safely possible, engage the family while the child remains in his or her own home. Deciding whether a child should remain at home or be placed in protective custody is based on a thorough assessment and safety analysis including:

I. The parent’s willingness and ability to protect the child; and

II. The availability of appropriate safety services and safety service providers.

The current caseworker confirms the ongoing safety plan is always the most suitable, least intrusive available intervention.

Child Welfare safety intervention and safety management is:

I. Provisional until Child Welfare can ensure the child’s safety in the parents’ home or other permanency options outside the child’s family are selected;

II. Temporary until the parents can and will protect a child;

III. Conditional because it is required until the child is determined to be safe and the parents’ protective capacities are sufficiently enhanced to assure the child’s safety;

IV. Dynamic from the time a child is determined to be unsafe until parental protective capacity can ensure child safety;

V. An interim intervention necessary as long as needed to manage child safety;

VI. Parent-centered in that the caseworker involves the parents in all aspects of the case from safety planning and safety management to case planning as much as possible;

VII. Child-centered in that the focus of every case is the safety, permanency, and well-being of the child;

VIII. The least intrusive intervention possible to manage child safety; and

IX. Not voluntary in the sense that safety threats exist that a parent cannot manage and Child Welfare has determined require intervention to keep the child safe, even if the child is in the parents’ home. Child Welfare is responsible for and can, with the court’s backing, legally protect a child if needed. The court decides if the child is unsafe. However, parents may have a choice in safety management options Child Welfare offers.

Child safety is always of primary importance throughout Child Welfare casework. The children who remain in their parents’ home with identified safety threats are some of the most vulnerable in Child Welfare caseloads. These cases require diligent, ongoing safety management. They also require active monitoring of both the ongoing safety plan and changes in the parents’ protective capacity. When Child Welfare places a child out of home to manage safety, the case requires:

I. Active and constant assessment of the parents’ protective capacities; and
II. Determining when the parents’ changes in protective capacity or the family’s behaviors, conditions, or circumstances improve, leading to needing less intrusive interventions to manage the child’s safety.

In-home plans with safety threats

Families may be willing and able to engage with Child Welfare without court involvement. On occasion, Child Welfare may seek legal custody of the child, even when Child Welfare determines the child can safely remain in the physical custody of the parents with an ongoing safety plan.

The decision to seek legal custody of children while the children remain in the physical care of their parents has inherent associated risks and responsibilities. We must carefully analyze it on a case-by-case basis. When Child Welfare has legal custody of a child, Child Welfare responsibilities expand to go beyond child safety and oversight of parental protective capacity changes. Responsibilities also include consideration of and attention to the child’s needs for permanency and well-being.

Out-of-home plans

When a caseworker receives a case with an out-of-home safety plan, the CPS assessment has concluded that it is not possible for the child’s safety to be managed in the child’s home. The case management functions include both safety intervention and safety management. These functions relate to identified safety threats and confirming the child’s environment is safe in substitute care.
Chapter 4
Managing Child Safety
In and Out of Home

Section 3: Transfer of a Case
Co-case Management and Transfer of a Case

When a child remains in the parents’ home or is placed in substitute care.

A permanency caseworker is assigned as the secondary worker on a case within 48 hours of a petition being filed or the identification of safety threats resulting in a cooperative in-home case during the CPS assessment. It is critical for the permanency caseworker to understand the circumstances of the case as soon as possible in order to begin co-case management with the CPS worker. Both the CPS and permanency caseworkers are responsible for safety management. Both caseworkers must communicate frequently with each other and the family to fully understand the behaviors, conditions and circumstances that made a child unsafe and how the in-home safety plan is managing child safety.

Managing child safety with an ongoing safety plan is critical. Whether the child remains in the parents’ home or is placed in substitute care, the case needs thoughtful engagement, frequent contact with the family and continuous safety monitoring and management.

We are relying on participants in the ongoing safety plan to assist Child Welfare in managing child safety. The following actions provide for continuous case oversight and make the first 60 days of involvement with Child Welfare trauma-informed and supportive for the family.

Procedures

Co-case Management

On the same day a petition is filed in court or safety threat identification has occurred resulting in a cooperative in-home case, the CPS supervisor will contact the Permanency supervisor requesting the assignment of a permanency caseworker for the family. Within 48 hours, a permanency caseworker will be assigned as a secondary worker on the case and co-case management will begin.

Procedure

Within 5 business days of the permanency worker being assigned as the secondary worker, a Preparation Meeting will occur.

Prior to this meeting, the permanency caseworker must:

I. Review records
   A. Thoroughly review the case records, gain an understanding of the child and family paying particular attention to the identified safety threats, how the threats are operating in the family and how the child’s safety is being managed in the safety plan (Protective Capacity Assessment Stage 1).

Preparation Meeting

Purpose: This meeting serves as an introduction of the case by the CPS worker to the Permanency worker. The Preparation Meeting initiates co-case management with the goal of supporting the family being reunified as quickly and safely as possible.

Participants: Both the CPS and Permanency caseworkers and their supervisors must attend. It is best practice to also invite any other staff who may have knowledge of the family circumstance or may be involved in supporting the case or the family: MAPS, SSA, Certification staff, consultants, or previous caseworkers who may have worked with the family.

During the meeting:

Cooperative Cases

I. Review and confirm with the CPS worker legal authority for services if the family:
   A. Has been willing to work with Child Welfare,
   B. Is retaining legal custody of the child,
   C. Has an identified safety threat, and
   D. Has signed a Cooperative Services Application (CF 0304B).

A signed Cooperative Services Application provides written documentation of Child Welfare’s authority to provide services. The caseworker and family must both understand that, although the family is cooperatively entering services, Child Welfare may seek court authority if safety can no longer be managed in the parent’s home with an in-home ongoing safety plan.

Cooperative and Substitute Care Cases

A. The CPS worker will provide first-hand information about the family: Who the family members are, cultural considerations, the best ways to engage the family, and any information they are still hoping to gather.

B. The CPS worker will describe the 6 domains, the identified safety threats and discuss how safety threshold was met. The Permanency caseworker must be prepared to ask questions if they are unclear on any of the case record documentation or any information presented.

C. The CPS and permanency workers review the ICWA forms and Father’s Questionnaire completed by the CPS worker, the ongoing safety plan, legal issues, and any other currently available information pertinent to the family.

D. Review roles and responsibilities for both workers:
   1. CPS: All assessment activities, ICWA forms, Father’s Questionnaire, discovery.
   2. Permanency: Referrals, visitation, PCA.

E. Discuss how the CPS and Permanency worker will communicate and co-case manage together to support sufficient management of safety, trauma-informed engagement with the family, and progress toward reunification for out of home placements.

F. Collaborate on the best way for the Permanency worker to be introduced to the family, and discuss next steps for setting up the meeting keeping in mind this introduction will set the stage for engaging the family throughout the life of their case. Whenever possible, schedule a time for a joint home visit with the CPS worker. Whether or not a joint visit is possible, the caseworker must visit the child and the family within five working days of receiving the case.
At the conclusion of the Preparation Meeting, CPS will continue the CPS assessment, and Permanency will continue the Protective Capacity Assessment (PCA).

Meeting the Family:

I. When the child remains in the family home:

   A face-to-face meeting with the family within 5 days of the Preparation Meeting provides a venue for introductions, engagement, support and giving consistent information to the family.

   A. Activities during the meeting with the family may include:

      1. The CPS worker’s introduction of the parents and child/ren to the caseworker;

      2. A review of the ongoing safety plan with the parents; and

      3. The caseworker’s introduction of the next phase of the case planning process. This meeting begins the Introduction, Stage 2 of the protective capacity assessment.

   B. When meeting the family:

      1. Introduce yourself and explain your style of communication and working with families. Ask the family what communication style works best for them.

      2. Explain your role and responsibilities.

      3. Ask the family if they have questions or immediate concerns. Ask how the family is coping.

      4. Explain why it is important to learn about what they see as their strengths and challenges (enhanced and diminished protective capacities), and if they have any immediate needs (PCA Stage 3).

      5. Assess and confirm that the ongoing safety plan is sufficient to ensure child safety in the parents’ home.

      6. Discuss next steps for the parents and for the Department, action agreements, and schedule another home visit.

II. When a child has been placed in substitute care:

   In addition to the casework procedures outlined above, the caseworker also meets the child (if this has not occurred when meeting with the child’s parents), confirms the child’s safety in the substitute care environment, and reviews the Visit and Contact Plan (0831).

III. Obtain a photo of the child

   A. Ask the parent, or child if developmentally age appropriate, for a current picture of their child and if possible a family picture.

   B. Caseworker should ask the family if there are any cultural considerations around obtaining these photos.

   C. If the family expresses they do not want photos of their child to be obtained the caseworker should gather the reasons for the family’s request and staff with their supervisor. The family’s concerns should be documented in Or-Kids
D. Caseworker should explain to the parent the reason for the photos, examples: emergency situation such as a natural disaster or a missing youth, parents will be provided photos of their child as they are obtained, provide to court and CRB, use during family meetings, provide to the child so they have pictures of their milestones while in foster care.

E. If parent is not able to provide a current picture the caseworker will obtain a picture. Potential ways are by asking the foster parent to send a photo, obtaining the child’s school photo, SSA’s taking pictures during the parenting time, caseworker take pictures with their phone during face to face contact and for older children caseworkers can ask the youth to send them a picture or to take a picture.

F. These photos should be saved in the Or-Kids file cabinet, case management, type: Photo and include the date of the photo. Example: YYYY.DD.MM.Case#.child’sname.photo

Procedure

I. When meeting with the child:

A. Have face-to-face contact with the child within five working days of the Preparation Meeting.

B. Whenever possible and, if appropriate, schedule a time for a joint visit with the CPS worker and the child in the substitute care placement.

C. If a visit with the child in the home or the placement is not possible, try to schedule a time in another location familiar to the child where the child is introduced to the caseworker. A face-to-face meeting with the child provides them with a sense of understanding of who you are and why you are coming to visit.

   1. Activities during the meeting with the child may include:

      ■ The CPS worker explaining to the child that a new person will be visiting and working with the family to ensure that he or she is safe;

      ■ Assuring the child that you will work with his or her family; and

      ■ Letting the child know why family contact is restricted, if that is the case.

D. Review the Visit and Contact Plan (0831).

E. Review the Foster Child’s Bill of Rights.

F. Answer the child’s questions to the best of your ability. If you do not have an answer, let the child know when you will be able to get back to them with information.

G. Confirm a safe environment by observing and gathering information from the child to assist in assessing the child’s adjustment to substitute care placement, physical and emotional well-being, and safety in the substitute placement.

H. Based on the child’s age and development, provide the child with ways to contact you, such as giving them a card with your name, phone number and email address.

I. Prior to ending this first visit, provide the child with information on when he or she will see or hear from you again.

II. When meeting with the substitute care provider.

A. Explain your role in the case and establish ways to communicate information. Provide your business card, your email address, and the name and phone number of your supervisor.

B. Ask the substitute care provider about the child and their adjustment to the placement. Inquire about any special concerns or questions regarding meeting the child’s needs.

C. As soon as known, provide the substitute caregiver information on school enrollment, medical, dental and mental health care, if this has not been set up by the CPS worker. (Refer to Chapter 5 for detailed procedures regarding services to children.)

D. Confirm the child’s safety by following procedures in Section 9 of this chapter, Monitor the Child Welfare Case plan through Required Contact.

Regardless of all other case activities, the child must be seen every month.

III. Review the Visit and Contact Plan:

The CPS worker will have developed a Visit and Contact Plan (CF 0831) for the parents and the child at the time the child was removed from the parents’ home.

A. Review the Visit and Contact Plan to ensure:
   1. Visits and contacts are occurring as planned;
   2. The visit and contact plan conforms with the ongoing safety plan; and
   3. Ensure there is as much contact as possible with the parents knowing that frequent contact promotes timely reunification and is good for the parents and the child.
   4. Siblings are able to visit one another if they are not in the same substitute care setting or if some siblings are in the parents’ home.
   5. Arrange for as much visiting and other contact as is reasonably necessary to support the child’s attachment to their family.
   6. Have the Visit and Contact Plan translated into a language the parents understand if the primary language of the parent is not English.
   7. Complete a CF 0010A to request translation.
   8. Ensure culturally relevant and language appropriate services are being provided when necessary to meaningful visitation.

B. Address any barriers to visits or contact
   1. For example: Arrange transportation; reschedule at more convenient times; provide for alternate means of supervision; allow for phone, email or other contact; allow the parents to accompany the child to school events, church, medical appointments or other supervised family activities as appropriate.

C. If supervision is required, review the reasons for the level of supervision and determine whether restrictions continue to be necessary.

D. Revise the Visit and Contact Plan (831) as necessary.

Agreement Meeting
Prior to the CPS assessment being sent to a supervisor for approval, an Agreement Meeting must occur. This meeting should take place within 30 days from the assignment of the CPS worker.

Purpose: This meeting ensures CPS and Permanency agree regarding the identified safety threats, ongoing safety plan, conditions for return, visits and contact, legal issues and any other case planning information. The goal is to transition the case fully to Permanency for ongoing management without slowing down progress toward reunification.

Participants: Both the CPS and Permanency caseworkers and their supervisors need to attend. It is best practice to also invite any other staff who may have knowledge of the family circumstance or may be involved in supporting the case or the family: Family Meeting Facilitator, MAPS, SSA, Certification, Consultants, or previous caseworkers who may have worked with the family.

I. During the meeting:
   A. Confirm agreement on: Safety Threats, Ongoing Safety Plan, Conditions for Return, Expected Outcomes and visitations. If agreement on any of these items cannot be reached, a consultant and/or a program manager must be included to support agreement being reached.

   B. Confirm the CPS worker has completed the following forms: ICWA 1270 and Father’s Questionnaire. If any of these documents are not complete, discuss and document a plan for completion.

   C. The CPS worker and Permanency worker offer times they are available for a Family Engagement Meeting (FEM). If a meeting facilitator is not available, document a plan for offering available times to the family, scheduling the FEM, and inviting participants.

II. At the conclusion of the Agreement Meeting, the CPS worker will send the CPS assessment to the CPS supervisor for approval, and the CPS and permanency workers will continue to engage the family in case planning through the Family Engagement Meeting. After the FEM, the permanency worker becomes the primary worker.

III. Follow procedures for reunification with a parent in another state. (See Section 14 of this chapter for procedures for ICPC reunification.)

IV. Follow procedures for reunification with a parent in a foreign country. (See Section 14 for procedures for reunification with a parent in a foreign country.)

Case transfer from ongoing worker to ongoing worker

Procedure

I. When a case needs to be transferred, ensure the following are the same as in the sections above: the procedures for records and case review; contact with the prior caseworker; and contact with the child, parents and child’s substitute caregiver.

II. If a Child Welfare case plan has not been developed or updated within the past three months, the sending worker will update the plan prior to the transfer. When the case has been open for several months, the initial protective capacity assessment and the Child Welfare case plan have already been documented. The receiving worker is responsible for a complete review of the protective capacity assessment, the Child Welfare case plan, the ongoing safety plan, and all documentation of parents’ progress in meeting the expected outcomes of the Child Welfare case plan and the conditions for return of the child.

III. When receiving the case, the receiving worker is responsible for ongoing safety management.

Chapter 4
Managing Child Safety
In and Out of Home

Section 4: Confirm the Ongoing Safety Plan
Confirm the Ongoing Safety Plan

An ongoing safety plan is reviewed every 30 days. This review must be updated or documented in case notes in the Child Welfare information system.

An ongoing safety plan must be immediately updated in the Child Welfare information system when the plan changes or a new impending danger safety threat is identified.

In addition, whether or not the caseworker was part of developing the ongoing safety plan, the worker must confirm within five working days of the case transfer that the ongoing safety plan is sufficient by assuring the plan is:

I. Adequate to manage child safety by controlling safety threats that are uniquely occurring within the family; and

II. The least intrusive plan possible.

III. The worker must know and understand: Their role in monitoring the safety plan, including the responsibilities for contact with the safety service providers.

IV. Exactly what is expected in a safety plan and each safety service provider’s responsibilities.

Reviewing an in-home ongoing safety plan

I. Understand the rationale for the in-home safety plan, including fully understanding the safety threats, how the family meet the four in-home criteria, and what has happened to the child in the family.

II. Complete the following required actions:

A. Assess any changes in the protective capacity of parents and changes in the parent’s or legal guardian’s ability or willingness to keep the child safe.

B. Have a conversation with a verbal child.

C. Assess whether the ongoing safety plan keeps the child safe by determining:

1. Whether the home environment has no barriers for safety service providers to be in the home and to be safe; and

2. Whether the parent or legal guardian states they are:
   - Agreeable to the services in the ongoing safety plan.
   - Cooperating in services provided as prescribed by the ongoing safety plan.
   - Cooperating with all participants in the ongoing safety plan.

3. Participating in the actions and the time requirements of the ongoing safety plan; and

4. Meeting the expectations detailed in the ongoing safety plan.

D. Determine whether the condition of the child is satisfactory and safety threats to the child are managed.

E. Immediately notify your supervisor when it is determined the in-home ongoing safety plan is insufficient to ensure the safety of the child.
Reviewing an out-of-home safety plan

I. When a child is in substitute care, understand the rationale for an out-of-home safety plan, including fully understanding why an in-home safety plan was not a viable option for managing child safety, including which of the four in-home criteria were not met.

II. Review whether an out-of-home ongoing safety plan is still required.
   A. Review the conditions for return to determine if they are now met and, if not, what needs to happen to support the family to have the children returned home.
   B. Consider if or how any of the safety services can change or be less intrusive. Make appropriate adjustments if less intrusive interventions will manage child safety.
   C. Confirm that an out-of-home ongoing safety plan is the least intrusive plan to manage child safety.
   D. Confirm the out-of-home safety plan will keep the child safe. Rely on your supervisor to confirm that judgment.
   E. If safety service providers can be put in place to manage child safety in the parents’ home; behaviors, conditions or circumstances have changed; or parental protective capacity has been enhanced: discuss with the supervisor and follow procedures to plan for returning a child to the parent’s home. Update the ongoing safety plan.
   F. When considering updating an out-of-home safety plan to an in-home safety plan, discuss with the supervisor and follow the procedures for reunification in Section 14 of this chapter.

When child safety is not being managed with the ongoing safety plan

I. The caseworker must update the ongoing safety plan if:
   1. A child’s safety is not being managed by the ongoing safety plan (e.g., if the parent is no longer willing to cooperate or a safety service provider is no longer willing to continue his or her commitment); or
   A. The current safety plan is not adequately managing child safety. Caseworker actions if an ongoing safety plan is insufficient:
      1. Identify the safety threat the current safety plan is not controlling.
      2. Identify ways to manage the identified safety threat.
      3. Contact persons or providers who can help provide safety services in an ongoing safety plan.
      4. Consult with your supervisor if you need advice to develop a sufficient ongoing safety plan.
      5. Update the ongoing safety plan and obtain signatures of all safety plan participants.
      6. Obtain the approval of your supervisor before implementing an updated ongoing safety plan.

II. If a child is determined to be unsafe while in substitute care, immediately consult with your supervisor. Immediate action must be taken to keep the child safe (ORS 413-080-0052).
Documentation requirements

I. Document in case notes in the Child Welfare information system that the safety plan has been reviewed.

II. Document any updates to an ongoing safety plan in the Child Welfare information system and obtain the supervisor’s approval.

The supervisor’s role

I. Participate in a joint meeting with the transferring worker and new caseworker when a case is transferred.

II. Ensure that the transferring worker and the new caseworker know the specific date of the case transfer.

III. Become familiar with the case by reviewing the case file and electronic information. Speak with the transferring worker or supervisor, if needed.

IV. Provide consultation on managing the ongoing safety plan.

V. Review and confirm the sufficiency of the ongoing safety plan.

VI. Approve updates to the ongoing safety plan in the Child Welfare information system.

VII. Provide consultation on planning for the protective capacity assessment.

VIII. In rare cases, approve an exception to the required caseworker contact within five days and only when the sufficiency of the ongoing safety plan can be confirmed without face-to-face contact.

IX. Remember a supervisor must approve any update to an ongoing safety plan.

X. Document in the Child Welfare information system that the ongoing safety plan has been reviewed.

II. Chapter 413, Division 80, Monthly Contact and Monitoring Child and Young Adult Safety

Tip

Any time you question your confidence in a safety plan, chances are it is reasonable to question its sufficiency. “Maybe or probably” are not the standards when it comes to making sure children are safe.

Conduct the Protective Capacity Assessment (PCA)

Introduction to Protective Capacity

The PCA process begins during the CPS assessment when a petition has been filed or safety threats are identified in a cooperative in-home case. The caseworker completes the initial PCA within 30 days unless a supervisor approves an exception. The caseworker documents the PCA process in case notes and in the case plan as actions and contacts occur and information becomes known.

The findings of the PCA include identification of the parents’ enhanced and diminished protective capacities directly related to the identified safety threats. The caseworker uses the information to develop the written Child Welfare case plan. Understanding the parents’ enhanced and diminished protective capacities provides in-depth information on how behaviors, conditions or circumstances resulted in an unsafe child, and the related behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that must change to sustain child safety.

The caseworker documents the description of the specific behaviors, conditions and circumstances that must be present to sustain child safety. The descriptions are called the “expected outcomes of the Child Welfare case plan.” The assessment of protective capacity continues throughout the life of the case, and the caseworker updates the PCA’s findings at each 90-day review of the Child Welfare case plan. The updates are used to measure progress toward achieving the expected outcomes.

Two concepts critical to the PCA are:

I. Safety threats described in the Safety Threat Guide; and

II. Parental protective capacities as described in the Protective Capacity Reference.

The PCA process guides and focuses the interactions between the caseworker and parents toward a mutual understanding of what must change for the parents to regain responsibility for the child’s safety. A clear understanding of the specific behaviors, conditions, and circumstances that caused the child to be unsafe helps the caseworker and parents select services and activities focused specifically on building on the foundation of the parents’ enhanced capacities (strengths) and enhancing the diminished protective capacities. It promotes effective case planning and implementation.

Following the protective capacity assessment conducted in the first 30 days, the caseworker continually assesses parents’ protective capacities throughout the life of the case. Use parental protective capacities to measure progress toward achieving the expected outcomes and to guide decisions regarding the appropriate actions, services, and activities needed to facilitate change. As the relevant protective capacities are enhanced, the safety threats are diminished. Once the protective capacities are sufficient to eliminate, reduce, or manage the safety threats to ensure sustained child safety, the expected outcomes have been met and the case is closed.

Tip

Any time you question your confidence in a safety plan, chances are it is reasonable to question its sufficiency. “Maybe or probably” are not the standards when it comes to making sure children are safe.

Protective capacity assessment decisions

Answer the following questions by the end of the initial PCA:
I. Are safety threats being sufficiently managed in the least restrictive way possible?

II. Can existing protective capacities (strengths) be built upon to make needed changes?

III. What is the relationship between identified safety threats and currently diminished protective capacities?

IV. What is the parents’ perspective or awareness regarding safety threats and their relationship to diminished parental protective capacities?

V. What are parents ready, willing, and able to do to make needed changes?

VI. What are the areas of disagreement between the parents and Child Welfare regarding what needs to change?

VII. What change actions, services, and activities will be used to help enhance diminished parental protective capacities?

Stages of the protective capacity assessment

The four stages of the initial PCA are:

1. Stage 1: Preparation
2. Stage 2: Introduction
3. Stage 3: Exploration
4. Stage 4: Change strategy and case planning

   I. Each of the stages has a distinct purpose.

   II. There is no set amount of time to complete each stage. As you complete one, proceed to the next one.

   III. Of the four stages, all but the first require face-to-face contact with parents and perhaps others. Each family will not necessarily require exactly three separate interviews or meetings. The family may need additional or fewer meetings.

   IV. The transition from one stage to the next should evolve smoothly between identifying needs (diminished protective capacities), strengths (enhanced protective capacities), and solutions (actions, services and activities).

Stage 1 – Preparation

The caseworker, in consultation with the supervisor, plans for an efficient and focused PCA. The caseworker ensures all is ready for the PCA, including:

   I. The necessary documentation;

   II. Thorough knowledge of the case;

   III. Information regarding safety threats and the ongoing safety plan;

   IV. An understanding of the parents’ reaction to CPS; and
V. Anticipated challenges in conducting the PCA.

The caseworker can coordinate with the Preparation Meeting for most of these things.

The following lists in a logical order the activities required during the preparation stage. However, the specific circumstances in a given case control the order in which the activities occur.

Procedure

Review case information and child safety

I. Within five days of assignment to a case and prior to the Preparation Meeting, the caseworker must:

A. Review case records and speak to the CPS worker to gain a thorough understanding of the case history and actions and decisions during the current CPS assessment. These include:
   2. CPS assessment information including the maltreatment, nature of the maltreatment, child functioning, adult functioning, discipline and general parenting.
   3. Special circumstances Child Welfare knows about that affect the family including:
      - Domestic violence,
      - Parents’ own childhood history of abuse,
      - Substance abuse,
      - Mental illness,
      - Criminal behaviors, and
      - Other factors affecting the parents’ abilities to be protective.
   4. Current safety threats, and
   5. Information gathered at the Preparation Meeting.

II. Reconfirm the safety plan is sufficient. (See Section 4 of this chapter for detailed procedures.)

Plan initial contact

To help ensure an effective introduction stage, the caseworker must gather information and thoughtfully plan the approach. This includes who to involve and meeting logistics.

Procedure

I. At the Preparation Meeting talk with the CPS worker about what they have learned about the family that may help build rapport and support engagement.

II. Be clear about the purpose of the introduction meeting.

III. Given what is known about the parent’s trauma, decide how best to describe current safety threats and reasons for Child Welfare involvement.

IV. Plan how to explain the PCA’s purpose and process in clear, jargon-free language.
V. Based on what is known, form some initial impressions of the specific enhanced and diminished protective capacities that are, are not, or might be affecting child safety.

VI. Develop general areas of inquiry/discussion questions based on confirming and refuting initial assessments of relevant protective capacities.

VII. Identify professional records you need in case planning.

VIII. Consider whether professional evaluations might contribute to the protective capacity assessment.

IX. Gather information regarding other persons who could contribute to the PCA process.
   A. Learn about the family’s unique circumstances and composition. Grandparents, parents’ live-in partners, extended family, persons with significant attachment to the child, teachers, physicians, coaches, neighbors or members of the faith community may be able to appropriately contribute information and help the parents make necessary changes.
   B. Assess each person’s ability and willingness to provide helpful information and help the parents.
   C. Involve an Indian child’s tribe(s).
      1. If Child Welfare has legal custody of the child and if no one has notified the tribe, immediately notify the tribe of the child’s legal custody status.
      2. Explore the tribe’s available services that may address the child’s safety needs.
      3. Ask the tribe’s designated social service and/or ICWA representative if the tribe can assume custodial responsibility for the child.
      4. Help the tribe determine the tribe’s ability to assume custodial care or offer services or placement assistance for the child.
      5. Document in case notes all contacts with the child’s parents, Indian custodian and tribal social services representatives.
   D. If the child is in substitute care, ask the substitute caregiver what they have learned about the child. If the substitute caregiver is a relative, that person will likely have historical information about the family and the child.

X. Plan the timing, location and circumstances of the initial contact to facilitate communication without interruptions or distractions.
   A. Should the meeting be at the family home, the office or a neutral setting?
   B. Can child care be arranged to avoid interruptions?
   C. What day of the week and time of day would best allow the parents to focus on the meeting?

XI. Understand and plan to use the professional interpersonal skills needed for effective intervention. Refer to Appendix 4.4, Caseworker’s Role During the Protective Capacity Assessment, for more information.

After being fully informed and prepared, the CPS and Permanency caseworkers should decide who would be the best person to contact the family to schedule the first contact. The PCA process can continue to the introduction stage.
Conducting the PCA when parents are unable or unwilling to participate

In some situations, despite the caseworker’s best efforts to collaborate with the parents, they are unable or unwilling to engage. In other cases, the caseworker and the parents are at odds about what needs to change. The caseworker needs to move the case forward and continue to actively seek the parents’ involvement.

Procedure

I. Seek to understand what is leading to the parents’ inability or unwillingness to engage.

II. Work diligently to overcome the barriers to the parents’ participation.

III. Frequently and actively re-invite the parents’ participation.

IV. Continue to work toward establishing a partnership.

V. Obtain and review all relevant documentation.

VI. Interview other involved persons.

VII. Obtain professional assessments and evaluations.

VIII. Decide on the most likely relevant enhanced and diminished protective capacities.

IX. Clearly explain to the parents the identified enhanced and diminished protective capacities and how they are related to the safety threats.

X. Clearly explain to the parents what must change (the expected outcomes).

XI. Ask for the parents’ input/feedback.

XII. Provide a written Child Welfare case plan and Letter of Expectation to parents who remain unwilling to engage.

The caseworker should address parents’ noncompliance in the activities and services related to long-term changes in behavior, condition, or circumstance and increases in protective capacity (expected outcomes). The caseworker should use strategies to facilitate change. These should not be confused with, equated to, or dealt with the same as noncompliance with safety-related services required to manage child safety.

Stage 2 – Introduction

The initial meeting with the parents is a time to build rapport and a partnership, provide information, and allow parents to express themselves. Initial contact often happens after the Preparation Meeting. The introduction stage is the point of transition for the parents from CPS to ongoing case. This stage should allow parents to express their thoughts about what has happened up to this point to begin thinking about how they will choose to deal with their ongoing involvement with Child Welfare. Also refer to Section 3, Transfer of a Case, of this chapter.

I. First impressions make a difference. A calm, honest, open, empathetic, and respectful approach goes a long way toward establishing in the parents’ mind the kind of interactions they can expect from you.

II. Demonstrate respect for self-determination and your commitment to provide the information parents need to make informed choices.
III. Be open and clear about your objective and desire to work in partnership with them to understand and address the reasons for Child Welfare’s current involvement with their family due to identified safety threats to the child.

IV. Do not assume parents know what is going on in their case or understand why the case was opened for ongoing Child Welfare involvement.

V. Provide clear, honest answers to their questions.

The activities required during the introduction stage are outlined below. The activities are described in a logical order. However, the specific circumstances of the case control the order in which they occur.

Procedure part I

I. Introduce yourself by full name and job title.

II. Ensure the family has your contact information.

III. Describe your Child Welfare job in layman’s terms. Clearly differentiate between the goals of the CPS worker (assessing child safety, abuse, and neglect) and your role as the case continues (managing child safety and partnering with the parents to resolve the reasons for Child Welfare involvement).

IV. Clearly differentiate between the goals of the CPS worker (assessing child safety, abuse, and neglect) and your permanency role as the case continues (managing child safety and partnering with the parents to resolve the reasons for Child Welfare involvement).

V. Clarify reasons for Child Welfare involvement.

VI. Openly address issues and concerns.

VII. Explain the purpose of the PCA.

VIII. Set expectations.

IX. Evaluate the parents’ readiness and willingness to change.

X. Seek a commitment to participate.

Procedure part II

I. Ask the parents to share their understanding of the reasons for Child Welfare involvement. Do they know and understand the identified safety threats? If not, clearly explain the identified safety threats and the reason for Child Welfare involvement.

   A. Determine if the parents deny the threat, are in partial agreement, or are in nearly complete agreement.

   B. If needed, help the parents understand specifically what is making the child unsafe.

   C. Describe what your work with families usually involves (i.e., figuring out what needs to change for parents to regain responsibility for the care and safety of their children).

   D. Answer their questions about the current Child Welfare involvement in their lives.
Openly addressing issues and concerns

Until the caseworker answers questions and parents express their emotions, they are unable to move forward toward necessary change. Although difficult, it is the caseworker’s responsibility to initiate ongoing discussions so that parents consistently have these needs met. Refer to Appendix 4.7, Stages of Change.

Procedure

I. Seek feedback from the parents regarding the experience (generally) with Child Welfare up to this point. Expect and graciously accept resistance.

II. Allow parents to express feelings. Provide points of clarification when possible but avoid confrontation or arguing.

III. State your desire for a partnership with the parents and demonstrate genuine empathy, respect, and concern.

Explain the purpose of the PCA

When describing the PCA to parents, it is not necessary or advisable to use the professional terms such as “exploration,” “PCA,” or “protective capacities.” The goal is for the parents to understand:

I. The importance of working in partnership with the caseworker.

II. The process we will use to reach an understanding about how the identified safety threats resulted in an unsafe child. (We will want to understand together how the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances in their home resulted in their child being hurt.)

III. That specific behaviors, conditions, and circumstances can be identified, described, and observed that lead to safety or lack of safety for children.

IV. That there are specific things we can identify that will lead to their child being safe or being hurt; and

V. That the focus of Child Welfare’s intervention will be to address the identified safety threats by helping parents increase their abilities to caring for and keeping their child safe. (It will be our job to figure out with them why their child was hurt, what their child needs from them to stay safe, and what they can do as parents to care for and protect their child.)

Procedure

I. Describe the purpose, goals, and objectives of the PCA, which are:

   A. Building collaborative partnerships.

   B. Gaining a mutual understanding of what changes are needed to restore and sustain child safety (expected outcomes).

   C. Promoting family involvement and self-determination in case planning and implementation.

   D. Developing focused, effective, individualized case plans (actions, services, activities).

II. Describe the stages of the PCA by briefly explaining the remaining two stages of the PCA, which are:

   A. Exploration – identifying and discussing what must change to restore and sustain child safety; determining what parents are willing to work on to increase their ability to care for and keep their child safe.

B. Change strategy and case planning – prioritizing the focus of the Child Welfare case plan; identifying the specific actions, services, and activities the parents are willing to commit to increase their ability to care for and keep their child safe.

Set expectations

Procedure

I. Discuss the expectations you have for the parents, both generally during the life of the case and specifically regarding the PCA.

II. Reinforce the goal of a partnership while asking the parents for:

   A. Agreement or commitment to participate in meetings, interviews, planning, activities, and services.
   B. Openness or willingness to consider issues, concerns, and possible solutions.
   C. Expression of their perspective and feelings regarding what has been leading to the identified safety threats, what needs to change, how things are going, and what might work better.
   D. Involvement in identifying children’s unmet needs.
   E. Involvement in developing Child Welfare case plans and action plans.
   F. Thoughtful decision-making based upon their right of self-determination.

      1. People may be unfamiliar with the concept of self-determination and will need a definition.

Evaluate the parents’ readiness and willingness to change

Procedure

I. Evaluate the parents’ readiness for change.

   A. Are the parents willing to participate with Child Welfare?
   B. Do they respond to phone calls?
   C. Are they available and do they participate in visits?
   D. Are the parents willing to engage in the protective capacity assessment process?
   E. Are they willing to consider change?
   F. Have they come up with good ideas on their own?

II. Consider ways to increase the parents’ readiness and willingness to change.

   A. What barriers, real or imagined, do the parents need to address?
   B. Are there extended family members or other family friends available to help the family?
   C. Is there something the parents can accomplish quickly to feel some measure of success?

Seek a commitment to participate
I. Conclude the introduction stage by overtly seeking a commitment from parents to participate in the PCA process and in case planning and implementation. Ask for their continued participation.

II. Express appreciation to the parents for their participation and reaffirm your desire for a collaborative partnership.

III. Set the date, time, and place of the next contact with the parents or, if appropriate, move to the next stage of the PCA during this meeting.

IV. Provide the 24-hour contact information for your local office.

V. If the parents are unwilling to commit to the PCA process, try to gain additional information and discuss with them the reasons they are unwilling to participate in the process. Seek to find some areas of mutual agreement, such as meeting their child’s needs, which can serve as a point of further discussion or allow for some collaborative planning between the parent and the caseworker. Finding some area of agreement demonstrates the caseworker’s intent to use the parent’s input and build a collaborative relationship.

Document the introduction stage

I. Document the persons’ present, date, location and circumstances of each contact.

II. Document relevant observations of the family in the Child Welfare information system.

III. Including behaviors, conditions, circumstances, and activities.

Stage 3 – Exploration

This stage is a process of joint exploration with the parents of what must change for the parents to regain and sustain responsibility for their child’s safety. The exploration stage helps identify the enhanced protective capacities (strengths) and diminished protective capacities (needs) directly related to the identified safety threats. The stage concludes with determining what actions, services, and activities the parents are ready and willing to participate in to increase their protective capacities.

Refer to Caseworker’s Role During the Protective Capacity Assessment, Appendix 4.4, for supplemental information on facilitating the PCA process.

Below are the activities required during the exploration stage. The activities are in a logical order, but the case’s specific circumstances control the order.

Plan for successful exploration

Procedure

I. As with the introduction stage, give careful thought and preplanning about the persons to be present, the timing, and environment for the meeting best for communication and exploration. If the child is in substitute care, an Oregon Family Decision-making Meeting must be considered and is often appropriate for a more thorough understanding of the family. For more information on conducting meetings, refer to Section 6, Conduct family meetings.
II. Based on what is currently known, enter the exploration stage prepared to discuss current thoughts regarding the parents’ likely enhanced and diminished protective capacities and relationship to the identified safety threats. Also prepare to discuss possible actions, services and activities to enhance protective capacities.

III. Develop specific inquiry and discussion questions based on wanting to confirm or refute the initial assessment of protective capacities made during the CPS assessment.

IV. Prepare to maintain an open mind, remain sensitive to the parents’ point of view, and honor their right to self-determination.

V. Plan how to explain to the parents the concept of enhanced and diminished protective capacities as related to the safety threats, case planning, and actions, services and activities in terms the parents can understand.

Introduce the exploration stage

Procedure

I. Explain to the parents that the purpose of the exploration stage is:

   A. To reach understanding and agreement on how the identified safety threats cause their child to be unsafe.

   B. To decide what must change.

   C. To learn what the parents are willing to do.

II. Define the concepts of enhanced and diminished protective capacities and their relationship to safety threats, case planning, and actions, services, and activities.

   A. Identifying enhanced protective capacities (strengths) allows parents to build on them and avoids unnecessary efforts and services (i.e., if the parents know how to parent, parenting classes are not needed).

   B. Identifying diminished protective capacities (needs) provides clarity for everyone (parents, Child Welfare, providers, courts) on what must change in the family’s behaviors, conditions, or circumstances for the child to be cared for and safe. Identifying protective capacities also leads to specific interventions (individualized actions, services, and activities).

III. Ask for feedback, answer questions, acknowledge and address difficult emotions to allow the parents to move forward to participation.

Gather additional information about family and child circumstances

If the child is in substitute care, an Oregon Family Decision-making Meeting is often appropriate. It provides a more thorough understanding of the family. For more information on conducting meetings, refer to Section 6, Conduct Family Meetings.

Procedure
I. Through discussion with the parents, develop additional knowledge about:

A. Special circumstances affecting the family such as:
   1. Domestic violence.
   2. Parents’ own childhood history of abuse.
   3. Substance abuse.
   4. Mental illness.
   5. Criminal behaviors.

B. Additional individuals who may contribute to the PCA process (i.e., family members, professionals, tribal members, neighbors, faith community, teachers). Ask about:
   1. Who may contribute to understanding the current situation?
   2. Who may contribute to restoring child safety, permanency and well-being?
   3. When the child is a Native American child, how is or can the tribe(s) be involved?

C. Determine whether expert assessments or evaluations would help assess child needs and parental protective capacities.

D. What professional records should be obtained and considered in case planning?
   1. Medical records.
   2. Treatment records.
   3. Legal records.

E. Ask about special assessments that may have occurred regarding the child’s special or unique needs. Also refer to “Determine the child’s needs” in the next section.

F. Obtain information regarding other persons or professionals who know about the child’s special need.

Referrals to family planning services

When talking with the family about current circumstances, if a family member who is an adult or a child 15 years of age or older and is receiving department services requests family planning information, make appropriate referrals such as to the county health departments and other qualified health care providers. Find more resources through the Oregon Health Authority Family Planning Program website. Family planning and birth control services may include:

I. Interviews with trained personnel;

II. Distribution of literature;

III. Referral to a licensed physician for consultation, examination, medical treatment and prescription; and

IV. As prescribed, distribution of rhythm charts, the initial supply of a drug or other medical preparation, contraceptive devices and similar products.
Also, refer to procedures for providing family planning information for children age 15 and older in Child Welfare custody, contained in Chapter 5, Section 21.

Determine the child’s needs

Whenever Child Welfare must intervene to manage child safety, Child Welfare must assess the child’s needs. The assessment begins during the CPS assessment. Its primary focus is child safety. The needs of the child are assessed as long as Child Welfare intervention is required. A child’s needs are determined based upon information from the child’s parents, extended family, school, and any medical or mental health providers the child has or has had in the past. Services to a child are individualized to meet the child’s specific needs.

Understanding the parameters and limitations of Child Welfare responsibilities

When the parent retains legal custody of the child

I. If the family retains legal custody of the child, the parent retains the responsibility for medical and educational needs of the child. If the reasons that brought the family to the attention of Child Welfare are unrelated to physical health issues of the child, it is not Child Welfare’s responsibility to monitor medical care. However, it remains the caseworker’s responsibility to ensure that the child is safe and his or her needs are being met. If at any time the caseworker determines that the child’s unattended health care needs are a safety threat, follow procedures for managing a new safety threat.

II. If the child is school age, the caseworker may discuss any issues regarding school with the family as part of the assessment and assist as appropriate. However, educational issues should not be a reason to continue involvement once the safety threats have been resolved.

III. If Child Welfare obtains temporary legal custody of a child, but the child remains in the parent’s physical custody, Child Welfare is responsible for:
   - Monitoring the child’s medical and mental health care;
   - Ensuring the parents are getting the child to appointments; and
   - Helping the family access medical and mental health resources.

IV. Monitor school attendance, review school records and any educational assessment, and ensure the child’s educational needs are met. See Educational section below.

When Child Welfare has temporary legal custody of the child and the child is placed in substitute care

I. When Child Welfare is the child’s legal custodian and thus has legal and physical custody, Child Welfare is responsible for identifying and meeting the child’s needs.

II. The caseworker ensures the child’s physical and mental health as well as developmental and educational needs are addressed. There are specific procedures for each of these topics. For detailed procedures, refer to Chapter 5, Services to Children.

Procedure
Assessment of a child’s needs takes place during:

I. Face-to-face contact with the child,
II. Face-to-face contact with the parents,
III. Contact with others providing services to the child, and
IV. Others, such as extended family, with knowledge of the child’s functioning.

Physical health needs

I. Talk with the child’s parents and the child, if age appropriate, about current health and dental needs.
II. Work to form a partnership with the parents to learn and understand the child’s physical health needs.
III. Ask the parents to obtain copies of the child’s health records or to sign an Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information, MSC 3010, which authorizes disclosure of the child’s medical or dental records.
IV. Contact the child’s physician and dentist.
V. Obtain medical records for the child, including immunization records.
VI. Determine if the child has special medical needs or is vulnerable because of special circumstances. For example, the child was exposed to drugs or alcohol in utero or has a chronic health condition, such as juvenile diabetes.
VII. Determine whether the child’s physical health needs must be addressed with services in the written Child Welfare case plan or the parents’ protective capacity includes ability and willingness to tend to the child’s health care.

Mental health needs

I. Ask the child’s parents and the child, if age appropriate, whether the child has had any mental health assessments or other specialized assessments including psychological or psychiatric evaluations.
II. Ask the parents to obtain copies of the child’s health records or ask the parent to sign an Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information, MSC 3010, which authorizes release of the child’s mental health records.
III. Determine if the child has special mental health needs or is vulnerable because of special circumstances; e.g., the child’s mental health condition results in challenging behaviors. Consider that any child victim of abuse is likely to have some mental health needs. These needs may be compounded when the child is removed from the home.
IV. Determine if:
   A. The child’s mental health needs must be addressed with services in the written Child Welfare case plan; or
   B. If the parent’s protective capacity includes ability and willingness to tend to the child’s mental health care.
Developmental needs

I. Discuss the child’s developmental issues with the parents and other family members as well as educators, mental health and medical service providers.

II. Work with the parents to obtain further assessment of the child’s developmental milestones with a physician or mental health professional, or through the child’s school or the local education service district.

III. Work with the parents to obtain a developmental assessment through Early Intervention or Early Childhood Education Services if the child is birth through 5 years old and there are any concerns regarding developmental delays. Follow up on any referral to Early Intervention completed during the CPS assessment for a child birth through 3 years old.

IV. Work with the parents to request a developmental assessment through the child’s school if the child is school age.

V. Determine if a child has developmental needs or is vulnerable because of special circumstances; e.g., when the parents do not accept or understand the child’s identified developmental delays.

VI. Determine whether the child’s developmental needs:
   A. Must be addressed with services in the written Child Welfare case plan; or
   B. If the parents’ protective capacity includes ability and willingness to tend to the child’s identified developmental needs.

Educational needs

I. Ask the child’s parents and the child, if age appropriate, whether the child has specific educational needs or has had any educational assessments or evaluations.

II. Ask the parents to obtain copies of the child’s education records or to sign an Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information, ODHS 3010, specifying authorization to release the child’s education records.

III. Determine if the child has educational needs.

IV. Determine whether the child’s educational needs:
   A. Must be addressed with services in the written Child Welfare case plan; or
   B. The parents’ protective capacity includes ability and willingness to tend to the child’s education.

For detailed information, see Chapter 5, Services to Children.

For detailed information on independent living program services, refer to Chapter 5, section 29, Youth Transitions.

Explore what led to the child being unsafe

Procedure

I. Review the identified safety threats with the parent. For example:
   A. The mother’s condition (mother is alcoholic) results in no adult in the home routinely performing parenting duties and responsibilities that ensure child safety (mother drinks, passes out and is unavailable). The child has a diagnosed medical condition (diabetes) and is not receiving necessary care and treatment.

B. Re-evaluate if the parents are denying the presence of safety threats, are in partial agreement, or are in near complete agreement.

C. If necessary, help the parents understand specifically what makes the child unsafe.

II. Seek information from others who know the family and the behaviors, conditions or circumstances that led to an unsafe child.

III. Reach agreement with the parents about what the child needs to be cared for and safe.

A. For example:
The child needs a responsible adult to ensure the daily basic needs, including the medical needs related to the diabetes, are consistently met.

IV. Examine the current family behaviors, conditions and circumstances.

A. What has changed to create the unsafe situation?
B. What has and has not worked in the past?
C. Explore general adult functioning, general child functioning, adult functioning in the parental role, and adult functioning regarding discipline.

V. Discuss which diminished protective capacities may have resulted in the identified safety threats. (Refer to Protective Capacity Reference Guide, Appendix 4.3.)

A. Encourage the parents to say which diminished protective capacities led to an unsafe child.
B. If the parents are unable or unwilling to offer their opinion, suggest which protective capacities may be diminished and ask for feedback.

VI. Reach agreement with the parents about which diminished protective capacities directly affect child safety. For example:

A. A parent does not set aside his or her needs in favor of the child. (The parent drinks alcohol to the point of passing out several times each week rather than being alert and available to care for the child.)
B. The parents do not take necessary action. (The parents know what the child needs but take no action to ensure the child’s needs, including the special needs related to the diabetes, are consistently met.)

Identify and use enhanced protective capacities (strengths)

Procedure

I. Use the information gathered thus far to identify the family’s specific enhanced protective capacities.

II. Reach agreement with the parents about what enhanced protective capacities are present and can be built upon to restore child safety.
A. Encourage the parents to say which enhanced protective capacities (strengths) could be built upon to address the identified safety threats.

B. If the parents are unable or unwilling to offer their perspective, suggest which protective capacities may be enhanced and ask for feedback.

C. For example:
   1. The parents know how to care for the child’s diabetes.
   2. The parents have a history of providing appropriate care for the child.
   3. The parents use necessary resources to meet the child’s needs (i.e., the child is enrolled in the Oregon Health Plan and has access to all needed diabetes supplies and medication).

III. Explore what the parents might do to build upon enhanced protective capacities and increase diminished protective capacities to reach the case’s expected outcomes.

   A. Ask the parents to brainstorm a list of everything that might help them reach the expected outcome and regain safety for the child.

   B. If the parents are unable or unwilling to offer ideas, make as many suggestions as possible about actions, services and activities that may be helpful.

      1. For example:
         - Addiction services.
         - AA meetings.
         - Church involvement and support.
         - Community support services.
         - A change in child custody to the other parent who will meet the child’s needs.
         - Medical services.
         - Mental health services.
         - Another responsible adult (perhaps a relative) taking full responsibility for ensuring the child’s needs are met in the foreseeable future.

Explore what must change

Now that the protective capacities that resulted in the identified safety threats are better understood, the caseworker and parent can work to mutually agree about what must change in the identified safety threats and parental protective capacities to restore and sustain child safety.

When the parent accomplishes an expected outcome, Child Welfare will no longer need to intervene to manage a child’s safety. As a result, the case will close. The expected outcome is a desired end result that takes effort to achieve. While child safety must be managed in the moment, the expected outcome is achieved through an ongoing safety plan and, over time, through increasing the parent’s protective capacities and/or through a significant change in the behaviors, conditions or circumstances that led to the identified safety threat to the child.

The expected outcome is the concrete statement of the observable, sustained behaviors, conditions or circumstances that, when accomplished, will reduce, eliminate or manage the identified safety threats. The Child Welfare case plan will document them.

Procedure

I. Focusing on the identified diminished protective capacities, agree about what must happen for the child’s safety to be sustained without Child Welfare’s involvement.

   A. Talk about what it will look like when the child is safe.

   B. How will the parents (and Child Welfare) know that the child is safe?

   C. What will change so that the child’s safety is sustained?

II. Restate the identified diminished protective capacities as an expected outcome, an observable, sustained change in behavior, condition or circumstance. These will be documented in the Child Welfare case plan. For example, using the case scenario related to the parent frequently drinking to the point of passing out and neglecting the child’s care and treatment for diabetes, the expected outcomes statements could be the following:

   A. The child’s basic needs are met at all times, including the special care related to diabetes.

   B. The child has developmentally appropriate care and supervision at all times.

   C. A responsible adult will ensure there is adequate care for and treatment of the child’s diabetes, and the child will not be responsible for self-care and treatment.

Explore how to change

Once the expected outcomes and observable changes in behavior, condition, or circumstance are identified, the caseworker and parents discuss what actions or services need to occur to achieve the expected outcomes. Keep in mind, increasing the parents’ protective capacities is only one way to work toward expected outcomes. Changes in the family structure, including who has custody of the child, or other changes in circumstances and environment are also considered to achieve the expected outcomes.

Procedure

I. Discuss differences between observable, sustained change in the parents’ behavior, condition, or circumstances and the parent’s compliance with attending services or participation in activities. Relate how progress is measured by observable, sustained changes, not by the parent “jumping through hoops.”

II. Talk about what must eventually exist in order to establish a safe home, to restore the parent to the protective role and for Child Welfare’s intervention to end.

III. Decide which of the diminished protective capacities will be the focus of change.

Note: Do not look at everything that could possibly change. Instead, keep the focus on child safety. Work toward success.

A. Another way to say this is, “What protective capacities must be enhanced so that the child will be safe and remain safe in the long term?”
Explore what the parents are willing to do

Procedure

I. Work from the brainstormed list of possible actions, services, and activities and the expected outcomes. Ask the parents what, specifically, they are willing to start doing now.
   A. Where are the parents willing to begin to make initial changes?
   B. What’s the best place to start?
   C. Are there activities the parents are willing to do that will provide early success?

II. List the initial actions, services, and activities in which the parents are willing to engage.

III. Discuss any barriers to the chosen actions, services, and activities.
   A. What needs to be in place for the parents to do what is necessary to change?
   B. What special considerations need to be addressed?
   C. Are there language or cultural considerations?
   D. Are there transportation, child care, housing, funding or other external factors preventing access?

IV. Discuss possible solutions to each identified barrier including what Child Welfare can and cannot provide. Discuss any possible alternatives.

V. Agree which barriers can be overcome and which may prevent particular actions, services, and activities.

VI. Discuss the benefits of engaging the extended family in a Family Decision Meeting (or an Oregon Family Decision-making Meeting) in developing the family’s plan, which is integrated into the Child Welfare case plan, if appropriate.

VII. Request the parent’s and extended family members’ participation in a Family Decision Meeting (Refer to Section 6, Conducting Family Meetings for more information on meetings.)

Document the exploration stage

Procedure

Case note the person’s present date, location, and circumstances of each contact, including relevant observations, conditions, activities, and circumstances of the family in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

The supervisor’s role

I. Consult with caseworkers to support and encourage their efforts to do the following:
   A. Approach the process of the protective capacity assessment as requiring parents’ involvement, partnership, and mutual agreement.
   B. Acknowledge and build on parents’ strengths (enhanced protective capacities) as caseworkers attempt to facilitate the process of change.
C. Focus on the identified safety threats.
D. Articulate to parents observable, measurable changes to lead to sustained child safety.

II. When consulting with caseworkers and developing Child Welfare case plans, confirm that the expected outcomes, when achieved, will likely increase a parents’ protective capacity or reduce or eliminate or manage safety threats. This will likely result in parents being able to manage child safety without Child Welfare’s intervention.

III. Monitor when cases should be reviewed, based on decisions about child safety that emerge from, among other factors:
   A. An assessment about whether the parental protective capacity has changed; and
   B. Whether this change has resulted in sustained child safety; or
   C. Whether safety threats no longer exist.

IV. Assist the caseworker when the caseworker experiences challenges in reaching a mutually agreed upon decision (between Child Welfare and the parent) about expected outcomes.

V. Ensure the caseworker communicates to community partners (including schools, courts, safety service providers, CASAs, attorneys, etc.) that Child Welfare plans to close the case when the expected outcomes have been met (parents’ protective capacities have been enhanced so that they can adequately manage the identified safety threats or the identified safety threats are reduced or eliminated, and child safety is sustained).

Stage 4 – Change strategy and case planning

During this final stage of the initial PCA, the caseworker and parents work together to:

I. Prioritize what must change;

II. Create an individualized Child Welfare Case plan that documents the expected outcomes; and

III. Select specific actions, services, and activities to achieve the expected outcomes.

A collaborative protective capacity assessment does not mean that parents direct the focus of the Child Welfare case plan. What must change and, therefore, what must be addressed in the Child Welfare case plan is related to the identified child safety threats. Thus, to a large extent, the plan is not negotiable. However, parents should have a say in how change occurs and what a Child Welfare case Plan may ultimately look like.

When parents choose not to participate or commit to changing, acknowledge areas of disagreement, be clear about potential consequences for choices and emphasize areas where there is agreement.

Determine expected outcomes

Procedure

I. Review with the parents the relationship between the identified safety threats and the diminished protective capacities.

II. Discuss with the parents what behavior, conditions, or circumstances must exist to manage or remediate the identified safety threats.

III. Consider and identify the child’s specific needs that the Child Welfare case plan must address.

IV. Document the expected outcomes in measurable behavioral terms. Expected outcomes are what we anticipate will exist in the future and, thus, are written in the future tense.

V. The Child Welfare Case plan might also include an expected outcome related to the protective capacity of Mom learning to put her children’s needs before her own. An expected outcome might read:

Within the next six months:

A. Mom will learn to understand and describe her child’s needs for safety and security that require she think about and respond to the child’s needs before her own.

B. Mom will be able to describe the dangers that leaving the children alone creates, and she will describe the feelings the children may have as a result of being exposed to these dangers.

C. Mom will be able to accept and demonstrate her ongoing ability to ensure that children’s basic needs for safety are met.

I. If the parent can agree without arguing or being judgmental, be clear about what you (on behalf of Child Welfare) believe needs to change, why you believe this, and your beliefs about how the Child Welfare case plan (actions, activities, supports, and services, etc.) can help the family and, ultimately, the child.

A. Ask for feedback.

B. Consult with your supervisor about how to increase the prospect of the parents and Child Welfare mutually agreeing on a decision, when this is not occurring.

1. Other sections of procedure in this chapter — Determine Appropriate Actions, Services and Activities (below), and Document the Child Welfare case plan, Section 7 — address the use of a Letter of Expectation and the Child Welfare case plan when Child Welfare and parents do not reach an agreement.

C. Explain to the parents that, together with the parents, Child Welfare will continually review and report the progress made toward the expected outcomes, including at the following junctures:

1. As an ongoing activity, the caseworker will measure progress and will look at, among other things, the progress being made toward achieving the expected outcomes. This will be reviewed at least every 90 days during the case plan review (addressed further in this chapter, in the Measure Progress section).

2. When providing updates about progress to the court, the caseworker will report, among other things, the progress or lack thereof being made in achieving the expected outcomes (addressed further in Chapter 9, Work With the Courts and External Partners).

3. When deciding to close the in-home ongoing safety plan and the case, the caseworker must determine the parents have demonstrated capacity to sustain the safety of the child. This is based upon, among other things, the extent to which parents’ achievement of expected outcomes supports their ability to sustain the child’s safety. (Refer to Closing an In-home Ongoing Safety Plan in this chapter.)

Determine appropriate actions, services and activities

After the protective capacities are understood and well-defined, it is important to determine services that will help:

I. Facilitate necessary change;

II. Achieve the expected outcomes;

III. Enhance specific diminished protective capacities; and

IV. Help the parents regain and sustain primary responsibility for their child’s safety.

While formal, structured services such as parenting classes, family sexual abuse treatment or intensive family services may be used when appropriate, these are by no means the only available services and supports. Services may also include support and help from individuals in the family system, community resources, treatment providers or any number of creative and flexible interventions.

Using information gained during the protective capacity assessment and determination of the child’s needs, the caseworker and parents can decide what will assist the family in making the necessary change. Exploring the available intervention options with the parents results in an individualized approach to the family that is culturally relevant and maximizes the family’s self-determination and commitment to change.

If the parents of a child living in the parents’ home refuse to participate in the process of determining services, or if parents refuse safety services the caseworker sees as critical to managing child safety while the child remains in the family home, the caseworker must immediately consult with the supervisor to determine any actions necessary to adequately manage the child’s safety at this time.

Remember, the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances necessary to keep a child safe at home should not be confused with services or activities that will lead to sustained change of parental protective capacity (the expected outcomes).

Procedure

The caseworker must:

I. Meet with the parents to explore services (supports, treatment providers, other interventions) available and helpful to the parents.

II. Determine if an expert evaluation for either a parent or the child is appropriate. Expert evaluation is a written assessment prepared by a professional with specialized knowledge of a particular subject matter such as physical, psychological or mental health, sexual deviancy, substance abuse, and domestic violence to:

   A. Help analyze child safety when a specific condition or behavior requires more professional assessment, including situations such as:

      1. The parent or child is displaying unusual or bizarre behaviors that indicate:

         ■ Emotional or behavioral problems;
         ■ Physical illness, physical disability, or mental illness;
Suicidal ideation; or Homicidal ideation.

2. Determine service or treatment needs based on information gathered up to this point.

3. Provide more information on an individual’s functioning related to the professional’s specialized knowledge; or

4. Develop a better understanding of whether the individual’s functioning affects his or her protective capacity.

III. If an expert evaluation is appropriate, do the following:

A. Explain to the parents the need to secure an expert evaluation.

B. Obtain the consent of the parent prior to arranging the expert evaluation.

C. Explain the use of the Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information (ODHS 3010) to the parents and seek permission to exchange information with the individual or agency doing the evaluation.

D. Obtain the parent’s signature on the 3010.

E. Choose an appropriate expert, refer for the evaluation, and provide background material that is needed for a thorough and accurate evaluation. Ask the evaluator questions that provide the information Child Welfare needs.

IV. Consult with your supervisor if the parent refuses an expert evaluation.

V. Upon receipt of an expert evaluation:

A. Assess whether information obtained in the expert evaluation needs to be shared with any individuals or agencies providing support, treatment or safety services so that the intervention is best able to meet the identified parent’s needs and child safety is maintained. If so:
   1. Obtain permission to re-release evaluation from the expert evaluator to the service provider(s), and
   2. Obtain permission from the parent to release information from expert evaluation to the service provider.

B. If this permission is not granted, consult with a supervisor to determine next steps.

VI. Determine whether it is appropriate to incorporate the expert evaluator’s recommendations into the Child Welfare case plan:

A. If not appropriate to incorporate recommendations into Child Welfare case plan:
   1. Consult with the supervisor to obtain approval to not follow recommendations; and
   2. Document the recommendations in the Child Welfare case plan in ODHS’s information system and, if recommendations are not used, document the rationale for the determination not to use those recommendations.

VII. Along with the parents, consider appropriate services or interventions by critically examining key questions, such as:
A. What will it look like when the child is safe and the parents have regained responsibility to care for and keep the child safe? Then focus on what is needed to get there.

B. How might services or supports improve behaviors, conditions, or circumstances and facilitate permanency in the home?

C. How can parents’ capacity to provide for their children’s needs, including the need to care for and keep the child safe, be enhanced? This may be achieved by directing services to the parents or the child.

D. How can the parents’ strengths be used to increase child safety and enhance protective capacities?

E. Consider acknowledging and using what is already working well and the effect that acknowledgement may have on a family and their readiness for change.

F. Explore how to build on the protective capacities already in place.

G. Ensure services are not focused on things the parents are currently doing well.

H. Who is available to the parents in their already existing support network? Can these people provide supports?

I. Who is available and willing to participate with the family now?

J. Are flexible and creative options being explored and entertained?

K. Are proposed interventions culturally appropriate?

L. Do activities and recommended services respect the parents’ belief system and values?

M. Are the services, supports, or activities the least intrusive interventions available for this family?

N. Are the services, supports, or activities able to remain in place after Child Welfare is no longer involved? Has this potential benefit been adequately considered?

O. What opportunities are there to connect the parents with supports available to people in the community that do not require Child Welfare’s involvement?

P. What are the parents’ ideas about what would be most helpful to them?

Q. How am I, as a caseworker, honoring that the parents have a right to select choices and make decisions that affect their life?

R. How do I adjust any preconceived intervention ideas after analyzing information from the parents about:
   1. What is most comfortable for them?
   2. What do they perceive as the most valuable intervention?
   3. What concerns or hesitations do they have about the use of particular supports?

S. Will the proposed services, supports, and activities address the identified safety threats so that safety can be managed, and the parents can resume responsibility for protecting the child and meeting the child’s needs without the involvement of Child Welfare?

T. What are the reasons for, conditions that contributed to, or circumstances that surround the diminished protective capacities?
   1. Given this, are the proposed interventions likely going to be helpful?
2. Is there a match between the circumstances of the diminished protective capacity, the identified safety threats, and the selected intervention?

3. Will the proposed services to the parents or the child likely improve conditions in the parents’ home and increase likelihood for sustained child safety without Child Welfare’s involvement?

VIII. Have discussions with parents and seek agreement about where to begin and how to arrange services, supports, interventions, and activities. Note: Information gathered in this discussion will be used when the Child Welfare case plan is written and an action agreement is developed.

A. Consider:
   1. The parents’ schedules;
   2. Other commitments in the parents’ lives;
   3. Sense of loss parents may feel when contemplating or making changes;
   4. Readiness for change at this moment;
   5. What is most important to the parents at this point?
   6. Why and how the protective capacities have become diminished;
   7. Appropriate timing of interventions;
   8. Importance of sequencing steps;
   9. Frequency with which the next steps should be decided; or
   10. Parents’ need for clear, concrete steps or preference other approaches.

IX. When selecting service providers, consider some of the following:

A. Does the service provider have the knowledge, skills and ability to assist the family with the specific services needed to address the parents’ identified diminished protective capacity?

B. Is there a match between the service being considered and the diminished protective capacities that have been identified? In other words, will the service likely address the behavior, condition, or circumstances that led to the identified safety threat?

For example: A child is neglected when her basic needs were not met (safety threat). The parents lack knowledge about typical child development (diminished protective capacity). The service provides necessary information about child development (good match), or the service offers treatment for the parents’ traumatic childhoods, when this issue was not connected to the safety threat (poor match).

X. When referring to services, share necessary information with service providers. Necessary information may include anything that will help the parents achieve the expected outcome, enhance protective capacities, and/or meet an identified child or family need.

XI. Consider the information these individuals would likely need to know to help the parent work toward increasing protective capacities and achieving expected outcomes.

XIII. Ask the parents to sign the ODHS 3010 to allow Child Welfare to exchange pertinent information with them.

A. State form 2099i lists helpful instructions for completing the ODHS 3010.
B. Consult with supervisor when the parent hesitates signing ODHS 3010, after you have fully explained the purpose, reason for and use of information, and you have heard the parents’ concerns.

XIV. Communicate with service providers and reach agreement regarding the following:

A. How will they know change is occurring and progress is or is not being made?
B. What will they be able to observe in the parents’ behaviors, attitude, thinking, etc. that indicates to them the expected outcome is or is not being met?
C. How will the service provider notify Child Welfare and the parents of the progress or lack thereof?
D. How will contact between Child Welfare and service providers be made a minimum of every 90 days?
E. How often will Child Welfare and the parents receive this feedback?
F. What does Child Welfare expect to see from the parents in observable, measurable progress?
G. How will we determine if adequate progress is being made?

XV. Explain to the parents that every service provider, for the parents or the child, will be asked to provide certain information including:

A. Notifying Child Welfare immediately when a child is believed to be unsafe;
B. Providing supportive documentation regarding the continued safety of the child in the home when working with parents whose child remains or has returned to the parents’ home;
C. Providing updates about progress or lack thereof in meeting expected outcomes or in meeting the child or family’s needs, at least once every 90 days; and
D. Providing the aforementioned information verbally or in writing, as requested by the caseworker.

XVI. Consult with supervisor immediately if any of the following occur:

A. The parents refuse to participate in this process;
B. Safety services the caseworker sees as critical to managing child safety while the child remains in the family home are being refused; or
C. The parents or a safety service provider does not adhere to the current in-home safety plan.

XVII. Follow the supervisor’s direction regarding an immediate protective action to manage the child’s safety if situations such as those listed above occur.

XVIII. Additional actions when a child is a Indian child:

A. Make active efforts to ensure the Indian child's tribe and/or parent’s tribe participates in person, by telephone or another effective means of communication in selection of services and activities.
B. Contact the tribal social services and/or ICWA representatives and ask the tribe to help identify and provide culturally appropriate services and programs available through the tribe and/or an organization such as the Native American cultural and/or services center that may assist the child and the parents.
C. Ask the tribe to provide the following information:
Chapter 4 • Section 5: Conduct the Protective Capacity Assessment

1. The name, address, telephone number, and a contact person of a tribal program or an organization that provides services to Indian families; and

2. When appropriate, information about any known persons recognized by the Indian community as medicine men or other traditional tribal leaders, such as elders, whose skills can be used to keep the family together.

D. Document all contacts with the Indian child’s and/or parent’s tribe including the name, address, title, telephone number of the person contacted, and the results of these contacts in case notes.

1. File copies of all correspondence with tribal staff in the case record.

The supervisor’s role

I. Consult with the caseworker and provide direction when the caseworker believes an expert evaluation of the parents or the child is appropriate, but the parents refuse to authorize consent.

II. If a caseworker questions whether it is appropriate to follow recommendations made by an expert evaluator:

   A. Meet with the caseworker to understand the issues and provide consultation including:

      1. Exploration of available resources;
      2. Legal and case planning implications of a decision to not follow recommendations; and
      3. Whether the recommendation was based on erroneous information and, if so, whether clarification via an addendum or other means needs to be requested.

III. Consult with caseworker about how to document the decision to not follow an expert evaluator’s recommendation in the Child Welfare case plan.

IV. In regular consultation with the caseworker, explore issues and provide feedback regarding concepts such as:

   A. Partnership, collaboration, and self-determination;
   B. Culturally relevant and individualized services and interventions;
   C. Use of least intrusive approaches and services that encourage a progressive move toward restoring parents’ responsibility for child safety whenever it is safe and appropriate to do so;
   D. Helping parents with change (including normalizing resistance, seeing change as a process, timing and sequencing of steps being guided by readiness for change at that moment, techniques being used to hear and be nonjudgmental about the parents’ hesitancy to make change, and effective ways to assist the parents to continue making positive steps toward change;
   E. Appropriateness of selected services in light of the particular diminished protective capacity and safety threat that exists; and
   F. Setting the stage (with service providers) to obtain feedback about progress and measurable changes that can be observed.

V. Provide direction about whether an immediate protective action should be taken to manage a child’s safety if the supervisor becomes aware of a circumstance when a child is unsafe.
Determine conditions for return

Conditions for return are written statements describing specific behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that must exist within a child's home before a child can safely return and remain in the home with an in-home safety plan while the parents continue to work with Child Welfare toward reaching the expected outcomes. Each written statement is related to the missing in-home criteria. The conditions for return are to be part of the court order, making it the official record and expectation that guides intervention, decisions and subsequent court involvement concerning returning a child.

Conditions for return is a description of what needs to be present in the home to many statements that make up the overall conditions for return. Each parent should have clear statements about what needs to be in place for a child to return to their care.

Conditions for return should not be confused with the expected outcomes. Expected outcomes are the desired end result, based on a sustained change in the parents’ behavior, which will signal that Child Welfare’s intervention is no longer needed. Parents do not necessarily have to change in order for children to be returned to the parents’ home. Instead, to achieve reunification, a well-defined set of interventions to manage the identified safety threats must be in place and sufficient to manage the child’s safety in the parents’ home. This distinction maintains the focus on reunification as a safety decision, instead of allowing the parents’ involvement and progress with services and treatment activities to become the measure for reunification.

The following is an example of a conditions for return statement when the identified safety threat is no adult in the home is routinely performing parenting duties and responsibilities that ensure child safety.

Mom is willing and able to have a responsible adult in the home to help her provide adequate care for her child.

This could be more specific, to define what "care" means, depending on the age and needs of the child. A more detailed description could read:

Care includes supervision of the child at all times, providing meals at regular intervals, giving baths on a regular basis, and ensuring that the child does not leave the home without a responsible adult being in arm’s reach.

Note: This statement focuses on what would be present in the child’s home environment and does not necessarily require that the parents are the ones to provide for the supervision at this time. While the expected outcome or long-term goal may be for the parents to understand and consistently meet the child’s need for age-appropriate supervision, this desired end result does not necessarily need to be achieved in order for the child to be reunified with the parents with an ongoing safety plan. What must be present is the parents’ willingness and ability to engage in an ongoing safety plan and to continue to work with Child Welfare toward the expected outcomes.

Procedure

I. The caseworker must:

A. Determine the conditions that must exist prior to the child’s return to the parents by doing the following:

1. Think about the identified safety threats to consider options:
   - How are the identified safety threats manifested?
What is the parents’ capacity surrounding attitude about and awareness of the safety threats?

What must be managed?

How can it be managed?

What, if anything, stands in the way of the identified safety threat being managed while the child is in the home?

Who, other than the parents, can help manage safety?

Can anyone substitute for the parents within the home to provide sufficient protective capacity to assure safety management?

What is the potential for the parent or person who is unable or unwilling to be protective to leave the home?

What specifically will manage the identified safety threat in the home?

2. Develop a detailed understanding of why an in-home plan will not work at this time.

If the caseworker questions whether an in-home safety plan could be put into place at this time to adequately manage safety, seek additional information and consult with the supervisor to further consider this option.

The supervisor may be able to think of additional resources and/or options that have not yet been considered.

3. Determine what would manage child safety with an in-home safety plan, such as:

Who are some acceptable individuals that could become safety service providers to manage the identified safety threats in the child’s home?

What parental behaviors, if exhibited, would be acceptable?

What situations would be safe?

What circumstances would create safety?

4. Clearly communicate the conditions for return to everyone involved, most notably the child’s parents.

5. Communicate conditions for return to the court, attorneys, CASA, tribe(s), etc. through regular court reports, case plan reviews, discussions and other forms of communication.

6. Document information about the conditions for return in the Child Welfare case plan, and describe the following:

The specific behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that must exist before a child can return to the parents’ home with an in-home ongoing safety plan; and

The actions and time requirements of all participants in the in-home ongoing safety plan for a child to be safe.

The supervisor’s role

I. Assist the caseworker to consider options that would allow for reunification.
II. Ensure that conditions for return will, in fact, manage safety for the child.

III. Help the caseworker, when needed, to communicate to others involved why the particular conditions for return are Child Welfare’s conditions for reunification.

IV. When reviewing and approving court reports and Child Welfare case plans, ensure:
   A. Are conditions for return clear?
   B. If the stated conditions for return are met, would the supervisor likely approve reunification if an adequate in-home ongoing safety plan could then be developed?
   C. Is it clear that adequate options have been considered to determine that an in-home ongoing safety plan is not appropriate at this time?

Tip

Whenever Child Welfare is working with a family where the child remains in the home with an ongoing safety plan, the parents must be able and willing to participate in the ongoing safety plan. They must also be willing to engage in activities and services to mitigate the current safety threats to the child.

Tip

Self-determination refers to the “right” parents have to select choices, make decisions, chart their course and do what they want. Life’s realities affect self-determination. Individual needs and social relationships also influence self-determination. Anticipated and actual consequences also regulate it.

Caseworkers have an ongoing responsibility to promote and safeguard parents’ self-determination. Understanding and accepting the reality of self-determination and clearly explaining the choices available to parents and the possible consequences (positive and negative) allow a caseworker to help the parent make informed choices. Self-determination is a foundation of the protective capacity assessment.

Tip

Professional assessments such as substance abuse assessments, mental health assessments, psychological evaluations, and parent and child observations may be helpful during the PCA process. If a professional evaluation is used to help determine protective capacities and identify appropriate interventions, the Protective Capacity Reference, Appendix 4.3, and the Protective Capacity Assessment Decisions, Appendix 4.5, help formulate concise and relevant referral questions. For example, questions posed in a mental health referral could include:

» Does the parent accurately perceive reality?
» Is the parent able to set aside his or her own needs in favor of the needs of the child?
» What services might be beneficial to the parent to increase his or her impulse control?
Tip

It is easy to confuse a need with a service. A need is something the child requires to improve or address some aspect of his or her life; a service is something put in place to achieve that end. For instance, the statements, “The child needs a mentor,” or “The child needs counseling,” are inaccurate. The child may need to increase his reading level by a grade; therefore, the service may be a mentor to work with him on his reading. The child may need to control her anger, so the service may be a weekly meeting with a counselor. It is important to make sure the services put in place meet the needs of the child.

Example of an expected outcome: When working with a mom whose primary protective capacity needing improvement is impulse control (because she takes off and leaves her children alone), an expected outcome would include, for example, Mom will make safe child care arrangements with a suitable person(s) each time she is going out and will sustain this for the next six months.

Tip

A Family Decision Meeting (or Oregon Family Decision-making Meeting if a child is in substitute care) is beneficial to the case planning process. Routinely use it to help the family develop a family plan that, if appropriate, is integrated into the Child Welfare case plan. The procedures outlined below fit the structure and purpose of a Family Decision Meeting. The procedures for family meetings are discussed in detail in Section 6 of this chapter, Conducting Family Meetings.”

Tip

When thinking about where to start the process of change, you and the parents may consider these concepts. In looking at the diminished protective capacities, this capacity is the one that:

- Is most reliable; it is essential and needs to change.
- Is most compelling; it must be addressed.
- Is most defining; it is the central explanation for why the person is not protective; it reflects or represents the person.
- Is at the root of or is the cause of other diminished protective capacities.
- Sums up several closely related diminished protective capacities.
- Is of the most interest to you and the parent.
- Has the quickest payoff; it is most easily or quickly addressed.
- Is most crucial; it is most associated with protectiveness; may produce the greatest gain or the greatest loss.
- Is least threatening; the parent is challenging it the least.
- Is least resistive; the parent feels the least concern about changing.

Section 6: Conduct Facilitated Meetings
Conduct Facilitated Meetings

A meeting with family members, natural supports, community partners and people the family identifies as supportive can increase collaboration and engagement of the family’s team around decisions about a child’s safety, permanency and well-being. The team may also address safety, case planning or specific needs of the family or child during a family meeting. Such meetings are a tool to increase participation in and commitment to the activities, services, and supports used in the Child Welfare case plan. A family meeting can inform decision-making and be an effective communication tool. Meetings can be powerful events. They are most successful when the approach is:

I. Strengths-based: This type of approach is built around recognizing, acknowledging and building on a client’s strengths, specifically seeing them as resourceful and resilient when they are in adverse conditions. This approach is goal oriented, assesses and documents strengths, identifies and utilizes natural supports, creates a hope-inducing relationship with the team, and at every stage of the case, offers choices to the family supporting self-determination. A strengths-based approach is client led and supports increased engagement by the family and the family’s team.

II. Trauma-informed: A trauma-informed approach with families acknowledges the current and historical trauma and oppression people experience and the impact that trauma and oppression can have on decision-making and on the way the world may be viewed. This approach guides Child Welfare workers to create a safe context, both emotionally and physically, in which to have a predictable, transparent and trusting relationship. This is done through listening, recognizing and honoring each individual and their experiences throughout their lives and restoring power to families through choice, empowerment, strengths focus, and skill building. Some examples of using this approach in meetings are: preparing the family for who will be at the meeting and the roles, setting ground rules that offer breaks, and asking the parent or youth where they prefer to sit in the room.

III. Culturally responsive: In order to support families around safety and well-being caseworkers need to have an understanding of the unique functioning of a family that may be based on cultural practices, beliefs, values and norms. This may include, but is not limited to, race, ethnicity, gender or sexual identity, values systems and family structure. A family meeting may be held at a church or a family member’s home, food may be a part of the meeting or the meeting may be held in the primary language spoken by the family.

IV. Family driven/Youth guided: A family driven approach is one where Child Welfare workers understand the family has a role in decision-making regarding their children and their case planning. Youth also have a decision-making role in case planning for their future. This approach is used in family meetings in several ways including having the parents set the agenda, parents speak first in a meeting, youth are invited to meetings and are a part of agenda setting.

Meetings can provide a model of open communication and use of problem-solving skills.

purposes of Meetings

Although there are specific purposes for meetings, the caseworker most often uses a meeting to:

I. Consider options in developing an ongoing safety plan;
II. Address a specific issue or goal;

III. Talk through if conditions for return are met, what progress has been made, and, what can the team might do to move closer to meeting the conditions for return;

IV. Gather and share information to help make decisions;

V. Identify family and community resources that can support child safety;

VI. Provide information and direction to the team, family, extended family, and service providers about expected activities, tasks, and support;

VII. If needed, determine a substitute care placement to meet a child’s or siblings’ needs;

VIII. Communicate about progress; and

IX. Develop or review a child’s permanent and concurrent plan.

Before any meeting, the meeting facilitator or caseworker must:

I. Talk with the caseworker and the parent to set the agenda, date, time and location for the meeting; and

II. Effectively communicate information about the meeting’s purpose to all participants.

Types of Family Meetings

There are three types of family meetings:

I. Family Engagement Meeting (FEM): Child Welfare must use the FEM to review the ongoing safety plan including conditions for return, discuss ASFA timelines (OFDM), discuss how the children are doing, review progress and the appropriateness of services, discuss the next steps and reaffirm support for the family.

II. Family Decision Meeting (FDM): Use subsequent FDMs to bring the family’s team together to make a variety of case planning decisions. Appropriate case planning topics may be child placement, addressing a child’s particular needs, addressing a parent’s treatment needs, planning reunification, or moving toward implementing the concurrent permanency plan.

III. Youth Decision Meeting (YDM): Youth Decision Meetings (YDMs), for youth ages 13-20, are voluntary, facilitated meetings held expressly for the purpose of allowing youth-centered case planning to occur. YDMs can be an effective communication tool. Collaborate with youth to determine who should lead the YDM: the youth, a trained ODHS facilitator, another caseworker, the ILP worker or a community partner. These meetings are youth driven and involve the youth to create the agenda and determine who should be invited. The meeting can:

- Increase youth’s understanding of and engagement with the court process, service array, and their family’s case plan
- Assist in placement matching and support
- Assist the youth in transition to adulthood and in achieving their own permanency

When using a YDM to develop a Comprehensive Transition Plan please see Chapter 5, section 29: Developing... a Comprehensive Transition Plan.

Procedures for Family Decision Meetings are described in this chapter.

The Family Engagement Meeting (FEM)

The FEM focuses on the family members' and Child Welfare's ideas about the child's safety and permanency. The meeting will bring the family’s team together to reaffirm or update the ongoing safety plan, continue the Protective Capacity Assessment and support continued development of the Child Welfare case plan. It is also the transition from co-case management to the CPS worker stepping out of the case and the Permanency worker taking on case planning as the primary worker.

The FEM is a chance for the family to continue to give input into child planning decisions and to keep the focus on achieving safety and reunification for the child and the parents within a reasonable time. Child Welfare, through the caseworker, retains final responsibility for decisions affecting child safety, and participants may contribute information, expertise, resources, and support for developing and implementing the Child Welfare case plan.

The FEM is facilitated by the Family Engagement Facilitator (FEF). If a FEF is not available, the meeting may be facilitated by another staff member.

TIP

Domestic violence and a pattern of control and intimidation may not be identified in the family prior to the meeting. As a general practice, routinely screen for domestic violence and develop a back-up plan to handle situations if they arise. Discontinue the meeting at any point if you suspect domestic violence of attending partners when continuing the meeting would create an unsafe situation. The facilitator tactfully ends the meeting in this case but does not disclose why the meeting is ending if doing so would create an unsafe situation.

Preparing the Parents for the Meeting

Procedure

I. Discuss with the parents the purpose of the meeting, the structure, who will be present, and the meeting agenda topics.

II. Ask the parents what they would like included on the agenda. Let the parents know what topics may be brought up by the caseworkers and community partners.

III. Work with the parents to identify FEM participants. The goal is to have more family, natural supports, and people invited by the parents than professionals and Child Welfare staff at the meeting. This may include:

   A. Family members including children of any age;
   B. The Indian child(s) tribe;
   C. Members of the family’s faith community;
   D. Teachers and other school officials;
   E. Medical or mental health professionals;
   F. Child care providers;
G. Persons with a significant attachment to the child;
H. Other persons who have an interest in the safety of the child, including family friends; and
I. The child’s substitute caregiver (if parents want their participation and the substitute caregiver agrees to attend).

IV. Consider any special circumstances when deciding on participants.
   A. Safety: Exclude family members if they compromise other participants’ safety. However, a parent may submit written recommendations that address the plan for the child. Restraining or no contact orders may not be violated to attend a family meeting. (Refer to Appendix 4.11, Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse Considerations.)
   B. Parent hospitalization: Consult with the medical provider to determine whether the parent can participate. Phone conferencing or written recommendations may be an option.
   C. Parent incarceration: Arrange phone conferencing for an incarcerated parent whenever possible, unless the parent’s incarceration results from sexual or physical abuse of the child or of other family participants. In these situations, the parent may submit written recommendations for the child to the caseworker.
   D. Special needs accommodations: Arrange special accommodations related to the physical access, language interpreters or alternative methods of communication.
   E. Professional disclosure of information: Professionals follow their agency and professional guidelines for disclosure of information.

V. Discuss the role of the various participants with the parents. Their role is to support the parent and the child/young adult, present strengths and challenges regarding the child’s safety, permanency, or well-being needs, to share progress the parents are making in services, to make recommendations based on their knowledge of the child and family and to be collaborative and solution focused.
   A. Explain to the parent the use of the Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information (MSC 3010). Ask permission to contact participants and explain the reason for the Family Engagement Meeting.
   B. Obtain the parent’s signature on the MSC 3010.

Invite and Prepare Children, Young Adults and Participants

Procedure

I. Child/young adult: Determine who is the best person to meet with the child to explain the FEM and determine with the child if they would like to attend. Offer various ways they may have their concerns/questions heard: attending in-person, writing a letter, sending an email, or having the facilitator or caseworker convey their thoughts to the team. Be flexible around attendance. It may be best for the child to attend for the first 10 to 15 minutes of the meeting and then leave or come at the end. Having a child at the meeting can be very powerful for the team and the child.

A youth 12 and older has the right to invite two people of their choice to attend the meeting with them. These are people other than the caseworker or another professional. The youth may choose to invite friends or other outside supports to help them feel comfortable and supported at the meeting.
II. Participants: Explain the purpose of the meeting and prepare them to be strengths-based and trauma-informed team members. Ask them to review the safety plan and be prepared to be collaborative and solution-focused while the team works toward reunification of the family.

Prepare Caseworkers

Procedure

I. Meet with the caseworker ahead of the meeting to discuss the agenda and ask if there are additional items they would like included.

II. Discuss with the caseworker any concerns or fears they may have about the meeting.

III. Routinely ask if other family members or participants should be invited to the meeting. If more persons are identified, notify the parents and ask for their consent.

IV. Determine a date and time for the FEM that works for the parents and allows the most participants to attend. Meet the needs of family members who have to travel or have scheduling conflicts as much as possible, including evening times if necessary.

V. Determine the meeting location:
   A. Ask the family where they would be most comfortable meeting. Local Child Welfare offices can be very trauma-inducing for families and create an inherent power differential for parents who have or are experiencing oppression. Consider meetings in the community: churches, libraries, or community centers. If an alternate site is considered, select a location that provides all participants a safe setting with adequate seating, space, privacy and accessibility.

VI. Help the family obtain child care for the meeting if needed.
   A. Follow local protocols developed in the Child Welfare office.

During the Family Engagement Meeting

Procedure

I. Provide all team members with a copy of the most recent ongoing safety plan

II. Introductions
   • Family/Cultural Opening
     - Is there a way the parent would like to begin the meeting based upon their family/cultural traditions?
     - This is discussed between the meeting facilitator and the parent prior to the meeting.
     - Picture of child.
     - How many days has child been in substitute care?
     - Number of placements.
     - Current placement.
• Family Engagement Facilitator (FEF) states the purpose of the meeting and confirms participants’ understanding.
• FEF asks all participants to introduce themselves and describe their relationship to the child and family.

III. Ground Rules
• FEF discusses the ground rules and asks if the team has any edits or additions.

IV. Parent Update
• Facilitator preps with parent prior to the meeting to help them share what is going well and any needs they have currently. Caseworkers should come with at least a couple of strengths to share regarding each parent.
• Asking for the parent to give updates first models the value of Family Voice and models the parent as a key member of the team.

V. Safety Planning
• Safety Threats
• How do they look for this family?
• What needs to happen for the child to be able to go home (conditions for return)?
  ▪ Have new Safety Service Providers (SSPs) been identified?
  ▪ Can the safety plan be updated based on SSPs?
  ▪ Are there additional relatives, tribal resources or others with a caregiver relationship to contact?
  ▪ Update on engagement with identified family and how relatives are participating in the Child Welfare case.

VI. ASFA (Adoptions and Safe Families Act)
• Discuss primary plan, concurrent planning and timelines.
• Who might be a resource for the child for the concurrent plan?

VII. Case Planning
• Visitation
  ▪ How are visits and phone/email contacts going?
  ▪ Review visitation plan. Are changes needed (can relatives/others facilitate additional visitation)?
  ▪ Who else should the child be visiting/maintaining connections with?
• PCA/Expected Outcomes
  ▪ Has there been progress in enhancing Protective Capacities that support meeting the expected outcomes?
  ▪ How are current services working for the parent?
  ▪ Are there service/support referral needs for the parent?
What needs to be in place to close the case?
- Action Agreement developed/updated.
  - Youth
    - Update from the youth (or if the youth prefers, a support person) to speak about their progress, what they are working on, what concerns they have, and what they feel the team needs to know.

VIII. To Do's

- What are needs expressed by the family?
- Are there next steps the Department or team members need to complete?
- Who will be responsible for each item?
- Are the action items clear and doable?

IX. Upcoming Dates

Tip: Domestic violence and a pattern of control and intimidation may not be identified in the family prior to the meeting. As a general practice, routinely screen for domestic violence and develop a general back-up plan to handle these situations if they arise.

After the Family Engagement Meeting

Procedure

I. Send copies of meeting notes to all participants within 5 days and no later than 21 days (required by ORS 417.375(5)).

II. Incorporate ideas and family and team plans developed during the Initial Family Engagement Meeting in the Child Welfare case plan and Safety Plan to the extent the family plan does the following:
   A. Protects the child from the identified safety threats,
   B. Builds on the family’s enhanced protective capacities (strengths), and
   C. Focuses on achieving permanency for the child within a reasonable timeframe.

If the family’s plan developed at the FEM cannot be incorporated into the Child Welfare case plan, document the reasons for this in the Child Welfare electronic information system. If an FEM was not held, explain the reason in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

The Supervisor’s Role

The supervisor:

I. Attends the FEM if requested by the caseworker, family, or another party to the case.

II. Ensures that either the caseworker or the facilitator is an expert in child safety or ensures a Child Welfare staff person who is a child safety expert attends each meeting.

III. Reviews and approves a decision not to hold an FEM.

IV. Reviews and approves the decisions made during the FEM that are incorporated into the Child Welfare case plan.
Family Decision Meetings

After an FEM has been held, a Family Decision Meeting (FDM) may be an appropriate tool to inform decisions around a number of topics, such as case planning, child placement, addressing a child’s particular needs, addressing a parent’s treatment needs, planning reunification, or moving toward implementing the concurrent permanency plan. Consistent FDMs are an important way for the caseworker, the family and the family's team to get updates on progress and to support timely reunification and/or concurrent planning. They also ensure that team members are completing action items and that collaborative, solution-focused case planning is occurring to support the child and the parents.

An FDM is not a required meeting but is highly effective as a tool to efficiently and effectively do casework. When scheduling a Family Decision Meeting with family members, clearly state the purpose, decisions to be made and anticipated results of the meeting. Be sure to communicate that to all participants prior to the meeting. A trained Family Engagement Facilitator (FEF) or another person trained in meeting facilitation and in Child Welfare practice should be used for all meetings, particularly if the meeting will discuss complicated issues or involve difficult decisions. A facilitator can help guide the flow of the meeting. Consult with your supervisor if a trained FEF is not available.

Procedures

A Family Decision Meeting will follow the same procedures as the FEM above except for the ASFA discussion (step VI). The content of the discussion and collaboration may vary as needed by the family and the Department.

Special Considerations, Exclusions and Exceptions During a Meeting

Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse

(Refer to Appendix 4.11 for more information on domestic violence and sexual abuse.)

I. Consider the issue of domestic violence when planning a family meeting. Family meetings are to provide care for and to protect children and not to stop violent behavior. Individuals who batter, however, may also be parents. Consult them for their recommendations for placement of their children and involve them in service and treatment planning for the abuse that has occurred.

II. Ensure the facilitator and the supervisor or designee has the skills and strategies to recognize symptoms of domestic violence.

III. Assess the level of danger both within the larger family system and for individual participants.

IV. Clarify the purpose of the meeting and emphasize the highest priority of child safety.

Exclude the alleged perpetrator when previous history or current assessment indicates a risk of the parent being violent or when contact is prohibited. The caseworker can arrange for input through written information, consultation prior to the family meeting, or by phone if appropriate.

Child Care

I. Help obtain child care to occur during the meeting. When there is an immediate need, the caseworker follows protocols developed in the local Child Welfare office.

II. Request supportive or remedial day care funds when day care will be needed for other scheduled meetings.
and cannot be met through other means.

Adaptations

I. Arrange for, if necessary:
   A. A translator.
   B. An interpreter for hearing-impaired clients.
   C. An advocate for a client with mental illness or developmental delays.

Law Enforcement Involvement

I. In cases where law enforcement is involved in a criminal investigation, work closely with law enforcement, the district attorney’s office or a child advocacy center to:
   A. Share information,
   B. Conduct joint interviews when appropriate,
   C. Coordinate roles and responsibilities, and
   D. Avoid jeopardizing the ongoing criminal investigation.

Youth Decision Meetings (YDMs)

Conduct Youth Decision Meetings

Purpose

Youth Decision Meetings (YDMs) can be powerful events that can only occur with the youth, ages 13-20, present. YDMs bring the youth’s team together to hear about their goals, plans, dreams, preferences and to discuss how to support them. The youth is the most important voice in the room. When conducted with a youth-centered focus, family members, natural supports, community partners and people the youth identify as allies, can increase collaboration and engagement with the youth. The caseworker, guardians and other participants are also there to support the youth. A YDM can be scheduled at any point in the case and is convened at the request of the youth or with the youth’s agreement if someone else is requesting the meeting. The caseworker should frequently explore the use of a YDM with the youth.

Nothing about us, without us: it is important to remember youth will take ownership of and engage in plans created by and with them, not for them.

Reason to Schedule a YDM

It is important for the team to understand the youth’s needs and how they can help. Addressing young people’s physical, emotional and psychological needs is a process, not a single event. Emotional support is the most frequent need for youth exiting foster care. Here are some reasons that youth or young adults might have a meeting:

• Responding to urgent needs such as mental health, housing or education;
• Building community connections, supportive relationships and identifying permanent caring adults who are committed to being available to them on an ongoing basis;
• Discussing ways to increase time with family members;
• Meeting with allies to talk about goals and progress;
• Sharing accomplishments, successes and identifying talents;
• Preparing for increasing privileges or personal responsibilities;
• Planning at critical junctures in case;
• Preventing crisis and reevaluating progress and goals early and often in the case;
• Addressing concerns and needs for the youth’s safety or reducing restrictions to the current safety plan;
• Preparing the youth for the next family meeting, other meetings or court hearings;
• Preparing the youth to reintegrate into their family’s case planning process; and
• Creating a Comprehensive Transition Plan (See Chapter 5, section 29: Developing a Comprehensive Transition Plan for details)

To assist, meetings are structured and organized around four key values:

Youth-Driven

• Youth are the experts in their own lives;
• Youth’s lived experience informs case planning;
• Youth are supported to direct the conversations and lead the planning;
• Plans are written in the youth’s voice and honor the youth’s goals and preferences as most important;
• Priority is given to the youth for deciding time, location, who is invited and content of the agenda; and
• Meetings are planned for and conducted to meet each youth’s specific and individual needs

Strengths-Based

• Every youth has strengths and talents;
• Planning focuses on youth’s strengths;
• Youth’s strengths are documented;
• Success is more likely when plans are created that build upon a youth’s strengths;
• Youth are knowledgeable, capable, resourceful and resilient; and
• Youth have and can develop natural supports

Trauma-Informed

• Power is restored to the youth, whenever possible;
• Youth’s experiences of trauma are considered when developing the agenda, inviting participants, directing conversations and determining who will facilitate the meetings;

- Creates a safe and comfortable space for the youth, as defined by the youth;
- Recognizes the importance of early, honest conversations as new information is discovered or decisions are imposed;
- Acknowledges that poorly planned conversations are traumatic;
- Respects that not everyone has the need to know; and
- Recognizes that some conversations are better had individually, rather than in a group setting

Culturally Responsive

- Cultural practices, race, religious/spiritual beliefs, definition of family, sexual orientation, gender identification and gender expression, is unique to each youth;
- Ongoing conversations and learning with the youth allow for meetings to be lead in a youth-centered, culturally responsive way;
- YDMs are planned for and held respecting the youth’s unique cultural identity;
- Recognizes when cultural values such as being task focused and time oriented may conflict with the youth’s values; and
- Meetings are conducted in the youth’s preferred language and culturally specific services are planned for.

Preparing The Youth For The Meeting

Procedure

I. The facilitator and caseworker meet with the youth in a place and time of the youth’s choosing to discuss:

- The purpose of the meeting
- The role of facilitator and to determine who will lead the meeting. The meeting can be led by the youth, ODHS facilitator, a caseworker, the ILP worker or community partner
- If the youth will speak on their own behalf, ask someone to do so for them, or offer a written statement.
- Team Agreements (ground rules) for the meeting that will be helpful to the youth.
- The structure of the meeting

II. The meeting agenda including helping the youth to identify their strengths and needs, and how these will be used to address case planning/goals in the meeting.

III. Discuss the meeting goal(s) the youth want addressed:

- Living arrangements
  - Is it safe?
  - Is it stable, permanent, preferred by the youth?
• Does it meet the youth’s needs for attachment, connection, community?
• Does it support the youth’s cultural and sexual orientation, gender identity and expression needs?

• Well-being
  • Does the youth have unmet medical or behavior health needs?
  • Is there understanding and help for the youth to manage any unresolved feelings of grief and loss (family, foster placements, childhood hope and dreams, history of abuse, etc.)?
  • Is there a level of urgency to meeting these needs?
  • Are referrals required or insurance coverage needs to be addressed?
• Recreation, hobbies or other self-care activities

• Education and Vocation
  • Does the youth have unmet vocational and education needs?
  • Has an ILP referral been made? Is the youth participating? Is the service addressing the youth’s goals, dreams and preferences?

• Legal
  • Is the youth involved in their case plan? Invited to court hearings? Aware and understand the legal case?
  • Are there criminal convictions or resolved convictions that need to be addressed?
  • Are any of these needs best addressed with Transition planning?

IV. Plan with the youth who should be invited to the YDM and discuss the roles of each participant who may attend:
  • Support the youth
  • Present strengths and challenges regarding the youth’s safety, permanency and well-being needs
  • Share progress the youth is making
  • Make recommendations based on their knowledge and involvement with the youth
  • Be collaborative and solution focused

V. Identify key participants who can support the youth’s goals, answer questions and assist with decision-making. Participants may include:
  • Allies identified by the youth
  • Family members, including siblings
  • The youth’s Tribe
  • Members of the youth’s faith community
  • Teachers and other school officials
  • Medical or mental health professionals
  • The youth’s substitute caregiver
VI. Prepare the youth for topics that might be brought up that the youth may not have decision-making authority over.

VII. Determine a date and time for the YDM that works for the youth and allows the most participants to attend. Meet the travel and scheduling needs of participants as much as possible, including evening times, if necessary.

   • Determine the meeting location. Ask the youth where they would be most comfortable meeting. Local Child Welfare offices can be very trauma-inducing for youth and create an inherent power differential for youth who have or are experiencing oppression. Consider meetings in the community: churches, libraries or community centers.

   • If an alternate site is considered, select a location that provides all participants a safe setting with adequate seating, space, privacy and accessibility.

VIII. Help the youth obtain childcare for the meeting if needed.

Tips

Respect the privacy and confidentiality of the youth, and honor facilitated meeting values by determining, in advance of the YDM if the youth, is planning to share information regarding their sexual orientation, gender identity and gender expression (SOGIE) in the meeting. See Chapter 5 Section 41 of the Child Welfare Procedure Manual for comprehensive guide to supporting and providing services for children and young adults with diverse sexual orientation, gender identity and expression.

For YDMs, decision-making power resides with the youth whenever possible. If the facilitator or caseworker is aware of decisions that will be made outside of the youth’s authority discuss with the youth in the initial preparation for the YDM or as soon as the facilitator or caseworker becomes aware. The youth will need time to process this information and determine if they have invited the right people to the meeting to support them with understanding and planning for the conversation.

Ensure the youth knows that they drive the agenda and plans developed during the YDM will focus on their strengths, interests, and identified needs. You can assist the youth to identify their strengths by asking questions, examples might include, “Do you have activities you are good at, such as crafts, sports, reading, writing, video games, music?” “What is your favorite subject in school?” “What have others said you are good at?” Ask the youth if they would like to start this discussion or ask other participants to begin during the YDM. Be sure to acknowledge strengths identified in the meeting and confirm they are documented in the notes.

Preparing The Caseworker For The Meeting (When The Caseworker Was Not Involved In Youth Prep)

• Meet with the caseworker ahead of the meeting to discuss the youth’s requested agenda.

• Discuss with the caseworker any concerns or considerations they may have about the meeting.

• Prepare caseworkers to come with at least a couple of strengths to share regarding the youth.

• Request the caseworker review with the supervisor the goals of the meeting, agenda items and decisions Child Welfare plans to impose in advance of the meeting.
• Meet with the youth individually for discussions that are more appropriately had outside the group process.

• Ensure necessary actions are taken in advance of the meeting to effectively address agenda items in the meeting.

• Ensure the youth and participants are aware of any restrictions to decision-making in advance of the YDM.

Inviting and Preparing Allies and Other Participants For The Meeting

A youth 14 and older has the right to invite at least two people of their choice to attend the meeting with them - friends, allies or supports. These are people other than the caseworker or other professionals.

• Explain the purpose of the meeting and prepare them to be strengths-based and trauma-informed team members. Remind them that the meeting is youth-centered; that its purpose is to support youth with achieving their goals and meeting their needs. Prepare participants to share youth’s strengths with the group.

• Send the agenda in advance of the meeting. Ask participants to review the agenda in advance of the YDM and be prepared to be collaborative and solution-focused while the team works toward supporting the youth’s goals and needs.

• Remind participants that youth drive the agenda and that any requests to add to the agenda will need to be reviewed with the youth prior to the meeting.

Tip

To create a sense of safety and to signal that you honor and celebrate diversity, it is important to become familiar with respectful language, and keep current with changes in SOGIE terminology and to plan for cultural responsivity as it relates to race, tribal affiliation, religion and culture. Listen to and use the words people use to describe themselves (name, pronouns, and language regarding how they identify). Allow participants to decide with whom and when they would like to share their sexual orientation or gender identity.

Prepare for cultural responsivity as it relates to race, tribal affiliation, religion, and culture. Ask the youth if there is a cultural practice they would like to open the meeting with. Examples might include smudging outside the building as group before the meeting starts, breathing and centering as a group to begin the meeting, an opening prayer lead by the youth, a spiritual leader or facilitator.

During The YDM

Procedure

I. Facilitator states the purpose of the meeting and summarizes the youth-centered meeting values that frame the meeting discussion, and confirms participants’ understanding.

• Youth Guided: what the youth needs guides the discussion

• Strengths-based: youth are capable, knowledgeable, resourceful and resilient

• Trauma Informed: power is restored to the youth, whenever possible

• Culturally Responsive: YDMs are planned for and held respecting the youth’s unique cultural identity
II. Introductions
   • Facilitator asks all participants to introduce themselves, including their pronouns if the participant is comfortable including that information, and describe their relationship to the youth.

III. Cultural Opening if requested by the youth

IV. Placement Information – Youth decides if this is relevant to the meeting and if it is shared.
   • How many days the youth has been in substitute care.
   • Number of placements.
   • Current placement.

V. Team Agreements/Ground Rules
   • Facilitator reviews the team agreements developed with the youth during preparation for the YDM, checks for understanding and asks if the team has any edits or additions.

VI. Youth Strengths and Needs are discussed. When comfortable, the youth begin this discussion, or requests other participants share first.

VII. Safety Planning, if requested by the youth

VIII. Case Planning/Goals

IX. Action Items
   • What are the needs expressed by the youth?
   • Are there next steps Child Welfare or team members need to complete?
   • Who will be responsible for each item?
   • Are action items clear, doable and have timelines associated?

X. Upcoming Dates

Tips

Substance use, untreated mental health concerns or criminal activity of participants should not automatically preclude them from participation. The facilitator will manage the group process, prioritizing youth’s physical and emotional safety.

Parent’s issues or concerns may surface in a YDM that conflict with the goals and agenda of the meeting. It is helpful to acknowledge them, parking-lot them and schedule a separate FDM to address the needs of the parents.

Meetings that are not youth driven, are not YDMs. When facilitated meetings occur outside the youth’s identified meeting goals, agenda items or include participants not invited by the youth, these are FDMs.

Young people need real-life opportunities to build their skills and abilities, which will require giving them room to make mistakes. These opportunities foster self-determination and build resiliency.

After The YDM

I. Incorporate ideas the youth and team developed during the Youth Decision Meeting into the case plan to the extent the meeting addresses:

- The youth’s dreams, goals and preferences
- Protects the youth from threats to their safety
- Builds on the youth’s strengths and
- Focuses on achieving permanency for the youth within a reasonable timeframe.

II. Send copies of meeting notes to all participants within 5 days and no later than 21 days (required by ORS 417.375(5)).

- Ensure youth has reviewed the notes for accuracy, voice and intent prior to distribution and has signed and dated them.
- If components of the youth’s plan developed at the YDM cannot be supported by ODHS, document the reasons for this in the Child Welfare electronic information system. Examples may include placements that cannot be certified by ODHS, or recommendations that would violate a court order.

Supervisor’s Role

- Ensures the caseworker knows the planned agenda and has done the necessary prep work so decisions can be finalized at the YDM.
- Attends the YDM if requested by the youth.
- Ensures the caseworker has communicated to the youth and team in advance of the YDM those decisions the youth does not have authority to make.
- Reviews and approves the decisions made during the YDM that are incorporated into the Child Welfare case plan.

Other Meetings With a Family

The caseworker may meet with family members on other occasions to share with or obtain information from the family, extended family or service providers. A meeting may be used to discuss specific activities, tasks or supports for the family, coordinate the methods for measuring progress, or review the permanent and concurrent permanent plan. These meetings do not need a facilitator.

Procedure

I. When scheduling a meeting with the parents and other family members, the caseworker:

- Secures the date, time, and location of the meeting,
- Ensures all participants receive information in Number 1 above, and
- Is clear at the start of the meeting of the meeting’s purpose.

Managing Child Safety
In and Out of Home

Section 7: Document the Child Welfare Case Plan
Document the Child Welfare Case plan

The Child Welfare case plan resulting from an unsafe child must be developed within 60 days of the child’s placement in substitute care or within 60 days of the CPS assessment when the child remains in the parents’ home (and the child remains in the parent’s custody). The Child Welfare case plan is the documented case plan that describes why Child Welfare is involved and the actions and services required to change behaviors, conditions or circumstances that led to the child being unsafe.

Procedure

The caseworker must:

I. Analyze the information gathered during the protective capacity assessment (first 30 days) to develop a Child Welfare case plan.

II. Include the following people in developing the Child Welfare case plan:
   A. Parents, unless an exception exists (described later in this section);
   B. A Indian custodian, when applicable;
   C. When the child is a Indian child, the child’s tribe(s) and extended family members; and
   D. Whenever appropriate:
      1. The child,
      2. Other relatives,
      3. Other service providers,
      4. Persons with significant attachment to the child, and
      5. A substitute caregiver when the child is in substitute care and the placement is intended to become the adoptive home.

IV. If our involvement with the family is for reasons other than a child's safety because a parent or caregiver cannot and will not protect a child, refer to Chapter 7, Family Support Services, including an eligible family who has requested voluntary placement of their child or an eligible family who has asked Child Welfare to take voluntary custody of their child.

V. Consider meeting with the family. Consider the use of an OFDM, described earlier in this chapter, when a child is in substitute care. If an OFDM is not used, follow the documentation requirements detailed in Conducting Family Meetings, OFDM section.

VI. Include all the following information in the Child Welfare case plan:
   A. Family composition that identifies:
      1. Each child.
      2. Each young adult.
3. When the child is an Indian child, the child’s tribe(s).

4. Each parent, including documentation on how the father was determined to be the legal father.

B. Documentation of the active efforts to ensure the Indian child’s tribe and/or Native American parent’s tribe participates in person, by telephone or another effective means of communication in selecting services and activities.

C. The safety threats identified in the CPS assessment.

D. The ongoing safety plan.

E. The findings of the protective capacity assessment.
   1. Clearly describe enhanced and diminished parental protective capacities of all legal parents.
   2. Use caution when documenting information in a case that involves domestic violence. Remember not to include information that will put others at risk of harm, such as a restraining order, names of other victims or people providing information; or redact sensitive information from the copies distributed to one or more of the parties in the case if such information would put a person at risk.

F. Expected outcomes and actions that each parent or legal guardian will take to achieve them (as described in a previous section of this chapter of the procedure manual).

G. Child description, strengths, needs, well-being and treatment services, if applicable, including:
   1. Describe the following:
      - The child, including strengths, current development, physical and emotional condition.
      - The child’s relationship with siblings.
      - Support the child receives from parents, extended family, peers, school and, if the child is Indian, the child’s tribe(s).
      - The child’s needs, including any special needs and, if in substitute care, the child’s strengths and needs identified by the CANS unless a CANS has not yet been completed.
      - Evaluations or plans that affect the child’s needs, such as an IEP or 504 educational plan, developmental screening, IQ or adaptive functioning tests, mental health assessment, etc.
      - Services provided to address identified needs or to build upon identified strengths of the child including:
         (1) Interventions provided by the parents to address a child’s special or unique needs.
         (2) Educational services including the school of and any special education needs.
         (3) Educational services including the child’s or young adult’s school and any special education needs.
         (4) Routine and specialized medical and mental health services including the personal care services of a child who is in substitute care and has been determined through a Personal Care Services Assessment and documented in a Personal Care Services Plan.
         (5) Actions taken by Child Welfare to address identified but unmet needs.
H. When the child is in substitute care, the child’s current placement information

1. Type of placement:
   - Professional shelter care.
   - Relative caregiver.
   - Family foster home.
   - Residential care.
   - Legal risk adoptive home.
   - Pre-adoptive home.
   - ILP Subsidy Program Housing.

2. Location of the child and the substitute caregiver unless:
   - Doing so would jeopardize the safety of the child or the substitute caregiver.
   - Consult with supervisor if needed.

   (1) The substitute caregiver will not authorize release of the address. Contact the substitute caregiver for permission prior to releasing address.

3. Document explanations of the following:
   - How Child Welfare knows the child is receiving safe and appropriate care. (For additional information on assessment of safe and appropriate care, refer to Section 9, Monitor the Case Plan and Required Contact, in this chapter.)
   - Why the placement is the least restrictive environment able to provide safety and well-being for the child.
   - The child’s adjustment to the current living arrangement.
   - How the placement preserves the child’s connections and attachments including:

   (1) Proximity to the child’s biological family, including siblings and the child’s school.

   (2) If the placement is not in close proximity of the above individuals or required a change in schools, describe why the placement is in the child’s best interests.

   (3) If the child was moved within the past six months, explain why. Were parents notified of the move? If not, why not?

   (4) Why this placement supports the child’s cultural and family identity.

4. Describe specific supportive services that Child Welfare anticipates will be provided to the child over the next six months developed or tailored to support the placement and ensure the child receives safe and appropriate care while in placement; this includes information from the supervision plan for children who are receiving a level of care as a result of the CANS screening.

   For example: Additional home visits or phone contact; substitute caregiver working with parents or professionals as the family moves toward reunification; consultation with a nurse, mental health professional or educational specialist.

5. Special services being provided to the substitute caregiver (e.g., relief care or specialized... training on managing the specific child’s needs).

6. If the child is not placed with a relative, an update on the relative search efforts.

7. If placed out of state:
   - Request the receiving state provide 30-day face-to-face contact or negotiate a timeframe that meets the child, family, and department needs.
   - Document how the receiving state will supervise the child’s placement (frequency of contact, type of contact such as face to face or by phone, collateral contact, etc.)
   - Provide information from the supervising state staff that reflects their observations from the visits to the child’s home.

I. Services Child Welfare will provide, including all of the following:
   1. Case oversight and routine contact with the parents and the child or young adult.
   2. Appropriate and timely referrals to services and service providers suitable to address identified safety threats or strengthen parental protective capacity.
   3. Ensuring a Native American child’s tribe(s) is included as a case resource.
   4. Timely preparation of reports to the court or other service providers.

J. The date that the parent’s progress in achieving expected outcomes will be reviewed.
   1. Must be done at least once every 90 days in face-to-face contact with the parents, unless an exception is granted.
   2. May be reviewed more frequently than every 90 days when the caseworker and parents wish to do so.
   3. More information about this requirement is available in Section 10, Conduct a Case plan Review.

K. Narrate a plan for visitation and contact with parents and siblings or attach a copy of the Visit and Contact Plan (CF/CW 0831).
   1. Ensure a child, the parents, and each sibling (who are not in the same substitute care setting) are able to visit one another while the child is in substitute care as often as reasonably necessary to support and enhance their attachment to each other.
   2. Coordinate the first visit as soon as possible and within the first week of placement. If not done, the caseworker must document in the ODHS information system the reason the visit was delayed.
   3. Develop the Visit and Contact Plan within 30 days of the date the child enters substitute care.
   4. Indicate whether there are any court orders regarding visitation.
   5. Note the level of supervision of the visits.
   6. How does this level of supervision meet the child’s safety needs?
   7. How is this visitation plan the least intrusive and most appropriate plan?
   8. What other forms of communication are used for additional parent/child contact?

L. The primary permanency plan, which is one of the following:
1. Place with parent (return to parent home).
2. Adoption.
3. Guardianship.
4. APPLA: permanent foster care.
5. APPLA: permanent connections and support.
6. Fit and willing relative.

M. The conditions for return (required for every child in substitute care unless aggravated circumstances preclude a child’s return home):
   1. Document the specific behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that must exist within a child’s home for a child to safely return and remain in the home with an in-home ongoing safety plan.

N. The concurrent permanent plan (the alternate permanent plan is required when the child is in substitute care).
   1. The choices for a concurrent permanent plan are the same as choices 2 through 6 in the primary permanency plan (L, above).
   2. Briefly describe the discussion between Child Welfare and the parents about:
      - The concurrent permanency plan.
      - Adoption Safe Families Act requirements and timelines (you can use the ODHS 9120 to explain ASFA).
      - Benefits of compliance with the case plan.
      - Consequences of noncompliance and/or lack of progress with the case plan. Lack of progress includes not being able to demonstrate a capacity to sustain the safety of the child without Child Welfare’s involvement. Consequences include implementation of the concurrent plan if the parent has not made adequate progress within specified ASFA timeframes.
   3. If any of the above discussions did not occur with either parent, explain why. Also indicate if this information has been shared with the parents in any other way.

O. Progress to date, including:
   1. Document the progress made by the parents in:
      - Achieving the conditions for return (when the child is in substitute care).
      - Achieving expected outcomes.
      - Completing any action agreements and the related expected outcome the agreement has or is addressing.
      - Observable changes in parental protective capacity (cognitive, behavioral, and emotional).
   2. Document actions Child Welfare has taken to support achieving conditions for return (when the child is in substitute care) and expected outcomes.
   3. When the child is in substitute care, indicate whether the child has been in substitute care 15 of the last 22 months.
If not, circumstances requiring filing a petition to terminate parental rights (TPR) do not exist at this time.

If so, indicate whether the TPR petition has been filed, or list the compelling reason that prevents filing a TPR petition.

4. When the child is in substitute care, what actions have been taken, and what progress has been made on achieving the concurrent permanency plan for the child?

   - For example: diligent relative search, identification of family member for permanent placement, discussion of supports available to substitute caregiver if concurrent plan implemented, relinquishment signed, adoption recruitment bulletin completed, current caretaker staffing occurred, adoption home study completed, adoption assistance agreement signed.

   - Are there any barriers to achieving permanency? If so, what are they, and what is being done to address them?

   - If either of the APPLA options has been selected as the permanency plan, explain:

     1. How this plan was selected for the child?
     2. How it best meets the child’s needs?
     3. The compelling reasons why other, more permanent options were ruled out or determined to be inappropriate.

P. When applicable, the caseworker must also include:

1. The goals and activities required for:

   - An Indian child under the Indian Child Welfare Act, and how the activities and services are provided in a culturally competent manner.

   - A refugee child under the Refugee Act and how the activities and services are provided in a culturally competent manner.

   - Recommendations of expert evaluations that Child Welfare requests whenever they may affect parental protective capacities or treatment services for the child.

   - If recommendations are not included in the Child Welfare case plan, the rationale must be documented in the Child Welfare electronic information system. There are services to transition to independent living in all cases when a child is 16 years or older, and when provided to a child who is 14 or 15 years old (refer Chapter 5, Section 29, Youth Transitions), including:

     1. Was an assessment done?
     2. If an assessment has not been completed for any child over 16, provide an explanation.
     3. Describe the Youth Transition programs and services offered.
     4. Attach the Comprehensive Transition Plan.
     5. If services are not being provided, explain why.
(6) When the child is in substitute care, discuss sibling issues including:

(i) If the child has a sibling, is he or she in the same placement?

(ii) If not:

   (a) Why not (lack of placement resources, safety issues, different level of care needs at this time, etc.)?

   (b) What is being done to address issues that contribute to siblings being apart?

   (c) In what ways has Child Welfare conveyed to all involved that the sibling separation is intended to be temporary?

   (d) What efforts are being made to reunite siblings?

   (e) In what ways are sibling connections being maintained (siblings visit at weekly parent/child visits and every other week facilitated by foster parents, phone calls, letters, etc.)?

   (f) If siblings are placed together, are there any issues that may threaten continued placement together?

   (g) If so, what is being done to address this to preserve the sibling placement together?

   (h) Orders of the court and the efforts ODHS is making toward meeting those orders.

Q. List information regarding caseworker contacts with the child, parents, substitute caregiver and other collateral contacts.

1. Also include in the narration:

   - A description of how the contact included discussion of the implementation of the Child Welfare case plan.
   - If contact occurred less frequently than required, explain why.

   If a supervisor approved an exception to the requirement document:

   (1) Name of the supervisor who authorized exception.

   (2) The rationale behind granting the exception.

R. Have the case plan translated into a language the parents understand, if the primary language of the parent is other than English.

S. Complete a CF 0010A to request translation.

T. The caseworker must also:

1. Obtain the following signatures on the appropriate Child Welfare case plan document:

   - Orders of the court and the efforts ODHS is making toward meeting those orders.
   - The caseworker.
   - The supervisor, once the supervisor has approved the Child Welfare case plan (see supervisor’s role below).

- Each parent, unless an exception exists, as allowed by policy (refer to end of this section of caseworker responsibilities for exceptions).

- Give a copy of the Child Welfare case plan to the following people:
  1. Parents of the child.
  2. The Indian child’s tribe(s) (when applicable).

- Distribute the Child Welfare case plan as soon as possible, but no later than seven days after the supervisor approves the plan (unless):
  3. If doing so would provide information that places another person at risk.
  4. Consult with supervisor to determine if a particular situation warrants withholding the Child Welfare case plan.
  5. Determine other ways to communicate information to that individual that will not place others at risk.

3. Complete the Child Welfare case plan within 60 days of a child’s removal from home when the child is in substitute care or 60 days from the completion of the CPS assessment.

4. Adhere to procedure and policy requirements unless an exception exists, including:

- A parent’s participation in the development of the Child Welfare case plan threatens or places other participants at risk. When this occurs:
  1. Consider other meaningful ways to include the threatening parent.
  2. Consult with your supervisor to explore safe ways to include a parent when other participants may be at risk when helping develop the Child Welfare case plan.
  3. Attempt to obtain the signature of the parent, even though perhaps not involved in development of the Child Welfare case plan.
  4. Consider whether the caseworker should prepare and send a Letter of Expectation and a copy of the Child Welfare case plan to the parent (more detail re: LOE below).
  5. The court has authorized an exception to the involvement of a parent when the court determined that reasonable efforts (or active efforts for ICWA) to return a child are not required. When this occurs:
    i. Consider whether Child Welfare still wishes to include the parents in the case planning process.
    ii. Consult with the supervisor prior to deciding not to include the parents in the case planning process to fully consider potential negative consequences of excluding the parent, even when legally able to do so.

6. When a child is in substitute care and Child Welfare is unable to obtain a parent’s signature on the Child Welfare case plan and/or involve the parents in the development of the Child Welfare case plan, do the following:

(i) Prepare and send a Letter of Expectation (LOE) and a copy of the Child Welfare case plan to the parents within seven days after the supervisor has approved and signed the Child Welfare case plan.

(ii) LOE means a goal-oriented, time-limited, individualized written statement for the family of the child that identifies:

(a) Family behaviors, conditions or circumstances.
(b) Expected outcomes of improved parental capacity.
(c) What Child Welfare expects each parent will do to achieve safety, permanency, and well-being of the child or young adult in the parental home.

(7) If a parent’s whereabouts are unknown:

(i) Conduct a search for the absent parent.

(ii) Upon locating the parent, discuss planning for the child, including development of a Child Welfare case plan, or develop a Child Welfare case plan, unless doing so would place another person at risk.

(iii) Consult with supervisor as needed, to determine ways to involve a parent who has been located, when a child has been in substitute care for a considerable period of time.

Tip

Per federal requirements, the child must be visited at least every six months if placed out of the state.

Role of the supervisor

I. While reviewing the Child Welfare case plan, attend to issues such as:

A. Are there any issues concerning child safety that have not adequately been addressed, and a child may be unsafe? If so:

1. Determine what needs to be done to protect the child at this time, including implementing a protective action when needed.
2. Ensure an intake screener is immediately notified if the safety issue constitutes a safety threat that had not previously been identified.
3. Meet with caseworker to obtain more information when needed and ensure documentation is adequate.
4. Help the caseworker better understand safety issues, including ways to manage safety and how to better document activities in the future.

B. Was the protective capacities assessment thorough, and is there a good understanding of the parents thinking, behaving or feeling that need to change to manage or mitigate child safety threats?

C. When a child is in substitute care, do the conditions for return reflect what is needed in each parent’s home environment to allow for the development of an in-home ongoing safety plan that will adequately manage child safety?

D. Do the expected outcomes reflect the sustained changes that, if achieved over time, will eliminate or reduce safety threats and will enhance protective capacities in a way that child safety can be managed without Child Welfare’s involvement?

E. Is Child Welfare providing adequate and appropriate services, which are culturally relevant, to assist the family in making progress toward the expected outcomes?

F. Are service providers giving information that allow Child Welfare to assess the progress the parents are making?
   1. If not, consult with worker to discuss ways to receive necessary information from service providers.

G. Are the parents making reasonable progress, such that the child’s need for permanency and stability is being met?
   1. If no, what is being done to enhance stability?

H. Are the parents making reasonable progress, such that the child’s need for permanency will likely be achieved in the child’s timeframe?
   1. Is adequate progress being made with the concurrent permanency plan?
   2. Has Child Welfare done what was needed for the diligent relative search, and is there an identified person to be a permanent resource in the concurrent plan?
   3. Are there any committee staffings or legal processes that are needed to move along the concurrent plan?

I. In what ways have the strengths and needs of the child as identified by the CANS been incorporated into the case plan? What services are being offered to build upon those strengths and meet the needs? If the child is receiving a level of care, how has the supervision plan been developed (i.e., with the foster parent or with the child’s team)? Does the supervision plan appear to meet the child’s needs?

J. Does the child have personal care services and, if so, how have the child’s medical needs and care been included in the case plan?

II. Approve and sign Child Welfare case plan when the plan is adequate and no changes need to be made.
   A. If changes need to occur, consult with caseworker.
   B. If changes may affect the family or child, encourage discussion with the individuals before changes are made.

III. Be available to meet with the caseworker and other people connected with the Child Welfare case plan, if needed.

IV. As needed, consult with caseworker and/or provide connections with others who can help the worker understand the need for and access culturally appropriate services and service providers.

V. Ensure that parents are included adequately in developing the Child Welfare case plan (refer to detail in caseworker section above regarding possible exceptions to a parent’s involvement).

A. Consult with the caseworker to consider safety issues and options for collaboration with a parent when the parent’s participation in the Child Welfare case plan may threaten the safety of others or may put other participants in the Child Welfare case plan at risk.

B. Consult with the caseworker and consider review of the LOE to ensure its adequacy when a parent is not involved in the development of a Child Welfare case plan.

C. Consult with caseworker (and use resources to consider potential implications) when considering whether to include the parents in developing a Child Welfare case plan, even when there is an option to exclude the parents.

VI. Consult with the caseworker when a parent is absent to determine that Child Welfare is conducting a thorough search, following up appropriately when location is identified, and that the child’s need for permanency is considered when beginning to involve a parent who has been absent for a period of time.

Tip

Parents must cooperate with the Child Welfare Case plan and the ongoing safety plan when the child remains in the parents’ home.

Section 8: Develop an Action Agreement
Develop an Action Agreement

Once the parents and the caseworker have explored services and activities that may help the family meet the expected outcomes, the caseworker develops an action agreement with the family.

An action agreement is a time-limited written document between Child Welfare and a parent or both parents that identifies one or more of the services or activities the parents will participate in to achieve one or more of the expected outcomes. The caseworker should develop sequential action agreements when parents need to take smaller steps to achieve progress.

So long as sufficient resources are available, the action agreement must use culturally appropriate services and service providers whose interventions focus on the parent’s achievement of the expected outcomes identified in the case plan. Also refer to the requirements for securing culturally competent services for a Native American child and his or her parents in Section 5 of this chapter, Determine Appropriate Actions, Services and Activities.

Procedure

I. It is the caseworker’s responsibility to make sure the action agreement addresses and includes:
   A. At least one of the expected outcomes in the case plan.
   B. The specific activities or services required to achieve the expected outcome.
   C. The specific services or activities related to the specific change being sought.
      For example, if there isn’t a specific parenting deficiency that resulted in an unsafe child, a parent-training class would not be an appropriate service to achieve change. The activities and services should be individualized and directly related to the expected outcomes (change goals).
   D. Services that are as culturally appropriate as possible, given Child Welfare’s resources. This may include locating a service provider who speaks the parents’ language, a service provider of the same ethnicity or race as the parents, or a service provider who is familiar with the parents’ cultural background.
   E. The services are clear, succinct and manageable. The parents need to understand what the services are and how those services relate to keeping the child safe.
   F. The participants and responsibilities of each person.
      1. The action agreement must describe the responsibilities of the parents and Child Welfare.
         - It is important for the caseworker to follow through with any responsibility listed for Child Welfare.
         - It is also important for a caseworker to make sure that anything listed as a Child Welfare responsibility is something that Child Welfare can do. If there is a question if Child Welfare can do a particular activity (e.g., pay for a service), the caseworker should consult with his or her supervisor.
   G. The action agreement needs to list an anticipated start date (e.g., if part of an agreement is that the parents will enter into alcohol and drug treatment) the anticipated start date would be listed, with an anticipated completion date, based on the assessment of the service provider.
H. Indicate if a particular service or activity is an order of the court (if applicable) that relates to the expected outcome or specified activities or services.

I. Have the action agreement translated into a language the parents understand if the primary language of the parent is not English.

J. Complete a CF 0010 A to request translation. Ensure the Child Welfare case plan, petition, and action agreement are all related to one another and connected to the child’s identified safety threats. The action agreement should only include activities the parents are required to do that are linked back to the safety threats and expected outcomes that brought the family to the attention of Child Welfare.

II. Document the method of measuring progress.

A. The action agreement includes how Child Welfare will measure the parents’ enhanced protective capacity. Methods for measuring progress may include professional assessments, observations of changes in behaviors, conditions, or circumstances by family or other community members, or demonstrated changes in behaviors, conditions, or circumstances; e.g., parents making and keeping appointments, having residential stability or employment stability.

B. The parents need to understand how Child Welfare will measure progress at the onset of the action agreement.

III. Indicate the date Child Welfare will review the agreement.

A. The action agreement is time-limited. Over the life of a case, the caseworker will develop several sequential action agreements with the family. Each agreement needs to relate to the safety threats to the child. The agreements do not change the expectations placed upon the parents.

IV. Obtain agreement and signatures.

A. The parents and caseworker sign the action agreement. The action agreement also lists the date to review. Again, it is important to follow through with this review as a way to monitor compliance with services and assess the parents’ protective capacity.

V. Discuss progress toward conditions for return and expected outcomes with the family as a routine part of your caseworker contact. When the child is in the parents’ home and parents are unable or unwilling to participate in developing an action agreement, the caseworker must immediately reassess the parents’ ability and willingness to keep the child safe in the family home and whether more intrusive interventions are required. Parents must continue to participate in services and activities related to child safety when the child remains in the parents’ home with an ongoing safety plan.

Early Engagement Letter

The Early Engagement Letter (Form ODHS 3425) is developed after the Preparation Meeting and prior to the jurisdictional hearing. The Early Engagement Letter is sent when the caseworker has not been able to speak with the parent in person, an attorney has encouraged the parent (as their client) not to speak with their caseworker, or another barrier is present impeding timely and consistent contact between the caseworker and the parent. This process documents Child Welfare’s commitment to provide agreed upon supports and services. If communication is occurring, then an Early Engagement Letter is not necessary, and an Action Agreement is used.
The Early Engagement Letter is used as a tool to return children home in a safe and timely manner. The Early Engagement Letter is grounded in strengths-based, trauma informed, culturally responsive, and parent driven/youth guided values to partner with parent(s) in the change process. The Early Engagement Letter is a shared responsibility between the parent(s) and caseworker and communicates the mutual goal of reunification and case closure. Child Welfare will provide supports to the family regardless of their participation in services. The parent(s)' participation in the services identified in the letter are voluntary. A copy of the Early Engagement Letter is provided to the attorney.

Supports

Supports are activities that are provided by the Child Welfare to meet needs identified by the parent(s), supports attachment, promotes reunification and encourages success. Examples include:

- Parenting time. This time is intended to maintain, strengthen or develop attachment between the children and their parent(s). Frequency of contact impacts the likelihood of parent(s)' engagement in the case plan and successful reunification. Parent(s) should be provided the opportunity to participate in:
  - Caregiving responsibilities such as bath time, bedtime and mealtime, hair maintenance and skin care;
  - Medical appointments;
  - School activities;
  - Cultural events and religious activities;
  - Community functions; and
  - Time with extended family.

  Note: OAR 413-070-0800 to 413-070-0080 and Procedure Manual, Chapter 3 Section 17

- Transportation. Available and accessible transportation allows the parent(s) to focus on time spent with their child(ren). It provides opportunity for the parent(s) to successfully participate in services.

- Caseworker contact. OAR 413-040-0013 requires that the caseworker meet face to face with the parent(s) monthly. Parent(s) may benefit from more frequent contact that is tailored to their needs: in person, by phone, or in writing by text, email or letter. Parent(s)' preference is given priority when determining the location and time of face-to-face contact. The relationship the parent has with the caseworker and frequency of contact directly impact positive family outcomes.

- Family meetings. These meetings are intended to build a support team that gather regularly to identify strengths and needs, to address barriers, and build community with the family.

Service Referrals

Service referrals occur based on the unique and individual needs of the parent(s). Services are not “one size fits all”, must relate directly to the identified safety threat, be in the best interest of the child, and move the case towards closure. Examples of services may include, but are not limited to:

- Parent mentors;
- Parent training;
Planning for Supports and Services

The parent(s)’ expressed needs should determine the supports and services made available and should:

- Address the tribal expectations and active effort requirements;
- Reflect the parent(s)’ culture, preferred language and natural supports;
- Consider the developmental needs of the child or parent(s); and
- Reduce scheduling and transportation barriers

Cultural Requirements: The Early Engagement Letter is written using words easily understood by the parent(s) and provided in the parent(s)’ preferred language. Supports and services are developed in partnership with the parent(s) and based on the parent(s)’ unique cultural practices and beliefs. Consider church activities, holidays celebrated, community gatherings (ex. pow wows) and their own definition of family. Consider paths outside of the typically prescribed services for the parent to meet expected outcomes. For example, a father may want to meet with his tribal elder to learn new ways of parenting.

Distribution of the Early Engagement Letter: Once the Early Engagement Letter is developed it is provided to the parent(s) and a copy is provided to the attorneys and tribe, when applicable.

I. OAR 413-040-0005 to 0032, Developing and Managing the Case Plan
Chapter 4
Managing child safety in and out of home

Section 9: Monitor the Child Welfare case plan through required contacts
Monitor the Child Welfare case plan through required contacts

Face-to-face and other contact

The caseworker is responsible for 30-day face-to-face contacts. These contacts’ purpose is twofold. First and foremost, frequent contact is a part of the caseworker’s role in managing child safety. The caseworker is also responsible for:

I. Monitoring the changes in the family;
II. Continually assessing protective capacity;
III. Always ensuring Child Welfare interventions are the least intrusive means of keeping the child safe; and
IV. Making adjustments to Child Welfare’s interventions whenever indicated.

Procedure

I. The caseworker must have the following contacts:
   A. Face-to-face contact with the child monthly.
   B. Face-to-face contact with the parents monthly.
   C. Contact with the safety service providers monthly.
   D. Contact with the substitute caregiver monthly when a child is in substitute care.
   E. Face-to-face contact with the substitute caregiver in the home or facility of the substitute caregiver every 60 days.
   F. Contact with the service providers a minimum of once every 90 days.

Monitor the ongoing safety plan

Procedure

I. The caseworker reviews or updates while confirming the ongoing safety plan is sufficient monthly. The caseworker adjusts to either increase or decrease intrusiveness of Child Welfare intervention as necessary to manage child safety. For detailed procedures on confirming the ongoing safety plan, refer to Section 4 of this chapter.

Parent and child contact when a child remains in the parents’ home
Procedure

I. The caseworker must have face-to-face contact with the parents and the child at least monthly to monitor the child’s safety. This contact should occur in the parents’ home. Face-to-face contacts should be more frequent when needed to ensure child safety. Part of the visit should include time with the child away from the parents. During each face-to-face contact, monitor the child’s safety by:

   A. Looking for and evaluating any changes (increases and decreases) in the parents’ protective capacity and changes in the parents’ ability or willingness to keep the child safe.

   B. Confirming the Ongoing Safety Plan’s sufficiency (refer to Section 4 of this chapter).

Monitoring Infant Safe Sleep Practices During Parent and Child Contacts

During each face-to-face contact in the home of a parent or caregiver with children under the age of 12 months, the caseworker has the responsibility of observing the sleeping arrangements of any infant in the home and engaging and educating the parents or caregivers on safe sleep practices.

Procedure

I. As part of the activities required during each face-to-face contact in the home of a parent or guardian with an infant, the caseworker must:

   A. Observe the home and assess the sleep environment of the infant;

   B. Inquire about the sleep practices the family uses any time the infant is laid down to sleep for nap time or night time anywhere. Does the family know how the infant is laid down to sleep when at child care or with a babysitter or relative?

   C. Provide education on safe sleep recommendations. Provide both written information and a verbal explanation:

      - Written information may include the “Safe Sleep for Babies” brochure (OHA 8213) or other written resources depending on the needs, the languages used, and the learning styles of the parent or caregiver. Brochures demonstrating rather than describing safe sleep may be preferable to some families.

      - Consider the family’s culture or heritage when providing information. There are brochures available for focused outreach to different cultures or populations, like African American, American Indian or Alaska Native, or even grandparents.

      - Incorporate and acknowledge familial and cultural preferences.

   D. Support the family in problem solving to reduce sleep related risk. Check with the family’s support network or local organizations to secure a safe sleep surface (crib, bassinet, pack-n-play). Request funds to pay for a safe sleep surface if one is not available through other resources or create a sleep plan with the family.

   E. At each subsequent home visit, assess the sleeping conditions and engage the parents or caregivers on how to reduce the risks of unsafe sleep situations. Consider including other community partners in these conversations with the family, such as experts on substance use disorders, safe sleep or infant health, or culturally specific providers or experts. Consider connecting the family with providers they trust and who would have credibility on the topic, such as their pediatrician.

F. Document your observations of the sleep environment, information gathered on sleep practices, whether written information on safe sleep was provided and any efforts to reduce risk. Include the parent or caregiver reasons for their practices; for example, a Native family using traditional child rearing practices such as a baby board.

G. This information must be documented using the Safe Sleep Environment Checklist (ODHS 2362) at first in-home contact with the family and any subsequent in-home contacts when there is a change in sleep practices. The completed checklist must be uploaded into the OR-Kids file cabinet under Case Management. When there is no change in sleep practices, document this information in the case note already created for the face to face contact.

Documentation

I. Document your observations of the sleep environment, information gathered from the parent or caregiver on their sleep practices, whether written information on safe sleep was provided and any efforts to reduce risk. Include the parent or caregiver reasons for their practices; for example, a Native family using traditional child rearing practices such as a baby board.

II. Document the above information using the Safe Sleep Checklist (ODHS 2362) at first in-home contact with the family and any subsequent in-home contacts when there is a change in sleep practices. The completed checklist must be uploaded into the OR-Kids file cabinet. When there is no change in sleep practices, document this information in the case note already created for the face-to-face contact.

Safety Service Provider Contact (Every Participant In an Ongoing Safety Plan)

Procedure

I. The caseworker must have contact with each safety service provider in the ongoing safety plan monthly. This contact does not need to be face to face. Through this contact with the safety service provider in the ongoing safety plan, the caseworker must determine whether:

   A. Safety service providers in the ongoing safety plan are engaged and active in the safety activities.
   B. The parents are cooperating with the safety services.
   C. The safety service providers report that the interventions are effective.
   D. The safety service provider agrees that the level of intervention ensures the ongoing safety of the child.

II. The caseworker must evaluate the ongoing safety plan and feel confident the services are the least intrusive available to ensure the child’s safety.

   A. Revise the ongoing safety plan if less intrusive actions are appropriate.
   B. Revise the ongoing safety plan if the current plan is insufficient to manage child safety.

Monitor Action Agreements

Procedure
I. The caseworker must contact the service providers in an action agreement a minimum of once every 90 days. Child Welfare recommends more frequent contact, including email and phone communication, to get updated information on parents’ involvement and progress. The contact is a tool used to determine whether:
   A. The service provider is actively engaged with the family and providing the agreed upon services.
   B. The parents are making progress toward meeting the expected outcomes in a timely manner.
   C. The current action agreement is not working, and alternate strategies should be implemented to facilitate change.

Contact With The Child Placed in Substitute Care

Contacts with the child in out-of home care involve not only confirming the substitute caregiver’s participation in the ongoing safety plan as a resource but confirming the substitute care environment is safe for the child, and the child’s needs are being met while there. It includes monitoring services provided to the child (education, physical and mental health, or other treatment needs), the child’s adjustment to substitute care, and the ability of the substitute caregiver to provide a safe environment for the child.

Procedure

During each face-to-face contact, the caseworker must monitor the safety of the child by:

I. Assessing the progress in and adjustment to the placement of the child.

II. Receiving updates from the child and the substitute caregiver.

III. If the child has a supervision plan, ensuring it continues to meet the child’s enhanced supervision needs as identified by the CANS and making adjustments with the substitute caregiver as necessary.

IV. If the child is receiving personal care services, ensuring the Personal Care Services Plan is meeting the child’s additional service needs. If you are unsure whether the plan is meeting the child’s needs, consult with your supervisor. If a supervisor approves, consult with the child’s physician or the personal care nurse manager regarding your concerns about the child’s medical needs.

V. Assessing the safety and well-being of the child by determining whether each of the following conditions exist in the home:
   A. The child is comfortable, and the environment of the home is supportive and safe.
      1. The caseworker should talk to the child alone and, if the child is able to answer, ask questions about how the child feels in the placement, and whether they feel comfortable in the home.
   B. Adults in the home take an active role in caring for and supervising the child.
      1. The caseworker should talk to the child, if the child is old enough to communicate, about who takes care of him or her, what they do, etc.
   C. Adult family members possess the physical, emotional and cognitive capacity to sufficiently care for the child.
1. The caseworker should assess whether the child is:
   - Getting to medical and other appointments.
   - Getting to school on time.
   - What treatment providers for the child report about whether child’s needs are being met.

D. Family members and the child have contact with others in the community.
   1. The caseworker should ask the substitute caregiver and the child what they do for recreation and whether they attend school functions, church, other neighborhood events, etc.

E. The child is considered part of the household.
   1. The caseworker should ask questions about where the child eats, where they spend their time in the home (e.g., is much of the home restricted to the foster child?), and whether the child participates in family activities with the substitute caregiver.

F. The substitute caregiver understands and is attentive to the child’s vulnerability and need for protection.
   1. Is the substitute caregiver attending to the child’s special circumstances and protective of the child when they may be fearful or sensitive to the special issues a victim of child abuse may need to address?

G. The substitute caregiver is amenable to Child Welfare oversight and willing to partner with Child Welfare.
   1. Is the substitute caregiver following the Child Welfare case plan, including the visitation plan? Does the substitute caregiver share negative information about the case with the child?

H. If the child is placed with a relative caregiver, the child’s parents and other family understand the role of the relative caregiver in managing safety as a substitute caregiver.
   1. The child’s parents may not support the placement, but their opinion is a factor to consider in the quality of the placement. In addition, consider whether other extended family members can support the relative caregiver.

I. The child has a sufficiently positive relationship with the substitute caregiver’s own children who live in the home.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child about interactions with the foster parents’ own children, whether they play together or if they fight or argue.

J. The substitute caregiver is caring for children matching the preferences and experience of the family.
   1. The caseworker should talk with the substitute caregiver about how they are managing the care of the children in their home. Are they stressed, or do they feel overwhelmed?

K. The interactions between the child and other children placed in the home are sufficient to ensure safety.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child about the interactions with other foster children in the home. Do they play together, argue or fight, or generally get along?

L. The present demands do not exceed the ability of the substitute caregiver to provide safe and protective care.

1. The caseworker should talk to the substitute caregiver about their stress level, how they handle stress, whether they get breaks, if they enjoy foster parenting, and how are circumstances in their own lives affecting the children in the home?

VI. If any of the above conditions do not exist in the home, and the caseworker cannot confirm the safety and well-being of the child, the caseworker must:

A. Assess child safety immediately to determine if there is a safety threat.

1. If there is an evident safety threat, the caseworker must immediately:
   - Consult with the caseworker’s supervisor to determine any immediate protective action required to ensure the child’s safety, or
   - Any action required to ensure the child’s safety.
   - Contact a CPS screener and report the identified safety threat to the child.

B. Document the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances observed in the home and any immediate protective actions in the Child Welfare electronic data system.

VII. When the child is currently safe in the home, but a certification rule is being violated or, for other reasons, the caregiver is struggling with the responsibilities of caregiving, the caseworker must:

A. Document date, time, location, and current behaviors, conditions, or circumstances observed in the home in the Child Welfare electronic information system. Notify the certifier or certifier’s supervisor within one day.

B. The caseworker must have face-to-face contact with the substitute caregiver within the next 30 days, and the visit must occur in the home. The caseworker must observe the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances of the substitute caregiver, the child, and other children in the home, as well as conditions in the home.

C. When the caseworker can confirm that the child is safe, current conditions in the home provide safety and well-being for the child, and the certification violation has been remediated or, for other reasons, the caregiver’s struggles with caregiving have been resolved, the caseworker must:

1. Document the date, time, location, and observations of the condition of the environment in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

2. Notify the certifier of the improved behaviors, conditions, or circumstances in the home.

D. When the caseworker can confirm the child is safe but cannot confirm that the certification standard has been remediated, or if the caregiver continues to struggle with the responsibilities of caregiving, the caseworker must:

1. Consult with the supervisor to determine whether to recommend implementing a Placement Support Plan (refer to Chapter 7 for detailed procedures regarding the Placement Support Plan) to the certifier, or whether the child should no longer remain in the home because the conditions necessary to provide safety and well-being cannot be sustained in this home.

2. Notify the certifier of the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances in the home.
3. Document the date, time, location, and the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances in the home in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

4. During each face-to-face contact in the home of a certified family providing care for an infant in the care or custody of the Department, the caseworker must:
   - Observe and assess the sleep environment of the infant;
   - Inquire as to the sleep practices the certified family uses anytime the infant is laid down to sleep;
   - Engage and educate the certified family on safe sleep practices, as needed; and

VIII. Document observations of the sleep environment, any information gathered from the certified family on their sleep practices and whether written information on safe sleep was provided in the Department’s electronic information system.

Contact With a Child Placed With a Provider

A provider is defined as a “person approved by a licensed private child-caring agency to provide care for children or an employee approved by a licensed private child-caring agency.” In other words, it is a placement in a residential treatment facility or a foster home licensed or approved by someone other than a Child Welfare certifier.

Procedure

During every contact with a provider, the caseworker must:

I. Assess the progress in and adjustment to the placement of the child.

II. Receive updates from the child and from the provider.

III. Assess the safety of the child in the home or facility by determining whether each of the following conditions exists:

A. The child is comfortable, and the environment is supportive and safe.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child alone and, if the child is able, ask him or her questions about how they feel in the placement, and whether they feel comfortable.

B. Adults take an active role in caring for and supervising the child.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child, if the child is old enough to communicate, about who takes care of him or her, what they do, etc.

C. Adults possess the physical, emotional, and cognitive capacity to sufficiently care for the child.
   1. The caseworker should assess:
      - Whether the child is getting to medical and other appointments.
      - Whether the child is getting to school on time.
      - What the treatment service providers for the child report about whether the child’s needs are being met.

D. The child has formal and informal contact with others in the community.
1. The caseworker should ask the substitute caregiver and the child what they do for recreation and whether they participate in school functions, church, other neighborhood events, etc.

E. The child is considered part of the household or facility.
   1. The caseworker should ask questions such as:
      - Where the child eats,
      - Where they spend their time in the home or facility (are there restrictions placed on the child?), and
      - Whether the child routinely participates in activities with the substitute caregiver.

F. The provider understands and is attentive to the vulnerability and need for protection of the child.
   1. Is the substitute caregiver attending to the child’s special circumstances and protecting the child when the child may be fearful? Is the substitute caregiver sensitive to the special issues that a victim of child abuse may need to address?

G. The provider is amenable to Child Welfare oversight and willing to partner with Child Welfare.
   1. Is the substitute caregiver following the Child Welfare case plan, including the Visit and Contact Plan? Does the substitute caregiver share negative information about the case with the child? Is the substitute caregiver ensuring the child is receiving the treatment services he or she needs?

H. The child has a sufficiently positive relationship with other children in the home or facility of the provider.
   1. Observe the child in the home or facility. Ask about his or her relationships with others, the friends he or she has developed, and what relationships are meaningful to the child.

I. The substitute caregiver is caring for children matching the caregiver’s preferences and experience.
   1. The caseworker should talk to the child about the interactions with other foster children in the home. Do they play together, argue or fight, or generally get along?

J. The interactions between the child and other children placed in the home or facility sufficiently ensures safety.
   1. Observe the care provided to all the children in the home or facility. Do people seem to get along? Is everyone valued as a member of the group? Do caregivers appear to possess the knowledge and skills needed to care for the child and other children in the home?

K. The present demands of the home or facility do not exceed the ability of the substitute caregiver to provide safe and protective care.

IV. Document the date, time, location, and observations of the environment’s condition in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

V. If any of the above conditions do not exist in the home or facility and the caseworker cannot confirm the safety and well-being of the child, the caseworker must:
   A. Assess child safety immediately to determine if there is a safety threat.
      1. If a safety threat exists, the caseworker must immediately:
         Consult with the caseworker’s supervisor to determine any immediate protective action required to ensure the child’s safety or any action required to ensure the child’s safety.
Contact a CPS screener and report the identified safety threat to the child.

B. Document the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances observed in the home or facility and any immediate protective actions in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

VI. When the child is currently safe in the home or facility, but the conditions described above are not fully met, the caseworker must:

A. Contact the child caring agency’s management to report the conditions of the home or facility and request additional supportive resources for the provider.

B. Document in the Child Welfare electronic information system case notes the contact with the child caring agency’s management.

C. Have face-to-face contact with the provider and the child within the next 30 days. The visit must occur in the home or facility. The caseworker must observe the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances of the home or facility and the child and other children in the home or facility.

D. When the caseworker can confirm that current conditions in the home or facility provide safety and well-being for the child, the caseworker must:

1. Document the date, time, location, and observations of the condition of the environment in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

2. Contact the child caring agency’s management and report the improved behaviors, conditions, or circumstances in the home.

E. When the caseworker can confirm the child’s safety but cannot confirm that current conditions in the home or facility meet the requirements in OAR 413-080-0059 (3)(a)(D), the caseworker must:

1. Consult with the supervisor to determine whether an immediate protective action is required to ensure the child’s safety or any other action is required to ensure the child’s safety; or

2. Whether it is necessary to consult with the child caring agency’s management to provide additional support and ensure child safety.

3. Document the date, time, location, and the behaviors, conditions, or circumstances in the home or facility and any actions in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

4. Document contact with the child caring agency’s management.

Monitor The Case Plan

Procedure

I. The caseworker is responsible for continually monitoring all aspects of the Child Welfare case plan including:

A. The sufficiency of the ongoing safety plan;

B. The safety of the child;

C. That the interventions are the least intrusive available to keep the child safe;

D. The parents’ progress in the activities and services focused on enhancing protective capacity and/or managing safety threats; and
E. The child’s needs are being met.

II. The contact requirements are the caseworker’s vehicle to monitor the Child Welfare case plan. Consider the following questions:
   A. Am I confident that the child is safe now?
   B. Does the child report that he or she is safe, and can you observe a safe environment in the home?
   C. How are parents progressing in enhancing protective capacity? What behaviors, conditions, or circumstances have I observed that indicate change is occurring?
   D. Am I learning new things about the family that would indicate that the Child Welfare case plan or services should be modified to more specifically focus on the diminished protective capacities that make the child unsafe?
   E. Are there ways services can be less intrusive and still keep the child safe?
   F. Are the parents making sufficient progress that I can begin to work toward case closure?
   G. What do I need to feel confident that child safety can be sustained without Child Welfare involvement?

III. Consult regularly with your supervisor on the case.

Documentation

I. Document in the Child Welfare electronic information system case notes:
   A. The date, type, and location of each contact with the child and parent;
   B. The date and type of each contact with each participant in the in-home ongoing safety plan;
   C. Observations and condition of the child during the home visit;
   D. Observations and condition of each parent during the home visit;
   E. Changes observed in the ability of the parents to provide protective care;
   F. Observations or reports from ongoing safety plan participants and service providers;
   G. How the ongoing safety plan or any revised safety plan (including the facts supporting the revision) continues to ensure the safety of the child; and
   H. Any immediate protective action if required to ensure the safety of the child.

What do I talk to a child about?

For a toddler or a young child, the caseworker can observe the child to see how comfortable the child is in the home and around their parent. The caseworker can ask the child simple questions such as what type of things they do, are there lots of people in their house and, even if it is a child a little bit older, if they feel safe.

For an older child, the caseworker can ask specific questions about how safe they feel, how they get to school, who is at the home when they are, what type of things they like to do. Also refer to Chapter 5 for more information on visitation.

Managing child safety in and out of home

Section 10: Conduct a Child Welfare case plan review
Conduct a Child Welfare case plan review

Procedure

I. The caseworker must:

   A. Review the Child Welfare case plan at least every 90 days and make appropriate updates.

   B. Consider revising the Child Welfare case plan to include recommendations that will improve parents’ protective capacity related to the identified safety threats.

      1. Do this within 30 calendar days of receiving an expert evaluation that Child Welfare requested.

         If the recommendations are not implemented and not included in the Child Welfare case plan, the rationale must be documented in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

         Document case notes in the Child Welfare electronic information system when the decision is made.

         Document the decision in the next Child Welfare case plan update.

   C. Review the Child Welfare case plan in a face-to-face meeting with the parents.

      1. If a parent is not available for the review, the caseworker must document the following:

         ■ The reason the parent was not available.

         ■ The efforts made to involve the parent in the review.

      2. The meeting may also include the child, substitute caregiver, service providers, attorneys, CASA and other family members.

         The caseworker must consider input received from the following during a case plan review during the meeting or through other contacts or correspondence:

         ■ The child or young adult,

         ■ The service providers,

         ■ Safety plan participants,

         ■ Substitute caregivers,

         ■ Attorneys,

         ■ A child’s CASA,

         ■ Persons with significant attachments to the child, and

         ■ Family members.

II. In all cases, the case plan review must include:

   A. An assessment of the progress made in achieving the expected outcomes of the Child Welfare case plan. Follow Section 11 of this chapter, Measure Progress, which addresses the procedure to use when assessing and determining progress in achieving expected outcomes.

   B. Input received from service providers, foster parents, attorneys, CASA and family members.
C. Observations of improved or worsening parent protective capacity based on specific behaviors, conditions, or circumstances that have measurably changed.

D. The elimination or management of identified safety threats.

III. In substitute care cases, the case plan review must also include:

A. An assessment of one or both parents’ progress toward meeting the conditions for return.

B. A review of the services provided to the child and whether they are building upon the child’s strengths and meeting the child’s needs. This includes those identified in the CANS screening and, when applicable, the personal care assessment.

C. An assessment of the substitute caregiver’s ability to meet the child’s identified needs, including:

1. The child’s physical and emotional safety:
   - Does the substitute caregiver possess the skill level or willingness to acquire the skills necessary to meet the physical, emotional, and supervisory needs of the child?
   - Do the ages, number, and gender of other children currently in the home affect the caregiver’s ability to meet the child’s needs?
   - What are the behaviors of the children currently in the home related to protecting the child from further victimization and from harm to self or others?
   - What is the substitute caregiver’s ability to protect the child from inappropriate contact with those who would harm the child?
   - Does the physical layout of the home affect the substitute caregiver’s ability to adequately supervise children?

2. Preserving existing attachments to family:
   - Is the substitute caregiver a relative? If not, what does a review of the relative search results indicate? What are the barriers to placement with a relative, and can they be eliminated?
   - Does the substitute caregiver meet the family’s placement preference?
   - Is this the substitute caregiver the child requested?
   - Does the substitute caregiver help the child’s attachment through supporting visitation and working with the family?
   - Does this substitute caregiver provide mutual care when both child and parent require out-of-home placement?

3. Supporting continuity and familiarity:
   - What is the parents’ relationship with the substitute caregiver or the child’s ability to develop relationships with a substitute caregiver?
   - What is the substitute caregiver’s proximity to the child’s neighborhood, school, and family?
   - What is the substitute caregiver’s capacity to support reunification, provide a permanent home, or support transition to a permanent home?
4. Supporting appropriate educational, developmental, emotional, and physical support for the child:
   - Does the substitute caregiver have a demonstrated capacity to meet the child’s specific or unique needs, including needs identified in the CANS screening?
   - If the child receives a level of care resulting from the CANS screening, has the substitute caregiver effectively implemented the supervision plan?
   - Is the substitute caregiver willing to acquire the skills necessary to meet the child’s specific needs?
   - Does the substitute caregiver help get the child to appointments for physical, mental health, and dental care?
   - Is the substitute caregiver able to meet the child’s needs considering the number and type of children in the home?
   - Is the substitute caregiver willing and able to assist, participate in decisions about, and act as an advocate for the child?
   - Is the substitute caregiver able to identify and build upon the child’s strengths?
   - If the child is receiving personal care services, do these services address the child’s additional medical needs?
   - Is the child’s medical condition improving or, if the child has chronic or serious medical complications, is the child’s medical care sufficiently meeting those needs?

5. Meeting the child’s needs to be nurtured and supported:
   - Considering the other children in the home, what is the substitute caregiver’s:
     (1) Desire to provide care for this child and ability to provide the necessary nurture and support?
     (2) Willingness to provide care as long as needed?
     (3) Willingness to support a transition home or other placement?
     (4) Ability to recognize a child’s needs and build on the child’s strengths?

6. Supporting the child’s cultural and religious background:
   - What is the substitute caregiver’s ability to:
     (1) Appreciate, nurture, support and reinforce the cultural identity of the child?
     (2) Support the child’s development and help the child develop age-appropriate developmental and social skills?
     (3) Communicate with the child?
     (4) Honor and accommodate religious differences and support the child’s religious heritage and preferences?

D. A review of the supervision plan if one is in place:

1. The review of the supervision plan should include, at a minimum, a conversation with the substitute caregiver. It may also include the child, when appropriate, and the certifier for the substitute caregiver. Questions to consider include:
Whether the plan is meeting the child’s supervision needs as identified in the CANS screening;

Whether the plan should be adjusted to be either more or less structured depending on how the child is progressing in the placement; and

Whether or not there have been significant, observed, documented changes in the pattern of the child’s behavior to warrant a referral for a new CANS screening.

E. The review of the personal care services plan if one is in place:

1. The review of the personal care services plan should include, at a minimum, a conversation with the substitute caregiver. It may also include the child, when appropriate, the certifier for the substitute caregiver, and the personal care nurse manager when needed. Questions to consider include:
   - Do the services address the child’s needs to remain in the least restrictive environment?
   - Is the child’s medical condition improving, or, if a chronic or serious illness, remaining stable?
   - Is the child receiving ongoing, appropriate medical care?

F. A review of the search for the child’s relatives:

The following questions may assist in this review:

1. What maternal and paternal relatives have been identified and contacted?
2. What maternal and paternal relatives have responded, and how have you responded to their interest to be a placement resource, visiting resource, or safety service provider? How have you responded to their desire to maintain connection with the child?
3. In what ways have the relatives been engaged with the family and the child?
4. Has the caseworker contacted the relatives again when there was no response to the initial inquiry?
5. Is it appropriate to contact relatives again (e.g., considering a placement change, considering a case plan change, considering a return home)?
6. Were some relatives denied placement but could be engaged to participate in the child’s life in other ways? If so, how?

G. A review of the visitation plan. The following questions may help in this review:

1. How have changes in the parents’ protective capacity affected supervision of visits?
2. Does the visitation plan meet the child’s safety and well-being needs?
3. Is the visitation plan the least restrictive plan?
4. What opportunities exist for the child to visit with other family members?
5. Does the visitation plan support progress toward the conditions for return and achieving the case plan’s expected outcomes?

H. Consideration of a child’s siblings:

1. Are siblings placed together? If so, what services are in place to address supervision and/or therapeutic issues (e.g., aggression or sexual acting out between siblings) if they exist?

2. If siblings are not together, what ongoing efforts are made to place them together? What efforts are made to keep them connected while separated in placement?

3. Has a permanency committee recommended it would not be in their best interests to be placed together? If so, what efforts have been made to assess their need for ongoing connection, and how is that need being met?

I. A review of concurrent planning

1. What is the child’s concurrent permanency plan?

2. In what ways have we engaged the family to develop the concurrent plan?

3. What actions are currently underway should the concurrent plan become the permanency plan for the child?

4. What remaining actions need to occur to implement the concurrent plan?

5. Has the child been in care for 15 out of the last 22 months and, if TPR has not been filed, what is the compelling reason not to pursue TPR?

IV. Review the Child Welfare case plan with the supervisor to gain approval of the revised case plan.

V. Document the Child Welfare case plan review by recording updated information in the Child Welfare electronic information system:

A. Document the information gathered for a 90-day review in the Child Welfare electronic information system case notes.

B. Record the 90-day review on the appropriate Child Welfare case plan form (CF 333 a, b or c) as follows:

1. Use the 333a whenever the child is in substitute care.

3. Use the 333b whenever the court has given Child Welfare legal custody of the child and the child remains in the home or has returned to the parents’ home with an in-home safety plan. (The court is involved and Child Welfare has custody.)

4. Use the 333c whenever Child Welfare has opened a case because of:
   - An identified child safety threat, and
   - The parent is unable or unwilling to protect the child, and
   - The child remains in the parents’ home with an in-home ongoing safety plan. (There is no court involvement.)

C. Document input received from service providers, substitute caregivers, attorneys, the child’s CASA, persons with significant attachments to the child and family members.

D. Review and fully update the Child Welfare case plan at least every six months, with the current information and a record of progress, using the appropriate CF 333 series form (as listed above).
A worker may wish to document the 90-day review on the CF 333 series instead of in case notes when the full information provided on the CF 333 will soon be needed for an upcoming court hearing (or, if in substitute care, Citizen Review Board Hearing). Use the CF 333 form for the initial Child Welfare case plan and every six months thereafter for the six-month case plan reviews.

VI. When the CF 333 Child Welfare case plan is used, submit the completed case plan to your supervisor for approval and procure the supervisor’s signature on the CF 333 Child Welfare case plan.

VII. Distribute the updated Child Welfare case plan to the following individuals no later than seven days after the supervisor has approved the case plan, unless doing so would provide information that places one of these individuals at risk:
   A. The parents.
   B. A Native American child’s tribe(s).
   C. If involved with the court, also distribute to:
      1. The CASA.
      2. Attorneys of record for the parent, legal guardians, and child.

Role of the supervisor

I. Regular consultation with the caseworker regarding case planning and progress. Regular consultation may include brief issues-specific staffing as well as at least monthly reviews of each case. Worker face-to-face contact with supervisors should take into account the needs and experience of the worker and the complexity of the family or the case load. At a minimum, worker face-to-face contact with the supervisor should be monthly to review the worker’s entire case load.

II. Supervisors should use the exploratory questions contained in the 90-Day Staffing Supervisory Guide, appendix 4.12.

III. After the caseworker completes documentation of the Child Welfare case plan review (every 90 days), the supervisor must check the caseworker’s documentation of the Child Welfare case plan review.
   A. Document that you have read the caseworker’s documentation of the Child Welfare case plan review:
      1. In ODHS information system case notes, if documentation was recorded in this manner; or
      2. By signing the CF 333 Child Welfare case plan, when its review is documented in the CF 333 series.
   B. Consult with caseworker if the Child Welfare case plan review (either the 90-day or six-month review recorded in 333 series) is not adequate and if changes need to be made.
   C. If not approving the Child Welfare case plan as-is, consider the following:
      1. The effect of the necessary changes on the parents; and
      2. Whether another meeting with the parents may need to occur to keep them involved in the process of updating the Child Welfare case plan and to keep up to date about the contents of the Child Welfare case plan.

Managing child safety in and out of home

Section 11: Measure progress
Measure progress

Whenever Child Welfare is involved with a family due to a threat to child safety, the caseworker is continually measuring progress. Why do we need to measure progress? The paramount concern is child safety. Caseworkers must continually be aware of potential safety threats, managing existing threats, and responding with the least intrusive interventions that still manage child safety. We must work toward maintaining a child in his or her home or, if in substitute care, to achieve placement with a parent, in almost all situations. We are mandated to address children’s need for permanency and to ensure their well-being.

Measuring progress is necessary to increase the likelihood that we achieve these goals in a timely fashion. When measuring progress, consider a number of areas, including whether:

I. The parents are making adequate progress toward the expected outcomes.

II. The parents are making progress toward the conditions for return.

III. The interventions of Child Welfare are effective in helping the family.

IV. The child’s need for permanency and well-being are being met.

V. The parents can manage and sustain the child’s safety without Child Welfare’s involvement.

Tip

The previous section of this chapter, “Conduct a Child Welfare case plan review,” provides procedure regarding contact and documentation requirements for Child Welfare case plan reviews.

Procedure

The caseworker must:

I. Assess progress as a part of the ongoing intervention with the family, including at the following times:

   A. Measure during and/or after any contacts with parents, children, service providers and others connected to the child and/or family.

      1. Measure progress by observing changes being made over time.

   B. Every 90 days, formally measure progress when reviewing the Child Welfare case plan.

II. Measure progress with respect to the following:

   A. Meeting the conditions for return (when a child is in substitute care);

   B. Achieving the expected outcomes (including):

      1. Improvements in parent’s protective capacities related to the safety threats; and/or

      2. Reduction in or elimination of safety threats.
C. Permanency and well-being for the child:

1. Child Welfare monitors child well-being and provides services to ensure children’s needs are met and/or supports parents in meeting children’s needs.

III. Progress is measured in terms of what has changed and been accomplished or can be observed. It can be documented because its occurrence has been verified, changed, or observed.

For example, in the case example used in the Determine Expected Outcomes section of this chapter, of the mom who takes off and leaves her children alone, the relationship between the expected outcomes and progress measurement could be something like:

Expected outcome

A. Mom will make sufficient child care arrangements with a suitable person(s) each time she is going out and will sustain this for the next six months.

Measure of progress

B. Caseworker verified with the child care provider that Mom made appropriate decisions on supervision of the child when child care provider was not available. Caseworker verified mother used grandmother as babysitter.

If the Child Welfare case plan included an expected outcome related to the protective capacity for mom learning to put her children’s needs before her own, the measure of progress would be something like:

Expected outcome within the next six months:

A. Mom will learn to understand her children’s needs for safety and security that require she think about and respond to their needs before her own.

B. Mom will be able to describe the dangers that leaving the children alone create and to describe the feelings the children may have because of their exposure to these dangers.

C. Mom will be able to accept her responsibilities to ensure that children’s basic needs for safety are met.

Measure of progress

D. Mother’s mental health therapist reported positive results from individual counseling specific to understanding children’s needs for safety being essential.

E. Mother’s parent trainer reported mother’s demonstrated ability to understand and describe children’s feelings.

F. Caseworker observations of mother with children during face-to-face contact demonstrated mother’s ability to consistently and appropriately respond to children’s needs.

IV. Adjust the following, when indicated, based on the information learned when monitoring the Child Welfare case plan, maintaining case contacts, and measuring progress:

A. Child Welfare interventions, including but not limited to:

1. Action agreements.
   - Logically sequence actions, services and activities through a series of time-limited, focused action agreements.

2. Timing, sequencing and appropriateness of services.
3. Caseworker contacts (frequency, quality and content).
4. Caseworker approach with parents.

B. Level of intrusiveness:
   1. Strive toward the lowest level of Child Welfare intrusiveness needed to manage child safety.
   2. Step up or step down intrusiveness based on ensuring child safety.

C. Parental responsibility for the protection of the child, including:
   1. Encouraging and supporting parents’ efforts to be in a protective role.
   2. Increasing parental responsibility when possible and safe to do so.

D. The ongoing safety plan:
   1. Adequately managing child safety.
   2. Lowering the level of intrusiveness when safe to do so.
   3. Increasing parental responsibility for child protection when possible.

E. The Child Welfare case plan, including:
   1. Adjusting any of the above issues.
   2. Securing services and supports for the child or the parents.
   3. Increasing the support system so that sustained changes and child safety are most likely to continue without Child Welfare’s involvement.

V. Consider the following when measuring the parents’ progress toward a change:
   A. What signs of readiness and motivation to change do I currently see?
   B. How does this compare with what I have seen in the past with this family?
   C. What can I do to increase readiness and motivation toward change?
   D. What is the parent’s motive to do something or not do something? Motive has to do with intent and a choice to change. Reflect on:
      1. What parents say and do.
      2. How they plan.
      3. Their approach to problem solving.
      4. The extent to which they direct their efforts to the child safety issue.
      5. Their follow-through.
      6. The extent to which they remain focused.
   E. In what way is the parent moving toward the desired change? Movement has to do with activity and behavior. Reflect on:
1. Evidence of trying, participating, following through, being dependable, being committed and making gains.

2. Qualities of the movement by considering questions such as:
   - What small steps are occurring?
   - What forward movement (along with slips away from desired change) is occurring?
   - Are the parents learning things from the steps backward that will help to ultimately strengthen the change?
   - How motivated or ready are the parents to change now?
   - How may this motivation/readiness have changed over time and to what contributed to that shift?
   - In what ways am I, as the worker, helping to motivate change?
   - In what ways am I noticing and acknowledging movement?
   - What may be reinforcing the parents’ movement toward the desired change?
   - What may be reinforcing maintenance of the status quo?
   - What may be reinforcing slips away from the desired change?

3. Think about the interventions of Child Welfare and service providers.
   - Are they likely to facilitate positive change, given the parents’ current motivation/readiness for change?
   - If no, adjust based on what can be done differently.

4. Is there a match between Child Welfare or the service provider’s interventions and the parents’ readiness at this moment?
   - If no, adjust based on what could be more effective at influencing positive change.

F. What are the potential barriers to change, and how can the caseworker and parents deal with this?

   1. Ask yourself some questions to determine what may stand in the way of achieving positive change, including:
      - What may keep the parents from being more ready for change at this time?
      - What are the parents’ capacities to change?
      - Are necessary resources for change available?
      - What will the parents lose if they change? What can help the parents adjust to/cope with that loss?
      - In what way are others holding relapses against the parents (and how can relapse be normalized and used as an experience that can: strengthen positive change, enhance important learning about oneself, and motivate continued desirable change)?
      - Who can assist the parents with things that stand in the way of change? What is my role in this as the caseworker?
G. How likely will change occur in a necessary time frame? Ask yourself some of these questions to examine this, including:

1. What is the likelihood for acceptable change and success?
2. How long is acceptable change likely to take?
3. How does this timeframe affect the child’s need for permanency in a reasonable amount of time for this child (considering the child’s emotional status, developmental age, attachment needs)?
4. What has happened historically?
5. What is the nature of the safety threat?
6. What are the circumstances in which the safety threat occurred?
7. How much effort do the parents need to make adequate change with the critical diminished protective capacities?
8. What support do the parents have, and what additional support could be in place to improve chance for success?
9. What personal and concrete resources are available to support change?

H. Pay attention to the parents’ thoughts/feelings/beliefs and the parents’ qualities that may signal barriers for making change or those that may be associated with success in making change. Adjust approach or decisions as needed.

1. Some examples of thoughts/beliefs/perceptions that may be a barrier to positive change:
   - Unrealistic feelings of helplessness.
   - Reference to rigid beliefs/values.
   - Focus on the limitations and faults of others involved in the problem.
   - Psychological labeling of problems.
   - Beliefs that family members lack the capacity or desire to make changes.
   - Unchangeable external factors.
   - Misconceptions about innate qualities that cannot be changed.

2. Some examples of thoughts/beliefs/perceptions/qualities that may signal likelihood for success in making positive change:
   - Sense of family identity.
   - Desire to stay together.
   - Vision of the future.
   - Notion that life can be better/different.
   - Sufficient capacity to learn.
   - Participation in problem solving and gaining some insight.
   - Motivation to change.
   - Sense of hope.
   - Openness and capacity to participate in a relationship.
- Need for relationships.
- Openness to the caseworker and a capacity to trust.
- Openness or readiness for change.
- Common worker/family acceptance of necessary change.
- The family “owns” the Child Welfare case plan to address change.

VI. Measure progress based on your own understanding of the parents’ protective capacities coupled with information you gain from other sources.

A. Caseworker gains understanding about safety and the parents’ protective capacities by:
   1. Developing a relationship with parents and children and maintaining meaningful caseworker contacts with the parents and child.
   2. Knowledge about the parents’ thoughts, feelings, beliefs and behaviors and about the specific child’s needs.
   3. Asking questions, probing into issues and observing situations.
   4. Exploring any revealed contradictions and being careful about overestimating or underestimating what parents or others may say.
   5. Attempting to establish proof of protective capacities.

B. Parents make statements about their capabilities and intents, as well.
   1. While the nonoffending and nonthreatening parent is the most important source of information about his or her protective capacities, it is bad practice to accept a parent’s statements as the only basis for decisions about child safety.
   2. The caseworker needs to take note when parents intentionally or unintentionally reveal important information.
   3. The parents have a reasonable, doable plan likely to protect the child that may reflect the parents’ enhanced protective capacity and increase the caseworker’s confidence in the parents’ ability to be responsible for providing protection.

C. People who know the parents may provide information to confirm what the caseworker learns about the parents. The caseworker needs to judge the person’s reliability and veracity. Potential information includes:
   1. Providing historical information indicating protectiveness.
   2. Giving information about the nature of the relationship between the parents and the person who threatens child safety.
   3. Stating an opinion about the parents’ plan to protect.
   4. Responding to caseworker questions, such as:
      - What specific behaviors have you seen that tell you that the parents are better able to protect the child?
      - What have the parents done or said that may have made you concerned about whether they could or would protect the child?

■ (Use of scaling questions.) If 0 is completely unsafe and 10 is completely safe, what would you rate the safety of the child when Child Welfare first became involved? What would you rate it today? What would need to happen for you to rate it one number higher? What would need to occur for you to consider it a 10?

D. The child may be a source of information.

1. What does the child notice about changes the parents are making?
2. What does the caseworker observe between the parents and child when seeing them together?

E. Reports from the service providers.

1. As addressed in Determine Appropriate Actions, Services and Activities in this chapter, the caseworker needs to communicate with service providers at least every 90 days.

■ What are their current thoughts about child safety?
■ What observations do they have of changes in the parents’ protective capacity and enhancement of parents’ responsibility for child protection?
■ How have they arrived at their conclusions and recommendations?

F. Reports from safety plan participants.

1. What do individuals involved in the current plan to provide for child safety say about changes the parents are making or changed circumstances related to safety?

G. Reports from other Child Welfare staff who are involved with the family (social service assistant, supervisor or other staff).

H. Reports from others involved in the case, such as the child’s CASA, attorneys, others with significant attachment to the child or affiliation with the family.

I. When a child is in substitute care, adjust the following, based on the information learned through the process of measuring progress:

1. Child Welfare interventions and activities of concurrent planning, including but not limited to:

■ Review services provided to meet the child’s needs and ensure they are adequately meeting needs and the substitute caregiver does not currently need other services.
■ Assess the child’s need for a safe, permanent home in a timeframe that meets the child’s needs:

(1) Consider: child’s age, developmental level, whether the identified concurrent plan still appears to best meet the child’s needs, and whether a person has been identified to provide permanency in the concurrent plan.
(2) Consider whether an expert evaluation would provide information and make recommendations about any of the above issues.
(3) Consider people who could potentially become a permanent placement resource for the concurrent plan, including:

(i) Determining whether more efforts are needed to complete the diligent relative search or to locate additional relatives.

(ii) Learn if the substitute caregiver would be interested in and appropriate to provide permanent care, if needed; and

(iii) If there are still no potential permanent placement resources in the concurrent plan, whether you need to explore any other avenues for locating individuals who could provide permanency at this time.

2. Assess the capacity of the substitute caregiver to meet the identified needs of the child and make adjustments as needed.

3. Consult with people who may provide guidance about appropriate activities for concurrent planning, including consultation with your supervisor.

4. Determine whether an in-home safety plan may be able to manage child safety when conditions for return are met.

5. Reevaluate the Child Welfare case plan, including implementing the concurrent plan when adequate change is not being made and the child needs permanency soon.

VII. How do you decide to implement the concurrent plan? You’re working hard to provide efforts to reunify the child with the parents. You’re measuring progress and adjusting to try to help the child safely return to parents. You have been working simultaneously toward achieving the concurrent plan and staffing the case regularly with your supervisor. Yet, it seems that adequate progress is still not being made.

Answers to the questions below may signal that it’s time for Child Welfare to recommend implementation of the concurrent plan:

A. Are the parents engaged or making any efforts toward reunification? If not, it may be appropriate to request an early permanency hearing.

B. Is the permanency hearing date approaching?
   1. If so, how likely is it that parents will soon meet conditions for return and an in-home safety plan can manage the child’s safety in the home? If not likely, it may be time to change the plan.

C. Has the child been in substitute care almost 15 of the last 22 months?
   1. If so, the law requires compelling reasons not to file a petition to terminate parental rights when that time frame is reached. It may be time.

D. What does the child need?
   1. Factors such as the child’s age, the child’s developmental level, the child’s attachment to the parents, the child’s ability to transfer an attachment to another person, and the child’s special needs may all play a part in determining the child’s needs. If the child needs permanency now, it may be time.

E. Who can tell us about the child’s need for permanency?
   1. The substitute care provider? The child’s therapist? The CASA? The Native American child’s tribe(s)? Is there somebody with professional expertise (such as a psychologist) who has evaluated the child and can inform us and/or the court about this matter? If not, it may be time to get this evaluation.
2. What do parents say about the child’s needs, given the progress and/or lack thereof made with reunification?

F. Do the parents know about available options?
   1. The options are different depending on the safety issues and what option will provide the most legally secure and permanent concurrent plan that best meets this child’s needs. However, some options may include:
      ■ Voluntary planning for adoption by relinquishing parental rights and possibly entering into a mediated agreement regarding openness in adoption.
   2. Permanent placement with a relative through adoption, guardianship or permanent foster care that may allow continued contact with the parents, if appropriate.

VIII. Obtain court approval prior to working toward the concurrent permanency plan.
   A. The case must be staffed at the local legal assistance staffing with an assistant attorney general (or district attorney if in Multnomah County) for approval to file a TPR petition.
   B. If TPR is approved in the staffing, request the court to schedule a permanency hearing to determine the plan within 30 days if one is not already scheduled within 30 days of the approval from the local legal assistance staffing. If the court declines to schedule a permanency hearing, contact the AAG to file a motion requesting a permanency hearing.
   C. At the permanency hearing, recommend the permanency plan change from reunification and request that the court approve the change of plan pursuant to ORS 419B.476(5).
   D. If the court approves the change of plan to adoption, Child Welfare may then request a Family Law Section AAF file a TPR petition. If the court does not approve the change of plan to adoption, Child Welfare must continue to work with the parent(s) toward reunification, and no TPR will be filed, except in the following circumstances.
   E. If, after review with your supervisor and local legal assistance staffing, Child Welfare believes the plan approved by the court is not in the best interests of the child, consult with an AAG and Central Office staff to determine whether it would be appropriate to appeal the court’s determination of the plan or take other actions.
   F. Follow these procedures when changing the permanency plan from reunification to any other permanency option, including guardianship, permanent foster care or any APPLA plan.
   G. In the circumstance where the court orders Child Welfare to file a TPR and simultaneously continue to work toward reunification, comply with the court order.
   H. If, after review with your supervisor, you determine the decision is not in the best interests of the child, consider an appeal or other legal action.

IX. Relief of efforts toward reunification.
   A. Continue to offer services to parents throughout the life of the case. Historically, in some courts, the caseworker has asked to be relieved of efforts to reunify the child with the parents at the time a permanency plan changes. In other courts, the court has ordered Child Welfare to be relieved of efforts to reunify the family.

B. Except in cases where Child Welfare is not required to make reasonable efforts, commonly characterized as “aggravated circumstances” cases (described in ORS 419B.340(5)), the caseworker is not to request relief of efforts toward reunification, even after the court has approved a change in the permanency plan.

Continue to provide services to the parents after a TPR petition is filed, even if a court enters an order relieving Child Welfare of making reunification efforts. Oregon case law and statutes require continuing reasonable efforts.

The supervisor’s role

I. Provide regular consultation with the caseworker.

II. Review the reported progress, ask questions, review case notes.

III. Help the caseworker make decisions when progress is slow or there is not progress toward meeting expected outcomes.

IV. Review again with the caseworker the parental protective capacities and the related services and activities to mitigate diminished protective capacities.

V. Suggest alternate methods to achieve expected outcomes.

VI. Help the caseworker meet with the family when a joint meeting would be helpful.

VII. Provide regular supervision whenever considering a permanency plan change. Support the caseworker in continuing to provide services to the parents even after a court has relieved Child Welfare of making reunification efforts.

Managing child safety in and out of home

Section 12: Manage a new safety threat
Manage a new safety threat

When the child is in the parent’s home

Procedure

I. When a caseworker is in the child’s home and identifies present danger or a new impending danger that meets the safety threshold criteria, the caseworker must ensure child safety before leaving the home. The facts surrounding the safety threat will determine a caseworker’s response. The caseworker must consider:

A. Will a revision of the ongoing safety plan manage safety in the child’s home?
B. Are there safety service providers available and willing to participate in the ongoing safety plan now?
C. Can safety be managed before the caseworker calls the screener?
D. Do I need help to ensure child safety? Is it likely the child will need to be removed from the home and placed in substitute care?
E. The caseworker may need to contact a supervisor or law enforcement to determine how to adequately manage the new safety threat.

II. When information is received that indicates there is a new safety threat, the caseworker must report the new safety threat to a screener immediately (ensuring safety first and foremost), unless the caseworker has reliable information that the information has already been reported.

With new information, the caseworker must re-evaluate whether an increased level of safety intervention is necessary and adjust the ongoing safety plan.

When the child is in substitute care

I. If the caseworker cannot confirm the safety and well-being of the child, the caseworker must:

A. Assess child safety immediately to determine if there is present danger.

If present danger is identified, the caseworker must immediately:

1. Consult with the caseworker’s supervisor to determine an immediate protective action to ensure the child’s safety.
2. Contact a CPS screener and report the identified threat to the child.
3. Document the behaviors, conditions or circumstances observed in the home and any immediate protective actions in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

The supervisor’s role

I. Consult with the caseworker when a new safety threat is identified.

II. Review and approve any revision to an ongoing safety plan to ensure it is sufficient.

III. Provide routine case oversight and help the caseworker gain experience and expertise in safety management decisions.
Chapter 4
Managing child safety in and out of home

Section 13: Revise an ongoing safety plan
Revise an ongoing safety plan

The ongoing safety plan is continually subject to revision and should adjust to the changes in family functioning. All revisions are to ensure the ongoing safety plan at any given point is:

I. Adequate to manage child safety, and

II. The least intrusive intervention to assure child safety.

When revising/updating an ongoing safety plan, the caseworker relies on his or her understanding of the safety threats, parental protective capacities, roles of the safety service providers, and the family’s support system. Both the family’s functioning and the ongoing safety plan are dynamic.

The more a caseworker knows about a family, the more a caseworker can create and adjust an ongoing safety plan that appropriately involves safety service providers in the least intrusive ways to ensure child safety.

Tip

Any time you question your confidence in the safety plan, chances are that it is reasonable to question if it is sufficient. “Maybe or probably” are not the standards when it comes to making sure children are safe.

Procedure

I. Caseworker actions if an ongoing safety plan is insufficient:
   A. Identify what safety need is not being met.
   B. Explore ways to meet those needs.
   C. Contact persons or providers who can participate in an ongoing safety plan.
   D. Consult with your supervisor if you need advice in developing a sufficient ongoing safety plan.
   E. Revise the ongoing safety plan and seek to obtain signatures of all safety service providers and participants.
   F. Obtain your supervisor’s approval.
   G. Document the new safety plan in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

The supervisor’s role

I. Provide consultation on the ongoing safety plan.

II. Confirm the ongoing safety plan’s sufficiency.

Approve any revisions to the ongoing safety plan in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

Managing child safety in and out of home

Section 14: Reunification
Reunification

When an ongoing safety plan includes a child’s placement in substitute care, the caseworker must make ongoing reasonable efforts to reduce the time in placement. Remember that any legal parent may reunify with the child; do not only consider the parent from whom the child was removed. Thoughtful and effective planning to return the child must begin at the time of placement and continue until the child returns or the Child Welfare case plan’s goal is changed to the concurrent permanency plan. The effort to reunify should be constant and intense. Safety threats do not have to be eradicated to manage the child’s safety. Parents do not necessarily have to demonstrate sustained change for children to return to the parents’ home.

The decisions made at the time of placement and the actions taken throughout the case greatly affect timely return of the child to the parents’ home, including:

I. Where and with whom the child is placed.
II. Visitation plans that maintain or increase parent/child bonds to the parents.
III. Clear understanding and constant monitoring of the safety threats in relation to the parental protective capacities.
IV. Developing conditions for return.
V. Monitoring case progress.

Reunification as a decision and practice is part of ongoing safety management. Reunification should occur:

I. At the earliest time a child’s legal parent can meet the safety needs of the child, regardless of whether that parent was the parent from whose home the child was removed, or
II. At the earliest time safety threats can be sufficiently managed with an in-home safety plan because of the progress that made related to the conditions for return.

Reunification can only occur when parents have met conditions for return and they have implemented an in-home safety plan. The parents’ progress and changes in the behaviors, conditions or circumstances that led to placement are important. However, they are not the only consideration when deciding to return a child. Returning children is not dependent upon parents changing their lives or fully achieving the Child Welfare case plan’s expected outcomes. It is possible and ethical to reunite the family while efforts continue to restore safety.

Information and procedures related to conditions for return are found in Section 5 of this chapter.
Decision to return the child to the home from which the child was removed

Procedure

I. When deciding whether to reunify the family, the caseworker must use a similar analysis process to what the CPS worker followed at the beginning of the safety intervention process. The analysis related to the following concepts:

A. Present danger – immediate, significant and clearly observable severe harm or threat of severe harm to a child in the present.

B. Impending danger – state of danger in which family conditions, behaviors, attitudes, motive, emotions and/or situations are out of control. While the danger may not be currently active, it may have severe effects on a child at any time.

C. Safety threats – family behavior, conditions or circumstances that could result in harm to a child.

D. Child vulnerability – a child who is unable to protect him/herself or seek help from others who may be able to protect the child. Vulnerability is based upon age, physical and emotional development, ability to communicate needs, mobility, size and dependence.

E. Protective capacities – specific behavioral, emotional and cognitive characteristics directly related to being protective.

F. Safety analysis – considers how safety threats are occurring in the family and evaluates what kind and level of effort is required to protect a child.

G. Safety of the home environment – condition of the child’s living space, including where the child sleeps; physical status of the home such as sanitation hazards or dangerous living conditions; signs of excessive alcohol use; use of illicit drugs; accessible drugs and alcohol; inadequate food or lack of access to food and water; weapons; chemicals; traffic in and out of the home; climate of the neighborhood.

II. When the parents have met the conditions for return and reunification, the caseworker must:

A. Inform the child’s parents, the child and the child’s substitute caregivers that a return home is being considered.

B. In writing, inform service providers currently working with the child and other involved persons including the child’s CASA and attorneys, of the plan to return the child or young adult with an in-home ongoing safety plan.

C. Conduct a safety analysis, which must include an analysis of the safety threats that continue to exist and how they are occurring (frequency, intensity, influences, etc.).

D. Determine that the safety threats can be managed and child safety can be managed within the family home with an in-home ongoing safety plan because:

1. There have been specific changes in the family circumstances and/or increased protective capacities.

2. There have been specific changes in the family circumstances and/or increased protective capacities.
3. Safety threats have been mitigated or eliminated.
4. Safety services and safety service providers are available and accessible at the level of effort required to ensure safety in the home.
5. The parents are willing and able to continue participating in Child Welfare case plan services.
6. The in-home safety plan will provide the proper level of intrusiveness and level of effort to manage the safety threats.

E. Determine that an ongoing safety plan can be sustained while ongoing Child Welfare case plan services continue because:
   1. The home environment is stable enough to sustain the use of an in-home safety plan.
   2. Parents are willing to be involved and cooperate with the use an in-home safety plan and are agreeable to the expectations within the plan.
   3. Safety service providers are committed to participating in the in-home safety plan.
   4. Parents are willing for safety services to be provided in the home according to the ongoing in-home safety plan.
   5. Parents are willing to be cooperative with the participants carrying out the ongoing in-home safety plan.
   6. Parents are agreeable to the designated actions and time requirements in the plan.

F. Review reports from service providers, safety plan participants and others involved in the case, such as attorneys or the child’s CASA. Confirm you have considered any disagreement with the plan to return the child or young adult home in developing the current in-home ongoing safety plan.

G. Review the strengths and needs of the child including those identified by the CANS and any services being provided to the child to build upon the strengths or meet the needs. Consider how the parents will be able to meet the child’s identified supervision needs. Consider what supports can be set up to support a successful transition.

H. Review any personal care services the child may be receiving when the child has identified medical needs addressed in the substitute caregiver’s home through personal care services. Consider how the parents will be able to meet the child’s identified medical needs.

I. Review the criminal history records and Child Welfare protective service records of all persons currently residing in the home with the parents and confirm that records raise no safety threats to the child.
   1. Explain the use of the CF 1011f, Consent for Criminal Records and Fingerprint Check, and the MSC 3010, Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information, for authorization to obtain and review criminal history and Child Welfare protective service records.
   2. Obtain signed consent and authorization forms prior to obtaining and reviewing records.

J. Prepare the child for the return home.

K. Prepare the substitute caregiver for the child’s leaving the home and allow for transition from the substitute caregiver’s home to the parent’s home. Whenever possible, provide at least 10-day notice to allow the child and the substitute caregiver time to transition, provide closure and say goodbye.

L. Consider whether there will be any future contact with the substitute caregiver and the child. Arrange and coordinate the type of contact when appropriate.

M. Acknowledge and support that this change involves loss for both the substitute caregiver and the child (even though the child is returning to the parents’ home).

III. Once the caseworker has obtained supervisory approval for a return home, develop the in-home ongoing safety plan.

Develop the in-home ongoing safety plan

Prior to reunification, the caseworker must develop an in-home ongoing safety plan to manage safety threats as they uniquely occur in the family. Continue to work with the family to increase protective capacities toward achieving case goals.

The following questions may help the caseworker develop the safety plan:

I. What are the safety threats that need to be managed to ensure safety?

II. Is there any source within the family that can manage the safety threats?

III. How do I know if they are willing and able?

IV. What do I know about these resources? How do I find out?

V. Is it clear that people participating in the safety plan understand and believe the safety threats and are aligned with Child Welfare?

VI. Do the resources/supports seem sufficient and available to address the safety threats for as long as needed?

VII. How will I know the safety plan will work?

VIII. What is my role?

IX. Does everyone else know their role?

X. How will I know if the safety plan isn’t working?

Procedure

I. The caseworker must update the safety plan and ensure that it is sufficient in these ways. The safety plan:

A. Is a written agreement between the parent and Child Welfare.

B. Specifies the safety threat(s).

C. Establishes how safety threats will be managed, including the safety actions and safety services that will be used and will have immediate effect in controlling safety threats.

D. Establishes the initial contact dates, frequency, duration and purpose of each safety service provider contact, including caseworker contact, which must be within one day of the child’s return home.

E. Explains how the plan is the least intrusive means to effectively manage safety threats. The in-home ongoing safety plan can be a combination of the child being in-home and in substitute care to ensure the least intrusive intervention. Consider various arrangements that include the child being at home and with others:

1. For instance, weekends at grandma’s house; weekdays with parents.

F. Identifies and confirms all participants’ suitability, availability and commitments.

G. Does not use the parent who poses the safety threat to provide protection.

H. Is approved by the supervisor within seven days prior to the child’s return. The supervisor must document the approval in the ODHS informational system.

Caseworker responsibilities prior to the child’s return home

Procedure

After the caseworker’s supervisor approves a proposed in-home ongoing safety plan, the caseworker must complete the following activities prior to the child’s return home:

I. Visit the child outside the presence of the parents at least once during the five days prior to the return of the child and confirm the child’s readiness and preparation for the return home.

II. Visit the parents in their home at least once during the five days prior to the child’s return to verify:
   A. The current behaviors, conditions and circumstances of the home are safe for the return of the child.
   B. Identify all persons living in the household.
   C. The parents are ready for the child’s return and are aware of the child’s strengths and needs, including those identified by the CANS and/or personal care assessment.
   D. The parents are willing and able to participate in the ongoing safety plan.
   E. The parents are willing and able to continue in Child Welfare case plan services.
   F. The parents sign the in-home ongoing safety plan if they did not sign it during a Family Decision Meeting.

Caseworker responsibilities at the time of reunification

Procedure

I. The caseworker must:
   A. Visit the child in the parents’ home the day following the child’s return home.
   B. Confirm the child’s safety.
   C. Review or update the safety plan; document observations and conditions of the home in the ODHS informational system within seven days of the child’s return home.
   D. Document observations and conditions of the home in the ODHS informational system within seven days of the child’s return home.
When an in-home ongoing safety plan involves a parent voluntarily leaving the home

Procedure

If the in-home ongoing protective action includes a parent who is the alleged perpetrator and who is consenting to leave the family home, the CPS worker or caseworker must do the following:

I. Notify the district attorney responsible for the multidisciplinary team in the county where the child resides by:
   A. Providing this notice in writing; and
   B. Providing this notice within three business days of the date the parent leaves the family home.

B. Decision to return a child to a legal parent living in Oregon other than the parent from whom the child was removed

Procedure

I. When the court has given Child Welfare legal custody of a child and, subsequently, a legal parent other than the parent from whom the child was removed is identified, the caseworker must complete the following actions prior to returning the child to that legal parent:
   A. Review the criminal history records and Child Welfare protective service records of all persons currently residing in the home, and confirm that records raise no safety threats to the child.
   B. Confirm the legal parent has sufficient protective capacity to keep the child safe from the identified impending danger safety threats.
   C. Confirm the legal parent is willing and able to parent and care for the child.
   D. Prepare the child for return to the legal parent.
   E. Prepare the substitute caregiver for the child’s transition to the legal parent.
   F. Document the facts and observations that support your recommendation to return the child to the legal parent.
   G. Prepare a report to the court. Refer to Chapter 9, Working with the Courts and External Partners, for procedures to prepare this petition.
   H. Reunify the child with the legal parent and follow procedures for closing a case.

Decision to return a child to a legal parent in a state other than Oregon

I. Under Regulation #3 of the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC), reunification of a child with his or her parent in another state is subject to the requirements of the ICPC, unless the conditions explained below apply.

A. Regulation #3 states: “The Compact does not apply whenever a court transfers the child to a noncustodial parent with whom the court does not have evidence before it that such parent is unfit, does not seek such evidence, and does not retain jurisdiction of the child after the court transfers the child.”

B. Even when the petition seeking legal custody of the child does not name the parent living out of state, the court has the option to grant custody of the child directly to the parent living out of state. ICPC does not apply because the court grants custody to the out-of-state parent.

II. In the majority of cases, the ICPC applies when Child Welfare seeks to reunify a child with a parent living out of state.

A. When the parent or parents of a child who is in the legal custody of Child Welfare move to or is living in another state, follow the procedures for ICPC assessment of the parent’s fitness to provide care in that state. (Refer to Chapter 5, Section 13 for those procedures.)

1. At a minimum, the assessment must include information confirming:
   - The legal parent has sufficient protective capacity to keep the child safe.
   - The legal parent is willing and able to parent and care for the child.

Decision to reunify with a parent in a foreign country

Procedure

When a child in the legal custody of Child Welfare has a legal parent living in a foreign country and Child Welfare wants to assess that parent’s ability to provide safety and care for the child, the caseworker requests the help of that country’s consular office to assess the parent’s ability to provide safety and care for the child. Contact the CAF Diversity and International Affairs manager for additional help or consultation regarding reunification with a parent in a foreign country or international travel procedures.

I. Determine whether the child is a U.S. citizen or a foreign national prior to sharing information with the consular office.

A. If the child is a foreign national, international treaties and statutory authority already exist to share information with a consular office.

B. If the child is a U.S. citizen or dual citizen, obtain the parent’s signed authorization to share their child’s information with the consular staff through a signed MSC 3010 (Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information) or obtain permission through an order of the court.

II. Send a template copy of the Home Study for Parents Living Outside of the United States in both English and in the language of the other country to the closest foreign consulate office to the parent’s address. Ask the consulate’s help in forwarding the request to the appropriate entity in that country to conduct a parental home study.

A. Include with a cover letter a copy of documentation explaining the child’s history in the United States and any special needs. Remember to include the following information:

1. Parent’s physical residence;
2. Parent’s phone number, if any;
3. Reason for the home study request;
4. Reason why the child is not in the parent’s custody;
5. What ODHS is requiring of the parent to improve involvement with the department;
6. Any specific concerns regarding parental behavior or safety issues; and
7. Where to send the completed home study and who to contact if questions arise.

B. Provide instructions for completing the Home Study for Parents Living Outside of the United States. For example:

1. Complete each section with the information requested.
2. All persons living in the home, 18 years or older, need their history checked for any criminal or child abuse involvement.

C. All translations must be done through ODHS approved contracted services. Complete a CF 0010 A to request translation and refer to the Child Welfare transmittal, AR 06 002 dated June 30, 2006.

The branch office needs to notify the consulate as a diplomatic courtesy when the completed home study is received. For the Mexican consulate in Portland, email portland@sre.gob.mx.

I. Carefully review all documentation received from the foreign country, staff with your supervisor regarding the content of the home study and any documents received. Because the skill of foreign social workers varies, it is important that all questions referring to safety threats and their resolution are carefully evaluated. Criminal and child abuse background history must be included in the home study.

II. If more information is necessary to decide whether to return the child to the parent in the foreign country, request this information through the consulate.

III. Once the decision has been made to return the child to the parent in the foreign country, the caseworker must complete the following steps:

A. Request final approval from the Diversity and International Affairs Unit in Salem. The request must contain a copy of the Home Study for Parents Living Outside the United States.
B. Contact the consular office of the foreign country where the parent is living and advise them of the intent to reunite the child with the parent.
C. Continue to work with the consular office to ensure completion of all of the necessary steps and documents the foreign country requires to physically and legally return the child to the parent.
D. Follow the procedures below to ensure all the required documents and to obtain international travel authorization.

Travel documents

Procedure
I. Verify with the consular office and with the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, Customs and Border Protection (https://www.cbp.gov/travel) which travel documents are required for the trip, both to enter the foreign country and to re-enter the United States.

II. Verify with the travel agency if any immunization or medical interventions are required or recommended and documentation needed to verify any requirements have been met.

III. Passport photos: Once it appears that travel to another country is likely, schedule a time to have the child’s passport photo taken.

IV. Apply for a passport for the child and the person traveling with the child.

V. Ensure each individual has a U.S. passport if a U.S citizen or have dual citizenship in the United States and another country.

VI. The child is required to have a passport from the country in which he or she is a citizen. To receive this document, send the child’s passport photos to the consular’s office. The consular’s office will produce and send the caseworker the travel document that will serve as the child’s temporary passport and grant him or her entry.

Travel authorization

Procedure

I. Verify with the U.S. Department of State that there are no travel restrictions to the country to which the child will be returning (this information could change daily). If there are travel restrictions in place for the country in question, consult with the central office Diversity and International Affairs Unit.

II. Fax a copy of the signed Out-of-state Authorization form (CF 1293), the Child’s Consent to Travel form (CF 0002, and CF 0002a) to the ODHS Diversity and International Affairs Unit, Fax: 503-373-7032. Before faxing the required documentation, email the Diversity and International Affairs manager with notification that the fax is being sent. If more than one employee will accompany the child(ren), submit written documentation for the additional person at this time. (Similar criteria as ICPC uses will be considered; i.e., safety and health risks.)

III. Allow at least 14 days to obtain the necessary authorizations.

IV. The packet of information is reviewed and forwarded to the Child Welfare field administrator for final authorization. When authorization is granted, Child Welfare field operations will supply the caseworker with a travel authorization number and carbon copy to the Diversity and International Affairs Unit. These steps can take up to 14 working days.

Court orders necessary for child to travel to another country

Procedure

I. After receiving authorization to travel and at least three weeks prior to traveling, obtain a court order granting permission for the child to travel to a foreign country. This is separate from the court order authorizing the placement with the parent. The caseworker seeks help to obtain this court order from an assistant attorney general with the Oregon Department of Justice.
II. The court order must be translated into the language of the country where the child is traveling. Both copies of the order (English and foreign language) must be presented to the court along with an official certificate of translation (in both English and the foreign language). See ORS 1.150(2) (pleading may be submitted in English and accompanied by a translation into a foreign language that is certified by the translator to be a true and accurate translation). The caseworker must always use ODHS approved translators to translate the court orders. Complete a CF 0010 A to request translation and refer to the Child Welfare transmittal AR 06 002 dated June 30, 2006.

III. Always attach the translated copy of the court order to the English copy of the court order.

IV. The caseworker should send copies of this order to all parties to the case.

V. When a ODHS employee is traveling out of the country, that person should request international phone calling capability. This can be done by completing the ODHS 1496 to add international calling to their current WCD (wireless communication device) or through contacting the ODHS telecom statewide coordinator at 503-945-6787 and requesting an international calling card.

Inform the consular office of travel plans

Procedure

I. Once the district manager and Diversity and International Affairs manager authorize and finalize travel plans, inform the consular office of the following:
   A. All flight information,
   B. Expected time of arrival, and
   C. Emergency contacts in the United States and at the destination. Frequently, consular officials can provide additional support to ensure a smooth exit from the United States as well as a welcoming entrance into the foreign country.

II. Request that the consular office arrange for a government official to be present, if possible, to ensure that the child is united with the parent.

III. Always verify the identity (e.g., through an official identity badge) of the parent before the child is released.

Prior to departure

Procedure

I. Prior to leaving for the foreign country, the caseworker should confirm that he or she has all required documents including:
   A. Copies of the court order that establishes jurisdiction or wardship;
   B. The court order granting permission for the child to travel to a foreign country and court approval for return to parent;
   C. Travel documents from the consular’s office;
   D. The child’s birth certificate;
E. Child’s passport;
F. ODHS ID;
G. Caseworker’s personal passport;
H. Any other necessary documents the consular’s office identified; and
I. Medical records (if required) for both the child and caseworker; e.g., immunization records.

Additional information for traveling to Mexico

Procedure

I. When placing a child with a parent in Mexico, the caseworker should have all legal documents available in English and Spanish, notarized and “Apostilled.”
   A. An Apostille is a special form that, as in the case of a notarized document, serves as official acknowledgment that a notary commissioned in Oregon in good standing performed the notarization. There is a fee for each document requiring an Apostille. To obtain an Apostille for documents that require authentication, contact the:
      Oregon Secretary of State, Corporation Division-Notary Authentication Office
      255 Capitol St. NE, Suite 151
      Salem OR 97310-1327
      Phone: 503-986-2593
   B. Contact the office by phone prior to sending any documents to ensure that the office can Apostille the documents the caseworker believes require authentication. The process is simple and will take less than 30 minutes if the caseworker hand-delivers the documents needing an Apostille.

II. If the documents needing an Apostille are mailed, the caseworker should include:
   A. The caseworker’s name, phone number and any other contact information.
   B. A cover letter stating the documents are going to Mexico.
   C. Each notarized document that needs to be authenticated.
   D. A business check or money order made payable to the State of Oregon.
   E. A return self-addressed stamped envelope so that the documents can be returned to the caseworker.
   F. It normally takes two to three working days to process a request by mail.

III. For more information, the caseworker can view the following website:

Documents provided to the caseworker by the foreign country

Procedure

I. Upon releasing the child to the birth parent or designated legal officials, the foreign country’s officials may give the caseworker documents that support the arrival and the action to return the child to the parent.
   A. Examples of these documents might include:
1. An official stamp by the customs, foreign relations or DIF official, or
2. A document that the consular’s office in the United States has pre-requested from the other country. If the caseworker receives documents, he or she should provide them to the court as part of a request to dismiss juvenile court jurisdiction of the child.

Transitioning a child to the parent in a foreign country

Procedure

Thoughtfully transitioning a child is critical to returning the child to his or her parent. The parent may come to the United States to help transition the child. However, it is not always feasible or possible for the parent to come to the United States for the child.

I. The caseworker transporting the child to the parent should assist in the transition. Transitions may be needed for a child who is returned to a parent in a foreign country, because he or she may not have had recent contact and familiarity with the parent. These should be brief but allow the parent to reunite with the child.

Disclosure of information

I. Share information about the child and any of the child’s identified special needs.

II. When a child returns to a parent in a foreign country, the child’s important documents should be translated to the parent’s language if the parent does not speak English. This includes documents such as the child’s:
   A. Birth certificate.
   B. Medical records.
   C. Educational records.

Court dismissal of jurisdiction

I. If the child is returned to a parent, the caseworker must request dismissal of juvenile court jurisdiction following the return to the parent.

II. The caseworker can write a letter to the court asking that jurisdiction be dismissed or can request the child’s attorney’s or the Department of Justice’s help.

If the caseworker has questions about return to a parent in a foreign country

I. The caseworker should consult with the supervisor.

Role of the supervisor

I. The supervisor should call the International Case Consultant in Central Office if he or she has questions or wants more information about the procedures for return of a child to a parent living in a foreign country.

II. Review the home study submitted by the other country and, together with the caseworker and the international placement point person in the local Child Welfare office, ensure it is complete and all questions are answered regarding any special needs of the child.
III. Together with the caseworker and the international placement point person in the local Child Welfare office, determine if the parent in the other country is an appropriate placement for the child.

IV. Authorize and approve the necessary travel plans and paperwork for the caseworker and the child.

V. Assist the caseworker, as needed, in working with officials in the other country, including the consular’s office in the other country.

VI. Review and sign the CF 1293 form, Out-of-State Travel Authorization.

Role of the district manager

I. Review and sign the CF 1293 form, Out-of-State Travel Authorization, after the caseworker’s supervisor signs it.

Tip

This is a good opportunity to use a Family Decision Meeting. A meeting at this time can be an opportunity to finalize the ongoing safety plan and confirm the commitment of all safety plan participants. It also can streamline your requirements to notify parties in writing, consider their concerns and develop a solid plan to meet the needs of the child.

TIP

A parent’s ability or inability to meet a child’s non-safety-related needs should not keep a child from reunifying with that parent when active safety threats can be managed with an In-home Safety Plan. However, in developing and managing an in-home plan, the caseworker should help the parent understand the child’s non-safety-related needs and develop the skill and ability to meet those needs. This can affect the family’s overall functioning. For example, if a child’s supervision plan in substitute care includes providing a structured routine, provide the parent with this information and help maintain a structured routine in their home.

Court-ordered return of child

Procedure

I. If the court orders the return of the child to the parents’ home before an in-home safety plan is developed and approved, the caseworker must develop the in-home ongoing safety plan as soon as possible, but no later than seven days following the court order.

The supervisor’s role

Procedure

I. Provide regular consultation with the caseworker throughout the reunification process.

II. Review case progress and concur that the family has achieved sufficient progress or an in-home ongoing safety plan can manage safety threats.

III. Participate in the Family Decision Meeting, if one is held, whenever possible.

IV. The supervisor must:
   A. Approve of the proposed in-home ongoing safety plan during the seven days prior to the return of a child to the home of a parent.
   B. Document the approval in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

Managing child safety in and out of home

Section 16: Closing an in-home ongoing safety plan
Closing an in-home ongoing safety plan

When the family has made significant progress in achieving the expected outcomes of the case, child safety is being sustained in the child’s home, and/or the safety threats have been eliminated or mitigated, and the child’s safety can be sustained without the ongoing intervention of safety service providers, the case is nearing closure. The caseworker continues to be responsible for managing child safety until the case is closed. The caseworker is guided by administrative rule in determining to close an in-home ongoing safety plan. Those requirements are:

I. Caseworker observations of the child and the parents in the home;

II. Receipt of evaluations and reports from service providers;

III. Reports from participants in the ongoing safety plan;

IV. Measured progress on the extent the expected outcomes have been achieved;

V. The reduction or elimination of a safety threat; and

VI. Consultation with others who may be participating with the family to sustain child safety.

Procedure

The caseworker must:

I. Continue to contact the family a minimum of once a month. Prior to closing the ongoing safety plan, make more frequent contact whenever possible.

II. Observe firsthand the changed behaviors, conditions or circumstances in the family and the changes in protective capacity.

III. Document those observations in case notes.

IV. Review the progress the family has achieved as reported and documented in written reports by the services providers.

V. Review the progress the family has achieved as reported by participants in the ongoing safety plan.

VI. Interview the parents to determine the parents’ understanding of ensuring child safety and their ability to sustain safety over time.

VII. Interview and observe the child to determine whether the child remains safe in the home.

VIII. Confirm that the identified safety threats that occurred at the beginning of the case are no longer occurring or are consistently managed by the parents.

IX. Confirm that the parents have developed a plan and identified resources to manage child safety over time.

A. For example, the family has a plan if there is a relapse in alcohol use, or the primary caretaker becomes ill or loses a job.

X. Confirm that the parents understand and accept responsibility to care for and keep the child safe over time.
XI. Document the facts and observations that support your recommendation to close the in-home ongoing safety plan.

XII. Obtain your supervisor’s approval.

XIII. Contact the participants in the ongoing safety plan and notify each participant that the ongoing safety plan has ended.

XIV. Schedule a final visit with the family to provide closure to Child Welfare’s relationship to the family. Reinforce their ability to keep the child safe, remind them of available resources as well as their plans and resources to handle new situations.

When Child Welfare has custody of the child and seeks to end the safety plan and close the case

There are additional responsibilities when the court has given Child Welfare temporary legal custody of the child, most specifically petitioning the court to dismiss wardship. The case cannot be closed until legal custody has been returned to the parent. Refer to Chapter 9, Working with the Courts and External Partners, for how to prepare this petition.

Procedure

I. Subsequent to the court relieving Child Welfare of custody, notify the parents’ service or treatment providers that Child Welfare no longer has legal custody of the child.

II. Notify the child’s school, medical and/or other treatment providers that the family has regained custody of the child.

III. If all parties to the case were not present at the court hearing, notify all parties that Child Welfare no longer has legal custody of the child.

The supervisor’s role

I. Provide consultation to the caseworker when needed on case closure.

II. Support the worker in ending the relationship between the family and Child Welfare.

III. Review and confirm Child Welfare’s ability to confidently close the ongoing safety plan.

IV. Confirm the ongoing safety plan’s closure in the ODHS information system.

V. Review and confirm the court has returned legal custody of the child to the parent when Child Welfare had been granted legal custody of the child.

VI. Confirm completion of all notifications of change of wardship.

VII. Review and confirm completion of case documentation.

VIII. Review and approve closing the case.

Section 17: Closing the case
Closing the case

Procedure

I. When the ongoing safety plan has been terminated and the final visit with the family has occurred, the caseworker must complete the following:
   A. Ensure all case notes are completed.
   B. Ensure the case file is in order and ready for filing.
   C. Ensure all services to the family have been closed.
   D. Complete case closure narrative in the Child Welfare electronic information system.
   E. Obtain your supervisor’s signature.

The supervisor’s role

I. Consult with the caseworker when needed on case closure.

II. Support the worker in ending the relationship between the family and Child Welfare.

III. Review and confirm Child Welfare’s ability to confidently close the ongoing safety plan.

IV. Confirm the case closure and approve case closure narrative in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

V. Review and confirm completion of case documentation.

VI. Review and approve closing the case.

Section 18: Missing Children and Young Adults
Missing Children and Young Adults

A child or young adult being missing can mean several things. It can mean the child or young adult ran away, wandered off, may be with a potential exploiter or trafficker, was abducted or the caregiver does not know their whereabouts. The circumstances of why the child or young adult is missing may determine the approach taken to locate and return them to where they are supposed to be. This applies whether the child or young adult is supposed to be at home, in foster care, residential care or another location as determined by the parent/caregiver, or ODHS. Every child or young adult should be considered unsafe if missing; this is true even if, despite not being where they are supposed to be, the child or young adult has occasional contact with the caseworker or a family member. If it has been determined that the child or young adult is in a self-selected environment (see criteria described later in this section) the caseworker must continue to make every effort to immediately place the child in a certified placement.

The term “missing child or young adult” means any person through age 20 in substitute care who is absent from their placement without the permission or knowledge of the child’s or young adult’s caregiver or Child Welfare.

The administrative rule requirements pertaining to a missing child or young adult are specific to a child or young adult in substitute care. However, if ODHS is currently working with a family and a child or young adult is missing, the caseworker will refer to this procedure to find ways to support the parents or caregiver in locating the missing child or young adult.

The required and suggested actions to take when a child or young adult is missing and when they are located are outlined below. The actions listed are not exhaustive and, the specific circumstances in a given case controls the order in which each action occurs.

Tips

Caseworkers will obtain a photo of each child or young adult on an open case and upload the photo into the OR-Kid’s file cabinet. It is hoped the photo will never be needed for this purpose; however, if the child or young adult goes missing, a recent photo is a critical component to locating them. Caseworker will ask the parent for a current picture of their child, and if possible, a family picture. This can be done at the first meeting with the family

a. Caseworker should ask the family if there are any cultural considerations around obtaining these photos.

b. If the family expresses that they do not want photos of their child to be obtained, the caseworker should gather the reasons for the family’s request and consult their supervisor. The family’s concerns should be documented in OR-Kids.

c. Caseworker should explain to the parent the reason for the photos. Examples may include: emergency situations such as a natural disaster or a missing youth; provide the photos to parents as they are obtained; provision of the photos to court and Criminal Records Bureau; use during family meetings; or provision of the photos to the child so they have pictures of their milestones while in foster care.

d. If the parent is not able to provide a current picture, the caseworker will obtain a picture by other means. Potential ways of obtaining a photo may include:

- Asking the foster parent
- SSA’s taking pictures during the parenting time
- Caseworker taking pictures with their phone or camera during face-to-face contact
• For older children, caseworkers can ask them to send a picture or to take a picture.

Actions to Take When a Child or Young Adult is Missing

The following activities should be completed when the caseworker is informed that a child/young adult is missing. While timelines vary on when to complete the following activities, efforts to locate the child/young adult must be made immediately.

• Report to law enforcement agency (LEA). As outlined in OAR 413-080-0053, the caseworker must ensure the information on the missing child or young adult is reported to law enforcement within 24 hours.

  • Federal law requires law enforcement take a report on a missing child; there should be no wait time to take the report. If you are told there is a wait time, reference 42.U.S.C. 5780(1).

Procedure

While the report to law enforcement is required within 24 hours, the caseworker should ensure the report is made immediately.

• Document the date and time of the report, the report number and the name and contact information of the officer taking the report.

• If the foster parent or other caregiver made the report to LEA and was unable to provide the report number, contact law enforcement to obtain the information.

Information to provide to LEA:

• A recent photograph of the child or young adult;

• A physical description, including tattoos and piercings, what they were wearing when seen last, and a description of personality traits;

• Information about the child or young adult’s routine, friends, activities, social media presence, mental and medical health conditions, behavioral issues, potential locations, including any recent changes in their life;

• The most recent court order that grants custody to ODHS and/or

• Click on this link to view a checklist of information to gather: https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/ojdp/204958.pdf

Missing information should not delay making the report.

• Report to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC). As outlined in OAR 413-080-0053, the caseworker must ensure the information on the missing child or young adult is reported to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children within 24 hours. The NCMEC also receives reports on young adults.

  • Providing information to NCMEC, including the child’s photograph, does not violate ODHS confidentiality rules.

Procedure

While the report to NCMEC is required within 24 hours, the caseworker should ensure the report is made immediately following the report to law enforcement. Always contact law enforcement first as NCMEC will need to know a missing person report has been filed. If you attempt to file a missing person report with law enforcement but are unsuccessful, contact NCMEC.

In some circumstances, such as after hours, the foster parent or other caregiver may have already made the report to NCMEC. When the caregiver has already made the report, the caseworker still contacts NCMEC to provide contact information, as well as additional information, if known, about the child or young adult and to confirm NCMEC knows the child or young adult is in the custody of Child Welfare.

You can make a report to NCMEC by either calling the hotline number, 1-800-THE-LOST (1-800-843-5678) or completing the form on the website (www.missingkids.com/home).

Just like the report to LEA, be prepared to provide a recent photo and description of the child or young adult. Do not delay making the report if you do not have this information.
NCMEC is much more than a hotline. It is important to be aware of all the other resources that NCMEC offers.

The Critical and Runaway Unit provides technical assistance to law enforcement and support to those with a claim to custody of children who are missing under critical circumstances or who have run away from their legal guardian. When the case is assigned, the case management team makes initial contact with listed parents or guardians and law enforcement to verify circumstances surrounding the child’s disappearance. Each team provides the relevant technical assistance and uses NCMEC resources, including:

- Missing child posters;
- Requests for analytical reports from the Case Analysis Division;
- Referrals to in-house federal liaisons (including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. Marshal Service, U.S. Postal Inspection Service, Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and the Naval Criminal Investigation Service); and
- Referrals to other NCMEC divisions (Exploited Children Division for possible sexual exploitation, Family Advocacy Division for family support, reunifications and post-recovery support).

Once a case is ready, the case management team develops and implements a strategy for poster distribution. Incoming leads are closely monitored and promptly forwarded to law enforcement. The case management teams keep in regular contact with parents or guardians and law enforcement, and continue to assess appropriate resources to help resolve each case.

Complete Required Notifications

In addition to the required reports to LEA and NCMEC, the case worker must notify certain individuals that the child or young adult is missing.

As outlined in OAR 413-080-0053, the caseworker must ensure the following individuals or entities are notified on the same working day the information is received:

- Parents/caregivers/guardians/adoptive parent;
- Court;
- Attorney for the child/young adult;
- Attorneys for the parent;
- CASA and;
- Tribe.

Resources are available to provide support to families and those close to the missing child or young adult through NCMEC (www.missingkids.com/Home) and the National Runaway Safeline (www.1800runaway.org).

Staffing Requirements

If after completing reporting and notification requirements, the child is believed to be in imminent danger or the child has been missing for more than 24 hours, staff the case with a supervisor. Continue to staff with a supervisor at a minimum of once weekly to:
• Identify protective factors and vulnerabilities of the child/young adult;
• Identify individuals already contacted and others who should be;
• Discuss potential reasons for the child or young adult to be missing;
• Consider whether a media alert is needed;
• Determine whether to request a court hearing;
• Review ongoing strategies and efforts to determine the child or young adult’s whereabouts;
• Review updated information from law enforcement and NCMEC;
• Determine what additional steps may be taken to find the child or young adult; and
• Develop a placement plan for when the child or young adult is located.

Determine If a Media Alert is Needed

A critically missing child or young adult is one who is at an elevated risk of danger if they are not located as soon as possible due to the circumstances surrounding their disappearance, such as:

- Under 12 years old
- Concerns of foul play
- Suicidal ideation
- Mental or behavioral disabilities
- Cognitive delays
- Concerns of substance use
- Signs of sexual exploitation
- History or suspicion of sex trafficking
- Risk of juvenile justice involvement
- Medical/medication needs

Procedure

To determine if a media alert is needed, caseworker will staff the case with their supervisor and program manager. If it is determined a media alert is needed, the caseworker will take the following steps:

1. Gather information about the child or youth adult:
   - Name:
   - Gender identity:
   - Date of birth:
   - Height:
• Weight:
• Law enforcement agency and case #
• National Center for Missing and Exploited Children #
• City the child went missing from:
• Date missing:
• Suspected location or known favorite places:
• Are they suspected to be with anyone else? If so, who:
• What should someone do if they see the child? Contact LEA? ODHS CW?
  • Please be mindful of the child’s needs and history. Will LEA presence cause the child to escalate or run in an unsafe way? What is best?
• Send the most recent and high-quality photos

II. Send the information and photo to ODHS Child Welfare Press Secretaries (https://ODHSoha.sharepoint.com/teams/HB-ODHS-Communications/) and Child Welfare Deputy Directors for final approval and distribution. Note: If this is a Family Support Services case, permission must be obtained from the parent or guardian to request a media alert.

Search

Procedure

There are many ways to search for a missing child or young adult, including but not limited to physically looking, using the internet, using the phone and asking others to help locate.

- Physically looking and other outreach efforts. It is important to physically look for the child or young adult and to reach out in the community. This may include:
  - Searching the last place they were seen;
  - Going to the homes of their friends;
  - Checking regular hang outs and any place they frequent and leaving messages at these places;
  - Going to emergency shelter’s homeless youth programs;
  - Searching the immediate area where they were last seen;
  - Checking with juvenile detention and jails;
  - Checking with hospitals; and
  - If they are a victim of sex trafficking, or at risk of being a victim of sex trafficking, checking clubs and consulting with the CSEC Coordinator.

While it is important to physically look for the child or young adult, who should be looking depends on the situation, including the place to be searched. In most circumstances, various people will have a role in looking for the child/young adult.
Use law enforcement when there are safety concerns, such as a child or young adult who is or may be a victim of sex trafficking and who is believed to be at the home of the person exploiting them. When it is believed that a child may have run away, collaborate with individuals the child or young adult considers to be trustworthy so, if located, they are more likely to listen and agree to return home.

- Looking on the internet.
  - Remember to check other social media sites. Refer to the current policy on the use of social media and restrictions in viewing or posting. Reach out to family and friends who have positive relationships with the missing child or young adult to allow viewing of the content and consider asking these individuals to post messages.
  - If the missing child or young adult is a victim of sex trafficking or at risk of being a victim of sex trafficking, check known escort sites, and ads.
  - Google the child’s or young adult’s phone number in case the number is in an ad.
  - If there is an urgent reason, social media sites may be contacted for an IP address to help locate the child or young adult.

- Using the phone.
  - Call and text the child’s or young adult’s phone number or have someone they trust call from their phone.
  - Use the phone’s GPS to try and determine a location.

Contact Individuals Close to the Child/Young Adult

Procedure

Looking for the child or young adult includes reaching out and maintaining contact with those who know them well. These individuals may be critical for locating the child or young adult. Likely these individuals have information about what led to them being missing, where and whom they might be staying. These individuals are also potential resources to help look for the child or young adult.

These people may include:

- Parents, siblings, and other relatives;
- Neighbors and the landlord of their last known address;
- Close friends and classmates, including any known intimate partners;
- Teachers, counselors and other school personnel from the school they last attended or other schools they attended if there is knowledge that they had a close relationship with persons at that school;
- Employer and coworkers where they were employed;
- Other department staff such as former caseworkers;
- Mental health providers;
- Tribal staff;
Maintain regular contact with the individuals close to the child or young adult. Updates to and from these individuals are important and may identify the location of the child or young adult. Also maintain regular contact with the LEA and the NCMEC case manager to provide any new information on the child’s or young adult’s possible whereabouts and to receive updates on efforts to locate them.

Assemble a Team

Procedure

When attempting to locate the child or young adult, gather individuals who can provide guidance on how to locate them. This team may be the existing county multidisciplinary team (MDT). When the missing child or young adult has runaway and remains in sporadic contact, the MDT can help make a plan to convince them to return or reduce the harm to the child or young adult while a runaway. Depending on the reason for the child or young adult being missing or the individual’s experiences, the team may include:

- Parents, siblings, relatives and other natural supports;
- Law enforcement;
- Juvenile probation;
- Non-governmental organization-nonprofit for case management beyond ODHS provided services;
- Shelter/treatment;
- District attorney if court involved.

When meeting, consider the following:

- Protective factors and vulnerabilities of the child or young adult;
- Information already gathered or still needing to be gathered;
- Potential reasons for the child or young adult to be missing;
- Strategies and efforts to locate the child or young adult including issuing a media alert;
- What steps to take when the child or young adult is located.

When the missing child or young adult is a victim of sex trafficking or is at risk of being a victim of sex trafficking, it is important to assemble a sex trafficking MDT. When a sex trafficking MDT would be beneficial and there is not one... already existing, include individuals representing the entities above that have experience working with victims of sex trafficking. If the expertise is not readily available in the county, reach out to another local office the statewide CSEC Coordinator or district child safety consultant for assistance in locating expertise outside of the county.

When the Caseworker Has Periodic Contact With a Missing Child or Young Adult

Procedure

The caseworker may be contacted by a missing child or young adult and determine they, at the time of the contact, are not willing to return to an approved placement.

When a child’s or young adult’s location is known, and they are unwilling to remain in a certified placement the caseworker may still be able to engage them and begin gathering information. Information gathering can also be a means of building or maintaining trust. The child or young adult may be in contact with very few safe people; it might be necessary to have daily phone contact just to check in. Some of this is to build the relationship and to keep reminding the child or young adult there is someone who cares about them and wants them to be safe. The child or young adult may feel great about their life one day and then be scared or hurt the next day. If a caseworker calls during a time the child or young adult needs support, it can make a big difference in how they view ODHS or the plans ODHS may make. It is important to encourage the child or young adult to return every time the caseworker has contact.

Attempt to gather the following information:

- Ask them how they are doing and if are they safe. Inquire about their well-being including if they are eating and if they are getting their prescriptions and medical needs met.
- Ask them their location. Is it safe and are they willing to share where they are staying? If so, ask to meet them in the environment they are staying;
- Ask who they may be with, and are the individuals willing to speak with the caseworker or another member of the child’s or young adult’s team;
- Ask whether they are attending school and where;
- Ask whether they are employed and where; and
- Any contact they have made with family, friends, providers, etc. and might they be willing to be a resource or have connections to a resource we can certify?

If the caseworker gathers information that may assist in locating the child or young adult, the information should be shared with law enforcement and NCMEC.

The Use of a Self-Selected Environment for a Child or Young

When a child or young adult age 14-20 is not in a certified or approved placement and still remains in ODHS custody, the caseworker has the option of designating the living arrangement as a self-selected environment as described in the following procedure.

Procedure:

To consider a self-selected environment for a child or young adult age 14-20, the caseworker takes the following steps:

- Makes face-to-face contact with the child or young adult immediately upon learning of their location
- Observes and assesses the living arrangement of the child or young adult
- Offers the child or young adult a certified/approved placement.

If the child or young adult is not willing to reside in the available certified or approved placement, the caseworker must staff with a supervisor if the current living arrangement can be considered a self-selected environment.

Do not use self-selected environment when:

- The child is younger than 14 years old.
- The whereabouts of the child or young adult are unknown and/or they are not in contact with the caseworker or supervisor.
- The child or young adult is at an elevated risk of danger if they are not located as soon as possible due to the circumstances surrounding their disappearance/leaving their certified placement. For example: there is suspicion that they were kidnapped, or a parent absconded with them.
- There are concerns of foul play involving the child or young adult being missing. For example: there were threats made against the child or young adult by a person(s) prior to them leaving their placement.
- The child or young adult has suicidal ideation, mental or behavioral disabilities, cognitive delays, concerns of substance use, signs of sexual exploitation, history or suspicion of sex trafficking, and extreme medical/medication needs.

If the supervisor approves the use of a self-selected environment, the caseworker takes the following steps:

- Discontinue the run report with law enforcement and withdraws the missing child report from NCMEC.
- Notify, as soon as practicable, the parent(s), the court and legal parties that the child or young adult’s whereabouts are known, and they are in a self-selected environment.
- Determine and address the primary factors that contributed to the child or young adult being in a self-selected environment.
  - Assess the barriers to the child or young adult returning to their parent or residing in a certified placement.
- Ask the child or young adult about their experiences in the self-selected environment:
  - Are they safe?
  - Are their basic needs being met?
- Consult with Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or designee regarding any medical or medication concerns.
- Collaborate with the child or young adult and/or the child or young adult’s team, including all supportive adults in contact with the child or young adult, to update the Ongoing Safety Plan and/or Comprehensive Transition Plan as follows:
• Plan for caseworker to maintain monthly contact with the child or young adult
• Establish clear lines of communication about the child or young adult’s safety and well-being in the self-selected environment
• Obtain contact information for the child or young adult and all adults connected with the child or young adult including school personnel, community partners, service providers, relatives, and others
• Plan for the child or young adult, to be contacted on a weekly basis by the team members
• Determine how the child or young adult’s basic needs will be met such as education, nutrition, medical, clothing, etc.

• Open the placement service type: Other Substitute Care - Youth in Self-Selected Environment (for placement service code use Provider # 110299, Dept. of Human Services).

While the default provider for this service uses the 500 Summer St. address in Salem, that location can cause issues for the youth’s medical coverage through their local CCO. Therefore, following the placement entry – please navigate to the youth’s Person Management Page/Address Tab and edit the address to reflect the correct physical location. This will ensure continued accurate CCO coverage.

In addition to the above, for a child or young adult ages 16 – 20 in a self-selected environment, if it has been determined the child or young adult is in a safe, supportive environment, consider the following questions:

• Is the child or young adult willing and able to reside successfully in a semi supervised independent living (SIL) setting?

• Does the child or young adult possess the skills, knowledge and ability to live interdependently in the community?
  • If no, could the child or young adult live interdependently in the community with adult supports and funding from the Department?
  • If yes, is the current placement willing to be that supportive adult(s)?

• If it has been determined the child or young adult could be successful in a semi supervised independent living setting, discus with the child or young adult:
  • Is the current living environment a place where they will be supported with their transition plan goals for education, employment, transportation, health, housing, healthy relationships and community connections?
  • Is the child or young adult planning to be productive while in the self-selected environment?
  • Is the child or young adult interested in participating in a Supervised Independent Living program (IL Housing Subsidy or Transitional Living Program)? If yes, see Chapter 5, Section 29 for further instructions on accessing the IL Housing Subsidy Program.

As long as the child or young adult is in a self-selected environment, the caseworker must continue to have monthly face-to-face contacts with the child or young adult and to make efforts to have the child or young adult in a certified or approved placement.

If there is a determination that the self-selected environment is not safe and/or no longer meets criteria for the child or... young adult, the caseworker must:

- Immediately offer the child or young adult a certified or approved placement
- Call law enforcement and initiate a run report
- Staff with a supervisor to determine next steps
- Notify, as soon as practicable, all parties and the child or young adult’s team that the self-selected environment is no longer an option for the child or young adult

Substitute Care Payments When a Child is Missing

- Authorize payment to the substitute caregiver for up to seven days following the date the child or young adult was determined missing when the following two criteria are met:
  - The plan is for the child or young adult to return to the same substitute care placement; and
  - No other substitute caregiver is receiving a maintenance payment for the child or young adult.
- Obtain approval from the district manager or designee for payment after a child or young adult is absent from a substitute care placement for more than seven days. Use caution when paying a substitute caregiver more than the seven days. Examples of when request for approval would be appropriate are:
  - A child or young adult returns on day eight or nine, and returns to the same substitute caregiver; or
  - A child or young adult is located out of county or out of state, and it will take a day or two to return the child or young adult to the substitute caregiver.

Court Hearings

Permanency and administrative hearings will continue as scheduled when a child is missing.

Procedure

- Continue to have regularly scheduled permanency hearings and Citizens’ Review Board (CRB) hearings.
- Reports to the court and CRB include documentation on the agency’s efforts to locate the child.
- The child’s legal parents continue to receive notification of the hearings and reviews.

Document

As outlined in OAR 413-080-0053, the caseworker must document the following in the Child Welfare electronic information system:

- Efforts made to locate the missing child or young adult;
- Reports to LEA and NCMEC, including case numbers from each; and
- Notifications to parents and caregivers, the court, the attorney for the child or young adult, the attorneys for the parents, district attorney, CASA and the tribe.
Procedure

In OR-Kids case notes, select the case note type “missing child/young adult” located under the categories of assessment or case management. Document the following information at least monthly until the child/young adult is located:

- Continued efforts to locate (places searched, individuals contacted, family team meetings, MDT meetings, information gathered, websites checked, and continued progress consultation with LEA and NCMEC).
- Contact with the child or young adult.
- Determination of whether the child or young adult’s living arrangement meets the criteria of a self-selected environment.
- Any additional information related to the child’s or young adult’s safety, health or whereabouts.
- Revisit the Determination of Sex Trafficking Victim Status page and add any additional information that has been obtained.

Actions to Take When a Child or Young Adult is Located

The following is a list of activities to complete when the caseworker receives information that a child or young adult who was missing has been located. It is not exhaustive and while described in a logical order, the specific circumstances in a given case controls the order in which each action occurs.

Return the Child or Young Adult to a Safe Placement

Procedure

- The caseworker must go to the child or young adult within 24 hours of locating them.
  - Consider the relationship with the child or young adult, including how long the caseworker has known them and the level of trust developed.
  - Consider if there is another person the child or young adult trusts who can make contact with the caseworker.
  - Consider the location and circumstances when determining whether to contact law enforcement for assistance. For example, when the child or young adult is with someone who may pose a danger to them, has a known trafficker or exploiter who may be present, when it is in the best interest of the child to minimize interviews and LEA & ODHS can gather information about exploitation at the same time.
  - Arrange transportation for the child or young adult to return if they are out of town or out of state. When a child or young adult in the legal custody of the department has been located in another state, the Interstate Compact on Juveniles (ICJ) applies. The caseworker contacts the ICJ coordinator at the Oregon Youth Authority, 503-373-7569, and arranges the child’s or young adult’s return to Oregon. The ICJ coordinator helps obtain the correct court order and makes travel arrangements for the child or young adult’s return.
  - Once contact is made:
• Express relief and concern for the child or young adult.
• Ensure the child knows ODHS is committed to providing them with a safe place to sleep every night.
• Replace needed clothing or personal items.
• Schedule a Youth Decision Meeting (YDM) to develop a plan to support the child or young adult.
• Obtain a recent photo of the child or young adult and upload that photo into the OR-Kids file cabinet if there is not an up-to-date photo already available. Even though the child or young adult was located, it is important to be prepared should they go missing in the future.
• Take steps for the child or young adult to resume school.

• In determining whether to return a child or young adult to the last placement they were in, the worker should gather information from the child or young adult and the caregiver separately about why the child or young adult went missing. If the reasons are related to the placement itself, staff the placement decision with a supervisor.

• Any additional information gained to the Determination of Sex Trafficking Victim Status Page including factors contributing to the youth leaving the placement.

• If there is a pattern of the child or young adult being missing from their placement or they indicate they will not accept any placement selected by the department, the worker should discuss with the child or young adult where they want to live and consider:
  • Reunification with the child’s or young adult’s parent or parents. If they express a desire to live with their parent, the caseworker should assess the current safety threats and conditions for return to determine when reunification is possible.
  • A particular relative with whom the child or young adult is comfortable. The requirements for relative certified placement must be met to place them with that relative.
  • A former caregiver or another adult with whom the child or young adult has formed a relationship and with whom they express a desire to be placed. Again, all certification requirements must be met to place them with that adult.
  • Self-Selected Environment – The caseworker must evaluate whether their current environment meet the criteria for a self-selected environment, while the caseworker continues to make every effort towards the child or young adult residing in a certified/approved placement.
  • Independent living services, while not a placement, has associated housing programs. If the child or young adult is considering independent living services, determine if they are eligible and appropriate for these services.

By attempting to limit trauma to the child or young adult and increase their connections with supportive people, they will be more likely to move forward in making progress toward a stable adulthood.

Evaluate Medical Needs

When returned after any length of time:

• Seen by Medical provider (Emergency Department, Urgent care) immediately if;
• Obvious/suspected physical injuries
• Mental health crisis
• Disclosed/suspected sexual assault
• Obvious/suspected under the influence of drugs and/or alcohol

• If none of the above apply, they need to be seen by their Primary Care Provider (PCP) at the soonest available appointment.

The caseworker can consult with Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or designee regarding any medical or medication concerns. Caseworker can submit a ODHS Nurse Referral through Personal Care by emailing PERSONAL.CARE@ODHSoha.state.or.us. An ODHS Field Nurse will be referred to complete a Nursing Intake assessment.

Notifications

Procedure

When the child or young adult is located, the caseworker must ensure this information is shared within 24 hours with those who were informed that he or she was missing. (If notification of the location occurs after hours, the timeline for completing these notifications begins on the next business day). At a minimum the notifications include:

• Parents or caregivers and others who participate in team meetings;
• Law enforcement;
• NCMEC: Call the hotline number, 1-800-THE-LOST (1-800-843-5678). Like law enforcement, NCMEC will continue to use resources to locate missing persons, so it is important to notify them when a child or young adult is located;
• The court (including all parties); and
• The Tribe (when applicable).

Gather Information

The caseworker should make face-to-face contact with the child or young adult within 24 hours of being located. As outlined in OAR 413-080-0053, when a child or young adult missing from substitute care is located, the caseworker must determine:

• The primary factors that contributed to the missing status of the child or young adult and to the extent possible and address them;
• The child’s or young adult’s experiences when missing; and
• If the child or young adult is a sex trafficking victim or at risk of being a sex trafficking victim, using the Determination of Sex Trafficking Victim Status Page.

Procedure

This information must be gathered from the child or young adult and may be gathered from others. The caregiver at the time the child or young adult went missing is likely to have a critical perspective, and friends of the child or young adult likely have relevant information.

The information gathered should also include:

- Contact information for the child or young adult;
- If there are adults they trust and would return to or speak to;
- What they are looking for in a placement or at home (using motivational interviewing if possible); and
- The future. What are the child or young adult’s goals and hopes?

Ensure information is gathered in a developmentally appropriate manner, considering the following:

- Age and developmental stage of the child or young adult;
- Mental and physical health of the child or young adult;
- Best person to gather information; and
- Ways to continue to gather information by being in contact more than usual (daily, weekly, etc.).

Use Information Gathered

When the caseworker understands the primary factors contributing the child or young adult being missing, the caseworker must try to address those factors. Even if the child or young adult has a different caregiver when they return, the circumstances that led to the child being missing may be addressed in the new environment.

- When the caseworker knows what happened when the child or young adult was missing, the caseworker should consider sharing this information with the MDT after seeking permission from the child or young adult if they are over 14 years old. This can inform how to best support the child or young adult and prevent them from going missing in the future.

- Determine if the Ongoing Safety Plan needs to be modified and whether the services to the child or young adult continue to be sufficient.

Develop a Run Prevention Plan.

When a child or young adult was missing due to having run away, consider developing a supportive prevention plan to address the factors the child or young adult identified as contributing to them leaving the placement and document those factors on the Determination of Sex Trafficking Victim Status Page. See form 0484, Run Prevention Plan for a template.

Document.

As outlined in OAR 413-080-0053, when a child or young adult missing from substitute care is located, the caseworker must document in the department’s information system:

- The primary factors that contributed to the missing status of the child or young adult;
• Any actions taken to address the primary factors that contributed to the missing status of the child or young adult;

• The child’s or young adult’s experiences when missing; and

• The determination of whether this child or young adult is a sex trafficking victim or at risk of being a sex trafficking victim.

Procedure

The caseworker should document in case notes the information gathered from and about a missing child or young adult who has been located. Select the case note type “missing child/young adult” located under the categories of assessment or case management.

The determination of whether a child or young adult is a sex trafficking victim or at risk of being a sex trafficking victim is documented in the Identification of a Sex Trafficking Victim (Section 19 of this chapter) and documented in The Determination of Sex Trafficking Victim Status Page is located under the “tx” or treatment planning button in OR-Kids and is saved there. For details about how to make the determination, see Section 19.

Tip

Ongoing conversations about the future are really important, especially when present life is difficult. Asking a child or young adult what they want their life to be like in five years, where they want to go in regard to education, getting a driver’s license, etc., can be important. A child or young adult might want to look at school placements even though they do not want to live in foster care. Ask them about their hopes and dreams. Let them know you believe in them.

Section 19: Identification of a Sex Trafficking Victim
Identification of a sex trafficking victim

As outlined in OAR 413-015-0415 and 413-080-0053 and 0054, all caseworkers, including CPS workers, must determine if a child or young adult is a victim or is at risk of being a victim of sex trafficking. This could occur when either information gathered or observations made indicate a child or young adult may be a victim of sex trafficking or when a child or young adult has been missing and is located.

I. If a determination is made that a child or young adult is a victim of sex trafficking, the caseworker must:
   A. Report to a screener any new reports of child abuse or neglect,
   B. Identify appropriate services, and
   C. Identify the child or young adult as a sex trafficking victim in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

II. If it is determined that a child or young adult is at risk to be a victim of sex trafficking, the caseworker must identify and refer to appropriate services.

Understanding sex trafficking

I. “Child” means a person under 18 years of age. It is important to pay close attention to when “child” is used and when “young adult” is used.

II. “Coercion” means threats of serious harm to, or physical restraint of, any person; any scheme, plan or pattern intended to cause a person to believe that failure to perform an act would result in serious harm to, or physical restraint against, any person; or the abuse or threatened abuse of the legal process.

III. “Commercial sex act” means any sex act where anything of value is given to or received by any person.

IV. “Force” means the use of any form of physical force, including rape, beatings and confinement to control victims.

V. “Sex trafficking” means the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or soliciting of a person under the age of 18 for the purpose of a commercial sex act or the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing or soliciting of a person over the age of 18 using force, fraud or coercion for the purpose of a commercial sex act.

VI. “Sexually explicit performance” means a live, recorded, broadcast (including internet) or public act or show intended to arouse or satisfy the sexual desires or appeal to the excessive sexual interests of customers.

VII. “Young adult” means a person aged 18 through 20.

Beyond the definitions

To be clear, sex trafficking of a child is child abuse regardless of force or coercion because a child, by law, can’t consent. Sex trafficking of a young adult, however, does require force or coercion.

It is also important to know that sex trafficking is not limited to exchanging something of value for sex, but also for stripping and live sex shows (see the definition of sexually explicit performance). Something of value may be money, but it may also be food, drugs, shelter or any other item that has value. Sex trafficking takes place in a variety of public and private locations including, but not limited to, the street, brothels, residential homes, spas, massage parlors and strip clubs.

Pimps and traffickers (two words meaning the same thing) target vulnerable children and young adults and lure them into sex trafficking using psychological manipulation, drugs and/or violence. Any child or young adult may be vulnerable to such a person who promises to meet his or her emotional and physical needs. A trafficker’s or pimp’s main purpose is to exploit the child or young adult for monetary gain. Often traffickers or pimps will create a seemingly loving and caring relationship with their victim in order to establish trust and allegiance. This manipulative relationship tries to ensure the child or young adult will remain loyal to the exploiter even in the face of severe victimization. These relationships may begin online before progressing to a real-life encounter.

Victims are:

I. Targeted

Pimps are predators who seek out vulnerable victims, particularly runaways or children or young adults experiencing trouble at home (including in a foster home). They know these children or young adults have emotional and physical needs they perceive are not being met and use this to their advantage. Pimps find victims at a variety of venues such as in social networking websites, shopping malls, schools, on local streets or at bus stations. While pimps often target children or young adults outside their family, a family member may also sexually traffic a child or young adult.

II. Tricked

Pimps are willing to invest a great deal of time and effort in their victim to break down a victim’s natural resistance and suspicion by buying them gifts, providing a place to stay, and promising a loving relationship before revealing their true intent. Frequently, victims do not realize the deceptive nature of their trafficker’s interest in them, viewing their pimp as a caretaker and/or boyfriend or girlfriend.

III. Traumatized

A pimp’s use of psychological manipulation (causing the child or young adult to truly believe the pimp loves and cares for his or her well-being) coupled with physical control (threats, violence or drug addiction) can make a victim feel trapped and powerless. This “trauma bond” is difficult to break and requires long-term treatment and counseling for victims.

Barriers for victims

IV. Psychology of victimization

Pimps may use force, fraud or coercion to virtually enslave their victims. Victims have been controlled by threats of violence to their family; pornographic images taken and used for blackmail or stigmatization; and physical, verbal and sexual abuse. Young victims may be gang-raped to desensitize them to sexual activity prior to victimizing them in prostitution. Victims are taught not to trust law enforcement and may have experienced negative encounters with law enforcement officers. Victims often remain with pimps out of fear of being physically harmed, having another victim endure physical harm, or a threat to their family members. Pimps have been convicted of plotting to murder cooperative victim witnesses and for the homicide of victims, further instilling fear.

V. Trauma bonding

This is also common among young victims exploited for commercial sex. The child or young adult experiences a strong link to the pimp or exploiter based on what is perceived as an incredibly intense or important relationship, but one in which there has been an exploitation of trust or power. Emotional bonding is a learned tactic for survival and can be common between exploited children or young adults and the exploiter.

The process of identification

Awareness of what to listen and look for

When completing casework activities, it is important to both listen and look for any indication that a child or young adult may be a sex trafficking victim or be at risk of being a sex trafficking victim. The indicators may be present when interacting with the child or young adult, but may also be realized when interacting with parents, substitute caregivers, providers or others working with him or her.

The following is an extensive, but not exhaustive, list of possible indicators that a child or young adult may be a sex trafficking victim. Remember, these are possible indicators, not determinative descriptors. The presence of one or even several indicators may not mean a child or young adult is a victim but does mean it is important to take a deeper look. While there is some duplication in the list, multiple ways of expressing a similar behavior may provide a clearer understanding.

When indicators are present or there are other behaviors that indicate to the caseworker that a child or young adult may be a sex trafficking victim, the caseworker should use the Identification of a Sex Trafficking Victim form, below. The caseworker must use the form when a child or young adult who was missing is located.

Look and listen for the following about the child/young adult:

I. Frequently “on the run” or regularly changes residence;

II. Is homeless;

III. Makes references to substance use/abuse;

IV. Has heightened sense of fear or distrust of authority or law enforcement;

V. Exhibits behaviors including fear, anxiety, depression, submission, tension and/or nervousness;

VI. Does not maintain family connections;

VII. Identifies the street family as his or her mother or father;

VIII. Doesn’t know what drugs he or she has taken;

IX. Not allowed to speak to the caseworker alone and is controlled by another person (a boyfriend, other adult or even same-age peer);
X. Accompanied and transported by dominating or controlling person;

XI. Cannot or will not speak on own behalf;

XII. Inability or fear to make eye contact;

XIII. Excess cash;

XIV. Has money without a clear explanation of where it came from — “I gotta go take care of my finances.”;

XV. Has a sudden change in attire, behavior or material possessions (has expensive items, dresses provocatively or has unaccounted for money);

XVI. Wearing expensive clothing and has hair and nails done regularly, though he or she has no income to pay for such items;

XVII. Has a cell phone but no apparent means to pay for it;

XVIII. Age-inappropriate control over income or schedule;

XIX. Secrecy about whereabouts;

XX. Unaccounted for time;

XXI. Keeping late-night or unusual hours;

XXII. Works long hours;

XXIII. Is paid very little or nothing for work or services performed;

XXIV. Repeated curfew violations, keeps unusual hours, chronic truancy/tardiness from school or does not attend school;

XXV. Is not engaged in school or work, or has significant gaps in schooling;

XXVI. Lying about age; has false ID or no ID;

XXVII. Not in control of documents;

XXVIII. Contradicting personal information;

XXIX. Has unexplained injuries;

XXX. Has suspicious tattoos (branding tattoo);

XXXI. Has a “boyfriend” but does not know his name or only knows his street name;

XXXII. Presence of significantly older male, female or boyfriend or girlfriend who seems controlling;

XXXIII. Any mention of a pimp or boyfriend;

XXXIV. Refers to employer or boyfriend using slang such as “Daddy”;

XXXV. Refers to or is participating in an online relationship and has not met the person face-to-face;
XXXVI. Self-disclosed or reported history of multiple and/or anonymous sex partners;

XXXVII. History of sexually transmitted disease(s);

XXXVIII. Is pregnant or a minor parent;

XXXIX. Frequent need for medical attention: STI/STDs, pregnancies, multiple ED visits;

XL. Returns from being on the run and reports sexual assaults by strangers (e.g., rapes, gang rapes). He or she may make multiple reports of such abuse, especially if on the run regularly.

XLI. “Picked up” from being on the run at a hotel, transit station or other known location of prostitution;

XLII. Picked up from being on the run with adults that have a history of previous exploitation;

XLIII. Has multiple hotel keys, saying, “Some guy got me this hotel.”;

XLIV. Refers to sexual situations that are beyond age-specific norms;

XLV. Engages in sexually provocative behaviors, is promiscuous and/or has unprotected sex with multiple partners;

XLVI. Uses or refers to the terminology of the commercial sex trade;

XLVII. Depiction of sex industry in drawing, poetry or lyrics to sexually explicit music or songs;

XLVIII. Friend group includes other suspected or identified sex trafficking victims;

XLIX. Knows someone who has had sex for drugs, shelter, food or money;

L. Contact with adults or juveniles in prison;

LI. Criminal record, arrest history, juvenile probation;

LII. Gang affiliation reported, suspected or confirmed (may hang out with gang members);

LIII. Excessive frequenting of internet chat rooms or classified sites;

LIV. Has an explicitly sexual online profile via internet community sites, such as Facebook, Blackplanet.com, etc.;

LV. Exploitation on the internet, online ads, posted sexually explicit material;

LVI. Stripping or dancing in a club; or

LVII. Sexually explicit photos or videos.

The following actions may reveal indicators and, at a minimum, help the caseworker better understand the child’s or young adult’s circumstances:

I. Ask specific questions to draw information out about possible sex trafficking involvement:

   A. What kind of support do you need?

   B. How do you get your money?

   C. So, when your boyfriend gives you money, is it because you have to work for it?
D. Those bruises look like they hurt. Do you remember how you got them?
E. Did something happen?
F. Sometimes people trade sex for money or because they have to survive or need basic necessities. Has that happened to you?
G. I’m concerned about your safety. Are there places that are dangerous for you to go?
H. Are there people who are dangerous for you to be around right now?
I. I’m worried about your safety. Do you feel safe? Can we talk about that?
J. I’m concerned about where you are in the life. I will not judge you or judge anything you tell me. I’m here to listen if you ever want to talk or want support getting out.

II. Increase attempts to find a child or young adult who frequently runs away or is regularly truant.

III. Learn about specific gang activity from local law enforcement (or from other children or young adults if it is safe for them to discuss).

IV. Ask about STI/STDs, pregnancy and unexplained injuries and review medical records.

V. Observe communication patterns (who talks to whom, who doesn’t talk, who is in control).

When communicating with the child or young adult, listen for the terminology of the commercial sex trade. Being familiar with this language can help a caseworker identify a possible sex trafficking victim and can also assist in understanding his or her daily life.

The following terms are from Shared Hope International:

I. Automatic

   A term denoting the victim’s “automatic” routine when her pimp is out of town, in jail or otherwise not in direct contact with those he is prostituting. Victims are expected to comply with the rules and often do so out of fear of punishment or because they have been psychologically manipulated into a sense of loyalty or love. All money generated on “automatic” is turned over to the pimp. This money may be used to support his concession or phone account or to pay his bond if he is in jail.

II. Bottom or bottom bitch

   A female appointed by the trafficker or pimp to supervise the others and report rule violations. Operating as his “right hand,” the bottom may help instruct victims, collect money, book hotel rooms, post ads or inflict punishments on other girls.

III. Branding

   A tattoo or carving on a victim that indicates a trafficker’s, pimp’s or gang’s ownership of the victim.

IV. Brothel (aka cathouse or whorehouse)

   These establishments may be apartments, houses, trailers or any facility where sex is sold on the premises. It could be in a rural area or nice neighborhood. Most brothels have security measures to prevent attacks.
by other criminals or provide a warning if law enforcement is nearby. The security is two sided – to keep the women and children in, as well as robbers out. The places often are guarded (and open) 24 hours a day, but some have closing times in which the victims are locked in from the outside. Victims may be kept in this location for extended periods or rotated to other locations every few days.

V. Caught a case

A term that refers to when a pimp or victim has been arrested and charged with a crime.

VI. Choosing up

The process by which a different pimp takes “ownership” of a victim. Victims are instructed to keep their eyes on the ground at all times. According to traditional pimping rules, when a victim makes eye contact with another pimp (accidentally or on purpose), she is choosing him to be her pimp. If the original pimp wants the victim back, he must pay a fee to the new pimp. When this occurs, he will force the victim to work harder to replace the money lost in transaction. (See “Reckless eyeballing.”)

VII. Circuit

A series of cities among which prostituted people are moved. One example would be the West Coast circuit of San Diego, Las Vegas, Portland and the cities between. The term can also refer to a chain of states such as the “Minnesota pipeline” by which victims are moved through a series of locations from Minnesota to markets in New York.

VIII. Daddy

The term a pimp will often require his victim to call him.

IX. Date

The exchange when prostitution takes place or the activity of prostitution. A victim is said to be “with a date” or “dating.”

X. Escort service

An organization, operating chiefly via cellphone and the internet, that sends a victim to a buyer’s location (an “outcall”) or arranges for the buyer to come to a house or apartment (an “in-call”); this may be the workplace of a single woman or a small brothel. Some escort services network with others and can assemble large numbers of women for parties and conventions.

XI. Exit fee

The money a pimp will demand from a victim who is thinking about trying to leave. It will be an exorbitant sum, to discourage her from leaving. Most pimps never let their victims leave freely.

XII. Family or folks

The term used to describe the other individuals under the control of the same pimp. He plays the role of father (or “Daddy”) while the group fulfills the need for a “family.”
XIII. Finesse pimp or Romeo pimp

One who prides himself on controlling others primarily through psychological manipulation. Although he may shower his victims with affection and gifts (especially during the recruitment phase), the threat of violence is always present.

XIV. Gorilla (or guerilla) pimp

A pimp who controls his victims almost entirely through physical violence and force.

XV. John (aka buyer or trick)

An individual who pays for or trades something of value for sexual acts.

XVI. Kiddie stroll

An area known for prostitution that features younger victims.

XVII. Lot lizard

Derogatory term for a person who is being prostituted at truck stops.

XVIII. Madam

An older woman who manages a brothel, escort service or other prostitution establishment. She may work alone or in collaboration with other traffickers.

XIX. Out of pocket

The phrase describing when a victim is not under control of a pimp but working on a pimp-controlled track, leaving him or her vulnerable to threats, harassment and violence in order to make him or her “choose” a pimp. This may also refer to a victim who is disobeying the pimp’s rules.

XX. Pimp circle

When several pimps encircle a victim to intimidate through verbal and physical threats in order to discipline the victim or force him or her to choose up.

XXI. Quota

A set amount of money that a trafficking victim must make each night before he or she can come “home.” Quotas are often set between $300 and $2,000. If the victim returns without meeting the quota, he or she is typically beaten and sent back out on the street to earn the rest. Quotas vary according to geographic region, local events, etc.

XXII. Reckless eyeballing

A term that refers to the act of looking around instead of keeping your eyes on the ground. Eyeballing is against the rules and could lead an untrained victim to “choose up” by mistake.

XXIII. Renegade
A person involved in prostitution without a pimp. (“Renegade” and “independent” have the same meaning, but renegade is a negative term used by a pimp and independent is a term used by the child or young adult that he or she would not consider negative.)

XXIV. Seasoning

A combination of psychological manipulation, intimidation, gang rape, sodomy, beatings, deprivation of food or sleep, isolation from friends or family and other sources of support and threatening or holding a victim’s children hostage.

Seasoning is designed to break down a victim’s resistance and ensure compliance.

XXV. Squaring up

Attempting to escape or exit prostitution.

XXVI. Stable

A group of victims under the control of a single pimp.

XXVII. The game or the life

The subculture of prostitution, complete with rules, a hierarchy of authority and language. Referring to the act of pimping as “the game” gives the illusion that it can be a fun and easy way to make money, when the reality is much harsher. Women and girls will say they have been “in the life” if they’ve been involved in prostitution for a while.

XXVIII. Track (aka stroll or blade)

An area of town known for prostitution activity. This can be the area around a group of strip clubs and pornography stores or a particular stretch of street.

XXIX. Trade up or trade down

To move a victim like merchandise between pimps. A pimp may trade one victim for another or trade with some exchange of money.

XXX. Trick

Committing an act of prostitution (verb), or the person buying it (noun). A victim is said to be “turning a trick” or “with a trick.”

XXXI. Turn out

To be forced into prostitution (verb) or a person newly involved in prostitution (noun).

XXXII. Wifeys or wife-in-law or sister wife

What women and girls under the control of the same pimp call each other. (See “Family or folks” and “Stable.”)

Tip
Pay close attention to the use of the words “child” and “young adult” to ensure which questions are applicable. When identifying a victim of sex trafficking, force and coercion do not have to be present when a child engages in a commercial sex act; however, they are required to identify a young adult as a victim. If any of the questions in the section below are marked yes, the child or young adult is an identified sex trafficking victim.

Determining and documenting sex trafficking victim status

When information gathered or observations made indicate a child or young adult may be a victim of sex trafficking or a missing child or young adult in substitute care was missing and is located, the caseworker must determine and document the determination of sex trafficking victim status in OR-Kids.

Confirmed victim, if yes to one or more of the following

If the answer is yes to any of the above questions, complete the following two questions. The form is then complete.

Identified victim

When a child or young adult is identified as a victim of sex trafficking (at least one question in the “Confirmed victim” section is answered yes), the caseworker must:

I. Complete the Determination of Sex Trafficking Victim Status form

   The caseworker must complete the questions about whether a child or young adult was first victimized while in substitute care or before ever being in substitute care. The information gathered and documented may change as the child or young adult develops more trust with the caseworker and is more comfortable sharing more details.

II. Who needs to know (Screening, NCMEC, if previously missing)?

   A. Screeners

      If it is determined that a child or young adult is a victim of sex trafficking, the caseworker must report the determination immediately, and — in no case — later than 24 hours, to a screener.

   B. National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC)

      When a caseworker identifies a child or young adult as a sex trafficking victim and the child or young adult has previously been missing, the information can be shared with NCMEC. This includes when the child or young adult is not currently missing.

      Because NCMEC has a file on a child or young adult previously missing, they can add that information to the file and be in a better position to assist if the child or young adult is missing in the future.

III. Medical assessment

   A medical professional should see the child or young adult.
IV. Services

If enough yeses were marked to identify a child or young adult as at risk for being a victim of sex trafficking, the caseworker must identify and refer to appropriate services as outlined in Chapter 5, Section 36, Sex Trafficking Services.

V. Documentation

A. Document any additional information related to sex trafficking in OR-Kids case notes, category type “sex trafficking.”

B. Revise the case plan as indicated.

D. Identified at risk

I. Services

If a determination is made that a child or young adult is at risk to be a victim of sex trafficking, the caseworker must identify and refer to appropriate services as outlined in Chapter 5, Section 36, Sex Trafficking Services, which applies to victims and those at risk of being a victim.

II. Documentation

A. Document any additional information related to sex trafficking in OR-Kids case notes, category type “sex trafficking.”

B. Revise the case plan as indicated.

Not identified victim or at risk

I. Next steps

If after completing the form, the child or young adult is not an identified victim and is not identified as at risk for being a victim, consider the information that triggered the need to complete the form and whether any response to those behaviors is warranted.

Despite the child or young adult not being an identified victim or at risk, it is important to continue looking and listening for the indicators. When additional indicators are present, again determine and document the determination of sex trafficking victim status in OR-Kids.

II. Documentation

Ensure the determination of sex trafficking victim status is documented in OR-Kids.

Managing child safety in and out of home

Section 20: Substance affected infant
Substance affected infant

Introduction

The federal government passed the Comprehensive Addiction and Recovery Act of 2016 (CARA). This act added requirements for states through the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) to focus on the effects of substance misuse on infants and their families.

The purpose is for early identification and intervention by providing support and services to families needing help with substance use disorders.

Specifically, the law requires:

I. Health care providers to notify Child Welfare when an infant is born affected by substances.

II. Plans of care to be developed for such infants to address the health and substance use disorder treatment needs of the infant and the infant’s family.

III. Service referrals to be made for any services identified in the plan of care.

Maternal drug and alcohol use during pregnancy have been associated with premature birth, still birth, low birth weight, slowed growth, sudden infant death syndrome, and a variety of physical, emotional, behavioral and cognitive problems. How and whether the infant is affected by prenatal substance exposure depends on several factors, including the frequency, timing and type of substances used. Because substance-affected infants are likely to require health care and related services of a type or amount beyond what children generally require, it follows that these infants and their families could benefit from support and possibly services.

When providing support and services to families where substance use is identified, it is important to use a multi-disciplinary approach that draws on trauma-informed professional expertise across agencies. These providers include medical providers; public health, such as home visiting nurses; chemical dependency programs; social services; mental health; and early intervention services.

Definitions

I. “Health care provider” means a licensed independent practitioner involved in the care and delivery of infants, including:

   A. A physician, as defined in ORS 677.010.

   B. A nurse practitioner, including nurse-midwives, certified under ORS 678.375 and authorized to write prescriptions under ORS 678.390, or

   C. A naturopathic physician licensed under ORS chapter 685.

II. “Medication assisted treatment (MAT)” means the use of FDA-approved medications combined with counseling and behavioral therapies to provide a “whole-patient” approach to treating substance use disorders.

III. “Plan of care” means a written plan for a substance-affected infant and the infant’s family, focused on meeting health needs and substance disorder treatment needs and developed in collaboration with the family, the healthcare provider, community agencies and Child Welfare when appropriate.

IV. “Substance” means any legal or illegal drug with potential for misuse, including any controlled substance as defined by ORS 475.005, prescription medications, over-the-counter medications or alcoholic beverages. Substance does not include tobacco, medication-assisted treatment, or drugs used in a manner prescribed.

V. “Substance-affected infant” means an infant, regardless of whether abuse is suspected:

A. For whom prenatal substance exposure is indicated at birth, and

B. Subsequent assessment by a health care provider identifies signs of substance withdrawal, a fetal alcohol spectrum disorder diagnosis, or detectable physical, developmental, cognitive or emotional delay or harm associated with prenatal substance exposure.

Prenatal substance exposure is determined by a positive toxicology screen from the infant or the mother at delivery or credible information that the mother had an active untreated substance use disorder during the pregnancy or at the time of birth.

Casework activities

Planning

In addition to the information typically addressed in ongoing safety plans and case plans, the caseworker should address behaviors, conditions and circumstances specific to substance use when an infant on their caseload has been exposed to or affected by substances.

Procedure

When working with a substance-exposed or substance-affected infant and the infant’s family, the caseworker, in addition to the typical planning considerations, should consider planning specific to substance use and infant care, such as:

I. Treatment compliance (e.g., attendance to individual, group, case management meetings; drug testing attendance and results)

II. Treatment progress (e.g., treatment plan progress; behavioral changes; phase progression)

III. Changes in treatment plan (e.g., diagnosis; level of care; drug testing requirements; service recommendations)

IV. Observations of parent-child interaction including any child risk and safety concerns (e.g., unsafe home environment or parent relocation; indicators of substance use)

V. Outcomes monitoring (e.g., sustaining long-term recovery, improved functioning)

Plan of care

When a child is identified as a substance-affected infant, the caseworker must reach out to the health care provider, hospital social worker or others engaged with the family, and determine if a plan of care has been developed and whether service referrals were made for the infant or the infant’s family.
The caseworker must ensure a plan of care is developed, and service referrals identified in the plan for the infant and the infant’s family have been made.

Procedure

I. What does a Plan of Safe Care include? The Plan of Safe Care includes the following:
   A. The physical health, substance use disorder treatment needs, general functioning, development, safety and any special care needs of the infant who may be having physical effects or withdrawal symptoms from prenatal exposure.
   B. The parents or caregivers’ physical, social and emotional health, and substance use disorder treatment needs.
   C. Services and supports to improve the parent or caregiver’s capacity to nurture and care for the infant.

II. Who may be involved in a Plan of Safe Care? Developing a Plan of Safe Care involves input from the mother, father and other caregivers and uses a multidisciplinary team approach to provide coordinated and complete care. The team may include:
   A. Child Welfare
   B. Medical
   C. Substance misuse disorder treatment
   D. Mental health
   E. Early childhood intervention
   F. Home visitors
   G. Public health
   H. Tribe
   I. Others, as appropriate

While in most cases the health care provider will be leading the plan of care’s development, remember it is developed in collaboration with the family, other social service agencies and —when Child Welfare is involved — with the CPS worker or permanency worker.

If the health care provider or other service providers are not taking the lead, it is important for the permanency worker to do so. When a substance affected infant is identified on an open case, a plan of care must be developed and service referrals made.

The permanency worker, if taking the lead on the development of the plan, may use the OHA 1394 Plan of Care.

If preferable, the permanency worker can incorporate the elements of the plan into the ongoing safety plan or case plan, depending on which element fits best where and what plans are pertinent to the specific family. When a plan of care has been developed or another person is taking the lead, ask for a copy or for information about the plan and referred services.

Identify the child as a substance-affected infant in OR-Kids

Identifying substance affected infants will allow Child Welfare to track and report related data. It also is a way to identify children (and families) who may need additional support and services.
Procedure

If not completed in OR-Kids at screening or during the CPS assessment, the permanency worker would click on the person hyperlink and then click on the characteristics tab. In the top section titled “Substance Use,” there are two boxes — “Drug Addicted at Birth” and “Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder.” While drug addicted at birth is an incorrect term, please select this box to indicate the child is a substance-affected infant (a change request has been submitted to change the title of the box).

!OR-Kids screenshot

Remember, when the infant or mother test positive for substances at birth, the infant is substance-exposed, but may or may not be affected by the exposure. Only select the box when a healthcare provider indicates the substances affected the infant.

Engaging clients struggling with a substance use disorder

People with a substance use disorder are victims of their disease. As a result, working with them can be a challenge for caseworkers. People struggling with a substance use disorder tend to blame their problems on those around them and may go to great lengths to deny their addiction is the reason for their current situation. Most people with substance use disorder believe they have no problem and that others do not understand their situation. An important aspect of substance use disorder denial is the ability to excuse, rationalize, minimize, lie or blame others for their behavior. In addition, a pregnant woman may fear she will lose her infant if she acknowledges her substance use.

By the nature of the illness, people with substance use disorders are not able to control use by practicing self-control; they use denial to maintain using substances. Until a person receives treatment for their substance use, they may not be willing or open to changing their behavior. They may suffer many consequences because of their use or be forced to go to treatment through family or court intervention before they are willing to acknowledge they have a problem and need help to remain free from using substances.

Caseworkers need to have patience and understanding of the multiple facets of this chronic disease when working with people who have this disorder. Believing in a person’s ability to change and wanting a sober life is imperative. Once a person with a substance use disorder receives treatment and remains sober, he or she will no longer need addictive defenses. When they view themselves in a positive way, their behavior will also change in that direction. Caseworkers can aid in this change by acknowledging and building on a person’s successes, offering support, being non-judgmental, and treating each contact as an opportunity for growth.*

Chapter 4

Section 21: All About Me Book Procedure
Chapter 4 • Section 21: All About Me Book Procedure

1. Procedure Statement

This procedure was developed from the work of Richard Rose.

All children and young adults who are placed in the care and custody of ODHS Child Welfare should have an All About Me Book which will give the child or young adult a realistic and honest account of their circumstances, history, identity, and age appropriate understanding of the reasons why they are in care. All About Me book documentation should follow the child or young adult to every placement and be updated with a new chapter every six months. A chapter is defined as a completed template of approximately 24 pages. Pages will be reviewed and added to throughout the time they are in care. All About Me Books capture a snapshot in time of the child or young adult’s likes, dislikes, friends, activities, and interests. All About Me Books are a useful engagement tool for caseworkers and other team members working with the child or young adult and bring an easy and fun approach to conversations that are already occurring during visits. Information gathered to develop and/or add to a child or young adult’s All About Me Book will be stored in a safe place to protect the child or young adult’s confidentiality. All About Me Books are different than Life Story Books as they capture a snapshot in time. Life Story Books are more comprehensive and are used as a different resource for permanency cases, especially Adoption and Guardianship cases. All About Me Books can be incorporated into the creation of a Life Story Book. Resources specific to Life Story Book Work can be found in the appendix of this procedure.

2. Purpose of the Procedure

All About Me books are an integral part of a child or young adult’s journey in care. They are an important engagement tool for the caseworker and can be useful to the child or young adult’s team to promote the permanent plan, including returning home or another plan. All About Me Books tell the child or young adult their story. The work is intended to help children or young adults in care make sense of their situation; it should attempt to answer the following questions:

- Who am I?
- Who are my birth parents? Who are my adoptive parents? (if applicable)
- Who are my relatives?
- How did I get here?
- Where am I going?

As well as ensuring the child or young adult:

- Has a better understanding of who they are and their life journey;
- Increases their sense of self-worth;
- Refreshes their memories;
- Understands why they are not living with their birth parents
  If child or young adult was raised by another caregiver, why are they not living with that individual?
- Understands information about their race, culture, heritage, family origin and ethnicity.

Consideration needs to be given regarding how the child or young adult’s telling of their life will be compiled and which approach is considered the most appropriate. For example, a child or young adult may choose to complete their entire All About Me Book electronically. The creation process will clearly depend on the child or young adult’s age and stage of emotional development, individual circumstances, and their ability to engage with the process. Specific factors including spiritual, religious and cultural background, gender, disability, specific educational needs, or a combination of all those listed will be relevant.

There will be occasions when the child or young adult may not, for a variety of reasons, be able to participate or engage with the All About Me creation process. The caseworker will need to ensure that information is gathered for future use with the child or young adult.

A child or young adult may have a completely different understanding of what has taken place in relation to the facts of their history. The purpose of the work to create the All About Me Books is to try and ensure that they ultimately have an accurate understanding of what has happened to them. How this is achieved will need to be agreed upon and reviewed.

A child or young adult may not be ready or capable of understanding or accepting past events. It is important to assess timeliness, risk, and impact of such information being given/received by the child or young adult.

3. What is an All About Me Book?

Making an All About Me Book is more than creating a photograph album with identifying sentences giving dates, places and names. Each book will be a snapshot at that episode in time that captures the child or young adult’s life in words, pictures and documents. All About Me Book creation is an opportunity to explore emotions through play and conversation. The child or young adult is an active participant in the creation of their book. Therapists may use All About Me Books in counseling.

An All About Me Book should:

- Keep a chronological record as much as possible of a child or young adult’s life; inclusive of details of their birth family and history;
- When feasible, integrate the past into the future so that childhood makes sense;
- Provide a basis on which continuing All About Me books can be added to;
- Be something the child or young adult can return to when they need to explore old feelings and clarify and/or accept the past;
- Increase a child or young adult’s sense of self and self-worth;
- Provide a structure for talking to children and young adults about questions and confusing or painful issues;
- Provide positive information about the child or young adult’s race, culture, heritage, ethnicity, language and family origin.

4. Who Should Write/Compile the All About Me Book?

The overall responsibility for coordinating All About Me Book information and ensuring that this work is completed with the child or young adult is the responsibility of the caseworker. All About Me Book work asks caseworkers, parents, resource families, relatives, adoptive families, therapists, and residential facilities to agree on a plan about who will contribute what. When appropriate they can help keep information regarding the placement and ensuring that this is kept up to date. They show it to the caseworker on a regular basis, on a minimum basis of every six months, but preferably monthly. The purpose is for adults to help the child or young adult create the book in an engaging way, not simply adult compliance with an item to be checked off a list.

It is recommended that the caseworker records, for future reference, why the child or young adult’s placement in care is changing (positives and negatives) prior to them moving or shortly afterwards depending on circumstances. This will help to ensure continuity in the story for a child or young adult and prevent any gaps in their history.

A key objective of any child or young adult’s placement will be to support education, achievement, and attainment. Education staff have a valuable role contributing information to a child or young adult’s All About Me Book and the caseworker may ask school staff to supply appropriate information.

The child or young adult’s own contribution to their All About Me Book to understand their life is crucial and must be encouraged and facilitated. Parents of children or young adults in care are also crucial in providing information and participating in the creation of this book. Parents can contribute pages to a child or young adult’s book or participate in page creation alongside their child or young adult during contact.

5. How the Child or Young Adult’s Team Undertakes the All About Me Book Work

All About Me Book creation will start at the beginning of a case. The goal is that a few pages are done each month, at least one completed by the caseworker during monthly face to face contact, to complete a full chapter every 6 months. These pages are simple and only take a few minutes of time on average. Caseworkers are already covering many of these topics during their conversations with children and young adults in their daily work. The collation of materials and items will be agreed upon between the caseworker, resource parent, relative, adoptive parent, and/or the child or young adult’s family to ensure well-rounded coverage of their life. At six months into the time the child or young adult is in ODHS care, the caseworker will ensure that a complete All About Me Book chapter is finished. The caseworker will coordinate with appropriate members of the child or young adult’s team to collect all pages and save the chapter in OR-Kids to ensure it is not lost.

The direct work with the child or young adult will be carried out in a safe and secure environment where they feel comfortable. It should be completed with the person with whom they feel most safe and comfortable. The contributions to the All About Me Book must be led by the child or young adult. Children and young adults of different ages, abilities and disabilities may not be able to directly engage in the work, in such cases, caseworkers will need to think and work creatively to ensure that every child and young adult has a meaningful and accessible understanding of information about their life. See Section 10 All About Me Book and Working with Children at Different Stages.

Progress of the All About Me Book should be a regular agenda item at supervision between caseworkers and their supervisors. The supervisor will inquire about the All About Me Books throughout supervision to include during the 90 day staffings. The supervisor will continue to support the caseworker in effectively using this engagement tool throughout the life of the case. There may be occasions when the child or young adult will not be receptive or ready to engage in All About Me Book activities. This should not be pushed but postponed until an appropriate time – agreed upon by the caseworker and supervisor in consultation with the child or young adult’s therapist if applicable. In these circumstances the caseworker will help to supplement information, so pieces of the child or young adult’s story are not lost.

If professionals involved believe that a child or young adult requires therapy and that undertaking some pages of the All About Me Book would not be helpful at this stage then this must be taken into consideration however, it will not necessarily prevent All About Me Book creation and work being undertaken and should not prevent the on-going collation of materials that will be used later.
All About Me Books focus on what is happening to the child or young adult now and often give indications of how children and young adults can move forward with support. The relevant people on the child or young adult’s team who have a part in creating or contributing to the book should be made aware of the work being undertaken. This can occur through case planning meetings, visits to support foster/resource families, and communication with relatives. If the resource parents, relatives, or adoptive family need to do work with the child or young adult as something arises, guidance should be obtained from the child or young adult’s caseworker.

It is important that at each stage a child or young adult’s case is transferred to another caseworker or unit and/or at the end of their period in substitute care a check is made about who has the All About Me Book information and where it is located, especially any hardcopy information. At the time of case transfer a case note must be recorded in the file to this effect in order to ensure that materials are not lost.

When the plan is for a child or young adult to be adopted, the caseworker who knows the child must write information to be realistic and sufficiently detailed so the child or young adult understands their life before adoption, why they could not remain with their birth parents, and why they are to be adopted. This information is placed in their Child Summary and in their Life Story Book, if applicable. It may also be included in the All About Me Book.

6. What Goes Into the All About Me Book?

The agency has provided templates for All About Me Book Chapters and the expectation is that a new chapter, approximately 24 pages, is completed every 6 months. These template pages include many of the topics listed below:

- Photos of Child or Young Adult
- Photos of Parents
- Information, Photos, and/or maps of places where the child or young adult lived;
- Photos of Relatives (include relationship to child or young adult)
- Photos of Friends
- Photos of Pets
- The child’s race, culture, ethnicity, family heritage and origin;
- Details of siblings;
- The child’s views and memories;
- Favorite foods, likes and dislikes;
- School attainments / hobbies / favorite toys etc.
- The child or young adult’s feelings
- Positive stories shared about the child
- Child or Young Adult’s art, crafts, pictures, etc.

All About Me Books can incorporate many pages that are not in the templates. Below are suggested topics or materials that could be incorporated into an All About Me Book. These topics are also often included in life story books for cases of adoption.
• Photos of Hospital where born and baby pictures (and, for younger children, a clock showing the time they were born);

• Weight, length, head circumference at birth;

• Birth certificate, if possible; Birth Story if known

• Any items from the hospital (e.g. identity bracelet);

• Dates of first smile, sounds, words, tooth, steps etc.;

• A truthful life history - including illness, injury, abuse, neglect etc. - that is age appropriate to the child. More detail can be added later as the child needs to know;

• Parents' stories (birth story, childhood experiences, parents' likes and dislikes, hobbies, interests and traits – characteristics etc.);

• Messages from birth parents / Why birth parents gave the child or young adult their specific name; childhood memories;

• Page with the names of the schools they have attended, picture of the schools and if known who the teacher and friends were. Child or young adult could add comments here on how they felt about the school and what memories they have;

• Photos of workers and their roles;

• Story of the court process; pictures of judge and/or courthouse

• Photos of prior and current people who cared for the child or young adult and their family or important people in their life that they wish to include; include memories from prior placements or caregivers in language that is respectful to the child or young adult

• Family tree/Genogram - back three generations if possible;

• Details of ceremonies (e.g. baptism, graduation, awards, tribal events, etc.);

• Details, mementos and photos of holidays;

• Chronology of Life Events;

7. What Materials Are Needed?

The presentation and quality of All About Me Books is critical in terms of validating the importance of the child or young adult’s information and motivating them to contribute. We want children and young adults to want to read their books, take pride in them, and show them to others. Below are some items that are helpful in creating All About Me Books, however these books can also be created entirely electronically.

• Use a loose-leaf folder to hold materials;

• Always work on clean paper;

• Drawings and photos should be securely attached;
• Use neat headings;
• If the child or young adult is unable/reluctant to write themselves, let them dictate what they want to say;
• Use good quality copies/photocopies of treasured photos, documents etc. and not the original;
• Get a balance of words and pictures;
• A responsible adult should keep hold of the book until it is finished;
• Keep at least one copy and preferably two – one hard copy and one electronically

8. Starting an All About Me Book and Maintaining It

All About Me Book discussions need to be done in a safe, secure, and sensitive way which is centered on their needs and in the best interest of the child or young adult. This is important when children or young adults may be having a challenging time, during transitions and during anniversaries of significant negative events like the death of a family member.

All About Me Book templates that may be altered and customized will be found online. These are in PowerPoint templates, which provide ease to add and take out pages/slides to tailor to fit each child or young adult. The many different templates provide a starting place so children and young adults can choose what they like. Example of themes include sports, superheroes, trucks and animals. The format allows children or young adults to add their specific favorite images.

Caseworkers may find the link to templates for the All About Me Books on the ODHS OWL Page. Resource, relative, and adoptive families may find the links to the template pages on the ODHS Resource Family Support Website and Oregon Post Adoption Resource Center Website (ORPARC). Training is online for caseworkers and families by a very engaging discussion with Richard Rose who is an expert on this topic from the United Kingdom.

The caseworker should introduce the All About Me Book creation process with the child or young adult when they begin. They may tell them something like this: “We are going to create a special book about you so that you can ask questions, have a way to show and express who you are right now, and we are going to have fun doing it! Some people may be contacted, such as relatives who might have information about your culture or activities that your family enjoys at holidays. Some people may have a different story, but that’s okay, because everyone is different, and everyone will have different things that they remember and want to share with you.”

9. Saving and Storage of All About Me Books

These books can be created electronically or hard copy. If electronically a caseworker can upload the document easily into the file cabinet. If created as a hard copy then the caseworker will take photos or scan and upload the pages of the book in order to save the child or young adult’s work. Many children or young adults will choose to have their book with them in their placement so coordination with the parent, resource parent, relative, or adoptive parent to get copies of the book will need to occur in order to ensure we have a saved copy for them. This is important in case the book is ever destroyed or lost due to placement changes as we must place high value in the work the child or young adult has done.

Caseworkers will be expected to upload each All About Me Book chapter into the child or young adult’s case file cabinet in OR Kids every 6 months. Creation of a new chapter will begin each 6 months for every child or young adult in care so that as these are saved over time, they can be compiled into one larger All About Me Book for them when they exit the care of the agency. These chapters will be saved under Case Management – Other in the file cabinet and titled with the month and year of the chapters. Ex: Jan-Jun 2021 All About Me Book.

Original hardcopy information obtained should be kept in a safe, confidential and secure place. Sensitive information and important documents, including photographs should be stored safely by the child or young adult’s caseworker and/or resource, relative, or adoptive parent in a confidential place, and measures taken to ensure that these are not passed to anyone who should not have access to them. Copies of key documents should be kept by the caseworker. Ideally one in hard copy and another copy electronically.

10. All About Me Book & Working with Children/Young Adults at Different Stages

Children Birth to 5

Children under the age of 5 need to have a very basic understanding of what has happened to them. The All About Me Book needs to be completed in a sensitive and simple format, usually through the use of creative play, books, and stories to give the child a sense of identity and why they are in a substitute care or interacting with the agency. Pictures of the creative play may be taken and put into the All About Me Book as a record of what has been discussed.

Children of primary and elementary school age 5-11

From the age of 5 children are beginning to develop an awareness and understanding of what has happened to them and they may need more in-depth work undertaken with them. Time needs to be taken to give children the understanding of how their past should be introduced to them. This could be by using interactive games, positive and negative events in the child’s life. This can be put in their All About Me Book. Some children will be ready to talk, discuss and listen at this age, but others will not be as ready. Children should be given the opportunities to explore their past if they are ready, but not forced to if they are not. If they are not ready, on-going opportunities to think about their readiness must be provided to them.

Children age 11-16

At this stage most children/young adults have a better understanding and start to ask specific questions about their circumstances. Children/young adults need to be talked to more openly, but with care in relation to their maturity and emotional development. Children/Young Adults at this stage are asking questions and wanting the reasons they are in care. They need to have opportunities to explore and talk in an appropriate and constructive way that best suits them.

Young Adult 16+

Young adults often request to see their files when they leave care to gain an understanding of why they did not always live with their birth parents. All About Me Books are generally stored electronically for a young adult this age.

11. Using the All About Me Book

Children and Young Adults need truthful and honest explanations that they can understand - that means using language they know. It is important that:

- Questions are answered as honestly as possible;
- Adults admit when they don’t know the answer and offer to try and find out (rather than making something up);
• Children and Young Adults are helped to accept that not everything can be explained or understood;

• Information is given sensitively and honestly - protection and evasion leads to confusion and fear.

• Adults help them to realize feelings are acceptable by discussing their own feelings frankly. If feelings are ignored, they get the message that to express them is wrong;

• Bottling feelings up can lead to negative behavior like aggression or withdrawal;

• Adults never pretend abusive/bad relationships didn’t or don’t exist.

The caseworker for the child or young adult provides the resource parents, relatives, and/or adoptive parents with information so that they understand the child or young adult’s past and the history of why they are in care while honoring birth parents’ confidentiality. With this, the family can support and share with the child or young adult about their history for them to heal.

12. Types of Placements and Responsibilities

ODHS Resource and Adoptive Placements

ODHS resource and adoptive parents are responsible for ensuring the child or young adult’s information about their life for the All About Me Book information is kept up to date while in placement prior to case closure or adoption/guardianship finalization. They discuss with the caseworker what they are doing and are planning to do as they create the book with the child or young adult.

Kith/Kin, Relative or Connected Person

There is often an assumption that if a child or young adult is placed with kith/kin, relative, or ‘connected person’ that they will be able to share information about the child or young adult’s life with them. This is not always the case. Care needs to be taken to ensure that the story shared is verified as accurate. This can be done by connecting with multiple resources to ensure an accurate understanding of the child or young adult’s story. This will reduce tensions and potential misunderstandings which may result in increased disharmony between both parents and kith/kin, relatives, or connected persons caring for the child or young adult.

Residential Homes

Residential homes do not have the same environment in which to undertake All About Me Book work. This needs to be taken into consideration when deciding how best to undertake the All About Me Book with the child or young adult. The caseworker has key responsibility for the All About Me Book work to be undertaken, even though it may not be clinically appropriate to share all the information with the child or young adult. For some children and young adults in residential care, work may need to be deferred with the child or young adult until they are emotionally and behaviorally stable and receptive. The caseworker may select less emotionally sensitive All About Me Book pages used to engage with the child or young when they visit.

Adoption

All children and youth who are adopted must have an All About Me Book. When a child or youth transitions to a new family for adoption their book should be completed prior to placement. The book can be shared in stages as part of the transition. The adoptive child or youth may wish to share parts of the All About Me Book with their new family. and friends. If the child or youth is being adopted by their current placement then the All About Me Book creation will continue and incorporate adoption. It would not be appropriate to share photographs, address’ and resource parent’s information with friends. When the adoption is ready to finalize, the All About Me book should be fully completed. A copy of all chapters should be made and placed in the child or youth’s adoption file cabinet in case the original is lost or destroyed.

Culture Card: A Guide to Build Cultural Awareness with American Indian and Alaska Native
Child Welfare Information Gateway: Cultural Considerations in Working With American Indians/Alaska Natives

Tribal child welfare work requires both understanding of and respect for American Indian and Alaska Native cultural activities. Successful child welfare practice includes not only cultural competence but also cultural humility that honors American Indian traditions, including spirituality, healing practices, traditional languages, and other cultural practices and activities. Find resources in this section related to culturally relevant and promising practices in working with American Indian/Alaska Native children and families.

*Individual tribes may be approached for information to include about the child’s family and specific tribal community.

Employee Resource Groups (ERGs) at ODHS promote understanding and support of staff, clients and communities of different groups. Workers may find them on the ODHS OWL Page and request assistance in finding information about specific cultures or groups, which include Native American, Black and African American, LGBTQ, Latinx, Asian and Pacific Islander, immigrants and refugees, veterans, abilities and Slavic groups.

Healing Footsteps: Digital Stories from Two-Spirit People
The National Resource Center for Permanency and Family Connections (NRCPFC) and the National Resource Center for Tribes partnered with the Two-Spirit community in Minneapolis, Minnesota to develop these digital stories. Digital stories were created by Lenny, Jason, and Joseph – Two-Spirit people whose lives were impacted by the child welfare system. (The term Two-Spirit is a universal Native American concept that generally means that the person’s body houses both a masculine and feminine spirit.) Additionally, two Native allies whose lives were impacted by the child welfare system created audio stories.

All About Me Book and Life Story Book Resources:

Child's Own Story, The: Life Story Work with Traumatized Children by Richard Rose ORPARC describes this book as a “practice-focused guide to life story work, it shows how this effective tool can be used to help young people recover from abuse and make sense of a disrupted upbringing in multiple homes or families. Though some sections apply more to the system in Great Britain, where it was written, it is a resource for social workers, child psychotherapists, residential care staff, long-term foster parents and other professionals working with traumatized children.”

Innovative Therapeutic Life Story Work: Developing Trauma-Informed Practice for Working with Children, Adolescents and Young Adults by Richard Rose ORPARC describes this book: “This edited volume explores different innovative ways of carrying out life story work, a method which helps traumatized children question and resolve issues from their past. Using the experience of practitioners based in a range of settings -- including schools, intensive services, youth justice and post-adoption support -- it highlights the versatility of this work and provides a useful overview of the latest developments in the field.”

ORPARC Staff created the Lifestory Book Information Packet

Appendix 4.1: Case transfer information sufficiency checklist
Case Transfer Information Sufficiency Checklist

Determine the sufficiency of information in the Initial assessment, Safety Assessment, Analysis and Plan, and supporting documentation.

☐ Does the documentation within the initial assessment sufficiently answer the 6 assessment questions?
  - Are there “gaps” in information?
  - Is there need for further clarification regarding documented information?
  - Are family and child functioning sufficiently understood?

☐ Do you understand how safety threats are occurring in the family?
  - Does documentation in the initial assessment support the identification of safety threats?
  - Is it obvious how threats to child are operating in the family?
  - Are safety threats justified, clearly and precisely described in the safety assessment?
  - Is further information needed to understand the safety assessment decision?

☐ Can the family adequately manage and control for the child’s safety without direct assistance from Child Welfare?
  - Does documentation support the decision that the family can sufficiently manage safety on its own?
  - Is there an adequate basis for determining that a non-maltreating parent has the capacity and willingness to protect?
  - Is further clarification indicated?

☐ Can an in-home safety plan sufficiently manage safety threats?
  - Does the safety analysis documentation clearly support the decision to use an in-home safety plan?
  - Do identified safety actions match up with how safety threats are manifested?
  - Does the in-home safety plan provide a sufficient level of effort?
  - Is it clear who is responsible for providing what safety action?
  - Are there gaps in information that require immediate follow-up?
  - Is there a need for further clarification and supervisory consultation?

☐ Does out-of-home placement appear to continue to be necessary?
  - Does the safety analysis documentation obviously support the decision to place out of the home?
  - Is there a need for further clarification regarding the decision to place?
Identification of Caregiver Protective Capacities

- Does documentation identify specific strengths associated with the parents’ role?
- Is there need for clarification regarding parental protective capacities?
- Consider what possibilities may exist for discussing and using parental protective capacities during the PCA process.

Planning for Conducting the PCA and Implications for Immediate Response

- If it is unclear how safety threats are manifested, seek supervisor consultation and clarification from the CPS worker.
- If the safety response is unclear or not supported in the documentation, seek supervisor consultation and follow up with the CPS worker.
- Consider whether there is a need to immediately contact safety service providers (in-home safety plan) prior to the PCA Introduction with the parents. Make immediate adjustments to safety plans as indicated.
- Always consider if there is a need for immediate adjustments to safety plans prior to initiating the PCA Introduction with parents.
- If there are significant gaps in information related to safety threats and/or safety analysis and plans, attempts should be made to promptly make face-to-face contact with parents and children to verify that child safety is being sufficiently managed.
- If safety threats are not well understood and cannot be clarified by the CPS worker, seek to reconcile what information is unknown by the conclusion of the Introduction meeting(s), and make adjustments to the safety plan as indicated.
- Consider how the parents’ reaction to Child Welfare might influence how you introduce yourself and the PCA.
- Prior to the Introduction meeting(s) with parents, make sure that you are clear about what you want to accomplish by the end of the meetings.
- Given variation in family dynamics, consider carefully how best to initiate the PCA process with parents.
Chapter 4

Appendix 4.1a: Is my safety plan sufficient?
Is my safety plan sufficient?

- It clearly controls or manages impending danger threat.
- It had an immediate effect.
- It uses actions that are immediately accessible and available.
- It contains safety services and actions only (not change-based or case plan services).
- Safety service providers were assessed to be suitable and reliable through a due diligence approach.
- It is not based on commitments from parent or caregivers.
- It includes detail on ODHS’s oversight processes.

Appendix 4.1b: In-home Criteria and Conditions for Return Guide
In-Home Criteria and Conditions for Return Guide

Each parent’s ability to meet the four in-home criteria should be addressed immediately upon determining there is an impending danger safety threat requiring a safety plan. If parents cannot meet all four criteria and a child must be placed in substitute care, clear Conditions for Return statements should be developed for only the missing criteria. This process guides us to have the least restrictive plan for the family. Concise, specific, simple language and formatting gives the family a clear guide to the expectations for reunification and the best chance at successful timely reunification. The underlying value of this process is the belief that children should be with their family unless it’s impossible to manage safety in their home. The developed Conditions for Return should be reviewed at each monthly contact with parents to identify barriers.

Below are all four in-home criteria descriptions with examples of when they are met, examples of when they are not met, and corresponding examples of a condition for return. These examples are intended to be ideas for language to consider. Conditions for Return statements should be customized to each parent’s situation.

There Is A Home Like Setting Where the Parent(s) and Child(ren) Live?

This criteria requires us to determine if where a parent lives is suitable for implementing an in-home safety plan. The critical issue is sustainability. In other words, is there confidence that the place where a parent is residing is stable enough to establish and sustain an in-home safety plan over a reasonable period? This does not necessarily preclude motels or shelters from potential in-home safety planning locations. However, there needs to be assurance that the place where a parent is staying is not temporary – that there is a reasonable way to sustain the use of an in-home safety plan in that location.

Justification for Meeting This Criteria:

- There is an adequate home in which a safety plan can be maintained.
- [Name] has maintained a home in which a safety plan can be maintained.
- [Name] has historically been able to maintain a place to live.
- [Name] has housing difficulties but there is evidence that they can maintain a place where a safety plan could be monitored.
- [Name] has a residence (e.g home, trailer, apartment, hotel, shelter situation- in specific cases) that is sufficient to support the use of an in-home safety plan.
- [Name] is staying with someone else but the situation is stable enough to use an in-home safety plan.

<tr>
<td>1. [Name] has no stable home from which to implement a safety plan.</td>
<td>[Name] will have a stable home where an in-home safety plan can be maintained.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
2. The living situation is too unpredictable for a safety plan. The home environment will be predictable enough to allow for adequate safety services to manage child safety in-home.

3. The home is hazardous for the children. (Describe) The home will be free from [the previously identified hazards] and there will be confidence that can be maintained with the oversight of safety service providers.

4. [Name] does not have the resources to maintain a home for an in-home safety plan. [Name] will use resources and have a reasonable plan to maintain a stable home.

5. There is a known perpetrator of child abuse living in the home. The home will be free from dangerous people who pose a safety risk to the child, and there will be confidence that can be maintained with the oversight of safety service providers.

There Are No Barriers in the Home to Allowing Safety Service Providers & Activities to Occur.

This condition is about whether the home environment is understood enough for an in-home safety plan to be implemented and to allow safety service providers to carry out planned activities without interference. To have confidence in establishing and sustaining an in-home safety plan, the home environment needs to have some routine and predictability.

Justification for Meeting This Criteria:

- There are no barriers that would prevent safety service providers from their role in monitoring the plan.
- While there may be active substance use, there are no barriers preventing safety services from monitoring safety.
- The home may have aspects that are out-of-control, but safety resources can control and manage the situation.
- The apparent crisis is situational and in-home safety services can address the crisis.
- Overall home environment is stable enough to accommodate in home safety services.
- Behavior and emotions are not aggravated or extreme, and can be managed by in-home safety services.
- There is enough routine to implement an in-home safety plan, focusing on specific days and times.
- While parent functioning may be out-of-control and affecting child safety, there is enough understanding of how the family operates to implement a safety plan sufficient to ensure the child’s safety in-home.
- There is an understanding of the specific triggers that cause the safety threat to occur, to ensure the current plan is sufficient to manage safety.

At Least One Parent Is Willing to Cooperate with The Safety Plan.

Willingness to cooperate with an in-home safety plan should be based on a caregiver’s participation in safety planning and allowing – not interfering - with safety service providers. Willingness can exist when a parent or caregiver does not agree with the reasons for needing a safety plan. Willingness means a parent understands what the safety plan will entail, accepts who will be involved, the frequency and intrusiveness during daily and weekly home life that is necessary, and there is no intent to disrupt the plan. There must be confidence that a parent is willing to cooperate with a safety plan to assure sustainability.

Justification for Meeting This Criteria:

- [Name] agrees to and cooperates with an in-home plan.
- [Name] understands what is required and agrees to allow others into the home at the level required.
- [Name] avoids interfering with safety service providers.
- [Name] is open to exploring in-home safety options.
- [Name] does not reject or avoid involvement.
- [Name] is willing to consider what it would take to keep the child in the home.
- [Name] is open to the parameters of an in-home safety plan, arrangements and safety service providers.
- [Name] demonstrates an investment in having the child remain in the home.

8. There is evidence that supports [Name] may flee with the child. [Name] will no longer be a risk to flee and will show a consistent commitment to cooperating with planning.

The Necessary Safety Activities and Resources Are Available to Implement the Plan?

Having necessary safety activities and resources means there are adequate safety services and safety service providers available at the level required to sufficiently manage child safety in the home. It also includes having access to safety services that are appropriate considering how impending danger is occurring. This criteria requires that safety service providers are committed to participating in a safety plan and have been verified as suitable to manage a specific role in the plan. Safety service resources and providers must also be available and accessible at the specific times and for the duration necessary for managing child safety. Remember, as a parent makes progress towards the Expected Outcomes, the level and frequency of safety providers in the home may decrease.

Justification for Meeting This Criteria:

- There are adequate resources for an in-home safety plan [describe those resources].
- Identified safety services that are available match up with how impending danger is occurring.
- Safety service providers are logical given family circumstances and what must be managed to assure child safety.
- There is confidence that safety service providers are open and understand their role in an in-home safety plan.
- There is confidence that safety service providers will be committed to assisting with an in-home safety plan.
- Safety services are immediately available and accessible in time and proximity.

Frequently Asked Questions:

What if a parent goes into residential treatment and the child can join them?

Answer: Typically, all Conditions for Return are met when a parent is in a residential program. A common concern is the parent’s sustainability in the program. We should not underestimate the level of commitment a parent makes prior to entering into treatment. They give up nearly every aspect of control in their life. Parents often are motivated by the plan of having their children with them. Our treatment providers are experts on treating substance use disorders and we should rely on their judgement to know when to reunite the family. We shouldn’t delay reunification and deny the family the opportunity for success. Residential Programs are full of mandatory reporters, parenting instructors, and a multitude of supports that provide safety and expertise on the parent’s progress and readiness. Communication between Child Welfare and the treatment program is key to supporting the parent in recovery and reunification.

What if a parent appears to meet conditions for return but the court has ordered the concurrent plan be implemented?

Answer: We are required to make efforts to implement the ordered plan, but each situation is unique, so you will want to staff the situation with your supervisor and the assigned AAG to consider a change in the court order.
What if you cannot assess a parent’s situation as they are out-of-state, incarcerated, or missing?

Answer: You can simply note that the parent’s situation will be assessed when they are available.

Why can’t I just list the in-home criteria as conditions for return?

Answer: The in-home criteria tells us what was missing that required a removal. The purpose for Conditions for Return is to have a concise, accurate, and understandable list of what is minimally required for reunification (or to meet in-home criteria). This is critical both for the parent to know what is required before their child to return home, and for the caseworker to know when to return the child.

What if all the criteria were not assessed at removal due to the parent clearly not meeting one?

Answer: We need to do our best to assess each criteria as if they would have met the other three. For example, to assess barriers to allowing safety services and activities to occur: if they had a home, enough safety providers, and would cooperate with a plan, would there be barriers to the safety service providers monitoring safety in the home?

Do I have to update the in-home criteria each month?

Answer: When a child is in foster care, the in-home criteria box becomes a historical record of why we removed. In-Home cases should describe how the criteria is currently met. Changes can be made as a parent’s circumstances change as the Ongoing Safety Plan is updated.

What if the parent loses an in-home criterion after conditions for return were developed?

Answer: Conditions can be added and/or updated, when necessary. For example, if you have a parent who had a home but has since lost it, your updated Condition may read: [Name] has lost their residence, and will establish a home where an in-home safety plan can be monitored. We want to communicate that we are not moving the goal for a parent, but accurately reflecting how the in-home criteria should be met given their new circumstances.

Appendix 4.1c: Criteria to Assess the Suitability of SSPs
Criteria to Assess the Suitability of Safety Plan Providers/Safety Service Providers

General Criteria

“Provider” refers to any person, professional or nonprofessional, selected to provide the safety response(s) within in-home safety plans, out-of-home safety plans or a combination of the two.

I. The person must be a responsible and physically and cognitively adequate adult. The person must understand what the threats are and accept them as existing, serious and concerning.

II. The person must have a sufficiently strong personality and will that the child’s family members cannot influence him or her.

III. The person must be fully aware of and committed to the assigned tasks in the safety plan.

IV. The person must be available, which means that he or she can begin providing the safety response the same day the safety plan is enacted. Available also refers to being able to complete one’s responsibilities throughout the life of the safety plan.

V. The person must be accessible, which means close by with transportation and easily and immediately reachable as required by the safety plan.

VI. The person should have a keen sense of perception about things happening around him or her.

VII. The person should be well trained and skilled in any area of competency required by the safety plan.

VIII. The person must be trustworthy, willing to work with CPS in a cooperative and collaborative relationship and willing to communicate regularly concerning all matters associated with the safety plan.

IX. The person must be booked and confirmed with precise understanding of the schedule, activities and expectations.
Specific Criteria

These criteria primarily relate to nonprofessional safety service providers.

I. The person’s viewpoint toward the child is appropriate and realistic.

II. The person’s attitude toward whether the child contributed to the need for a safety plan; a placement or family problems is consistent with the facts and is appropriate.

III. The person’s attitude toward the child’s parents is appropriate and realistic.

IV. The person accepts CPS involvement.

V. The person possesses the ability to perform basic care.

VI. The person’s availability within the home will be sufficient.

VII. The person’s use of substance in no way affects his or her ability to perform expected responsibilities.

VIII. The person’s beliefs about what happened that required safety intervention and who is responsible are reasonable and appropriate.

IX. The person possesses the knowledge, skill and motivation necessary.

X. The person currently is not involved in any criminal activity. OAR 413-015-1220: The CPS worker or caseworker must consult with and receive approval from a supervisor prior to engaging an individual as a safety service provider whenever the individual’s past behaviors, conditions, or circumstances include one of the items listed in the subsections of this section so long as those behaviors, conditions, or circumstances do not impact negatively the individual’s ability to fulfill the specific role and responsibilities in managing the child’s safety: (a) A record of abuse; (b) A criminal history; or (c) A history of drug or alcohol abuse.

XI. The person possesses sufficient resources to meet his or her responsibilities.

XII. The person’s living arrangement is safe.

XIII. The person’s home is secure from access by others.

XIV. The person’s living arrangement is socially and geographically near.

XV. The person and the home situation are stable.

XVIII. The person has a history of protecting and providing acceptable care to children.
Chapter 4

Appendix 4.1d: Guide: Expectations for SSP Who Are Monitoring Family Time
GUIDE: EXPECTATIONS FOR SAFETY SERVICE PROVIDERS (SSP) WHO ARE MONITORING FAMILY TIME

When taking on the role of Safety Service Provider, you are doing a huge service to your community and families within the community. ODHS appreciates and values your time. As an SSP, you have the important role of making sure the child is safe while you monitor the family’s time together. These guidelines are intended to help you understand that role and how you can best support the child and the family.

Understand your role.
When you have been approved as an SSP, you have agreed that you are willing and able to:

✓ Assist in managing the safety of the child.
✓ Cooperate with any restrictions on contact between the child and others.
✓ Support the safety plan verbally and through your actions.
✓ Fulfill the role and responsibilities required in the safety plan.

Understand the safety threats.
Even if you don’t agree with Child Welfare’s decision, you must be able to act protectively to ensure the child’s safety. Before monitoring family time, it is important for you to know, understand, and accept Child Welfare’s serious concerns for the child’s safety so you know:

✓ What may lead to safety issues between the parent and child and how to identify unsafe situations.
✓ How those situations impact child safety.
✓ Know what to do to ensure child safety.

Ask the caseworker any questions you need to help your understanding.
Be available.
As an SSP, you are agreeing to be available to begin your role the same day the safety plan is started, for the specified amount of time needed each day, for as long as the safety plan is needed.

✓ Inform the caseworker as soon as possible of any time constraints or scheduling conflicts you may have that could interfere with your availability.

Monitor Safety.
The safety plan will specify what actions you need to take to ensure child safety. Every safety plan is unique, so it is important for you to know exactly what you need to do.

✓ What you need to do should be listed clearly on the written safety plan. If it is not, or you are unclear, ask the caseworker or their supervisor for help.

Intervene.
As the SSP, your focus is on the child’s safety. It is important that you are not only able to identify when a child may be unsafe, but that you are also able to intervene to keep the child safe. Some options for intervention while monitoring family time are:

✓ Stopping or redirecting the behavior.
✓ Talking to the parent separately from the child. Don’t get into an argument or discussion with them about the problem. Just let them know what needs to change to continue family time.
✓ Asking the parent to take a break and come back when ready.
✓ Ending the contact by leaving with the child or asking the parent to leave.

 If any intervention was needed, let the caseworker know as soon as possible after the contact has ended and the child is safe.
If the child is in a safety plan while living with a parent (also known as an in home plan) and you had to end contact with the parent because of safety concerns and the caseworker is not immediately available, contact a supervisor immediately in the local office or call the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline (ORCAH) at: 1-855-503-SAFE (7233).

Document and communicate.

Communication between SSPs and caseworkers is critical.
Provide verbal or written information to the caseworker about your observations as indicated in the safety plan.

- Keep notes about the family time you monitor with specific information about dates, times, location, duration, and who was present.
- Keep notes about what went well, what struggles, or barriers were observed, what skills the parents used, and how the parent/child responded.
- Try to be objective and report what you saw and heard rather than what you feel or think about the situation.
- If you interrupt or end family time, write down what specific behavior, action, words, or conversation you saw that caused you to interrupt or end the family time.

As an SSP, anything you see, hear, read, or are told is not confidential. Documentation provided will be saved in the case file and may be shared with the court and legal parties.

Considerations for Cases involving Substance Use Disorder

The following rules apply to all family time in cases involving allegations of Substance Use. Substance use can include illegal substances, alcohol/cannabis, or even prescription medications. As a result, the impacts of substance use can vary and are not always apparent. Sobriety is not a requirement for family time.
✓ Know the signs of a parent’s use and know what type of behavior to expect when the parent is under the influence.
✓ Know that the parents may have items related to substance abuse (needles, pipes, substances) with them, which could result in the child being exposed. Watch for these items and ask the parent to place them where the child cannot be exposed.
✓ Know that if the parent is under the influence, and the resulting behaviors present a safety risk for the child, you will need to intervene prior to the child being placed in an unsafe situation.
✓ Examples of this can be:
  o An infant being held while the parent is nodding off.
  o The parent becomes angry and volatile when using, and as a result the child could be physically or emotionally hurt.
  o The parent can have erratic behavior, resulting in impulsive decisions that have not been ODHS approved.

Ask the caseworker any questions you need to help your understanding.

Special Rules for Cases Involving Sexual Abuse:
The following rules apply to all family time in cases where there are allegations of sexual abuse. Cases involving the sexual abuse of a child are complicated and while holding family members or friends accountable to these rules may be difficult, following the rules is critical to managing the child’s safety. Unless otherwise directed by the caseworker or their supervisor, the following rules apply:

✓ Allow no exchanges of gifts, money or cards;
✓ Allow no photographing, audio-recording, or video-recording of the child;
✓ Allow no physical contact with the child such as lap-sitting, hair combing, stroking, hand holding, wrestling, tickling, horse playing, changing diapers, or accompanying the child to the bathroom;
✓ Allow no whispering, passing of notes, hand signals or body signals;
✓ Allow no parenting time in the location where the alleged sexual abuse occurred.

Special Rules for Cases Involving Domestic Violence:
The following rules apply to all family time in cases involving allegations of domestic violence. Cases involving domestic violence are complicated and while holding family members or friends accountable to these rules may be difficult, following the rules is critical to managing safety. Unless otherwise directed by the caseworker or their supervisor, the following rules apply:

✓ Know and follow rules of safe family time exchange, such as making sure that the parents are not at the exchange location at the same time.
✓ Understand the conditions of any protection orders in place between the parties, as these orders apply to all contact between the parties and child including family time.
✓ Do not allow the parent who is the perpetrator of the violence to ask questions of the child regarding the survivor parent, particularly questions that may reveal the other survivor parent’s address or location.
✓ Be alert for questions that may reveal other confidential or sensitive information, such as questions about a child’s new school, the survivor parent’s relationships, where the child goes for medical care, etc. These questions could reveal confidential information about the survivor parent’s residence, activities, etc., and put them at risk.
✓ Do not allow whispering, the passing of notes, hand signals or body signals.
✓ Do not allow the parent who is the perpetrator of the violence to use the child (or anyone) to transmit information to the survivor parent.

Thank you for providing a valuable service to this family.
Face-to-Face (F2F): Intentional Contact with Parents

Your monthly Face-to-Face case notes with parents MUST:

Describe your observations and discussions of safety in the home
- Describe how the safety threats are still occurring.
- Is the Safety Plan sufficiently managing the identified safety threats?
- Describe your observations and condition of the parent during your visit.
- Are all 4 in-home criteria still met? In-home
- Assess how members of the home interact. (How do they view each other?) In-home

Describe progress on the Case Plan
- Describe progress toward Conditions for Return. If the child is placed out of home, which of the in-home criteria remain unmet?
- Describe progress toward Expected Outcomes and any changes you observed regarding the parent’s ability to provide protective care.
- Are actions/interventions still matching the needs of the parent and family? If not, how will this be addressed?
- What is working/challenging for the parent?

Detail next steps
- Detail what DHS and the parent will do to keep moving the case forward?
- Schedule your next visit.

---

If you have 45 minutes to meet with a parent, try this:

10 minutes: Connection and Check in

How are you? Actively listening to this answer will tell you exactly where that parent is at and will help parents feel heard. (Trauma-informed)

5 minutes: Collaborative agenda

What does the parent need to talk about during our time together? What do I need to talk about? Why are we here?

5 minutes: Handle business

Phone cards, bus passes, referral status, important dates

20 minutes: Progress

Conditions for Return - Which conditions are not met, and where are we with progress? What will you do, and what will the parent do to move closer to meeting C4R? (Bring the Safety Plan to look at the C4R together.)

Expected Outcomes: Discuss what they are working on/learning. How are they applying it to parenting time/day-to-day life?

5 minutes: Acknowledge their efforts (just showing up is a big deal sometimes), and review next steps for both of you to keep moving forward.

When the team feels you listening, sees you planning ahead, and experiences your singular focus on getting the kids back home... they will walk your walk alongside you.
Your monthly Face-to-Face case notes with children MUST:

Describe your observations & discussions of safety in the home

- Are there any physical hazards impacting safety in the home, including the home itself, surrounding area, and people?
- Assess how members of the home interact.
- Talk with the child (separate from the parent/caregiver; consider stepping outside) to assess their view of safety. Describe your observations and condition of the child during your visit.
- Assess the Supervision Plan, if applicable. Is it still sufficient?

Describe progress on the Case Plan

- How are the child’s well-being needs (medical, dental, educational, behavioral, cultural) being met? Describe progress for the child: attachment, services, needs.
- Is the child involved in developmentally appropriate activities (extracurricular, enrichment, cultural, social)? Provide an update. Out of home
- How is the child’s team supporting the child’s attachment to their parents, siblings, and other natural supports?
- Are activities/interventions still matching the needs of the child and family? If not, how will this be addressed?
- Does the child or caregiver report any unmet needs? How will they be addressed?
- Assess the Personal Care Services Plan, if applicable. Out of home

Detail next steps

- What will DHS and/or the foster parent do to support the child/foster parent?
- Schedule your next visit.

Scenario | F2F Contact Required
--- | ---
Child placed in foster care. | At removal and monthly thereafter. F2F must occur in foster home at least once every 60 days.
Child reunified with a parent. | In the home the next day and every month thereafter.
Child moved from one placement to another; child moved from one parent to another; youth turns 18 years old. | Regular monthly contact.
Case transferred from CPS to Permanency; case transferred from permanency worker to permanency worker. | Within 5 working days of receiving the case.
Child placed out of state. | Monthly contact is required. Coordinate monthly contact with receiving state.
Certification identifies concerns in the home. | Within 30 days.
When the Case Plan has been developed (Stage 4 of the PCA). | Must have F2F contact with the parents to review and collect signatures.
Face-to-Face (F2F): Practicing Intentional Contact

Why do you work at Child Welfare?

You told us: To support families being together.

At every Face-to-Face Contact:
The most effective ways to move a case forward toward reunification are to listen, collaborate, and always focus on progress using engagement that is:

- Strengths-based
- Trauma-informed
- Culturally responsive
- Values family and youth voice

Intentionally:

- Demonstrate genuineness, empathy, and respect for each family member.
- Suspend biases and avoid judgments.
- Make sure children, youth, parents, and foster parents feel comfortable discussing challenges and needs.
- Communicate support and partnership.
- Be humble and curious. Ask and then listen to understand who the parent/youth is and what they know their family needs.

Parents who have been consumers of our system agree: The most important factor in the success of a case is the relationship between the parent and you.

Parent Engagement:

Engagement is an essential part of partnering with parents in the change process and contributes to more positive outcomes for families.

Parental engagement can be challenging given the intense emotions of parents in response to Child Welfare involvement, challenges related to co-occurring issues (e.g., substance misuse, mental illness, family stressors), and reactions to the power differential created by the agency’s authority.

There are 3 key caseworker actions you can take to increase engagement:

- Include parents as partners in planning.
- Demonstrate care and support.
- Praise parents for their efforts, ideas, or achievements.

Relationship building is an essential part of parent engagement. Parents (and all of us) need:

- Genuineness (being real)
- Empathy (communicating understanding)
- Respect (suspending critical judgment)

Documentation should be clear, concise, factual, and objective. Describe behaviors or interactions, avoid jargon, and stay away from negative or overused “buzzwords” (e.g., “The mother was hostile,” or “Parents were noncompliant.”).

Appendix 4.3: Protective Capacity Reference Guide
PROTECTIVE CAPACITY REFERENCE

Enhancing Protective Capacities in the Case Plan: What Behavior Must Change

Protective Capacity

"Protective capacity" means behavioral, cognitive, and emotional characteristics that can specifically and directly be associated with a person's ability to care for and keep a child safe.

Criteria for Determining Protective Capacities

- The characteristic prepares the person to be protective.
- The characteristic enables or empowers the person to be protective.
- The characteristic is necessary or fundamental to being protective.
- The characteristic must exist prior to being protective.
- The characteristic can be related to acting or being able to act on behalf of a child.

Behavioral Protective Capacities

- People who spend considerable time with a child filled with positive regard.
- People who take action to assure that children are encouraged and reassured.
- People who take an obvious stand on behalf of a child.

Cognitive Protective Capacities

The parent plans and articulates a plan to protect the child.

This refers to the thinking ability that is evidenced in a reasonable, well-thought-out plan.
- People who are realistic in their idea and arrangements about what is needed to protect a child.
- People whose thinking and estimates of what dangers exist and what arrangement or actions are necessary to safeguard a child.
- People who are aware and show a conscious focused process for thinking that results in an acceptable plan.
- People whose awareness of the plan is best illustrated by their ability to explain it and reason out why it is sufficient.
| The parent is aligned with the child. | This refers to a mental state or an identity with a child.
- People who strongly think of themselves as closely related to or associated with a child.
- People who think that they are highly connected to a child and therefore responsible for a child’s well-being and safety.
- People who consider their relationship with a child as the highest priority. |
|---|---|
| The parent has adequate knowledge to fulfill care giving responsibilities and tasks. | This refers to information and personal knowledge that is specific to care giving that is associated with protection.
- People who know enough about child development to keep kids safe.
- People who have information related to what is needed to keep a child safe.
- People who know how to provide basic care which assures that children are safe. |
| The parent is reality oriented; perceives reality accurately. | This refers to mental awareness and accuracy about one’s surroundings, correct perceptions of what is happening, and the viability and appropriateness of responses to what is real and factual.
- People who describe life circumstances accurately.
- People who recognize threatening situations and people.
- People who do not deny reality or operate in unrealistic ways.
- People who are alert to danger within persons and the environment.
- People who are able to distinguish threats to child safety. |
The parent has accurate perceptions of the child.

This refers to seeing and understanding a child’s capabilities, needs and limitations correctly.

- People who know what children of certain age or with particular characteristics are capable of.
- People who respect uniqueness in others.
- People who see a child exactly as the child is and as others see the child.
- People who recognize the child’s needs, strengths and limitations. People who can explain what a child requires, generally, for protection and why.
- People who see and value the capabilities of a child and are sensitive to difficulties a child experiences.
- People who appreciate uniqueness and difference.
- People who are accepting and understanding.

The parent understands their protective role.

This refers to awareness…knowing there are certain solely owned responsibilities and obligations that are specific to protecting a child.

- People who possess an internal sense and appreciation for their protective role.
- People who can explain what the “protective role” means and involves and why it is so important.
- People who recognize the accountability and stakes associated with the role.
- People who value and believe it is their primary responsibility to protect the child.

The parent is self-aware as a caregiver.

This refers to sensitivity to one’s thinking and actions and their effects on others – on a child.

- People who understand the cause – effect relationship between their own actions and results for their children
- People who are open to who they are, to what they do, and to the effects of what they do.
- People who think about themselves and judge the quality of their thoughts, emotions and behavior.
- People who see that the part of them that is a caregiver is unique and requires different things from them.
Emotional Protective Capacities

- People who use personal and social means for feeling well and happy that are acceptable, sensible and practical.
- People who employ mature, adult-like ways of satisfying their feelings and emotional needs.
- People who understand and accept that their feelings and gratification of those feelings are separate from their child. |
|-------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| The parent is emotionally able to intervene to protect the child. | This refers to mental health, emotional energy and emotional stability.
- People who are doing well enough emotionally that their needs and feelings don’t immobilize them or reduce their ability to act promptly and appropriately.
- People who are not consumed with their own feelings and anxieties.
- People who are mentally alert, in touch with reality.
- People who are motivated as a caregiver and with respect to protectiveness. |
| The parent is resilient as a caregiver. | This refers to responsiveness and being able and ready to act promptly.
- People who recover quickly from set backs or being upset.
- People who spring into action.
- People who can withstand.
- People who are effective at coping as a caregiver. |
| The parent is tolerant as a caregiver. | This refers to acceptance, allowing and understanding, and respect.
- People who can let things pass.
- People who have a big picture attitude, who don’t over react to mistakes and accidents.
- People who value how others feel and what they think. |
The parent displays concern for the child and the child’s experience and is intent on emotionally protecting the child.

This refers to a sensitivity to understand and feel some sense of responsibility for a child and what the child is going through in such a manner to compel one to comfort and reassure.

- People who show compassion through sheltering and soothing a child.
- People who calm, pacify and appease a child.
- People who physically take action or provide physical responses that reassure a child, that generate security.

The parent and child have a strong bond, and the parent is clear that the number one priority is the well-being of the child.

This refers to a strong attachment that places a child’s interest above all else.

- People who act on behalf of a child because of the closeness and identity the person feels for the child.
- People who order their lives according to what is best for their children because of the special connection and attachment that exits between them.
- People whose closeness with a child exceeds other relationships.
- People who are properly attached to a child.

The parent expresses love, empathy and sensitivity toward the child; experiences specific empathy with the child’s perspective and feelings.

This refers to active affection, compassion, warmth and sympathy.

- People who fully relate to, can explain, and feel what a child feels, thinks and goes through.
- People who relate to a child with expressed positive regard and feeling and physical touching.
- People who are understanding of children and their life situation.

Note: The examples below are not meant to perfectly fit your case but to provide a sample of how you would apply the concepts. Each Parents’ challenges (diminished capacity’s) and goals (expected outcomes) should be customized with language that fits their unique situation and understanding. Having goals be measurable is critical. Consider adding timeframes to be clear about how long a parent might need to demonstrate a change to have met the goal.

Domestic violence examples are preceded with DV-S for Survivors and DV-AP for Abusive Partners. Take care not to engage in blaming of survivors and consider how the wording of some goals may jeopardize their safety. Focus the goals for the Abusive Partner on responsibility for coercion and control while avoiding alternate excuses (substance use, mental health, impulse control) for their cognitive choice to exert control over their family.

Each Parent is connected to each identified safety threat and should have at least one challenge (diminish capacity) to protect. Each diminished capacity should have at least one corresponding goal (expected outcome) to enhance the parent’s ability to control for the safety threat.

Appendix 4.4: Caseworker’s role during the Protective Capacity Assessment
Caseworker’s role during the protective capacity assessment

The caseworker-parent collaboration that occurs during protective capacity assessment requires caseworkers to be versatile and competent when it comes to being a facilitator. The protective capacity assessment can only be effectively completed when a caseworker actively facilitates the process. The protective capacity assessment is an ongoing ODHS intervention with families that relies heavily on the caseworker’s mentality, skills, techniques and direction.

Facilitation

Caseworker facilitation in the protective capacity assessment refers to the interpersonal, guiding, educating, problem solving, planning and brokering activities necessary to enable a family to proceed through the assessment process. This results in a change strategy that can go in a case plan.

A caseworker’s primary objectives for facilitating the protective capacity assessment include:

I. Building a collaborative working relationship with family members,
II. Engaging the parents in the assessment process,
III. Simplifying the assessment process for the family,
IV. Focusing on assessing what is essential to child protection and child safety in the family’s home,
V. Learning from the family what must change to sustain child safety in the child’s home,
VI. Seeking agreement of what must change to sustain child safety in the child’s home,
VII. Stimulating ideas and solutions for addressing what must change, and VIII. Developing strategies for change to be included in a case plan.

Facilitating the protective capacity assessment involves four roles and several related responsibilities. The four roles are:

I. Guide,
II. Educator,
III. Evaluator, and
IV. Broker.

Guide

The guide’s role involves planning and directing families’ navigation through the assessment process. The guide coordinates and regulates the approach to the intervention and focuses the interactions with families to ensure achievement of assessment objectives and decisions. The guide:

I. Engages family members in the assessment process and change;
II. Establishes a partnership with parents;

III. Fully informs parents of the assessment process, objectives and decisions;

IV. Adequately prepares for each series of interviews and is clear about accomplishments needed by the end of each interview series;

V. Considers how best to structure the interviews to achieve objectives;

VI. Focuses interviews on the specific objectives for each intervention stage;

VII. Redirects conversations as needed; and

VIII. Effectively manages the use of time in the individual series of interviews and the entire assessment process.

Educator

The educator’s role empowers families by providing information about their case and the child welfare system. The educator offers suggestions, identifies options and alternatives, clarifies perceptions and provides feedback that might raise self-awareness about needed changes. The educator:

I. Engages family members in the assessment process;

II. Answers questions about ODHS’s involvement, safety issues, practice requirements, expectations, court, etc.;

III. Supports client self-determination and right to choose;

IV. Informs parents of options as well as potential consequences;

V. Promotes problem solving among parents; and

VI. Provides feedback, observations and insights regarding family strengths, motivation, safety concerns and what must change.

Evaluator

The role of the evaluator involves learning and understanding family member motivations, strengths, capacities and needs. The evaluator then discerns what must change to create a safe environment in the family’s home. The evaluator:

I. Engages family members in the assessment process;

II. Explores a parent’s perspective regarding strengths, capacities, needs and safety concerns;

III. Considers how existing family and family members could use their strengths to enhance protective capacities;

IV. Focuses on safety threats and diminished protective capacities as the highest priority for change;

V. Clearly understands how impending danger is evident in a family and determines the principle threat to child safety;

VI. Raises awareness and seeks agreement with parents on what protective capacities they must enhance that are essential to reducing impending danger; and
VII. Seeks to understand family member motivation; identifies parents’ stage(s) of change needed to address child safety.

Broker

The broker’s role involves identifying, linking, matching or accessing appropriate services for parents and children as needed related to what must change to create a safe environment. The broker:

I. Engages the family in the case planning process;
II. Promotes problem solving among parents;
III. Seeks areas of agreement from parents regarding what must change;
IV. Considers parent motivation for change;
V. Collaborates and builds common ground on what parents need to work on and how they may change;
VI. Brainstorms solutions to address safety-related issues;
VII. Educates about services and resources and their availability;
VIII. Provides service options based on family members’ needs; and
IX. Creates change strategies with families and establishes case plans that support achieving the change strategy.

The following are some basic principles for interacting with family members during the protective capacity assessment:

I. Interpersonal engagement is fundamental to facilitation.
II. Fully informed parents make for better working partners.
III. Be prepared to work with an involuntary client.
IV. Empathetic responses encourage client engagement and participation.
V. Developing partnerships with families requires that ongoing ODHS intervention is not paternalistic.
VI. Feel comfortable enough with your authority to consider ways to increase a family’s sense of power and autonomy, specifically in terms of parent choices.
VII. Acknowledge that most people resist change and want to maintain certain behaviors (status quo).
VIII. Be open to considering that healthy intentions may be embedded in questionable behavior.
IX. Demonstrate acceptance for individuals; maintain objectivity.
X. In a collaborative working partnership, both ODHS and the family have responsibilities; be clear about ODHS’s role and reasonable about what it can achieve.
XI. Recognize that ultimately the responsibility for change rests with parents and the family.
XII. Avoid arguing, demanding or expecting compliance; these are not intervention strategies.

XIII. Be clear about ODHS expectations and the limits to negotiating, compromising or dismissing.

XIV. ODHS’s mission includes ensuring child protection by confirming sustained child safety in the child’s home.
Chapter 4

Appendix 4.5: Protective Capacity Assessment decisions
Protective capacity assessment decisions

Child Welfare makes the following decisions by the end of the initial PCA. The decisions must be regularly re-evaluated throughout the life of the case to guide case planning and implementation and to measure progress.

I. Are safety threats being managed in the least restrictive way possible?

II. Can existing protective capacities (strengths) be the foundation for needed changes?

III. What is the relationship between identified safety threats and currently diminished protective capacities?

IV. What is the parent’s perspective or awareness of safety threats and the threats’ relationship to diminished parental protective capacities?

V. What are parents ready, willing and able to work on in the case plan?

VI. What are the areas of disagreement between the parents and ODHS about what needs to change?

VII. What change actions, services and activities will be used to enhance diminished parental protective capacities?
Chapter 4

Appendix 4.6: Protective Capacity Assessment Worksheet
Protective capacity assessment guide

The PCA process begins immediately following the CPS assessment at the point the case is opened for services, whether or not the case is transferred to a new worker. The PCA is completed on both in-home and substitute care cases. The Initial PCA must be completed within 30 days unless a supervisor approves an exception. The PCA process is documented in the case notes as actions and contacts occur. It is the goal of the PCA to clearly identify both the diminished and enhanced protective capacities directly related to the identified impending danger safety threats. CPS identifies Impending Danger Safety Threats during the CPS assessment, and the ongoing caseworker identifies the diminished capacities that are directly causing the impending danger safety threat/s to occur.

Please note: This guide is not meant to replace policy or procedure but can be used as an outline to assist in understanding the basics of each stage of the Protective Capacity Assessment. Please refer to OAR 413-040-000 through 0032 and Chapter 4, Managing Child Safety In and Out of the Home for further guidance:

Stage 1: Preparation (Reviewing Information, Preparing for Next Steps)
The caseworker must conduct the following activities within five days of receipt of the case from CPS. (Remember, PCAs are required on both in-home and substitute care cases.)

I. Review the CW case history, case documentation, actions and decisions of the CPS assessment. (Remember: The six domains are the building blocks of the PCA and should offer some preliminary information as to how the family functions.)

II. Review the initial/ongoing safety plan by contacting all participants in the safety plan to determine whether the ongoing safety plan ensures the safety of the child. (This includes in-home safety plans and out-of-home safety plans.)

III. If a child is in substitute care, review the Conditions for Return.

IV. Document the review of the in-home/out-of-home safety plan and Conditions for Return in the Child Welfare electronic information system.
The caseworker plans their initial contact to help ensure an effective introduction stage:

I. Thoughtfully plan the approach, including who to include and the logistics of the meeting. Plan the timing, location and circumstances of the initial contact (office, family home, neutral setting).

II. Gather information from others through individual interviews or meetings for the purpose of identifying and understanding the needs, concerns, strengths, and limitations associated with the protective capacity of the parent and assessing the impact on the child’s safety. Consider grandparents, parents’ live-in partners, extended family, persons with significant attachment to the child, teachers, physicians, coaches, neighbors or members of the faith community. Those who know the family best may be able to appropriately contribute information and assist the parents in making necessary changes.

III. Involve an Indian child’s tribe(s).

Stage 2: Introduction (Family Officially Transitions From CPS to Ongoing)

The initial meeting with the parents is a time to build rapport, begin to build a partnership, provide information and allow the parents time to express themselves. This stage is the point of transition for the parents from the CPS case to the ongoing case. The caseworker will explain his/her job title, ensure the family has his/her contact information, and differentiate the goals of CPS (assessing child safety) and the ongoing worker’s role of managing child safety and partnering with the parents to resolve the reasons for child welfare.

The ongoing caseworker should do the following:

I. Ask the parents to share their understanding of the reasons for CW involvement. Do they know and understand the identified safety threats?

II. Be able to describe the caregivers’ reaction and perspective regarding the identified impending danger safety threats.

III. Answer the parent’s questions openly and let them express their emotions. People are unable to move toward necessary change until their questions can be answered.
IV. Explain the importance of working in partnership and how together they want to understand how the situation/circumstances resulted in their children being hurt/unsafe.

V. Evaluate the parent’s readiness for change. (Do they respond to phone calls; are they willing to consider change; are they available, and do they participate in visits; are they willing to engage in the PCA process?)

VI. If the parents are unwilling to commit to the PCA process, try to gain additional information and discuss with them the reasons they are unwilling. It is the ongoing responsibility of the caseworker to move the case forward and to continue to actively seek the parents’ involvement.

VII. Seek a commitment from the parents to participate in the process, express appreciation and reaffirm desire to partner with them.

VIII. Set the date, time and place of the next contact.

IX. Document the Introduction Stage in OR-Kids Case Notes. (Who was present, location, relevant observations, behaviors, conditions, circumstances, etc.)

Stage 3: Exploration (Determining What Must Change)

This stage is the process of joint exploration with the parents of what must change in order for the parents to regain and sustain responsibility for their child’s safety. This stage helps identify the enhanced (strengths) and diminished protective capacities that are directly related to the identified Impending Danger Safety Threat/s. In other words, the diminished parental capacity is either causing the Impending Danger Safety Threat/s to occur OR causing the parent to be unable/unwilling to protect their child from the Impending Danger Safety Threat. It will likely take more than one contact with the parent to complete this stage. (Caseworker can utilize tool Stage 3 Exploration to assist in this process). The case worker should determine whether expert assessment/evaluations are needed to help assess the parental protective capacities.

I. The caseworker’s goal is to reach an understanding/agreement with the parent/s on how the impending danger safety threats cause their child to be unsafe and what must change.

II. The caseworker determines what the parents are willing to do.

Through discussion with the parents, the caseworker should develop additional knowledge about:

I. Domestic violence, parents’ own childhood history of abuse/neglect, substance abuse, mental illness, criminal behaviors.
Expected Outcome Development:

After there is an understanding/agreement of how and why the identified impending danger safety threats have occurred, the Expected Outcomes must be developed. It’s important to elicit the parent’s perceptions when developing the EO’s. Remember, these are developed around the diminished protective capacities that were learned during exploration with the parents.

Parent #1:

I. Determine the cognitive, emotional, and/or behavioral protective capacities that must be enhanced to create a safe home and then behaviorally state the measurable goal.

Examples: (1) Larry will learn to understand and describe his child’s needs for safety that require he think about and respond to Jimmy’s needs before his own. (2) Angela is able to control herself and her impulses by not exposing Angel to inappropriate activities in the home or allowing the presence of people who cause Angel to be fearful of her home environment.

II. Status of readiness to change (pre-contemplation, contemplation, preparation, action and maintenance):

III. Describe existing/enhanced parental protective capacities, and discuss how these can influence change:

IV. Describe potential barriers to meeting the expected outcomes:

Stage 4: Change Strategy and Case planning

After the protective capacities are understood and well-defined, it is important to determine actions, services, or activities that will assist in facilitating necessary change by enhancing specific diminished protective capacities and helping the parents regain and sustain primary responsibility for their child’s safety.

Consider creative and flexible interventions such as support and assistance from individuals in the family system, community resources, and treatment providers along with structured services (such as family sexual abuse treatment, parenting classes, etc.) when appropriate to enhancing the identified diminished capacities.

During the final stage of the initial PCA, the caseworker and the parents work together to do the following:

I. Prioritize what must change;

II. Create an individualized Child Welfare case plan that documents the Expected Outcomes; and

III. Select specific actions, services and activities to achieve the Expected Outcomes, and document these on the Action Agreement.

When thinking about where to start the process of change, consider the following:

I. What expected outcomes related to diminished caregiver protective capacities are most likely to address child safety?

II. What services can stimulate progress for change and could establish a foundation for further change?

III. What do both the worker and parents mutuality agree must change? Or, at least, what do caregivers agree to do?

IV. What issues that, if addressed, might have the greatest impact on enhancing caregiver protective capacities?

The assessment of the protective capacity continues throughout the life of the case, and the findings of the PCA are updated at each 90-day review of the Child Welfare case plan and used to measure progress toward achieving the Expected Outcomes.

The Trans-Theoretical Model (TTM) (Stages of change)

The Trans-Theoretical Model (TTM) (Prochaska & DiClemente, 1982; Prochaska, DiClemente, & Norcross, 1992) provides a way to understand the cognitive process for human change. The knowledge regarding how and why change occurs among individuals is important for understanding the rationale for the design of the ongoing family functioning assessment and has direct implications for how ongoing case managers should behave when intervening with caregivers.

The premise of TTM is that human change is a progressive cyclical mental and behavioral process that occurs as a matter of personal caregiver choice and intention. Working from this perspective, the ongoing case manager seeks to engage caregivers in conversations that are intended to promote problem recognition, if not acceptance, and reinforce a caregiver’s internal desire for change. Adopting the principle assertion of TTM that change can be facilitated by influencing internal motivation, the conversations that occur with caregivers during the ongoing protective capacity assessment attempt to raise self-awareness regarding the need for change, to instill hope for change and to elicit caregiver input regarding what must change related to caregiver protective capacities.

Stages of change

The stages of change embody the dynamic and motivational aspects of the process of change described in TTM. There are five sequential stages that people move through when considering the impact of personal problems, thinking about the need for change and eventually making choices about doing something to change. Rarely do individuals move through the stages of change in a prescriptive linear way. More often, when individuals are struggling to make choices regarding the need for change, there is a tendency to vacillate between problem recognition and problem denial; between wanting to do something to change and insecurity about the ability to change; between taking steps to change and relapsing into problem behavior.

The stages of change provide ongoing case managers with a realistic model for understanding the difficulties that caregivers face in making choices regarding change and the challenges that are evident when intervening with caregivers to help facilitate that change. Understanding the stages that a caregiver goes through to make choices regarding change is crucial for providing ongoing case managers with a rationale for how to interact with caregivers during the ongoing PCA process, including being nonjudgmental; supporting self-determination; creating discrepancy for change; exploring intentions for change; considering what caregivers are ready, willing and able to do; encouraging and instilling hope for change; and providing options.

Pre-Contemplation: Not ready to change!

The caregiver is communicating during ongoing protective capacity assessment conversations that he/she does not acknowledge that there are problems, and he/she does not consider the need to change. The caregiver who is in the pre-contemplation stage of change tends to demonstrate some level of resistance. He/she is reluctant to participate in conversations during the ongoing protective capacity assessment. He/she may express “fake cooperation” as a form of resistance and may even acknowledge that he/she is willing to complete services but in reality does not have intentions to change or does not believe that change is possible. He/she may be rationalizing problems or blaming others; making excuses; or accusing the ongoing case manager of interfering in their lives. He/she could be actively rebelling against intervention by being overtly argumentative during conversations.

Most caregivers who begin the ongoing case management process do so as involuntary clients. These caregivers tend to be in pre-contemplation about all or some of the problems that were identified during the investigation. They likely feel forced or coerced to be involved with case management and as a result, they feel a sense of powerlessness.

Contemplation: Thinking about change

Caregivers may begin the ongoing protective capacity assessment process thinking about problems and considering the need to change, but they have likely not made a decision that change is necessary. The conversations that occur during the ongoing protective capacity assessment are intended to facilitate caregivers to begin weighing the pros and cons for change. Caregivers who are in the contemplation stage for change are ambivalent. They consider the need for change, but they are hesitant to fully acknowledge problems, and they are not sure they want to give up negative patterns of behavior.

When caregivers begin the assessment as highly resistant, efforts to facilitate change should concentrate on moving caregivers from pre-contemplation to a mindset of contemplating the need for change. Simply getting caregivers to minimally acknowledge problems and start thinking about the need for change is a realistic objective for intervention in the short term when caregivers are very resistant to participating in the ongoing protective capacity assessment and much less open to thinking about change.

Preparation: Getting ready to make a change

As a result of the self-awareness raising that occurs during the ongoing protective capacity assessment, many caregivers will move toward taking increasing ownership for their problems (or some of their problems), and they will start talking about not only the need for change but what specific behavioral change would look like. When conversations are productive with respect to eliciting caregiver feedback regarding what must change, there emerges a period of time when a window of opportunity opens for engaging caregivers to commit to taking steps to change.

Action: Ready to make a change

Caregivers who are in the action stage are not only taking steps to change, including participating in a change process with the ongoing case manager and other changed-focused services, but they also express a belief and attitude that the actions taken to address problems will result in things being different. In effect, when a caregiver completes the ongoing protective capacity assessment process and commits him/herself to participating in services and working toward achieving expected outcomes and case plan outcomes, he/she is moving into action stage. If at the conclusion of the ongoing protective capacity assessment or in the months following the implementation of the case plan, a caregiver communicates that he/she is ready, willing and able to make change and then proceeds to take the steps to do so, he/she is in the action stage.

Maintenance: Continuing to support the behavior change

A caregiver does not reach the maintenance stage of change until he/she demonstrates sustained behavioral change for at least six months. Caregivers may still be actively involved in completing their case plans and participating in services, but significant progress has been made toward the achievement of expected outcomes and outcomes related to caregiver protective capacities and child well-being. It is important to note that a caregiver is not likely to be in the maintenance stage for all expected outcomes in the case plan at the same time. In most cases, it will be more likely that caregivers could be in the maintenance stage for one outcome related to caregiver protective capacities while remaining in the action stage or even contemplation stage related to other outcomes. In ongoing case management, the change process is evaluated at least every 90 days, or at critical juncture, during the ongoing case management and services to determine when sufficient change has occurred such that no intervention is required and the case can be closed.

Appendix 4.8: Criteria for Expected Outcomes
Criteria for expected outcome development

Introduction

The Protective Capacity Assessment results in the identification of specific Expected Outcomes for change. The Expected Outcomes for change are precise and clearly worded statements that form a picture of what enhanced diminished caregiver protective capacities would look like for caregivers for each case that is opened for Ongoing Case Management. The Expected Outcomes for change that emerge from the Protective Capacity Assessment process are the most important aspect of the case plan. The Expected Outcomes define for caregivers, workers, courts, and treatment providers what must change to achieve intervention success. The Expected Outcomes serve as the focus or target of all treatment intervention services throughout ongoing case management.

Developing criteria-based expected outcomes

I. All Expected Outcomes must focus on enhancing diminished caregiver protective capacities.
   A. When developing Expected Outcomes, ongoing workers and supervisors should always begin by referring to the Protective Capacity Reference Guide Appendix 4.3.

II. All Expected Outcomes must target individual caregiver thinking, feeling, and behavior associated with caregiver performance and the ability to ensure child protection.
   A. Expected Outcomes should always reflect how a caregiver’s thinking, feelings, and behavior are interrelated and influence caregiver performance. Expected Outcomes should always be based on what has been identified as being diminished related to cognitive, emotional, and/or behavioral caregiver protective capacities.

III. All Expected Outcomes must be understandable.
   A. The Expected Outcomes that are selected for the case plan (related to enhancing diminished caregiver protective capacities) should logically match up with the reason the case was opened (impending danger safety threats).

IV. All Expected Outcomes must reflect specific behavioral change that must occur for a caregiver to have sufficient protective capacities to ensure child safety and permanence.
   A. Expected Outcomes that are behavioral require that documentation describe in positive terms what it would look like (or how caregivers would specifically need to behave differently) for them to be protective.

V. All Expected Outcomes must be individualized based on the unique dynamics of the family, how impending danger is manifested, and which caregiver protective capacities are diminished.
   A. Expected Outcomes must be specific enough to accurately reflect diminished caregiver protective capacities and describe what must change for each individual caregiver. Expected Outcomes for change are better when the Expected Outcome statements include a caregiver’s own perceptions and language.

VI. All Expected Outcomes must be measurable in the sense of specifically defining what must change and/or exist related to caregiver thinking, feelings, and behavior.
   A. The ability to effectively measure progress related to Expected Outcome achievement is based on the extent to which the Expected Outcome statement associated with caregiver protective capacities clearly describes what specifically must change related to caregiver thoughts, feelings, and behaviors.

Appendix 4.9: Family Meeting Agenda
Oregon family decision-making meeting suggested agenda

The facilitator guides the Oregon family decision-making meeting.

1. Introductions

   I. The facilitator states the purpose of the meeting and confirms participant understanding of this purpose.

   II. The facilitator asks all participants to introduce themselves and describe their relationship to the child and family.

   III. The facilitator requests names of other persons not present who should receive a copy of the meeting notes.

2. Ground rules

   I. The facilitator provides ground rules for the meeting including, but not limited to:

      A. Respect for privacy: Request that participants do not share information discussed in the meeting outside the meeting. Advise participants that recommendations may be included in the case plan and included in reports to the court.

      B. Time limits: The meeting usually lasts two hours.

      C. Respectfulness: The facilitator ensures that each participant can speak with the focus on determining the services and activities to establish a permanent placement, either at the home of a legal parent or an alternate permanent home.

      D. Agreement: The meeting’s goal is to develop a partnership that addresses the child’s safety and permanent care.

      E. Responsibility: ODHS is responsible for the final decisions on the safety of the child.

3. Identification of issues affecting child safety and parental protective capacity

   I. The caseworker explains the meeting’s purpose, and summarizes safety threats, relevant parental protective capacities and related Child Welfare history.

   II. Other participants contribute their information about child safety concerns and parental capacity to protect the children

4. Assessing options

   I. Participants consider placement and service options, including both the permanency plan and concurrent permanency plan. Options should focus on what needs to happen to keep a child safe, and help the family increase their capacity to protect the child.

   II. The caseworker may add any additional actions or services ODHS requires for child safety. If some recommendations are not chosen, the worker will let participants know the reasons for not choosing them. Participants may not always agree on placement or service decisions.
5. Making decisions/coming to agreement

I. Review the suggested options.

II. Participants may revise or add to the options.

III. The caseworker must approve or revise the options that affect child safety.

IV. If the group achieves consensus, the recommendations are finalized and documented in the meeting notes.

V. If the group cannot reach consensus for one or more recommendations, the meeting notes will document this as well. However, advise participants that the recommendations not reaching consensus will not be included in the case plan.

6. Follow-up and documentation

I. During the meeting, the facilitator or scribe will record decisions on the local Child Welfare office Oregon Family Decision-making Meeting (OFDM) form. Each participant signs the form acknowledging attendance and participation.

II. Debrief the process and the plan developed at the OFDM with the caseworker and the child welfare supervisor.
Chapter 4

Appendix 4.10: Facilitator role and qualifications
Facilitator role and qualifications

The assigned caseworker has primary responsibility to identify participants and prepare them for the meeting. However, the facilitator often makes the many detailed contacts and arrangements necessary to accomplish these tasks. It is especially helpful for participants to have contact with the facilitator before the meeting and become more comfortable with the meeting process. Facilitators may be Child Welfare staff or contracted providers. The local Child Welfare office maintains a current list of approved and/or contract facilitators.

Facilitator role:

I. Coordinate with the caseworker to communicate the purpose of the meeting to participants and describe how the meeting will proceed, including ground rules.

II. Conduct each meeting in a respectful manner that promotes and encourages the participation of each person attending.

III. During the meeting, guide participants to:
   A. Share all concerns and recommendations for reducing, eliminating or managing the safety threats and increasing the family’s ability to protect the child. Some participants may need help to phrase these in a way that focuses on the children’s and parents’ needs. Using the language of “concerns” often reduces defensive attitudes and helps move the meeting toward positive action. Recommendations for change should describe what needs to exist to meet the children’s needs. These often flow out of the concerns previously stated.
   B. After the group has heard all recommendations, ask members to focus on areas of agreement and recommend actions for the family and service providers.

IV. Document agreement on decisions and actions to be taken.

V. Document areas where the group did not agree.

VI. Schedule subsequent meeting(s) when appropriate.

Facilitator qualifications:

I. Has completed Meeting Facilitator training.

II. Is experienced as a team member in Oregon family decision-making meetings.

III. Knowledgeable about Child Welfare laws, policies and procedures.

IV. Able to routinely screen for issues of family violence that may require separate meetings for each legal parent or exclusion of a participant that may put others at risk.

V. Skilled in basic engagement and meeting facilitation.

VI. Able to be objective and decline to facilitate whenever objectivity cannot be maintained.

Accommodations: The facilitator, in conjunction with the caseworker, and using local Child Welfare office protocols, arranges for:

I. A translator when necessary.
II. An interpreter for hearing-impaired clients.

III. An advocate for a client with mental illness or developmental delays.

IV. Site access.
Chapter 4

Appendix 4.11: Domestic violence and sexual abuse considerations
Domestic violence and sexual abuse considerations

The caseworker must consider domestic violence and sexual abuse issues when planning a meeting. Meetings are for the care and protection of children and not to confront batterers and child sexual offenders. A combination of group therapy and court intervention are often necessary to effectively stop these behaviors. However, persons who demonstrate these behaviors are often also parents and should be able to offer their recommendations for their children’s care.

Family members may attend a scheduled meeting unless the caseworker determines the family member may threaten or place other participants at risk. For example, a family member who is violent, unpredictable or abusive or is an alleged perpetrator of sexual abuse, domestic violence or severe physical assaults will be excluded from a meeting.

While it is best if all parties participate as equals in a meeting, persons under threat of harm due to domestic violence or other covert forms of abuse cannot equally participate in meetings without protection and support from other family members. It is also important that family members are present who will hold abusers accountable.

We do not advise child sexual abuse victims to attend meetings if the meeting includes the offender. Even reading a letter from the offender may be a disturbing experience. For further information, refer to the issues to be resolved below:

I. Ensure that the meeting facilitator and the caseworker have skills and strategies to recognize symptoms of domestic violence in families.

II. Assess the level of risk both within the larger family system and for individual participants.

III. Clarify the purpose of the meeting and emphasize the highest priority of child safety.

The caseworker considers the following questions prior to recommending an exception to conducting a required meeting when domestic violence is a consideration:

I. Can someone identify the pattern of power and control?

II. Is sufficient information available to accurately assess risk?

III. Is the family a closed system with possible major secrets?

IV. Who will hold the batterer accountable? Is legal leverage, such as a parole officer or the court, available?

V. Who will support the child victim?

VI. Who will support the adult victim?

VII. Are there effective strategies for engaging and empowering the abused persons before and during the meeting?

VIII. How will hidden intimidation be identified and managed?

IX. Should the batterer attend the meeting and fully participate? Should a separate meeting be held with the batterer?

X. Has the abused person been able to prepare potential plans before a meeting, rather than feeling pressured to agree at a meeting to a plan that might compromise the person's or the child's safety?

XI. Can adequate safety measures be devised given the level of risk in the family?

XII. What are the potential effects of excluding an unrelated (no children in common) partner?

XIII. What are the necessary safety plans and follow-up after the meeting?

The caseworker excludes the alleged perpetrator when previous history or current assessment indicates a risk of violence by a parent or when contact is prohibited. Family members may be told not to attend the meeting. The caseworker can arrange for input through written information, consultation before the meeting or by phone if appropriate.

Tip

Individuals with restraining orders or “No Contact” orders will not be included in family meetings if their participation would violate these orders.

Appendix 4.12: 90-Day Staffing Supervisor Guide
90-day Staffing:

Intentional Contact

Review the following:

Safety: Children are protected

Safety threats: Reduced? Mitigated? How?
Safety Plan: Is it currently managing safety? In home? Out of home? Least restrictive plan? Changes?
Protective capacities: Describe strengths and observable behaviors. How have they changed? What is their willingness to change? Barriers? What are service providers reporting?
Family Engagement: Parents? Child? Tribe? Extended family/natural supports? Other ways to enhance engagement?
Documents for Review: Safety Plan, Action Agreements, Case Plan

Permanency: Children have stability & permanency in their living situations

Current Placement: Stability? Most appropriate? Tribal placement preferences? Least restrictive? Familial, sibling, community, cultural, religious connections for child?
Visitation: Can it be increased? Least intrusive? Can we include additional SSPs? Siblings?
Conditions for Return: Met? Progress? How or how not? Reunification planning?
Expected Outcomes: Status? Changes in parent thoughts, behaviors, emotions? Observable?
Reports/perceptions of parents? Reports/perceptions of service providers?
Services: Parents? Child/youth? Changes or additions? Equitable? Any unmet needs?
Concurrent Planning: 15 of 22 months? Relative engagement? Legal parties? LAS staffing? Committees?
Documents for Review: Case Plan, Court orders, CRB findings, Father’s Questionnaire, ICWA, Relative search

Well Being: Families have an enhanced capacity to provide for their children’s needs

Substitute Care Provider: Relationship between provider and child? Worker relationship with substitute care provider? Are provider’s needs met? Support? Respite? Is provider meeting child’s needs?
Safety in Placement: Out-of-home care assessments? CAS? Placement Support Plan?
Education: Contact with school? School functioning? IEP? 504?
Medical: Contact with medical provider? General health? Exceptional needs? Medications (logs)? Parents attending appointments?
Mental Health: Diagnoses? Counseling? Contact with mental health provider? Psychotropic medications (approvals and medication logs)? Impact of medication on youth?
Documents for Review: Case Plan, CANS, Supervision Plan, Placement Support Plan
The 90-day staffing should result in decisions regarding the direction of the Case Plan.

Possible decisions at this staffing:
- Correcting the plan to ensure time is not wasted on a flawed strategy;
- Reunification of the children and family with an in-home safety plan;
- Considering concurrent planning;
- Changing the permanency goal; or
- Closing the case.

Consider:
- How frequently is the plan’s effectiveness evaluated by the worker?
- Is the worker focusing on behavioral change by parents/guardians or compliance?
- Do the worker’s methods for gathering information and measuring progress include all appropriate people (parents, tribes, substitute caregivers, children, service providers, etc.)?
- If there are differences of opinion on the level of progress, does the worker attempt to reconcile differences?
- Has the worker considered a lack of progress connected to:
  - A lack of parental involvement in the plan’s creation?
  - Unreasonable expectations of the parent?
  - Inaccurate identification of safety threats or needs?
  - Service providers who are not suited for the task?
  - If so, what is the plan for addressing those barriers?
- Is there a concurrent plan that is being actively pursued in the event that change is not likely in a timely way?
- Are the behaviors and conditions being measured directly related to the safety threats and diminished protective capacities?
- Is there a thoughtful distinction made between all safety threats being resolved and re-establishing an in-home safety plan in order to meet conditions for return?
- When reunification is about to happen, is there a corresponding “uptick” of casework activity to thoroughly plan, assure safety and prevent a return to foster care?

If the Case Plan is targeting the correct issues and casework practice meets the above expectations, there should be abundant information supporting casework decisions/interventions.

The caseworker should be able (or coached, if necessary) to sufficiently demonstrate reunification is warranted, or sufficiently demonstrate reasonable efforts have been made to reunify but an alternate plan for permanency is required.
Chapter 4

Appendix 4.13: Inter-County Case Responsibilities, Requirements and Oversight Procedures
Inter-county Case Responsibilities, Requirements and Oversight Procedures

The purpose of this document is to provide consistent statewide requirements that promote the best interests of the children and families the Department serves regardless of their geographical location within the state. Specifically, this procedure is meant to guide Department staff involved in cases where more than one county is providing services to a child and his/her family. This type of case work is also referred to as courtesy supervision, cross-county supervision, or inter-county case work.

The foundation of this procedure is to promote best practices among counties by approaching each situation in a collaborative and respectful manner and with an understanding that what may appear to be most convenient for staff may not always be in the best interests of the child and family. Following the model of parallel process, counties are encouraged to work with one another by being open-minded and practicing frequent communication. Professional courtesies should be extended and reciprocated.

It is also important to consider how the CORE Values are reflected in this area of practice. The rules and requirements for practice are not different for inter-county case work. Our efforts should reflect and affirm the following:

- Child safety is the responsibility of all Child Welfare. Child safety, not jurisdiction, is the primary focus for any request.
- Individuals being served by Child Welfare are being served by ALL of Child Welfare, not just by a specific local office or district. Equity of service requires equitable treatment of individuals regardless of location.

CPS Assessments and Interviews

Assignment

CPS assessments must be assigned and completed by the county in which the child resides. The child’s residence is determined by where the child and his/her family are physically residing. This may include shelters, motels, case-managed housing, or other temporary housing. When a family does not have a stable residence, the motel or shelter where the family is staying will be treated as the residence, even though it is temporary. When the family has a stable residence but is temporarily staying elsewhere, the CPS assessment will be assigned and completed where the residence is located.

When a child is temporarily staying outside the family home, residence will not be defined by the child’s short-term visit location or placements designed to be short term (e.g. hospitalizations, sub-acute care, or stabilization centers). When the child/young adult is temporarily placed in a setting such as these, and the alleged abuse/neglect has occurred in the familial setting, the CPS assessment will be assigned and completed where the family resides. It is recognized that initial contact with the child/young adult may need to occur in the county in which the child is temporarily located, and this initial contact should be coordinated between the offices.

The exception to assigning the CPS assessment in the county where the child resides is when the abuse is alleged to have occurred in a substitute care setting. If child abuse is alleged involving a child-caring agency, licensed group home or certified foster home, the CPS assessment must be assigned in the county where the abuse occurred.
Changes to CPS Assessment Assignments

When it is learned that the residence of the child has been inaccurately identified or a child is residing at a new address, reassignment of the CPS assessment must be considered, but meeting the initial contact timelines must be prioritized. Whichever local office is able to meet the timelines most efficiently to assess child safety should make the initial contacts. Collaboration may be needed between the local offices to make those initial contacts so communications should be timely. After initial contacts have been completed, and child safety assured, then discussion about which local office will complete the CPS assessment can occur. The CPS assessment will be completed by the local office where the child resides (as described above).

If a child moves to a different county during a CPS assessment, the assigned county continues with and completes the CPS assessment, requesting courtesy interviews as needed. If it is determined a child is unsafe at the conclusion of the CPS assessment, discussion about the filing of a dependency petition in the new county of residence must occur between the two counties and may include the DDA or AAG, as warranted. If appropriate, a courtesy interview may be requested; however, the original assigned caseworker is responsible for completing the CPS assessment.

If a mother of a child in ODHS custody is placed in a residential treatment facility and she has a new baby, the county with the open case will assess and plan for that new baby with the assistance of the county in which the residential treatment program is located.

If there is a referral assigned to assess the safety of a new baby on an open case (except residential treatment) or if there is a new CPS referral on an open case (court involved, nonlegal cooperative, FSS, etc.), the county in which the child resides will complete the new CPS assessment with the expectation of partnering with the open case county for case history and family engagement, as appropriate.

CPS Courtesy Work

- Courtesy work may be requested by another county if CPS assessment participants or homes requiring observation are more than 30 miles away from the requesting county and the other county’s branch office is closer to the family. See the section Making a Request for Inter-County Casework below.

- Rule and procedure apply to courtesy cases the same as any other case. Unless otherwise agreed upon by both local offices, when a request for a specific activity is received, it is with the understanding that the activity requested will be conducted as required by rule and procedure. For example, initial contacts with a child should include assessment of the home environment(s) — including sleep environments — and the gathering of sufficient information about the family conditions and functioning to determine if present or impending danger safety threats exist (see OAR 413-015-0420, 413-015-0422, and Chapter 3, Section 4: Initial contact with the family for more information).

- Initial contacts with all required participants must be made within the assigned timelines. Initial contact must be prioritized over determinations about jurisdiction or who will complete the CPS assessment. If the timelines are missed, initial contacts are still required to be made as soon as possible.

- Whenever practicable, the CPS worker must interview both parents and caregivers in person. All adults living in the home should be provided with written notice that a criminal records check may be conducted on them. Unless there is an immediate safety concern, the criminal records check will be conducted by the primary worker.
• A courtesy worker should be prepared to address any present or impending danger safety threat that is identified during their contact.

• The courtesy CPS worker will be assigned as a secondary to the case. The CPS worker completing the report is responsible for the final product and decisions regarding the case.

• The caseworker who gathers information or completes an interview or contact documents their work in OR-Kids. CPS assessment activities are entered by the caseworker who performed the activity. Information gathered by the primary or courtesy worker is to be documented into the six domains as appropriate.

• The CPS worker must notify the parent or caregivers the same day the child interview occurs unless there is a specific reason that same day notification could make a child or adult unsafe. The CPS worker must document supervisory approval and an explanation for a one-day extension in OR-Kids. The primary worker is responsible for these notifications and documentation unless specifically outlined and agreed upon by both primary and courtesy worker.

• After courtesy contacts have been made, the courtesy CPS worker should immediately notify the sending county and both counties must schedule a staffing with due consideration to timeliness regarding safety issues or safety planning which may need to be addressed. The staffing should include all CPS workers and their supervisors.

  • At that staffing, jurisdiction can be determined between the counties based on where the child resides (except as otherwise indicated) if applicable. The county where the child lives will complete the CPS assessment.

  • If a change in county is required, the sending county will reassign the report to the receiving county once all activities and actions are documented within OR-Kids.

  • If other case participants live elsewhere, the county where those participants live will provide courtesy casework to those participants as needed during the CPS assessment to complete face to face contact requirements and as required to make a safety determination and engage with the family in appropriate service planning.

• The caseworker who gathers information or completes an interview or contact documents their work in OR-Kids. CPS assessment activities are entered by the caseworker who performed the activity. Information gathered by the primary or courtesy worker is to be documented into the six domains as appropriate.

• The CPS worker completing the report is responsible for the final product and decisions regarding the case.

Cross-County Case Supervision

Cross-county case supervision refers to when one or more counties is providing ongoing case management services for a county who holds primary jurisdiction over the case.

Cross-county case supervision requires a joint effort between local offices and/or counties to ensure child safety and quality service. Requests should, when possible, occur prior to placement of the child or family’s move to the receiving county. Cross-county case supervision may be requested by another county under the following circumstances:

• If the family’s residence is more than approximately 30 driving miles away from the requesting county, the other county’s branch office is closer to the family, and the family will need services identified within the receiving county; or

- If the family’s residence is more than approximately 70 miles away from the requesting county, the other county’s branch office is closer to the family, and no service identification will be needed within the receiving county.

To facilitate a plan that best meets the needs of the child and family, all information must be shared and documented in OR-Kids in a timely manner. Responsibilities are as follows:

- The sending county will:
  - Verify that the information that supports working with the child and family is scanned into or is otherwise available in OR-Kids. This includes the safety plan, current family plan, current action agreement, current petition and court order and any other relevant information, such as evaluations and medical records.
  - Ensure the supervisor of the sending caseworker has reviewed and authorized the request. Send an email to the receiving branch’s inter-county case services request email address requesting cross-county case supervision prior to placement of the child. For residential treatment cases, the proposed plan for after-care should be included in the request when available.
  - If a child has been placed in the receiving county on an emergency basis, the sending county will notify the receiving county within one business day.
  - Retain case planning responsibility.
  - If applicable, determine which caseworker will be present at treatment reviews, court hearings and other relevant proceedings with an understanding that the sending caseworker will, at minimum, participate by phone.
  - The sending county must document the request in a case note in OR-Kids within one business day.

- The receiving county will:
  - Document receipt of the request in OR-Kids case notes within one business day.
  - Notify sending branch of receipt of request within two business days of the receipt of the request.
  - Verify and review documents in OR-Kids. The assigned caseworker must document in an OR-Kids case note that review of the information occurred. Documentation must clearly demonstrate a thorough review of Department history and include a short analysis of decision making leading up to the request and indicate whether the receiving branch agrees with previous decision making. If the receiving branch does not agree with previous decision making, a staffing comprised of staff from both the sending and receiving local offices must be scheduled within one business day to discuss and resolve any concerns. The staffing must include the caseworker, the caseworker’s supervisor, and the program manager or designee from both local offices. The staffing and outcome must be clearly documented in a case note in OR-Kids by the receiving branch in a timely manner.

Initiate communication with the sending branch within seven calendar days of the receipt of the request. In cases where active efforts apply, communication should occur within three calendar days. This communication should include:
• Identification of the assigned caseworker and active efforts worker.

• Clarification of roles and responsibilities.

• Discussion and agreement on the needed frequency of communication among caseworkers.

• Development of a plan to provide court-ordered services by the receiving branch.

• If applicable, determination of which caseworker will be present at treatment reviews, court hearings and other relevant proceedings with an understanding that the sending caseworker will, at minimum, participate by phone.

• Discussion about the roles and responsibilities of each caseworker should the child or young adult go missing.

• Once the child has been placed in the receiving county, the caseworker will have face-to-face contact with the child within five business days. If a child has been placed on an emergency basis, the receiving county will have face-to-face contact with the child within five calendar days.

• Ensure children and families will receive services consistent with those being provided in the receiving branch. Those include both contracted (Strengthening, Preserving and Reunifying Families; In-Home Safety and Reunification Services; etc.) and noncontracted services (System of Care, Foster Care Prevention, etc.), which will be provided by the receiving branch based on availability in their area. In addition, Central Office-based contracted services (Independent Living Program, Behavioral Rehabilitation Services, etc.) will be made available to the child and family.

• Assume responsibility for face-to-face contact and documentation of these contacts for all children and parents receiving cross-county case supervision. Documentation of face-to-face contacts must clearly demonstrate how safety has been ensured.

• If the caseworker is unable to locate the child and/or parent receiving cross-county case services, communication to the sending branch must include detailed narration regarding the number of attempts and what steps were taken to locate the family.

• All other responsibilities will be negotiated as necessary.

Children Placed In a Child Caring Agency

Cases will be accepted for cross-county case supervision when the situation meets the criteria established under (1) and (2) below and will comply with all of the expectations listed for both the sending and receiving branch under the Cross-County Case Supervision section.

• Seventy miles (per diem guideline) workstation to placement, and

• Placement anticipated to be longer than 90 days.

An exception can be made to (2) if the distance is more than 100 miles between workstation and placement.

Out-of-County Placements
Notification of intent to place children out of county shall occur prior to placement, unless there is an emergency, in which case notification shall occur the next business day. Notification must be made to the receiving branch’s inter-county case services request email address. This includes placements with biological parents of children who are in the care and custody of the Department.

To coordinate services for the child and/or family, information required for cross-county case supervision must be immediately available in OR-Kids. If the receiving branch believes the needs of the child, parents and/or foster parents are not being met, the receiving county reserves the right to require cross-county case supervision regarding the availability of services in the area. In situations involving Department-certified foster homes, the certifier of that home, in conjunction with his/her supervisor, can deny placement with good cause. All information must be thoroughly documented in an OR-Kids case note.

When a Child or Young Adult is Missing

The rules and procedures in place for when a child or young adult is missing (OAR 413-080-0053 and Chapter 4, Section 18: Missing Children and Young Adults) apply for a child on a case receiving courtesy supervision. In order to ensure the child or young adult is found, timely communication and collaboration between the two local offices is essential.

The caseworker who first learns the child or young adult is missing will immediately follow the reporting and notification procedures outlined in Chapter 4, Section 18: Missing children and young adults. In addition to the notifications listed in procedure, the caseworker will also notify the caseworker and supervisor of the local office who share the courtesy case.

After completing the reporting and notification requirements, the caseworker who completed the reporting and notifications must coordinate an urgent staffing with the caseworkers and supervisors from both local offices. Both local offices must attend the required staffing. The discussion will include who will be responsible for completing the other requirements outlined in Chapter 4, Section 18: Missing children and young adults and/or how those responsibilities may be shared. If there is not agreement on responsibilities the program managers should discuss. If the program managers are unable to come to an agreement they will consult with the Safety or Reunification program manager.

Transfer of Jurisdiction

Transfer of jurisdiction is sometimes necessary to meet the needs of the children and families we serve. In order to ensure the safety of the child and continuity of services, the following criteria have been established:

- Prior to requesting the court send or accept a case for transfer of jurisdiction, the sending branch will request and have cross-county case supervision in place for at least six months. The receiving branch may notify the sending branch of its willingness to accept transfer of jurisdiction at any time.
  - EXCEPTION to above: Transfer of jurisdiction may be requested without cross-county case supervision or the six-month waiting period in cases where it is clearly in the best interest of the child and supportive of achieving the permanent plan for the child. For example, a current or recent TPR case in the receiving county.
  - If the court initiates this process without ODHS consultation, a manager must be notified immediately.
Within one business day, the manager must take action to address any concerns regarding the court-ordered transfer of jurisdiction and thoroughly document steps taken in a case note in OR-Kids. As ensuring child safety is critical, the receiving branch maintains the responsibility of timely face-to-face contact and must follow all steps outlined in this procedure.

- Sending branch retains case planning responsibility until the legal case has been received and accepted in the receiving county and its court.
- If a nonlegal cooperative case exists, and it is determined safety threats can no longer be managed without court involvement and a petition must be filed, the receiving county will have sending county representation at initial court proceedings in the receiving county, if requested, with regard to availability of services in the area.

Out-of-County Foster/Adoption Home Studies

- The initial discussion with the potential applicant (including sibling planning issues, a brief discussion about certification and adoption standards, and that the assessment process includes criminal and child welfare background checks as well as a full assessment of the family and home environment); and
- An initial check of databases (OR-Kids, IIS, OJIN/eCourt).

If after conducting an assessment or home study, the receiving branch determines the family cannot be approved, the receiving branch will notify the requesting branch prior to providing notification to the applicant and an explanation of the withdrawal process of their application versus denial.

Placements out of county are subject to the approval of the receiving branch. The counties can jointly agree to follow the Foster Home Certification rule (OAR 413-200-0260 to 0424) that allows the sending county certifier to enter the receiving county for the purpose of completing the certification. This exception requires district manager approval from the receiving county.

Dual-County Cases

Situations may occur where new allegations arise or a family seeks services in a new county of residence. This may include an older child in permanent foster county. If there is no plan for reunification and no current involvement between the child and the family, a separate case plan with the same case number/name should be opened and shared between counties. In situations of co-managing cases, local offices should determine in partnership when making changes in OR-Kids primary and secondary caseworker designation.

Required Staffings and Documentation

Required staffings and documentation involving all inter-county case services include:

- A staffing that includes caseworkers and supervisors from both sending and receiving local offices at the following critical junctures:
  - At initiation of cross-county case supervision, once a caseworker has been assigned.
  - Upon any changes or disruptions in placement of child. If the child is moved after hours or on an emergency basis, a staffing must occur the next business day. Documentation of the staffing must include the following:

- Identification of any health and medical, mental health, educational or other concerns for the child. This includes documentation of any necessary follow-up required or other appointments previously scheduled or requiring scheduling.
- Identification of any prescription or over-the-counter medications taken by the child and confirmation the medications were given to the appropriate caretaker with instructions on how to administer, whom to contact for clarification, and when a review of medication needs to occur.
- Verification medication logs were provided and explained to the caretaker.
- Plan to address educational and other needs as necessary.
- Review of any CANS assessment and supervision plan as applicable.
- Upon relocation of any other member of the family receiving cross-county case supervision services from the receiving county.
- In advance of all court hearings at a time agreed to by both receiving and sending counties.
- Upon conclusion of the cross county-case supervision.

- All written communication between local offices must include the assigned caseworkers and supervisors to ensure safety of the child and family is not overlooked in the event of unexpected or otherwise scheduled staff absence.

Dispute Resolution

Disputes that may arise in any sections within this procedure that are unable to be resolved at the supervisory level should be staffed with the program manager from each county, the involved supervisors, and caseworkers, as appropriate. If the dispute still cannot be resolved, it will then be staffed with the respective district managers and the applicable Central Office program manager.

Making a Request for Inter-County Case Work

In an effort to streamline the process by which inter-county case work is conducted, courtesy email inboxes have been created in each county. To make a request for case work to be done in another county based on the guidelines outlined above, an email must be sent to courtesy email inbox for the county in which the case work will be performed (see the list of email inboxes in the next section).

To ensure a timely response to requests, the emails requesting courtesy case work should be drafted as follows:

- Be specific in the subject Line. Requests for courtesy work need to be specific as to the type of case work needed so the correct program area can respond, so in the subject line, type one of the following:
  - Request for Courtesy: CPS
  - Request for Courtesy: Permanency
  - Request for Courtesy: Certification

- Indicate urgency. If the request is urgent or time sensitive, in addition to marking the email as “High Importance,” add the word “Urgent” at the beginning of the subject line as follows:

- Urgent Request for Courtesy: CPS
- Urgent Request for Courtesy: Permanency
- Urgent Request for Courtesy: Certification

Provide necessary information. The receiving county needs information in order to process the request. Use the following template in the email narrative:

- Case information (case number, case name, date of the report, response timeline)
- Contact information for the worker and supervisor (full names, cell phone numbers)
- Specific courtesy work requested
  - Initial contacts with: (identify which participants, provide contact information)
  - Face-to-face contacts with: (identify which participants, provide contact information)
  - Observation of (other than as required at initial contact): (provide information describing what needs to be observed, with specifics as needed)
  - Service referrals to... for...: (identify which participants, what type of service)
  - Certification or Adoptive Home Study services for: (provide names, dates of birth, address, and contact information for the family to be studied)
  - Any other additional information as needed to best assess the safety and well-being of the child and family.

Email Addresses for Inter-County Case Services Requests

Email boxes for each county have been set up to receive requests for inter-county case work. At least two staff members from each program area should have access to the group inbox to ensure timely responses to requests in the event one staff member is not working when a request is received. Districts highlighted in blue have more than one mailbox, so make sure you are routing your request to the correct local office.

Responses to Requests

Requests are time sensitive and may need an immediate response. The following timelines are to be used when a request for inter-county case work has been requested to ensure timelines can be met:

- For a non-urgent request, the receiving county must acknowledge the receipt of the request within 2 business days.

- For an urgent request, the receiving county must email a response on the same business day. If the urgent request is sent after regular business hours, the response must be sent before noon the following business day.

- The response must include the name and phone number of the person currently available to be contacted regarding the request.

- Documentation of sending/receiving requests will be consistent for all requests:
  - The sending county must document the request in a case note in OR-Kids within one business day.
  - The receiving county must document the receipt of the request in a case note in OR-Kids within one business day.

- The receiving county must make diligent efforts to meet the assigned timelines. If the assigned timeline has passed, diligent efforts must continue to until contacts have been completed.
Chapter 4

Appendix 4.14: International travel procedures for children in ODHS substitute care for the purpose of adoption
International travel procedures for children in ODHS substitute care for the purpose of adoption

This document outlines the procedures to follow when children in the custody of ODHS require international travel to be adopted. Refer to OARs 413-020-0140 and 413-020-0150 for more information on authorizations needed for international travel. Travel cannot occur until all the required steps have been taken to have the adoptive family selected at a Central Office Adoption Selection Committee and a contract or supervision agreement has been put in place with the receiving country.

When adult(s) are planning to travel with a child on ODHS’s behalf (including foster parents) to a country outside the USA, the caseworker needs to do the following:

I. Complete an Out of State Travel Authorization form (CF 1293) for each adult and have the district manager or designee sign it.

II. Complete a Child’s Consent to Travel form (CF 0002) and have all staff on the form up to the district manager sign it.

III. Complete the Out of Country Travel Exception Memo (CF 0002a) and attach any supporting documents such as a tentative itinerary from Corporate Travel.

IV. Verify with the travel agency or on https://travel.state.gov/content/travel/en/international-travel.html if any immunization or medical interventions are required or recommended.

V. For Hague Convention adoptive placements, the worker must have a Hague Custody Declaration issued by the United States Department of State acting as the central authority for this country for the child to pass through immigration and customs and enter the country of placement.

VI. Email the signed Out-of-State Authorization form (CF 1293), Child’s Consent to Travel form (CF 0002) and (CF 0002a), and (if appropriate) Hague Custody Declaration to CW.OutofCountryTravel@dhsoha.state.or.us.

VII. If more than one employee will accompany the child(ren), the Out of Country Travel Exception Memo must include written documentation to support the additional person. (Similar criteria as that used by ICPC will be considered; e.g., safety and health risks).

VIII. The packet of information is reviewed and forwarded to the field administrator for final authorization. When the office grants authorization, Field Operations will supply the caseworker with a travel authorization number and carbon copy the international case consultant assisting in this case. These steps can take up to 14 working days.

IX. After receiving ODHS authorization to travel, obtain a court order from the court having jurisdiction of the child, granting permission for the child to travel.

The caseworker seeks help from an assistant attorney general with the Oregon Department of Justice to obtain this court order. The court order must be translated into the language of the country where the child is traveling. Both copies of the order (English and foreign language) must be presented to the court along with an official certificate of translation (in both English and the foreign language). See ORS 1.150(2); pleading may be submitted in English and accompanied by a translation into a foreign language certified by the translator to be a true and accurate translation). The caseworker must always use ODHS-approved translators to translate the court orders. Complete a CF 0010 A to request translation.

I. Keep a copy of the entire out-of-country packet in the child’s case file for audit purposes.

II. When a department employee is traveling out of the country, they should request international phone calling capability. To do this, complete the ODHS 1496 to add international calling to their current WCD (wireless communication devise); or. through contacting the ODHS Telecom statewide coordinator at 503-945-6787 and requesting an international calling card.

Travel to Mexico

If there are any problems, the contact in Mexico is:

I. Office of the Secretary of Foreign Affairs at (5) 782-4221.

OR

II. Call the chancellor at the Mexican Consulate Office in Portland Oregon; he can direct you or advise you on what to do or who to contact: 503-274-1442 x 14.

OR

IV. Or call the International Case Consultant in Central Office at 503-947-5102.

Documents required for travel/placement

Agency staff

I. A passport

II. ODHS ID

III. Medical/immunization records (if appropriate).

Child

I. Passport application must be made for the child after the child is legally free and in the permanent custody of the state of Oregon,

II. Medical/immunization records (if appropriate),

III. Court order that establishes jurisdiction, and

IV. Hague Custody Declaration, if placement is for adoption.

In addition, the Mexican government recognizes and accepts documents that are Apostilled. Apostille is a certificate with the state seal adhered that verifies the notary of the document is in good standing with the state and can notarize documents. For this process, contact the Secretary of State’s Office, Corporation Division, Attn.: Notary, 255 Capital St.
NE Suite 151, Salem, OR 97310; phone number 503-986-2593. Call before sending the documents to learn the cost of the process, who to direct them to, what documents can be Apostilled and the requirements. Documents must be notarized before having a document Apostilled.

If a Court Commitment Order is used that has not been Apostilled, have the court order certified with a raised seal and the signature in an ink color other than black. This will increase the chance the document is seen as “official.”
Chapter 5
Services to Children

Section 1: Overview: Services to children
Overview: Services to children

Oregon’s child welfare system focuses on child safety and urgency of planning to meet the individual child’s needs for permanency and well-being. Case planning includes identifying the specific services needed to meet each child’s needs. Consider all information gathered during both the child safety and protective capacity assessments. Doing so helps develop a focused, systematic, time-limited plan to meet the child’s needs. You will work in partnership with:

I. The family,
II. Other key persons, and
III. Agencies and systems involved with the child.

Case management of services to children is a complex task, but has many benefits:

I. Thoughtful case management is critical to address the safety and well-being of a child. This is especially true when selecting a substitute caregiver appropriate to the child’s needs.
II. Case management models a method of problem solving that may be used by a child and their family.
III. Case management helps a child understand decisions that result in:
   A. Family reunification, or
   B. Another permanent plan.
IV. Case management improves communication between the:
   A. Caseworker,
   B. Substitute caregiver,
   C. Families,
   D. Supervisor,
   E. Peers,
   F. Other providers, and
   G. The courts.

In the decision-making process, always consider:

I. A child’s safety,
II. Permanency, and
III. Well-being.

Delivery of services to children is critical in achieving positive outcomes for Oregon’s children. Successful intervention in the lives of abused and neglected children requires concurrent involvement of many different systems:

I. The child and family,
II. Child welfare,
III. The court,
IV. Education,
V. Medical and mental health professionals,
VI. Attorneys,
VII. CASAs, and
VIII. Other local agencies that serve children and families.

You and other child welfare staff and service providers provide services to children. Service providers include:

I. The child’s substitute caregiver,
II. School,
III. Medical and mental health professionals, and
IV. Other community agencies.

Federal law, state statute and administrative rule provide the framework for providing and monitoring specific services for a child. These include:

I. The least restrictive appropriate placement that is in the child’s best interests,
II. Frequent caseworker contact,
III. Frequent family visitation,
IV. Sibling contact
V. Appropriate education,
VI. Physical and mental health care,
VII. Addressing the child’s identified needs, and VIII. Providing services to support the transition to adulthood.

Services are provided with sensitivity to a child’s culture and ethnicity.

You are responsible for:

I. Coordinating the systematic delivery of services to provide meaningful intervention and support, and
II. Not increasing a child’s isolation or sense of victimization.

Well-planned and coordinated service delivery increases the likelihood of achieving positive outcomes.

These procedures are written for all children and young adults served by Child Welfare staff. Each procedure describes:

I. The unique actions required when ODHS has legal custody of the child,
II. Any special actions required for young adults 18 through 20 years who remain in child welfare’s legal custody, and
III. Expectations for monitoring the child’s needs when the family retains legal custody of the child.

There are also procedures for unique activities when a child is placed through a.

IV. Voluntary Placement Agreement, or
V. Voluntary Custody Agreement.
Chapter 5

Section 2: Placement Services Generally
Placement Services Generally

The decision to place a child in out-of-home care is a critical safety decision. It may have life-changing effects on a child.

Placing a child in substitute care is always difficult. Still, do your best to foster an environment that will:

   I. Stabilize a child and family, and
   II. Strengthen parental protective capacity, so a child can return home.

Placement should:

   I. Help a child and family resolve problems,
   II. Assist parents in enhancing their protective capacity, and
   III. Progress toward permanency for a child.

If a child cannot return home, substitute care can provide a safe and nurturing environment while a permanent placement is found.

Child welfare must make active efforts to reduce the risk of child abuse and neglect. Also, to ensure there is a legal basis for removal before removal of a child from their home.

A child should be placed in substitute care only when criteria for an in-home ongoing safety plan cannot be met.

A child should be placed in substitute care as a last resort. Refer to Chapter 4, “Managing child safety in and out of home,” for detailed procedures on developing an ongoing safety plan. Refer to Chapter 9, “Work with the Courts and External Partners,” for detailed procedures on court actions.

Types of substitute care and the services each provides

The following types of substitute care are listed from the least to most restrictive.

Always select the least restrictive substitute care option able to meet the child’s needs for safety and well-being.

Family foster care

Includes:

   I. Relative caregivers or other adults known to the child,
   II. Able to be certified by child welfare, and
   III. Unrelated foster parents.

Consider family foster care for a child with normal or special developmental needs or problems who can be cared for and maintained in a regular family setting. Family foster care means the child is living with a family who has been or can be certified through child welfare. Most children can be cared for in a family foster care setting. The caregiver can be:

   I. A relative,
   II. Another adult known to the child,
III. A foster family unknown to the child.

Within this category of substitute care, there are preferences listed below, starting with the first preference.

I. The relative is the first choice for a child's placement when:
   A. There is a relative available to provide substitute care, and
   B. The relative can be certified by the department.

II. An adult who has a caregiver relationship with a child is the next in order of placement preference. This type of relationship could be with a relative or a non-relative.

As defined in OAR 413-070-0600 to OAR 413-070-0645, Placement Matching, “Caregiver relationship” means a relationship between a person and a child that has existed:

I. For the 12 months immediately preceding the initiation of a dependency proceeding;

II. For at least 12 months during a dependency proceeding; or

III. For half of the child’s life, if the child is less than six months of age, and

IV. The person had physical custody of the child or resided in the same household as the child.

V. The person provided the child daily the love, nurturing and other necessities to meet the child’s psychological and physical needs, and

VI. The child depended on the relationship to meet the child's needs.

“Caregiver relationship” does not include a relationship between a child and a person who is an unrelated foster parent of the child unless the relationship continued for a period of at least 12 consecutive months.

I. An unrelated person is next in order of preference of family foster care options, if the person is someone:
   A. Who the child has significant attachment to, or
   B. Who has significant attachment to the child, and
   C. Who can be certified by the department.

II. Fourth in the sequence of family foster care options is an unrelated adult unknown to the child, what traditionally is considered family foster care.

Professional and emergency shelter care

Consider professional and emergency shelter care when:

I. The child needs more structure and supervision than available in regular family foster care, or

II. When regular foster care is unavailable or inappropriate due to the child’s needs or behaviors.

Therapeutic foster care (Behavior Rehabilitation Services)

Consider therapeutic foster care when:
I. The child’s needs for these cannot be managed in a less structured and less restrictive environment:
   A. Behavioral intervention,
   B. Counseling, and
   C. Skill-building services.

Psychiatric residential treatment

Consider psychiatric residential treatment when:

I. The child needs a treatment environment to manage behavioral problems that cannot be managed in a family setting in the community.

Initial substitute care placement

Procedure

To determine a child’s immediate needs when an out-of-home ongoing safety plan is a required, you must:

Involve the child’s parents and, when developmentally appropriate, the child in identifying substitute care placement resources whenever possible.

Whenever a child who needs substitute care is diagnosed with HIV or AIDS, also refer to section 10 of this chapter for detailed procedures to follow in planning and selecting a substitute caregiver.

Assess the ability of each potential substitute caregiver to provide safety for the child.

Identify potential substitute care placements in order of preference:

I. A relative who can and will meet the child’s needs for safety and who can be certified by child welfare.

II. A person who has a caregiver relationship with the child and can be certified by child welfare.

III. An unrelated person:
   A. Who the child has significant attachment to, or
   B. Who has significant attachment to the child, and
   C. Who can be certified by child welfare

IV. A foster parent who is certified, or

V. A provider who has been licensed by child welfare.

VI. Identify which person has the closest existing personal relationship with the child if more than one person requests to have the child placed with them.

Consider whether the substitute care placement:

I. Can provide safety for the child;

II. Is willing to cooperate with any restrictions placed on contact between the child and others;
III. Can prevent anyone’s influence on the child regarding the allegations of the case;

IV. Can support Child Welfare’s efforts to implement the permanent plan for the child;

V. Can keep siblings together; and

VI. Can meet the child’s physical, emotional and educational needs. This includes the child’s need to continue in the same school or educational placement.

VII. Can manage the child’s supervision needs identified in:
   A. Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths (CANS) screening,
   B. Other current assessments, or
   C. Evaluations of the child.

Ensure that the substitute care placement to meet the child’s needs is:

   I. The most home-like, and

   II. Least restrictive available.

Ensure that the following are not a consideration when assessing a substitute care placement for a child:

   I. Race,

   II. Color,

   III. Culture, or

   IV. National origin.

If the child is an Indian or refugee child, follow:

   I. OAR 413-070-0300 to 0380 and OAR Chapter 413, division 115 regarding placement preferences, and

   II. Detailed procedures in this chapter about placement.

   III.

Involve the child’s family

Both federal and state laws place strong emphasis on maintaining continuity of family relationships and connections within the child’s community whenever appropriate.

Even in an emergency, involve the family as much as possible in making safety-related decisions regarding a child’s substitute care placement.

Procedure

Treat parents respectfully. Include them in placement decision-making processes. Also, include them in the Family Engagement Meetings when developing the ongoing safety plan (see Chapter 4, Section 6). Even if parents and children disagree with the placement decision (which, of course, many do), it is important for them to understand the reason for placement is to manage a child’s safety.

Focus on maintaining family and relative ties. This includes the relationships of the child with:

I. Parents,

II. Siblings,

III. Grandparents,

IV. Aunts,

V. Uncles,

VI. Cousins, and

VII. Family friends who are viewed as part of the family.

Also focus on maintaining those ties in substitute care placement decisions (Chapter 5) and visitation and contact arrangements (Chapters 4 and 5). Even if parental rights eventually are relinquished or terminated, the child may continue a relationship with some or all family members.

Discuss potential substitute caregivers with the family. Explain to the family the requirement that ODHS consider substitute care placements in the following order of preference:

I. A relative who can and will meet the child’s needs for safety and can be certified by Child Welfare.

II. A person who has a caregiver relationship with the child and can be certified by Child Welfare.

III. An unrelated person:
   A. Who the child has significant attachment to, or
   B. Who has significant attachment to the child, and
   C. Who can be certified by child welfare, or

IV. A foster parent who is certified or a provider who is licensed by Child Welfare.

Ask whether the family has relatives who may be able and willing to care for the child.

Ask whether there are other adults who know and are known by the child who may be able and willing to care for the child.

Work with the family to identify which person has the closest existing personal relationship with the child. If there is more than one person (relative or another adult known to the child) request to have the child placed with them.

Initiate the procedures for immediate certification of a prospective relative or other adult known to the child.

Continue to assist parents in understanding the steps you are taking to manage their child’s safety.

Match the child’s needs with a substitute caregiver’s ability

The actions you take to facilitate a substitute care placement that meets a child’s needs depends on the type of substitute care placement selected. To the extent possible, explore all the issues pertinent to a child’s substitute care placement before removal from the family home. The more knowledgeable you are of a child and their needs, including cultural considerations, the more likely the initial substitute care placement of a child will last throughout their stay in substitute care.

A child’s substitute care placement is likely the most significant service provided by child welfare and is critical to a child’s safety and well-being.

In a planned substitute care placement, consider all the issues related to a child’s needs and the substitute caregiver’s capacities.

In an emergency, when immediate substitute care placement is necessary to manage child safety, make the best initial substitute care placement decision possible in light of:

I. General knowledge of substitute care placement considerations, and

II. What is known about a child.

Procedure

Answer the following questions when an immediate substitute care placement is necessary:

I. What are the identified safety threats that require an out-of-home ongoing safety plan?

II. Does the child have any immediate mental or physical health care issues that need to be considered?

III. Have relatives been contacted and assessed?

IV. Must emergency shelter care be used while a prospective substitute caregiver can be assessed?

V. How are the parents involved in the substitute care placement process?

VI. How are the child and the substitute caregiver involved in the placement process?

VII. When placing a sibling group, can the siblings be placed together? If not, what arrangements are made for visitation and contact in the Temporary Visit and Contact Plan?

VIII. What resources are needed to support a prospective placement?

When you look to decide on substitute care for a child, consider both:

I. Individual needs of the child, and

II. Skills and abilities of the substitute caregiver.

Tip

The longer the child remains with the initial substitute caregiver:

- The more likely the child and caregiver are to become attached to each other, and

- The more difficult and problematic it will be to transfer the child to another substitute caregiver.

It is especially important to act quickly when the initial substitute care placement fails to address one or more of a child’s key needs. For example:

- A substitute care placement may be so far from the child’s biological family that visitation and reunification are adversely affected, or
- Siblings may be separated due to lack of openings in the substitute care resources available at initial placement.

Assess the child’s needs

Consider the needs of the individual child. The assessment of the child’s individual needs began during the CPS screening and assessment process. It continues when substitute care is required to manage safety either:

I. When the protective action is removal from the home, or

II. When substitute care is the least restrictive ongoing safety plan that can manage child safety.

It is important to ask the child, at a developmentally appropriate level, what they need in a substitute care setting to make them feel safe and comfortable.

Procedure

Answer the following questions to help identify the child’s substitute care placement needs as they relate to safety, permanency and well-being.

Safety

I. What unique circumstances required substitute care placement, and how do these safety issues affect the child?

II. Are there particular safety issues related to proximity to parents, siblings or family that must be considered?

III. Does the child have any identified medical or mental health treatment needs?

IV. Does the child have identified supervision needs that indicate immediate referral for a CANS screening?

V. Is the child in a special educational program?

VI. Are there other unique circumstances related to keeping the child safe?

Permanency

I. Does the CPS assessment give any indications that the child may be able return home soon?

II. Are there clear indications at this point that the child will need permanent placement other than return to parents?

III. Is the child strongly connected with relatives or other supportive adults who may serve as permanent resources?

Well-being
I. Who are the important family members and other adults in the child’s life who have provided safety and a sense of self?

II. Are there particular services available and appropriate to address the child’s needs, including cultural needs?

III. Does the child have important connections that should be considered:
   A. School,
   B. Church, or
   C. Community?

IV. Can the placement decision provide some continuity even during this crisis?

Determine whether a child has special needs

Procedure

Consider whether the assessment of this family, to date, has identified any special needs that may include, but are not limited to, the following circumstances:

I. A child has severe health impairments or developmental disabilities requiring specialized medical and physical care. Consider referring the child for a Personal Care Services Assessment.

II. A child has diagnosed educational or mental health needs and currently is receiving day or outpatient treatment.

III. A child has emotional or behavioral problems and requires extraordinary support from the substitute caregiver. Consider referring the child immediately for a CANS screening.

IV. A child has emotional or behavioral problems and needs ongoing treatment in the substitute care setting and more restrictive care.

V. A teen mother requires parental guidance for herself and assistance with learning to parent her child.

VI. A child cannot readily accept parental care and guidance.

VII. A child requires a regulated environment integrated with mental health or social treatment services and training.

Assess prospective substitute caregivers

Procedure

The following actions are required in the assessment process when a child must be placed in substitute care:

Identify potential substitute care placements in the following order of preference:

I. A relative who can and will meet the child’s needs for safety and can be certified by child welfare;
II. A person who has a caregiver relationship with the child and can be certified by child welfare;

III. An unrelated person:
   A. Who the child has significant attachment to, or
   B. Who has significant attachment to the child, and
   C. Who can be certified by child welfare; or

IV. A foster parent who is certified or a provider who is licensed by child welfare.

Identify which person has the closest existing personal relationship with the child.

Determine whether the person:

I. Can provide safety for the child;

II. Is willing to cooperate with any restrictions placed on contact between the child and others;

III. Can prevent anyone from influencing the child regarding the allegations of the case;

IV. Can support Child Welfare’s efforts to implement the permanent plan for the child; and

V. Can meet the child’s identified physical, emotional and educational needs. This includes the child’s need to continue in the same school or educational placement.

If more than one person requests to have the child placed with them, select the person who best matches the criteria outlined above.

Ensure that the out-of-home care placement meet the child’s needs that is the:

I. Most home-like, and

II. Least restrictive available.

Ensure that the following are not a consideration when assessing an out-of-home care placement for a child:

I. Race,

II. Color, or

III. Culture or national origin.

If the child is an Indian or refugee child, follow the procedures in this chapter regarding placement preferences for Indian or refugee children.

Make a placement selection

Select an initial and any subsequent placement based on:

I. The substitute caregiver’s capacity to participate in the ongoing safety plan, and

II. Meeting the safety and well-being needs of the child.
A child’s substitute care placement likely is the most significant service provided by Child Welfare. It is critical to a child’s safety and well-being.

Procedure

Consider all the information gathered during the assessment regarding:

I. Specific circumstances as they are occurring within the family;

II. Specific child’s needs;

III. The substitute caregiver’s capacity to meet the criteria when considering substitute care placement; and

IV. Available substitute care placement resources in relationship to the following statutory requirements when making a substitute care placement selection.

Safety is the top concern that guides the requirements for the care, services and treatment of a child. The ongoing safety plan participants include the substitute caregiver as a participant in managing the child’s safety.

Place a child with relatives whenever possible. Also, keep siblings in the same substitute care placement whenever possible, when it is in the best interests of the children. Federal Child and Family Services Reviews (CFSRs) have found several benefits in placements with relatives. This includes:

I. More frequent contact with parents;

II. Fewer placement disruptions;

III. Preservation of existing family connections;

IV. Continuity of care;

V. Maintenance of the family system as the child’s primary caregiver; and

VI. A continued sense of belonging, worth and history for the child.

Make efforts to reunite separated siblings in substitute care as soon as possible. In the interim, include routine contact and visitation in:

I. Temporary visit,

II. Ongoing visit, and

III. Contact plans.

Place the child in the least restrictive substitute care placement that meets the child’s safety and developmental needs. This includes the ability to maintain the child in their current school.

Look for a substitute care placement near the parents whenever:

I. It is in the child’s best interest, and

II. Safety can be maintained.
Prepare a child and family for placement

Once the decision has been made to remove a child from their home, the substitute care placement process begins. Once a specific substitute care placement is chosen, the substitute care placement process becomes concrete. Whenever possible, include the parents, child and substitute caregiver in discussing the process and encouraging input.

Procedure

Cover the following issues:

I. Determine which possessions the child should bring.
   A. Include transitional objects to which the child is especially attached such as:
      1. Blanket,
      2. Stuffed animals, or
      3. Other special toys.
      The child should bring personal clothing items. These should be marked by the substitute caregiver, so the child’s belongings are properly identified and labeled.
   B. Include items important to the child such as:
      1. Band instrument;
      2. Special club clothing, uniforms;
      3. Favorite books;
      4. Diaries;
      5. Jewelry; and
      6. Phone numbers.
   C. Do not take a child’s personal items when there is risk of contamination due to drug production in the household.

II. Develop a plan for maintaining contact between the child and the parents with a Temporary Visit and Contact Plan.
   A. Document the plan on the Temporary Visit and Contact Plan form 0831. There can be some flexibility, but the child will be less anxious if there is scheduled contact.
   B. With an established schedule of calls and visits, it is easier to talk with parents about the child’s need for contact if there are lapses in contact.

III. List the people who can have phone and face to-face contact with the child and who cannot.

IV. Describe the reasons for supervision if a child’s visits must be supervised.

V. Gather information about:
   A. The child’s medical condition,
   B. Routines,
C. Preferences,
D. Best discipline techniques for the child, and
E. How the child is soothed and similar care topics.

This is vital information for the child’s substitute caregiver and will assist in maintaining consistency in the child’s life. Record the information on the Child Welfare Child Placement Form (CF 261). Give a copy to the substitute caregiver when the child is placed in the home.

VI. Ask about values, activities and behaviors about which the parents feel strongly (e.g., church attendance, haircuts or clothing choices). Share this information with the child’s substitute caregiver.

VII. Share information with the parents about the substitute caregiver’s rules, routines and preferences. For instance, substitute caregivers usually have routines that parents need to respect, such as meal times and when they prefer no phone calls. Many treatment facilities have requirements about phone use, except in an emergency. Many also have standard visiting times and rules for signing in and out of the facility.

VIII. Give a clear message to the parents and child that the substitute care placement is for:
A. Safety, and
B. To help the family work on solutions to the problems that precipitated the child’s need for placement.

Remind the parents they have work ahead of them.

IX. Remind the substitute caregiver of their role in the ongoing safety plan and their responsibilities to:
A. Cooperate with any restrictions placed on contact between the child and others, and
B. Prevent anyone from influencing the child regarding the allegations of the case.

X. Introduce the parents to the child’s substitute caregiver whenever possible, when the substitute caregiver is not a person known to the family (e.g., not a relative or person with an ongoing relationship with the child). As an ice breaker, a structured meeting of a child’s parents and the child’s substitute caregiver can be used. It is described in Appendix 5.1.

Help a child transition to substitute care

Every child experiences an emotional response to placement in substitute care. For some, there may be a feeling of relief and anticipation of safety. For most, removal from the family’s home, no matter how dangerous and chaotic, is a frightening and traumatic time in their lives.

Procedure

I. Prepare the child for substitute care placement by explaining to the child, within the scope of their developmental level, the reasons they will stay in another home.

II. It is important to talk with the child; both verbal and nonverbal children need to hear the reasons behind what is happening to them. The child needs to hear that they are not at fault for the crisis in the family. Messages the child receives comes not only from the words spoken, but your tone and nonverbal behavior.
III. The person transporting the child, whether you or other Child Welfare staff, should talk to the child in a soothing voice. This is a very frightening time for the child.

IV. Acknowledge the child’s feelings, answer questions and provide information (as it is available and appropriate) to the child.

V. Have the child awake during the transition if possible. However brief, witnessing the transition from you to the substitute caregiver provides a measure of continuity for the child.

VI. Provide information about the next steps and introduce the substitute caregiver. These transitions, although they may be brief, are critical, as they are the linked chain of relationships back to the child’s family.

The 30-day assessment of a child’s placement

Early assessment of the appropriateness of the placement is important for several reasons:

Child Welfare is responsible for ensuring a child’s safety while in out-of-home care. The substitute caregiver selected for the child must be able to meet the child’s needs for safety and well-being.

When a substitute caregiver is struggling with a certain child, or if the mix of children in the home is challenging, it is Child Welfare’s responsibility to support the substitute caregiver.

When more information on the child’s needs becomes known, you are responsible for informing the substitute caregiver and referring the substitute caregiver to services and supports to meet the child’s needs.

Procedure

Refer to Chapter 5, section 5, Personal Care Services.

Refer to Chapter 5, section 6, Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths.

At the first 30-day contact with the substitute caregiver, assess whether the substitute caregiver meets these additional statutory placement preferences:

I. Near the child’s parents,

II. Near the child’s community,

III. Keeps siblings together, and

IV. Supports the child’s culture and family identity.

When the substitute care placement does not meet one or more of these statutory substitute care placement preferences and the criteria described in the Assess the prospective caregiver, section:

I. Re-evaluate the substitute care placement selection, and

II. Decide whether this substitute care placement selection is in the best interests of the child.

Ensure the CANS referral has been completed. Assess whether the substitute caregiver can manage the child’s supervision needs as identified in the CANS screening and other current assessments or evaluations of the child when a CANS is completed.
When a child has ongoing medical needs that require personal care services, refer the child for a Personal Care Services Assessment, if the referral has not been completed.

If it is determined that remaining in the current substitute care placement is in the best interests of the child, the child should remain with the substitute caregiver.

Consult your supervisor if you are unsure whether the child’s placement is in the best interests of the child.

If it is determined that remaining in the current substitute care placement is not in the best interests of the child, work with the child’s family and other child welfare staff to secure another substitute caregiver for the child.

Reassess substitute care placement options under the identical criteria and preferences.

Select a substitute care placement option that:

I. Can manage child safety,

II. Is in the child’s best interests, and

III. Can meet the needs of the child.

Document the determination in OR-Kids. Also, explain the basis for the determination as it relates to the best interests of the child.

The 30-day contact also is a time to monitor child safety. Follow the procedures in Chapter 4, section 9 regarding contact requirements.

Ongoing assessment of a child’s substitute care placement

There are several considerations in ongoing assessment of a child’s substitute care placement in addition to the child’s safety management. Be mindful of the following during your contacts with the child and the substitute caregiver:

I. Is the child physically and emotionally safe?

II. Does this substitute care placement allow the child to preserve and maintain existing attachments to their family?

III. Does this substitute care placement provide continuity and familiarity?

IV. Does this substitute care placement provide appropriate support for the child’s needs?
   A. Educational,
   B. Developmental,
   C. Emotional, and
   D. Physical.

V. Does the substitute caregiver meet the child’s supervision needs?

VI. Does the substitute caregiver provide the required personal care services when the child’s medical needs require a personal care services plan?
VII. Is the substitute care placement stable?

VIII. Does this substitute care placement allow the child to maintain their cultural and religious heritage?

Weigh the answers to these questions when you consider the best interests of the child.

Consider ways the substitute care placement can be supported to meet each of these considerations.

I. Are there ways to increase the child’s contact with their family or other community connections?

II. Can arrangements be made for the child to attend cultural events, religious services or other activities to maintain attachments to the child’s heritage and culture?

III. Are there services in the community or are there service providers who can address the child’s specific needs (e.g., education, mental or physical health, or developmental)?

IV. Is training appropriate and available for the substitute caregiver? Can certification staff assist in supporting the substitute caregiver with training materials or other resources by developing a Placement Support Plan (Chapter 8, section 5)?

Staff the substitute care placement with a supervisor when you doubt that it is the best possible substitute care placement selection for the child.

90-day review of a child’s substitute care placement

Procedure

The child’s substitute care placement is reviewed during each 90-day case plan review. The procedure for this review is described in Chapter 4, section 10.

When the assessment is completed, the child remains with the substitute caregiver if:

I. You are confident the substitute care placement meets the needs and best interests of the child, and

II. Substitute care placement is still necessary to manage child safety.

When, after the assessment, you conclude:

I. The substitute placement is not meeting the needs or is not in the best interests of the child, and

II. Substitute care is still necessary to manage child safety, then:

A. The case should be staffed with the supervisor for further consultation on either:
   1. Supporting the substitute caregiver in strengthening their skills and abilities, or
   2. Securing an appropriate substitute care placement for the child using the criteria for assessing an appropriate caregiver, and
   3. Beginning again by reviewing possible relative caregivers.

Tip

The longer the child remains with the initial substitute caregiver:
• The more likely the child and caregiver are to become attached to each other, and
• The more difficult and problematic it will be to transfer the child to another substitute caregiver.

It is especially important to act quickly when the initial substitute care placement fails to address one or more of a child’s key needs. For example:

• A substitute care placement may be so far from the child’s biological family that visitation and reunification are adversely affected, or

• Siblings may be separated due to lack of openings in the substitute care resources available at initial placement.

Tip

It is important to remember to talk with the child more than once about the reasons why they are going to live with someone other than their parents. The explanation for substitute care should be discussed again during face-to-face visits. Due to the trauma and stress associated with the move to substitute care placement, the child may not be able to understand the “why” the first time it is discussed.
Chapter 5

Section 3: Working With Relatives
Working With Relatives

Federal and state laws and administrative rules require a diligent search for a child’s relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship for the purposes of placing a child with his or her relatives and placing siblings together. Oregon’s administrative rules also require consideration of relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship for the purposes of placement prior to placement with unrelated and unknown persons. The diligent search for relatives who could serve as temporary or permanent placement or for ongoing connection and support is an active and dynamic process to ensure the child knows and can remain connected to his or her family.

Research indicates that relative placements are almost always less traumatic for children and provide continuity and connection with familiar adults and surroundings. Separation from parents is traumatic in and of itself; substitute care with strangers compounds the trauma. Even when a child does not know the relative, the relative still has an important role to play in keeping the child connected to family history and culture, whether it is through placement or other types of contact and support.

Who is defined as a relative?

Because every family system is unique, the definition of a child or young adult’s relatives is broad in order to capture all persons who are uniquely considered as family within unique family systems. In some families, every blood relative is considered family while in others, both blood and legal relatives are considered family. In yet others, godparents, neighbors, family friends, etc, might be considered family due to the role those persons play in the family system and/or the emotionally significant relationship they have with the child or the child’s family.

A relative is defined in Oregon Administrative Rule 413-070-0063(9). The definition is summarized here.

There are four categories in which a person is defined as a relative:

I. A person related to the child or young adult through a parent, including a putative father. This includes:
   A. Blood relatives that have prefixes of grand, great, or great-great.
   B. Half blood relatives with prefixes of grand, great, or great-great.
   C. Siblings, including siblings that are related through a putative father.
   D. Aunts/uncles.
   E. Nieces/nephews.
   F. First cousins and first cousins once-removed (a parent’s cousin).
   G. The spouses of any of the above-listed relatives.
   H. The ex-spouses of any of the those persons listed in A through F if the child or young adult had a relationship with them prior to entering substitute care.

II. A person related to the child but not always through the child’s parent. This includes:
   A. A person defined as a relative by the child’s tribe if the child is an Indian child under the ICWA or is in the legal custody of the tribe.
   B. A person defined as a relative of a refugee child.
C. A child’s stepparent or former stepparent if the child had a relationship to the former stepparent prior to coming into substitute care.

D. The registered domestic partner or former registered domestic partner of the child’s parent if the child had a relationship with the former registered domestic partner prior to coming into substitute care.

E. The adoptive parent of a child’s sibling.

F. The unrelated legal or biological parent of a child’s half sibling if that half sibling is living with the unrelated parent.

III. A person distantly related to the child. This includes those persons who the family or child indentifies, or the person self-identifies, as being related to the child by blood, adoption, or marriage but to a degree other than specified in No. 1 above.

IV. A person not related to the child by blood or through legal means but is identified by the child or the family as a family member. These people must have an emotionally significant relationship with the child or the family prior to the child coming into substitute care and are identified by the child or the family. There is no comprehensive list of such persons but may include godparents, neighbors, close family friends, spiritual advisors, or congregation members, and others identified by the child or family. These are the people who, by the family’s, parent’s, or child’s value system, culture, and beliefs are identified as family members and act as family members.

For the purpose of guardianship assistance eligibility as a relative, there are additional considerations.

First, a stepparent is not a relative and is not eligible for guardianship assistance unless a petition for annulment, dissolution, or separation has been filed or the marriage to the child’s parent has been terminated by death or divorce. In other words, if a stepparent is still married to the child’s parent, a stepparent is considered a “parent” for the purpose of considering guardianship assistance and therefore is not eligible for this type of support in a guardianship.
Second, unrelated foster parents may be considered for the purpose of considering guardianship and the availability of guardianship assistance when, in addition to the child being eligible:

A. There is a compelling reason why adoption is not an achievable permanency plan;
B. The foster parent is currently caring for a child in the legal custody of the Department who has a permanency plan or concurrent permanency plan of guardianship;
C. The foster parent has cared for the child for at least the past 12 consecutive months; and
D. A Permanency Committee has recommended the foster parent for consideration as a guardian.

Who is Defined as a Person with a Caregiver Relationship?

Persons with a caregiver relationship are defined by Oregon Revised Statute. These are persons who have had physical custody of the child and lived in the same household as the child for specific periods of time as listed below. The child must have depended upon the relationship to meet the child’s needs. This relationship must have existed:

I. For at least 12 months immediately preceding the initiation of a dependency proceeding;
II. For at least 6 months during a dependency proceeding, if that person is a relative; or
III. For half the child’s life if the child is less than 6 months of age.

This may include an unrelated foster parent only when the relationship has continued for at least 12 months.

The Department’s responsibility to search for persons with a caregiver relationship for the purpose of placement should only apply to those who fall under Nos. 1 and 3 above because any caregiver with whom a relationship has existed during the course of dependency proceeding will inherently be known to the Department already.

Search for and identify relatives

Identification of relatives is an ongoing activity that may begin as early as screening, and must begin during the CPS assessment when it is determined that a child is unsafe. The values and principles of family-centered practice provide the framework for conducting relative searches. Use the family’s knowledge of their history, strengths and resources in your decision-making process to aid in using the family to provide individualized, culturally responsive safety services, substitute care placement, and/or ongoing connections for the child.

Begin the search for relatives without delay when a protective action must be taken in order to manage child safety, whether that protective action is in home or out of home. Include both the mother’s and the father’s family in the search. This early and immediate search and identification of relatives can identify resources that prevent the child from entering substitute care, reduce the number of placement moves when a child is in substitute care, and keep the child connected to his/her family system, history, and culture. The identification of relatives continues throughout the case and is reviewed periodically as described later in this section.

Procedure

I. Use the contacts with family members and others who have a significant relationship to the family as an opportunity to continue to search for and identify relatives and persons with an emotionally significant relationship with the child or the child’s family. Information can be gathered through the following contacts or activities:

A. Parents;
B. Children;
C. Other family members;
D. During every family meeting such as the Family Engagement Meeting or subsequent Family Decision Meetings.
E. School teachers or other school staff;
F. Persons participating in the shelter hearing;
G. Day care or other child care providers;
H. The family’s spiritual or church leaders;
I. Search of previous child welfare records;
J. Search of other state database records such as Self Sufficiency records, vital statistics, Department of Motor Vehicles, or Support Enforcement records which are available to the Department; and
K. Internet search engines such as Intelius/Accurint.com, Family Finders/US. Search.com, Ancestry.com and/or Daplus.us.

II. In those instances where the family is initially unwilling to provide contact information for possible relative resources, explain to the family the reasons why identifying a child’s relatives is important both to support the parents and to support the child during a difficult time. Explain that the search can include use of the above-listed resources but that the best way to connect a child with his/her family is by gathering family information from the parent and/or child themselves. Furthermore, assure them that you will keep them informed of all relatives that you contact unless doing so would compromise the safety of another person. Share with the parents the benefits to children and young adults of permanent connections with and support from relatives. Explore with the parent the reasons for unwillingness to share family information and whether they can be assisted in overcoming any barriers they feel exist. Possible barriers may include:

A. Do they feel embarrassment or shame about Child Welfare’s involvement?
B. Are they concerned about how much information will be shared with their family members?
C. Are they concerned about particular relatives being contacted for safety reasons?
D. Do they believe the family will not be supportive?

When the parents continue to be unwilling to provide contact information, request the court to order the parents to provide this information. Inform the parent that ODHS has a responsibility to seek out relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship and will continue the efforts to find family members even when parents object.

Initial and ongoing contact with a relative

The Department is responsible for contacting identified relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship during the CPS assessment and on an ongoing basis. These persons should be contacted as soon as they are identified but must be contacted within 15 business days of receiving a person’s contact information.
I. Make an initial contact with relatives in person or by phone when a telephone number is available. Make an effort to locate the phone number. Upon being contacted, a relative is likely to experience a lot of emotions and have a lot of questions that can be answered immediately when the contact is in person or by telephone.

II. Be prepared to answer all the questions you can. Federal law allows the Department to tell an adult relative that a child is in substitute care.

III. Provide information. Let the relative know how you will be following up with him or her, that you will be sending a follow-up letter, whether there will be someone else from the Department contacting them, if certification is a possibility, how they can send cards or letters through you to the child, other contact arrangements you may be making as a caseworker, and where they can find more information on our website.

IV. When the relative is a grandparent who is the legal parent of the child or young adult’s legal parent, as defined in ORS 109.119, that grandparent has additional rights. Notify that grandparent of numerous options for involvement (see Options for Relatives ODHS 9360 for a more inclusive list) and tell the grandparent that the Department will notify them of the date and time of court hearings unless: 1) they have been present at court and have already been notified of the date and time of the hearing by the court or 2) the court has relieved the Department of the responsibility to provide such notice after making a finding of "good cause."

V. Provide notice of court hearings, regarding any child or young adult, from the point of shelter hearings forward, to any grandparent who is the legal parent of a child’s legal parent, unless: 1) the person has been at a court hearing and already been provided the date and time of the next hearing by the court or 2) the court has relieved the Department of the responsibility to provide such notice, after making a finding of "good cause."

VI. When a telephone number is not provided or available, contact the relative by sending a letter. There are five letters available on the forms directory that can be sent. The letters are designed that at least one of the letters can be sent to possible relatives or persons with a caregiver relationship. Each letter is a bit different and addresses some of the most frequently encountered situations in a child welfare case. Some of the letters may be sent as part of ongoing contact with relatives. Choose the letter that meets the case situation for each person, child or young adult. These letters cannot match every situation, and there are times when you will need to write a personalized letter.

VII. During the initial contact, the caseworker is responsible for providing relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship with specific information in the person’s own language and in a format that the person can understand. The Department has a relative pamphlet (ODHS 9360 Options for Relatives) and all the letters translated into the languages most commonly spoken by our families. Be sure to clearly explain information in a way that makes sense to the relative, respecting his/her role in the family and the family’s cultural perspective and values. The following must take place during initial contact:

A. Explain to the person that the Department’s goal is to manage child safety within the child’s home, if possible, and that the relative may have a role to play if safety can be managed in the child’s own home.

B. If the child has been placed in substitute care, the Department must let the relative know the child is in substitute care.

C. Explain to the person whether the child is placed with another relative.

D. Give the relative information about the Department’s efforts to keep a child safe, and when it is possible to keep the child safe in his or her own home with help from others, a relative may involved in that effort with specific responsibilities. Let the relative know that the Department assesses everyone who assists in managing a child’s safety and that this assessment, at a minimum, involves a check of the person’s criminal history and any previous records of child abuse and neglect. Reassure the relative that the Department will do everything it needs to do to ensure child safety.

E. Explain the rights of relatives as described in OAR 413-010-0300 to 0340, Rights of Relatives.

F. Provide information about the availability of Guardianship Assistance and how the child meets eligibility requirements.

VIII. There may be occasions when it is not safe for a family if a particular relative is contacted. These reasons are outlined in administrative rule and include family/domestic violence or when contact may compromise a child or young adult’s, or another person’s, safety. When the caseworker has knowledge that a specific relative is unsafe or believes there is enough information that another person’s safety would be jeopardized, the caseworker should consult with his or her supervisor, then contact a program manager who must approve any decision not to contact a relative for these reasons.

Tip

Be mindful that culture is one of the lenses that help us interpret, interact and respond to others and to situations. Understand the family’s culture to be able to effectively communicate and develop a relationship with the family members. Be mindful of the role culture may play in a relative’s perception of what the relative is being asked to do. Openly discuss options, roles and responsibilities to help reduce misunderstandings.

Document ongoing relative search efforts
Procedure

I. Document all identified relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship in the Department’s electronic information system. Document the following information as part of the diligent search efforts made by child welfare:
   A. Name and contact information of each person that the Department tried to contact;
   B. The relationship to the child or young adult;
   C. The method of contact;
   D. Each person’s response when a response is received; and
   E. Reasons for not contacting a relative when one has been identified but not contacted and the program manager who gave approval for not contacting them.

II. Include information in each court report on the progress and results of the diligent search for relatives, the assessment activities underway, and the efforts to place the child with relatives and to place siblings together.

III. Document all contacts and assessment activities in case notes.

Engagement of a child or young adult’s relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship

Children and young adults need families. They need to have a sense of belonging and sense of who they are and from whom they have come. Whether their case plan involves in-home safety planning, out-of-home care, reunification, or other permanency options, children need relationships with family in order to be successful. Engagement of relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship means building partnerships between the child’s family system and the Child Welfare system with the goal of meeting the child or young adult’s needs for safety, permanency and wellbeing.

I. In order to successfully build a partnership with the family system, the caseworker must make every effort to engage family members at each stage of case planning. Family members may approach contact with the Department with sense of distrust of the Child Welfare system or of government agencies in general. It is important to recognize this distrust as a normal reaction to a large government agency intervening in a family’s life. If a family’s response to the Department’s intervention is perceived by Child Welfare workers as uncooperative or resistive, the perception may negatively impact the caseworker’s goal to build a partnership with the family.

II. There are many strategies to build trust with a child’s relatives. Some of these include:
   A. Perseverance: Do not give up on your efforts to engage relatives. Even if a person does not respond to your initial inquiries, contact that person again at the next critical juncture and/or during the periodic review of the case plan and the substitute care placement of the child. Many families are later grateful that a caseworker did not give up trying to engage them.
   B. Acknowledge imperfection: Child Welfare systems are not perfect. Often, allowing room for the relative to express his/her concern about the Department’s actions and/or decision making and validating that which can be validated can express respect and humility.
   C. Provide many opportunities for family participation in decision making. Provide formal opportunities such as family decision meetings and informal opportunities such as a phone call to get a relative’s input.

D. Honor the family system’s culture and background. Integrate their cultural practices and beliefs into plans for the child or young adult’s care.

E. Look for ways a relative can be involved with the child. Can the relative attend school functions, religious or sporting activities or events? Can the relative offer transportation to visits? Are there opportunities for visitation, phone, email, or other contact? Can the relative offer resources in other ways such as providing family history information, information on family medical or cultural practices, family mementos and other important connection with a child’s history, music lessons or sporting equipment, mentoring, vacations, or other types of family connectedness?

III. It is important that the Department engage relatives in case planning throughout the life of the case. Engage relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship:

A. During the course of a CPS assessment, if a protective action needs to be taken, always consider whether persons in the family system can participate in managing child safety within the home. Ask the parents/child/other family members for family members’ names and contact information and contact them right away. Follow the procedures for assessment of safety service providers.

B. When child is entering substitute care. Use the Child Specific Expedited Certification procedures as described in Chapter 8 whenever possible in order to avoid the child going to the home of an adult unknown to them or to their family. Administrative rule allows for the emergency certification and placement with any relative or person with a caregiver relationship who is assessed to meet certification requirements and able to meet the child’s need prior to searching for and contacting all relatives.

C. In the development of the ongoing safety plan by inviting their participation in a Family Engagement Meeting (FEM) and stressing the importance of their input.

D. In the development of the child’s case plan by inviting their participation in family meetings and during the development of concurrent permanency plan options.

E. During the 90-day case plan review.

F. When a child who is in substitute care must move.

G. When the Department is considering reunification.

H. When the Department is considering recommendation of moving to the concurrent plan other than return home.

I. At all critical junctures in the case plan and in the child or young adult’s life.

Engagement of relatives as temporary and/or permanent placement resources

I. When making placement decisions for a child, always seek input from the child or young adult and their parents or guardians regarding their preferences, and make every attempt to engage and collaborate with the family members in determining the best temporary and/or permanent placement resource for the child or young adult.
II. In addition, when considering the adults who can provide substitute care, adhere to the following order of placement preference:

A. Relatives as defined in OAR 413-070-0063(8)(a): blood or legal relatives related through the child’s parent or through the child.

B. Relatives as defined in OAR 413-070-0063(8)(d): persons identified by the family or the child as a relative.

C. Persons with a caregiver relationship.

D. Persons known to the child or family.

E. Foster parents unknown to the child or family when none of the above is available or able to meet the child’s needs.

III. At times, there may be more than one relative or person with a caregiver relationship interested in being considered for placement. These are some of the most difficult decisions the Department makes and can impact the child in a lasting, life long way. In these situations, engage the family system in partnering with the Department to make this decision together. Ultimately, the Department is responsible for placement decisions, but using the family’s input as a guide and collaborating with family members whenever possible is imperative.

A. Use the placement matching order of preference above as a guide and consider each person’s ability to:

1. Provide safety for the child or young adult.
2. Support the Department implementation of the permanent plan.
3. Ability to meet the child’s physical, emotional, and educational needs.
4. Which person has the closest existing relationship with the child.

B. The person’s ability to provide substitute care for siblings in order to keep them placed together. Consider the child’s proximity to school and ability to remain in his or her home school, proximity to parents for the purposes of visitation, or whether the relative being considered is able and willing to transport children to school or to visits.

C. Consider the person’s ability to keep siblings together.

D. A family decision meeting is a great way to seek family participation in placement decisions. Family meetings can be either facilitated or an informal gathering making sure people are prepared and feel heard.

E. Re-contact even those relatives that did not respond before or were not interested in participation before, and invite the family to help the Department in planning for the child or young adult.

F. Consult with your supervisor when making placement decisions.

IV. It is important to distinguish between temporary and permanent placement when engaging family systems in the placement decisions. A particular relative might undergo the expedited certification process in order to provide placement for a child on the first day of substitute care. This is a temporary placement. It is important to stress this to the relative providing placement as well as to other relatives that may wish to be considered for placement. While one relative might be available and best matched to the child for temporary placement, another might be available and best matched to the child for adoption or guardianship. It is also important to minimize a child’s moves in substitute care. Even when moving a child from one relative to another, this decision should not be taken lightly. The Department must always be weighing what is in the child’s best interests and which placement resource will best meet his/her needs for safety, permanency, and well-being.

Tip

What constitutes a “best match” for a child with a relative? The answer to this question will be different for every child and will be based on each child’s individual needs and strengths in combination with the potential placement resource’s ability to meet those needs and build upon those strengths. Input from parents, the child (when appropriate), relatives, service providers, and others serving as part of the child’s team will be important in making the decision. The caseworker should consider (this list is not inclusive):

- Contact between the child and birth parents and/or other family members.
- Proximity to community, school, and other needed services.
- Placing with siblings.
- Cultural connections.
- Supervision needs.
- Mental health needs.
- Child’s strengths.
- Child’s medical needs.

Assessment of Relatives as a Substitute Care Resource

When a relative or person with a caregiver relationship wants to be considered as a placement resource and the child is not placed with a relative, the person must be assessed. A child-specific expedited certification can be used to assess the person. This is an expedited process to certify a relative or unrelated adult to provide the least restrictive environment to meet the child’s needs, avoid substitute care placement with persons unknown to the child, and minimize trauma to the child.

I. Begin the child-specific certification assessment on initial contact with the person who is being considered for child-specific certification. In some local offices, assessment and certification responsibilities remain solely in the certification units. In other local offices, a CPS worker performs these functions during the CPS assessment. In either case, explain the certification process and begin the assessing the adult’s ability and interest in providing a substitute care placement and/or identification of other possible relatives who may be interested in providing a substitute care placement for the child. The expedited certification process can be accomplished in one working day with the assistance of others.

II. Discuss with the prospective caregiver the role and responsibilities of a substitute caregiver. Explain certification standards and requirements for assessing whether the adult has the ability and willingness to provide safe substitute care. Complete the procedure described in Chapter 8, section 2 for temporary certification (expedited certification).

III. After being given information about the certification requirements and process, a person who is interested in being considered as a placement resource must be given and return a completed Application for Approval to Care for a Child in ODHS custody (CF 1260A) prior to any background checks or assessment decisions. The Department may not make a fitness or suitability determination without taking an application. If the child/young adult is already placed with a relative who is assessed by the Department and family to be the best match for that child/young adult, it will be important to explain to the interested person that, although the person has an interest as a placement resource, a placement change may not be considered at this time. Offer the person other ways to be connected to and provide for the safety and wellbeing of the child or young adult. If the person still wants to be assessed, give the person an application.

IV. If, after the application has been completed and background checks have been obtained, there is any documented child welfare or criminal background history, this information must be assessed except for certain circumstances where the person’s crimes or actions against a child preclude further assessment. In other words, an applicant who has a criminal conviction, for example, is not enough information in and of itself, to determine that the application will be denied unless that conviction is one for which no approval can be granted or one can be granted but it has been determined that an approval will not be granted. Refer to OAR 413-120-0400 to 0475.

V. If a decision is made not to certify a person who has applied to provide care for a specific child, verbally notify the person of this decision as soon as possible. When doing so, inform the person of the reasons for the decision and explain that the person has the option of withdrawing his/her application or of exercising his/her right to have an external review of the decision after receiving a letter from the Department informing him/her of the Department’s intent to deny the application. Be sure to explain that a withdrawal would not preclude the person from applying again at some future date if/when circumstances for the denial have been changed or mitigated in some way. On the other hand, if a denial is issued and the final order after a Contested Case hearing process upholds that decision, it is the Department’s discretion whether to accept another application from the person regardless of circumstances for a period of up to 5 years. When explaining these options, be clear that regardless of the applicant’s decision, as a relative he/she will continue to have opportunities to be connected to the child in other ways, if safe and appropriate. These specific opportunities will be dependent upon the child’s needs and best interests and the relative’s ability and willingness to participate in the child’s life or case planning.

Engagement of Relatives and Persons with a Caregiver Relationship in ongoing connections with and support of the child/young adult

Engagement of relatives is about more than placement. Even if a relative cannot be certified as the substitute caregiver for a child or young adult, or the child is already placed with a relative who is best able to meet the child’s needs, or the relative lives some distance from the child or the child’s family, there may be other roles that the person can play in meeting the needs of the child or young adult.

I. Consider ways in which the relative or person with a caregiver relationship can support the child and the existing placement through activities such as:
   A. Respite care;
   B. Transportation for the child to visits with parents, siblings or other family members;
C. Transportation to services or extracurricular activities;
D. Regular contact through phone calls, mail, or email; or
E. Regular visits with the child.

II. Consider ways in which the relative or person with a caregiver relationship can support the child and the existing placement through providing other resources such as:
   A. Monetary support for extracurricular activities;
   B. Mentoring;
   C. Providing family history, family photos, or family mementos;
   D. Financial support for particular items or activities; or
   E. Access to special family events, holidays, religious or cultural ceremonies or other rites of passage.

III. There are times when a child’s team may recommend no contact or no visitation with a particular relative or with all relatives. This needs to be taken into consideration in decision making but also needs to be reassessed periodically as circumstances for the child/young adult or for the relative may change. Even when it is not in the child/young adult’s best interests to have contact with a relative, there are times when the relative can be engaged in other ways. Consider including the relative in family meetings (if safe), providing contact information for other relatives, providing meaningful information regarding the family history and culture, or providing meaningful family items such as a photo album.

Substitute Care Review and re-contacting identified relatives

Because the relative search is dynamic and people’s life circumstances change, the Department must continually consider ways in which relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship can be engaged in case planning, safety planning, placement, and ongoing support.

I. A review of the Department’s diligent efforts to place with a relative or person with a caregiver relationship must take place periodically. This review must include:
   A. Whether the child or young adult is placed with relatives and whether siblings are placed together. If not, why not and what could be done to place them together? What is being done to maintain contact between the siblings?
   B. What the current efforts are to identify relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship. Is it time to search again or to re-contact relatives who responded previously?
   C. What additional contact with relatives and persons with a caregiver relationship needs to take place in order to achieve placement with a relative?
   D. If a child is already placed with a relative or person with a caregiver relationship, the review includes to what extent that person is meeting the child or young adult’s needs for safety, well-being, and permanency.

II. The review of the Department’s diligent efforts may mean a review of the file, a staffing with your supervisor, or a conversation with the parents, family members, child/young adult, and/or current substitute care provider. Consider whether the child/young adult has been given every opportunity possible to be returned home with an in-home safety plan, be placed with a relative and/or siblings, or to have ongoing connection to his/her family system.

III. Required Reviews:

A. The caseworker first reviews the substitute care placement within 30 days of the child’s placement. This is a good time to review all the attempts made to contact identified relatives, including those who have already responded, and invite their participation in a Family Engagement Meeting (FEM) and/or a Family Decision Meeting. If you find that not all relatives have been contacted yet, do so at this time. Look for ways to find more relatives and/or to connect the child with the relatives that have been found. Consider whether an in-home safety plan could be achieved through the engagement of relatives in managing child safety.

B. Include a review of the Department’s diligent efforts to identify, engage, and place with relatives during the 90-day case plan reviews. This may include a relative search coordinator or other community partner involved with the Department in searching for identified relatives or further searching for relatives if the child or young adult is not currently placed with a relative. This may include seeking another placement resource if the current placement resource is unable to meet the child’s needs or is not a relative.

IV. Additional times to review:

A. When the child or family members participate in a family meeting at which they recommend a relative for substitute care or permanency, and that relative has not yet been assessed, review efforts to locate and assess that particular relative. Contact the relative and explain the child’s current circumstances, the requirements and responsibilities of providing substitute care, and give them an Application to Care for a Child in the Department’s Custody if they wish to be considered. Consider whether the child is already placed with a relative and where in the order of preference that relative falls. Consider the extent to which the current placement resource relative can meet the child’s needs for safety, permanency and well-being. Seek family input and supervisor guidance in your decision making.

B. When the child is going to experience a placement change, take another look at all relatives that have been identified and when they were last contacted. Might there be more relatives that have not yet been identified? Who in the family could provide more information? Who in the family indicated in the past that they could not be a placement resource? Re-contact relatives to inform them of the impending placement change and seek out whether their circumstances may have changed to an extent that they might consider being a placement resource or can offer support to the child or young adult as he/she transitions to a new placement.

C. When it appears that the current placement resource is not meeting the child or young adult’s needs for safety, permanency, and wellbeing, consider how relatives might be engaged in assisting the placement resource in meeting these needs (respite, connections with the child, visitation, etc) or whether other relatives should be considered as placement resources.

D. At least annually when a child is in an APPLA plan. Review the relatives identified, re-contact any relative who is not currently in regular contact with the child to assess willingness for contact, connection and support, or possible availability as a placement resource. For additional information on APPLA, refer to Chapter 6, Section 16.
E. Ask relatives who have not yet been assessed whether they might be willing to be assessed as a placement resource.

F. Ask relatives who in the past have said they are not available or able to provide placement in the event that their circumstances are such now that they could be able to do so.

Role of the Supervisor

The role of the supervisor and of clinical supervision regarding search and engagement of relatives is critical. Engagement of relatives in safety planning, case planning, placement opportunities, and connections with the child/young adult are some of the most complex casework activities. Assisting caseworkers in creatively using a child’s family at all levels of case planning and involvement and in recognizing their own biases and values regarding relatives is one of the most critical roles for a supervisor.

I. The supervisor should ask about relative search and engagement at the following times:

   A. When a worker is taking a protective action,

   B. During the Preparation and Agreement meetings,

   C. When planning for a Family Engagement Meeting,

   D. When approving the ongoing safety plan,

   E. When planning for a Family Decision Meeting,

   F. When approving the case plan;

   G. When conducting the 90-day case plan staffing; and

   H. At all times when staffing a case with a worker.

II. Direct the caseworker to re-contact relatives whenever additional information is needed for case planning, placement matching, permanency options, or other information or resources are needed from relatives for the child’s placement, safety, permanency, or well-being needs.

III. Ensure that the Department has provided grandparents (legal parent of the child or young adult’s legal parent, as defined in ORS 109.119) notice of the date and time of court hearings regarding a child or young adult who is committed to the custody of the Department unless: 1) they have been present at court and have already been notified of the date and time of the hearing by the court, or 2) the court has relieved the Department of the responsibility to provide such notice, after making a finding of "good cause."

IV. The specific questions a supervisor asks the worker to consider and decisions that the supervisor helps the worker make will be unique depending upon the current circumstances and decisions points of the case. Consider:

   A. Has the worker asked all known family members for the names of more relatives?

   B. In what ways has the worker included the family members in decisions and case planning?

   C. In what ways has the worker incorporated the family’s input into the case plan?

   D. Are there family members that could assist in managing child safety in an in-home safety plan?

   E. Are there family members who could assist in facilitating visitation for the child, siblings, and parents?

   F. Are there other times relatives can be allowed to visit?
G. What efforts are currently being made to place the child with a relative when a child is not currently with a relative?

H. How have relatives who can’t or won’t be placement resources been included in case planning? Have relatives been asked for names of additional relatives? Have they been invited or offered ways to provide family history, or to maintain connections for the child?

I. If the child is currently placed with a relative, in what ways is that relative meeting the child’s needs for safety, well-being and permanency? What supports may the relative need? How is the Department supporting the relative’s new role in the family?

J. If alternate relatives have been identified as permanent placement resources but not for substitute care, such as a relative living in another state/country, what efforts are being made in assessment of these relatives for the purposes of permanency, and what arrangements have been made for ongoing contact and relationship-building?

K. If there was a relative or person with a caregiver relationship that previously was not allowed to have contact with the child/young adult, have the circumstances surrounding that decision changed, and if so, how might the child benefit from contact with that person now?

L. Have accurate and thorough records of relative contact been maintained in the case file?

M. What external resources or searches have been tried? What degree of success resulted from these efforts?

Section 4: Placement in foster care
Placement in foster care

Sometimes the circumstances of the crisis and the need for an immediate substitute care placement do not permit a search for and assessment of relatives or other adults known to the child, or the search and assessment are not successful. If there are no identified relatives or other adults known to the child, a family foster home is the least restrictive placement option.

Procedure

I. In these cases, make a substitute care placement with a family already certified through Child Welfare. Local offices have various systems for emergency foster care placement. Each branch maintains a list of available foster homes, and certifiers can provide information regarding specific strengths and skills of the foster family, or any current limitations or other concerns. You also may want to check the OR-Kids provider screen, in the Notes tab, to see if there is any documentation on the certified family. Because resources and procedures vary, it is important to be aware of the branch-specific system for emergency placement in certified foster homes. Some branches have staff assigned to the task of securing an emergency placement. Others have resources such as short-term emergency shelter homes, receiving centers or foster homes available for emergencies. In these situations, consult with the supervisor for the local office procedure.

The Supervisor’s Role

When a child is placed in any substitute care placement, the supervisor:

I. Ensures that the diligent search for relatives was initiated and continues;

II. Reviews documentation, data entry, appropriate documentation and records filing; and

III. Conducts routine and scheduled support and consultation sessions with the caseworker.

When a child is placed in a child-specific placement with a relative or adult known to the child:

I. The Permanency, CPS or Certification supervisor:
   A. Ensures that any relative applicant who is 18, 19 or 20 years of age has been approved by the district manager or designee.
   B. Consults with the certifier on any relative applicant who has any criminal history and ensures the appropriate management review and approval is obtained prior to certification and placement of a child in a relative’s home.
   C. Consults with the certifier on any relative applicant who has any abuse/neglect history. The supervisor reviews the history, makes an informed judgment as to whether the family can provide a safe environment for the child, and advises the caseworker on proceeding with the assessment process.

II. The Certification supervisor:
   A. Reviews all assessment information obtained during the assessment of a relative for certification.
   B. Ensures that an emergency criminal history check has been completed.
C. Reviews and approves or ensures appropriate management approval of criminal history exceptions prior to certification. Many background exceptions require approval by the Child Welfare program manager, district manager or the ODHS assistant director for CAF. If the worker cannot access management to have a criminal history exception request reviewed and approved, the child-specific certification cannot proceed.

D. Reviews and approves or ensures appropriate management approval of child abuse history background checks prior to certification.

E. Approves the home for placement of the child.

F. Ensures receipt of all documentation and assessment information for ongoing assessment.

III. When the child is placed in regular foster care, the supervisor reviews and approves the decisions of the caseworker in the placement of the child.

Have child-specific certification packets available to you when you contact a relative or other unrelated adult known to the child:

Include a supply of the following forms in the packets:

- SCF 0447 Relative Information
- SCF 1260A Application for Approval to Care for a Child in the Custody of ODHS
- SCF 1011F Consent for Criminal Records and Fingerprint Check
- SCF 1255 Applicant Reference
- SCF 979 Safety Assessment – Home and Surroundings
- SCF 261 ODHS Child Welfare Placement Information Form

Bags to transport the child’s personal belongings. Business cards to provide the child and the placement resource with contact information.

Some communities support local child welfare systems by providing teddy bears, blankets or other comforting articles for children placed in protective custody. If your community provides these kinds of supports, have a supply available as you make placements.
Chapter 5

Section 5: Personal Care Services
Personal Care Services

Overview

A child or young adult who is eligible for Personal Care Services has a physical, mental or developmental condition requiring additional care and assistance in one or more domains of Activities of Daily Living (ADL). Pregnant foster children or young adults may also be eligible for Personal Care Services. A foster parent or relative caregiver who cares for a child or young adult eligible for Personal Care Services must have the knowledge, skill and ability required to meet the child or young adult’s Personal Care Service needs. For some children or young adults, the caregiver will need to learn and demonstrate delegated nursing tasks. Caregivers should also be invested in providing a quality of life that is positive in nature and assist in improving the child or young adult’s skills regardless of the abilities a child or young adult may have upon entering care.

Note: A child or young adult who is placed in a regular foster care placement may qualify for Personal Care Services. Children who are placed in either an Oregon Developmental Disability Services (ODDS) or Behavioral Rehabilitation Services (BRS) paid placement, children or young adults who move out of the state of Oregon, or children or young adults who have completed the adoption finalization process do not qualify for this program.

I. The domains of Activities of Daily Living (ADLs) are:

A. Mobility, transfers, repositioning -- assisting a child or young adult with ambulation or transfers with or without an assistive device, turning the individual or adjusting padding for physical comfort or pressure relief, or encouraging or assisting with range-of-motion exercises.

B. Basic personal hygiene -- providing or assisting a child or young adult with needs such as bathing (tub, bed bath, shower), washing hair, grooming, shaving, nail care, foot care, dressing, skin care, mouth care, and oral hygiene.

C. Toileting, bowel and bladder care -- assisting a child or young adult to and from bathroom; on and off a toilet, commode, bedpan, urinal or other assistive device used for toileting; changing incontinence supplies; following a toileting schedule; cleansing the individual; or adjusting clothing related to toileting, emptying catheter drainage bag or assistive device, ostomy care or bowel care.

D. Nutrition -- preparing meals and special diets, assisting with adequate fluid intake or adequate nutrition, assisting with food intake (feeding), monitoring to prevent choking or aspiration, assisting with special utensils, cutting food, and placing food, dishes and utensils within reach for eating.

E. Medication management -- assisting with ordering, organizing and administering prescribed medications (including pills, drops, ointments, creams, injections, inhalers, and suppositories): monitoring for choking while taking medications.

F. Delegated/teachable nursing tasks – delegation of a task of nursing care must be done for all foster parents/relative caregivers and relief caregivers who are not currently licensed registered nurses in the state of Oregon. Delegation should be done in accordance with Oregon State Board or Nursing Division 47 Delegation Rules. Documentation should be done using the CF 172 RNT. Refer to exhibit 4 for a list of these tasks.

G. Additional Medical Management – health related appointments, local and/or outside of local community, per month.

II. Procedure – Referring a child or young adult for a Personal Care Services Assessment.

A. Personal Care Service referrals may be made by:
   1. A caseworker,
   2. A ODHS field nurse,
   3. At the request of foster parent, or
   4. At the discretion of the Health and Wellness Services Program Personal Care Program at Central Office.

   NOTE: A Personal Care Services Assessment will be completed during the initial Intake RN Assessment process if it appears that the child or young adult’s medical needs would meet the qualifications for Personal Care Services at that time.

   B. The Personal Care Services Assessment referral local office process is as follows:
      1. Caseworker must refer a child or young adult for a Personal Care Services Assessment when a child or young adult’s physical or mental health condition appears to meet the criteria for one or more of the Personal Care Services.
      2. Caseworker completes the information on the Personal Care Services Referral (CF 0172b).

   C. Include any available copies of the child or young adult’s current and pertinent medical records. Additional records will be requested if needed.

   D. Submit the above required information to the designated Personal Care Branch Coordinator. The designated Personal Care Branch Coordinator will email the information to the appropriate field nurse and CC: Personal.Care@ODHSoha.state.or.us, and open/close a Personal Care Services Assessment referral service in the placements/services tab under the case in OR-Kids.
      1. The Health and Wellness Program will generate a referral when a reassessment becomes due, and email to the appropriate ODHS field nurse.
      2. An early reassessment referral may be emailed to the appropriate nurse ODHS field nurse if a child or young adult’s medical needs significantly change, i.e., hospitalizations, surgeries, new illnesses or worsening conditions, by following the procedure listed above.

   E. Personal Care Services In-Hospital Assessment process is as follows:
      1. Caseworker determines that an In-Hospital services assessment is necessary to acquire a better understanding of the medical needs of the child or young adult, and the skill-set needed to care for these needs. This assessment is used only to determine an appropriate foster care provider.
      2. Follow steps 2-4 listed above, specifying in the Personal Care Services Referral (CF 0172b) that the referral is for an In-Hospital services assessment.
      3. Personal Care Branch Coordinator and/or caseworker assists in the coordination between nurse, hospital, and potential foster care provider, if identified, for the completion of the assessment at the hospital.

III. Conducting the Personal Care Services Assessment
A. ODHS Field Nurse or the Health and Wellness Services Manager, or designee will conduct the Personal Care Services Assessment. The assessment includes:

1. A review of the child or young adult’s available medical records.
2. An in-person assessment of the child or young adult with the foster parent or relative care giver, unless the child or young adult is hospitalized and not yet in a certified home.
3. Review of information from the certified caregiver regarding child or young adult’s current functioning and condition.
4. Nursing delegations when needed.
5. Documentation of the findings of the Personal Care Services Assessment.

B. The ODHS Field Nurse or the Health and Wellness Service Program Manager, or designee submits the completed assessment to the Health and Wellness Services Program Personal Care Program in Central Office.

C. The Health and Wellness Program Manager, or designee:

1. Reviews and approves the Personal Care Services Assessment and the Personal Care Services Plan.
2. Applies the Personal Care Services rating scale (Exhibit 4 OAR 413-090-0133 and 413-090-0150) to the assessment results and determines the level of Personal Care.
3. Provides payment for Personal Care Services, calculated based on the number of days that Personal Care Services were provided to the eligible child or young adult. Personal Care Services provided to a child or young adult are terminated when the child or young adult no longer meets the eligible requirements or is no longer in the care of the foster parent or relative caregiver, whichever is earlier.
4. Emails the caseworker and certifier a copy of the completed Personal Care Services Assessment, the results of the assessment, and the notice and decision letter. These documents are uploaded into the file cabinet of the case in OR-Kids.
5. Mails documents to the foster parent for review. One copy of the Personal Care Service Plan must be signed, dated, and returned to the Personal Care Program.
   - Foster parents have 30 days to contest the results of a Personal Care Assessment. An Administrative Hearing Request form (CE 0344) must be submitted and received within 30 days of receipt of assessment results.
6. Payments according to level.
   - Level 1 - $231
   - Level 2 - $461
   - Level 3 - $692
   - Level 4 – payment will be determine based on the intensity and frequency of the Personal Care Services in conjunction with all other medical services provided for the child or young adult.
IV. Developing a Personal Care Services Plan

A. The ODHS Field Nurse will develop a Personal Care Services Plan. The Personal Care Services Plan must include the following:

1. The frequency and intensity of each Personal Care Service the child or young adult will need.
2. The qualified provider who provides the Personal Care Service. Whenever the Personal Care Services plan includes a delegated nursing task, the plan must include the following documentation using the delegation document (CF 0172 RNT):
   - Who is authorized to perform the delegated nursing task.
   - Instructions for performing each delegated nursing task.
   - The frequency the qualified provider will be supervised and reevaluated in performing the delegated nursing task.
   - Signatures and dates of both the ODHS Field Nurse and the certified family.

V. Monitoring the Personal Care Services Plan

The Health and Wellness Services Program Personal Care Program at central office email the signed and dated Personal Care Services Plan to the caseworker and certifier and upload it into the file cabinet of the case in OR-Kids. It is the responsibility of the caseworker to:

A. Review these documents to gain an understand of how the child or young adult’s Personal Care Services will be met through this plan.
B. Review the Personal Care Services Plan during regular face-to-face contact with the certified family to ensure the child or young adult’s Personal Care Service needs are met through these specialized services and document the review.
C. Develop a thorough understanding of how the Personal Care Services fit with the health care services the child or young adult receives from the their medical providers.
D. Consult with the child or young adult’s medical providers, or with the ODHS Field Nurse or nurse consultant at Central Office whenever questions arise regarding the child or young adult’s Personal Care Service needs.

VI. Personal Care Services Reassessment

A. The Personal Care Program Coordinator at Central Office will generate a referral when a reassessment becomes due, and email to the appropriate ODHS Field Nurse.
   - The ODHS Field Nurse will contact the foster parent to set a date, time, and place that is convenient.
B. An early reassessment referral may be emailed to the appropriate ODHS Field Nurse if a child or young adult’s medical needs significantly change, ie: hospitalizations, surgeries, new illness or worsening conditions, by following the procedure listed above.

Note: When a child or young adult receiving Personal Care Services changes placement, a new referral must be re-submitted to the appropriate nurse, CC: Personal.Care@ODHSoha.state.or.us. Personal Care Services do not follow a child or young adult from home to home.
Supervisor Role

- Provide support and knowledge to the caseworker with responsibility for monitoring the child or young adult’s safety and wellbeing.
- Visit the child or young adult in the home with the caseworker when the caseworker needs additional support in monitoring a medically fragile child.
- Review the child or young adult’s medical records to ensure referrals and appointments are completed.
- Consult with other medical professionals to gain additional information or understanding of the child or young adult’s condition when warranted.

Medically Fragile Children Requiring Intensive In-home Services

When taking custody of a medically fragile child in the hospital or changing placements, caseworkers should consult with the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager at Personal.Care@ODHSoha.state.or.us for placement guidance and assistance with additional in-home support.

If a child or young adult is hospitalized with significant medical needs, caseworkers should notify the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or designee and consult as needed for placement guidance and assistance with additional in-home support.

Some children or young adults may require professional nursing care in the home and should be evaluated for eligibility by Children’s Intensive In-Home Services (CIIS). After consultation with the supervisor, make a referral by calling 971-673-3000, to request an evaluation for the child or young adult. CIIS may provide payment for in-home professional nursing services. A referral form can be obtained at https://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/SENIORS-DISABILITIES/DD/Pages/CIIS-Eligibility-Referral.aspx.

Upload medical information in the medical section of the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids. Healthcare provider consultation notes are recorded in case notes.

Section 6: Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths (CANS)
Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths (CANS)

CANS screening integrates information about a child’s needs and strengths for the purposes of:

I. Case planning,
II. Service planning, and
III. Determining the supervision needs of the child.

There are two versions of the CANS tool:

I. One is for children 0 to 5 years, and
II. The other is for children 6 to 20.

An individual trained and certified through the department conducts a CANS screening. CANS screening provides information to establish:

I. A level of care for a child (whether the child will receive an additional level 1, 2, or 3 payment);
II. Areas where a child has identified supervision needs; and
III. Important case planning information.

CANS results contain seven domains. Each domain identifies needs or strengths of a child.

Domains:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Six needs</th>
<th>One strength</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Risk factors: Present safety needs</td>
<td>Strengths: Useful strengths are rated 0-1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Traumatic experiences: All traumatic</td>
<td>Strengths to build on are rated 2-3.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>experiences the child or young adult has</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gone through</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adjustment to trauma: Present symptoms</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>the child exhibits from trauma they have</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>experienced</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Life domain functioning: Daily</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>functioning needs</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Acculturation: Cultural, identity and</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>language concerns</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Emotional and behavioral needs: Mental</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>health needs</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Each item has a possible rating score from 0-3. Depending on the rating, a different response is needed.

Items:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Needs</th>
<th>Strengths</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>0 – No evidence or no concern</td>
<td>0 – Centerpiece</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 – Watch or prevent</td>
<td>1 – Useful strength</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 – Action needed</td>
<td>2 – Potential strength</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 – Immediate or intensive action</td>
<td>3 – None identified</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Items in the need-based domains and rated a 2 or 3 are considered actionable items. These items are the child’s needs to address.

Initial CANS screening

You must refer every child placed in substitute care for CANS screening. The timing for this is between the 14th and 21st day of out-of-home care. CANS screening provides valuable information for:

I. Case planning,

II. Service delivery, and

III. Establishing a level of care payment for enhanced supervision needs of a child.

Procedure

Refer every child entering care for a CANS screening between the 14th and 21st day of the child’s entry into substitute care. Include any information from other evaluations or plans with the referral. Submit the referral to the staff member in the branch office who coordinates referrals and sends completed referral information to the CANS screener.

I. The screener submits the results of the CANS screening to a central office level of care supervisor who:
   A. Reviews the results,
   B. Sets the effective date, and
   C. Approves the CANS.

The above determines a level of care through an algorithm.

II. Once CANS results have been determined, receive and review the information. The information describes the child’s:
   A. Strengths,
   B. Presenting behaviors and functioning,
   C. Functional domains where additional supervision is necessary to manage the needs of the child, and
   D. Recommendations for services based on the identified needs.

When reviewing the information, complete the following:
A. Does the child currently have suicidal ideation or intent? If so, review the supervisor plan created during the CANS screening. Assess whether the plan is appropriate or needs modification. Contact the substitute caregiver to review how the plan is working. Also, whether the child has any immediate supervision needs not being met by the substitute caregiver.

B. Review the CANS screening results with the certified family. This can be done during a required face-to-face contact.

C. Gather information about both the child’s strengths and the child’s supervision needs.

D. Incorporate this information into the case plan:
   1. Refer the child to services or further assessments recommended in the CANS screening.
   2. Determine if additional services are needed to provide for the supervision needs of the child.
   3. Determine if the child’s educational needs are being appropriately addressed. Based the determination on the information in the CANS screening.

Level of care

CANS screening may result in a child’s eligibility for a level of care payment. This payment would be in addition to the base rate reimbursement to the foster parent or relative caregiver. See Appendix 5.2 for rates for the base rate as well as level-of-care amounts. See Appendices 5.3a and 5.3b to understand the individual domains of the screening and the results that indicate the child’s level-of-care needs. The level of care is established by the level-of-care supervisor in central office based on CANS screening results.

Note: The base rate is designed to reimburse the foster parent or relative caregiver for the costs of providing the child with:

I. Food
   A. This includes the cost to cover a child’s special or unique nutritional needs.

II. Clothing
   A. This includes purchase and replacement.

III. Housing
   A. This includes maintenance of household utilities, furnishings and equipment.

IV. Daily supervision
   A. This includes maintenance of household utilities, furnishings, and equipment. It also includes teaching and directing to ensure safety and well-being at an appropriate level based on the child’s age.

V. Personal incidentals
   A. This including personal care items, entertainment, reading materials and miscellaneous items.

VI. Transportation costs
   A. This includes local travel associated with gas and oil expenses. It also includes vehicle maintenance and repair associated with transportation to and from:
1. Extracurricular,
2. Childcare,
3. Recreational, and
4. Cultural activities.

Supervision plan

A supervision plan is a documented set of strategies to help a certified family to provide what is necessary to promote and ensure a child’s safety and well-being in the areas of:

I. Additional support,
II. Observation,
III. Direction, and
IV. Guidance.

A supervision plan must be used when:

I. CANS screening results indicate a level of care that requires enhanced supervision, or
II. When a child with a level of care moves from one substitute care placement to another substitute placement.

Procedure

I. Within 30 days of receipt of the CANS screening results that indicate a level of care that requires enhanced supervision, contact the certified family. Explain the needs and supervision requirements necessary to maintain safety and support the well-being of the child.

II. When a child with a current supervision plan moves to another certified home, follow procedures to develop a supervision plan outlined below. Do so during, or shortly after, the placement process but no later than 30 days after placement.

III. Arrange a meeting with:
   A. The certified family
   B. The child when age and developmental level is appropriate, and
   C. Others involved in the child’s life. This may include:
      1. The child’s therapist,
      2. A teacher,
      3. Attorney or a CASA,
      4. Parents and other relatives, or
      5. Others as appropriate.

IV. During the meeting, develop a supervision plan that meets the supervision needs of the child.
A. Focus the meeting on addressing issues identified in the CANS screening. Include the following:
   1. The actions or activities to be provided by the certified family and any other individuals to meet the child’s identified needs. Examples of actions may include:
      - Proactive use of space,
      - Routine,
      - Structure of the environment,
      - Positive reinforcement, and
      - De-escalation techniques.
   2. The actions and assistance the department will provide to support the certified family to:
      - Address the needs of the child, and
      - Maintain the child in the home.
      Examples of this may include:
      - Referral for specific training for the certified family,
      - Referral for a service for the child, or
      - An increase in caseworker contact.
   3. The actions the child is to take, if applicable. For instance, if developmentally appropriate for the child, for the child to engage in counseling or participate in youth transition services.
   4. The people responsible for monitoring the child’s supervision needs. Most of the time, this includes the child’s caseworker, but a plan can also include the family’s certifier or a community partner.
   5. How the people responsible for monitoring the supervision plan will communicate with one another. For instance, there may be:
      - Regularly scheduled meetings,
      - Additional phone contact, or
      - Contact required when there are other concerns.
   6. When the plan is to be reviewed (at least every 60 days).

B. The caseworker, the certified family and other individuals who are to:
   1. Provide specific actions in the supervision plan, and
   2. Sign the supervision plan.

C. Have the child sign the supervision plan, if appropriate.

D. Submit the supervision plan to the supervisor for approval.

E. Review the supervision plan at least every 60 days. The review takes place during face-to-face contact in the certified family’s home.

F. During 30-day face-to-face contact with the child, be sure to address:
   1. Child safety,
2. Well-being issues,
3. How the child is doing, and
4. Particularly address concerns raised in the CANS screening.

G. Base the level of supervision actions on the level of care indicated in the CANS screening:

1. Level 1 (moderate needs) means the certified family must provide an environment with:
   - Additional support,
   - Direction,
   - Observation, and
   - Guidance.

   This environment is to ensure a child’s safety and well-being, beyond the level of supervision typically required for a child of the same age.

2. Level 2 (intermediate needs) means the certified family must provide a structured environment with:
   - Additional support,
   - Direction,
   - Observation, and
   - Guidance.

   This environment is to ensure a child’s safety and well-being, beyond the level of supervision typically required for a child of the same age.

3. Level 3 (advanced needs) means the certified family must provide a highly structured environment with:
   - Additional support,
   - Direction,
   - Observation, and
   - Guidance.

   This environment is to ensure a child’s safety and well-being beyond the level of supervision typically required for a child of the same age.

H. Supervision plan with use of physical restraint. If the child has significant behavioral issues and use of a planned physical restraint is part of the supervision plan, extra responsibilities must occur:

1. The certified family must have completed the physical restraint training required by ODHS. Work with the family’s certifier to refer for the training if the family has not completed it.

2. Discuss with the certified family the requirement that the family:
   - Document each use of the physical restraint in writing on a Physical Restraint Incident Report as soon as possible after each use;
   - Orally report the circumstances of each physical restraint to the caseworker or the caseworker’s supervisor within one business day; and Submit the Physical Restraint Incident Report to the caseworker within two business days. Involve the family’s certifier as needed to discuss these requirements with the family and provide the family with the forms.

3. Focus the plan on intervention strategies to modify the child’s behavior without the need for the physical restraint. Discuss with the certified family that restraint is only to be used when:
   - The child’s behavior poses an imminent danger to self or others, and
   - No alternate actions are sufficient to stop a child’s behavior.

4. Submit the plan to the child welfare program manager for approval.

5. Provide copies of the signed plan to the:
   - Certified family, and
   - Certified family’s certifier.

   File a copy in the child’s file.

6. Document a summary of the supervision plan in case notes and provider notes.

   I. Monitoring the supervision plan.

   1. At each face-to-face contact, assess whether the certified family is meeting the supervision needs of the child. Also, whether the supervision needs of the child have changed.

   V. If the supervision needs of the child are not being met, you must assess the child for safety; refer to Chapter 4, Managing Child Safety In and Out of the Home.

   VI. If the child is safe, but their supervision needs are not being met, ask the family’s certifier if there are resources available to provide the family:

      A. Training, or
      B. Other support.

Case planning

Use the child’s CANS results for case planning purposes. CANS can be used for:

   I. Placement matching,
   II. Reunification planning,
   III. Services, and
   IV. Interventions.

The focus of this all is the child’s well-being.

   I. Look over the current CANS results of the child to determine their needs and strengths and how they may fit in a home. This will help consider if a placement may be a match.
II. When planning for a return home, share and use the current CANS results as part of the reunification process. At the same time, assess parental protective capacities.

   A. Share CANS results with the parent(s) or current guardian and child. This will help them become aware of the needs the child is exhibiting. Also share CANS results with others involved in the reunification process. Examples are the child’s school or mental health providers.

   B. When you share the CANS results, discuss with the family how the parental protective capacities are, or are not, suited to meet the needs of the child. Furthermore, discuss how the parent(s) will address those needs.

III. Identify services and interventions for the child by using the CANS results to determine what needs the child has. Discuss these with service providers and family. Decide which family services and interventions are appropriate. Consider actionable need-based items, items rated 2 or 3. Use them to help identify services and interventions.

Examples:

I. A child or youth scores a 2 or 3 on anger control, danger to others, or aggressive behavior due to behaviors at home or school when frustrated. Refer the child to wraparound services, if available or eligible.

   An in-home plan explains how parents can manage aggression and is specific. The plan includes:

   A. Physical outlets and alternatives,

   B. Routines,

   C. Ownership techniques,

   D. Clear consequences,

   E. Positive reinforcement methods, and

   F. Coping techniques.

   Work to develop the plan with the parents or guardian and child or youth. Enlist the help of a counselor or behavior consultant. Share the CANS results with the school. Include their input in the plan. Consider additional services, such as:

   A. Parenting classes,

   B. A mentor for the child,

   C. After-school programs, or

   D. In-home services.

II. A child or youth scores a 2 or 3 on anxiety or depression. Have the child or youth work with a counselor to address the anxiety and depression.

   Explain how the parents can support the child in an in-home plan. The plan can include:

   A. Providing relax times;

   B. Developing routines;

   C. Monitoring what the child is exposed to (TV, internet, movies);
D. Determining what events are stressful and how to recognize them before the anxiety starts;
E. What coping strategies the child can use, physical activities; and
F. Other suggested strategies.

Develop the plan with the family and a professional counselor as needed. Share the plan with those involved in the implementation of the plan. Consider additional services such as:

A. Parenting classes,
B. One-on-one counseling,
C. Group or family therapy,
D. In-home services,
E. A mentor for the child, or
F. After-school programs.

III. A child or youth scored a 2 or 3 on sexual behavior. Have the child or youth work with a counselor or therapist as needed to address current behaviors or past trauma. Develop an in-home plan for the family that helps the parents establish clear boundaries that protect the child. The plan includes:

A. What the parents do if they see inappropriate sexualized behavior;
B. How they report it to the caseworker and a therapist;
C. Structures and routines;
D. What supervision is required and when;
E. Bedroom and bathroom protocols; and
F. What appropriate play would be acceptable for the child or youth.

Consider additional services, such as:

A. Parenting classes,
B. One-on-one counseling,
C. Group or family therapy,
D. In-home services,
E. A mentor for the child, or
F. After-school programs.

IV. If life-changing events occur (e.g., out-of-state placement changes, returns home, death of a family member or separation of siblings), and this results in new behaviors, consider a CANS rescreen as outlined in the Subsequent CANS Screening section of this chapter.

Subsequent CANS screening

Procedure

I. With supervisory approval, refer each child for a CANS screening:
A. Within 12 months from the date of the initial CANS screening and the child remains with a certified family, or
B. When a child or young adult returns to a placement with a certified family after a Behavior Rehabilitation Services (BRS) placement of six months or longer.

II. With supervisory approval, refer a child for a re-screening, when:
A. A child or young adult is living with a certified family, and
B. The certified family has observed:
   1. Ongoing, documented changes in behavior or functioning, which:
      - Has not improved through a revision of the supervision actions and activities provided by the certified family and other individuals, or
      - Endangers the child’s safety or the safety of others, and
      - The last CANS screen was completed more than 90 days before the current CANS re-screening referral. (An exception to the 90 days can be approved through the level of care manager.)

Examples:

I. A bottle of beer is found in the bedroom of a teen. This would not result in a re-screen. However, it should result in consequences and possible service referrals for the child. A teen coming home intoxicated and acting belligerent or aggressive over time would result in a request for a re-screen.

II. A child receives after-school detention for one day. This would not result in a re-screen. A child suspended from school after serving three in-school detentions or other sanctions over time would result in a request for a re-screen.

III. A young adult staying out past curfew or overnight one time. This would not result in a re-screen. A young adult repeatedly staying out overnight and refusing to abide by curfew rules would result in a request for a re-screen.

IV. A young child yelling at a foster parent when upset. This would not result in a re-screening. A young child repeatedly yelling at a foster parent and threatening harm over time or using physical aggression would result in a request for a re-screen.

V. A child with a new diagnosis of ADHD would not result in a re-screening. A child whose repeated impulsive behavior results in considerable safety risk or interferes with functioning in at least one life domain would result in a request for a re-screen.

Note: Observed, documented change. The change in behavior or functioning must be:
A. Seen,
B. Identified, and
C. Recorded.

To be considered for a re-screen, the change in behavior needs to:
A. Endanger the child’s own safety or well-being, or
B. Endanger the safety of others.

VI. Ongoing change: The observed and documented change needs to occur over time. It cannot be a one-time event.

VII. The emphasis is on a change in behavior. It is not meant to capture a new diagnosis or result of urine analysis.

Supervisor’s role

I. Staff with the caseworker any questions or concerns they have with the CANS screening results.

II. Approve the supervision plan in accordance with CANS screening results.

III. Review requests for a re-screen within the 12-month period and approve as appropriate.

IV. Determine the appropriateness of planned use of restraint before seeking approval on a supervision plan from the child welfare program manager. (This includes physical restraint.)
Chapter 5

Section 7: Treatment and Residential Placements
Treatment and Residential Placements

There are several types of Oregon Health Authority (OHA) and Office of Developmental Disability Service (ODDS) treatment settings as well as Child Welfare contracted treatment placements appropriate for children or young adults whose behaviors and needs are so challenging or specialized, they cannot remain with their family or in a certified resource family home. Treatment and other residential placements are designed to address children and young adult’s treatment and supervision needs in a residential (also known as congregate care) or proctor setting. Depending on the type of treatment and level of care, the setting may provide: trained staff offering assessment and evaluation, treatment services and behavior rehabilitation services such as skills training. Primarily, Child Welfare Treatment Services contracts directly with agencies to provide Behavior Rehabilitation Services (BRS) while other agencies, such as OHA and ODDS provide access to specialized treatment for mental health, developmental disabilities and substance abuse disorder. The goal of these placement settings and services is to stabilize the child or young adult, leading to an eventual transition to home or other less restrictive substitute care placement setting. Other Child Welfare contracted placements and services are available that do not fall under BRS programming and will be discussed further below.

Types of Treatment and Residential Settings

Oregon is committed to serving children and young adults in the least restrictive setting as possible and ensuring that children and young adults placed in a residential setting not only receive quality services but could not be supported in any other placement setting due to supervision and treatment needs. There are three avenues to obtain treatment services in Oregon:

I. Residential Services provided through the Oregon Health Plan include: https://www.oregon.gov/oha/HSD/BH-Child-Family/Pages/Intensive-Services.aspx
   - Mental health services in Psychiatric Residential Treatment Services (PRTS) programs;
   - Subacute Psychiatric Care;
   - Secure Children’s Inpatient Program (SCIP) and Secure Adolescent Inpatient Program (SAIP);
   - Residential Substance Use Disorder programs;
   - Transition Age Youth (TAY) programs for young adults (17-24) who require increased behavioral health services while developing independent living skills;
   - The SAGE Program for survivors of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (CSEC); and
   - Adolescent Substance Use Disorder Programs

II. Services provided through Developmental Disability Services: children and young adults qualifying for developmental disability services may have access to a DD certified foster home or specialized group home. https://www.oregon.gov/ODHS/SENIORS-DISABILITIES/DD/Pages/children-supports.aspx

III. Services provided through Child Welfare contracted placements-BRS (residential and proctor settings) and Non-BRS residential programs are for children and young adults in the custody of Child Welfare.

Below is an Overview of the Array of Child Welfare Contracted Placements:

Behavior Rehabilitation Services (BRS) Programs
Child Welfare contracts for residential and proctor programs with licensed Child Caring Agencies (CCA’s) to provide Behavior Rehabilitation Services.

NOTE: The term child/children is used exclusively when discussing children and young adults placed in CCA’s as the term child/children applies to youth up to 21 when placed in a CCA.

BRS programming occurs in both proctor (family proctor homes certified by a child caring agency) and residential facilities. BRS programs are Medicaid-funded services that provide behavioral intervention and skill-building services to a child to ameliorate identified behaviors that prevent the child from placement with family or in a non-relative ODHS certified home. Every child or young adult referred for placement in a BRS program must have demonstrated behavioral or emotional needs that cannot be managed and remedied in less structured and less restrictive environments or through the use of available community resources and supports. Each BRS program serves a specific population of children and has specific admission criteria. For example, some BRS programs are designed to serve children who have sexually reactive or aggressive behaviors while others specialize in serving commercially sexually exploited children (CSEC). All BRS placements are time limited with a focused effort on the child building skills and achieving identified treatment goals so a successful transition to a lower level of care can occur.

- Proctor- Treatment Services contracts with CCA’s throughout the state to provide BRS in proctor homes. The CCA’s directly certify and provide oversight for these proctor homes and the majority of BRS required weekly hours are provided by the proctor parents.

- Residential-Treatment Services contracts with CCA’s throughout the state to provide BRS in residential facilities. These programs all have 24/7 rotating staff in a milieu (group based) setting. Some programs are housed in traditional facility like placements while others resemble more of a home like environment.
  - Qualified Residential Treatment Programs (QRTP’s)- This classification of BRS residential programming is a result of both the national and state legislation that require residential programs to meet specific standards and to ensure that children and young adults who are placed in residential programs receive a high quality of care. BRS residential programs that are classified as ‘QRTP’s’ are not a homogenous group of BRS residential programs as within this classification there is a continuum of staff supervision requirements and type of BRS programming. Many of the QRTP requirements have been included in general BRS administrative rule so there is a consistent expectation of BRS programming throughout the state whether a program is a QRTP or not. For detailed information on QRTP requirements, please see BRS administrative rule.
  - Programs specializing in providing prenatal, post-partum or parenting supports.
  - Programs that provide specialized supportive services to children who have been found to be or at risk of becoming sex-trafficking victims.
  - BRS Shelter & BRS Short Term Stabilization: BRS programs that fall into this category are of very limited duration as a child cannot remain for longer than 60 continuous days or 90 cumulative days in a 12 month period. Additionally, there cannot be co-mingling of ODHS children with youth served by the juvenile department or OYA in these types of programs. These placements are:
    - Short-term, substitute care provided to a child for whom regular resource care is unavailable or inappropriate due to the child’s needs or behaviors;
    - For children and young adults who require short-term stabilization of behavioral and emotional disturbances before returning home or to a less restrictive placement; and
• For children and young adults who need an evaluation for possible placement in residential care.

Runaway and Homeless Programs Offering Short Term Stabilization and Assessment Services

RRC’s help facilitate placement in a runaway and homeless program when children or young adults need an immediate placement. These are ODHS licensed programs and contracted through Treatment Services to provide supervision and limited services for a short period of time. Placements in such a program are restricted to 60 continuous days or 90 cumulative days in a twelve month period. In the event a child or young adult was placed in a runaway and homeless program after hours, it is critical to:

• Notify the RRC the next business day;
• Submit a CF1055, Behavioral Rehabilitation Services Referral, if one has not already been provided; and
• Submit a 91 form to notify Treatment Services of the placement.

Once a child or young adult is placed in a runaway and homeless program, a transition plan should be immediately pursued to prevent multiple disrupted placements. Work closely with your RRC, the child’s family and the permanency team to identify appropriate transition placements.

These runaway and homeless placements are:

• Used when an unanticipated placement need arises for a child or young adult with behavioral and emotional needs and a BRS bed is not available; and
• A service provided by approved licensed private child caring agencies.

Residential Licensed Family Setting

ODHS is only allowed to contract with two programs that are licensed as residential programs (not BRS) though are physically located in a provider’s home. These programs offer a home-like feel with staff living on site as well as additional staff coming into the home to provide required supervision.

Supervised Independent Living-Basic (SIL) & Plus

Treatment Services contracts with agencies to provide independent living services and supports to young adults 18+ while residing in an independent living setting. These programs are for young adults with a history of BRS or mental health services and require specialized services as they transition to living independently. For young adults with significant mental health needs requiring increased weekly services, Supervised Independent Living Plus offers those additional supports to help the young adult maintain independent living in the community (Chapter 5, Section 15: Placement of Youth in an approved supervised independent living arrangement).

Assess the Child or Young Adult’s Unique Needs

Procedure

1. Consider treatment or residential care for a child or young adult in Child Welfare’s legal custody when the child or young adult:
• Has emotional, mental health and/or behavioral needs that cannot be addressed in a certified resource home;
• Presents a moderate to severe risk of harm to self or others;
• Lacks social skills and has frequent episodes of aggressive or antisocial behavior;
• Exhibits persistent or unpredictable aggression; and/or
• Is markedly withdrawn and isolated or has attempted suicide.

II. A treatment or residential care placement can also be used when a family or Indian Custodian enters into a Voluntary Placement Agreement with Child Welfare. This is authorized only when the sole reason for placing a child is the need to obtain services for the child’s emotional and behavioral disorder. The parents or Indian Custodian retain legal custody of the child and must play an active role in their child’s treatment and planning. For more information on working with a family under a Voluntary Placement Agreement, refer to Chapter 7, Family Support Services. It is critical if a child is placed in a treatment or residential program under a Voluntary Placement Agreement, that the caseworker remains an active member of the child’s team to ensure effective coordination between the program and parents or Indian Custodian. Note: A family or Indian Custodian cannot enter into a Voluntary Placement agreement for placement of a young adult. Please see Chapter 7 Family Support Services for more information.

III. Explore resources to support the child or young adult in the current substitute care placement (e.g., mental health counseling, a Behavior Intervention Plan, services provided to families through community agencies, mentoring and support programs or FOCUS) prior to considering treatment or residential care.

IV. Determine that remaining at home or in the substitute care placement with a relative caregiver or resource parent is inappropriate due to the child or young adult’s needs and behaviors, and cannot be supported and sustained with additional community resources and support or through a placement support plan.

V. Meet with the child or young adult to explore his or her needs, discuss options that may be available and encourage the child or young adult to participate in the process of substitute care placement decisions whenever appropriate. Explore these individualized services in a meeting with the child or young adult’s family, current substitute caregiver, the Tribal National worker (if ICWA case) and service professionals (see Chapter 4, Section 6, Conducting Family Meetings).

VI. Consider a treatment or residential setting only after all other resources for meeting the child or young adult’s needs in a less restrictive environment have been explored or exhausted. Document all efforts to find an alternative to a treatment or residential placement in OR-Kids.

• Consult with your supervisor. Use your supervisor as the first resource in assessing if a treatment or BRS placement may be appropriate and identify if other service or placement options may meet the child or young adult’s needs. When additional consultation or support in accessing services or placement is necessary, utilize the following resources:
• The resource developer (district dependent) can assist the caseworker in identifying local programs and services available to meet the child or young adult’s identified needs. The resource developer can assist in securing contracted services.
• Contact the local RRC to determine if the child or young adult could be eligible for FOCUS funded services (see Chapter 5, section 8: Target Planning and Consultation Committee Referrals). RRCs provide technical assistance and consultation to caseworkers and assist in locating or maintaining a substitute care placement for a particular child or young adult. RRCs assist in situations when a caseworker and supervisor cannot locate an appropriate substitute care placement resource and need to identify a specialized type of placement to meet the unique needs of the child or young adult.

Best Practice Tip: If child or young adult is struggling and could benefit from increased behavioral health support, connect with the child or young adult’s assigned Coordinated Care Organization (CCO) through the Oregon Health Plan (OHP). At each CCO, there is an Intensive Care Manager who can assist in identifying potential behavioral health services in which the child or young adult may qualify. A referral to Wraparound services should also be considered.

VII. A BRS referral is not appropriate if the following circumstance exist:

- A child or young adult’s needs can be met in a certified resource family home;
- A child or young adult’s relationships with siblings could be better preserved in another setting;
- A child or young adult has a diagnosed mental and/or emotional disorder and has been determined to require psychiatric hospitalization to protect self or others;
- A young adult has demonstrated the ability to function independently through Independent Living Program services, indicating that independent living is a better option;
- A child or young adult whose needs, circumstances or social history indicate that available BRS programs could not assist the child or young adult, or that the child or young adult and/or the community could not be protected during the placement;
- A child’s or young adult’s placement history clearly shows that additional use of BRS programs will not be of further benefit; and/or
- A child or young adult is eligible for services through Developmental Disabilities and cannot access needed services or resources in a BRS placement. NOTE: A child or young adult eligible for Developmental Disabilities may be referred to a BRS program.
- The child or young adult does not have two or more behaviors as identified on page 4-6 of the CF 1055 BRS referral form.

Centralized Referral Process

This procedure describes the specific process for a referral for BRS and Child Welfare contracted placements. The referral process to a Qualified Residential Treatment Program includes additional steps that include a QRTP assessment and court approval with strict timeframes which must be adhered to. Please see section E for the QRTP referral procedure. Note, a placement cannot occur in a Child Welfare contracted Residential or Proctor program unless the Centralized Referral Process is followed. The only exception is for after hours emergency placements in a runaway and homeless placement, please see previous section under runaway and homeless services for more detail.

The referral process is as follows for a BRS or residential Child Welfare contracted placement:

- Ensure the child or young adult is in the legal custody of Child Welfare by juvenile court order or ensure each custodial parent or Indian Custodian has signed a Voluntary Placement Agreement (refer to Chapter 7, Family Support Services, for detailed procedures regarding working with a family and using a Voluntary Placement Agreement).

- Consult with the local RRC regarding the child or young adult’s current placement needs, behaviors, functioning, services and supports. The RRC will provide guidance on potential BRS or other placement options that might be an appropriate fit for the child or young adult. Careful consideration in discussing future placement and services should center on programs that can support the child or young adult’s cultural and racial identity as well as provide a safe and affirming environment if the child or young adult identifies as LGBTQIA2S+ (see chapter 5, section 41). If the child or young adult has any specialized medical or unique developmental needs, the RRC will need all information to help determine the best placement options.

- Discuss with the RRC about Oregon Health Plan (OHP)/Coordinate Care Organization (CCO) healthcare coverage and if it is appropriate for the child or young adult to enroll into the plan available in the geographic region of placement or if it is critical for the child or young adult to maintain their current CCO due to pending authorization or critical service providers.

- Formally initiate a referral to the local RRC:

  - Caseworker completes pages 1-10 on the CF1055. This is the official contracted placement referral form and is required for all contracted Child Welfare placements. It is imperative that the document is thoroughly completed with as much detail as possible, to include specific dates and descriptions of behavior as needed. If there are questions, please connect with the RRC. A thorough and detailed referral packet that gives a complete description of the child or young adult to include a strong focus on strengths is key to a successful referral and best placement matching.

  - Caseworker and a supervisor must sign the form on page 8. Physical or electronic signatures are accepted.

  - Caseworker then attaches additional information to the CF1055. This is listed on page 1 and should include (if applicable):
    - Required- most recent court order or voluntary placement agreement;
    - Recent psychological evaluation (within the past two years);
    - Psychiatric assessment (within the past two years);
    - Mental health assessment (within the past two years);
    - IEP;
    - CANS screening;
    - Wrap service plan;
    - Family Report-applicable sections for child only or young adult;
    - Youth Transition Plan for an older child or young adult that is being referred to a BRS ILP program; and
    - Other documentation that may speak to child or young adult’s needs and functioning.

  - All documentation along with CF1055 should be scanned into 1 pdf file and sent to the appropriate RRC’s regional email box.
• The RRC will review the referral packet and will either request more information from the caseworker or send the referral to the Centralized Referral Coordinator for distribution to programs.

• The Centralized BRS referral Coordinator will send the referral packet to the programs recommended by the RRC.

• The provider will respond to the RRC and the Centralized Referral Coordinator in writing within five business days if the referral is approved for screening or denied. If the referral is denied, the notification will include the specific reason(s) the child or young adult is not appropriate for admission to the program. The RRC and caseworker will consult about additional resources and placement options.

• If the child or young adult is accepted for a screening, the RRC will connect the caseworker with the provider, and they will agree to a screening date and time. Every effort must be made to involve the family in the placement, treatment and transition plans of their child and young adult. The caseworker and the child or young adult’s family should attend the screening.

• Keep the child or young adult’s family and permanency team up to date on the status of the referral process.

• If the screening results in the child or young adult being accepted for admission, establish a date for the child or young adult’s physical move to the BRS program with the child or young adult, family, current substitute caregiver (if applicable) and the BRS program staff. Address questions and concerns of the child or young adult and family to ensure their cooperation in the placement process.

• The child or young adult’s OHP/CCO healthcare coverage will automatically switch to the region of geographic placement when placed in a BRS program unless otherwise noted. Discuss whether there is a reason for the child or young adult to retain the current CCO coverage with your assigned RRC and the child or young adult’s team. Retaining (or ‘locking’) CCO healthcare insurance/coverage would be the exception and not the standard process. It would be used in situations where there are pre-existing authorizations in place such as for unique medical needs or inpatient mental health services (psychiatric residential or sub-acute).

Best Practice Tip: Make intake screenings and the admission to the program a top priority. These are critical events for the child or young adult and family and could prevent unneeded placement disruptions.

The Supervisor’s Role

• Assist the caseworker in identifying the need for a treatment or residential placement;

• Ensure the caseworker works with the RRC;

• Ensure the caseworker completes all tasks needed to achieve the placement;

• Review, approve and sign the BRS referral (CF1055) and ensure the referral packet is complete and submitted to RRC;

• Consult with caseworker about the child or young adult’s OHP/CCO coverage and whether the CCO of origin should remain the same for short term/temporary shelter placements;

• Assist the caseworker in resolving any problems with referral and placement of the child or young adult;

• Facilitate requests by the RRC to resolve problems arising during the BRS placement process; and
• Ensure the caseworker continues to diligently seek and secure long-term placement for the child if placed in a time limited setting.

Additional Requirements When Referring, Assessing and Obtaining Approval for a Qualified Residential Treatment Program (QRTP) Placement

During the staffing with the RRC and caseworker, a QRTP placement may be determined appropriate if the child or young adult’s needs indicate a high level of supervision in a residential setting. The RRC will advise if a referral should be made to a QRTP. Review the recommendations of the CANS QRTP algorithm, if available. Whether a caseworker was notified of the QRTP algorithm outcome or not, the score itself will always display on the OR-Kids desktop and search results. Under Placements/Services > Enhanced Supervision, staff will be able to view at-a-glance the algorithm outcome for each CANS assessment. One of the following recommendations will be viewable:

<table>

<tr>
<th>QRTP Indication</th>

<tr>
<td>a. QRTP/BRS is not indicated as a benefit at this time</td>

This algorithm was designed to assess a child or young adult’s potential level of placement and service need based on the CANS screening information. Upon an initial CANS screening or subsequent re-screen, caseworkers are sent an email notifying them of the child or young adult’s QRTP algorithm recommendation. The information is also stored for future viewing in the QRTP Assessment document described above. If a caseworker receives notification that a child has an indicated level of need based on the QRTP algorithm; it is important for the caseworker to staff with the RRC if they have not previously consulted with the RRC. It is recommended that, upon receiving an elevated indication of need, the caseworker consults with their local RRC, supervisor and child or young adult’s family and permanency team to discuss the child or young adult’s current needs, placement and services to determine if additional supports would be beneficial.

Reviewing the CANS Level of Care Score in combination with the QRTP algorithm determination allows for a comprehensive overview of the child or young adult’s current needs to aid in service plan development and safety planning.

Although the QRTP algorithm recommendation should be discussed with the RRC during the initial staffing, a QRTP referral can move forward even if a QRTP level of care is not indicated. The QRTP algorithm recommendation is only one source of information in the determination if a QRTP is appropriate.
I. If the RCC approves, the caseworker will submit the BRS referral following the Centralized Referral Process. A ‘STAT CANS’ form provided by the RRC also needs to be completed so an expedited CANS can be requested. Upon receiving the BRS referral and STAT CANS form, the RRC will send the documentation to a Central Office contractor designated as a Qualified Individual (QI) to complete a QRTP Assessment and CANS. The QRTP assessment must occur within 30 days of placement in a QRTP; however, it is best practice to consult with the RRC and proceed with the QRTP assessment process prior to an urgent placement need. The (QI) is required to assess each child referred to a QRTP and determine if a QRTP is the least restrictive and most appropriate level of care.

II. Caseworker assembles the family and permanency team to:

- Identify the strengths and needs of the child or young adult;
- Identify the short and long-term goals of the child or young adult; and
- Determine the placement preferences of the family and permanency team and how the preferred placement meets the needs of the child or young adult, including the need for siblings to be placed together.

The family and permanency team meeting does not have to be held as a separate meeting and may occur as part of another standing meeting such as a Family Engagement Meeting, WRAP meeting or Youth Decision Meeting. Regardless of the meeting type or venue, the caseworker must make reasonable and good faith efforts to identify and include the following individuals as team members:

- Biological family members, relatives and fictive kin of the child or young adult;
- Professionals who are a resource to the family of the child or young adult, including teachers, medical or mental health providers who have treated the child or young adult, or clergy;
- If the child is 14 years or older, the child or young adult can select up to two members of the team who are not a foster parent; a caseworker for the child or young adult; or someone the Department has good cause to believe would not act in the best interests of the child or young adult; and

- The Qualified Individual(QI) is a required participant at the meeting.

When identifying and selecting who is a team member, the caseworker always considers what is in the best interest of the child or young adult and who the family and child or young adult identifies. The caseworker should engage family members, seek their valuable input and accommodate their needs as much as possible including when scheduling team meetings.

Although the legal parties, including the child or young adult, are not required to be members of the team, it is best practice to invite them to any team meetings unless doing so is not in the best interest of the child or young adult. As the child or young adult’s placement preferences are important and necessary, the caseworker should engage and seek the child’s or young adult’s input and document it independently if they are not included as a team member.

The QRTP assessment includes consideration of the placement preferences of the team, the child or young adult and other legal parties. It is important the caseworker and/ or facilitator use the family and permanency team meeting form (ODHS 2730) to guide the team’s discussion and document critical information either before, during or following the meeting.
The family and permanency meeting form documents the case plan requirements. The team meeting form, however, must be attached to the Family Report at each permanency hearing and subsequent court hearing as long as the child or young adult is placed in a QRTP. To ensure the required information is obtained, the caseworker documents the following information on the team meeting form:

- The reasonable and good faith efforts of the agency to identify and include all the individuals required to be on the family and permanency team;
- All contact information for members of the family and permanency team, as well as contact information for other family members and fictive kin who are not part of the team;
- Efforts to hold the team meeting at a time and place convenient for family;
- If reunification is the goal, efforts to ensure the parents of the child or young adult provided input on who should be a member of the team;
- Placement preferences of the family and permanency team, and how the preferred placement meets the needs of the child or young adult including the need for siblings to be placed together; and
- Placement preferences of the legal parties, including the child or young adult.

III. If the family and permanency team agree that the child or young adult cannot be placed with family or in a certified resource home, then the caseworker documents the agreement and e-mails the meeting form to the Qualified Individual (QI). If the family and permanency team cannot reach agreement or do not agree the child or young adult should be placed in a QRTP or more restrictive level of care, then the caseworker staffs with the supervisor, the RRC and QI to determine if further consideration of a QRTP placement is appropriate. As long as the QI recommends placement, approval for a QRTP placement may proceed but every effort should be made to reach agreement with the family and permanency team including sharing updated information and/or holding additional meetings.

IV. Caseworker e-mails the team meeting form documenting the team’s placement preferences to the QI. The QI will conduct the assessment using the CANS screening (including the QRTP algorithm), completed CF1055 referral packet with collateral documentation and participation in the family and permanency team meeting.

V. It is best practice to notify the child or young adult’s family and permanency team of the QRTP assessment outcome within five business days of its completion.

VI. If a QRTP placement is approved, the caseworker proceeds on to obtaining court approval. If a QRTP placement is not recommended the caseworker has 30 calendar days to transition the child out of a QRTP if placement occurred prior to assessment completion. If the caseworker or child or young adult’s permanency team do not agree with this decision, additional documentation or substantive information can be provided to the QI for redetermination. If there is no new information to provide, a rescreen can be requested by the worker after 90 days of pursuing a placement and potential services as recommended by the QRTP assessment, if continued efforts have not been successful.

A rescreen is necessary if the child or young adult is not placed within 90 days of the initial QRTP assessment and recommendation. A rescreen is an abridged clinical document review to establish if any condition has changed and therefore would alter the initial recommendation.

VII. Child Welfare is required to receive court approval each time a child or young adult is placed in a QRTP. If the QRTP placement has not been approved prior to a child’s placement, the court must approve the QRTP placement no later than 60 days following the date of placement. To obtain court approval, a motion must be filed within 30 calendar days of a QRTP placement seeking court approval.

The following steps are taken to ensure court approval is obtained within the required timeframe:

- Treatment Services will email the local Department of Justice attorney to provide notification when either a child or young adult has been placed in a QRTP or, prior to a child or young adult’s placement, a QRTP assessment has been completed recommending QRTP placement. The caseworker, supervisor and RRC will be copied on the e-mail and the assessment attached if completed.

- DOJ will submit a motion requesting a court hearing, attaching the QRTP assessment. If the QRTP assessment has not been completed by the date of placement in a QRTP, Treatment Services will forward the QRTP assessment immediately upon completion to the local DOJ attorney which will be submitted to the court as a supplemental motion.

- Prior the court hearing, the caseworker submits an exhibit to the court of the Family Report and the family and permanency team meeting notes.

The court will determine if a QRTP placement is the most appropriate setting and either approve or disapprove of a QRTP placement. If the court disapproves of a QRTP placement and the child or young adult has not been placed yet, placement in a QRTP cannot occur at that time. The caseworker will need to re-staff with the RRC and determine what other levels of care can be accessed and meet the child or young adult’s supervision and behavioral needs. If the child is already placed in a QRTP, the caseworker will need to immediately staff with their supervisor and RRC to identify placement options. The child must transition out of the QRTP no later than 30 calendar days following the date the court enters the order.

If the court approves the QRTP placement and the youth is not yet in a QRTP placement the caseworker can continue to work with the RRC to identify an appropriate program. If the child or young adult is already in a QRTP prior to court approval, the child remains in the placement. The worker can proceed to the section on Ongoing Case Management for Child or Young Adult in BRS Program under section iii. Ongoing Requirements When a Child or Young Adult is Placed in a QRTP.

Each time a child or young adult is placed in a QRTP setting, a QRTP assessment and court approval are required. If the previous assessment is less than 6 months old, the QI can conduct a re-screen based on the updated BRS referral packet and will contact the caseworker to discuss any changes since the last QRTP assessment including participating in the family and permanency team meeting.

Handling Referral Problems

When the provider finds the child or young adult is appropriate for placement, but is placed on the waitlist:

- Staff the case with the supervisor;

- Staff the case with the local RRC;

- Develop an alternate plan for the child or young adult based on recommendations from supervisor, RRC and child or young adult’s family and permanency team; and
• Develop a Behavior Intervention Plan to support the care of the child with the relative caregiver or resource parent (if this resource is available and willing to help with the plan), until a placement resource becomes available; and Use educational, mental health or other service personnel to obtain needed services as appropriate.

When the child or young adult is not accepted by the program:

• Staff the case with supervisor:
  • If the supervisor believes the child or young adult is appropriate for placement:
    • Contact the RRC for clarification as to the reasons for rejection and request that further information in writing;
    • Offer to provide further information to the RRC and provider needed to address any provider’s concerns or questions about the referral;
    • The RRC will contact the provider, if necessary, to resolve the dispute over the referral’s rejection. If contractual issues are identified, the RRC will contact the assigned Treatment Services Program Analyst for intervention with the program to resolve the matter; and
    • If the denial stands, consult with the RRC to determine placement options and next steps.
  • If the supervisor agrees the child or young adult is not appropriate for placement:
    • Develop an alternate plan for the child or young adult based on recommendations from the program;
    • Consult the RRC for assistance, if needed;
    • If appropriate, develop a Behavior Intervention Plan to support the care of the child or young adult with the relative caregiver or resource parent until a placement resource becomes available; and
    • Use the Resource Developer, educational, mental health or other service personnel to obtain needed services.

Preparing for Placement - A Case Worker’s Checklist

I. Notification to the CCO- if a child or young adult moves out of a CCO’s service area and the decision has been made to maintain that CCO’s service (requiring a notification to the RRC), it is critical to contact the CCO. This is typically done by speaking to the Intensive Care Manager if the child or young adult does not have a Care Coordinator through Wrap. The CCO needs to be aware the child or young adult has moved out of their service area and into a BRS placement so that services can be coordinated. In situations like this, the CCO will need to approve medical/dental/mental health services local to the child or young adult. If the child or young adult will need to travel to maintain service providers, it is important to work with the BRS program in identifying how transportation will occur as it is not the responsibility of BRS programs to transport children or young adults outside of the local area to obtain medical/dental/mental health services.

II. Ensure the child or young adult goes to the placement with an adequate quantity and type of clothing. The provider will be responsible to maintain the child’s clothing and adequately supply the child with clothing. However, if the child goes through a significant developmental change (height/weight/gender identity) then it is important to work collaboratively with the program in meeting the child’s increased clothing needs.

III. If the child or young adult is on medication, ensure a minimum 14-day supply is provided upon placement along with a prescription and provider information. At times, programs may not be able to successfully complete intake if the proper supply of medication is not available.

IV. Ensure there is a plan in place to meet ongoing educational needs. Obtain a court order immediately (prior to placement) for a Best Interest finding, if required, to enroll the child or young adult in a new school district. Provide the IEP upon placement if it was not included in the CF1055 referral packet, as it is critical to help ensure a smooth transition to a new school.

V. If there are mental health or A&D service needs, connect with the provider to notify them of the referral request. Please note, BRS placements do not necessarily provide a comprehensive array of services. BRS programs treat the behavioral challenges of children and outside service providers should immediately be identified as a service need in coordinating placement of the child or young adult.

VI. If the child or young adult needs increased supervision or individualized care, connect with the program prior to placement to ensure these needs can be met and done so upon placement.

VII. If the child or young adult is placed in a limited duration program such as BRS shelter, BRS Short Term Stabilization or a Runaway and Homeless program, consult frequently with the supervisor and RRC during the child’s stay to develop a plan in identifying another substitute care placement in a timely manner. Extensions past 60 days cannot be provided and therefore it is critical that the child’s or young adult’s team work to identify a subsequent placement immediately.

Best Practice Tip: Consider a family meeting to discuss substitute care placement options to meet the child’s or young adult’s needs. If the decision is to refer the child for ongoing BRS placement, psychiatric residential care, substance use disorder or DD services, follow the appropriate procedure as described in this chapter.

VIII. Based on feedback from the child or young adult and child’s or young adult’s family team, as well as written documentation, identify goals to be achieved by the child or young adult while in the program. Within 48 hours, BRS programs develop an Initial Service Plan and it’s important to provide the program feedback regarding the initial goals and what immediate services needs to be put in place.

IX. Notify service providers, as appropriate, working with the child and family that the child will be placed in a contracted program.

Intake

I. Be present with the child or young adult at the time of the physical move to the program to provide support and fulfill responsibility to complete intake paperwork. When possible, have family also present for the intake. If you are unable to accompany the child or young adult on day of placement, ensure covering staff has all required information needed to successfully complete an intake. This includes ensuring covering staff can answer any needed questions and bring all required items with child or young adult such as personal belongings and medication in its original container with sufficient supply (14 day minimum is recommended) along with a prescription. Schedule a visit with the child as soon as possible to see how child is adjusting and to meet program staff.
II. You will be provided a list of program policies and it’s critical these are reviewed to ensure you understand program expectations of you and the child or young adult and how the program operates.

III. Help develop a safety plan. It is critical to review with the program upon placement what the safety plan will entail, including supervision requirements. Communicate any concerns or proposed changes to this plan as it’s important for providers and caseworkers to collaboratively identify supervision that fits the needs of the child or young adult. Remember this is a new living environment for the child or young adult and strict supervision requirements can be reduced as the child or young adult is able to demonstrate responsible and safe behavior.

IV. Assist the child or young adult with settling in. Going to a new placement, especially if it is a child’s first experience in a residential program, can be difficult and uncomfortable. This is especially true if the child or young adult does not identify with their peers due to Sexual Orientation/Gender Identity/Gender Expression (SOGIE), culture or language. It is recommended to schedule either a call or in person check shortly after transition to follow up with child or young adult and program staff. Children and young adult’s are the most successful in programs with caseworker involvement immediately upon intake. Active participation by caseworkers conveys a message that you are concerned and are supporting the decision for placement to provide the services and skill building.

V. Complete Section A of the CF0091 form and send to the RRC’s regional email box.

VI. The Oregon Health Plan/CCO covers the child’s medical care. When placements are entered into OR-Kids, a medical card is automatically sent to the program.

Ongoing Case Management for a Child in a BRS Program

I. What to expect in a BRS program:
   - The following are the BRS types of care that are within the service and placement array that Treatment Services contracts for: Shelter; Assessment & Evaluation; Short Term Stabilization; Basic Residential; Intensive Rehabilitation; Intensive Behavioral Support; Independent Living; Enhanced Structure ILP and proctor. Each of these BRS types of care have supervision ratios, service plan requirements and weekly required behavioral rehabilitation service hours (6 or 11 hours depending on the type of BRS program). The weekly BRS hours are primarily targeted at skill training, 1:1 with proctor parents and staff (denoted as individual counseling—not to be confused with mental health counseling), group skill building and parent training as appropriate.
   - BRS programs create an Initial Service Plan within 48 hours of placement to immediately identify targeted behavioral goals followed up by regular service plan updates which should include the child’s family and permanency team. As much as possible, attending these meetings in person signals commitment and ongoing collaboration with the program to help the child achieve their treatment goals.

II. Caseworker’s Role:
   - Supporting the child and family’s participation in the treatment process is critical to the success of the placement and the return of the child home or to a less restrictive level of care once treatment services are completed. While the caseworker is a partner with the provider and the family, it also is important for the caseworker to be an advocate for the child by ensuring the provider is accountable for serving the child and family in the best possible manner. The caseworker also has a responsibility to ensure the child is safe in the placement by making regular face-to-face contact with the child and the provider and following required face-to-face contact procedures in Chapter 4, section 9: Monitor the Child Welfare Case Plan through Required Contacts;

- Crises may occur during a placement when the child, family or provider request a change of placement or change in the treatment plan for the child. The caseworker must respond in such cases and, when appropriate, work to motivate the child, family and/or the provider to continue in the services or revise the placement and treatment plan with the child, parents and provider;

- Act as an advocate for the child with the program;

- Coordinate or participate in community planning committees in the child’s home community. Use a family meeting as appropriate; (Refer to Chapter 4, Section 6, Conduct Family Meetings.)

- Give input to the child, family and program by identifying goals for the placement and setting expectations for the child, family and program;

- Have contact with the provider every 30 days and face-to-face contact with the provider every 60 days or more often, if needed, and follow procedures for monitoring child safety (refer to Chapter 4). Some BRS programs use proctor foster homes to provide placement and behavioral services. When a child is placed in such a setting the foster parents are considered, along with provider program staff, to be the child’s substitute caregivers with whom there must be contact every 30 days and face-to-face contact every 60 days;

- Attend and participate in service/treatment plan reviews and other planning meetings when scheduled;

- If you are unable to attend a scheduled review, call ahead of time and give input;

- Ensure that any service/treatment plan revisions reflect the current status of the child in the program and are consistent with the expectations of the placement;

- Give approval to all services provided or service treatment plans. If the existing service plan or proposed changes in plans and services are not appropriate, do not give approval of the plan;

- Request planning meetings with the child, parents and provider to revise the plan to make it more appropriate and aligned with the goals for the child;

- If you are not satisfied with the services delivered or with the appropriateness of the services or treatment plan, and attempts to resolve the matter through planning meetings are unsuccessful, a grievance may be filed with the provider using the program’s established grievance procedure. BRS programs are assigned a Program Analyst through Treatment Services in Central Office. These staff can discuss potential grievances and can help resolve service concerns prior to filing a formal grievance as well;

- Maintain contact and involvement with parents, family members and service providers involved in the case plan. Make face- to-face contact with parents every 30 days;

- Collaborate with and support the provider by assisting in setting limits and expectations with the child;

- Inform the child and family that Child Welfare and the provider are working together with them as a team and decisions will be made as a team, not individually;

- Respond in person or by phone when a crisis occurs and the provider requests assistance. Provide support to the child, family and provider to continue the placement whenever possible;
• Receive and review incident reports from the provider, and follow up with the provider, child and family to address issues brought about by incidents;

• Make a CPS report if you have concerns the child has been abused in the program. Consult with a supervisor to determine any immediate protective action. Refer to Section 9 in Chapter 4 for procedures regarding face-to-face contact;

• Consult with the supervisor regarding the need to contact the licensed child caring agency’s management if there are concerns about the child’s safety and well-being in the program, or the residential program’s treatment of, or services to, the child;

• Contact the program’s assigned Program Analyst through Treatment Services in Central Office if there are concerns about the well-being or other programmatic issues that need to be addressed but do not rise to the level of abuse;

• Fill out a DHS1303 form, DHS Employee CCA Reporting Form, and submit to CCA Notifications to formally file a concern regarding safety or well-being issues that do not rise to the level of completing a hotline call to due abuse or neglect. The DHS 1303 form will then be sent to Licensing and Treatment Services for notification and screening to determine if a response and follow up is warranted;

• Actively participate in discharge planning and after-care resource development. Aftercare planning should begin immediately and be incorporated into every team meeting and service plan to ensure the child has an aftercare resource identified when ready to transition out of the program; and

• Make referrals to local service providers as identified in the program’s discharge and after-care recommendations.

III. Ongoing Requirements when a child is placed in a QRTP

As long as the child is placed in a QRTP, the caseworker is required to submit a Family Report at each permanency and review hearing to include an attachment of the family permanency team notes and the following documentation:

• Evidence demonstrating that ongoing assessment of the strengths and needs of the child continues to support a determination that:
  • The needs of the child cannot be met through placement in a foster family home;
  • A QRTP provides the most effective and appropriate level of care for the child in the least restrictive environment; and
  • The placement is consistent with the short-term and long-term goals for the child or young adult, as specified in the case plan for the child.

• Documentation of the specific treatment or service needs that will be met for the child in the placement and the length of time the child is expected to need the treatment or services.

• Documentation of the efforts made by Child Welfare to prepare the child to return home or be placed with a fit and willing relative, a legal guardian, an adoptive parent or in a less restrictive resource home setting.

Reauthorizing Ongoing Services in BRS Program
I. BRS Authorization

Services for children in BRS programs must be authorized by the Licensed Practitioner of the Healing Arts (LPHA) every 12 months. If the agreed-upon plan is for the child to continue in the BRS placement, services must be reauthorized.

- At least 30 days prior to the end of the current 12-month period for which BRS has been authorized, Treatment Services will submit a BRS Reauthorization Form (CF 85B) to the LPHA so BRS placement and services can continue.
- The provider is responsible for forwarding supporting documentation to Treatment Services to supplement the BRS Re-Authorization before the end of the child’s first 12 months of placement.

II. QRTP Extended length of stay requirements.

The caseworker is required to obtain the written approval of the Child Welfare Director when extending a QRTP placement for more than:

- 12 consecutive or 18 nonconsecutive months if the child or young adult is 13 years or older; or
- 6 consecutive or nonconsecutive months if the child is 12 years or younger.

Procedure

- Treatment Services monitors the length of stay of each child in a QRTP.
- Treatment Services will notify caseworker and RRC one month prior to length of stay limit.
- Within 21 days of this notification, caseworker submits to Treatment Services the child’s current QRTP service plan, Family Report (created within the past 30 days) and Extended Stay Approval Form (DHS2628).
- Treatment Services will provide all the documentation to the Child Welfare Director for review and signature.
- Treatment Services will notify the caseworker and RRC if extended stay approval has been granted and documentation will be saved in the file cabinet in OR-Kids under ‘Services’ and ‘QRTP Extended Stay Approval.’ If the Director does not approve, caseworker can consult with the RRC to identify next steps to transition the child out of the QRTP and identify a more appropriate placement setting.
- At each subsequent 12 month or 6 month continued placement interval, a re-authorization process will need to occur if the child remains in a QRTP. Steps #1-#5 will be followed for re-authorizations for extended length of stay in a QRTP.

Termination of Ongoing Services in BRS Programs

I. If the BRS provider determines the child cannot continue in the program, the provider sends the caseworker a 30-day written termination notice that includes the reasons for the termination and recommendations for alternate services. The caseworker then:

- Discusses the case with the supervisor;
- Discusses the case with the RRC if necessary;
- Schedules a meeting with the BRS program to negotiate continuation of the placement (If necessary, the supervisor and/or RRC will assist the worker in negotiating with the program.).
If it is determined the child is to be discharged, agrees upon a termination date during this meeting; and

If a new date cannot be agreed upon, the child will be discharged on the date in the 30-day termination notice previously sent to the caseworker.

If a child is struggling in a BRS program, it is critical for the child’s family, permanency team and BRS treatment team to work together to identify additional services or supports to manage the challenging behavior. Increasing frequency of contact with both the child and program during this time is often a helpful strategy to stay up to date on the child’s functioning and help provide support to both the child and staff who are struggling with the daily behaviors. If the child is placed on a 30-day behavior contract or there is conversation about potential need to discharge the child, contact the RRC immediately to staff circumstances and begin a new BRS referral process as directed by RRC if appropriate.

II. If the caseworker believes the child should not continue in the BRS program:

- Discuss the case with the supervisor;
- Discuss the case with the RRC if necessary;
- Contact the BRS program to discuss concerns and needed changes for the child to continue in the program;
- If it is decided that termination of BRS services is the best plan, send a 30 calendar day written termination notice to the residential program; and
- Unless a different termination date is agreed to, services will terminate 30 days from the date of the written notice. It is critical that transitions out of program is as planful as possible even when it is believed a child will be best served elsewhere. Preparing the child for the transition as well as the program ensures that documentation, belongings and transferring of services as needed can happen.

III. The caseworker terminates residential placement:

- When there is a safety threat to the child in the placement;
- To comply with a court order affecting the child’s placement or services; or
- Upon termination of an Interstate Compact agreement for substitute care placement of the child in the program.

IV. When the BRS provider determines the child cannot continue in the program because the child presents a clear and immediate danger to self and/or others, and the provider contacts the caseworker to request immediate removal from the BRS program:

- Discuss the case with the supervisor;
- Discuss the case with the RRC if necessary;
- Contact the provider within one working day of notification of the danger the child presents;
- Communicate the transition plan to the provider as soon as it is developed; and
- Remove the child as soon as possible from the program.

Transition and Discharge Planning
The primary goal for a transition plan should be to plan for the child's successful completion of BRS care. Transition and discharge planning is driven by the Child and Family Team in collaboration with the caseworker and provider. Discharge planning should always be a collaborative process and conversations regarding the transition plan should begin upon placement. Caseworkers should be involved and actively engaged in planning at every stage of service delivery.

- Consult with your supervisor regarding the discharge plan for the child.
- Attend service plan meetings to provide information on transition resources or steps Child Welfare may have taken. A comprehensive discharge and after care plan will be developed 30 calendar days prior to the child’s anticipated discharge date. However, information about discharge and transition plans will be documented at each service plan meeting.
- Consult with the supervisor if there is disagreement with the discharge and aftercare plan for the child.

The Supervisor’s Role

- Provide direction to the caseworker in meeting timelines for face-to-face contacts and case reviews with the programs.
- Approve and ensure appropriate documentation in the case file of any exception made to Child Welfare policy regarding contacts with children and the residential provider.
- Provide direction for the caseworker during the child’s out-of-home placement.
- Review, approve and sign the BRS Reauthorization Form (CF 85B) requesting reauthorization of BRS services.
- Assist the caseworker in negotiating with the provider, the CCO and others regarding services and discharge.
- Assist the caseworker in communicating with the provider if services must be terminated unexpectedly.
- Assist the caseworker in bringing issues and concerns about residential programs to the attention of the Child Welfare program manager, RRC or Program Analyst in Treatment Services as needed.

Psychiatric Residential Treatment

Psychiatric Residential Treatment Services (PRTS) are part of the continuum of mental health treatment services. Medicaid funds mental health services. PRTS are included in managed care under the Oregon Health Plan (OHP) and may be used as long as it is determined that services are medically appropriate. Mental health services under OHP are the responsibility of the coordinated care organizations (CCOs), each of which is responsible for meeting the mental health needs of all children enrolled in OHP in a specific geographic area of the state. The CCos contract with a variety of local mental health service providers who are responsible for the delivery of services. Admission to PRTS is facilitated through these local mental health providers. The designated local mental health provider screens a child who may benefit from more intensive mental health services through a Level of Need Determination process. If criteria are met, the child receives mental health care coordination through the CCO or local mental health authority and team-driven service coordination with access to an array of more intensive mental health services (Intensive Treatment Services or ITS). These services and supports are identified by teams made up of the children, families, service providers and agencies such as child welfare. Service coordination includes developing a mental health plan of care that includes services delivered at flexible locations, in-home support, psychiatric day treatment and psychiatric residential treatment.
A child need not be in the legal custody of Child Welfare in order to receive mental health services. There may be circumstances in which legal custody is required to ensure safety or a Voluntary Placement Agreement is better suited to ensure the child receives the needed treatment.

Procedure

Placing a Child in a PRTS Setting

If a child in the legal custody of ODHS has mental health needs so severe that less restrictive placement and services are inappropriate or have been unsuccessful:

- Contact the local mental health provider to schedule a Level of Need Determination screening;
  - If an existing mental health assessment is more than 60 days old, the Level of Need Determination process must include an updated mental health assessment of the child.
  - If the child needs emergency or urgent care, it is important to identify the urgency of the need for an assessment and services (Mental Health Services, Section 24, of this chapter).
- During the screening, clearly describe the current behaviors of the child that are of concern;
- Obtain information from the current substitute caregiver and others to get a clear picture of the intensity and severity of the child’s behaviors;
- When the Determination of Need process determines that mental health treatment is necessary, the mental health provider has the responsibility to provide that treatment in the most appropriate, least restrictive environment;
- Begin to work closely with the local mental health care coordinator assigned responsibility to coordinate services;
- If referrals to other providers of mental health services are needed, assist the mental health care coordinator with needed referrals including referrals to PRTS programs recommended by the Child and Family Team and/or Determination of Need screening;
- Assist the mental health care coordinator and the Child and Family Team with screening and intake appointments at the designated PRTS program(s);
- As appropriate, follow up with the PRTS program’s intake coordinator to determine timeline for placement and length of time on current waiting list;
- If admission to the PRTS is not currently possible, assist the local mental health care coordinator with developing an alternate plan to address the child’s mental health needs until placement is available; and
- Ensure the child goes to the residential placement with an adequate quantity and type of clothing. The residential provider will be responsible to maintain the child’s clothing supply.

After the child is placed in the PRTS program:

- If the child is in the legal custody of ODHS, the caseworker acts as the legal custodian and as the OHP Member Representative. In this role the caseworker will:
• Sign consents, authorizations and releases of information within the guidelines of child welfare policy and the authority of a legal custodian;
• Act on behalf of the child including approving planning documents, services, any changes to services and plans for discharge;
• For more information, order the OHP Member Handbook.

• If the parents have signed a Voluntary Placement Agreement the parents are the legal custodians and OHP Member Representative unless the child has private insurance; and

• Act as an advocate for the child, which may include assisting in filing grievances with the PRTS provider or filing an appeal of termination, reduction, suspension or denial of services.

Appealing a Denial or Termination of Services

If services are being terminated, reduced, suspended or denied by the local mental health provider or PRTS program and there is reason to believe the child should receive or continue to receive the service, the decision to deny or terminate service can be appealed. Services identified as medically necessary are the responsibility of either the CCO or the local mental health authority, depending on the status of the child’s OHP coverage. Appeals are based on the continued medical necessity for the service. For services to continue, the medical necessity for the service must be demonstrated. Appropriate alternate levels of care and types of services being available to the child also must be demonstrated if the identified service is terminated, reduced, suspended or denied.

I. Consult with the supervisor to determine whether to file a formal appeal.

II. Consult with the designated mental health point person in the local office for assistance.

III. Request the local mental health provider or PRTS program send a copy of the Notification of Adverse Benefit Decision, including member Appeal rights.

IV. File the appeal as described in the Notice of Adverse Benefit Decision. Be specific as to why it is believed the child’s mental health needs require the level of service being denied or terminated.

V. If the child is being discharged, call the local mental health provider or PRTS program and request an expedited appeals process to avoid having the services terminated prior to resolution of the appeal.

VI. If the Appeal is denied, request information from the CCO on the Administrative Hearing process. Follow steps to file Administrative Appeal.

VII. An Administrative Review hearing will be held, and the Administrative Law Judge will make the final ruling on if services will be authorized. https://www.oregon.gov/oha/HSD/OHP/Pages/Complaints-Appeals.aspx

Transition and Discharge Planning

Transition and discharge planning is driven by the Child and Family Team in collaboration with the caseworker, local mental health care coordinator and PRTS provider. Discharge planning should always be a collaborative process. Caseworkers should be involved in planning at every stage of service delivery.

I. Consult with your supervisor regarding the discharge plan for the child.
II. Assist the mental health care coordinator and the Child and Family Team with developing a comprehensive medical discharge and after-care plan.

III. Consult with the supervisor if there is disagreement with the discharge and after-care plan for the child.

IV. Consult with the supervisor if services are identified as needed but are not available.

V. Contact the local office mental health point person and the RRC if problems arise during the development of the discharge plan.

VI. If the child is presenting imminent danger to self or others, the team may decide hospitalization is necessary. The mental health care coordinator will be responsible for getting approval from the CCO for payment for the hospitalization.

VII. Assist by coordinating arrangements for transportation and actual physical admission of the child to the hospital.

VIII. Assess whether the child meets the criteria for detention (if the child has violated terms of probation) and contact the child’s juvenile counselor to request emergency assistance in lodging the child in detention.

The Supervisor’s Role

- Assist the caseworker in determining the urgency of the need for an assessment and coordinated planning and services from the local community mental health or PRTS provider.

- Assist the caseworker in resolving any disagreement with the local mental health provider, PRTS program or CCO.

- Assist the caseworker in working with the PRTS provider and the CCO if services are terminated, reduced, suspended or denied.

- Notify the Child Welfare Program Manager of problems with service access or availability.

Residential Substance Use Disorder (SUD) Treatment Placement

The formal name for what we once called “drug addiction” is, substance use disorders (SUD). When a child or young adult has experienced negative consequences or been observed in negative behaviors which are suspected to be the result of drug or alcohol use, the caseworker can refer the child or young adult to a SUD treatment provider for a full diagnostic assessment for possible substance use disorder. The SUD service provider will make the diagnosis of the level of SUD, if one exists, then apply placement criteria from the American Society of Addiction Medicine (ASAM) to determine the appropriate level of care for SUD services. Assessment and outpatient SUD treatment are OHP- covered services. Residential SUD services are paid by direct contracts between the Oregon Health Authority (OHA) and SUD residential treatment providers. Services vary depending on the need of the individual and the type of program. SUD services may start with detoxification, depending on the drug of abuse, and SUD treatment typically includes the goal of remaining free of all substance use through education, counseling, skill building on decision-making, refusal skills, relapse prevention and other basic life skills development. As is the case with PRTS, placement in residential SUD treatment services does not require that the child or young adult be in the legal custody of ODHS or that the parents sign a Voluntary Placement Agreement with Child Welfare in order to receive services.
When ODHS has legal custody of a child or young adult or the parents have entered into a Voluntary Placement Agreement, statute requires that the court has approved, or approval is pending for, a placement of the child or young adult into a SUD treatment program.

Procedure

- Consult with the supervisor regarding the need for a SUD assessment of the child or young adult with suspected substance use issues;

- If a child or young adult has suspected substance use issues, or identified SUD, make a referral to the local SUD service provider for a SUD assessment;

- Notify the Assistant Attorney General (AAG) representing the agency in juvenile court proceedings regarding the child or young adult that ODHS plans to place the child or young adult in a residential substance use disorder treatment program and provide the AAG with the date of the proposed placement. Copy the AAG’s legal secretary and paralegal on the correspondence. If there is no juvenile court proceeding, notify the Department of Justice (DOJ) office’s Assistant Attorney in Charge and Attorney in Charge so an AAG can be assigned to draft and file the Motion;

- Ensure motion is saved in the case file through OR-Kids;

- If the completed assessment and the SUD provider recommend residential SUD treatment, the SUD counselor will assist the caseworker in making the referral for these services. Go to https://www.oregon.gov/oha/HSD/AMH/docs/provider-directory.pdf for a directory of services. Referral to residential programs requires that a SUD assessment has been completed and the level of care and type of SUD services the child or young adult needs has been identified;

- Notify the child or young adult’s parents and the substitute caregiver of the plan for admission to residential SUD treatment;

- Ensure the child or young adult goes to the SUD residential placement with an adequate quantity and type of clothing. The residential provider will be responsible to maintain the child’s or young adult’s clothing;

- Notify safety service providers working with the child or young adult and the family of placement in SUD residential treatment;

- Notify service providers identified in the case plan of the child or young adult’s placement in a SUD residential treatment program;

- Coordinate admission to the SUD residential program with the child or young adult, their family and the substitute caregiver;

- Continue to work with the substitute caregiver and, when appropriate, ensure there is a Behavior Intervention Plan for the relative caregiver or foster parent until the residential treatment services begin;

- Ensure the residential treatment selection adheres to the ongoing safety plan;

- Continue active participation in the case plan during the child or young adult’s residential stay by:
  - Arranging face-to-face contact as it aligns with the treatment plan;
  - Attending and participating in service and treatment planning;
• Advocating for the child or young adult;

• Maintaining contact with the child or young adult’s parents and others involved in the case plan and encouraging them to learn about SUD to be supportive of the child or young adult’s recovery;

• Actively participating in treatment discharge and after-care planning; and

• Making referrals to additional community resources for after-care services when recommended.

• If the child is in the legal custody of ODHS, the caseworker acts as the legal custodian and as the OHP Member Representative. In this role, you will:

  • Sign consents, authorizations and releases of information within the guidelines of Child Welfare policy and the authority of a legal custodian;

  • Act on behalf of the child including approving planning documents, services, any changes to services and plans for discharge; and

  • Act as an advocate for the child or young adult.

• If court denies placement, consult with Supervisor and RRC to determine next steps.

The Supervisor’s Role

• Assist the caseworker in determining the urgency of the need for a SUD assessment;

• Assist the caseworker in problem solving the types and duration of SUD services when there is disagreement with the provider;

• Assist the caseworker in dealing with the provider if services must be terminated unexpectedly; and

• Notify the Child Welfare Program Manager of problems with service access or availability.

Developmental Disabilities Residential Program Placement

When a child or young adult in the legal custody of ODHS may be eligible for services as a person with a developmental disability, the caseworker should refer the child to the local Community Developmental Disabilities Program (CDDP) office to determine eligibility. The CDDP Eligibility Specialist will order appropriate records, identify if a psychological evaluation (including adaptive assessment) is required to determine eligibility for children under age 22. All eligibility for children is provisional. This means the eligibility status is tentative and may change if there is a change in diagnoses or functioning. As is the case with PRTS and adolescent A&D treatment, DD residential services do not require that the child be in the legal custody of ODHS or that the parents sign a Voluntary Placement Agreement with Child Welfare to receive services. If the child is in the legal custody of ODHS, the caseworker will act as the legal custodian.

Procedure

I. Refer to the local CDDP to determine I/DD eligibility.

  • Consult with the supervisor regarding the need to refer a child or young with suspected developmental delays.

  • If a child or young adult has suspected or identified developmental disabilities, make a referral to the local CDDP for an assessment.

II. If the child or young adult is found to be eligible for IDD services, a DD Service Coordinator will be assigned.

III. If the child needs residential services, the DD Service Coordinator will make the referrals to DD services and community resources.

- Notify the child or young adult’s parents and the substitute caregiver of the plan for admission to residential services;
- Work closely with the DD Service Coordinator in co-managing the case. Refer to Appendix 5.7 for responsibilities of the casework and case management for each agency;
- Ensure the child or young adult goes to the residential placement with an adequate quantity and type of clothing. The residential provider will be responsible to maintain the child or young adult’s clothing;
- Notify safety service providers working with the child or young adult and the family of placement in DD residential services;
- Notify service providers identified in the case plan of the child’s or young adult’s placement in an DD residential program;
- Coordinate admission to the residential program with the child or young adult, their family and the substitute caregiver;
- Ensure the residential program adheres to the ongoing safety plan; and
- Continue to work with the substitute caregiver and, when appropriate, ensure there is a Placement Support Plan for the relative caregiver or foster parent until the residential services begin.

IV. Continue active participation in the case plan during the child or young adult’s residential stay by:

- Arranging face-to-face contact as it aligns with the service plan;
- Attending and participating in service planning;
- Advocating for the child or young adult;
- Maintaining contact with the child’s parents and others involved in the case plan as appropriate;
- Actively participate in discharge and after-care planning;
- Sign consents, authorizations and releases of information within the guidelines of child welfare policy and OAR; and
- Act on behalf of the child or young adult including approving planning documents, services, any changes to services and plans for discharge;

The Supervisor’s Role

- Assist the caseworker in determining the need to appeal a denial of DD eligibility;

Note: ODHS may not participate in hearing processes against ODHS; the CDDP DD program is contracted under ODHS ODDS.

- Assist the caseworker in problem solving the types and duration of services when there is disagreement with the provider;
• Assist the caseworker in dealing with the provider if services must be terminated unexpectedly; and

• Notify the Child Welfare program manager of problems with service access or availability.
Chapter 5

Section 8: Focused Opportunities for Children Utilizing Services (FOCUS Program)
FOCUS Program

In the rare instance that when a child or young adult has such unique and complex treatment needs that the existing service array cannot meet those needs, multidimensional case consultation, services and funding may be provided by the Focused Opportunities for Children Utilizing Services (FOCUS) Program. Through service provision, the FOCUS Program aims to support children and young adults in maintaining within their communities or progressing toward the least restrictive and most trauma-informed setting possible.

The FOCUS Program is responsible for the review, approval and funding of portions of individualized service plans for children and young adults. The following Procedure provides detailed information about the functions and operations of the FOCUS Program.

Procedure

1. Criteria

In order for a child or young adult to be eligible to receive any FOCUS funded services, the following criteria must be met:

- There is an open Child Welfare case (This may include an open CPS assessment if the case is expected to remain open a minimum of 6 months.);
- The child or young adult has unmet social, behavioral, medical, mental health, and/or developmental needs;
- All other systems and funding sources have been explored and ruled out; and
- Without services, the child or young adult may be at risk of placement instability or unable to be safely maintained at home or in a community based placement.

2. FOCUS Preventative Services

- The FOCUS Program funds and administers an array of services throughout the state which are meant to support children and young adults in their own communities and, ultimately, reduce placement disruptions and the need for higher levels of care.
- These services do not require FOCUS Designation and can be accessed through the FOCUS Program Coordinator or designee.
- In areas where they are available, Preventative Services contracts must be considered prior to requesting FOCUS Designation for individual services or contracts.

3. Prior to Considering FOCUS Program Designation

When there is a concern that necessary services are not available to meet the child or young adult’s needs or that the services that are available are not able to meet the specific individualized needs of the child or young adult, the caseworker should consult with their supervisor and:

- Consider scheduling a Wraparound or team meeting to discuss the child or young adult’s strengths and needs, the resources currently available and what additional supports are needed;
• Explore and rule out all other funding sources for needed services. These resources include but are not limited to:

  • Service providers contracted through the local Child Welfare office;
  • Local community resources, including scholarships;
  • Resources using flex and system of care funds;
  • Special education services, if the child or young adult has a diagnosed condition that qualifies them for such services;
  • Child Development and Rehabilitation Center (CDRC), Shriners, and other organizations that may provide funds for designated medical conditions;
  • Other funding sources such as SSI, private insurance, Title XIX, Title IV-E, CW-TANF-EA, OHP, GA Medical or Child Welfare administrative medical budgets;
  • Services through county Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities programs and/or SPD programs at the state or regional level, when the child or young adult has a diagnosed disability;
  • Services provided through other contracted Child Welfare Treatment Services providers;
  • Mental health treatment services administered through Coordinated Care Organizations (CCOs);
  • Substance Use Disorder Treatment Programs, as recommended by a qualified professional;
  • Services through the Oregon Youth Authority, if the child or young adult has been adjudicated for a legal offense; or
  • The Oregon State Hospital alternative programs, the Secure Children’s Inpatient Program in Portland (SCIP) and the Secure Adolescent Inpatient Program (SAIP) in Corvallis.

• When all local options have been explored and determined to be exhausted, the case worker should consult with the Residential Resource Consultant (RRC) assigned to their region. The RRC will work with the caseworker to determine whether there are any additional services or funding resources available.

4. Referral for FOCUS Program Designation

When all the criteria in Section 1 have been met and the steps in Sections 2-3 have been and FOCUS Preventative Services are unavailable or unable to meet the child or young adult’s specific needs, it may be necessary to create a unique plan for the child or young adult that supplies the missing components to meet the child or young adult’s complex needs. In such cases, it may be necessary to refer the child for FOCUS Designation.

Designating a child or young adult for FOCUS funding allows that child or young adult access to funding for individualized services and supports that are otherwise unavailable. In addition, caseworkers for children and young adults designated to receive FOCUS-funded services have access to high level Cross-system case consultation and connections to resources both within and outside of Child Welfare.

If no alternative services or funding resources are available, the RRC will work with the caseworker to refer the child or young adult for FOCUS Designation. The steps are as follows:

• 1. The caseworker completes the referral packet, which includes:

  • A complete Treatment Services Referral Form (CF1055), which must be current within the last 30 days and signed by the caseworker and supervisor;

- Current (within 60 days) clinical documentation, which describes the child or young adult’s current functioning, needs, diagnosis and recommendations. This may be a mental health assessment, mental health assessment update, psychiatric assessment, psychological evaluation, etc.;
- Most recent Court order, Cooperative Agreement or Voluntary Placement Agreement;
- Current CANS Assessment;
- Most recent Wraparound or Care Coordination Meeting notes, if available;
- A copy of the most recent Child Welfare Family Plan;
- A report of the most recent medical examination by a medical professional and any follow-up referrals to specialized medical care providers;
- The child or young adult’s current psychological evaluation (completed within the past two years – if available);
- Current IEP or 504 plan; and
- The child or young adult’s current service or treatment plan(s). (This may be a mental health, Child Welfare residential or other treatment provider plan as applicable.).

2. The caseworker sends the referral packet to the RRC. The RRC reviews and, if complete and the child or young adult meets the criteria set forth above, the RRC checks the box for a FOCUS referral, signs the Treatment Services Referral (CF1055) and sends the referral to the FOCUS Program.

3. The FOCUS Program reviews the packet for completeness and to determine whether the criteria have been met. The FOCUS Program may contact the RRC and/ or caseworker for additional information or to discuss the child or young adult’s specific needs.

4. If the child or young adult meets all of the criteria for FOCUS listed above and the services being requested are for community-based stabilization or support services, the FOCUS Program will consult with the Treatment Service Placement Services Manager or designee to determine eligibility for FOCUS designation. If there is a clear agreement that the child should or should not be designated to receive FOCUS-funded services, the FOCUS Program will notify the caseworker, supervisor and RRC of the decision within 7 business days of receipt of the complete referral packet.

5. When a request is specifically for a recommended medical or clinical service, such as funding for Psychiatric Residential Treatment Services after the Medicaid funding has been explored and ruled out, the FOCUS Program must consult with the Placement Services Manager, Treatment Provider, Oregon Health Authority and/or a ODHS-contracted licensed medical professional to determine medical necessity for this level of care.

6. If additional consultation is necessary as a result of the level of complexity of the case or the parties in step 1-2 are unable to come to a consensus, the FOCUS Program may organize a full case staffing with the FOCUS Committee to discuss the child or young adult’s specific needs, system barriers and ultimately determine whether the child or young adult should be designated to receive FOCUS funded services. This committee must:

   - Include representation from Child Welfare and partner agencies, including Oregon Health Authority
(OHA) and the Office of Developmental Disability Services (ODDS), as well as members of the provider community;

• Be provided the referral packet and any additional information regarding the needs of the child or young adult and the services being requested, if specified. This information will be provided to committee members by the FOCUS Program; and

• Provide case consultation and recommendations for services, as well as a decision regarding FOCUS designation.

  • These consultations may occur via email communication or, if needed, a full staffing meeting may be scheduled. When a full case staffing is necessary, the following parties have the noted responsibilities:
    - The FOCUS Program is responsible for scheduling and facilitating the meeting. In addition, FOCUS provides technical support and guidance to Committee members regarding ODHS rule, service availability and cross-system responsibilities. The FOCUS Program maintains notes for these staffings and distributes the notes to the caseworker, supervisor and RRC.
    - The RRC is responsible for the initial presentation to the committee, which includes basic information about the child or young adult and their current situation, as well as what has already been tried and what is being requested of the FOCUS Committee.
    - The caseworker and supervisor are responsible for updating the committee regarding the child or young adult’s current needs and answering any questions the committee may have regarding the child and their current services.

• After the initial presentation, the FOCUS Committee will discuss the case and make a decision by majority vote to:
  - Designate the child or young adult to receive FOCUS funded services; or
  - Pend the request until further referrals are made, additional assessments are complete or more information is received; or
  - Deny the request for a designation.

• If the referral is denied, the committee will attempt to make recommendations regarding alternate resources or services for the child or young adult.

• If the child or young adult is designated to receive FOCUS funded services, the FOCUS Program will:
  - Provide the caseworker with a written statement of the committee’s decisions and recommendations; and
  - Approve funding for the requested plan; or
  - Assign responsibility to the FOCUS Program for developing a specific plan and cost detail.

Ongoing Responsibilities for a Child or Young Adult Who Has Been Designated to Receive FOCUS Funded Services

1. Caseworker Responsibilities
• Provide ongoing case management including managing the case plan, monitoring safety as described in Chapter 4 of this Child Welfare Procedure Manual.

• Immediately notify the FOCUS Program of any change in the services provided by the FOCUS Program or in the case plan for the child or young adult.

• Contact the FOCUS Program immediately when new or additional services are being requested. Approval by FOCUS Program is required prior to the start of any additional services.

• Notify the FOCUS Program when the child or young adult no longer needs the service. The FOCUS Program is responsible for authorizing the opening and closing all FOCUS funded services.

2. FOCUS Program Responsibilities

• Provide cross-system complex case consultation.

• Assist with individual and statewide resource development to meet the needs of children and young adults eligible to receive FOCUS funded services.

• Fund portions of service plans when other funding options are not available:
  • Child Welfare Treatment Services Unit administers a budget under a mandated FOCUS caseload, which is a contingency fund used to address gaps in services for ODHS involved children and young adults. It is used to fund portions of a service plan in order to meet a child or young adult’s individual needs within Child Welfare’s responsibility and to keep the child or young adult in their community whenever possible. Monies from this budget can only be used for the purchase of services which cannot be funded through another budget program or system. Authorization for funding must only be for services within the responsibility of Child Welfare to provide, cost effective and within available funds.

• Work with the caseworker to identify potential service providers and negotiate terms with contracted providers to deliver needed services to the child or young adult.

• Administer and monitor contracts for compliance and quality of service to ensure that the child or young adult’s needs are being met and that the contractor is providing adequate supports to maintain the health, safety and wellbeing of the child during service provision.

• Approve and process service authorizations and payments.

• Identify and report unmet service needs, work to expand the service array to meet those specific needs.

• Provide connection to resources and partner agencies outside of Child Welfare.

• If the child or young adult no longer needs FOCUS funded services, the caseworker must contact the FOCUS Program to request termination of the child or young adult’s FOCUS designation. The FOCUS Program also may discontinue the child or young adult’s FOCUS designation if it is thought to be no longer necessary for one or more of the following reasons:
  • The child or young adult no longer has an open ODHS Child Welfare case as a child or young adult;
  • The child or young adult has had a substantial period of stability and is no longer in need of intensive services;
The child or young adult is in a long term treatment facility that is able to meet their needs without additional service and there is no discharge scheduled in the foreseeable future;

• The child or young adult is unavailable to receive services and that is unlikely to change in the foreseeable future; or

• The child or young adult was being served under a Cooperative Services or Voluntary Placement Agreement and has since turned 18 and is unwilling to voluntarily participate in services.

3. Supervisor Responsibilities

• Provide direction and guidance to the caseworker in exploring alternatives to the FOCUS referral.

• Review and approve the referral packet.

• Attend the initial presentation to the FOCUS Committee if one is scheduled.

• Ensure required follow through for all local Child Welfare office responsibilities.

Out-of-State Residential Placement

Provides guidance to caseworkers and supervisors regarding Child Welfare’s out-of-state residential placement process. In very rare circumstances when a child or young adult with an active case is placed in a permanent and/or familial setting outside Oregon and requires qualified residential treatment, it may be necessary to refer them to a treatment program near their physical location to maintain connection with their permanent care resource.

Criteria for Out-of-State Residential Placement

Before completing the referral process for out-of-state placement, the caseworker and supervisor must:

• Ensure that all alternative resources located in the state where the child or young adult resides are exhausted AND make efforts to explore applicable services according to the FOCUS Program.

• Determine that the child or young adult requires residential level treatment to meet their mental health, behavioral and/or cognitive.

• The child or young adult is currently placed in another state with relatives or a permanent placement resource and it would be in the child or young adult’s best interest for the child or young adult to participate in recommended treatment near the relatives or permanent caregiver(s)’ home.

• If the equivalent of Oregon’s Psychiatric Residential Treatment Services (PRTS) is being requested, the child or young adult must have a recent (within 60 days) written recommendation by a qualified professional (Child Psychiatrist, other Physician or Psychologist) specifying the need for:

  • Psychiatric residential level of care as the least restrictive setting expected to be safe and effective for the child or young adult’s treatment needs; and

  • Specific type of subspecialty treatment if any.

• Consult with the regional Residential Resource Consultant (RRC) assigned to the local office. During this consultation, the caseworker must be able to articulate how the child or young adult has met the criteria identified in sections I-II above. Based on this consultation, the RRC will recommend one of the following:
• That the caseworker completes a Treatment Services Referral Form 1055 and supplemental packet (see below);
• Additional information or records be gathered and another consultation scheduled once that is complete; or
• If documentation and gathered information does not support an out-of-state residential placement, the RRC may make recommendations for additional community based supports or further assessments.

Completing the Out-of-State Referral Packet

The out-of-state referral packet must include the following:

- Treatment Services Referral (CF1055) signed by the caseworker, supervisor and regional RRC.
- Out-of-State Authorization Form (CF2670).
- The child or young adult's most recent treatment plan/discharge plan from the most recent or current placement.
- The child or young adult's most recent wraparound meeting notes, if applicable.
- The most recent psychological or neuropsychological evaluation, if applicable.
- All psychiatric assessments completed within the last year, if applicable.
- The child or young adult's most recent Individual Education Plan (IEP) or 504 plan, if applicable.
- The child or young adult's most recent mental health assessment (which documents the current diagnosis, level of functioning, and treatment recommendations) within the last 60 days.

If the recommendation is for Psychiatric Residential Treatment Services (PRTS) the out-of-state referral packet must also include:

- Documentation of the correspondence and efforts to work with mental health professionals and the assigned insurance or Medicaid funding representative or designee to show that medically necessary referrals were made.
- Documentation to show that the insurance or Medicaid funder denied the PRTS level of care for the child or young adult. If the Medicaid representative agency denied the PRTS level of care for the child or young adult, the caseworker may consult with their regional RRC about the process to appeal the decision.
- Documentation to demonstrate that all other related resources have been ruled out or are unavailable. This may include denial letters and/or discharge summaries.
- Other supporting documentation, as requested by the RRC.

After the caseworker completes the out-of-state referral packet, they must submit it to the local office Program Manager or designee.

The caseworker's local Program Manager or designee as well as the District Manager or designee must:

- Review the out-of-state referral packet;
Complete and sign the CF2670, either agreeing or disagreeing with the referral for out-of-state residential treatment; and

If in agreement with the referral, send the completed referral packet with the Out-of-State Authorization Sheet to the regional RRC.

Screening and Review Process

The regional RRC must:

- Review the out-of-state referral packet for completeness and ensure all necessary documentation is included.
- If the packet is incomplete or additional information is needed, the regional RRC will send the packet back to the caseworker and Program Manager for any corrections or to request required documentation.

Once the regional RRC determines that the referral packet is complete and all other resource options have been ruled out, they will submit the packet to the FOCUS Program.

The FOCUS Program will process the referral for FOCUS Designation and out-of-state residential treatment consideration. If the committee is in agreement with the request, the FOCUS Program will submit the written recommendation and supporting documentation to the ODHS Treatment Services Manager or designee for review.

The Child Welfare Treatment Services Program Manager or designee will review the referral packet and committee recommendation and decide whether to forward the request on to the ODHS Child Welfare Director or designee.

ODHS Child Welfare Director Approval

The request may be denied during any of the previous steps, however, only the Director of ODHS Child Welfare or designee who has the ability to make a determination for the Director may ultimately make the decision to approve out-of-state residential treatment.

For a child or young adult determined to be eligible for I/DD services, the ODHS Child Welfare Director must make efforts to consult with the Director of the Office of Developmental Disability Services or Designee prior to making a final decision on whether to approve or deny the request.

For a child or young adult determined require Psychiatric Residential Treatment, the ODHS Child Welfare Director must make efforts to consult with the Behavioral Health Director of the Oregon Health Authority or Designee prior to making a final decision on whether to approve or deny the request.

Please Note: The following factors require additional information and justification be provided to the Child Welfare Director to inform their decision.

- Cases in which the child or young adult is currently residing in Oregon.
- Cooperative Agreement or Voluntary Placement Cases in which Protective Custody or Temporary Custody has not been established.
• Children or young adults who have been approved for a Secure Children's Inpatient Program (SCIP) or Secure Adolescent Inpatient Program (SAIP) level of care (for which documentation of a physician recommendation must be included).

• Children between the ages of 9-11 years old.

• Children and young adults who are eligible for, or have a referral pending for, I/DD services.

Once the ODHS Director has made their decision whether to approve, deny or pend the request for more information, they will note this on the CF2670 and sign the form. They will then send this form to the Treatment Services Manager or Designee, who will forward to the FOCUS Program for further notifications.

Notifications

The FOCUS Program must promptly notify the child’s caseworker, supervisor, Program Manager, and District Manager in writing of the out-of-state residential request decision, whether:

• The request was denied at any point in the process and the reason given;

• The out-of-state residential treatment referral was pended, and further efforts or documentation are required prior to further consideration; or

• The out-of-state residential treatment request was approved by the ODHS Director or Designee and the next steps that are needed.

Placement Matching and Arrangements

Upon ODHS Program Director approval, the FOCUS Program must determine which out-of-state residential treatment programs are able to best meet the child’s specific treatment and placement needs.

Placement Matching Efforts

• The FOCUS Program must consider the following placement matching factors: age, race, gender, gender identity, location, safety, program treatment modality, cultural needs, language, tribal affiliations and child treatment needs.

• Once a potential out-of-state residential placement has been identified, the FOCUS Program must work with Oregon Child Care Licensing Program (CCLP) to gather information and records from the program to determine whether they meet initial standards for licensing by the State of Oregon.

• If the out-of-state Treatment Provider meets initial licensing standards, a Licensor from CCLP will be assigned to complete an on-site assessment and initial licensing approval process prior to the child or young adult’s placement.

• Once CCLP and ODHS Treatment Services approve the out-of-state residential treatment provider for placement, the FOCUS Program will work with the caseworker, and supervisor if needed, to discuss the potential placement, exchange program specific information, discuss planning for face to face contact, and set up a screening date for the caseworker and child with the potential out-of-state residential program.
FOCUS Program Responsibilities:

- If a program accepts the referral, the FOCUS Program must email the out-of-state program’s placement acceptance letter to the caseworker, supervisor, and the regional RRC with the instructions on submitting the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC) request and contact information for the out-of-state residential program to set up an intake.
- The FOCUS Program will assist with communication between the caseworker and the program as needed.

Caseworker Responsibilities:

- The caseworker must submit their completed ICPC packet request to the following email Oregon. ICPC@dhsoha.state.or.us. This request must include the following:
  - CF 0100A ICPC Request
  - CF 0100E ICPC Cover Letter
  - CF 0161 Caseworker Statement for ICPC Requests
  - CF 1044 ICPC Financial/ Medical Plan
  - Most recent court order
  - Additional documents if applicable/ available:
    - Most recent case plan
    - Most recent child assessments/evaluations/IEP
    - Copy of child or young adult’s birth certificate
    - Copy of child or young adult’s Social Security card
- After the child/young adult’s ICPC request has been approved, the caseworker must contact their assigned ICPC Administrator at Child Welfare Central Office and the accepting out-of-state program representative about the child’s intake and travel planning.
- The caseworker must notify the FOCUS Program of the intake date and of any changes to that date.
- Caseworker must notify the legal parties involved in the case including the County Developmental Disability Program or Services Coordinator involved for any child or young adult determined eligible for I/DD services and the CCO if the child or young adult is enrolled.
- Caseworker must consult with legal counsel to determine whether a court order is required for placement in the out-of-state residential treatment program.
- Caseworker must fill out the necessary funding forms for travel arrangements, as requested by ICPC or the local office.
- Prior to the placement date, the caseworker must submit a written plan to their supervisor, Program Manager and the FOCUS Program with detailed information about how they plan to meet monthly face-to-face contact requirements while the child is placed out-of-state. The caseworker may consult with the FOCUS Program for assistance or suggestions.

Caseworker and Supervisor Initial Expectations Upon Out-of-State Placement
ODHS Child Welfare must have a caseworker, supervisor, or Child Welfare staff with equal to/or higher job classification physically present with the child upon their residential placement entry to ensure the child’s well-being, safety, and confirm safe environments. This includes a site visit with the contracted program.

- It is best practice for the primary caseworker or supervisor to physically accompany the child/young adult to their out-of-state residential placement or be physically present at the placement upon the child’s arrival at the placement.

- If the primary caseworker or supervisor is not available, another ODHS staff member may accompany the child or be physically present at the placement, as long as that staff is qualified to confirm safe environments.

- In the event that the local office is struggling to secure staff to accompany the child or be present at the intake, the local Program Manager or designee may contact the FOCUS Program, Placement Service Manager or Child Welfare Treatment Services Program for assistance.

- Once it is determined who will be present on site at the program, the local office will identify names and phone numbers of managers who will be available 24/7 to assist that staff in case of an emergency or concerns come up after hours.

- At the out-of-state residential placement, the Child Welfare caseworker or supervisor must assess the child or young adult’s overall behavior, response to the setting, ability to communicate their needs with the program and how the program staff responds to the child or young adult. They must observe the physical environment of the placement, including the child or young adult’s bedroom space. The program will have been made aware of this requirement in advance by Licensing and the FOCUS Program.

- If an issue arises, and the worker needs support, they should consult the plan created by the local office in section IV above. Any concerns regarding the program must be documented and reported per ODHS policy. In addition, all concerns must be reported to the FOCUS Program for follow up.

Ongoing Caseworker and Supervisor Expectations for Face-to-Face Contact

The child or young adult’s caseworker and supervisor must ensure the child’s safety, permanency, and well-being is monitored through appropriate monthly face-to-face contact with the child at the out-of-state residential placement.

- If possible, the primary caseworker, the supervisor, another ODHS Child Welfare caseworker or supervisor must have ongoing monthly face-to-face contact with the child in their out-of-state residential placement. This is best practice.

- If the caseworker or other ODHS staff is unable to have monthly face-to-face contact at the program, the primary caseworker and supervisor may need to consider contracting with an appropriate third-party contractor for this service prior to placement. If needed, they may contact the FOCUS Program for consultation regarding this process.

- Given that ODHS Child Welfare is responsible for the child/young adult’s safety, permanency, and well-being of the child, the caseworker, supervisor, and Program Manager must ensure that an ODHS Child Welfare caseworker, supervisor, or another qualified Child Welfare staff has face-to-face contact with the child every 90 days at the out-of-state residential placement in addition to any other arranged monthly face-to-face contact.

Section 9: Placement In Another County
Placement in another county

Finding a substitute caregiver as close as possible to a child’s parents, so the child can stay in the same school and community, usually is in the child’s best interest. Occasionally, placement in a county other than the county that has jurisdiction of the case is in the best interest of the child.

There can be a number of reasons for the decision to place in another county – the most appropriate relative lives in another county, a child’s special needs can be met by a specific caregiver, the special circumstances of the case plan make an out-of-county placement the best viable option for substitute care, or other reasons specific to the child or the family.

Procedure

I. Notify the receiving county that a child will be placed in that county whether or not that office will be asked to provide courtesy supervision.

II. Send advance notification to the receiving branch office unless an immediate placement precludes the caseworker’s ability to do so. In those instances, the receiving branch office is notified the next working day.

III. Send notification to the Child Welfare program manager. (Some Child Welfare offices have a designated caseworker who is the liaison for out-of-county placements. In those offices, the Child Welfare program manager will forward the information.)

IV. Notification includes, but is not limited to, the following information: the ongoing safety plan, Child Welfare case plan, current action agreement, current petition and court order, CANS screening results and any related supervision plan, whether the child will need personal care services, and any other relevant information (e.g., a psychological evaluation) that may be helpful to the receiving county.

V. Consult with the supervisor before making a request for courtesy supervision.

VI. Prior to making the request for courtesy supervision from the receiving branch office, consider the needs of, and services provided to, the child, as well as the importance of consistent contact, needs of the substitute caregiver, and Child Welfare responsibilities identified in the case plan.

VII. Prepare a packet for the receiving county’s Child Welfare program manager that includes the following information when requesting courtesy supervision:

A. The child’s name and case number;
B. The substitute caregiver’s name, address and phone number;
C. The name and contact information for the sending branch caseworker and supervisor;
D. The ongoing safety plan;
E. CANS screening results and any supervision plan;
F. The Child Welfare case plan (the most recent 0333a);
G. Current action agreement;
H. Current petition and court order;
I. Relevant child-specific information such as psychological evaluation, IEP or medical condition, including whether the child needs personal care services; and

J. The proposed plan for the child, including any after-care plan when the child is in a residential treatment placement.

VIII. The child’s caseworker (from the sending county) retains the case planning and responsibility for ensuring reimbursement for specialized services, SOC-funded services and transportation.

IX. The receiving county will notify the sending branch office of the receipt of the packet and will document receipt of information in case notes. The receiving county will contact the caseworker within 14 days to:

A. Identify the assigned caseworker;
B. Clarify roles and responsibilities;
C. Discuss the frequency of communication between caseworkers; and
D. Develop a plan to provide court-ordered services in counties where those services may not be available.

X. The receiving county’s caseworker assumes responsibility for required face-to-face contact. All other responsibilities will be negotiated.

XI. Notification is not required when placing child in a residential treatment program, except when a child has developmental disabilities. In those instances, the sending caseworker must provide written notification to the Developmental Disabilities case manager in the receiving county that a child has been placed within the service area.

XII. In situations where it is necessary to study or certify a home out of county, the caseworker makes a request to the receiving county to provide certification or adoptive home study services. If the receiving county’s timelines cannot meet the needs of the child, the sending county may request permission to certify/study the home in the receiving county. The receiving county approves out-of-county placements and child-specific certifications unless there is a county-to-county agreement that has been approved by the district managers of the respective counties. If, after conducting an assessment or home study, the receiving county determines the family cannot be certified, the caseworkers in both the sending and receiving counties will collaborate around how they will notify the family of the findings. If there is disagreement between the caseworkers or certifiers in the counties, the caseworkers contact their respective supervisors to resolve the issue. If the issue cannot be resolved at the supervisory level, supervisors take the matter to the Child Welfare program managers, then to the Foster Care manager for resolution.

XIII. For more information, see Appendix 4.13, “Inter-County Case Responsibilities, Requirements, and Oversight Procedure.”

Section 10: Placement of a child with HIV/AIDS
Placement of a child with HIV/AIDS

Although rare, there are occasions when a child with HIV/AIDS comes into the care and custody of ODHS. Due to the sensitive nature of information in the case and the special confidentiality requirements of the medical information, caseworkers overseeing the care of a child with HIV/AIDS should consult frequently with the supervisor. In addition, HIV/AIDS can be a highly emotionally charged medical condition. Pay particular attention to thoughtfully and sensitively working with the child, the family, the child’s substitute caregivers and other community partners who may be providing services. For procedures regarding HIV testing, see Chapter 5, Section 21, Medical Care Services.

As with every child in Child Welfare’s custody, it is the responsibility of the caseworker to engage in appropriate placement matching, seeking a substitute care resource that is the least restrictive, is in a child’s best interest and can meet the child’s identified needs. For detailed information on placement matching, refer to Section 2 in this chapter.

Procedure

I. When a child in the department’s care or custody is diagnosed with HIV or has AIDS, schedule and facilitate a meeting prior to placement comprised of the following team members:
   A. Caseworker;
   B. Caseworker’s supervisor;
   C. District manager or designee;
   D. Prospective substitute caregiver;
   E. Casework certifier (if certified by Child Welfare);
   F. Certification supervisor (if certified by Child Welfare); and
   G. The child’s physician.

II. In addition, whenever appropriate, invite the child, the child’s parents, therapist, counselor, CASA, attorney or other supportive individuals to the staffing.

III. At the meeting, determine the roles and responsibilities of each member of the team, review the services and supports to be provided to maintain the child safely with the substitute caregiver, and determine the activities in which the child participates. These services and activities may include:
   A. Counseling;
   B. Special medical care and treatment;
   C. Special personal care services;
   D. Day care;
   E. School, outings, social activities and play activities;
   F. Visitation;
   G. Training;
   H. Relief care resources; and
   I. Special equipment or necessary durable goods (e.g., gloves and hazardous waste red bags).
IV. Consider counseling for the HIV-positive child as well as the family and substitute caregiver as part of the service needs of the case plan. Depending on the age of the child and the needs of the family members and the substitute caregiver, different counseling options may be available. The child’s primary health care provider should have input on the need for counseling. Counseling options may include individual or group counseling, support groups or HIV/AIDS education services. If the child is sexually active, counseling regarding sexual practice and safeguards is appropriate. If the child is a hemophiliac or IV drug user, additional specialized counseling may be required.

V. Ensure that no more than one child diagnosed with HIV or AIDS is in the same substitute care placement without approval of the district manager or designee. The approval may be granted after a case staffing with the supervisor, the district manager or designee, substitute caregiver, certifier and certification supervisor, and the child’s physician. When approval is granted, document the approval in OR-Kids case notes, the OR-Kids provider notes tab (noting special approval of the placement of a specific child), and notify the substitute caregiver’s certifier.

VI. Consult with the HIV program in the ODHS Public Health Division prior to enrolling a child in a day care setting.

VII. Ensure that the substitute caregiver is familiar with the confidentiality safeguards prohibiting the sharing of information regarding the child’s HIV infection with others.

VIII. Provide the child’s substitute caregiver with the information contained in ODHS publication 9014 regarding hygiene procedures.

IX. If necessary, obtain additional information regarding HIV/AIDS from the local health department or the HIV program in the Public Health Division. Encourage the substitute caregiver to contact the local health department for information and support in the care of the child. The local health department also may be able to provide information about local support or counseling services available in the community.

X. Secure all medical and social information regarding the child or the child’s family, including the personal care assessment that pertains to the HIV status of the child, in a separate, locked file.

XI. Keep all written case notes addressing the HIV status of the child or family member maintained in the separate, locked file.

XII. Sensitize and secure the case record.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Consult with the caseworker regarding appropriate steps in the child’s placement.

II. Participate in meetings and staffings with the caseworker.

III. Ensure appropriate documentation and security precautions are taken for all confidential information.

Section 12: Placement of a refugee child
Placement of a refugee child

The placement of a refugee child is very rare in Oregon. The caseworker follows specific rules when the child is a refugee child or is the child of a refugee parent.

OAR 413-070-310 (9) “Refugee child” (defined by ORS 418.925) means a person under 18 years of age who has entered the United States and is unwilling or unable to return to the person’s country because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular group or political opinion, or whose parents entered the United States within the preceding 10 years and are or were unwilling or unable to return to their country because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of race, religion, nationality, or membership in a particular group or political opinion.

I. As used in this section, “persecution” means that harm or suffering will be inflicted upon the person in order to punish the person for possessing a particular belief or characteristic. “Persecution” does not include harm and suffering that is inflicted on persons generally by reason of civil or military strife in a country.

II. As used in this section, “fear of persecution” means an apprehension or awareness, based on external objective facts, that the person will suffer persecution upon return to the person’s country.

The CPS worker must ask the child or the child’s parents about national origin, and ethnic and cultural information relative to the child’s refugee status if it appears the child will be taken into custody.

A child cannot be removed from the home unless removal is necessary due to the imminent serious emotional or physical harm to the child and reasonable efforts to remediate the situation by providing preventive services have failed or are not practical in an emergency situation.

Once the child is in the legal custody of Child Welfare, it is the caseworker’s responsibility to locate affected family members (natural and legal parents, extended family members and any person within the fifth degree of consanguinity to the child. Consanguinity refers to the relative relationship, so, as an example, a fifth cousin would be within five degrees of relationship.). It is important for the CPS worker, caseworker and certifier to have open and clear communication regarding the child’s relationships to the family, extended family and affected family, as federal law gives these persons placement preference.

Procedure

I. Adhere to the following order of preference when assessing placement considerations:
   A. Biological parents, then
   B. Extended family members, then
   C. Persons with knowledge and appreciation of the cultural heritage of the child.

Inform the biological parents of the intended placement plan in order to provide them with adequate information to request an alternative placement. The only reason not to follow this order of preference would be that the placement is inappropriate or inconsistent with the best interests of the child for one or more of the following reasons:
   A. The informed request of either of the biological parents is inconsistent with the stability, security and individual needs of the refugee child; or

B. The child has extreme medical, physical or psychological needs.

II. In addition to the above placement preferences, the caseworker is responsible for specific actions related to court in the case of a refugee child:

A. Provide the court notice of a hearing to all affected family members (natural and legal parents, extended family members and any person within the fifth degree of consanguinity to the child) and the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee (RCWAC).

B. Ensure the notice is in writing, is in language understandable to the recipient and includes:
   1. The child’s name;
   2. Complaint or reason a petition was filed; and
   3. Date, time, location and purpose of the hearing.

III. Ensure that the persons selected for substitute care placement are certified by Child Welfare prior to placing the child in the substitute care placement. Follow procedures for child-specific certification.

IV. Within one working day of the removal of a refugee child, file a petition with the juvenile court. In addition to the usual requirements of a court petition under ORS 419B.242, the petition must include:

A. Specific and detailed accounts of the circumstances that led to the decision that the child was in imminent danger of serious emotional or physical harm;

B. Specific actions Child Welfare is taking or has taken to alleviate the need for removal;

C. Assurance that Child Welfare has complied with placement preferences; and

D. Assurance that Child Welfare is making or has made diligent efforts to locate and give notice to all affected family members and to RCWAC.

V. The caseworker cannot keep a refugee child out of the child’s home for more than five days unless there is a judicial determination supported by clear and convincing evidence that:

A. Preventive or remedial services have failed to alleviate the need for removal; and

B. Return to the home likely will result in psychological or physical damage to the child.

Make arrangements to staff the child’s case at RCWAC by contacting the central office cultural competency/privacy coordinator.

Role of the Refugee Child Welfare Advisory Committee

I. The goal of RCWAC is to promote the implementation of cross-cultural sensitivity and ethnically competent services to best meet the needs of refugee communities in Oregon and to ensure the protection and appropriate casework services for refugee children by Child Welfare staff.

II. The stated purpose of RCWAC in ORS 418.941 is to advise Child Welfare on the development and administration of Child Welfare policies, programs and practices that affect refugee children and their families. Committee members represent and advocate for the interests of refugee children. They provide consultation and advice regarding the culturally appropriate placement of refugee children and the availability of resources. for refugee children and families. Committee members are able to provide caseworkers with information about the child’s culture and traditions, and to assist the worker in developing culturally appropriate services for family members.

Case records for a refugee child

I. There are specific case records that need to be maintained in the case of a refugee child. The caseworker must ensure the case record includes:

   A. The child’s name, age, former residence, legal status, health records, sex, race and accumulated length of time in substitute care;

   B. The name, former residence and health history of each parent and other information relating to the parent’s ability to care for the child in the parent’s home;

   C. The date of the child’s entry into substitute care or adoption and the name, race, occupation and residence of the person with whom the refugee child is placed; and

   D. The date of the removal of the refugee child from any home and the reason for removal.

The Supervisor’s Role

Ensure the caseworker follows all the special legal and notification requirements of working with a refugee child/family.

Section 13: Placement in another state
Placement in another state

The Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC)

The ICPC is a legally binding agreement adopted by all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and the U.S. Virgin Islands to govern placement of children from one state to another. The compact ensures that the placement is safe for the child and that the person, court or agency that places a child into the other state remains legally and financially responsible for the child. The ICPC allows states to provide reciprocal services such as home studies and ongoing supervision of the placement.

The ICPC was adopted into law by the Oregon Legislature in 1975, and the text can be found in ORS 417.200. Placement in violation of the ICPC is a Class A misdemeanor. The ICPC is covered in OAR 413-040-0200 to 0292. ICPC articles and regulations can be viewed here.

Types of out-of-state placements covered by the ICPC

With very rare exceptions, ICPC compliance is required any time that a child in ODHS custody is placed into another state. Placements covered by the ICPC include:

I. Reunification with parent or guardian.
II. Placement with relatives.
III. Placement with foster parent.
IV. Placement with adoptive family.
V. Placement into residential treatment.

The ICPC also applies when children in the legal custody of ODHS move with their caregiver to another state. This is true whether the children are currently in Oregon or if they already have been placed out of state with ICPC approval and then move with their caregiver to another state. See below, “When a caregiver moves out of state with a child in ODHS legal custody.”

Out-of-state placements that do not require ICPC compliance

ICPC is not required if a child is hospitalized in another state, if a child is attending boarding school, or if a youth is living independently or in a program such as Job Corps. In those instances, however, other arrangements must be made to ensure that the child is seen according to ODHS rules.

Regulation 3 of the ICPC allows a court to place a child with a non-offending parent without going through ICPC provided that:

I. The court has no evidence before it, and seeks no evidence, that the parent is unfit; and
II. The court dismisses its jurisdiction immediately.

If the court wants a home study prior to placement, or monitoring after placement, then the ICPC applies.
The ICPC explicitly refers to children under 18, and states vary as to whether they will accept an ICPC request for a young adult aged 18 or older. Contact the Oregon ICPC office for guidance on these cases.

The ICPC does not cover international placements, including placements to U.S. territories other than the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Referral for out-of-state placement

Procedure

Upon identification of a prospective out-of-state caregiver, prepare an ICPC referral packet and submit it to the Oregon ICPC office via email. Required materials for a complete ICPC referral packet include:

For all requests:

I. See the ICPC tools page for ICPC forms and procedures: http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/policy/childwelfare/icpc_tools.html.

II. ICPC Request form (CW 0100A, one per child).

III. Cover letter form (CW 0100E).

IV. ICPC Financial/Medical Plan form (CW 1044, one per child, completed by the assigned Title IV-E specialist).

V. Caseworker statement form (CW 0161).

VI. Copy of most recent court order showing Oregon ODHS has custody of the child.

VII. Copy of most recent case plan or other social history such as screening report, CPS assessment, or protective custody report.

VIII. Copy of recent evaluations or other documentation regarding any special needs the child may have.

IX. Copy of current safety plan.

X. For CANS level 1, 2 or 3, include enhanced supervision plan and CANS assessment.

XI. If available, copy of child’s birth certificate.

XII. If available, copy of child’s Social Security card.

For adoption requests:

All of the above, plus:

I. Copy of TPR orders or relinquishments, if the child is legally free.

II. Copy of adoption child summary, if completed.

III. If applicable, copy of family’s home study (usually only when placement is with a general applicant family selected at committee).
Send only the pertinent information that will help the other state to assess whether the proposed placement is a good fit for the child. This includes current information about the child’s functioning and needs, as well as available information about the proposed caregiver. For a proposed placement with a parent, include a copy of the jurisdiction order showing what allegations were admitted or proven, as well as a copy of the most current action agreement and any recent evaluations conducted on the parent. Also include documentation regarding the parent’s engagement and progress in court-ordered services.

When sending a sibling group to the same placement, it is not necessary to complete a separate referral packet for each child. Forms CW 0100A and CW 1044 are required one per child, and some additional documents (such as a birth certificate, IEP, or evaluations) will be individualized; however, items such as the cover letter (Form CW 0100E), caseworker statement (Form CW 0161), and court orders (if they include all siblings) may address the sibling group as a whole.

The Oregon ICPC office divides its case assignments based on the last name of the oldest child in a sibling group, regardless of whether the children are going to the same or to different placements.

The ICPC office will create the ICPC record on the child’s case in OR-Kids, and the caseworker can view the record to confirm when the request is sent out to the other state. For requests other than a parent placement, the ICPC office also will create a provider record in OR-Kids.

Tip

Email requests to oregon.icpc@state.or.us.

Please do not save referral packet into OR-Kids as much of it duplicates information already there. Also, the ICPC office can access documents in OR-Kids, so you do not need to send items already saved into OR-Kids (such as documents in the file cabinet or completed case plans).

Type of Care

ICPC differentiates among four types of home study: parent, relative, adoption, and foster care. Generally, the 0100A will be approved only for one type of study/placement at a time. For example, if a child is placed with a relative under ICPC approval for foster care, and the case plan later changes to adoption by that relative, a new ICPC request will be required to get an adoption home study and ICPC approval for adoptive placement with that relative.

Not all states require relatives to be foster certified or licensed, and “relative home study” on the 0100A refers to an unlicensed placement. In most instances, Oregon ICPC will request foster certification/licensing for substitute care placements to meet Title IV-E and training requirements. It is helpful if the caseworker informs the proposed caregiver in advance that foster certification/licensing will be required so that they know what will be expected of them as part of the home study process.

Multiple Requests

There is no prohibition against submitting more than one ICPC referral at a time, but it is advisable to limit the number of referrals by screening potential caregivers prior to preparing the packet. Doing so will prevent wasted time and effort both in Oregon and in the receiving state. The caseworker statement form (CW 0161) can assist with the screening. By interviewing the proposed caregiver, the caseworker ensures that the resource is willing to cooperate with the process, and the caseworker also obtains some basic information that may give an indication about whether this will be a viable resource.
Adoption

Some states will not approve adoptive placement until the child is legally free (see Appendix 5.9). If seeking to make a legal risk placement in one of those states, the caseworker will need to start with a request for foster or relative care and then follow up with a new ICPC request for adoption after the child has been freed.

Some states prohibit adoption by unmarried couples. In those instances, only one of the prospective adoptive parents can be listed on the 0100A. The home study will address both partners but will identify one as the adopting parent and the other as a member of the household.

When Oregon has recruited for an adoptive home and is seeking to place with a general applicant, some additional factors apply:

I. The home study or an update, including FBI background and CPS history checks, must be completed within the past year.

II. The family must be foster-certified or licensed unless Adoption Assistance (AA) will be open immediately upon placement.

III. In order to avoid unnecessary work, the ICPC request should be sent through the ICPC process only after the family has been selected for placement.

IV. The receiving state ICPC office usually will request the family’s adoption agency to complete a “child-specific” addendum to the family’s home study, documenting that the family and the agency have reviewed information about the child and that the agency recommends this specific family for placement of this specific child.

V. Dates for transition and placement should not be set until after ICPC placement approval is received from the other state.

If a private agency will provide the post-placement supervision:

I. The agency must be licensed to provide the appropriate services and must be willing to contract with Oregon ODHS for the post-placement supervision.

II. The contract must be executed before the Oregon ICPC office will send the ICPC request to the other state. The receiving state will require a copy of the contract prior to approving the placement.

   A. Work with the Adoptions Program in Central Office to confirm whether there already is a contract with the agency and, if not, to get the contract set up.

III. On the 0100A, section III, mark “Another Agency Agreed to Supervise,” and provide the agency name and address.

Residential Treatment in another state (Regulation 4)

ICPC approval is required when a child in ODHS custody is placed into a residential treatment facility, group home, or therapeutic foster home in another state. Such placement can occur only with prior consultation with the Residential Resource Consultant (RRC) and when payment arrangements have been made with the facility. This includes situations when a child already is placed with a family out of state and then requires a higher level of care.
Most states do not provide supervision for placement in residential treatment, so other arrangements will need to be made to ensure that the child is seen per ODHS rules. Often the Treatment Services unit will contract with a licensed private agency in the receiving state to provide monthly supervision. Please work with your RRC to confirm that arrangements are made.

Procedure

Prepare an ICPC referral packet, and send it to the Oregon ICPC office. The packet should include at minimum:

I. The 0100A form;

II. A copy of the most recent court order showing that ODHS has custody of the child;

III. Current information about the child and the child’s needs;

IV. Form 1044 completed by your Title IV-E specialist; and

V. An acceptance letter from the facility.

A new 0100A is required any time the child moves to a different facility or if the child is returning to live with the previous family with whom the child was placed.

Delinquency cases

Interstate movement of delinquent youth is governed by the Interstate Compact on Juveniles (ICJ), which is written into the laws of all 50 states as well as the District of Columbia, Guam, and the U.S. Virgin Islands. The ICJ has a different focus in that the ICJ is geared toward accountability of the offender and safety of the community, while the ICPC is directed more at the safety and well-being of the individual child.

When youth are adjudicated delinquent and placed in another state, they will need to be supervised in the receiving state to monitor their compliance with parole/probation requirements, and the ICJ is the mechanism to provide that supervision. The Oregon probation/parole officer or juvenile court counselor is responsible to send the referral through ICJ channels. An exception is when the youth is being placed in residential treatment; then only the ICPC applies.

When placing an adjudicated delinquent youth who also is in ODHS custody, approval for placement is needed through both compacts.

Courtesy casework services

The ICPC pertains to placement of a child and is not an avenue to obtain courtesy casework services to assist a parent in another state to work a reunification plan. There is no formal mechanism among states to provide such services.

Instead, the Oregon ODHS caseworker is advised to contact the local Child Welfare office where the parent resides. The other state is under no obligation to provide assistance, and whether it does will depend upon the other state’s policy and the local office’s ability or willingness to help (usually based on workload, staff resources, etc). Rarely, the other state may assign a caseworker; most commonly, the other state will give contact information for recommended service providers in the area, and it will be the Oregon caseworker’s responsibility to arrange for payment for services and monitoring of progress for the parent.

When the parent has made sufficient progress on the case plan, submit an ICPC referral packet to request a parent... home study.

Timelines

Once placement is approved, the child must be placed within six months from the date of approval as indicated on the 0100A form. Otherwise, a new referral will need to be submitted to renew the approval, or the ICPC case is closed because approval has expired. If the child is to be placed within a short time after the expiration — for example, if approval expires in May and the plan is to allow the child to finish the school year — then the caseworker should contact the Oregon ICPC office. It may be possible for the Oregon ICPC office to work with the counterpart in the receiving state to extend the approval long enough to allow the child to be placed.

How Long Does ICPC Take?

The Safe and Timely Interstate Placement of Foster Children Act (P.L. 109-239) requires the receiving state to send a report back to the sending state within 60 days from the date the request was received. This law applies to foster care and adoption requests only. The law does not require the receiving state to approve or deny placement within 60 days if the receiving state is unable to do so; for example, if the resource still must complete foster parent training classes. The law requires only that a report be sent back to the sending state, so in practice, most states will provide a preliminary or status report to meet the 60-day deadline, but this is not a final approval or denial.

Priority Placement (Regulation 7)

Regulation 7 of the ICPC provides an option to get an expedited placement decision if the case qualifies. If the request is accepted under Regulation 7, then the receiving state is expected to provide approval or denial within 20 business days. Many states are not able to meet Regulation 7 priority placement deadlines, so it is recommended you contact the Oregon ICPC office for guidance in advance of making the request.

To qualify for Regulation 7 priority handling, the placement must be with:

I. Parent,
II. Step-parent,
III. Grandparent,
IV. Aunt/uncle,
V. Adult sibling, or
VI. Legal guardian.

And the case must meet at least one of the following criteria:

I. Unexpected dependency due to recent incarceration, incapacitation, or death of a parent or guardian;
II. The child (at least one child, if a sibling group) is under 4 years of age;
III. The court finds that any child in the sibling group to be placed has a substantial relationship with the proposed placement; or

IV. The child is currently in an emergency placement.

A court must make the findings that Regulation 7 applies and must sign a specific order, form CW 0101. The signed form must be included with the regular ICPC referral packet.

There are specific deadlines to be met in order for the case to qualify for Regulation 7 Priority handling:

I. The court must provide the order to the Oregon caseworker within two business days of when it was signed.

II. The caseworker must have the ICPC referral packet sent to the Oregon ICPC office within three business days of receipt of the order.

III. The Oregon ICPC office must send the request to the receiving state ICPC office within two business days after receipt of a complete Regulation 7 request.

Tip

ICPC communication protocol is that ICPC offices communicate with each other, and caseworkers communicate with their counterparts. Caseworkers should not contact another state’s ICPC office directly but should route communication through their own state’s ICPC office. Written materials such as ICPC requests, completed home studies, and supervision reports must be sent through the central ICPC offices. Status checks and other informal communication may go directly between caseworkers.

Border Agreements

To expedite placements, Oregon has a border agreement with Washington under which a provisional approval or denial will be given within seven business days. A provisional approval allows the child to be placed in the home while the full home study process is completed.

The case must fit certain eligibility criteria:

I. The case must originate in a county that borders Washington, and the placement must be in a county that borders Oregon.

II. Placement must be with a relative or with someone who has a significant relationship with the child.

III. No one in the household of the proposed placement may have criminal or child abuse/neglect history.

IV. Members of the household must have lived only in Oregon or in Washington the past three years.

If provisional placement approval is given, the child must be placed within 20 days from the date of the approval. Then the care provider will need to follow through with the full home study process, otherwise the placement could end up being denied and the child will have to return to Oregon.

Oregon also has a pilot border agreement with Idaho that covers Malheur County in Oregon and Payette County in Idaho.

Procedure
For a border agreement request to Washington, prepare an ICPC referral packet as described in “Referral for out-of-state placement” except that the Washington-Oregon border agreement provisional request form (available at http://www.ODHS.state.or.us/policy/childwelfare/icpc_tools.html) replaces the caseworker statement form (CW 0161).

For a border agreement request to Idaho, prepare an ICPC referral packet as described above, and indicate when emailing it to the Oregon ICPC office that it is a border agreement request.

Placement

The child may be placed in the other state after the ICPC office in the receiving state has given written approval for the placement. The approval is documented by the 0100A and signed by the appropriate authority in the receiving state. This means that even if the home study worker in the other state says that placement is being approved, placement cannot proceed without the 0100A signed by the other state’s ICPC office.

Notice of the receiving state’s decision should come to the caseworker from the Oregon ICPC office. If a copy of the home study or any other documentation is received directly from the receiving state, the caseworker should immediately forward the information to the Oregon ICPC office.

The Oregon ICPC office will save the completed 0100A into the OR-Kids file cabinet on the child’s case. Except for parent home studies, which are saved into the OR-Kids file cabinet on the parent’s case, documentation pertaining to the provider will be saved into the OR-Kids file cabinet on the provider record, not on the child’s case, because it contains confidential information about the provider.

The caseworker should not make plans for a specific placement date until ICPC approval is received through official channels. Court approval also is required to move the child to another state for a designated legal risk adoption placement.

Prior to placement, it is important to review the financial and medical plan with the caregiver. As the sending state, Oregon is responsible to provide for the needs of the child, and the caseworker will need to have a plan for how that will be accomplished. For instance, several states now charge for public education services provided to children placed there from other states, so it is crucial to know that in advance. Additional information can be found in the Foster Care Payments and Medical Coverage sections, and the caseworker is advised to consult with the Oregon ICPC office on case-specific issues.

Travel

The Oregon ICPC office has funds available to cover travel expenses related to placements made through ICPC. Travel authorization by the Oregon ICPC office takes the place of the out-of-state travel authorization process used for other travel.

The Oregon ICPC office is billed directly for the airfare and reimburses for other authorized expenses such as lodging, meals, rental car, gas, airport parking, and baggage/shipping costs. To be reimbursed, the traveler must be set up as a provider in OR-Kids, so please allow sufficient lead time for this to occur.

Procedure
Develop the travel plan, including determination about who will be traveling, and then contact the Oregon ICPC coordinator. The ICPC coordinator issues a travel authorization that details the specific amounts that are authorized. When the finalized authorization is received, contact the state-contracted travel agency to make the travel arrangements.

The Oregon ICPC office can cover some or all of the following:

I. Up to one night for placement;

II. Up to five nights for a pre-placement visit if the placement is approved for adoption;

III. Associated expenses such as lodging, meals, rental car, baggage check fees, and parking;
   A. Meals for ODHS staff are paid at the published federal per diem rate.
   B. Meals for non-employees, including the child, are reimbursed per receipt for the actual cost of the meal, not to exceed the per diem rate.

IV. One escort for placement or for disruption;

V. Most reasonable means of transport for the child and escort(s);

VI. Shipping of the child’s belongings; and

VII. Costs for the pre-placement visit can be covered for both parents if it is a couple adopting. Costs for additional family members are not covered (for example, if the adoptive parents have other children and want to bring them along).

If justified, based on the child’s needs, it may be possible to make some limited exceptions to the above parameters. Any exceptions require approval from the manager of the ICPC office. Travel must be pre-authorized to be covered by the Oregon ICPC office. Exceptions cannot be approved to authorize travel retroactively unless it is an emergency (for example, an extra night of lodging if flights were canceled due to weather delays).

When an ICPC placement ends, the Oregon ICPC office can cover costs to return a child to Oregon. Again, the travel must be pre-authorized.

ICPC travel claims must be submitted to the ICPC office on a specific ICPC Travel Claim form, not processed through TRIPS. The Oregon ICPC office will provide the claim form to the caseworker when travel is authorized.

The Oregon ICPC office does not cover travel expenses to return runaways or to return a child with whom a parent has absconded.

Tip

If the receiving state has denied placement, the ICPC allows a new placement request for the same resource to be submitted after 90 days have passed. Depending on the circumstances and the reason for denial, it may be possible to resubmit the request earlier. Consult with the Oregon ICPC office regarding specific cases to determine whether a new request may be submitted and what materials will need to be included in the new request.

Placement Supervision (Regulation 11)
When the child is placed, notify the Oregon ICPC office immediately by submitting a completed and signed ICPC Report on Child’s Placement Status form CW 0100B. The Oregon ICPC office sends the form to the receiving state to notify the receiving state that the child has been placed and to request supervision of the placement.

Regulation 11 of the ICPC defines supervision requirements when a child is placed in another state in compliance with the ICPC. States provide reciprocal supervision when the child is in the custody of a public agency and when the public agency (or its subcontractor) in the receiving state has completed the home study. In those cases where a family has worked with a private agency to obtain a home study, the sending state must contract with the private agency to provide the post-placement services. States generally do not supervise children who are placed in a residential treatment facility, in a group home, or in a therapeutic foster care program.

Upon notification of placement (via the 0100B form), the receiving state is expected to see the child a minimum of once every 30 days, with a majority of those visits occurring in the child’s home. If any problems arise with the placement, the receiving state is required to notify the sending state immediately. The receiving state may make recommendations concerning services that the child and/or family need, but it is up to the sending state to make financial arrangements for the provision of those services.

The receiving state is expected to send progress reports through ICPC channels on at least a quarterly basis. Those supervision reports should address the child’s ongoing safety and well-being, and the reports should include dates and locations of face-to-face contact as well as updates concerning the child’s education, medical/mental health services, and assessment of the child’s living environment. The report also includes, when appropriate, a recommendation to close the case by finalizing the adoption or transferring custody to the parent or proposed guardian.

Caseworkers may have direct contact with each other via telephone and/or email regarding day-to-day case management issues; however, that contact does not take the place of the required supervision reports. If a report has not been received, contact the Oregon ICPC office, and the ICPC coordinator will follow up with the other state’s ICPC office to request a report.

Foster Care Payments

Oregon ODHS remains responsible to make foster care payments when children in ODHS custody are placed in substitute care in another state. Foster care payments are made at Oregon rates, including any Enhanced Supervision level assessed by the CANS screening. The Oregon ICPC office will direct what placement type to use, and the local branch will open the placement in OR-Kids.

Personal care payments are not made for children placed out of state because personal care is a Medicaid service and thus is provided only to children residing within Oregon. If the child has personal care needs, the foster parent will need to explore whether that service can be covered under Medicaid in the receiving state. Unlike Oregon, most other states do not delegate personal care services to the foster parent and pay the foster parent for performance of those duties; rather, if the child qualifies for personal care, other states are more likely to contract with providers to come into the home.

Medical Coverage

If a child is placed with a parent, the parent is responsible to provide medical coverage for the child, but the sending state remains responsible to ensure that the child’s needs are met.
In all placements other than with parents, the sending state is responsible to ensure that the child has medical coverage. In most states, the substitute caregiver will need to apply for medical coverage through their state’s Medicaid office. It is essential to determine prior to placement whether the child will qualify for Medicaid in the other state and to make plans accordingly.

If the child is Title IV-E eligible and receiving Title IV-E foster payments, then per federal rules, the child will be eligible for Medicaid in the receiving state. At the time of placement, ask your office Title IV-E specialist to provide a COBRA letter to the substitute caregiver; this is the documentation the caregiver may need to show as proof of the child’s eligibility for Medicaid.

A child who is receiving SSI also is categorically eligible for Medicaid in the receiving state. The substitute caregiver may need to apply for coverage through the Social Security office in the receiving state.

If the child is not Title IV-E eligible, then the medical coverage is state-funded, and states vary as to whether they will provide state-funded medical coverage (see Appendix 5.10). The substitute caregiver still must apply for medical coverage, but if denied, then the Oregon caseworker will need to work with the medical assistance specialist in the local ODHS office to keep the child on the Oregon Health Plan. This can be very problematic because medical service providers in the other state will need to register as Oregon medical providers to bill for services, and it can be difficult to locate providers who are able or willing to do this.

If medical coverage is denied in the receiving state, follow these suggested tips for keeping costs down:

I. Have the foster parent find service providers who accept Medicaid and/or Medicare.

II. Either the foster parent or the caseworker should communicate with the service providers to see if they will agree to enroll as Oregon providers so they can bill OHP directly. The provider can call Oregon Health Authority Provider Services at 800-336-6016.

III. If the provider does not enroll with OHP, then the service provider will bill the local Oregon ODHS office directly. It is recommended that the caseworker (or resource developer, if available) negotiate with the service provider’s office to see whether they would be willing to accept Medicaid payment rates, Medicare payment rates, or reimbursement at financial assistance rates. Request itemized bills.

When placing children who are not Title IV-E eligible but who are legally free for adoption, it is best to work with the Adoptions Unit to have adoption assistance (AA) open immediately upon placement. Children receiving AA are covered by an additional interstate compact, the Interstate Compact on Adoption and Medical Assistance (ICAMA). Under ICAMA, most states agree to provide Medicaid coverage if the child is receiving AA, regardless of whether the child is Title IV-E eligible.

When a caregiver moves out of state with a child in ODHS legal custody (Regulation 1 Relocation)

Regulation 1 of the ICPC allows for a child living with an already-approved placement to relocate to another state with that caregiver. The intention of this regulation is to maintain stability for the child. The receiving state cannot complete a home study until the family is living there; however, it would be very disruptive to place a child elsewhere while waiting for a home study to be completed on the current caregiver. This is the only time when a child in ODHS custody can be placed in another state prior to ICPC approval.

Regulation 1 applies when a child in ODHS custody moves to another state with

I. The current relative/foster family,

II. The current pre-adoptive family (prior to finalization), or

III. A parent or legal guardian when ODHS maintains custody.

Regulation 1 also applies when a child in ODHS custody already is placed out of state with ICPC approval, and the family subsequently moves to a different state.

Prior to authorizing a relocation, consult with your supervisor and with the family’s certifier (if applicable). Also obtain court approval for the child to move to another state if it is a designated legal risk placement.

Factors to consider:

I. A home study (including background checks) will be completed on the family in the other state.

II. Unless it is a parent placement, the family will be expected to complete foster certification/licensing in the other state. The family needs to be aware that it is likely they will have to repeat things they previously completed to be approved for placement.

III. It is possible that placement may be denied and the child may have to return to Oregon.

IV. Before Oregon can dismiss custody, the receiving state will need to concur, which likely will not happen until the receiving state has had the opportunity to monitor the placement (usually for up to six months) to ensure that the placement is safe and stable. This means that finalization/case closure likely will be delayed past when it could have occurred if the family had not moved.

V. Developmental Disabilities (DD) foster payments and/or personal care payments will not be made in another state.

Procedure

Immediately prior to the family’s move, prepare a standard ICPC referral (see Section A), and include:

For relocation of relative/foster/pre-adoptive family:

I. Copy of foster or adoption home study and updates;

II. Copy of family’s current foster certificate; and

III. CW 0100B form (one per child) showing the date when the family moved.

For relocation of parent/legal guardian:

I. Copy of parent/guardian’s action agreement;

II. Copy of current safety plan;
III. Copy of relevant information about caregiver (such as petition, psychological evaluations, substance abuse assessments, etc.); and

IV. CW 0100B form (one per child) showing the date when the family moved.

The receiving state is expected to visit the child and the caregiver within 30 days of being notified that the caregiver and child have arrived in the receiving state.

Oregon can continue to make foster payments based on the Oregon certificate for up to 180 days or until the family becomes certified in the receiving state, whichever comes first. The OR-Kids provider should be designated to Central Office when the family moves.

Closing the ICPC

The ICPC requires that the sending state maintains jurisdiction until the appropriate authority (usually the ICPC office) in the receiving state concurs with dismissal. This means that when a child is placed via ICPC, Oregon ODHS should not finalize an adoption or a guardianship, or return legal custody to a parent with whom the child is placed, until and unless the written recommendation has been received through the Oregon ICPC office.

Prior to asking the Oregon court to dismiss custody, ask the supervising worker in the other state to send through ICPC channels a written recommendation to close the case. Ask for dismissal only after the Oregon ICPC office has forwarded the written recommendation to close the case.

If Oregon ODHS dismisses the case without concurrence from the other state, then Oregon is in violation of the ICPC, and the other state can ask Oregon ODHS to file with the court to reinstate the dependency.

Termination of ICPC services may occur without concurrence from the other state for one of the following reasons:

I. Child ages out of the system;

II. Treatment is completed;

III. Child returns to sending state;

IV. Child moves to a different state (in which case, a new ICPC request would need to be sent);

V. Proposed placement request is withdrawn; or

VI. Approved resource will not be used for placement.

If the receiving state notifies Oregon that the child must be removed from the placement, then Oregon ODHS has five business days to arrange for the child’s return to Oregon. Contact the Oregon ICPC office for authorization for travel expenses.

Regardless of the reason for closure, be sure to let the Oregon ICPC office know when an ICPC case can be closed. If applicable, email a copy of the court order or ensure that a copy is saved into OR-Kids. The ICPC Report on Child’s Placement Status form (CW 0100B) is completed and sent to the receiving state in order to close the ICPC case. This form can be completed by the caseworker or by the Oregon ICPC coordinator.
The Child Welfare case in OR-Kids cannot be closed while an ICPC record remains open.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Ensure that the caseworker is aware of and adheres to the requirements of the ICPC when seeking to place children out of state.

II. Direct the caseworker to begin the process as soon as possible after a prospective out-of-state caregiver has been identified.

III. Ensure that out-of-state placements do not occur before ICPC approval has been obtained unless it is a Regulation One Relocation.

IV. Review the home study received from the other state before a child is placed.

V. If the receiving state has imposed any conditions for placement, ensure that they are met before the child is placed.

VI. Ensure that arrangements are made within five business days to return the child(ren) if the receiving state has determined that the placement cannot continue.

VII. If applicable, verify that the receiving state has provided written concurrence before Oregon ODHS custody is dismissed.

VIII. Request on-site training for caseworkers on ICPC procedures when needed.

Placements Into Oregon

Home Study

In most cases, home studies for placements into Oregon will be completed by ICPC workers who are stationed around the state. The home studies are reviewed and approved by the supervisor in the branch local to where the family lives.

Foster/relative/adoption home studies in response to ICPC requests from other states are completed in the same manner as any other certification or adoption home studies conducted by Oregon ODHS, and prospective caregivers must meet Oregon ODHS certification standards. See OARs 413-200-0270 to 0396 and chapter 8 of the Child Welfare Procedure Manual. The ICPC request is child-specific and is parallel to the certification process. It is not possible to approve ICPC placement if the home cannot be certified, but it is possible to deny the ICPC placement for a specific child if the family is approved for certification but not able to meet the needs of the child. While an applicant has contested case hearing rights for denial of certification, there is no mechanism to appeal the ICPC placement decision.

The Safe and Timely Interstate Placement of Foster Children Act (P.L. 109-239) requires the receiving state to provide a report on the home study within 60 days of receipt of the request. The goal is to have the full study and certification process completed by then, but if that is not possible, then at minimum, a preliminary report must be completed, documenting the progress thus far, preliminary indications about whether this placement is likely to be contrary to the welfare of the child, and the estimated date of completion. The preliminary report must be approved by the local branch reviewing supervisor.
Email the preliminary report, if applicable, to the Oregon ICPC office, which will review the report and forward it to the sending state’s ICPC office. When the full home study is completed and signed by the local branch supervisor, email it to the Oregon ICPC office, which will review the study and forward it to the sending state’s ICPC office along with the 0100A approving or denying placement. The report should not be sent directly to the sending state caseworker.

If the proposed caregiver has failed to respond in a timely manner or has withdrawn from consideration, a memo should be sent to the Oregon ICPC office documenting this information so that the ICPC placement request can be denied and closed. This memo does not require supervisor approval.

The ICPC Parent Home Study form (CW 0099) is used when assessing whether it would be appropriate for another state to place a child with a parent living in Oregon.

When another state requests a home study, Oregon ODHS is authorized only to provide an assessment of whether this placement is a safe and appropriate resource for the child(ren) at the present time. If yes, then approval of placement should be recommended. Additional services may be recommended and may even be conditions for placement. If, however, the resource needs to complete extensive services or resolve significant safety issues prior to placement, then denial should be recommended, and the sending state can resubmit the request when services have been completed.

The other state may ask Oregon ODHS to provide extra services such as case management toward reunification, but it is beyond the agency’s scope and authority to do so. Oregon ODHS may provide recommendations about service providers, but the other state will need to make the financial arrangements and to monitor progress and compliance.

ICPC approval for placement expires after six months if the child has not been placed. If the prospective caregiver has been approved for foster certification but the child was not placed, the Oregon ICPC office gives the prospective caregiver the option to withdraw the application for foster certification or to apply for general, non-child-specific certification.

Financial Responsibility

The sending state maintains responsibility for the child, so the sending state is responsible to make foster payments and to provide funding for recommended services. The sending state also is responsible to make arrangements for supervised visitation with parents (if applicable). Funding goes according to the sending state’s policy, so the sending state decides what amount of foster payments to make and what services to fund, if any.

Some federal- or state-funded services are available to children placed here from other states. Children are eligible to attend public schools in Oregon at no charge. Youth also are eligible for some Independent Living Program services if they meet eligibility requirements (OAR 413-030-0400 to 0460).

Placement Supervision

When the Oregon ICPC office receives notification from the sending state (via the 0100B form) that the child has been placed, the Oregon ICPC office will ask the local ODHS office to assign a courtesy caseworker to monitor the placement and, if applicable, a certifier to carry the provider.

When supervising an ICPC placement from another state, the assigned Oregon caseworker is expected to see the child at least once every full calendar month. Face-to-face contact with a child or young adult in substitute care must occur in the substitute care placement every other month (OAR 413-080-0054 and chapter 7, section 6 in the Child Welfare Procedure Manual).

The assigned Oregon caseworker also is expected to send progress reports through ICPC channels on at least a quarterly basis. Those supervision reports should address the child’s ongoing safety and well-being, and the reports should include dates and locations of face-to-face contact as well as updates concerning the child’s education, medical/mental health services, and assessment of the child’s living environment. The report also includes, when appropriate, a recommendation to close the case by finalizing the adoption or transferring custody to the parent or proposed guardian.

The completed ICPC supervision report (CW.0102) should be emailed to the Oregon ICPC office along with copies of any attachments (such as report cards, medical or education reports, if applicable). Upon review, the Oregon ICPC office will upload the report into the child’s case in OR-Kids and then forward it to the sending state’s ICPC office. The Oregon caseworker may make recommendations for services the child and/or family need, but it is up to the sending state to make financial arrangements for the provision of those services.

Caseworkers may have direct contact with one another via telephone and/or email regarding day-to-day case management issues; however, that contact does not take the place of the required supervision reports.

When the Oregon ICPC office receives notice that a child has been placed from another state, an initial nursing assessment will be completed. If the sending state ICPC office requests a CANS screening or personal care assessment for the child, the Oregon caseworker may make the referral after approval is received from the Oregon ICPC office. When the completed report is received, the Oregon ICPC office will send a copy to the sending state’s ICPC office, and the Oregon caseworker should review it with the child’s caregiver.

Allegations of abuse in the ICPC placement home are handled just like any other case, with a report to the Hotline and assessment if needed. If the child is in imminent danger, Oregon ODHS can remove the child from the placement without prior approval from the sending state and without filing for custody; however, the sending state should be notified immediately. The sending state is responsible to make foster payments for shelter placement.

If problems arise with the placement, the Oregon caseworker should notify the sending state as soon as possible. Also, the Oregon caseworker should keep the Oregon ICPC office informed because the ICPC office may be able to assist with troubleshooting or with pushing the other state’s ICPC office for a plan if the child needs to be returned to the other state. Other than an emergent removal, a change in placement for the child should not be made without prior consultation with the Oregon ICPC office.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Provide prompt review of home studies submitted by ICPC workers.

II. Assign certifier and/or courtesy caseworker promptly when requested by the Oregon ICPC office.

III. Ensure that placements are being monitored according to ODHS rules regarding face-to-face contacts.

IV. Ensure that quarterly supervision reports are being submitted in a timely manner.

V. Ensure that the courtesy caseworker is aware of the sending state’s financial responsibility for the child and placement.
VI. Staff with the courtesy caseworker regarding when to give concurrence for dismissal.

VII. Contact the Oregon ICPC office if problems arise with the placement.

VIII. Request on-site training for caseworkers on ICPC procedures when needed.

Visits

ICPC approval is not required for a child in ODHS custody to visit another state, but it must be clear that the child is visiting and not being placed. Visits and placement are distinguished by purpose, duration, and intent. Regulation 9 of the ICPC provides specific parameters regarding what may be considered a visit:

I. The purpose of a visit is to provide the child with a social or cultural experience of short duration, such as a stay at a camp, or with a friend or relative who has not assumed legal responsibility for providing care for the child.

II. A visit must have an end date.

III. A visit cannot last longer than 30 days, unless it begins and ends within the period of a child’s school vacation.

IV. If the sending state has requested a home study or supervision, then the presumption is that the intent of the stay is a placement, not a visit.

Please consult with the Oregon ICPC office if there is a plan to send the child on a genuine visit while a home study is in process. The Oregon ICPC office will communicate with the receiving state ICPC office to explore whether there are any objections to the visit and to ensure that the receiving state knows that Oregon has not placed the child in violation of ICPC.

When a child in ODHS custody is visiting another state, the child remains on Oregon Health Plan and could receive routine care only if the service provider enrolls as an OHP provider. The person with whom the child is visiting cannot receive foster payment while the child is on visit status.

Runaways

In addition to governing interstate movement of delinquent youth, the Interstate Compact on Juveniles (ICJ) also includes provisions regarding runaways. Contact the Oregon ICJ office at 503-373-7569 to facilitate return of a runaway.

If a youth in ODHS custody has run away and is located in another state, the local ODHS office should request the Juvenile Court to issue a national pick-up order. The youth then can be detained in the other state pending travel back to Oregon.

Youth are entitled to due process when they are picked up in another state while on runaway status. The youth will appear in court in the other state and will be asked to sign the agreement to return to his/her home state on a voluntary basis. If the youth agrees, then the holding state’s ICJ office will have contact with the Oregon ICJ office, and the return will be implemented within five business days. Arrangements are made in direct consultation with the Oregon
If the youth refuses to sign the voluntary agreement, or if the location of the youth is known but pick up has not been accomplished, contact the Oregon ICJ office for direction on how to complete the requisition process.

Tip

If a child is placed with a parent, the parent is responsible to obtain medical coverage for the child. If the child is placed in substitute care with a relative, foster or adoptive family, the Oregon ICPC office will arrange for Oregon Health Plan coverage to be opened for the child when notified of the placement.
Chapter 5

Section 14: Services for, and Placement of, a Child with an Intellectual or Developmental Disability (I/DD), Whose Needs Can Be Met in a Foster Family Setting
Services for, and Placement of, a Child with an Intellectual or Developmental Disability (I/DD), Whose Needs Can Be Met in a Foster Family Setting

Placement and funding changes for DD-eligible children under the custody of Child Welfare

The following temporary adjustment to ODHS Child Welfare procedure (Chapter 5 Section 14) is being made to align with a temporary policy change under the ODHS Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (ODDS), which is currently experiencing pandemic-related critical workforce shortages impacting their services system. The corresponding Developmental Disabilities Services Policy Transmittal Number: DD-PT-21-087, issued on 9/29/21, reflects the broader ODDS temporary changes.

Temporary Adjustment to Child Welfare Procedure:

Placement Planning for Children in the Legal Custody of Child Welfare:

Due to a current staffing crisis impacting the developmental disability services system, ODHS Child Welfare procedure is being temporarily changed to reflect temporary changes in ODDS policy. Policy APD-PT-14-038 is being temporarily waived to allow greater flexibility and more timely decision-making when exploring placement options for children who are in the legal custody of Child Welfare.

When Child Welfare (CW) and the Community Developmental Disabilities Program (CDDP) are working together as a team to identify a placement option that best meets the child’s needs, the team may choose a DD-funded foster care placement (provided the prospective foster provider is not a relative) without first needing to rule out the option of a CW-funded foster care placement with DD-funded In-home supports.

However, if it is determined a CW-funded foster care placement with DD-funded In-home supports offers the best services and supports to the child, that option remains available. When exploring placement and funding options for a child in the legal custody of Child Welfare, the team should consider the following:

- Are there permanency planning issues which may be impacted by the decision?
  - For younger children in particular who have a concurrent plan of adoption or guardianship, be mindful that CW-funded foster care placements with DD-funded In-home supports can be maintained post guardianship and adoption, supporting continuity of care. Using a DD-funded foster care placement could complicate future ability of the child to achieve the concurrent plan. Consider if consultation with a CW Permanency Consultant could be helpful.

  Additional Note From ODHS CW: The higher payments associated with using DD-funded foster care placement could present a barrier for achieving the concurrent plan of guardianship or adoption if the plan of reunification cannot be achieved. When that barrier cannot be overcome, CW may need to search for an alternate permanent resource for the child should the funding be a barrier to achieving permanency.

- Are there Personal Support Workers (PSWs) readily available in the area?
  - When PSWs are not readily available in the foster family’s local community or when the prospective foster provider is reluctant to allow unfamiliar staff into the home during the pandemic, a DD-funded...
foster care placement may be most appropriate. If a DD-funded foster care placement is the chosen service, the prospective foster provider would be the individual responsible for meeting the child’s support needs.

- When a DD-funded foster care placement occurs in a CW-certified resource family (foster provider) home, it is important to ensure clarity of cross-division rules, supports and requirements.
  - Be mindful that the CW resource family may not be familiar with ODDS foster care requirements and expectations. The CDDP Services Coordinator for the child placed with the CW-certified resource family will need to have a conversation with the resource family and educate them about ODDS foster care rules, requirements, and expectations. The resource family will need to follow both the requirements and rules of CW and ODDS. Communication and collaboration between the services coordinator (SC), CW caseworker, CW certifier, and CW certified resource family is important to ensure all are aware of the requirements and available supports. A discussion of each team member’s unique role and a communication plan can be helpful when both CW and the CDDP are involved. If the most appropriate service setting for the child is placement with a relative, a DD-funded foster care placement is not an option. ODDS is prohibited from funding relative foster care, as it is a violation of statute. If a child is placed with a relative, DD-funded In-home supports may be considered.

End of Temporary Procedure

A child who is placed in foster care and has been diagnosed with an I/DD, or becomes I/DD eligible while in substitute care, may be eligible for services through the Office of Developmental Disability Services (ODDS). For these children in foster care, it is essential to collaborate with the Community Developmental Disability Program (CDDP) and/or ODDS, to determine how to best meet the child’s safety, well-being and permanency needs. Children with an I/DD should not automatically be transferred to an ODDS-paid placement.

Children who are I/DD eligible and meet the Level of Care, which is determined by the I/DD system, are eligible to receive supports from the I/DD system while in a Child Welfare-paid foster placement. This option supports continuing efforts to achieve legal permanency. The considerations for how to best meet the child’s need for safety, well-being, and legal permanency should take into account what is the least restrictive placement in which a child’s needs can be met. Whenever possible, the first placement consideration should be to maintain the child in a Child Welfare-paid placement. Because it becomes more difficult to achieve legal permanency after children are placed in an ODDS-paid foster home, it will generally be the expectation that caseworkers utilize Child Welfare-paid placements, instead of ODDS-paid placements. Prior to placement in an ODDS-paid foster home, caseworkers need to consider and fully explore the least restrictive placement that promotes safety, well-being, and legal permanency for that child with an I/DD.

Services to children who have an I/DD can be offered in a variety of ways. Typically for a child in the legal custody of Child Welfare, services will be offered in one of two ways:

I. K Plan “in-home” supports while in CW funded foster care.

II. ODDS subsidized foster care.

TIP
For children currently in the legal custody of Child Welfare and placed in foster care, K Plan services may be a resource to help caseworkers explore ways to help achieve reunification (for children who will maintain Medicaid), contact and placement with relatives, and achieve a higher level of permanency for children with APPLA case plans.

TIP

Regarding sibling placement, it may be in the best interest of a child who does not meet I/DD eligibility to be placed in an ODDS certified home, in an effort to place siblings together. Speak with your CDDP and supervisor for further consultation in these situations. Refer to chapter 5 section 2 of the procedure manual for more information regarding sibling placement.

What is the K Plan?

The K Plan became an option in July 2013 to offer more comprehensive services and increase “in-home” supports. The K Plan, also known as Community First Choice, allows the state to provide supports to an I/DD individual through the Oregon Medicaid State Plan in-home and community settings. Living in the following settings would be considered “in-home” for the purposes of Oregon K Plan:

- Biological parent,
- Child Welfare-paid foster care,
- Guardian, or
- Adoptive family.

In order to receive K Plan services, a child must be determined I/DD eligible, meet Level of Care criteria (most of the children served by the developmental disability service system meet this level of care), be Title-19 Medicaid eligible, receive an assessment for activities of daily living (ADLs) and other support needs, and have an Individual Support Plan (ISP) based on those identified needs. The ISP that is developed will allow access to support services in the child’s home and community and will set forth an amount of hours allotted for these services.

Procedure

In all cases where the child is in the legal custody of Child Welfare and receiving I/DD services, the Child Welfare worker and the CDDP worker must work together to determine the least restrictive placement that is in the best interest of the child. First determine if the child’s needs can be met using a Child Welfare-paid foster care placement with K Plan supports. After consultation between the Child Welfare worker, supervisor, and CDDP occurs, if it is agreed that the child needs a higher level of care, only then will consideration be made to move the child into an ODDS-paid placement.

In order to determine the least restrictive placement required to best meet the child’s needs, ODHS must consider which agency certifies the foster home and which agency pays for the placement.

Consider placements for a child with an I/DD who is in the legal custody of Child Welfare in the following order (progress to the next option only after ruling out the proceeding option):

- Child Welfare certified foster home; Child Welfare-paid placement, child receiving K Plan "in-home" services.
- ODDS certified foster home; Child Welfare-paid placement, child receiving K Plan "in-home" services.
- ODDS certified foster home; ODDS-paid foster care placement, no K Plan "in home" services.
D. ODDS residential placement

I. To complete placement of a child with an I/DD who is in the legal custody of Child Welfare placed in a Child Welfare certified home, Child Welfare-paid placement:
   A. Follow steps in Chapter 5, Section 2.

II. To complete placement of a child with an I/DD who is in the legal custody of Child Welfare placed in an ODDS certified, Child Welfare-paid placement:
   A. Consult with your supervisor regarding placement in ODDS-certified home.
   B. Contact the local CDDP to coordinate the identification of a foster parent able to meet the child’s particular special needs, and willing to accept the Child Welfare payment. Both Child Welfare and ODDS honor each other’s certification of a home.
   C. When a foster parent has been identified, initiate the request for approval from CDDP to place the child. This request is approved in writing on the Inter-Program Foster Home Placement Approval form (MSC 5031).
      1. When immediate placement is required, and the written document cannot be obtained prior to placement, verbal approval must be obtained from CDDP and documented in OR-Kids case notes, with the name, position and contact number of the person authorizing use of the home.
   D. When the child is placed in the home:
      1. Follow the procedures for placement in Chapter 5, Section 2.
      2. Ensure that the substitute caregiver receives a Placement Information Form, CE 0261, and is given information about the child’s special needs.
      3. Coordinate a visit with the foster parent and child as early as possible to ensure the needs of the child are being met in the home.
         ▪ The foster parent may not be familiar with Child Welfare system and policies. Work with the substitute caregiver and the local office certification staff to ensure information is shared.
   E. Work with the certification staff in the local office to coordinate the following actions:
      1. Within two working days of the substitute care placement of the child, obtain from the CDDP the following documentation:
         ▪ A signed copy of the Inter-Program Foster Home Placement Approval (MSC 5031).
         ▪ A copy of the foster parent’s Certificate of Approval or screen-print showing the dates of approval.
         ▪ A written and signed release of information from the foster parent authorizing release of any information related to certification of the home, including any prior health and safety concerns in the certification files.
   F. While the child remains in the legal custody of Child Welfare, the responsibility for the child’s case plan and the services and activities described in the case plan is retained by Child Welfare caseworker. ODDS will have the lead on managing developmental disability services and planning, which includes the service plan, daily care, supports and funding directly related to the child’s disability needs. Connect with the I/DD service coordinator to ensure there is no duplication of supports. For example, if Child Welfare has personal care services in place, ensure there is no overlap with activities of daily living supports through I/DD. Refer to Appendixes 5.6 and 5.7 for additional reference tools regarding the specific case management responsibilities between CW and ODDS.

III. To complete placement of a child with an I/DD in the legal custody of Child Welfare in an ODDS certified and ODDS-paid home, complete the following actions:

A. Consult with your supervisor regarding placement of the child in an ODDS-certified home.

B. Contact the local CDDP to coordinate the identification of a foster parent able to meet the child’s particular special needs. Both Child Welfare and ODDS honor each other’s certification of a home.

C. When a foster parent has been identified, coordinate with the CDDP and foster parent to place the child.
   1. Child Welfare worker provides the CDDP with a copy of the court order placing the child in the legal custody of Child Welfare, a copy of the child’s birth certificate and Social Security card. The Social Security card is not needed if the child is already receiving Supplemental Security Income (SSI).

D. When the child is placed in the home:
   1. Follow the procedures for placement in Chapter 5 Section 2.
   2. Ensure that the foster parent receives a Placement Information Form, CE 0261, and is given information on the child’s special needs.
   3. Coordinate a visit with the foster parent and child as early as possible to ensure the needs of the child are being met in the home.
      ■ The foster parent may not be familiar with Child Welfare system and policies. Work with the substitute caregiver and the local office certification staff to ensure information is shared.

E. Child Welfare case workers placing children with DD licensed providers must send an email to CW DD Placements (CWDD.Placements@ODHSoha.state.or.us) to request a DD provider be created (or updated) in OR-Kids. Include in the email:
   1. Child/youth name; OR-KIDS case number and person number;
   2. Date of placement;
   3. Provider’s full name (include both provider’s names if more than one);
   4. Provider’s full address; and
   5. Provider’s date of birth; Social Security number or any other identifying information you have (for both providers if more than one).

The assigned Central Office worker will send an email to the Child Welfare case worker to confirm the provider is ready for placement entry, so the child’s placement may be input into OR-Kids. If additional information is needed, that request will come from the CW DD Placements email box. Please make every effort to respond timely. See CW-AR-17-003 also.

F. While the child remains in the legal custody of Child Welfare, the responsibility for the child’s case plan and the services and activities described in the case plan is retained by Child Welfare caseworker. ODDS will have the lead on managing developmental disability services and planning, which includes the service plan, daily care, supports and funding directly related to the child’s disability needs. Coordination between Child Welfare and the I/DD caseworker is needed to ensure there are not duplicate supports in place. For example, if Child Welfare has personal care services in place, ensure there is no overlap with activities of daily living supports through I/DD. Refer to Appendixes 5.6 and 5.7 for additional reference tools regarding the specific case management responsibilities between CW and ODDS.

IV. To complete placement of an child with an I/DD in the legal custody of Child Welfare in an ODDS residential placement, consult with your Residential Resource Consultant.

Tip

Refer to the OR-Kids online Business Process Guide: Selecting Placement Services, for information on entering the placement in OR-Kids. (link: https://inside.ODHSoha.state.or.us/ODHS/or-kids.html)

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Consult with the caseworker regarding children with an I/DD to determine the least restrictive placement that is able to meet the child’s safety, well-being, and legal permanency needs. This consultation must occur prior to considering the use of an ODDS-paid foster home.

II. Consult with Child Welfare staff regarding the potential use of a Child Welfare certified foster home for a placement being sought by ODDS, to be paid by ODDS. Also consult with Child Welfare staff regarding the potential use of an ODDS certified home for a placement being sought by Child Welfare, to be paid by Child Welfare, as governed through the Inter-Program Placement Agreement. Help determine if the certified family has the skills, knowledge and supports to allow for child safety and well-being. Also consult regarding appropriate placement matching, given the needs of the individuals who would be residing in that same home. If appropriate, sign the Inter-Program Foster Home Placement Approval (MSC 5031) as Representative of Certifying Division or Representative of Placing Division, depending on the circumstance.

III. Consult with the caseworker on the ongoing case management of the child with an I/DD.

Section 15: Placement of a Youth in an Approved Supervised Independent Living Arrangement
Placement of a Youth in an Approved Supervised Independent Living Arrangement

An approved supervised independent living (SIL) arrangement is designed to help a young adult in ODHS custody become a self-sufficient adult. There are various levels of SIL placements or arrangements. Because there are a variety of SIL placement options for children and young adults, it is imperative ODHS caseworkers understand each option. Acceptance into these programs is a privilege, not an entitlement.

Each type of SIL placement is designed to work with the Independent Living Skill Building program to assist young adults in gaining and practicing self-sufficiency skills. There are several programs and unique eligibility requirements to help young adults with supervised independent living and monthly housing expenses:

I. Transitional Living Program
II. Transitional Living Program – Plus
III. Independent Living Housing Subsidy
IV. Chafee Housing Program

Each SIL placement or program option has specific eligibility requirements. The SIL placements and programs provide time-limited monetary support for a young adult to live independently. The SIL placements and programs supplement the youth’s housing costs while they continue education or employment. SIL placements may pay funds directly to a Transitional Living Program Provider on behalf of the youth, until the young adult is prepared to manage their own finances. The Independent Living Housing Subsidy and Chafee Housing Program will issue funds directly to the young adult.

The following chart identifies many of the differences between the various SIL placements and programs:

See the Independent Living Housing (ILHS) Subsidy Program instructions below for more information on when it may be appropriate for a child (age 16 or 17) to access the ILH Subsidy Program.

Young adult must leave their final foster care placement at age 18 or older. Trial reunification does not count as “foster care” for ILP skill training or Chafee Housing eligibility.
IV-E Eligibility

The transitional living programs in this section do not require a young adult to be IV-E eligible. However, if a young adult is currently Title IV-E eligible, they must meet at least one of the following productive activities in order to retain their Title IV-E status while accessing the transitional living programs:

I. Completing secondary education or a program leading to an equivalent credential; e.g., a young adult age 18 or older is finishing high school or taking classes in preparation for a general equivalency diploma exam;

II. Enrolled in an institution that provides post-secondary or vocational education; e.g., a young adult could be enrolled full-time or part-time in a university or college or enrolled in a vocational or trade school;

III. Participating in a program or activity designed to promote or remove barriers to employment; e.g., a young adult could be in Job Corps or attending classes on resume writing and interview skills, including Independent Living Program career preparation services;

IV. Employed for at least 80 hours per month; e.g., a young adult could be employed part time or full time, at one or more places of employment; or

V. Is incapable of doing any of the previously described educational or employment activities due to a medical condition. In this circumstance, the caseworker must provide regularly updated written or recorded information that addresses the medical condition and the young adult’s incapability in the young adult’s case plan.

Transitional Living Program (TLP)

Purpose: Transitional Living Program placements are for young adults age 18 or until their 23rd birthday. Ideally, a young adult will have experienced a Transitional Foster Home placement prior to moving on to a TLP or has been enrolled with an ILP Provider for at least three (3) months. The TLP placement option requires a young adult to possess basic skills related to time management, household maintenance, health care, transportation, and money management. Young adults at this level of SIL placements are expected to manage their own funds, pay for the majority of their monthly living expenses and be able to maintain appropriately in the community, as the level of supervision decreases. The TLP will have a staff person on site daily and have a means for young adults to contact a TLP staff 24/7. A young adult must be able to maintain safe and appropriate activities with limited supervision.

I. Eligibility: The following young adults are eligible and appropriate for a Transitional Living Program:

A. Age 18 – 22;

B. In ODHS care and custody;

C. Actively engaged in ILP services; or similar skills training program;

D. Have completed a Comprehensive Transition Plan that indicates a need for transitional housing services;

E. Willingness to work with TLP resident assistant to develop a plan for appropriate productive hours (school, employment, volunteerism, or a combination) and work to achieve the goals outlined in such a plan; and
F. Will actively participate in TLP activities, housing meetings, ILP services.

Note: If the young adult is also planning to access the Independent Living Housing (ILH) Subsidy Program, the productive time must equal 36 hours per week. More details can be found in the ILH Subsidy section.

II. Youth/young adult preparation: Begin discussing housing options with a youth during the Benchmark Review (age 17.5) of their Comprehensive Transition Plan (CTP – detailed procedures are located in Chapter 5, Section 29) or at least 3 months prior to accessing a TLP placement. Inform the young adult of the supports provided in a TLP placement and the expectations of the young adult. This service is not intended to be an emergency move or placement. To properly plan and facilitate a smooth transition, the case worker must reassess the young adult’s abilities, with the young adult, in the following areas:

A. The young adult’s CTP and their goals for the future,
B. School and employment arrangements,
C. Capacity for self-care and demonstrated life skills,
D. Budgeting skills and demonstrated money management abilities,
E. Evidence of good decision-making skills,
F. Evidence of supportive adults in the young adult’s life, and
G. Ability to use and access transportation resources.
H. Young adult’s readiness to explain supports needed and future goals to the TLP referral screener.

III. Referral: Contact the State Chafee IL/ETV Program Coordinator to determine availability in the area in which the youth resides. Each TLP requires a referral packet be completed and submitted. The packet will be provided once the appropriate TLP is identified, along with the TLP’s contact information.

Note: This is a new program. Therefore, program locations and units are extremely limited.

IV. Screening process: Most TLPs will have their own screening process. Consult with the state Chafee IL/ETV program coordinator for instructions on how to contact a TLP in the area in which the young adult resides or will be residing.

V. Service codes: Once the young adult has been accepted to the TLP, notify the ILP Desk at Central Office (at ILP.Central@dhdsoha.state.or.us). Include in your subject line: SIL-TLP Placement. The Central Office ILP staff will open the appropriate services and work with the ODHS caseworker each month to validate services. The ILP Desk will validate invoices and approve payments to the TLP.

Terminating TLP Placements

Advise the ILP desk of all TLP terminations (planned or unplanned).

I. The TLP placement will be terminated under the following circumstances:

A. The young adult completed the TLP as planned.
B. The young adult achieved independence and self-sufficiency to the extent there is no longer a need for TLP placement services.
C. The young adult made a voluntary decision to no longer participate in the TLP placement.
D. The young adult was involuntarily terminated from the program for failing to comply with program requirements (each TLP will have a process in place for such terminations – ensure the young adult understands the TLP’s rules and requirements).
E. The young adult exceeded maximum benefits for the Transitional Living Program (completed the 18th month in the program).
F. The young adult reached their 21st birthday.
G. ODHS has terminated wardship.

The caseworker must inform the following people if terminating a young adult from the TLP Placement:
A. The young adult (verbally and in writing),
B. The TLP provider,
C. The ILP provider, and
D. The ILP desk at ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us.
E. Failure to notify these parties may result in an overpayment.

Transitional Living Program – PLUS

Purpose: Transitional Living Program – Plus placements are for young adults age 18 or older. TLP – PLUS is a program designed to assist young adults who are not prepared for the regular TLP programming and need extra supports to manage elevated needs. Some programing is available for young adults who have acute mental health needs and/or other particular needs for which additional supports are necessary. Finances will be paid directly to the contracted provider, and budgetary guidance will be available for the young adult to participate in the budget process.

I. Eligibility: Young adult will need extra supports to obtain basic TLP programing. Young adult must be BRS eligible and/or accessed a non-BRS or BRS program in the last 13 months.

II. Youth/young adult preparation: Begin discussing housing options with a youth during the Benchmark Review (age 17.5) of their Comprehensive Transition Plan (CTP). Inform young adult of the supports provided in a TLP Plus placement and the expectations of the young adult.

III. Referrals: Send referrals directly to the Residential Resource Consultant assigned to the caseworker’s district to ensure the young adult meets criteria for programing.

IV. Screening process: Young adult will need to be screened by the Residential Resources consultants for eligibility based on typical BRS and non-BRS criteria associated with Treatment Service programming. To start the screening process, the BRS packet (1055) is sent to the Residential Resource consultant for the district.

V. Service codes: Caseworker will coordinate with Treatment Services and the Residential Resource consultants to determine the appropriate placement service.

Terminating/transitioning to next level SIL

Once it is determined a young adult will be terminated from the TLP Plus program, a transition period may be allowed on a case-by-case basis, as coordinated through the Residential Resource consultant.

I. The following are reasons the TLP Plus may be terminated or why a young adult may transition out of the program:

A. The young adult completed the TLP Plus program as planned.
B. The young adult achieved independence and self-sufficiency to the extent there is no longer a need for TLP Plus supports and services.
C. The young adult made a voluntary decision to no longer participate in the TLP Plus placement.
D. The young adult was involuntarily terminated from the program for failing to comply with program requirements (each TLP Plus will have a process in place for such terminations – ensure the young adult understands the TLP Plus’ rules and requirements).
E. The young adult reached their 21st birthday.
F. ODHS has terminated wardship.

II. Next Level: Is the young adult ready to move to a TLP placement, if available in his/her area? Things to consider and reassess when determining the next placement level for the young adult:

A. The young adult’s Comprehensive Transition Plan (CTP) and their goals for the future,
B. School and employment arrangements,
C. Capacity for self-care and demonstrated life skills,
D. Budgeting skills and demonstrated money management abilities,
E. Evidence of good decision-making skills,
F. Evidence of supportive adults in the young adult’s life,
G. Ability to use and access transportation resources, and
H. Young adult’s readiness to explain supports needed and future goals to the TLP referral screener.

Independent Living Housing Subsidy Program

I. Purpose: The Independent Living Housing Subsidy Program is a level of SIL placements with the least supervision and the highest expectations for productive hours. The Subsidy Program supplements the young adult’s living expenses while the young person/adult continues their education, employment, or volunteerism. For full details regarding the ILH Subsidy process and preparation necessary, see Chapter 5, Section 29, Youth Transitions.

II. Eligibility: The following young adults are eligible and appropriate for the Independent Living Housing Subsidy Program:

A. Age 18 – 22,
B. In ODHS care and custody,
C. Actively engaged in ILP services for at least four (4) to six (6) months,
D. Has completed a Comprehensive Transition Plan that indicates a need for transitional housing services,
E. Willing to work with an ILP Provider to develop a plan for appropriate productive hours and work to achieve the goals outlined in such plan, or

F. Will actively participate in TLP activities, housing meetings, ILP services, and craft an individualized plan to gain 36 hours of productive activities.

Note: Participation in the ILH Subsidy Program for a 16- or 17-year-old foster youth is a rare occurrence, happens in case-specific situations, and requires that the following must be completed:

A. Youth has received approval from the court to participate,

B. Youth has been enrolled with an ILP provider for at least six months,

C. Youth has completed the ILP Financial Literacy training,

D. Youth has a CTP indicating the need for ILH Subsidy placement,

E. The Child Welfare caseworker must submit form CE88, Policy Exception Request Form, to the state Chafee IL/ETV Program Coordinator for approval prior to arranging a screening. The exception must be approved by the Child Welfare program manager or designee.

1. The Exception to Policy Request must outline why the child is appropriate for the ILH Subsidy program.

2. The Exception to Policy Request must include the child’s planned productive activities.

III. Youth/young adult preparation: Begin discussing housing options with a youth during the Benchmark Review (age 17.5) of their Comprehensive Transition Plan (CTP), or earlier if plans are to access ILH Subsidy at a younger age. Inform the youth of the decreased level of supervision provided during the ILH Subsidy placement and the expectations of the youth. This service is not intended to be an emergency move or placement. To properly plan and facilitate a smooth transition, this is typically a four- to six-month process and involves reassessment of the young adult’s abilities in these areas:

A. The young adult’s CTP and their goals for the future,

B. School and employment arrangements,

C. Capacity for self-care and demonstrated life skills,

D. Budgeting skills and demonstrated money management abilities,

E. Evidence of good decision-making skills,

F. Evidence of supportive adults in the young adult’s life, and

G. Ability to use and access transportation resources.

IV. Screening process: The branch must establish a housing screening committee to determine the young adult’s appropriateness and preparedness to access the ILHS or Chafee Housing programs. At a minimum, the committee must consist of:

A. The caseworker,

B. An ILP service provider, and

C. May include other significant adults in the young adult’s life as requested by the young adult.

Each office has a process for establishing a screening committee. Check with your supervisor if you need to schedule a meeting.

   A. Set a date and time for the young adult's screening:

      1. It should be set far enough in the future to allow the young adult time to prepare for the screening process.

   B. Inform the young adult of the date and time of the meeting:

      1. Ensure the young adult will be able to attend the screening.

   V. Service codes: Once the young adult has been approved by the local Subsidy Screening Committee, submit all appropriate paperwork to the ILP Desk at Central Office (at ILPCentral@ODHSoha.state.or.us). List your subject line as the following with your youth's initials: Subsidy Placement-initials. The Central Office ILP staff will advise the branch of the appropriate services to open and work with the ODHS caseworker each month to validate budgets and issue subsidy payments.

Terminating ILH Subsidy Placements

Advise the ILP desk of all subsidy terminations (planned or unplanned).

I. The subsidy placement will be terminated under the following circumstances:

   A. The young adult completed the subsidy as planned.

   B. The young adult achieved independence and self-sufficiency to the extent there is no longer a need for subsidy placement services.

   C. The young adult made a voluntary decision to no longer participate in the subsidy placement.

   D. The young adult was involuntarily terminated from the program for failing to comply with program requirements (as outlined on form CE 0076, Housing Services Responsibility Agreement).

   E. The young adult reached their 21st birthday.

   F. ODHS has terminated wardship.

   G. The young adult exceeded maximum benefits for the subsidy program (completed the 30th month in the program).

II. The caseworker must inform the following people if terminating a young adult from the ILH Subsidy placement:

   A. The young adult (verbally and in writing),

   B. The ILP provider, and

   C. The ILP desk at ILPCentral@ODHSoha.state.or.us.

   D. Failure to notify these parties may result in an overpayment.

Chafee Housing Program

The Chafee Housing Program (Chafee) is not a placement service. A young adult must be terminated from ODHS custody at age 18 or older in order be eligible for Chafee housing. Chafee is designed to work in conjunction with the Independent Living Program to help a young person become a self-sufficient adult. The Chafee housing program supplements the young adult's living expenses while he or she continues education or employment. Acceptance into this program is a privilege, not an entitlement. For full procedures regarding the Chafee housing program and to make arrangements for securing approval for Chafee, see Chapter 5, Section 29, Youth Transitions.

Section 17: Considerations regarding a multi-ethnic placement
Considerations regarding a multi-ethnic placement

Federal law prohibits using race, color, national origin or ethnicity to:

I. Delay or deny a child’s placement, or

II. Deny applicants the opportunity to become foster parents or to adopt a child.

The below prohibit presumption that placement in a foster or adoptive family of the same race or cultural heritage as the child is in the child’s best interest:

I. Multi-ethnic Placement Act (MEPA) of 1994, 42 U.S.C. §1996b, as amended by the Inter-ethnic Adoption Provisions (IEAP) of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996, Section 1808, and

II. Oregon Administrative Rules.

Consider the questions and answers below as they relate to your responsibility in making placement decisions.

I. Can I consider the race and cultural heritage of a child in making placement decisions?

A. Race and cultural heritage can be considered conditionally:
   1. If an Indian child is involved, parameters of the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) apply.

B. Except for the above, MEPA-IEAP prohibits delay or denial based on race or ethnicity of:
   1. A child’s placement, or
   2. A foster or adoptive parent’s application.

II. Can I consider the birth family’s desire to have their child placed with a family of a specific race or ethnicity?

A. No. A placement cannot be delayed, denied or prohibited to locate a family of a specific race or ethnicity.

III. Are there circumstances in which I can consider race or ethnicity in making placement decisions?

A. Any consideration of race or ethnicity must be in the context of an individualized placement decision when a specific child has a special need. This follows federal law.

IV. What special needs of a child might require a placement decision based on race or ethnicity?

A. If race or ethnicity appears to be an issue for the child, first determine whether a child’s special need can be met without a race or ethnicity-based placement decision. For example, a child who has been taunted about their race needs a caretaker sensitive and able to help him or her cope with the effects of the taunting. However, they do not necessarily need a placement with a family of any certain race or ethnicity. Similarly, a child who speaks only Spanish may need a Spanish-speaking caretaker. However, that does not require a race- or ethnicity-based placement. Even where there is a compelling need to consider race or ethnicity, a placement decision must consider all a child’s needs. A decision should not be made solely on any one factor.
B. Younger children will be less likely to have a special need for a race- or ethnicity-based placement decision. One situation that might warrant considering race or ethnicity as a factor in the placement process is when an older child voices a strong opinion about the race or ethnicity of the family with whom they will be placed. Even in that circumstance, discuss any appropriate families who don’t meet the child’s stated racial or ethnic preference with them, in an effort to find the best possible placement. If a child has been severely abused or neglected and associates the race or ethnicity of the caretaker with the abuse, that might warrant a placement decision based on the special needs of the child.

Section 18: Voluntary custody agreements
Voluntary custody agreements

In rare circumstances a family can voluntarily give legal custody of their child to ODHS when the parent is immediately and temporarily unable to fulfill his or her parental responsibilities.

Do not enter into a Voluntary Custody Agreement when the parent was the perpetrator of a founded disposition of child abuse or neglect within the past 12 months, or when the parent is unwilling to be a permanent resource for the child.

The following criteria must exist to enter into a voluntary custody agreement:

I. The child cannot remain at home due to a temporary crisis in the family and cannot safely stay with a member of the extended family or another responsible adult who is well known to the child.

II. The parent temporarily is or will be unable to fulfill parental responsibilities due to a diagnosed medical or mental health condition.

III. The child needs to be placed outside the home due to problems in the family that could compromise the safety of a family member, and a placement of limited duration in conjunction with intensive services is likely to reunite the family and reduce safety concerns.

Refer to Chapter 7, Family Support Services, for procedures on determining a family’s needs, developing a Family Support Services Case Plan, and entering into a Voluntary Custody Agreement.
Chapter 5

Section 19: Voluntary placement agreements
Voluntary placement agreements

Occasionally, a family requests voluntary placement of a child. This occurs only when a child’s physical or mental health care needs are so extensive a family is unable to adequately meet those needs. In these instances, a family maintains the legal custody of the child, while the Department takes responsibility for the child’s placement and care. The family enters into a Voluntary Placement Agreement with the department. The department takes responsibility for the child’s placement, care and safety while in a substitute care placement.

Refer to Chapter 7, Family Support Services, for procedures on determining a family’s needs, developing a Family Support Services Case Plan, and entering into a voluntary placement agreement.
Chapter 5

Section 20: Change of placement
Change of placement

I. Federal law and Oregon policy emphasize selecting the least restrictive placement that can meet a child’s needs. While making every effort to find an appropriate placement at the time of the child’s initial removal from the home, there will be occasions when the substitute care placement selection is not appropriate, or immediate placement during an emergency did not allow for adequate time to assess a child’s relatives or other persons known to the child who can be certified and can provide substitute care. Even when this occurs, continue the assessment process to certify the family as soon as possible.

II. Sometimes relatives, as they become known to the caseworker, become available as a placement resource.

III. Sometimes the initial placement is done in an emergency, and the caregiver does not provide ongoing substitute care.

IV. Sometimes the initial placement, though intended as a long-term resource, is not appropriate for the child.

V. Sometimes a child’s needs and services are identified that cannot be met in the current placement, or other circumstances arise that require a change of placement.

VI. Sometimes the results of the CANS screening identify a child’s needs that cannot be met in the current placement.

Procedure

I. The caseworker is responsible for supporting a child’s substitute care placement and making every effort to maintain the child in his or her current substitute care placement when that placement is in the child’s best interests and can meet the child’s identified needs.

II. Caseworker activities that support a placement include:

   A. Sharing information with and obtaining information from the substitute caregiver regarding the care of the child. Share information with the substitute caregiver throughout the child’s substitute placement at each 30-day contact. Good, ongoing communication supports the substitute caregiver’s expertise and role as a safety service provider, as well as providing the caseworker with information on what the child needs to maintain the child in the current placement.

   B. Upon receiving the results of the CANS screening, during the first contact with the substitute caregiver, discuss the needs and strengths of the child, and develop a supervision plan when the child needs enhanced supervision. Refer to Chapter 5, Section 6, regarding developing supervision plans based on the results of a CANS screening.

   C. When a substitute caregiver is having difficulty with caregiving responsibilities, consider a Placement Support Plan. Refer to Chapter 5, Section 2 for procedures on implementing a Placement Support Plan.

   D. Caseworker participation in treatment planning is required when a child enters a residential treatment service.

   E. Caseworker participation with the child is required through regular contact, active listening, problem-solving and being responsive to a child’s needs.

III. Sometimes a caseworker can maintain a placement through small actions. For example, helping a child... transition into substitute care with frequent phone calls from the caseworker, providing extra visits or other contact with parents or other family members, making an extra effort to secure a child’s favorite toy, a visit with the child’s teacher, or other activity may help build trust and/or help a child during a period of adjustment.

IV. There will be those times, however, when the combined attempts by the caseworker and the substitute caregiver do not result in a successful substitute care placement. In those circumstances, seek and secure another placement for the child. Unless a child’s safety is compromised, the caseworker should provide the current substitute caregiver with a 10-day notice of the intent to move the child. Certified foster homes also should provide the caseworker with 10-day notice when requesting removal of a child from their home, whenever this is possible.

V. Except in emergency placement into another substitute care placement, the caseworker first conducts an assessment of the strengths and needs of the child through a review of the CANS results and other assessments or evaluations and matches those strengths and needs with the skills and abilities of the prospective substitute caregiver. A thorough assessment will guide the caseworker in determining appropriate substitute care placement options. In an emergency, use the information available at the time to make as thorough an assessment as possible.

VI. Staff the case with the supervisor for consultation on appropriate placement resources.

VII. Pursue a subsequent placement after determining the appropriate placement options, and follow the placement procedure options of this manual.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Consult with the caseworker on seeking and securing an appropriate substitute care placement.

II. Review with the caseworker what is known regarding the child’s strengths and needs.

III. Work with the substitute caregiver as appropriate.

IV. Consult with Salem Foster Care Program or Residential Treatment Program staff on placement options when needed.
Chapter 5

Section 21: Medical Care Services
Medical Care Services

Once a child is in the legal custody of ODHS, the caseworker has the responsibility to ensure that appropriate medical, dental and mental health services are provided for the child.

Each child’s medical care must include:

I. Regular preventive care appropriate to the child’s age and condition, including:
   A. Immunizations and tuberculin (TB) tests (refer to Appendixes 5.11a and 5.11b for guidance on childhood immunizations);
   B. Timely examinations;
   C. Timely treatment of non-emergency injuries and illnesses;
   D. Ongoing care for serious or chronic conditions; and
   E. Emergency treatment whenever necessary.

Obtain Medical Insurance Coverage

Procedure

I. Ensure that each child in substitute care has health care coverage.

II. Contact the branch medical assistance specialist for assistance in having a medical card issued at the time the child is placed in substitute care.

For a child in paid substitute care, the Federal Revenue Specialist completes the CF 190 (Individual Eligibility Determination for Title XIX Medical Coverage). Within the Child Welfare SACWIS system, the Federal Revenue Specialist completes this work and signs the form to assign benefits.

When a child enters substitute care with private health insurance coverage, the caseworker must complete and submit the AFS 415-H (Medical Resource Report Form). A child placed by the department with a Voluntary Placement Agreement may continue to receive medical insurance coverage through the parents’ medical insurance. Refer to Chapter 7, Family Support Services, for details on managing a Family Support Services case plan involving a Voluntary Placement Agreement.

When a child requires medical care prior to receiving the wallet sized standard ODHS Medical Care Identification (Medical ID), the Temporary Medical Care Identification (OAR 410-120-1104) may be printed by the Medical Assistance Specialist or the Federal Revenue Specialist. Circumstances where it is appropriate to issue a Temporary ID:

I. The Child’s medical eligibility and placement information has not been entered into the system (this circumstance may occur when the child is initially placed);

II. The child has moved to a new substitute care placement, and the Medical ID was not provided by the previous caregiver; or

III. The Medical ID has been lost.
IV. The Temporary ID is available on the Federal Compliance WIKI, Medical Assistance Specialist’s page.

When a child is in the department’s legal custody but in the parents’ home, monitor the child’s health care needs. However, unless the child’s health care was part of the identified safety threat or unattended health care needs impact child safety, other procedural requirements for monitoring a child’s health care services do not apply.

Obtain an Initial Medical Exam

Procedure

The caseworker must ensure that every child in the department’s legal custody must be referred for a medical exam within the first 30 days of placement in substitute care. Request that the substitute caregiver schedule a medical exam as soon as feasible. The Child Welfare case plan also should address the level of involvement of the child’s parents in a child’s medical care.

When the court identifies a child in need of medical care or other special treatment by reason of physical or mental condition, the caseworker must develop a written plan for the child’s care and treatment and submit the plan to the court within 14 days from the date of custody (ORS 419b.346). The written plan must include:

I. Identifying information including the child’s name, date of birth and the identity of the child’s parents;

II. A brief summary of Child Welfare’s involvement with the child and a statement of the child’s physical or mental health condition;

III. The plan, including treatment goal(s) for the child and timelines to meet those goals; and

IV. The planned services for meeting the child’s placement and treatment needs.

The court may request regular progress reports once the plan is implemented, and the caseworker must report annually to the court about the child’s progress. If a plan is revised, the caseworker must prepare a report to the court of the revision of the plan and the reasons for the revision.

Immunizations and Vaccinations

All children in the care and custody of Child Welfare will have the opportunity to receive their immunizations and vaccinations within 90 days of coming into care. Immunizations and vaccines should be in accordance with the CDC immunization schedule and healthcare providers recommendations. The caseworker should review vaccination information provided in OR-Kids by the ALERT Immunization Information System (ALERT IIS) within 30 days of the child entering the care and custody of Child Welfare to determine the immunization and vaccination history and needs of the child.

Prior to a child receiving an immunization or vaccination, Child Welfare must engage and have meaningful consultation with the parent(s), Indian custodian(s) if any and the tribe(s) if applicable to determine if there is agreement to the child receiving vaccinations and immunizations.

If parental consent is not granted for a child receiving a vaccination or immunization, then there should be a meeting to discuss what those objections are and to see if they can be addressed. The meeting could include: the child’s parent(s), attorney, tribe member, the child’s CASA, the caseworker, and other individuals identified by the parent for support. A summary of the meeting should be documented in a case note and placed in the OR-Kids file cabinet.

If one or both parents raise concerns about their child receiving a vaccination or immunization, best practice for children on reunification plans is to provide the parent(s) with the opportunity to attend medical appointments or to be encouraged to talk with the child’s medical provider about any healthcare concerns related to the proposed vaccination or immunization.

If parent(s) do not give consent for vaccination or immunization of the child, then, upon the child’s placement in the care of Child Welfare and prior to the first medical appointment, the caseworker will ensure that the child’s medical provider and certified resource parent are instructed that the vaccination or immunization may not be given at that time unless:

I. The child is age 15 and older and consents to their own immunizations and vaccinations.

II. Child Welfare has been granted custody and guardianship of the child and the child has a chronic medical condition that places the child at high risk for poor health outcomes or life-threatening illness, if unvaccinated.

A staffing should be held with the caseworker, the Child Welfare Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or designee, and the assigned AAG for the branch to determine, in consultation with the child’s healthcare providers, to determine whether Child Welfare will authorize the immunization(s) and vaccination(s) that are recommended for the health and safety of the child.

If the decision is made to proceed with the immunization(s) or vaccination(s), the caseworker must inform the parents, Indian custodian(s) (if any), tribe(s) (if applicable) and other parties to the juvenile dependency case within a reasonable time of scheduling the immunization(s) or vaccination(s) in order to allow time for consultation with their legal counsel if an objection remains.

Throughout the ongoing case, the caseworker should continue to consult with the child’s parents, Indian custodian (if any) and tribe(s) (if applicable) and must continue to keep the child’s healthcare provider and certified resource parent informed as to whether the parent(s) objects to specific or all vaccinations and immunizations.

If parental consent is not granted for one or more immunizations or vaccinations that are required for the child to attend school or daycare, the caseworker will obtain the exemption certificate from the parent to have on file or ensure it is on file at the child’s school. If an exemption certificate is not available, the caseworker will:

I. Arrange for the parent to meet with the child’s healthcare provider to receive a vaccine education certificate and assist them in completing the Certificate of Immunization Status form within 30 days of the child coming into care.

II. Arrange for the parent to view the OHA Vaccine Education video to obtain the vaccine education certificate and assist them in completing the Certificate of Immunization Status form that are required by the school district or daycare provider within 30 days of the child coming into care. The Vaccine Education video (available in English, Spanish and Russian) and forms are available on the OHA Non-medical Exemption website.

III. If the child will be excluded from school or daycare because of vaccination or immunization status, the caseworker will consult with the Child Welfare Education Coordinator and Health and Wellness Program Manager for further direction.

If the child’s parent(s) or Indian custodian(s) are unavailable for consultation regarding the child’s need for one or more immunizations and vaccinations within 90 days of a child coming into care, and the child has tribal affiliation, the caseworker should consult with the tribe(s) to determine who will provide consent for vaccinations and immunizations. If the child has no known tribal affiliation, the caseworker will advise the resource parent to follow the guidance of the child’s healthcare provider for immunizations and vaccinations.

NOTE: This procedure, is subject to change as new CDC, FDA, Public Health, Oregon Health Authority and Oregon Department of Education guidance becomes available.

Obtain Health Records

The caseworker collects and maintains a child or young adult’s medical history in the file cabinet in OR-Kids and in the person management page when applicable. The medical history includes:

- Birth certificate;
- Location or copies of all known medical records;
- Date and records of the most recent physical exam;
- Date(s) and records of the most recent dental, vision and hearing screenings;
- Name, address and phone number of current medical, dental and/or mental health providers;
- Immunization and vaccination records;
- Any serious illnesses or accidents since birth, including any caused by abuse;
- Any congenital conditions or hereditary factors, including those that may need treatment or correction;
- Current medical needs;
- Allergies or other chronic illnesses;
- Current dietary or nutritional needs;
- Current medications and copies of the child or young adult’s medication logs;
- Problems or conditions that may arise later due to the child or young adult’s genetic or health history; and
- Current medical and mental health diagnoses (if any), prognosis and treatment recommendations.

The caseworker will review the child or young adult’s current health conditions, medications, health care providers, and any other special medical or dietary needs (e.g., allergies, diabetes, special formula) during the monthly contact with the substitute caregiver.

Ensure the substitute caregiver records all medications on the Foster Home Individual Child Medication Log (CF 1083) or other medication records kept by a licensed child caring agency.

Each month review and file a copy of the Foster Home Individual Child Medication Log in the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids. Questions regarding medications are directed to the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or designee. For more information on psychotropic medications and notifications refer to the Psychotropic Medications section of the Procedure Manual.

Compare the child or young adult’s current health information with standard height and weight growth charts in Appendix 5.12. Bring significant variations to the standardized norms on the growth charts to the attention of the supervisor. Consult with Health and Wellness Services if there are any questions or concerns in regards to the child or young adult’s current growth or weight.

Review the child or young adult’s medical information and services when the child specific case plan (permanency plan in OR-Kids) is being developed whenever a child or young adult is in substitute care. Medical services are incorporated into either of these case plans.

Document the child or young adult’s medical care and services in the child specific case plan. Review and update this information as needed, but at least every six months.

Copies of medical reports are filed in the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

Consent for Health Care

Below is a list of who can consent for what regarding a child or young adult in the custody of ODHS Child Welfare. This list is by order of authority and those in higher authority groups can consent for anything in the lists prior to their level. The caseworker should encourage conversations with the parent or guardian when it is in the best interest of the child or young adult. For additional information about a specific topic please refer to that section.

When a child or young adult is placed in substitute care through a Voluntary Placement Agreement, their parents must be consulted prior to obtaining ordinary medical care unless the agreement delegates specific authority to the Department or the child is of the age of consent, or a young adult.

Any child or young adult:

- May access family planning/sexual and reproductive health information and services as well as testing and treatment for sexually transmitted infections (STIs) including HIV, without parental consent.

A child 14 years or older:

- Outpatient diagnosis or treatment of a mental or emotional disorder.
- Outpatient diagnosis or treatment of a chemical dependency, excluding methadone maintenance, by a
A child 15 years or older:

- Hospital care;
- Medical and surgical diagnosis, or treatment without the consent of the parent or guardian. ORS 109.640; and
- Termination of a pregnancy.

A Young adult, age 18 and over:

- Medication management

Resource Family:

- Routine medical care,
- Vaccinations,
- Immunization,
- Routine examinations, and
- Lab tests.

Caseworker:

- Authorize a child, age 15 and older, to self-administer medications.

Branch Program Manager:

- Use of alternative and naturopathic treatments, in consultation with the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or Nurse Consultant. May require approval by the Child Welfare Director or their designee.
- Transgender Medical Services fully reversible interventions, in consultation with the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or Nurse Consultant.
- Transgender Medical Services partially reversible interventions, in consultation with the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or Nurse Consultant.
- Surgery and/or anesthesia, unless the child is 15 years of age or older.

District Manager:

- Surgery and/or anesthesia, unless the child is 15 years of age or older.

Health and Wellness Program Manager:

- Use of new psychotropic medication (may also be approved by Nurse Consultant).
• Medical or surgical procedure to which the child or young adult’s parents are opposed (in consult with the DHS Deputy Director for Child Welfare, as needed).

• Termination of a pregnancy for a child under the age of 15 (in consult with the DHS Deputy Director for Child Welfare, as needed).

• Transgender Medical Services non-reversible gender affirmation surgery, in consultation with the Child Welfare Director.

Child Welfare Deputy Director:

• Use of cannabis-based treatments.

Child Welfare Director:

• Alternative and Naturopathic Treatments may require additional approval by the Child Welfare Director or their designee.

• Use of cannabis-based treatments.

Consent for Routine Health Care

Procedure

A substitute caregiver can consent to routine medical care including vaccinations, immunization, routine examinations and lab tests, for a child or young adult in their care. Caseworker will discuss routine medical care at each monthly face to face visit and document updated information in a case note in OR-Kids and on the person management page, as applicable.

A child or young adult age 15 years or older can consent to hospital care, medical and surgical diagnosis, or treatment without the consent of the parent or guardian. The caseworker should encourage conversations with the parent or guardian when it is in the best interest of the child or young adult. Documentation of this conversation should be included in a case note.

A child or young adult age 14 years or older can consent to outpatient diagnosis or treatment of a mental or emotional disorder or chemical dependency, excluding methadone maintenance, by a physician. The caseworker should encourage conversations with the parent or guardian when it is in the best interest of the child or young adult. Documentation of this conversation should be included in a case note.

When a child is placed in substitute care through a Voluntary Placement Agreement, their parents must be consulted prior to obtaining ordinary medical care unless the agreement delegates specific authority to the department or the child is of the age of consent, or a young adult.

Resource:

ORS 418.325(4)

ORS 109.675
ORS 109.640

Serious or Chronic Medical Needs

Procedure

The caseworker is responsible for ensuring the chronic or serious medical care needs of the child or young adult are addressed.

The caseworker should consult with the healthcare provider to understand the child’s health condition and medical needs and ensure that a personal care referral is done if indicated. Submit a Personal Care referral by emailing to PERSONAL.CARE@dhsoha.state.or.us.

If there are known significant medical needs prior to placement in substitute care, consult with the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or the Nurse Consultant to ensure the placement is able to meet the needs of the child or young adult.

Refer to Chapter 5, Section 5 for more information on Personal Care Services.

Medically Fragile Children

Some children or young adults may require professional nursing care in the home and should be evaluated for eligibility by Children’s Intensive In-Home Services (CIIS).

After consultation with the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or the Nurse Consultant, make a referral by retrieving the referral form from https://www.oregon.gov/DHS/SENIORS-DISABILITIES/DD/Pages/CIIS-Eligibility-Referral.aspx, please ONLY use the forms from the website since they are the most up to date forms, and email it to CIIS.Refferrals@dhsoha.state.or.us. CIIS may provide payment for in-home professional nursing services.

Upload medical information including healthcare provider consultation notes in the medical section of the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

Consent for Serious or Chronic Medical Needs

Procedure

The resource parent can consent to all routine medical care including vaccinations, immunizations, routine examinations and lab tests.

The District Manager or Branch Program Manager can provide consent and authorize major medical and surgical procedures that are not extraordinary or controversial, including anesthesia. Written consent is obtained on the CF 242 Consent for Medical/ Surgical Care and Treatment or the facilities consent form.

Consent for any procedure to address a serious medical need is a critical decision. Whenever possible and appropriate, the child or young adult’s parents should be involved in the decision.

When a child is placed with a Voluntary Placement Agreement, the child or young adult’s parents must be consulted and authorize surgery prior to surgery, unless Child Welfare has been given authorization to consent for healthcare as Emergency Medical Care and Consent

Procedure

The caseworker should inform the substitute caregiver that in the event of an emergency, the substitute caregiver should:

- Call 911;
- Accompany the child or young adult whenever possible in the ambulance; or
- Meet the child or young adult in the emergency room; and
- Call the caseworker or caseworker’s supervisor as soon as possible to provide them with the nature of the medical emergency. When a caseworker or caseworker’s supervisor is not available, the substitute caregiver must call the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline at (855) 503-SAFE (7233) to inform the department of the situation.

The caseworker will confirm with the substitute caregiver how communication will be maintained (e.g., cell phone, calls from hospital staff, caseworker visits to the hospital) during the emergency. The caseworker will communicate with the substitute caregiver and the hospital to receive updates and to obtain consent for treatment that would require surgery and/or anesthesia.

After the emergency, the caseworker will document the circumstances of the medical emergency. Request and file copies of all medical reports in the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids, and record related information in case notes.

The caseworker will notify the child or young adult’s parent(s) or guardian(s), the child or young adult’s attorney, the CASA and other parties to the case of the circumstances of the medical emergency as soon as reasonably possible after the medical emergency if parties to the case have not already been notified.

Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or Nurse Consultant is available for consultation.

Consent for Emergency Medical Care

Procedure

If the emergency medical care requires surgery and/or anesthesia, the District Manager, or designee may consent to those services. Health and Wellness Services Program Manager can also authorize consent and is available for consultation. Consent can also be authorized by the court. Use the medical facility or healthcare provider consent form.

- Unless the child or young adult is in the legal custody of Child Welfare, the caseworker or other Child Welfare staff should make reasonable efforts to consult with the child or young adult’s parents about the proposed actions and consider the parents’ preference concerning the action prior to consent and authorization of the proposed action.
- Children who are 15 years of age or older have the right to consent to hospital care, medical and surgical diagnosis and treatment without the consent of the parent or legal guardian (ORS 109.640).

Referrals to Family Planning Services

Explore the need for or interest in family planning information and appropriate referrals with a child 15 years old or older.

I. Provide any child in Child Welfare custody, who is 15 years of age or older, or any young adult a referral to an appropriate family planning resource when requested.

II. Refer the child to the nearest family planning clinic or the primary care provider. The decisions regarding a pregnancy and related medical care are the statutory right of the child 15 years of age or older.

Managing Hepatitis

Hepatitis is a viral infection of the liver. The three types of Hepatitis infection are:

I. Hepatitis A, spread through fecal-oral transmission and diagnosed through a blood test.

II. Hepatitis B, transmitted through blood and bodily fluids containing blood and diagnosed through a blood test.

III. Hepatitis C, transmitted by contact with the blood of an infected person and diagnosed through a number of blood tests.

For detailed information regarding hepatitis, contact the Centers for Disease Control Hepatitis Branch by calling 1-888-443-7232 or visit their website.

Procedure

Once information that a child’s biological parent has hepatitis is confirmed and prior to any further action, secure a Release of Medical Information form signed by the child’s biological parent (MSC 3010). Authorization for use and disclosure of information authorizes the caseworker to discuss this medical information with the child’s physician and caregivers.

Once authorization for use and disclosure of information has been obtained, ensure the following actions occur:

I. Provide information to the child’s primary care physician for appropriate medical testing and follow-up care.

II. Follow the immunization schedule recommended by the child’s physician.

III. Provide information to the substitute caregiver, along with information on universal precautions (PAM 9014).

The parent’s diagnosis of hepatitis should not hamper visitation because transmission of the virus is rare in casual contact. Ensure that biological parents with open or oozing sores, cuts, abrasions and wounds have them covered with a waterproof bandage prior to the child’s visit.

Dealing with Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV)

HIV means Human Immunodeficiency Virus. Some viruses, such as the ones that cause the common cold or the flu, stay in the body only for a few days. Some viruses, such as HIV, never go away. When a person becomes infected with HIV, that person becomes “HIV positive” and will always be HIV positive. Over time, HIV infects and kills white blood cells and can leave the body unable to fight off certain kinds of infections and cancers.
AIDS means Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome and is caused by HIV. Think of AIDS as advanced HIV. A person with AIDS has an immune system so weakened by HIV that the person usually becomes sick from one of several opportunistic infections or cancers such as PCP (a type of pneumonia) or Kaposi sarcoma, wasting syndrome (involuntary weight loss), memory impairment or tuberculosis. If someone with HIV is diagnosed with one of these opportunistic infections, he or she is said to have AIDS.

Restrictions on HIV Testing

HIV testing is an intrusive medical procedure and is authorized only under the following conditions:

I. HIV testing is clinically indicated by a physician knowledgeable in HIV infection and after a medical evaluation.

II. Under the direction of a physician, HIV testing can be done on infants born to mothers known to have engaged in high-risk behaviors. (Because maternal antibodies cross the placenta, the presence of HIV can be determined only after a series of tests.)

III. Children who are victims of sexual abuse and who have been exposed to blood or semen may be tested. If the child has the developmental ability to understand informed consent, the child can provide consent.

Procedure

Obtain authorization for HIV testing

I. Consent: The district manager may authorize an HIV test only under the above conditions.

A. The medical statement from the physician must state that the HIV test is necessary for care and treatment. The caseworker also must follow the informed consent procedures specific to HIV testing as outlined below:

1. For any child 13 or older, attempt to get the signed written consent of the child. This is a very sensitive issue, and the caseworker must prepare to have this difficult conversation with the child. For most caseworkers, this is a unique and special circumstance, and seeking assistance and guidance from the local health department, the physician, and the supervisor is advised. The CF 990 is used for informed consent for HIV testing [413-040-0430(2)].

2. The district manager or designee may provide consent to the test after consultation with the child’s physician, even if the child objects to testing.

3. The caseworker may request the court to order the testing of the child.

B. If a child is in substitute care under a Voluntary Custody Agreement or Voluntary Placement Agreement, the child and the child’s parents retain the authority to consent to HIV testing unless the authority to consent has been delegated to ODHS in the terms of the agreement.

C. Refer any child referred for HIV testing to pre- and post-test counseling. Contact the local health department for resources on this specialized counseling.

II. Identify and notify those who need to know.

A. Prior to the staffing, seek the input of the child’s physician, the local health department or the HIV program coordinator at the Public Health Division for resource information.
B. Schedule a staffing when a child is HIV-positive and/or has AIDS to identify who must have knowledge of this information.

   1. The staffing must include the child’s caseworker, the supervisor, the substitute caregiver, the child, when appropriate, the child’s parents, when appropriate, and the Central Office RN personal care coordinator.

C. For a child in substitute care under a Voluntary Custody Agreement or Voluntary Placement Agreement, the caseworker must involve the child’s parents in making medical decisions and must provide access to the child’s medical information.

D. Inform the substitute caregiver of the importance of using universal precautions (PAM 9014).

E. Inform the substitute caregiver of the strict confidentiality of the child’s HIV status information.

III. HIV documentation and court reporting:

A. A child or parent’s HIV testing and test results are highly confidential information. Sensitize and secure the case record. Ensure that physician reports, medical records, testing authorization, test results and decisions resulting from the staffing are recorded and stored in sealed envelopes in a separate locked file. Informed consent documentation is kept for a minimum of seven years.

B. If any disclosure of HIV information is necessary for planning in the context of court hearings, the caseworker cannot disclose the status in open court without either the written consent of the person or a court order. In addition, all written HIV test information released with authorization of the tested individual must be labeled with a statement which substantially says, “This information may not be disclosed to anyone without the specific written authorization of the individual.”

Managing Use of Psychotropic Medications

Psychotropic medication is defined as “medication, the prescribed intent of which is to affect or alter thought processes, mood or behavior, but is not limited to antipsychotic, antidepressant and anxiolytic medication and behavior medication. The classification of a medication depends upon its stated intended effect when prescribed because it may have many different effects.” OAR 413-070-0000(62), ORS 418.517.

Psychotropic medications are used to make symptoms of mental and/or mood disorders more manageable and often make it possible for therapy to be more effective. Psychotropic medications do not cure mental disorders and should be used in conjunction with counseling or other forms of therapy and under the supervision of a medical professional.

A Mental Health assessment is required prior to the prescription for more than one new psychotropic medication or any antipsychotic medication. This assessment must be within three months prior to the prescription for more than one new psychotropic medication or any antipsychotic medication or may be an updated assessment which addressed the new issues of concern.

Authorization must be obtained from the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or Nurse Consultant prior to any new prescription for psychotropic medication(s).

An annual review of psychotropic medications is conducted for all children and young adults in the custody of Child Welfare who are prescribed psychotropic medications.
Health and Wellness Services work in collaboration with the Oregon Psychiatric Access Line about Kids (OPAL-K) for the purpose of expert guidance and provider consultation (OPAL-K provides pediatric psychiatric consultation for clinicians treating youth in Oregon). When there are concerns or questions regarding the prescribed medication regimen, Health and Wellness Services may request OPAL-K to consult with the health care provider.

Procedure

The caseworker must inform the substitute caregiver that authorization is required prior to filling a prescription for a new psychotropic medication and provide medical/mental health information to the caregiver.

- At the time of initial placement, the caseworker must request medical and mental health information from parents, therapists, Licensed Medical Professionals and school personnel, including medical / mental health services and support and a list of current medications.
  - This should be incorporated into the development of case plans and included in the health information provided to the caregivers.
  - This information must be updated every 6 months, or as information becomes known.

- The caseworker must provide the following information to the substitute caregiver (at the initial placement and as additional medical or mental health information becomes known):
  - Medical and mental health history;
  - Immunization records;
  - Medication information;
  - Supports and services;
  - Records of any known allergies;
  - Medication Administration packet. The packet must include:
    - Psychotropic Medication Authorization Form(s) CF 173C;
    - CF 1083 Individual Medication Log(s)
    - FAX cover sheet (FAX cover sheet should be prefilled with branch contact name and FAX number). Secure email can also be used to send authorization requests in digital form.

- The caseworker must work with substitute caregivers to ensure that there is an understanding and agreement that they will:
  - Take Medication Administration packet to all mental health and medication management appointments;
  - Inform prescribing licensed medical professional that authorization must be obtained from either Department personnel, or legal parents (when there is a voluntary custody agreement or voluntary placement agreement) for any new prescription for a psychotropic medication;
  - Fill prescription for psychotropic medication only after being notified that authorization was obtained;
  - Follow the orders of the prescribing licensed medical professional when administering psychotropic medication;
  - Complete the CF 1083 Individual Child Medication Log and return the log to the caseworker monthly;
- Maintain the safe storage and administration of all medications in the household, taking into consideration the age, developmental level, and needs of the child or young adult in the care or custody of the Department placed in the home.

- Notify the Department within one business day after receiving a new psychotropic medication prescription, having knowledge of a new prescription for a psychotropic medication, or if there is a change in dosage or the discontinuation of a psychotropic medication.

- Monitor child or young adult for expected changes in their behavior, mood, etc. and for signs of side effects and report side effects to the Licensed Health Care Professional.

Authorization to Administer Psychotropic Medication

When a child or young adult in the custody or care of ODHS is prescribed new psychotropic medication(s), a Psychotropic Medication Authorization (PMA) form (CF173C) must be completed and approved before the prescription is filled and administered. The approval is provided by the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant and completed in a timely manner, which should not exceed three business days from receipt of the authorization form and 24 business hours for residential treatment program authorization.

Procedure to fill out the Psychotropic Medication Authorization Form (CF173C) (Please note that Sections A, C and D are completed prior to Section B)

Section A – Psychotropic medication recommendation (to be completed by licensed medical professional):

- Prescribing licensed medical professional must fully complete all of Section A of the Psychotropic Medication Authorization form when requesting a new psychotropic medication for a child or young adult in the custody of DHS.

- Prescribing licensed medical professional faxes or emails the authorization form to the branch personnel. The authorization form may also be given to the substitute caregiver to deliver to the caseworker or sent directly to Health and Wellness Services Program by fax or secure email.

- If the branch personnel receiving the authorization is not the caseworker, notification must be made to the caseworker or their supervisor that a psychotropic authorization form has been received and deliver hard copy of form to the caseworker or their supervisor, as appropriate. Date stamp the authorization form.

Section C – Child or young adult mental health assessment and placement information (to be completed by caseworker):

- If the authorization form was sent directly to the branch personnel, the caseworker must review authorization form and complete section C within 48 hours of receipt prior to sending to Health and Wellness Services.

- Document date of required mental health assessment (completed before more than one new psychotropic medication or any antipsychotic medication is prescribed, must be completed within three months prior to medication prescription or may be an update of assessment), or date of assessment update, or circumstances of urgent medical need. For more information on ‘urgent medical need’, please refer to OAR 413-070-0000(80).

- Document placement of the child or young adult (e.g. foster care, residential treatment, hospital, other).
Upon completion of Section C, caseworker emails the authorization request form to Health and Wellness Services at CW-Psychotropic.Med-Auth@dhsoha.state.or.us or FAX (503) 945-5635 for authorization.

If the authorization form was sent directly to Health and Wellness Services by the prescriber, then Section C will need to be completed once the authorization has been emailed to the caseworker from Health and Wellness Services.

Section D – Authorization for administration of psychotropic medications (to be completed by Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant):

- Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant will review authorization request form.
- If additional information is required prior to the approval of the psychotropic medication authorization form, the caseworker will coordinate with Health and Wellness Services to obtain needed information.
- If Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant does not grant authorization, a review is conducted by the consulting psychiatrist and/or OPAL-K (Oregon Psychiatric Access Line for Kids) for authorization.
- If approved, Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant will complete section D and email the caseworker the signed authorization form.
- If not approved, Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant will complete section D and email the caseworker with a summary of the OPAL-K consultation notes and any other recommendations.

Section B – Notification (to be completed by caseworker): Once approval is received, the caseworker must:

- Notify the legal parents or guardians of the new prescription(s) for psychotropic medications by written notification within a timely manner, not to exceed ten business days. Document any comments or information in designated comment area once the medication has been authorized.
- Document notification in the child or young adult’s case notes in OR-Kids (formal written notification is still required).
- Notify the substitute caregiver that authorization has been obtained and they may fill the prescription and administer medication as ordered.
- Fax the signed, completed authorization form to prescribing licensed medical professional.
- Caseworker will ensure that the completed authorization form is uploaded in the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

A young adult 14 years or older may consent to outpatient diagnosis or treatment of a mental or emotional disorder, or chemical dependency issue (excludes methadone treatment). However, authorization from the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or Nurse Consultant, is still required.

If the caseworker learns from the child or young adult or the substitute caregiver that the child or young adult has been prescribed and is taking a psychotropic medication, the caseworker must follow the Notification Requirements (OAR 413-070-0470(2), 413-070-0480, and 413-070-0490).
Urgent Medical Need: An urgent medical need means the onset of psychiatric symptoms requiring attention within 48 hours to prevent a serious deterioration in a child or young adult’s mental or physical condition. In case of an urgent medical need prior authorization is not required. When an urgent medical need occurs, and the urgent medical need requires the use of psychotropic medication to manage a child or young adult’s behavior or condition, the caseworker must:

- Request copies of all medical treatment records including hospitalization within seven business days of the urgent medical care.
- FAX Authorization form to prescribing licensed medical professional.
- Include a written request for the completion of Section A of the authorization form and request that authorization form be completed and faxed back to the caseworker at the branch office.
- The caseworker must complete sections B and C and email the authorization form to Health and Wellness Services at CW-Psychotropic.Med-Auth@dhsoha.state.or.us or FAX (503) 945-5635 for authorization within ten business days of receiving medical treatment records.
- Once received, the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant will complete section D and email the caseworker the signed authorization form.
- Caseworker will ensure that the completed authorization form is uploaded in the medical section of the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

The Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant is available for consultation.

Mental Health Assessments

The caseworker must ensure a child or young adult has received the required mental health assessment from a qualified mental health professional prior to the administration of an initial prescription. A psychotropic medication or any antipsychotic medication prescription requires a mental health assessment within three months. An updated mental health assessment should be completed yearly and uploaded into the medical section of the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

A mental health assessment is required unless the new prescription is:

- Prescribed for the treatment of an urgent medical need;
- A change in the way the same medication is administered (e.g. patch instead of by mouth);
- A change in the medication within the same classification (e.g. Concerta instead of Adderall);
- A one-time medication prior to a medical procedure (e.g. Valium before surgery);
- A dosage change of established medication.

Mental Health Assessments must have been completed within three months of the time a new antipsychotic medication is prescribed or may be an update of a prior assessment which focuses on a new or acute problem.

Whenever possible the mental health assessment should be shared with prescribing licensed health care professional prior to the appointment for medication evaluation.

For more information on how to request a mental health assessment refer to Chapter 5, Section 24 “Mental Health Services”.

Annual Review of Psychotropic Medications

An annual review of psychotropic medications is conducted for all children and young adults in the custody of Child Welfare who are prescribed psychotropic medications. This annual review is completed during their birth month.

The annual review will be completed by the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager, or Nurse Consultant. If needed, records will be requested from medical and mental health providers and can be referred to the consulting psychiatrist or OPAL-K for review.

Health and Wellness Services may contact the caseworker or request more information regarding mental health services, diagnostic information and perhaps other questions as needed to assist with the Annual Review. The caseworker must respond to these questions within seven business days to prevent delay in the completion of the review.

The caseworker will receive an email notifying them that a review was completed, a copy of the completed review and any concerns that were identified.

Health and Wellness Services will file the completed Annual Review of Psychotropic Medication report in child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

Monitor Effects of Psychotropic Medication

During the monthly face to face contact with the child or young adult and the caregiver, the caseworker should discuss information regarding the prescribed psychotropic medications. This discussion should include information about the intended effects and any side effects of the medication.

Consult with Health and Wellness Services Program Manager or designee with any concerns regarding prescribed medication.

The caseworker should also talk with the caregiver to ensure an understanding that the child or young adult should be monitored by a licensed health care professional on a routine basis.

Contact the prescribing licensed health care professional with information regarding the child or young adult’s condition if it is not improving, is deteriorating or if side effects are observed or reported.

Obtain, review, and sign medication logs (CF 1083) and file in the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

Record the information gathered from the caregiver and the child or young adult in the case notes.

Providing Psychotropic Medication Notification

The caseworker must provide written notification to all legal parties within a timely manner not to exceed ten business days following receipt of notification of:

- Prescription for a new psychotropic medication (and authorization has been granted; or
- The dosage of a psychotropic medication has been changed; or
- Discontinuation of a psychotropic medication.

For details of the notification, refer to OAR 413-070-0480 and 413-070-0490.

The Child Welfare standardized notification letter may be used to notify legal parties: CF 173A, Notice to Parties of Psychotropic Medication Use at http://dhsresources.hr.state.or.us/WORD_DOCS/CEO173a.doc.

Voluntary Placement Agreements and Voluntary Custody Agreements

When a child or young adult is in substitute care through a Voluntary Placement Agreement or authorization, the caseworker must review the specific agreement for the authorization to consent to the specific medical and/or mental health decisions.

If the legal parents retain the responsibility to make medical and/or mental health decisions, the caseworker must notify the legal parents regarding the psychotropic medication prescription authorization request and ensure consent is obtained from the legal parents.

If the legal parents have delegated consent authority to the Department, the authorization to administer psychotropic medication from the Department must be followed.

Nutritional Resources for a Child Under 5 years

When a child under the age of five is involved with Child Welfare, refer the child’s caregiver to the local Oregon Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) clinic. The WIC program provides nutrition support and healthy food information for substitute caregivers and services for children up to 5 years of age. WIC can also provide breast feeding support to biological parents.

Caseworkers should refer all children under the age of 5 to WIC by giving the phone number of the local WIC clinic to the families. Oregon Health Authority has the most up to date local WIC clinic contact information and can be found at:

www.oregon.gov/oha/PH/HEALTHYPEOPLEFAMILIES/WIC.

Managing Extraordinary or Controversial Medical Procedures, Including Termination of Pregnancy

Specific Authorizations REQUIRED

Oregon Administrative Rule requires specific authorizations for these circumstances. The age of consent varies depending on the medical service and procedure as defined in Oregon statute, and is noted below.

The caseworker must fully inform the supervisor who works in conjunction with the Child Welfare program manager, or designee, and district manager to provide clear, accurate, concise and timely information to the appropriate management level to make the decision whether to authorize needed treatment. The Health and Wellness Services Program Manager is available for consultation and to provide written consent when necessary, including after business hours.
A Medical or Surgical Procedure to Which The Child or Young Adult’s Parents are Opposed

Procedure

The caseworker should encourage conversations with the parent or guardian when it is in the best interest of the child or young adult. Inform appropriate level of Child Welfare Administration in regards to a medical or surgical procedure to which the child or young adult’s parents are opposed.

- Provide a written description of the nature of the extraordinary or controversial medical or surgical procedure, including physician recommendations for treatment, hospital medical consent forms, and contact information for medical and hospital staff. Also include parent or guardian concerns for opposing the procedure and the validity of the opposition. In addition, the caseworker provides a copy of the most recent court order or court report regarding the legal status of the child or young adult.

- Send the information via e-mail to the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager who will consult with a ODHS Deputy Director for Child Welfare, as needed.

Consent for Treatment of Extraordinary or Controversial Medical Procedures to Which The Child or Young Adult’s Parents are Opposed

Obtain appropriate level of Child Welfare Administration consent for medical procedures to which the child or young adult’s parents are opposed:

- Only the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager in consult with the ODHS Child Welfare Director, or a ODHS Child Welfare Deputy Director, or the court can consent to a medical or surgical procedure to which the child or young adult’s parents are opposed. Written consent is obtained on the CF 242 Consent for Medical/Surgical Care and Treatment, or the facility’s consent form, and filed in legal section of the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

- A child or young adult age 15 years or older can consent to hospital care, medical and surgical diagnosis, or treatment without the consent of the parent or guardian. ORS 109.640

- Exception to the required Child Welfare administration consent: When a child or young adult is placed with a Voluntary Placement Agreement, the contract agreement specifically states that the child or young adult’s parents must be consulted prior to an extraordinary or controversial medical procedure. The caseworker should encourage conversations with the parent or guardian when it is in the best interest of the child or young adult.

Termination of a Pregnancy

Procedure

Work in close collaboration with the child or young adult’s medical and mental health providers and the substitute caregiver to ensure appropriate care and counseling before and after termination of a pregnancy. The caseworker should encourage conversations with the parent or guardian when it is in the best interest of the child or young adult.

When the child is under 15 years of age and prior to the termination of pregnancy, prepare documentation of the child’s current situation including the child’s choice, physician recommendations, hospital medical consent forms, and contact information for medical and hospital staff. In addition, the caseworker provides a copy of the most recent court order or court report regarding the legal status of the child or young adult.

Inform Child Welfare administration of the information via e-mail to the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager who will consult with the ODHS Deputy Director for Child Welfare, if needed.

Consent for Termination of Pregnancy

Only the Health and Wellness Services Program Manager in consult with the ODHS Child Welfare Director or Child Welfare Deputy Director can consent to termination of a pregnancy except when a young adult is 15 years of age or older and exercises her statutory right to consent to her own termination of a pregnancy (ORS 109.640). Written consent is obtained on the CF 242, Consent for Medical/Surgical Care and Treatment, or the facility’s consent form, and filed in the medical section of the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids.

Sterilization

Procedure

Sterilization can only be authorized through administration or the court when such a procedure is necessary to protect the child’s life. Provide CAF administration with the following:

I. A written description of the child’s current situation, including physician recommendations for sterilization, hospital medical consent forms, and contact information for medical and hospital staff; and

II. A copy of the most recent court order or court report regarding the legal status of the child.

III. Send the information via email or fax to the ODHS assistant director for CAF followed with a phone call to the assistant director’s administrative assistant to alert the central office of the incoming information and request for consent.

Obtain consent:

I. Only the ODHS assistant director for CAF, the deputy assistant director for CAF Policy and Program, or the deputy assistant director for CAF Field Services can consent to sterilization and only under ORS Chapter 436 and when the procedure is necessary to protect the child’s life. Written consent is obtained on the CF 0242, Consent for Medical/Surgical Care and Treatment, and filed in the legal section of the child’s case file.

The Supervisor’s Role

Psychotropic Medication Management Responsibilities

I. Complete Section D of the Psychotropic Consent form;

II. Consult with prescribing licensed health care professional if there are questions or concerns prior to signing the consent form; and

III. Consult with Nurse manager at 503-945-6620 if questions or concerns cannot be resolved with the prescriber.
Routinely consult with the caseworker regarding the identified needs of the child. Support the caseworker in ensuring the child has appropriate medical coverage. Support the caseworker in making decisions regarding medical care and treatment. Review the case and assist in securing consent when management, administration or court consent is required.

Participate in staffings regarding HIV testing results. Ensure appropriate documentation and secure filing of all sensitive and confidential medical information.

Tip
A cooperative relationship with the child’s substitute caregiver is critical as most often it is the substitute caregiver who transports the child to the appointment, consults with the medical professional, and provides the medication or other care ordered by the medical provider. The caseworker gives clear instructions on how and when medical information is shared.

When coordinating a child’s medical services, ensure that the substitute caregiver:

» Is fully aware of the care and treatment needs of the child;
» Can perform the medical care functions;
» Has the ability and capacity to adequately care for the child; and » Follows the child’s scheduled appointments and treatment.

Tip
Voluntary Placement Agreements and Voluntary Custody Agreements

1. When a child is in substitute care through a Voluntary Placement Agreement or authorization, the caseworker must review the specific agreement for the authorization to consent to the specific medical and/or mental health decisions.

2. If the legal parents retain the responsibility to make medical and/or mental health decisions, the caseworker must notify the legal parents regarding the psychotropic medication prescription consent request and ensure consent is obtained from the legal parents.

3. If the legal parents have delegated consent authority to the Department, the consent to administer psychotropic medication from the Department must be followed.
Chapter 5
Section 22: Dental Care Services
Dental Care Services

Procedure

- Ensure each child is enrolled in a dental plan. Most children/young adults will be enrolled in a Coordinated Care Organization (CCO) that includes a dental plan. If a child is enrolled in a CCOA or CCOG, the dental will be through the CCO. If a child is enrolled in dental through a CCO, and the dental plan needs to be changed, the CCO needs to be contacted directly to make that change. If a child is not enrolled in dental through the CCO they will either be enrolled in a Dental Care Organization (DCO) or will be on an open card for dental. Most areas in the state require enrollment in a dental plan either through the CCO or a DCO. Finding an open card dental provider in Oregon is often difficult.

- Each child/young adult placed in substitute care must receive a dental assessment (children age 1 and older) within 30 calendar days of entering care.

- Ensure routine tooth cleaning is scheduled with a complete dental exam at a minimum of once every 12 months.

- Document the name and contact information for the medical professionals providing dental care in the child or young adult’s person management in OR-Kids (Information saved in person management will pull into the Child Specific Case Plan generated by OR-Kids).

- When a child or young adult is placed in substitute care through a Voluntary Placement Agreement, the child or young adult’s parents must be consulted prior to obtaining ordinary dental, hygiene or other remedial dental care.
Chapter 5

Section 23: Orthodontia Services
Orthodontia Services

Procedure

Orthodontia treatment is only covered by OHP/Medicaid if a child or young adult has cleft lip or cleft palate. If a dentist feels strongly a child or young adult without cleft lip/palate has a need for orthodontia, please follow the process below:

Medicaid funds will cover only orthodontia services for Medicaid-eligible children with a cleft lip or cleft palate. When the child has that diagnosis, the provider must request prior authorization for payment to either DMAP in the case of an “open” card or through the Coordinated Care Organization (CCO) or Dental Care Organization (DCO) if the child is enrolled.

To Request Orthodontia Treatment

- Gather information and complete an initial review of the identified need.
- Review potential funding resources within the following parameters:
  - All available funding resources must be identified and secured prior to initiating orthodontia treatment
  - If child does not have cleft lip or cleft palate, orthodontia must be paid with other medical branch funds.
    Documentation of a complete evaluation of orthodontia needs must be provided by the dental care provider.
  - A letter outlining the treatment plan from the proposed orthodontic provider that includes the presenting medical condition or medical condition developed as a result of dental conditions, treatment plan correcting the presenting issues, timeline for treatment and the expected treatment outcome. This information must be kept in the medical section of the child or young adult’s file cabinet in OR-Kids and a copy submitted with the expenditure request.
- Identify and confirm other financial resources who have agreed to assist in the treatment plan (e.g., a relative or philanthropic or community service agency willing to provide financial assistance) and documentation that such resources will be expended prior to payment of other medical branch funds.
- Present the funding request and supporting documentation to the supervisor for approval.
- All requests for orthodontic treatment are reviewed with the criteria listed below.

Requests for other medical branch funds will be considered for orthodontic services needed as part of treatment for a medical condition or because a medical condition developed as a result of dental conditions. If the child or young adult is enrolled in dental care through a CCO, the Medical Assistance Specialist (MAS) should contact the Intensive Care Manager (ICM) at the CCO to ask if additional funds are available to assist in covering the cost of orthodontic services. The following conditions, with the proper documentation, are a first priority for orthodontic treatment:

- Cleft lip and/or cleft palatemplanted canines
- Impinging overbite
- Overjet greater than 9 mm
- Syndromes affecting the bone
- Syndromes of abnormal craniofacial contour
- Malocclusion resulting from traumatic injury

Other medical branch funds expenditures are authorized by management staff and must meet both the criteria detailed below and identified in spending parameters for all other medical branch funds (OAR 413-050-0410, 413-050-0430).

- A child or young adult must be receiving Child Welfare services and must be in the physical or legal custody of the department, open for services through a CPS assessment, or receiving voluntary services through a notarized Voluntary Placement Agreement (CF 499) or Voluntary Placement Agreement signed by the parent or legal guardian.

- The request must be consistent with the case plan to meet the child or young adult’s needs for safety, permanency, attachment and well-being.

- There must be documentation that other appropriate resources have been exhausted and there are no other internal, philanthropic or community resources available to meet the need.

- No funds may be intentionally allocated nor considered in order to shift costs to pay indirectly for disallowed expenditures of funds.

- No funds may be allocated to circumvent other policy or administrative rule, such as making payments to non-IV-E relative caregivers to pay the difference between the nonneedy relative payment and foster care payment.

- Payments may not supplant or replace other appropriate funding streams such as medical services eligible for payment under the Oregon Health Plan (OHP).

- All expenditures must comply with all DAS and department expenditure, contracting and purchasing rules, policies and procedures.

- Expenditures must address the needs of the child or young adult as identified in their case plan.

Obtain Approval and Payment For Orthodontia Treatment

All orthodontic treatment must be authorized as outlined prior to the start of treatment.

Understand Limitations on Orthodontia Expenditures

The following limitations to orthodontia expenditures apply:

- The department will consider incurring partial costs of orthodontic treatment only when such treatment is consistent with a child or young adult’s permanency plan and agreed upon by their substitute caregivers.

- A one-time payment will be made in full for all treatment including the appliances, retainers, follow-up visits, removal of the appliances and all follow-up care.

- Continued orthodontic treatment for children who were receiving orthodontic treatment prior to being in the legal or physical custody of the department will not be considered for other medical branch funds and no other resources are available. The parents or legal guardians will be expected to continue to cover the costs of treatment.

- Children or young adults who leave the department’s custody prior to completion of orthodontic treatment will still be obligated to complete treatment for paid services.

- Cosmetic orthodontics and orthodontics for self-esteem purposes only will not be covered through other medical branch funds.

Chapter 5
Section 24: Mental Health Services
Mental health services

Procedure

I. Refer a child entering substitute care to the local mental health provider for a mental health assessment within 60 days of placement.

II. Ensure a child’s enrollment in a Mental Health Organization (MHO). MHO enrollment normally occurs on the first of the month following Oregon Health Plan (OHP) eligibility.

III. Ensure a child has access to mental health services.
   A. To access mental health services prior to MHO enrollment, and if a child has urgent mental health needs, contact the local Community Mental Health Program (CMHP) Children’s Mental Health contact in the child’s county of residence.
   B. A child with private health insurance in addition to his or her OHP coverage is not enrolled in an MHO. The child stays on an open card (fee-for-service). To access mental health services, contact the CMHP Children’s Mental Health contact in the child’s county of residence.

IV. Call the local CMHP Children’s Mental Health contact in the child’s county of residence to schedule an appointment. After a child is enrolled in an MHO, the telephone number will be listed on the medical ID card under the mental health plan. The local office medical assistance specialist can identify the plan. If the child is not enrolled in an MHO, none will be listed on the medical ID card.

V. Ask for a mental health assessment for the child and request a written copy of the results of the assessment by submitting the Authorization for Use and Disclosure of Information form MSC 3010 to the mental health provider.

VI. Document the results of the mental health assessment and any follow up or treatment services in case notes. Written reports and assessments are filed in the case file’s medical section. Share information with the child’s substitute caregiver and, when appropriate, with the child’s parents.

VII. Include the services recommended by the mental health provider as part of the case plan in the Child Safety and Well-Being, Child Description, Their Needs and Well-Being section of the case plan. If all recommended services are not available in the community, consult with the mental health provider to prioritize services. Recommendations and services are documented in case notes.

VIII. Request a level of need determination and an assessment that includes a Child and Adolescent Services Intensity Instrument (CASII) if a child has particularly complex mental health issues or the child’s needs are not addressed in routine mental health care. The child’s score on this instrument, combined with other assessment information and relevant risk factors, will determine the level of mental health services a child needs. The CASII is considered a part of the process of level of need determination. The level of need determination process will include recommendations for treatment and/or further evaluation.

IX. Actively participate in the child and family team meetings coordinated through the mental health provider, and advocate for the services the child needs.
A. A child with significant mental health issues (determined by the assessment, the CASII score, and the presence of relevant risk factors) may be eligible for mental health care coordination. Mental health care coordinators organize and facilitate the child and family teams who organize the delivery of mental health services that may include outpatient treatment, intensive home-based services, respite, day treatment, residential treatment or hospitalization.

X. When appropriate, arrange for additional services to or for the child through other community mental health resources.

A. There may be occasions where services may be ordered by the court.
B. Request additional services or an expert evaluation to assist in case planning, and request case consultation or an evaluation of parent/child interaction and sibling interaction when appropriate.
C. Request additional services for treatment of a child’s identified needs such as sex abuse treatment services, or further evaluation to assist in best meeting placement, treatment or service needs such as a psycho-sexual evaluation, psychological evaluation or neuro-psychological testing.
   1. To obtain these evaluations or administrative exams, complete a Request for Medical Funds form and submit it to the supervisor in the local office.

XI. Consult with the medical assistance resource coordinator in Salem when assistance is needed to understand mental health coverage or enrollment changes, or to secure additional services not covered through mental health coverage.

Tip

Mental health services provided through the local mental health provider are based on the child’s mental health diagnosis and the determination of the medical necessity for treatment. There may be times when a child’s behaviors indicate a need for services, but the behaviors are not directly linked to a diagnosis or are not viewed as medical necessity (such as sexual aggressive or reactive behaviors). These behaviors, when not directly linked to a mental health diagnosis, may not necessarily be treated by the mental health provider.

Who provides consent for a child 14 or older

A child 14 years of age or older may consent to outpatient assessment and/or treatment of a mental or emotional disorder without the knowledge or consent of the caregiver or the Department. If the caseworker obtains this information from the child or the child’s caregiver, the caseworker must, within seven working days of receiving the information, ask the child whether he or she consents to disclosure of information and to whom information may be disclosed. If consent is granted, the caseworker documents authorization on the Consent for Disclosure of Confidential Information form (CW 1085). This does not apply to notification if the caseworker learns the child is taking psychotropic medications.

I. If the caseworker has questions regarding the child’s competence to make an informed decision on disclosure of information, document in the case file the following information:

A. The attempt to explain the meaning and intent of consenting to disclosure of treatment;
B. The determination that the child was unable to understand the meaning and consequences of the decision to consent to disclosure; and
C. The determination of the youth’s competence was not linked to the diagnosis precipitating the prescription for psychotropic medication.

Emergency/urgent mental health needs

I. If a child presents a threat of harm to self or others, either call or instruct the substitute caregiver to call the local mental health provider immediately.

   A. The local CMHP has statutory responsibility to provide crisis services (24 hours/7 days a week) to members of the community they serve. After normal business hours, the response may be a telephone crisis triage service with links to local on-call staff.

II. At any time a child requires immediate mental health services, provide specific and detailed descriptions of the child’s current behaviors and conditions to the CMHP (or instruct the caregiver to do so). Accurate and detailed information gives the provider the information needed to make a determination for an appropriate response. At any time a child requires immediate mental health services, the caseworker or other branch personnel involved in the case remain available to the child, substitute caregiver and the mental health provider, preferably in person, but if necessary by phone or pager until the crisis is resolved and the child’s safety is ensured.

Children’s Mental Health System Change Initiative

As of October 1, 2005, the system of funding and arranging for Psychiatric Residential Treatment Services and Psychiatric Day Treatment Services changed. Local mental health systems must be involved in screening and identifying children with intensive needs for mental health services. OHP managed care organizations will have more flexibility when designing services for children needing intensive mental health services, and transitions between facility- and community-based services will be better coordinated. Click here for more information on the Children’s Mental Health System Change Initiative. For more information on psychiatric residential placement, refer to Placement Options in this procedure manual.

When a child is placed with a Voluntary Placement Agreement, the child’s parents must be consulted prior to obtaining ordinary medical, dental, psychiatric, psychological, hygiene or other remedial care unless authorization to provide care is specifically delegated to the department in the Voluntary Placement Agreement.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Ensure timely referral and assessment is completed.

II. Review and approve requests for additional evaluation or testing.

III. Consult with the caseworker and review the child’s mental health services.

Section 26: Family Visitation and Contact Family Visitation and Contact

Maintaining family contact and regular visitation is the single most important factor in supporting a child’s attachments to his or her parents, siblings and other family members and can lessen both the child’s and the parents’ anxiety about the child being placed in substitute care. Frequent high-quality visits support parental engagement and motivation for change. A visit and contact plan that meets the child’s developmental and attachment needs and allows for frequent contact between the child, siblings and members of his or her family must be created for every child in substitute care. This plan must be in the best interest of the child and must develop or enhance attachment with the child’s family, including siblings. The visitation plan is created to reduce the trauma to the child associated with being removed from the home. The visit and contact plan is part of the case plan, receives priority when reunification is the permanency plan, and is developed through an assessment of the needs of and risks to the child.

One of the best predictors of successful reunification is the frequency and quality of visits between a child and his or her parents. When reunification is the goal, the visit and contact plan should include progressively increased parental responsibility for the daily care of the child. When reunification no longer is the goal, a visit and contact plan can help family members understand and accept the alternative permanency plan. Whatever the goal, visits strengthen and maintain family relationships, enhance a child’s well-being, and affirm the importance of parents in the child’s life.

Visitation is an interactive face-to-face contact between a child and his or her parents, siblings or other family members. It is separate from counseling, therapy, assessments, case reviews, family meetings or court hearings. Visitation can be supplemented with other types and means of contact such as phone calls, letters, email, pictures, and gifts. This contact should be allowed and encouraged unless the child’s or others’ safety or well-being may be compromised.

Visit and Contact Plans

Procedure

Involve the parents in planning for visits. It is also important to invite the child’s substitute caregivers, the child and other relevant people (e.g., the child’s attorney, CASA, therapist or relatives) to participate in planning for parent-child contact. This planning process begins when a child is first removed from the parent’s home.

I. Prepare a visit and contact plan when a child first enters substitute care or by the time of the first court hearing, whichever is first. When working with parents on developing a visit and contact plan, explain their rights regarding visits and what they can expect prior to, during and after visitation, and explain the importance of visitation to the child. The visit and contact plan must explain the reason for supervision if supervision is required. The plan includes the names of the person(s) with whom a child may have contact and the description of the contact with each person that includes:

A. Type, time, frequency, length, location, supervision and safety considerations.

B. Do not list addresses or telephone numbers on the visitation plan when doing so may put others at risk of harm (e.g., domestic violence or restraining orders) or when doing so would violate confidentiality.

II. Schedule the first visit within a week of the child’s placement in substitute care, preferably within the first 48 hours of the child entering care. If this does not occur, document the reasons why in a case note in the electronic information system.

A. The visit and contact plan is a part of the case plan. The Visit and Contact form CF 0831 may be filled out by Department staff or the caseworker. It must be approved by the caseworker if completed by Department staff. The caseworker must consider several factors in the development of the visit and contact plan:

1. The ongoing safety plan. (What are the safety issues, both physically and emotionally for the child in interacting with the parent?)
2. The child’s permanency plan. (Has the department moved to a permanency plan other than reunification?)
3. The unique developmental and attachment needs of the child (e.g., frequent contact is critical to maintaining attachment to the parents).
4. The family’s culture, traditions, language and norms and how to support and incorporate those considerations into visits.
5. A child’s school schedule (To the extent practicable (capable of being done or accomplished), schedule visitation at a time and place that does not require the child to miss part or all of a school day.)
6. The best interests of the child.
7. Any orders of the court regarding visitation with a child’s parents or siblings.

B. If supervision is required, the visit and contact plan must clearly explain the reason for supervision. Some reasons to require supervision during visits include: to protect the child from harm, manage child safety, or to provide therapeutic visitation. The reasons must be specific to the family’s and child’s needs.

C. A visit and contact plan that prohibits visits with family members must clearly state the reasons for the prohibition and the circumstances, if any, under which the department would begin or resume contact.

D. Reasons to prohibit visits include:

1. When there is reason to believe the acts or omissions of a parent or guardian would result in child abuse or neglect during a visit;
2. The safety of a child or young adult cannot be managed by supervision;
3. The visit does not meet the best interests of the child or young adult; or
4. A court order prohibits visits.

E. Visits cannot be canceled solely due to the act or omission of a parent that is unrelated to the safety or well-being of a child during a visit.

F. If visits between a child and a parent do not occur for any reason, visits between siblings not placed together should continue to regularly take place unless the child’s safety or well-being would be compromised during a visit.

G. The Department will support foster parents in prioritizing visits between siblings placed separately when doing so is safe and in the best interest of a child.

H. Discuss with the foster parent the different reactions a child may have to visitation with his or her parent (including feeling happy, confused, sad and angry) and that the child may not be able to express feelings with words, but with behaviors (such as regression, depression, bad dreams, aggression, or irritability as well as other acting out behaviors). Explain that this is normal and not a reason to terminate or limit visits.

I. Explain to the foster parent the benefits of frequent visitation: promotes healthy attachment, establishes and strengthens parent-child relationship, eases pain of separation and loss for the child, helps motivate parents to make changes, allows parents to learn and practice new skills.

J. Ensure the visit and contact plan is written in a language the family can understand.

K. Address any specific needs of the family during visitation, such as cultural or language-specific needs.

L. Explain to the parents what might happen if they do not attend visits and explain the known or anticipated reasons for ending a visit, such as for safety reasons.

M. Plan for contact other than visitation such as phone or email contact, letters, pictures and contact during other family activities such as school or church events, family gatherings, or doctor or dental appointments.

N. Address the barriers to visitation such as transportation, health conditions, or arranging child-care for a child’s siblings.

O. Consider the parents’ work or treatment schedules in the development of the visit and contact plan.

P. Consider safety concerns for the child and others. When necessary, take special measures for a child and non-offending parent when domestic violence has occurred and there is an active restraining order, there are limited contact requirements through a divorce decree, or there is no order or court action, but there have been domestic violence or other safety issues between the parents. These measures may include separate visitation schedules, safe drop-off and pick-up locations, or special safety plans for unplanned contact.

Q. Address in the visitation plan reasons for canceling or rescheduling a visit (e.g., safety issues) and what may happen if a parent does not attend a scheduled visit.

R. Schedule visitation at a time and place that does not require the child to miss part or all of a school day. If it is not practicable (capable of being done or accomplished) to schedule visitation to a time that does not conflict with part or all of the school day, then proceed with the scheduled family visitation time.

S. Include a timeframe for regular review and revision of the visit and contact plan. This review must be a part of the 90-day case plan review.

Supervision Levels and Documentation

Procedure

Visit and Contact Plan

I. The visit and contact plan should utilize the least restrictive level of visitation that can meet the safety needs of the child.

Levels of supervision include:
A. Unsupervised Visitation: The parent is demonstrating increased protective capacities and decreased diminished protective capacities. Safety threats are managed, and the child feels comfortable visiting with the parent. Unsupervised visitation should be considered as a natural transition to the return home process as conditions for return are close to being met. Document with whom, when and where unsupervised visits are occurring on the ongoing safety plan and the visit and contact form (CF 0831).

B. Monitored Visitation: Parent is demonstrating mostly enhanced protective capacities, and diminished protective capacities are decreasing. The child is comfortable visiting the parent. Safety threats can be managed. These visits may be supervised by ODHS staff or other approved safety service provider. There may be specific rules regarding location and supervision of the visit. Group visitation may fit in this category.

C. Supervised Visitation: Safety threats exist or are currently being assessed, and there is a vulnerable child. The parent may need assistance in establishing a parent/child relationship. The child may need reassurance of a third party. This may occur at the beginning of a case or when a termination of parental rights petition has been filed. Supervision requires that the visit be:
   1. Supervised in a ODHS office or in the community.
   2. Supervised by ODHS staff or approved safety service provider.
   3. Supervised within sight/sound.

D. Intensive Supervision: This highest level of supervision is only appropriate on high-risk cases or when there are significant child well-being issues. Examples might be: threat of abduction, threat of coercion of testimony, or a fearful child. Intensive supervision requires that the visit be:
   1. Supervised by ODHS staff or another approved professional.
   2. Supervised in secure environment.

E. Therapeutic Visitation: This level of supervision is clinical and requires a higher skill level of intervention by a professional. Therapeutic visitation may be necessary to facilitate attachment, child well-being, transition, or other relationship dynamics. The professional must confirm they are comfortable managing child safety during the visit.

F. Supplemental Contact: Supplemental contact should occur in addition to a regular visitation plan. The type of supplemental contact should match safety threats and vulnerability of the child. Types of supplemental contact include:
   1. Hands-on visitation during a structured or facilitated class.
   2. Email and phone.
   3. Parent participating in medical appointments, school activities, holiday celebrations, etc.

Documentation of Visits

I. Each visitation contact between a parent and a child and between the child and his or her siblings must be documented in the Child Welfare electronic information system. The documentation must include who participated in the visit, the date and the location of the visit, and what occurred during the visit. This information may be submitted to the court.

II. When someone other than department staff is supervising the visit, ensure the person supervising the visit provides feedback of the impact of the visit on the child no more than seven days after the visit has occurred. This feedback must be documented in the Child Welfare electronic information system.

III. If a child misses part or all of more than four school days during a semester or half school year period due to the visitation schedule, the caseworker must ensure the number of school days missed during the semester or half school year period is documented in the Child Section of the Family Report (under Education in the box titled, “Update on how the child is doing in school”).

During the CPS Assessment:

I. Visitation will likely begin at a supervised level during the initial CPS assessment to assist in determining the needs of the child, protective capacity of the parents, and understanding parent-child dynamics. The caseworker can move to a less restrictive level of supervision at any point during this assessment period once safety and well-being are assured.

Questions to Determine Supervision Levels and How to Move Between Supervision Levels

Procedure

I. Visit and contact plans are meant to be case specific and are an important part of the case plan that need to be reviewed regularly. Visits should occur in both the least restrictive environment and level of supervision that can be implemented while still meeting the child’s physical and emotional safety needs. Visitation plans are meant to be fluid and should become less or more restrictive as the case plan moves along. As the parent demonstrates increased protective capacities and decreased diminished protective capacities, the level of supervision should decrease as a natural transition to the return home process. If no progress is being made, the supervision plan may not change. Progress does not determine whether a parent has the opportunity for visitation services. Questions to consider when determining the appropriate level of supervision:

A. Do safety threats still exist to warrant the current level of visitation?
B. Can safety threats be managed in a less restrictive way that would be safe and appropriate?
C. Is the child comfortable during visits?
D. Does the level of visitation match the permanency plan?
E. Have the parents been consistent in following the current visitation plan?
F. Do the parents understand visitation expectations?
G. Have relatives/kith/other natural supports been explored as visitation supervisors?
H. Have more normalized environments, other than the ODHS office, been explored?
I. Can visitation time be extended or more visits added?
J. Can the current visitation schedule be supplemented in any way?

Safety Service Providers (SSP) and Visitation

Procedure
I. Arrange supervised visitation with a ODHS-approved Safety Service Provider (SSP) when required to address safety concerns for the child.
   A. In these circumstances, a ODHS-approved third party (SSP) is included in the visit to protect the emotional and physical safety of the child.
   B. Make the arrangements for the SSP, provide the parameters of the visit, and provide the instructions to the SSP for visit parameters, special considerations, and any observation and documentation requirements. Ensure that the person supervising the visit receives a copy of the visit and contact plan, understands the dynamics of the individual family, the purpose of the supervision, and will comply with the safety plan.
   C. Continue supervised visits only if they are required to manage child safety.

Assessment of non-ODHS employees as Safety Service Providers for visitation supervision

Procedure

I. There are times when it may be appropriate to have a non-ODHS employee supervise a visit. This may be the foster parent/relative caregiver, other relatives, other individuals known to the family or a ODHS volunteer who have been approved by ODHS to be a Safety Service Provider (SSP). In assessing the appropriateness of the person as a Safety Service Provider to supervise visitation, consider:
   A. Whether the SSP’s viewpoint toward the child is appropriate and realistic.
   B. If the SSP understands what the threats are and accepts them as existing, serious and concerning.
   C. If the SSP possesses the knowledge, skills and motivation necessary to perform the action or service being asked of him or her in the safety plan and the visit and contact plan.
   D. If visits occur at the SSP’s home, the safety and appropriateness of the home.
   E. Whether the SSP has the ability to and will intervene in the visit, if necessary, and understands when intervention would be necessary.
   F. Whether the SSP has the ability to provide objective and accurate information about the visit.
   G. Whether the SSP has the ability to and will complete the documentation required within the required timeframe.

Special Visitation Considerations

I. Federal regulations apply to Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC) cases and the length of visits. Consult with the central office ICPC coordinator regarding parameters of interstate visits for a placement governed by ICPC.

II. Arrange for a child to visit with extended family members or other important people in his or her life (e.g., a sibling, teacher, coach, pastor, rabbi or neighbor) to maintain a child’s connection to family, culture and community. Maintaining a child’s connections with significant people in their life is important to the child’s well-being.
III. Ensure the family and other visitation contacts are documented in the case notes, and include the following information:

A. The date, time, length and location of the visit;
B. Who attended;
C. Activities that occurred during supervised or structured visits;
D. Missed visits and reason(s) the visits were missed; and
E. Interrupted or visits that were ended early and reason(s) why they were interrupted or ended.

IV. There are special considerations for visitation when a parent is incarcerated. Appendix 5.31 provides guidance to the caseworker when arranging visitation with a parent who is incarcerated or in custody.

V. The caseworker is responsible for planning and evaluating the visitation between parents and their children. Appendix 5.32 provides questions to guide planning and evaluating of family visits.

Support of the visitation process

Family visitation can be stressful and awkward for both the child and his or her parents. Visits at the ODHS office may trigger a trauma response in both parents and children. Family members may struggle with what to say and do during visits.

There are many things a caseworker can do to support and enhance the visitation process:

I. Take time to talk with parents, children and young adults about places where they would feel comfortable having a visit. Consider planning visits in a park, library, church or other public setting outside the office. Consider occasions when visits can occur in the family home.

II. Suggest the parents bring books, toys and/or games to the visit. Parents who do not have books can check them out from the library. Ask parents if they mind recording themselves or having someone help record them as they read to or interact with their child. This can be played again by the child throughout the week.

III. Encourage the family members to share family traditions, cultural rituals and special celebrations together. Eating often is a fond family ritual, and sharing food is enjoyable for everyone.

IV. Use visitation times to celebrate child and family accomplishments.

V. Take and share pictures.

VI. Ask if the parent would like to sleep with a favorite blanket or piece of clothing and give it to the child at a visit. The smells of home and familiar items can provide a sense of connection and comfort when the parent is not with the child.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Review the case plan, including visitation and contact plans.

II. Consult with the caseworker when issues or concerns arise.

III. Support creative thinking regarding increasing the number of people who can supervise visits, where visits take place, and supporting family traditions and culture.

IV. Ensure the level of supervision is appropriate.

V. Explore possible caseworker bias around appropriate behavior and expectations in visits.

VI. Support the caseworker’s efforts for frequent contact between the child and his or her parents and between siblings.

Section 27: Clothing and personal belongings
Clothing and personal belongings

Procedures

Bringing clothing and personal belongings into substitute care

I. Ask the family to provide items and clothing they know their child would want.
   A. Help them understand the importance to their child.
   B. Talk with them about their child – learn more about what the child likes and encourage them to bring their child’s personal items to visits.
   C. Reassure parents that these items will be well cared for and that items will remain with the child.
   D. Also, acknowledge to the parents that things can get lost or stolen while the child is in substitute care. Parents may ask about toys or other electronic devices. Let the parents know there may be a risk of damage or loss of these items if they are sent with the child into care.

II. If the parents refuse to provide the child’s clothing, the caseworker can ask the court to order the parents to release the items.

Tracking clothing and personal belongings

I. Inventory a child’s clothes when the child enters care with the substitute caregiver.
   A. The inventory provides the initial list of personal items, and the substitute caregiver can add to the list as new items are purchased.
   B. This inventory also helps ensure that, when a child leaves substitute care, all of the personal belongings can go with him/her.
   C. Standard rates for substitute caregivers include money for monthly clothing replacement.
      1. It is the substitute caregiver’s responsibility to maintain a child’s clothes with this payment. It is reasonable and appropriate to inquire of the substitute caregiver about the purchase of new clothing for the child.

Additional clothing needs

I. Sometimes the local office will have a clothing closet or the local foster parent organization, school or other community programs have clothing closets available for children in substitute care. Use these resources prior to a purchase of clothing.

II. If resources have been exhausted, request a one-time-only Emergency Voucher when a child enters substitute care in the initial placement. The supervisor approves this request.

III. Coordinate with the substitute caregiver on the best way to issue and deliver the voucher to the substitute caregiver. Often substitute caregivers have preferences regarding the stores in which they shop. If this is the case, the office manager or designee will complete a CF 0598 Authorization and Vendor Voucher for the selected store.

IV. Make the arrangements with the substitute caregiver regarding receipt of the voucher. At the store, the substitute caregiver presents the voucher when purchasing the items; the store will complete the CF 0598 and send it to ODHS accounting for reimbursement.

V. When the substitute caregiver intends to shop at more than one store, the substitute caregiver is given the CF 0598. The substitute caregiver submits the completed form, along with original receipts, to the address on the form.

Special circumstances

I. Under special circumstances, ask the supervisor to approve a one-time Standard Voucher.
   A. Examples of when this request may be appropriate are if items of clothing were stolen or destroyed, or a child has an unusually fast growth spurt.
   B. The process of working with the substitute care provider to arrange for the issuing and receipt of the clothing voucher are the same as above.

Children re-entering care

I. If a child is returned home and then re-enters substitute care and is in need of clothing, request approval from the Child Welfare branch manager for a Supplemental Voucher. This is issued only once, unless the child welfare branch manager makes an exception to issue a Supplemental Voucher a second time.

Concerns regarding unmet clothing or other needs

I. It is ultimately the caseworker’s responsibility to ensure the child has basic clothing and needs met – from shoes to underwear and tooth brushes to basic school supplies.
   A. During the face-to-face contact with the child, assess whether these needs are being met. As appropriate, respectfully talk with the substitute caregiver regarding the child’s needs and your concerns if the needs are not being met.
      1. Develop strategies to address these needs.
      2. Document concerns and the strategies developed with the substitute caregiver.
      3. Report this information to the substitute caregiver’s certifier.
      4. If the concern persists, re-contact the certifier for assistance in resolving the issue.
      5. At any time the caseworker believes the substitute caregiver is neglecting the child’s basic needs, the caseworker must report the concern to a screener in the local office.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Review and approve the emergency and standard clothing vouchers when requested.

II. Assist in obtaining the approval of the Child Welfare branch manager when a supplemental voucher is requested.

Tip

For children coming into substitute care for the first time or children moving from one placement to another, personal belongings are extremely important. Personal items are a reminder of and connection with home and family.

Tip

Make an effort to ensure the child’s personal items are maintained and stored appropriately. When the child moves to a permanent home, it is very important for the child to have his or her personal belongings accompany him or her when returning home or moving to a new placement.
Chapter 5

Section 28: Travel
Travel

Any child in ODHS custody and their caregivers will have many opportunities to travel during the stay in substitute care. Rules governing the certification standards for foster parents and relative caregivers require all drivers who transport children in the department’s custody to:

I. Have a valid driver license;

II. Have proof of insurance for all family-owned motorized vehicles used to transport the child; and

III. Ensure seat belts and age- and size-appropriate safety seats are always used.

In-state travel

Procedure

I. The substitute caregiver can transport the child anywhere within Oregon for short-term travel. The child also can travel with school personnel for in-state cultural, sport or other academic activities. If the child will be traveling during a period where visits or other appointments are usually scheduled, the child’s caseworker needs to be informed of the travel plans and give approval to miss any scheduled or expected visits.

II. The child can travel with the caseworker or with other persons authorized to provide supervision for the child in the routines of day-to-day life.

Out-of-state travel

Procedure

Out-of-state travel when no reimbursement costs are involved

I. If the child and substitute caregiver or the child and the caseworker plan to travel out of state, the caseworker or substitute caregiver completes the Consent to Travel form (CF 0002) and submits the form to a supervisor for preliminary approval. After the supervisor approves, the Consent to Travel form is sent to the district manager or designee for final approval.

II. The Consent to Travel form is time-limited, indicating the purpose of the travel and dates of departure and return. The Consent to Travel form must remain with whoever is authorized to transport the child while in another state.

III. A Consent to Travel form can specify a date range of approval for specific activities but cannot give approval for a period beyond the end date of the current certification period. For example, this may be appropriate when substitute caregivers live in areas bordering other states where shopping, medical providers, or recreational activities are in a different state only minutes away.

IV. The Consent to Travel form identifies the person authorized to consent to emergency medical care, if needed, and payment procedures for emergency care, if provided.

Out-of-state travel when reimbursement costs are involved
I. Out-of-state travel is often associated with a child’s placement under the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC). For travel cost authorization related to ICPC cases, see detailed instructions provided in the ICPC placement procedures.

II. There may be other occasions where a child is selected for a particular event or activity that requires out-of-state travel. Out-of-state travel should always align with the child’s case plan.
   A. In some instances, a child may travel without an escort.
   B. Complete the Out of State Travel Authorization form (CF 1293). This form is first approved by the supervisor, then the Child Welfare branch manager and the assistant director of CAF.
   C. Complete the Out of State Travel Authorization for a child, (CF 0002 and CF 0002a).
   D. Fax the travel authorizations to Field Operations in Salem.
   E. Once the approved travel authorization is received, contact the approved travel agency and arrange flights and, if necessary, car rental. Lodging also can be arranged through the approved travel agency or separately. Travel arrangements must stay within the agency’s expenditure limits.
   F. After travel is completed, document all employee incurred travel expenses using the automated Travel Reimbursement Information Processing System (TRIPS).
      1. Meals for Child Welfare staff are reimbursed at the published per-diem amount for the area of the country where travel occurred.
      2. Meals for any non-employee, including the child, are reimbursed according to the actual cost of the meal, not to exceed the published per-diem rate.
      3. If there is more than one Department employee traveling, a separate TRIPS claim must be completed for each employee. The child’s meal expenses may be documented on one employee’s TRIPS claim. The expense claim will be processed and a reimbursement check issued to the claimant.
   G. Travel expenses incurred by a foster parent are documented and submitted for reimbursement on a Travel Expense Claim form (MSC 1297).
   H. All travel expenses must comply with the ODHS out-of-state travel policy, which can be found by clicking here for the ODHS policy website.
   I. Take into consideration the additional time to obtain authorization to travel and approval for travel costs when planning out-of-state travel.
   J. Special considerations apply when a child is in the Department’s care through a Voluntary Placement Agreement or a child or a young adult is in the Department’s care through a Voluntary Custody Agreement. In those situations, the caseworker must inform the parent or legal guardian of out-of-state travel and obtain the parent’s approval prior to the scheduled travel event.

International travel

International travel requires several levels of authorization. Additional information is required, including any travel alerts regarding the desired destination country. It is important to remember that travel alerts can change frequently. Final international travel authorization is communicated through the Diversity and International Affairs
Procedure

I. A child may travel outside the United States for reasons other than reunification with a parent living in another country or for the purpose of adoption of the child. Examples may include educational opportunities, vacations, or religious activities.

   A. For additional procedures about traveling for international education, refer to Section 28 in this chapter.

   B. For additional procedures regarding a child traveling to a foreign country to return to a parent, refer to Chapter 6, Section 5B.

   C. For additional procedures concerning a child traveling to a foreign country for an adoptive placement, refer to Chapter 4, Appendix 4.14, International Travel Procedures for Children in Substitute Care for the purpose of Adoption.

II. In other circumstances when a child in the department’s custody plans to travel outside the United States, submit a request for approval (this can be in a memo or email format), to the Child Welfare program manager, the district manager, and the Diversity and International Affairs unit in Central Office. The request must contain the following information:

   A. A description of the reason for international travel;

   B. Type of travel and destination;

   C. Funding resources and plan for payment of travel and living expenses;

   D. The plan for the child’s supervision while in the foreign country;

   E. Verification from the United States Department of State that the country is safe for international travel (http://travel.state.gov/travel/cis_pa_tw/cis_pa_tw_1168.html);

   F. A description of how the travel relates to the child’s permanency plan in the case plan;

   G. A completed copy of the CW 0002 and 0002a (child’s Consent to Travel form); and

   H. A completed copy of the CF 1293 (if staff are traveling with the child or there is a cost to the agency for the child’s travel).

III. Verify with the travel agency or on http://travel.state.gov/travel/cis_pa_tw/cis/cis_1765.html if any immunization or medical interventions are required or recommended.

IV. After receiving approval from ODHS-CAF administration, obtain a court order that approves the plan for the child or young adult to travel internationally. The caseworker seeks assistance from an assistant attorney general with the Oregon Department of Justice in obtaining this court order. The court order must be translated into the language of the country where the child is traveling. Both copies of the order (English and foreign language) must be presented to the court along with an official certificate of translation (in both English and the foreign language). See ORS 1.150(2) (pleading may be submitted in English and accompanied by a translation into a foreign language that is certified by the translator to be a true and accurate translation). The caseworker must always use ODHS-approved translators to translate the court orders. Complete a CF 0010A to request translation and refer to the Child Welfare transmittal, CW-AR-06-002, dated 6/30/2006.
V. After obtaining all required approvals, document all approvals in the child’s case file.

VI. Coordinate the international travel arrangements with the child’s substitute caregiver, including securing the child’s passport.

VII. Make flight and land travel arrangements only after obtaining all department approvals.

VIII. Develop a plan for regular contact with the child while in the foreign country. The plan requires approval from the supervisor for exception to 30-day face-to-face contact.

Secured Transportation

Secured Transportation is a necessary and helpful service but must be utilized with stewardship and a trauma informed lens. Appropriate times for Secure Transportation for youth in ODHS custody are outlined in our contract with providers and the child or young adult’s circumstances must meet one or more of the following conditions:

I. Have immediate safety and/or behavioral problems

II. Have been missing or in runaway status

III. Need transportation in an emergency (may include after hours) situation from one secure facility to another secure facility

This service is intended for non-medical, non-Medicaid transportation only and should not be utilized for routine medical appointments, visits, or other transportation needs or situations that do not meet criteria outlined above. Secured transportation can only be used for medical appointments if there is an immediate safety need for the child or young adult.

Procedure

I. Caseworker identifies need for Secure Transport Services
   A. Immediate Safety Issues or Behavioral Problems.
   B. Is in ‘runaway’ status.
   C. Needs transportation in an emergency situation from one secure facility to another.

II. Caseworker staffs with Supervisor for approval to utilize this service.

III. Complete request form 2749
   A. If Secured transportation services are needed to transport a youth out of the state of Oregon, prior authorization is needed from the contract administrator and approval from ICPC (Interstate Compact for the Placement of Children). Requests for out of state transportation will need to include a copy of this form and reason for secured transportation need emailed to CW-Secured Transportation CWSecure.Transport@ODHSoha.state.or.us requesting approval from the contract administrator and coordination with ICPC at Oregon.ICPC@ODHSoha.state.or.us

IV. Caseworker calls provider to make arrangements and provide details for the transport.
   A. Case Aid may assist if they have necessary information about the child and transportation need.
V. Completed form is FAXED to secured transportation provider and an email copy is sent to CW-Secured Transportation email box (CWSecure.Transport@ODHSoha.state.or.us)

A. If transportation arrangements are being made outside of regular business hours or on the weekends and there is not access to the request form, the request form MUST be submitted to the contractor and the Secured Transportation email box by the end of the following business day.

VI. Secure Transportation provider (Contractor) completes requested transportation services and completes the contractor section of the request form documenting the transport. The contractor will them submit the documents through the already established process, adding a copy of the completed request form to their invoice and including the CW-Secured transportation email box to their invoice submission. The Invoice will be processed utilizing already established process and completed through Office of Financial Services.

VII. Contract Administrator or designee will monitor Secured Transportation email box, will track request forms and provide other oversight of the process, utilization of services, other data collection, and answering questions.

Youth Transitions

There are a variety of programs, services and contracted Independent Living Program (ILP) providers available to help transition youth from foster care to interdependent adulthood. The goals of these programs and services are to assist youth to:

I. Transition to interdependent living and adulthood without reliance on public assistance programs,

II. Receive the education, training and services necessary to obtain employment,

III. Prepare for and enter post-secondary training and education institutions,

IV. Gain resilience,

V. Gain experience exercising self-determination,

VI. Build social capital during the process, and

VII. Develop the personal life management skills necessary to function interdependently and successfully transition to adulthood.

Note:

Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff can only run reports for youth in the legal custody of ODHS because of the contractual relationship with the credit bureaus. However, staff is still able to assist caseworkers and Independent Living Program (ILP) providers with information on how to best resolve credit issues for youth in voluntary custody.

Identifying and Correcting Consumer Credit Issues

Procedure

Under federal law, ODHS is required to provide credit reports to youth in the legal custody of ODHS. The process begins at age 14 and continues annually until the youth’s case is dismissed. The law requires ODHS to help youth identify and resolve any discrepancies. ODHS centralized Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff partner with the youth or young adult’s caseworkers and ILP workers to comply with this law.

Foster Care and Youth Transitions have contracts with each of the three credit bureaus. This allows ODHS to process credit reports and receive the results instantly. If problems arise, Foster Care and Youth Transitions also have contacts associated with the credit bureau that allows for quick resolution. to help youth resolve any credit report issues identified in most cases, Foster Care and Youth Transitions rely on the caseworkers and local district offices for information, documentation, and support.

Below is the procedure expected of both Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff and the caseworker. The procedure is to comply with federal law.

Youth Transitions Programs Staff Responsibilities

Before Running The Report
Each month, the Child Welfare electronic information system generates a report that lists youth who turned 14-20 in the previous month.

I. Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff separate the report into lists and automatically run reports for 14- to 17-year-old youth in legal custody. (Custody is verified through Child Welfare electronic information system documents). Youth fall into one of the categories below:
   A. Recently turned 14 to 17 years old.
   B. Recently turned 18 years old.
   C. Recently turned 19 years old.
   D. Recently turned 20 years old.

II. For the list of youth who recently turned 14 to 17 years old, Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff verify those youth are in the legal custody of ODHS.
   A. The documentation that confirms legal custody must be readily available in case of a credit bureau audit.
   B. The names of those youth confirmed to be in the legal custody of ODHS are uploaded to the websites for Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion.

I. For those 18 and older, Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff lets caseworkers know of the birthday and the option to run the report. A Credit Authorization form (CF 0036) must be completed and signed by the youth before the report is run.
   A. Alternatively, the caseworker can help the youth run the report on their own.
   B. Young adults who run reports on their own and encounter problems can contact ODHS for help to resolve those issues.

II. For those under the age of 14 and in the legal custody of ODHS, Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff can run reports upon request of a caseworker who has a substantial concern (i.e., more than just a hunch) that the youth’s credit has been compromised.

After Running The Report

I. Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff review reports before they are sent to the caseworkers with instructions.
   A. There are three categories of instructions:
      1. No indication of a poor credit rating (no record found).
      2. Indication that there was an attempt to open a line of credit.
      3. Serious concerns such as: collections, fraud, or an open line of credit that may not have been opened by the youth.
   B. Independent Living Program (ILP) providers may:
      1. Inquire whether reports are run,
      2. Submit authorization forms on the youth’s behalf, and
3. Ask general questions of Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff. However, credit reports and any information in those reports can only be released to the caseworker.

Caseworker Responsibility

Before Running The Report

I. Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff may contact the caseworker to verify the youth is still in ODHS legal custody. In some instances, they can ask for documentation.

II. Whenever possible, caseworkers should verify they have a copy of the youth’s Social Security card and birth certificate. (These are the documents required by the credit bureaus to resolve credit issues.)

After The Report is Run

I. The caseworker:
   A. Receives a list of instructions and a link to a guide with information for youth about credit
   B. Reviews the guide before they share the credit report results with the youth, and
   C. Talk with the youth about the importance of maintaining good credit.

II. If the report shows there are open accounts not sent to collections, the caseworker verifies with the youth that the youth opened the account.

III. The caseworkers print two copies of the reports:
   A. One report is given to the youth, and
   B. The youth signs the other report. The signed report is uploaded into the Child Welfare electronic information system, within 30 to 45 days. In the system, it goes into the File Cabinet, Fiscal-Other using the following format to describe the document:
      1. #_Credit Bureau Name-Youth’s initials_Date.pdf.
         (Example: Dist 3_Experian-AMK_08-27-18.pdf)

IV. The caseworkers talk with the youth about what it means to have good credit and the importance of maintaining good credit. If you need guidance, please use this link for guidance and information. The youth’s signature validates ODHS has spoken with the youth about credit, regardless of whether there is a record found.

V. If the youth is unable to sign or understand the report because of physical, intellectual or developmental disabilities, the caseworker signs, dates and notes the youth’s inability to sign. After that is done, the caseworker uploads the report the same as if the youth had signed the report.

VI. If the youth is on the run, the caseworker keeps the report for the next time they meet with the youth. If the case is dismissed before the youth can sign the report, the caseworker notes this.

VII. Please contact Foster Care and Youth Transitions staff at ilp.central@dhssoha.state.or.us with a subject line of Credit Report Inquiry if you have questions about talking to youth about credit reports or other credit.
Comprehensive Transition Plan

Procedure

A Comprehensive Transition Plan (CTP) is a written plan that addresses several domains:

I. Personal Growth and Social Development;

II. Family Support and Healthy Relationships including cultural and community connections;

III. Health Education and Risk Prevention;

IV. Education;

V. Employment/Career Preparation;

VI. Money Management, Transportation and Other Life Skills; and

VII. Housing and Home Management.

Note:

OAR 413-010-0180(1)(L) states each child in the legal custody of ODHS has the following rights: “To be involved, in accordance with their age and ability and with the law, in making major decisions that affect their life, to participate in the development of their case plan, permanency plan, and comprehensive transition plan and to discuss their views about the plans with the judge;”.

The CTP outlines what a youth needs to successfully transition to adulthood and live interdependently:

A. Transition goals,

B. Action steps,

C. Services, and

D. Supports.

I. Begin thinking about and preparing youth for transition planning at age 13 or older.

II. Begin formal introduction of age and developmentally appropriate transition planning with a youth at age 14.

III. Use the Transition Readiness Discussion Guide (form CE 0069D, Step 1) and the Youth Assessment Summary (form CE 0069, Step 2) as tools for evaluating a youth’s knowledge, skills and abilities:

A. The Discussion Guide may be found on the Forms Directory. Review in hard-copy format with the:
   1. Youth,
   2. Caseworker, or
   3. ILP Provider (if enrolled for ILP services).

B. Use the Discussion Guide to determine a youth’s strengths and needs to develop and use life skills. An extended discussion format is an opportunity for caseworkers or providers to:
   1. Strategically engage youth in motivational interviewing,
2. Obtain a glimpse into the youth’s mental health status, and
3. Understand trauma factors that may affect the youth’s engagement. This includes follow-through on activities or learning objectives.

C. Use the Youth Assessment Summary (YAS) to identify the stage of a youth’s skill development. To assist with appropriate identification of a youth’s stage, a matrix with definitions for each stage is listed below and on page 2 of the CE 0069 form.

D. If the youth has been referred to ILP, Steps 1-3 (Transition Readiness Discussion Guide, Youth Assessment Summary and draft Youth/Comprehensive Transition Plan) are completed in the first 90 days by the ILP provider.

IV. Review the purpose of the Discussion Guide with the youth. Encourage active participation in planning for their transition to adulthood. Explain to the youth the intent of the Discussion Guide is to build rapport while you get a global sense of their readiness and priorities. The guide determines:

A. The youth’s strengths, and

B. Knowledge and areas the youth may need more support to gain the life skills necessary to successfully transition to adult living.

1. Go through the Transition Readiness Discussion Guide (CE 0069D, Step 1) with the youth over multiple meetings. Some questions in some domains may not apply or may be sensitive topics for some youth. So long as you get a sense of the relevance of each domain in transition planning efforts with the youth you may:
   - Re-phrase,
   - Skip, or
   - Add questions as needed.

2. Consider:
   - What is the substitute caregiver’s opinion of the youth’s skills?
   - What are the youth’s strengths?
   - What areas need improvement?

Note:

Before completing the YAS (CE 0069, Step 1), you may find it helpful to review the IL Services Planning Checklist (CF 0069b, Step 4). The Planning Checklist can serve as a reminder of the types of skills and knowledge a youth should possess in each domain. You will have a list from which to gauge the depth of a youth’s knowledge.

V. Complete the Youth Assessment Summary (CE 0069, Step 2). This will identify which stage the youth seems to be in:
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Stage I Awareness</th>
<th>Stage II Learning</th>
<th>Stage III Doing</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>First circle</td>
<td>Has minimal information about this topic area.</td>
<td>Has started gaining knowledge and developing new skills in this area.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Second circle</td>
<td>Has basic information about this topic area. Has some understanding of why it is important.</td>
<td>Has basic knowledge and skills in this area. Needs further opportunities to practice and strengthen most skills.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Third circle</td>
<td>Has solid information about this topic. Understands why it is important but has not started developing knowledge or skills.</td>
<td>Has solid knowledge and skills in this area but has not started applying these in real-life settings or activities.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

VI. The CE 0069 includes space to indicate current priorities you may have heard the youth indicate they would like to work on in the next six months. Their work may be solo, with ILP help, with help from the caregiver, caseworker, school, or clubs, etc. Not every domain must be worked on within a six-month period. This is also where you might note relevant additional information that would serve as a reminder when you move to the youth’s Transition Plan. Some domains may be less relevant for the youth at this time (for example, there may be developmental or circumstantial factors).

VII. Completing the Youth Assessment Summary may or may not involve input from the youth. Ideally, the youth’s involvement will inform the transition planning process. In addition, it will empower the youth to recognize areas:

A. Where they are doing well, and
B. Where they need support, knowledge or practice to gain skills.

If a youth does not agree with your assessment of their abilities, use the IL Services Planning Checklist to remind them of skills and knowledge necessary in each domain.

VIII. Update the Youth Assessment Summary every six months to inform the Comprehensive Transition Plan. To complete, consider progress the youth has made overall in increasing readiness, as indicated by:

A. Goals accomplished,
B. The Comprehensive Transition Plan (CE 0069a, Step 3),
C. IL Services Planning Checklist (CE 0069b, Step 4),
D. Monthly reports, and
E. Other indicators.

You may move the youth to a higher circle within a stage or move them to the next stage due to progress.
Once the youth has moved to the next stage in a domain, do not move them back to a previous stage, even if there was no progress within the stage. The stage represents whether a youth has demonstrated the capacity to learn new skills (Stage II) or apply skills (Stage III), even if they are not currently doing so. However, it may be appropriate to record the status at a lower circle within the stage due to normal setbacks that may be limiting progress since the last update.

Note:

With the passage of the federal legislation “Preventing Sex Trafficking and Strengthening Families Act” (HR 4980), the child has the option to choose up to two additional members participate in the case planning team. See OAR 413-040-0010(3)(c).

Note:

Refer to the Transition Plan as the Youth Transition Plan until a formal YDM or planning meeting has occurred. Once the team of supportive adults has met and assisted the youth to finalize the youth’s plan, the plan is then referred to as a Comprehensive Transition Plan.

Develop the Comprehensive Transition Plan (CE 0069a, Step 3)

I. Once the Discussion Guide and Youth Assessment Summary are complete, begin the process of helping the youth draft a Youth Transition Plan (YTP). The YTP should be completed before the Comprehensive Transition Plan Meeting which could also be a segment of a Youth Decision Meeting (YDM) (see Chapter 4, Section 6, Conduct Facilitated Meetings section of the Procedure Manual).

II. Set meaningful goals with youth for the priority areas, with more flexibility for lower-priority domains. If the child or young adult does not wish to focus on a particular domain over the next six months, document enough to explain:
   A. If or when work would start on that domain in the future, and
   B. How this decision was made.

III. Implement the Youth Transition Plan Meeting:
   A. To meet policy requirements to involve youth in the planning process, and
   B. Incorporate Positive Youth Development (PYD) principals into practice, ensuring the youth is viewed and treated as a valued member of the planning team.

   The YDM is a facilitated meeting. It is held with the intent to empower the youth to plan for their interdependence within their community and a successful transition to adulthood.

IV. The Youth Transition Plan is drafted with the youth before the Comprehensive Transition Plan Meeting or the youth decision meeting YDM. The caseworker should work with the youth on goals and objectives ahead of time. This step will help prepare the youth to share their goals and voice their opinions or suggestions during the YDM or transition planning meeting. Finalize the plan at the Comprehensive Transition Plan meeting or YDM with the remaining team members.

V. Refer to Chapter 4, Section 6, Conduct Facilitated Meetings, for detailed procedures on arranging a meeting.
VI. Participants in the YDM or Transition Planning meeting include:
   A. Youth,
   B. ILP provider (if youth is enrolled for services),
   C. Caseworker,
   D. Youth’s parents, whenever appropriate,
   E. Youth’s substitute caregiver,
   F. Service providers identified as important in helping the youth achieve their goals,
   G. Other participants, which may include the youth’s attorney or CASA, and
   H. At the option of the youth, up to two additional members chosen by them as described in OAR 413-040-0010(3)(c).

VII. To ensure the critical tasks of the meeting are accomplished, coordinate details with the:
   A. Youth (Contact the youth either in person or by phone to coordinate the details of the youth’s planning meeting),
   B. ILP provider (if the youth is participating in contracted ILP services), and
   C. Meeting facilitator (if available).

VIII. As you prepare for the meeting, ensure that:
   A. The youth plays a central role in planning for and participating in the meeting.
   B. You had the youth prepare for the meeting in terms of speaking for themselves. You helped the youth start planning for the future concerning:
      1. Personal Growth and Social Development;
      2. Family Support and Healthy Relationships including cultural and community connections;
      3. Health Education and Risk Prevention;
      4. Education;
      5. Employment/Career Preparation;
      6. Money Management, Transportation and Other Life Skills; and
   C. Housing and Home Management You are sensitive to a youth’s special needs. Examples are:
      1. A developmental or learning disability,
      2. Mental health needs, and
      4. Cultural considerations and language accommodations.
   D. You had the youth help to identify and invite other supportive adults or peers who can and will support or help achieve the youth’s goals.
   E. You gave the youth clear expectations and explained the process of the meeting.
   F. You have assisted the youth to invite all safe/appropriate individuals the youth has identified to help in this process.

G. The meeting is scheduled by or with the youth at a convenient time for all to participate.

H. There is a lead person to facilitate the meeting.

I. Someone is identified to take responsibility to complete or add details to the transition plan (CF 0069a).

J. The meeting is conducted using a positive youth development approach. (It is the caseworker’s responsibility to support and empower the youth to articulate their goals in a safe and supportive atmosphere.)

K. You helped the youth craft a transition plan and know of the youth’s plans and goals in advance of the meeting.

L. The youth provides input on which person or what agency they believe can best provide aid toward achieving their goals.

M. The youth understands the meeting is an opportunity to advise:

   1. The caseworker,
   2. Other service providers, and
   3. Substitute caregivers and other significant adults.

The youth will be advising these adults about their goals and plans for the future regarding:

   1. Personal Growth and Social Development;
   2. Family Support and Healthy Relationships including cultural and community connections;
   3. Health Education and Risk Prevention;
   4. Education;
   5. Employment/Career Preparation;
   6. Money Management, Transportation and Other Life Skills; and

N. Housing and Home Management The youth provides input on what and who they feel can be most helpful or can help achieve their goals.

O. Decisions are made on services from:

   1. The ILP provider,
   2. ODHS, and
   3. Other community partners or youth-serving agencies.

Also determine and document what life skills are being taught in the youth’s placement.

P. The youth must agree to the Comprehensive Transition Plan, the plan is signed by each person who participated in the planning meeting, and each team member receives a copy of the completed Comprehensive Transition Plan (CTP):

   1. The caseworker’s copy is scanned and filed in the youth’s case file Narratives/Assessment section and documented in the CW data system. As a reminder, all identified youth services should be included in the youth’s case plan.
   2. The youth should place a copy in their FYI Binder, Court/Legal tab (if available) or other filing system.
3. The ILP provider (if the youth is participating in contracted ILP services) must keep a copy for the program’s files.

IX. If a youth is placed in another state through the ICPC, and the caseworker is unable to complete the transition planning process as described:

   A. The worker remains responsible to work with the receiving state and with the youth to develop a CTP.

X. Regularly monitor the CTP and make reasonable efforts to ensure timely and appropriate services are made available. The CTP is a living document. It will likely change several times as the youth moves toward adulthood. The caseworker is responsible for regular review and update of the goals and services of the plan during the following contacts:

   A. Regular monthly, face-to-face contacts. Remind the youth of their transition goals. Ask the youth:

      1. What progress has been made toward achieving those goals, and
      2. If they feel changes or updates to the plan are needed. Also determine with the youth if additional supports are necessary for the youth to achieve their goals.

   B. With the youth during the 90-day case plan review, you must review and document, in the Child Welfare electronic information system, the following:

      1. The progress in achieving the goals of the transition plan,
      2. Any barriers, and plans to address the barriers,
      3. Any changes in the transition plan made with the youth, and
      4. Notification to service providers of changes to the CTP.

Note:

Use the IL Services Planning Checklist (CF 0069b, Step 4) to identify skills the youth may need help with to achieve their goals. If you are unsure where to find resources for teaching the skill(s) a curriculum Resource List (Step 4a) is available from the ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us.

Completion of a Benchmark Review

I. A Benchmark Review of the Comprehensive Transition Plan is a meeting the caseworker must convene six months before a youth’s 18th birthday. The Benchmark Review documents the youth and ODHS have a plan for the adult decisions which need to be made after the legal age of 18, and options for accessing services as a young adult are offered.

Note: Services may include Adult DD Services, Vocational Rehabilitation Services, Housing Services, Tribal Nation Services, Social Services Programs, etc.

   A. The meeting must include the youth (The youth plays a central role in the meeting appropriate to their developmental ability.), and may include a parent or guardian of the youth, substitute caregiver, Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA), the attorney for the youth, service providers, and others the youth determines are important to the meeting including, at the option of the youth, two additional members of the case planning team selected by the youth as described in OAR 413-040-0010 (3)(c).

   B. At the meeting, the following determinations are to be made with the youth after the age of 18:
1. The plan to meet life skills development needs:
   ■ Some areas have already been addressed in the previous CTPs. However, the Benchmark Review helps youth seriously contemplate existing goals and plan for their future after the age of 18, and 90 days before case closure. The questions the Benchmark Review is intended to answer are whether the youth is:
     (1) On track to achieve those goals, and
     (2) Prepared for the transition out of foster care to adult living:
       (i) Is the youth resilient and self-sufficient? If not, how is the youth going to learn the skills necessary to become resilient and self-sufficient?
       (ii) What types of normative experiences has the youth been provided related to personal interests and things that matter to them? Specifically:
         (a) After-school activities,
         (b) Sleepovers,
         (c) Employment,
         (d) Volunteerism,
         (e) Advocating for self or others in foster care, etc.
       (iii) What opportunities has the youth been provided, and/or needs provided to explore their culture and/or self-identity?
       (iv) What types of skills and abilities does the youth need in the transition to adulthood?
       (v) If the youth is not in a program with an ILP contracted provider, who will be working with them to gain necessary skills? Examples are:
         (a) The resource parent,
         (b) Residential treatment program,
         (c) Schools,
         (d) Mentor,
         (e) Coach, etc.

2. Supportive relationships and social capital:
   ■ Discuss with the youth who they:
     (1) Call for support,
     (2) Spend holidays with, or
     (3) Depend on.

3. Determine if the youth believes those people will be there for them in the future.
   ■ Help the youth determine who may be available for them in the future. Help the youth craft a plan to build social capital or strengthen existing relationships.
   ■ The FosterClub Permanency Pact is a good example of efforts to sustain an ongoing connection between a youth and supportive adult. These supportive relationships can include:

1. Relationships with adults that the youth has a current connection with, or
2. A prior relationship with a supportive adult that the youth would like to re-establish.
3. Download a free PDF of this publication.

4. The identification of cultural and community resources. Examples are:
   - Where to get local food boxes,
   - Money orders, and
   - Apply for food stamps, etc.
   - Where to locate cultural services and supports

5. Health (both physical and mental health):
   - An agreement on people with decision-making authority for health and mental health services. This conversation must also include a discussion about the purpose of a health care representative. The youth must have an option to:
     1. List a health care representative. Also, be offered the assistance necessary to complete an Oregon Advanced Directive.
     2. To get materials or information to assist with the conversation, call 800-422-4805 or go to oregonhealthdecisions.org.
   - Ensure the youth has identified a health, mental health (if needed) and dental provider, and has all contact information for their providers. If not, provide assistance to the youth in establishing any needed on-going care. Discuss the youth’s most recent medical and dental visits, a plan to maintain regular check-ups, and ensure the youth understands how to and are confident to schedule their own appointments.
   - Discuss the Former Foster Care Youth (FFCY) Medical Program. Discuss with the youth the eligibility criteria for receiving Medicaid coverage to age 26.

6. Education needs and goal:
   - Agreement on the person with decision-making authority for education. Discuss with the youth the role and responsibilities required of a person with decision-making authority. Help the youth determine who should oversee the youth’s records, Individualized Education Program (IEP), etc.
   - Determine whether there are any special education needs to consider. Does the youth have a current disabilities assessment that can transfer to college with the youth?
   - Ensure the youth is informed of their:
     1. Post-secondary options, and
     2. Financial aid available to assist with the costs of attending college or vocational training.
Has the youth been given the option to attend the annual DREAM Conference? Or, has the youth had opportunities to visit colleges and vocational schools while they are still in high school? Additional details on the DREAM Conference and other summer teen events can be found at the ODHS ILP website, Events for Teens page here.

7. The plan for employment, continued academic or vocational education or specialized training. Consider the following questions to help the youth craft a plan:

- Does the youth know what career they are interested in pursuing?
- Does the youth require training?
- Does the youth have essential documents to obtain legal employment? Examples are: Social Security card, birth certificate, driver license or Oregon ID card.
- Have there been any career development opportunities to help with these decisions? Examples are:
  1. Job shadowing,
  2. Internships,
  3. Volunteer opportunities, or
  4. Apprenticeships.
- Has the youth had other opportunities to visit colleges and vocational schools, so they can thoroughly explore career choices?

8. The plan for transportation, money management and other life skills:

- Transportation:
  1. Determine how the youth will get to appointments, school or work. If the youth does not yet have a driver’s license, discuss their plan to obtain it. This includes the importance and benefits of completing a driver education course.
  2. Determine if the youth plans to own a car. If so, ensure the youth has a plan about how to pay for auto insurance and vehicle maintenance.
  3. The youth may save on insurance costs if they take a driver’s safety course. ODHS is working with the following to help youth with the cost of driver’s education courses as they gain independence and transition to adulthood:
      (i) Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT), and
      (ii) Driver & Motor Vehicle Services (DMV). See section 33 for additional details.

- Money Management:
  1. Financial stability- youth knows how to open and has the appropriate documentation to open a bank account.
  2. Youth has a current copy and understands how to read a credit report.

- Identity Theft:
  1. Youth has a basic understanding of how to develop and live on a budget.
  2. Youth is saving money or has a future plan and understands the importance of saving money for their transition to interdependence.

(3) Youth knows how to track savings, checking or credit card balances.

(4) Youth understands income taxes and knows how to do them or where to go to ask for assistance to complete.

- Miscellaneous Life Skills:

  (1) Youth has and knows how to get their important legal documents.

  (2) Youth understands the meaning of Legal Issues and where to locate assistance.

  (3) Youth is able to use Social Media responsibly.

  (4) The youth understands the importance of and has a Filing system.

  (5) The youth knows how to register to vote and register for selective service.

9. An arrangement for suitable and sustainable housing:

- Ensure the youth understands the various housing options available in the local community (see Appendix 5.13).

- If the youth plans on living in a college dorm or other residential academic or vocational program, help them craft a plan to cover times when the youth may be on a break from college or a vocational program.

- Determine if the youth will need to or plans to access financial support for housing. Explain the available resources (IL Housing Subsidy, Chafee Housing, Foster Youth Independence Vouchers, Family Unity Program Youth Vouchers, etc.) and assist youth to apply for the appropriate program, if needed.

- Determine, with the youth, if they wish to remain in substitute care. Go over the Household Guidelines and Expectations document and discuss it with the youth (Appendix 5.14). If the youth wishes to remain in substitute care, explain the expectations for young adults who remain in care after age 18. In order to claim Title IV-E funds, the youth must:

  (1) Be completing secondary education or in a program leading to an equivalent credential;

  (2) Be enrolled in an institution that provides post-secondary or vocational education;

  (3) Be participating in a program or activity designed to promote or remove barriers to employment;

  (4) Be employed for at least 80 hours per month;

  (5) Have updated information on their condition maintained in the youth’s case plan, if their medical condition makes them incapable of engaging in the above activities; or

  (6) Have an Exception to Policy (CE88) requested and approved by both the district manager (or designee) and the Foster Care and Youth Transitions and the Treatment Services manager at Central Office.

- If the plan is to terminate custody, the caseworker must assist the youth to craft a plan for housing once they leave foster care. The plan must ensure that terminating wardship is not likely to result in homelessness.

C. The caseworker must provide a youth with all Young Adult Transitional options available for continued ODHS support after the age of 18, eligibility requirements for all programs within the various options, and assist the youth with transitioning to the support of their choice. This includes:

1. Extended foster care through the care and custody of ODHS Child Welfare up to the youth’s 21st birthday;
2. Voluntary Family Support Services – ILP (FSS-ILP) case; or
3. Aftercare services through self-referral to the youth’s local ILP program (no open ODHS CW case).

D. The caseworker must document determinations made at this meeting on the Comprehensive Transition Plan (form CF 0069a). The plan must be signed by:

1. The youth (when developmentally appropriate),
2. The caseworker, and
3. Other persons attending the meeting.

E. The caseworker’s supervisor must review and acknowledge the completion of the Benchmark Review of the CTP in the Child Welfare electronic information system’s case notes.

F. Another review of the determinations and plans made during the Benchmark Review is conducted within 90 days before the youth is dismissed from ODHS care. The caseworker must review the determinations and plans made during the initial Benchmark Review, reviews progress made to date and makes necessary adjustments to the plan with:

1. The youth, and
2. If identified, the two additional members of the case planning team chosen by the youth.

II. In addition to the Discussion Guide, Youth Assessment Summary and other supporting documentation, to allow the youth to successfully transition to adulthood, the caseworker must:

A. Provide timely notice to the youth of court dates, assist with transportation, and encourage court attendance;

B. Include the youth in case planning and case review meetings and ensure they play a key role in the process;

C. Promote participation in extracurricular activities, including:

1. Assisting in identifying appropriate activities, and
2. Identifying financial assistance options.

D. Ensure the youth receives appropriate:

1. Medical,
2. Mental health,
3. Dental,
4. Educational services.

Note: If the youth leaves Oregon, or resides in another state (the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children, or ICPC), use this link. This website contains a list of state ILP coordinators and a link to many of the state’s websites for service details. The local ILP coordinator will be able to provide information on that state’s ILP referral process and services. Services differ from state to state.

Court Review of the Comprehensive Transition Plan and Benchmark Review

I. The caseworker must provide a copy of the CTP to the court at the next scheduled permanency hearing. This includes documentation of determinations made during the Benchmark Review.

II. The court will review:

1. The youth’s plan,
2. Opportunities for personal growth and social development,
3. Needs and goals for supportive relationships, cultural and community connections,
4. Physical and mental health,
5. Education,
6. Employment/Career preparation
7. Housing sustainability in a stable living environment where the youth will not be likely to become homeless due to dismissing the case.

A. The plans will be reviewed at:

1. Yearly permanency review by the court,
2. Six-month Citizen Review Board (CRB) reviews, and
3. Other court hearings (perhaps).

B. The court (at the yearly permanency review) and CRB must determine and make findings regarding:

1. Whether the plan is adequate to ensure the youth’s successful transition to adulthood,
2. Whether ODHS has offered appropriate services pursuant to the plans, and
3. Whether ODHS has involved the youth in the development of the plan.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Review the caseworker’s reports to the court and Citizen Review Board to ensure the CTP or Benchmark Review is complete and included.

II. As part of the 90-day case plan review, include a review of the CTP or Benchmark Review.

A. Acknowledge the completion in the Child Welfare electronic information system’s case notes.

III. Ensure caseworkers working with youth are familiar with:

A. Positive youth development principles, and
B. Motivational interviewing techniques.
IV. Ensure caseworkers are aware of OAR 413-020-0100 to 0170, Guardian and Legal Custodian Consents, as it relates to application for driver training, permits and licenses.

V. Ensure caseworkers are trained to use the:
   A. Discussion Guide, and
   B. Youth Assessment Summary.

VI. Ensure all caseworkers complete or have completed the Transition Planning computer-based training (CBT) available on iLearn.

Independent Living Life Skills Services

In Oregon, the federal Chafee Foster Care Program for Successful Transition to Adulthood is referred to as the Independent Living Program (ILP). Services provided under Oregon’s ILP include:

I. Skill building services, which may include the following:
   A. Instruction in basic living skills such as money management, home management, consumer skills, legal issues, parenting, health care, access to community resources, employment readiness, transportation, educational assistance, and housing options;
   B. Educational and vocational training support such as high school diploma or GED preparation, post-secondary education and academic support, job readiness, and job search assistance and placement programs;
   C. Training, workshops and conferences, individual and group skills building for improved self-esteem and self-confidence, self-determination, and interpersonal and social skills training and development; and
   D. Promote permanence through the development of healthy relationships, cultural connections, community networks and supports to transition successfully to interdependence and adulthood.

II. Two housing funding programs (the Independent Living Housing Subsidy and Chafee Housing), including access to transitional living programs (TLP),

III. Education and training vouchers or grants (ETV or ETG) to provide assistance with the costs of a post-secondary education or training program,

IV. Youth Transition discretionary funds to provide limited financial assistance in meeting the transition goals to interdependence and adulthood,

V. Credit Reports, and

VI. Driver education course fees.

Procedures For Contracted Life Skills Training

The tiered ILP model of service allows the Contractor to implement trauma informed, age and developmentally appropriate services to the youth or young adult, and the different ILP tiers are designed to allow for developmentally appropriate skills as a Youth or Young Adult ages and move through the tiers, as indicated below:
• Tier 1 – IL Prep: Between July 1, 2021-July 1, 2022 this program is only available in the following Districts: 1, 2, 3, 4, 9 and 11. Services will be available statewide beginning 7/1/2022. The Tier 1 – IL Prep includes ages 14 and 15, and may include youth age 16 if the youth is needing to gain a basic awareness and knowledge in a variety of skill areas. Services are provided in a group setting, twice a month, and focus on the soft skills needed to be successful at the next level of ILP services. Tier 1 values the participation and support of the caregiver and Child Welfare or Tribal Nation’s caseworker in supporting and engaging the youth in services and skill attainment. The Tier 1: Independent Living Prep Program Referral Form is filled out by the caseworker and the Tier 1: IL Prep Youth Skills Assessment on behalf of the youth is completed by the caregiver or the caseworker (whomever knows the youth better) and is submitted together with the referral.

• Tier 2 – Independent Living Program: includes ages 16 through 20. This level is intended to help youth and young adults focus on the more tangible skills needed for adulthood. Transition planning becomes a more integral component of the process and guides the service provision. Skill building becomes more individualized and occurs during monthly one-on-one meetings and group sessions quarterly between the ILP staff and youth or young adult. The caseworker completes the ILP referral form (CF80-see “V” for complete procedure).

• Tier 2A – Independent Living Plus: Between July 1, 2021-July 1, 2022 this program is only available in the following districts: 2 (NAFY only), 3,5,15 and 16. Services will be available statewide beginning 7/1/2022. Tier 2A – Independent Living Plus, for ages 16 to 20, is a sub-level of Tier 2. This level provides a curriculum which incorporates elements used in the evidence-supported “My Life” model developed at Portland State University, which is listed on the California Evidence-Based Clearinghouse for Child Welfare. The IL Plus model focuses on building foster youth self-determination skills, such as youth-driven goal identification, problem solving, and stress management. The evidence supported model was specifically designed for multi-system involved youth (Wrap Services, IEP, OYA, OVRS, I/DD Services, among others) and includes accommodation for needs such as developmental disability, and emotional or behavioral issues. The contractor shall see the youth a minimum of twice a month, one on one and face-to-face. The one on one, face-to-face meetings shall last approximately 1.5 to 2 hours. This is a time limited, intensive service designed to last about one year and then the young person will transition to Tier 2, or if age appropriate, Tier 3.

• Tier 3 – Independent Living Supports is for ages 21 through 23. This level aims to support Young Adults who are either exiting foster care, or no longer in foster care, to transition to interdependent living in their community. This tier is similar to regular ILP in terms of providing information and facilitating service access and available funds (examples: Chafee Housing, Discretionary Funds, and ETV), but with fewer contact requirements, and less formal Life Skills Assessment and Transition Planning documentation. The contractor is required to see the young adult face-to-face at least once every two months and for the months in between they are checking in with the individual using the mode of communication most preferred for the young adult. The Young Adult will take the lead in determining the level of support needed. The young adult will self-refer to their local ILP Program and will not have an open Child Welfare case.

I. Eligibility: The following youth are eligible for contracted life skills training:

   A. A youth age 14 or older (see above for Tier information) in any state or federally recognized tribal nation’s child welfare-provided substitute care; or

   B. A young person residing in Oregon who was in any state or federally recognized tribal nation’s child welfare-provided Substitute care for at least 180 days after the age of 13, and the youth exited
II. Referral for Services: A youth must be referred to a contracted ILP provider at age 16 but has the right to refuse services.

A. Discuss the benefits of the program with the youth before making a referral.
   1. ILP providers assist youth to prepare for a successful transition to adulthood, goal setting, life skills training, college tours, and can access supportive funding when appropriate.
   2. ILP providers will transport and supervise youth during the ILP summer teen events.
   3. By participating in ILP, youth will meet other youth from similar backgrounds, and experiences.
   4. ILP providers will be able to inform youth of additional services for which they may qualify. This includes:
      - Credit reports,
      - Chafee ETG,
      - Oregon Health Plan (OHP) coverage to age 26, and
      - ILP housing programs, etc.

B. Explain the referral process to the youth. Inform the youth they will receive a call or a letter from the ILP provider for an intake meeting. Some counties require orientation before enrollment. Advise the youth who the ILP provider will be. This helps the ILP provider when making the initial contact with the youth.

C. If the youth refuses ILP services, review the Services Availability letter (Appendix 5.15) with the youth. Obtain the youth’s signature. Provide the youth a copy, and file the letter in the Child Welfare electronic information system. At this point, you will need to assist the youth with gaining life skills detailed in the Procedures for Life Skills Training Provided by ODHS section below.

III. Complete the ILP Referral form appropriate to the Tier the youth or young adult is referred to (see Tier information above for details). Make sure the form is complete before you submit it to the provider. Attach the most current copy of the youth’s:

   A. Tier 1: IL Prep Youth Skills Assessment (Tier 1 only)
   B. Tiers 2 and 3: Transition Readiness Discussion Guide,
   C. Tiers 2 and 3: Youth Assessment Summary, and
   D. Tiers 2 and 3: Comprehensive Transition Plan, if available.
   E. Tier 2A, IL Plus service referral requires additional documentation of the youth’s need for more intensive services. You must consult with the ILP Provider to determine if the youth meets the criteria for IL Plus services.

   Place a copy in the Child Welfare electronic information system and file under the Case Administrative Activity section.

IV. Submit the completed, Tier specific ILP Referral form to the ILP provider serving the area where the youth resides. Refer to ILP referral instructions (form CF 0080 instructions) for the list of providers and service areas.

A. You will receive a referral confirmation from the provider within five working days. File with the CF 0080 in the case file under the Case Administrative Activity section and the Child Welfare electronic information system. If you do not receive the confirmation within five working days, contact the ILP provider to determine if the youth has been accepted to the program.

B. The youth may be placed on a waiting list.

1. Some ILP Providers allow a youth on the waiting list to participate in ILP group activities. The youth will not officially enroll in services but may benefit from group sessions. ODHS will remain responsible for the CTP and managing other appropriate life skills services.

2. When the CTP has been developed, the caseworker or other assigned Child Welfare staff notifies ILP.Central@dhsoha.state.or.us. The ILP Desk will:
   - Open the most appropriate service type from the dropdown list in the Child Welfare electronic information system to describe the independent living type services being provided by or facilitated by the Department.
   - To aid the ILP Desk in making an appropriate selection, see the service options in the Department’s electronic system under ILP Life Skills – Unpaid. Assist the ILP Desk to select an appropriate Srvc Type med Desc. More than one service may be opened, if more than one service type is needed to adequately reflect services being provided to the youth.
   - Notify the ILP Desk once the youth has been accepted to an ILP.

3. Remember to review the CTP during face-to-face contacts with the youth and during 90-day case reviews. Also, update the CTP with the youth at least once every six months.

V. Once the provider accepts and enrolls the youth in ILP services, notification is sent by the ILP Provider to the Youth Transitions team who opens the paid service.

VI. Expect to receive the following documentation for each youth served by an ILP provider:

A. Referral confirmation within five working days;

B. Written Youth Assessment Summary (YAS), within 90 days of acceptance (except for Tier 1, IL Prep enrolled youth);

C. The Youth Transition Plan within 90 days of acceptance;

D. Updated Youth Assessment Summary and YTP at least once every six months for Tier 2 enrolled youth;

E. Monthly services and progress reports; and

F. Final Monthly Services and Progress Report (the Provider will send notification of the closure to the Youth Transitions team including the appropriate service ending reason and the Youth Transitions team closes the service).

VII. Services available to a youth under ILP are voluntary. If a youth refuses a service, give the youth an ILP Services Availability letter (Appendix 5.15):

A. The letter must explain that the youth remains eligible for services if they wish to participate later. It also must explain:
1. The list of services for which the youth remains eligible, and
2. The services the youth may access as a former foster youth.

B. A copy of the letter is filed in the youth’s case file under the Case Administrative Activity section and the Child Welfare electronic information system.

C. Use this information for the report to the court.

VIII. The caseworker may re-refer a youth to the local ILP provider if the youth decides to use the services later.

Procedures For The Life Skills Training That ODHS Provides

I. Life skills may be taught by:
   A. A contracted ILP provider, or
   B. Facilitated through or directly provided by the local office.

II. In some cases:
   A. The youth is too young for contracted ILP services, or
   B. The caseworker is unable to access contracted ILP services for an eligible youth. For example:
      1. There is a waiting list,
      2. The youth declines services, or
      3. The youth is not appropriate for contracted services.

However, ODHS is still responsible to prepare the youth for a successful transition to adulthood and an interdependent life. In this case, the caseworker must:

I. Work with the caregiver to determine whether skills will be taught in the home. Determine what community partners are available to help the youth access services and to accomplish their goals. For example:
   A. Employment Department and One-Stop,
   B. 4-H Club,
   C. Job Corp,
   D. ASPIRE Program,
   E. School District or IEP,
   F. Teen parent program,
   G. Community college,
   H. School or community sports or clubs, or
   I. Vocational Rehabilitation services:
      1. Youth Transition Program, or
      2. Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) Program.

II. Assist youth to develop the CTP.
III. Document how the following will provide life skills training:
   A. Substitute caregiver,
   B. ODHS, or
   C. Other community partners.

IV. Work with the ILP Desk to open the ILP life skills service as a nonpaid service when the caseworker, caregiver or other community partners are providing the training. Review the service types below to determine the appropriate service(s) to be opened when someone other than the ILP contractor is providing:
   A. Independent living type services, or
   B. Life skills training.

Use Service Category ILP Life Skills - Unpaid and one or more of the following:

When a Former Foster Youth Receives ILP Skill Building Services

The following young people may return to Child Welfare at any time before their 21st birthday, or 24th birthday during a declared emergency, to request ILP services:

I. A former foster youth terminated from the child welfare system at age 14 or older, with at least 180 days (six months) of substitute care placement services after age 13.

II. Services provided to the youth can be accessed through an FSS-ILP Voluntary case between the ages of 14-21 or a young adult can self-refer for Aftercare Services between the ages of 18 through 23. Refer to Chapter 7, Section 4 for detailed procedures on opening a case. If a youth or young adult contacts the former caseworker, support the individual by assisting in either calling the Oregon Child Abuse Hotline to request an FSS-ILP case or advising how to contact their local ILP Provider to self-refer for Aftercare Services. During the evaluation and needs assessment process for an FSS-ILP case:
   A. A young adult 18 years of age or older must sign the Service Application (CF 304A).
   B. For a youth under 18, the youth’s legal parent or guardian must sign the Service Application. The family will not be responsible for payment of ILP services.

III. If the young adult is 18 through 20 years-old, the young adult will be listed as the adult in the case. If the young person has an existing adult case open, the ILP services may be opened on that case.

IV. Caseworkers must complete a case plan for a former foster youth who accesses ILP services on a voluntary basis.

Aftercare Services (as of 7/1/2021)

This will allow eligible young adults (ages 18-23) formerly in foster care to self-refer for ILP life skills training services. Young adults will be able to request services directly from their local ILP Provider. The Provider will confirm eligibility with the Youth Transitions team. Eligibility for life skills training will end on a young person’s 24th birthday.

Terminating ILP Skill Building Services

I. Planned ILP termination:
   A. Coordinate ILP skill building service closure with the ILP Desk and ILP Provider when a youth or young adult the:
      1. Achieves self-sufficiency to the extent that there is no need for services.
      2. Made the voluntary and informed decision to no longer participate in services, or
      3. Made themselves unavailable for services for 60 days or more. An exception is if:
         ■ The reason for the absence is known to the skills provider or caseworker, and
         ■ The absence is to support the youth’s plan for the transition to adulthood.

II. Termination due to move or transfer to another provider:
   A. Terminate the ILP services if the youth moves out of the provider’s contracted service area. If this occurs, notify the provider to discontinue services. Also, provide the effective date of service termination.
   B. Wait to receive the final Monthly Services and Progress Report from the ILP provider.

III. Termination due to case closure:
   A. If the ILP skill building service is being closed due to case closure, inform the ILP provider:
      1. Services will no longer continue, and
      2. The effective date of termination of wardship for service termination.
      Ask the provider to the send the closing report to the Youth Transitions team to allow the team to close the service in a timely manner.
   B. Determine if the youth is interested in continuing ILP if the youth is not yet age 24. If they are, refer to instructions for when a former foster youth receives ILP skill building services. Every effort should be made to arrange for a seamless transition to the new FSS-ILP case and services.

IV. When ODHS is ensuring the substitute caregiver or other community partners provide ILP skill building services, the caseworker must assist the ILP Desk to determine the correct service ending reason.

The Supervisor’s Role
I. Ensure the caseworker receives information on local office procedures for referring a youth for ILP skill building services (if unique circumstances apply).

II. Know the various services and funding streams available to help foster youth with transition to adulthood and living interdependently.

III. Ensure new caseworkers complete the Independent Living Services computer-based training (CBT) available in the Department’s training database system.

Note:

It is important for youth and young adults who enter the workforce to be technologically literate. Youth and young adults in the Child Welfare system often have limited computer and cellphone access due to:

- Residential instability,
- Breaks in education, and
- Other challenges.

Responsible youth development includes equipping teens to interact with technology in a safe way. The “New Technology: Recommendations & Guidelines” helps caseworkers, foster parents and other supportive adults understand their roles regarding technology. Please see Exhibit 4 for additional details. When appropriate, the ILP Discretionary Funds may be accessed to provide youth with a laptop. Contact ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us for additional details.

Housing Programs

Apply for Housing Programs

There are two funding streams and unique eligibility requirements to help youth with housing expenses:

I. Independent Living Housing Subsidy, and
II. Chafee Housing program.

Each is designed to work with the Independent Living Skill Building program and assist youth in becoming self-sufficient, interdependent adults. The housing programs have specific eligibility requirements and provide time-limited monetary support for a youth to live interdependently by supplementing the youth’s housing costs while they continue education or employment. Acceptance into these programs is not guaranteed.

The Independent Living Housing Subsidy (ILHS) program may supplement up to a maximum of $795 per month, while the Chafee Housing program may aid up to a maximum of $1,000 per month, or an amount determined by ODHS for a one-time housing voucher based on need. The youth must complete a budget worksheet to determine how much assistance is needed to be provided by ODHS child welfare. The IL Housing Subsidy rate will decrease quarterly beginning month 13. The housing programs require a youth to be involved in full-time productive activity (as defined in OAR 413-030-0000) each week or have an ODHS- approved plan. If secondary education completion has not been achieved, the youth is required to be actively working towards their educational goals.

Declared Emergency: If a declared emergency results in a youth or young adult’s productive time decreasing and financial need increasing, the following will be allowed: productive time requirements will be waived and the maximum rate available will become $1,000 (based on need) for both IL Housing Subsidy and Chafee Housing, regardless of the time a youth has been accessing the housing program. Further instructions are located in section VII Housing.
Emergency Funds.

The purpose of the Independent Living Housing Subsidy and Chafee Housing programs are to help youth gain and practice the following skills:

I. Manage finances and live on a budget;
II. Manage a household (home and yard maintenance, laundry, cooking, self-care);
III. Manage time (make and keep appointments, punctuality);
IV. Manage life demands (balance job, school, friends, family, personal time, food, sleep); and
V. Accept responsibility for choices, exercise responsibility and self-determination in decision making.

The purpose of the one-time housing voucher is to provide financial support for the initial costs of establishing one’s own residence. The youth who can benefit from the one-time housing voucher already demonstrate the above skills through working with their ILP Provider. One-time housing voucher funds may be issued to a youth in the process of preparing to transition out of ODHS care and custody, or to an eligible former foster youth.

A youth is no longer eligible for the Independent Living Housing Subsidy (ILHS) program:

I. Once a youth has been returned to a legal or biological parent (this includes trial reunification), or
II. Has achieved permanency and exited care.

It is the intent of the Independent Living Housing Subsidy Program that a youth transition out of the foster care system (have wardship terminated):

I. After successfully completing the program, or
II. Accessing a maximum of 30 months of assistance, or
III. Has reached the age of 21.

If custody is dismissed at age 18 or older, the youth may qualify for Chafee Housing services. Caseworkers must become familiar with the various types of housing options available for youth:

I. Boarding homes,
II. Dormitory housing,
III. Foster Youth Initiative Housing vouchers (FYI),
IV. Host homes,
V. Live-in adult or peer roommate,
VI. Live with a legal or biological parent (parents will be considered as roommates),
VII. Scattered site apartment,
VIII. Shared homes,
IX. Specialized foster homes,
X. Supervised apartment,
XI. Transitional living programs or transitional group homes.

Additional details regarding housing options and appropriate youth for a specific type of housing can be found in Appendix 5.13.

Each program’s funding stream has specific eligibility requirements.

Note:

The ILP desk provides local offices with resources to help caseworkers and caregivers work with a youth on life skills. Each local office has the following resources:

- “Making It on Your Own” (workbook for the youth),
- “FYI Binder” (organizational planner for the youth), and
- “Ready Set Fly!” (teachable moments booklet for the caregiver).

Ask the supervisor where the resources can be found in the office. If additional supplies are needed, contact the ILP support staff at Central Office, or email ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us.

All answers must be marked yes for a youth to be eligible for either the Independent Living Housing Subsidy or Chafee Housing Program. However, if an emergency has been declared, the full-time requirement may be waived. Contact the Youth Transitions team at ILP.Central@dhsoha.state.or.us for clarification during a declared emergency.

 See section VII Housing Emergency Funds for rules during a declared emergency.

To access Chafee Housing funds, young adults can come back on a voluntary services basis through two different options.

1. FSS ILP- For voluntary cases, a new case is opened with the young adults now listed as the adult in the case by calling the ORCAH and requesting a Family Support Services(FSS)-ILP voluntary case. Refer to Chapter 7, Section 4 Family Support Services (FSS) for detailed procedures for opening an FSS case for ILP services.

2. After Care Services- A young adult ages 18 through 23 (up to their 24th birthday) can self-refer to their local ILP program by calling the Provider directly to access ILP services including Chafee Housing.

I. Engage the youth/young adult in a thorough planning process before:

A. Beginning an ILP housing program, or

B. Requesting a one-time housing voucher.

The planning process reassesses a youth/young adult's:

A. Safety,

B. Readiness for living interdependently, and

C. Planned transition from daily adult supervision.

This service is not intended to be an emergency move or placement. To plan properly and facilitate a smooth transition, this is typically a three- to six-month process and involves reassessment of the youth/young adult’s abilities in these areas:

A. The youth/young adult’s CTP and their goals for the future,
B. School and employment arrangements,
C. Capacity for self-care and demonstrated life skills,
D. Budgeting skills and demonstrated money management abilities,
E. Evidence of responsible decision-making skills,
F. Evidence of supportive adults in the youth/young adult’s life, and
G. Ability to use and access transportation resources.

II. Ensure the youth/young adult is enrolled and participating in ILP skill-building services or comparable skill building services which include a financial literacy component. This is required before being accepted and enrolled in an ongoing ILP housing program. A youth/young adult should also be receiving interdependent living skill-building services before being considered for a one-time housing voucher (though not a requirement).

III. The branch must establish a housing screening committee to determine the youth/young adult’s appropriateness and preparedness to access the ILHS or Chafee Housing programs. At a minimum, the committee must consist of:

A. The caseworker,
B. The youth/young adult
C. An ILP service provider, and
D. May include other significant adults in the youth/young adult’s life.

Each office has a process for establishing a screening committee. Check with your supervisor if you need to schedule a meeting.

A. Set a date and time with the youth/young adult for a meeting:
   - It should be set far enough in the future to allow the youth/young adult time to prepare for the screening process.
B. Remind the youth/young adult of the date and time of the meeting:
   - Assist the youth/young adult to attend the screening.

IV. Before presenting a youth/young adult to the screening committee for ILHS, Chafee Housing or requesting a one-time housing voucher, the caseworker should ensure that:

A. The youth/young adult has been prepared for the questions the screening committee may ask. (The ILP desk has a study guide available, see Appendix 5.17).
B. The youth/young adult has the capacity to live safely in the community without the supervision of a foster family or group care setting. If the youth/young adult will be residing in a transitional living program, ensure the level of supervision is appropriate to meet the youth’s supervision needs.
C. If the youth/young adult is a ward of the court, the youth/young adult must have the approval of the juvenile court to participate in the ILHS program. (The ILP desk has sample letters to assist caseworkers in writing to the courts.)

D. In most cases, the caseworker gets approval for the housing program from the screening committee before they submit a request for approval to the juvenile court. Each branch or district may have its own rules. Check with your supervisor for your branch’s practice.

E. Court approval is required before a housing payment will be issued. If a judge does not approve the independent living situation, the youth/young adult needs to remain or be placed back into substitute care.

F. The youth/young adult has a proposed living situation that meets the following minimum standards:
   1. The living situation provides reasonably convenient access to:
      - Schools,
      - Places of employment, and
      - Services required by the youth/young adult

G. The living situation complies with applicable state and local:
   - Zoning,
   - Fire,
   - Sanitary, and
   - Safety regulations.

H. The living situation is reasonably priced and fits within the youth/young adult’s budget.

I. If able, the youth/young adult has established a savings account that can be used to help with moving expenses or emergencies.

J. If in the ILHS Program, the youth/young adult is NOT residing with a legal or biological parent.

K. If youth/young adult will have a roommate(s), the roommate(s) must be able to pay their own share of the monthly living expenses.

V. If the youth/young adult is not interested in ongoing housing services and has been deemed appropriate for the one-time housing voucher, see additional instructions under the Initiate the Housing Payment section.

VI. Complete the following documents with input from the youth/young adult and ILP provider:
   A. CF 0075 Determinations Check List (completed by caseworker);
   B. CF 0076 Responsibility Agreement (completed by the youth/young adult with assistance from either the caseworker or ILP worker);
   C. CF 0077 Budget Worksheet (completed by the youth/young adult with assistance from either the caseworker or ILP worker); and
   D. CF 0078 Youth Transition Funds Request (optional):
      1. The caseworker completes the request with the youth/young adult. It may be submitted when requesting assistance with move-in costs. For example, security or cleaning deposit, utility deposit, etc.
2. Indicate which housing funds the youth/young adult will access (Independent Living Housing Subsidy or Chafee Housing).

3. A start-up kit is optional. It contains items necessary to set up and maintain a household. For example:
   - Cleaning supplies,
   - Food staples,
   - Pots and pans,
   - Dishes,
   - Minimal basic furniture,
   - Vacuum, etc.

   The maximum amount allowed for a start-up kit is $500 or $800 if the request includes furniture. This may be in addition to the move-in fees.

VII. Prepare the youth/young adult to answer questions the committee may have to demonstrate they have the high level of preparedness, self-responsibility and accountability that living interdependently and participating in the housing program requires.

   A. With the assistance from the caseworker and ILP provider, the youth/young adult makes the request for acceptance into the housing program through the screening committee.

   B. In addition to the youth/young adult’s presentation, the committee will review the housing documents listed above.

VIII. The committee must consider the youth/young adult’s abilities or skills in the following areas when determining the youth/young adult’s appropriateness for housing services:

   A. Budgeting,
   B. Decision-making,
   C. Education and employment,
   D. Self-advocacy,
   E. Household maintenance,
   F. Youth/Young Adult’s vision for the future, and
   G. Youth/Young Adult’s plan once housing assistance ends.

   H. Youth/Young Adult’s foster care status. If youth/young adult is no longer in ODHS care and custody, Chafee Housing may be approved to help stabilize and improve the above areas for a youth/young adult formerly in foster care.

   The committee will then make one of the following decisions:

   A. The Youth/Young Adult is deemed appropriate and prepared to begin the program immediately:

      1. Send the original set of the above forms (signed and dated) and any supporting documents to the ILP desk at the following:

         Scan and email to ILP.Central@dhsoha.state.or.us.

         Or, mail documents to:
2. Copies of the forms (CF 0075, CF 0076 and CF 0077) go to the:
   - Youth/young adult,
   - ODHS case file (Case Administrative Activity section),
   - ILP provider, and
   - Screening committee chairperson.

B. The youth/young adult is deemed appropriate for the program, but is not yet prepared to begin the program:
   1. The committee will openly and respectfully discuss concerns with the youth/young adult during the screening.
   2. The committee will offer the youth/young adult suggestions for resolving the concerns.
   3. The committee may stipulate a timeline for the youth/young adult to address the concerns.
   4. A follow-up meeting will be set once the youth/young adult has addressed the concerns of the screening committee. Practice varies, but some branches may set the follow-up meeting before the youth/young adult leaves the screening. This may also vary based on the type of concerns raised by the screening committee.

C. The youth/young adult is denied because the screening committee determines the youth/young adult is not suitable for the housing program:
   1. The youth/young adult is advised of this decision at the time of the meeting. The caseworker or committee provides the youth/young adult with a written notice. The notice indicates the reasons for denial and recommendations for additional skill building or other activities or potential resources.
   2. Advise the ILP desk of the denial. Any youth/young adult denied may not reapply for the housing program for 30 days. If a youth/young adult reapplies, they must address the original reasons for denial before being approved for ILP housing.

Initiate the Housing Payment

I. One-time housing payment requests may be split for issuing to a variety of vendors. Payment must be issued payable to these as appropriate:
   A. Landlord,
   B. Utility,
   C. Telephone company, or
   D. Other vendor(s).

   The funds for groceries or a start-up kit may be issued payable to the youth/young adult. If a youth/young adult requests a reimbursement for expenses paid, a receipt must be submitted at the time of request.
II. Caseworker must complete and submit the following:
   A. CF 0075 ILP Housing Determinations Check List (to verify funding stream),
   B. CF 0076 ILP Housing Responsibility Agreement (page 3 only),
   C. CF 0077 ILP Housing Budget Worksheet (indicating need and resources available to maintain living arrangement ongoing), and
   D. CF 0078 Youth Transition Funds Request (check “One-time housing voucher” as type of request).

III. Email or fax the completed forms to the ILP desk at:
   Email: ILP.Central@dhaoha.state.or.us, or Fax to 503-945-6969.

IV. The ILP desk will issue the payment and provide additional instructions, as needed.

V. If a youth/young adult decides to participate in an ILP ongoing housing program after receiving a one-time housing voucher, they must wait at least 30 days before applying to the program. ILP life skills training should be provided during the waiting period.

VI. Ongoing housing payment requests are made payable to the youth/young adult.
   A. The caseworker sends the CF 0075, CF 0076 and CF 0077 forms to the ILP desk.
      1. The ILP desk initiates the payment request for the youth/young adult’s first-month housing payment.
      2. If the initial payment is not for the entire month, the payment may be prorated by the ILP desk, based on need.
      3. The ILP desk confirms with the caseworker and the ILP provider through an email notice:
         - A youth/young adult’s acceptance for the housing program, and
         - The amount of housing assistance.
   B. The ILP desk is responsible for issuing all subsequent housing payments. Subsequent housing payments issued should be made in advance. For example, an April payment should be issued in late March. However, payment depends on the caseworker to provide timely budget updates when necessary (by the 15th of the month).
   C. The ILP fiscal and housing assistant will issue a confirmation email with instructions for next steps. For example, subsidy youth/young adults require a worker to change or close the previous placement and open the new IL subsidy placement tracking service. If needed, open service retroactively to the actual date service began. The housing service or payment reimbursement request cannot be older than one month.

Example:
   A. A housing packet submitted in July cannot have a start date later than June:
      1. To have the subsidy be retroactively opened, or
      2. To have a housing related payment or reimbursement paid for.
   ILP life skills training services must be open while the youth/young adult is accessing the housing program.

B. The ILP desk will ensure the mailing address for the youth/young adult is listed as the local office.

C. Arrange for courtesy supervision if the youth/young adult is residing out of the county.

D. Hand deliver the payment to the youth/young adult. The local office receives all payments. Payments are not mailed directly to the youth/young adult. The caseworker should view this task as an opportunity to:

1. Check receipts,
2. Savings statements, or
3. Paystubs.

Doing so helps ensure the youth is maintaining payments and reporting accurate wages or other monthly financial support (see the “Monitoring housing services” section below).

Note:

A youth/young adult should participate in contracted ILP services or comparable life skills services for at least six months before:

- Entering the Independent Living Housing Subsidy program, or
- Receiving a one-time housing voucher.

This will allow the youth/young adult time to:

- Gain needed money management skills,
- Learn about landlord and tenant rights and responsibilities,
- Set up a support network, and
- Establish a savings account for start-up costs and emergency expenses.

This may not be an option for a youth accessing the Chafee Housing Program. This is because the youth or young adult may need immediate assistance to avoid or end homelessness.

Note:

If the youth/young adult’s anticipated residence is known, the caseworker should inspect the residence with the youth/young adult to ensure the above standards are met. Inform the youth/young adult if they decide to move or pay start-up fees before screening committee or ODHS approval, the program may not reimburse or accept the youth/young adult. It is the caseworker’s responsibility to ensure the youth/young adult has a safe and appropriate living arrangement given the youth/young adult’s:

- Skills,
- Abilities, and
- Responsibility level.

While not required, ODHS has the right to ask roommates to agree to a background check. Roommates must be willing and able to meet their financial responsibilities each month. For example, paystubs, checking or savings statements, etc.

- The youth/young adult demonstrates their ability to follow the provisions of the case plan, participating in activities and services to achieve interdependence.
Housing Emergency Funds requests are usually made payable to the youth/young adult.

A. Housing emergency funds are only for unforeseen, unplanned items or services the youth/young adult needs to meet monthly responsibilities but cannot afford to pay the additional unexpected costs. For example, the youth/young adult’s car has a flat tire, computer needs repair, etc. The caseworker sends the CF 0078 form to the ILP desk. The form must explain the following:
   1. Reason for the emergency request,
   2. Amount of funds needed, and
   3. To whom the check is to be made payable (if other than the youth/young adult).

B. The ILP desk initiates the payment request for the emergency funds payment.

C. Declared Emergencies may require special provisions to allow youth/young adults to remain successful with their efforts to transition to adulthood, self-sufficiency and interdependence. The following housing options are available should a declared emergency cause the young person to lose productive hours, wages, belongings, etc.
   1. Productive time requirements will be waived. The youth/young adult is to be as productive as reasonable given the restrictions of the declared emergency. The caseworker and ILP Provider will assist the young adult to identify available resources and steps to obtain needed resources. Once a plan has been determined, submit an updated ODHS Approved Productive Time Plan (CF76, page 3) to ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us.
   2. The maximum rate for both on-going housing programs will be $1,000 (based on need), including youth who are in the “step-down” phase of the IL Housing Subsidy Program (months 13 – 30). An updated Budget Worksheet (CF77) will be submitted identifying the new rate, if necessary, along with the updated Productive Time Plan (CF76, page 3).
   3. The IL Housing Subsidy 30-month requirement may be extended, if necessary, during a declared emergency, regardless of the youth/young adult’s age.
   4. The Chafee Housing maximum age requirement and lifetime amount of $12,000 will be waived for the duration of the declared emergency, or until the young adult’s 24th birthday, whichever occurs first.

Note:
You should alert your mailroom staff when you place a youth on the housing program. (Make mailroom staff aware of the name of the youth/young adult and that checks will be coming to their name.) Ensure the mailroom staff is aware of the importance of timely delivery of the youth/young adult’s housing payments.

Late payments could cause a youth/young adult to incur late fees or be evicted.

Emergency funds may also be used to cover move-in fees and start-up costs. There are some differences between what Subsidy and Chafee funds can cover. You should check with the ILP fiscal and housing assistant to determine if your request is appropriate (email questions to ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us).

Emergency funds are not intended to assist a youth with ongoing monthly expenses, unless a declared emergency has been imposed.

Monitor Housing Services
I. First 12 months

A. Encourage the youth to open a savings account if possible. The youth needs to begin to save funds for exiting the housing programs or emergencies that may arise.
   1. Help the youth/young adult research the minimum amount required to open and maintain an account.
   2. Ensure the funds placed into savings remain in savings as you review the youth/young adult’s budget.
   3. If the youth/young adult is withdrawing funds from savings, determine why. Adjust the youth/young adult’s budget accordingly to reflect the actual amount of monthly expenses.

B. During each of the first three months and before delivering the housing payment to the youth/young adult, review the youth/young adult’s receipts with the youth/young adult for income and payments. For example:
   1. Pay stub,
   2. Rent,
   3. Utilities,
   4. Groceries, and
   5. Other major monthly expenses.

To ensure the youth/young adult has a filing system for all of their important documents and receipts, you may wish to:
   1. Include the cost of one in the youth/young adult’s housing budget, or
   2. Use ILP discretionary funds to purchase one.

C. During each of the first three months, ensure the youth/young adult’s full-time productive hours per week are appropriate and according to the approved plan. Examples of productive time may include:
   1. Paid employment,
   2. Education,
   3. Volunteer activities,
   4. Counseling appointments,
   5. School activities (sports, clubs, etc.), or
   6. Additional study hours for youth/young adult with special needs.

D. If changes occur (e.g., in the areas of employment, education or housing):
   1. Assist the youth/young adult in completing a revised Budget Worksheet (CF 0077), and
   2. Housing Responsibility Agreement (CF 0076, page 3), and
   3. Notify the ILP desk as soon as changes are known.

E. Subsequently, if a youth/young adult has shown the ability to follow their budget, you may extend the period between reviews. You must review the youth/young adult’s budget and hours of activity at least once every three months (quarterly).
II. Arrange the 30-day face-to-face contact at the youth/young adult’s residence at least once each quarter.

Year 2 – Implement Stepdown Process

I. Starting with month 13, youth/young adult accessing the IL Housing Subsidy Program must begin to decrease their reliance on the housing funds. Each quarter, the maximum amount a youth/young adult can receive will decrease by $115 every three months. Ensure the youth budget adjusts spending and income for the smaller amount of housing funds.

II. Following is a chart of the maximum amount a youth may receive per month:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Months</th>
<th>Maximum IL Housing Subsidy Payment</th>
<th>Maximum Subsidy Rate During a Declared Emergency</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1-12</td>
<td>$795</td>
<td>$1,000* for the duration of the declared emergency based on need.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13-15</td>
<td>$680</td>
<td>$1,000*</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16-18</td>
<td>$565</td>
<td>$1,000*</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19-21</td>
<td>$450</td>
<td>$1,000*</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22-24</td>
<td>$335</td>
<td>$1,000*</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25-27</td>
<td>$220</td>
<td>$1,000*</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28-30</td>
<td>$105</td>
<td>$1,000*</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* During a declared emergency, monthly rate may revert to the maximum. Rate to be based on need, including costs due to the declared emergency.

III. During each of the stepdown months, help the youth/young adult to:

   A. Review their budget and determine where expenses may be cut, or
   B. Brainstorm ways for the youth/young adult to generate additional income.

IV. Starting month 13, a youth/young adult has only one lifetime exception to increase the monthly maximum above the required step-down amount (not to exceed the maximum amount listed above).

V. Continue to review the youth/young adult’s receipts for income and payments. For example:

   A. Pay stub,
   B. Rent,
   C. Utilities,
   D. Groceries,
   E. Savings, and
   F. Other major expenses.

Do this at least quarterly. Ensure the youth/young adult spends funds appropriately and as budgeted.

VI. Chafee Housing is based on need (not to exceed $1000 per month). No step-down model exists for Chafee housing. Services end when a young adult:

   A. Turns age 24, for on-going or a one-time payment or
B. Has accessed $12,000 of Chafee Housing funds, or
C. During a declared emergency the maximum rate will increase to $1,000, the lifetime amount is waived, and the maximum age is the young person’s 24th birthday.

*The ILP provider is a partner in monitoring the youth/young adult’s:

- Housing situation, and
- Activities related to the Housing Responsibility Agreement and budget.

Caseworkers should coordinate housing check-in activities with the ILP provider. ILP providers will be working with the youth/young adult to improve life skills. Working as a team will improve service coordination. Also, it will help the youth/young adult make a safe, successful transition to adulthood and interdependent living.

Final 6 Months – Prepare to Exit Program

I. The youth/young adult is on their final six (6) months of the housing program. The youth/young adult should be providing the bulk of their income or monthly support. Continue assisting the youth/young adult with the following:

   A. Increasing employment hours or wages or increasing job search activities.
   B. Help youth/young adult determine ways to reduce expenses (i.e., obtain a roommate, lower car insurance by decreasing deductible, find cost-free entertainment options, etc.).
   C. If in college, ensure youth/young adult is beginning to search for employment or increase employment hours to cover expenses.
   D. Search for a new residence if the current residence is not within the youth/young adult’s budget once the ILP housing supports end.
   E. Prepare for termination of wardship (if in ILHS Program) and provide the youth/young adult with documents as outlined in the Requirements at Independence, Transitions Tool Kit (Appendix 5.18).
   F. Ensure termination of wardship is not likely to result in homelessness.
   G. If appropriate, the caseworker and ILP Provider will assist the youth/young adult to research availability of resources through the local Public Housing Authority (PHA). Assist the youth/young adult to apply for the Foster Youth Independence (FYI) Voucher or Family Unity Program (FUP) Youth Voucher for ongoing assistance after completion of the ILP housing programs.

If a Youth/Young Adult Does Not Follow The Housing Responsibility Agreement

I. If, at any time, a youth/young adult:

   A. Is out of compliance with the Housing Responsibility Agreement (CF 0076), or
   B. Decides they are not ready to continue in the program,

Then you must notify the ILP desk immediately and do one of the following:

I. If lack of compliance is due to the youth/young adult’s pregnancy or child birth, submit an Exception to Policy (form CF 0088). Indicate the following:

   A. Expected date baby is due (or date of birth);
B. Youth/young adult’s plan to maintain medical appointments, preparations for parenthood and supports once baby is born; and

C. Youth/young adult’s plan to regain compliance with the full-time productivity requirements. This includes how day care needs will be met.

D. Exceptions may be requested for up to 12 weeks. If an exception needs to extend past this time, you must submit a doctor’s note with the date the youth/young adult is anticipated to return to normal activities.

E. If still in high school, indicate youth/young adult’s plan to return to school and remain in compliance with the high school’s attendance policies or outlined alternative educational plan.

II. Issue a warning of potential termination if issues are not resolved:

Provide the youth/young adult with a 15-day notice of intent to terminate. However, this notice must include:

1. Clear and specific reasons for possible termination;

2. The timeframe the youth/young adult is being allowed to remedy the situation (no more than 15 days);

3. A statement that if the issues have not been remedied by a specific date, the youth/young adult will be terminated; and

4. The name of who to contact if the youth/young adult wishes to remain in the program.

Include a statement that if the youth/young adult is terminated from the ILP housing program, the youth/young adult remains eligible for ILP skill building services and can reapply for the housing program in 30 days (if they have been able to resolve the issues stated as reasons for the termination).

III. Terminate: Provide the youth/young adult with at least 15-day notice of intent to terminate (a sample is available, see Appendix 5.19). Written notice is preferred. However, notice may be verbal with a written follow-up to confirm the conversation.

A. The notice must include:

1. The reasons for termination,

2. The specific date the youth/young adult will be terminated, and

3. A statement that the youth/young adult may reapply in 30 days if they have been able to resolve the issues stated as reasons for the termination.

Include a statement that if the youth/young adult is terminated from the ILP housing program, the youth/young adult remains eligible for ILP skill building services.

B. Extension of a termination notice is not allowed.

C. Request a time-limited Exception to Policy (form CF 0088). Provide:

1. A beginning and end date;

2. The reason for the exception request; and

3. The youth/young adult’s detailed plan for regaining compliance.

If an exception is approved, but a youth/young adult does not regain compliance within the time specified, the youth/young adult will be terminated from the housing program. The Exception to Policy (CF 0088) must be approved by the:

(1) ODHS caseworker,
(2) ILP provider, and
(3) ODHS program manager or designee.

It needs to be submitted to ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us for final approval.

- An exception to the maximum amount of funds received will only be allowed for one month, if needed, between months 13 through 30. In addition to completing the Exception to Policy form (CF 0088), the youth/young adult must also complete the Resources Researched form (see Appendix 5.20). No more than one exception will be approved for additional funding between months 13 through 30.

IV. The ILP desk may hold a youth/young adult’s housing payment if a problem is identified and not resolved within 30 days. The caseworker and ILP worker will receive an official notification by email alerting the worker(s) that a problem exists. The caseworker(s) will be given 30 days to resolve the problem with the youth/young adult. If the problem remains unresolved after 30 days, a hold will be placed on all future housing payments.

Terminating Housing Payments

I. Advise the ILP desk of all housing terminations (planned or unplanned).

II. Close housing services under the following circumstances:

A. The youth/young adult completed the housing program as planned;
B. The youth/young adult achieved interdependence and self-sufficiency to the extent there is no longer a need for housing payments;
C. The youth/young adult made a voluntary decision to no longer participate in the housing program;
D. The youth/young adult was involuntarily terminated from the program for failing to comply with program requirements (a 15-day notice of termination must be provided to the youth/young adult);
E. The youth/young adult reached their 21st birthday if in the Subsidy (ILHS) Program or their 24th birthday if in Chafee Housing Program or
F. ODHS has terminated wardship (Subsidy).

III. The youth/young adult exceeded maximum benefits for the program:

A. For the Independent Living Housing Subsidy, the youth/young adult completed the 30th month in the program, unless extended due to a declared emergency.
B. For Chafee Housing, the youth/young adult accessed a cumulative total of $12,000, or the youth/young adult is transitioning to Chafee Education and Training Voucher funds (ETV) for room and board while at college. If a school includes room and board in the projected costs of attendance, a youth/young adult cannot access Chafee ETV and Chafee Housing funds at the same time. During a declared emergency, the cumulative total shall be waived until the crisis is over and deemed appropriate to return to the
IV. The caseworker must inform the following people if terminating a youth/young adult from the housing program:

   A. The youth/young adult (verbally and in writing),
   B. Data input staff,
   C. The ILP provider, and
   D. The ILP desk.
   E. Failure to notify these parties may result in an overpayment to the youth/young adult.

I. A youth/young adult participating in the Independent Living Housing Subsidy remains eligible for a medical card through ODHS. Request the youth/young adult's medical card as you would any other youth/young adult in substitute care.

II. An Oregon youth/young adult who leaves foster care at age 18 or older and resides in Oregon is categorically eligible to receive Former Foster Care Youth Medical (FFCYM) Program coverage up to their 26th birthday (see Appendix 5.21).

   A. To access the program, the caseworker and youth/young adult will complete as much of the OHP application as possible, just before terminating the youth/young adult's case.
   B. If there are questions or additional assistance is required, contact OHP Customer Service at one. oregon.gov, healthcare.gov or call OHP Customer Service at 800-699-9075.
   C. FosterClub also has an OHP outreach coordinator who can assist youth/young adult at 503-717-1552 or by email at health@fosterclub.com.
   D. The youth should receive the new medical card in the mail. Advise the youth/young adult to be sure to respond to OHP mailings that request an updated mailing address or contact information.

The Supervisor’s Role

I. Train and support the caseworker on local office practice for youth/young adult accessing the Independent Living Housing Subsidy (ILHS) and Chafee Housing services.

II. Review, approve or deny all ILHS placement requests. If approved, forward the level 3 approval to the statewide ILP coordinator at Central Office for processing.

III. Assist caseworker to understand the options available during a declared emergency, for both current and former foster youth and young adults.

IV. Review, approve or deny all ILP exception to Policy Requests before submitting them to ILP desk.

V. Ensure your workers are assisting young adults who are aging out of care with completing the OHP application to access the Former Foster Care Youth Medical Program.
Post-Secondary Education and Training Resources

There are several post-secondary financial resources available to foster youth, both within Oregon and nationally. The most frequently accessed is the Chafee Education and Training Grant (ETG).

Procedure

Education and Training Grant (ETG)

The ETG provides financial assistance to a youth/young adult continuing post-secondary education or training.

Maximum amounts may vary based on availability of funds. Check with the ILP Post-secondary and Fiscal Analyst for current maximum amount available per student. The ETG funds may be applied toward the cost of attendance for all two- and four-year colleges or universities, most trade or vocational schools (e.g., beauty, business, massage, welding schools, etc.), as well as eligible certificate programs.

I. The following youth/young adult are eligible for ETG funds:

   A. Adopted or entered a guardianship after September 1, 2015, at 13 years of age or older through ODHS, or

   B. A youth/young adult 14 or older in any state or federally recognized tribe’s child welfare-provided substitute care.

   C. A youth/young adult who was in any state or federally recognized tribe’s child welfare-provided substitute care:

      1. For at least 180 days after the age 13, and
      2. Who exited substitute care at age 14 or older.

II. Youth/young adult may continue to access funds until the term in which they turn age 26, or for a total of five years, whichever occurs first.

   A. Each term is equal to three months. A youth/young adult must access three terms (or four terms if summer is accessed or calculated into the award amount) to equal one year’s worth of funding (not to exceed $5,000).

   B. One semester is equal to four months. A youth/young adult must access two semesters (or three semesters if you count summer) to equal one year’s worth of funding (not to exceed $5000 through OSAC and the student’s school/training facility and if a student requires additional funds, they may submit a request for the supplemental $7,000 through ILP.Central@dhsoha.state.or.us for a maximum of $12,000 (flexibility may remain in effect through 9/30/2022).

   C. For the academic years 2020 – 2021 and 2021 – 2022 only, a youth/young adult may access a maximum of $12,000. The initial $5,000 will be disbursed through OSAC and the student’s school/training facility. If a student requires additional funds, they may submit a request for additional funds up to a maximum of $7,000 through ILP.Central@dhsoha.state.or.us. At no time will the combined ETG awards exceed $12,000 per academic year. Additional funds will be provided based on need and as funds are available.

III. It is not necessary for a youth/young adult to have an open Child Welfare case to apply for and receive the grant. funds (through the Office of Student Access and Completion).

IV. The youth/young adult does not need to be involved in the ILP program to access ETG funds.

V. A youth/young adult must be accepted to or enrolled in a post-secondary education or training institution and making satisfactory progress to receive ETG funds.
   A. Youth/young adult should be encouraged to connect with an advisor as soon as they are experiencing academic difficulties.
   B. If the youth/young adult is placed on academic probation and the school withholds financial aid funds, the Chafee ETG will also be withheld, unless there is a declared emergency. The Youth Transitions team will provide notice when students may continue to receive their ETV award while on academic probation.
   C. Once the youth’s ETG funds are withheld, the student must show proof of the school reinstating other financial aid before the Chafee ETG can be reinstated.

VI. Youth/young adult accessing the ETG program may not be eligible for Chafee Housing. If the post-secondary institution the youth/young adult is attending includes room and board in the cost of attendance, the youth cannot access Chafee Housing while receiving Chafee ETG. There are two ways for a young adult to access Chafee Education and Training funds:
   A. Grants.
      1. A youth/young adult can access the Education and Training Grant (ETG) funds by completing an electronic application. A youth/young adult does not need to have an open Child Welfare case or be enrolled in ILP services to apply for the Education and Training Grant. The eligible youth/young adult can access the application online.
      2. The Chafee ETV application will be available on a rolling deadline (August 1st, November 1st, February 1st and May 1st). A wait list may need to be implemented, if funds have been exhausted. An exception may be granted if a youth/young adult missed the deadline due to a declared emergency. Contact the ILP Desk for details at ILP.Central@ODHSوها.state.or.us.
      3. If necessary, and to ensure equitable access, applicants will receive priority based on financial need.
   B. Vouchers.
      1. Education and training voucher funds are for emergency purposes only. Voucher funds are not intended to provide a full award to a youth/young adult. The amount of voucher funds provided will be deducted from the amount awarded through the grant process. There are several parameters for the vouchers. Voucher funds can be used only for the cost of attendance and include:
         - Tuition,
         - Fees,
         - Books,
         - Supplies,
Room and board,
Personal expenses, and Transportation.

Each school will provide an estimated cost of attendance for the school. This estimate is what the ILP desk will use to determine if the requested amount is reasonable. Therefore, the youth/young adult needs to be accepted or enrolled in a school and have submitted an electronic grant application at the time of the request. An exception to the application requirement may be allowed if a declared emergency exists or existed during the submission deadline. Contact ILP.Central@ODHSoha.state.or.us if a need for an exception is needed.

2. The amount of funds a youth/young adult can access is proportionate to the amount of time spent taking classes (part-time versus full-time).

3. Whenever possible, funds are sent directly to the school.

4. Complete the Youth Transition Funds Request form (CF 0078, check the ETV box) and send the completed form to the ILP desk. The CF 0078 form requires the caseworker provide information about:
   - The requested amounts in the appropriate category(s).
   - How the funds will assist the youth/young adult in meeting the youth/young adult’s post-secondary education/training goals.
   - To whom the payment is made payable.
   - Where the payment is to be mailed. While a payment may be made payable to a youth/young adult, no payments are mailed directly to the youth/young adult. Payments may be mailed to the caseworker or ILP worker for distribution to the youth/young adult.

Scholarships

I. The Office of Student Access and Completion (OSAC) handles more than 500 scholarship programs for Oregon students.
